ConAgra buys Universal for twice its asset value

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — ConAgra Inc. paid a premium for Universal Frozen Foods Co. — $220 million.

Financial documents filed with the federal Securities and Exchange Commission show ConAgra agreed to pay $163 million up front and make more payments for the next five years.

The purchase included the french-fry factory in Twin Falls, the city's largest employer.

Universal Frozen had assets of $104.3 million, according to Universal Foods Corp.'s third quarter earnings report. But Universal Frozen also had sales through the first nine months of this fiscal year of $214.9 million.

"I expected them to get between $200 million and $225 million for Universal Frozen," said Kim Stulo, an analyst with the investment firm of Robert W. Baird &

Co. Inc. who follows Universal Food Corp., the parent company of Universal Frozen. "Universal got a nice price for it, but I don't think it was excessive."

Stulo based his sales price estimate on another recent frozen food company sale. Birds Eye frozen foods company, which had assets of $140 million, was sold to Dean Foods for about twice the value of its assets earlier this year.

In his report to stockholders this week, Universal Foods Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Guy Osborn said revenue for Universal Frozen has been slowed this summer because of the delayed purchase by ConAgra.

The purchase of Universal Frozen not only gave Lamb-Weston the larger share of the potato-processing market, but it gave Lamb-Weston a company with growing sales. The $214.9 million in sales through three quarters this year was up 13 percent from last year.

U.S. slams door on Cubans

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton abruptly halted the nation's three-decade open-door policy for Cuban refugees Friday, declaring Fidel Castro will not be allowed "to export his political and economic problems to the United States."

Later, administration officials said the president was preparing a four-point program to "step up the pressure" against the Castro regime, including a sharp cutback of cash remittances by Cuban-Americans to relatives in Cuba.

Alarmed by a growing exodus of Cubans to south Florida in rickety boats, Clinton ordered the Coast Guard — backed up by the Navy — to intercept the refugees at sea and take them to the U.S. Navy base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. From there, the administration hopes to quickly relocate them to other countries in the region.

Refugees who reach U.S. shores will be detained and have their cases reviewed for eligibility to remain.

New fire burns home, threatens Idaho City area

The Associated Press

A suspicious fire sparked near a state highway destroyed one home and forced the evacuation of more than 20 others about 18 miles northeast of Boise Friday.

Fire officials said there were no reports of injuries.

There were no people in the house at the time it was destroyed, and Boise National Forest spokeswoman Judith Dyess said two dogs and a cat were rescued.

The fire quickly grew to about 3,000 acres and forest spokesman Frank Carroll said it was heading toward Idaho City, about 10 miles away.

"We're extremely concerned about it," Carroll said. "We're throwing resources at it as fast as we can go. Our people are doing everything they can to stop it before it hits Idaho City."

Idaho City is an old mining town of 300 residents 35 miles northeast of Boise. It is also the county seat of Boise County.

Four helicopters and air tankers were mobilized to pound the Star Guleh Fire with water and retardant as 13 fire engines and 120 firefighters deployed around nearby structures to protect them from the advancing flames.

Land managers ordered an investigation of the fire's origin because there was no report of lightning or other natural fire-sparking events when it ignited in early afternoon. Dyess said the fire was believed to be man-caused.

Heavy smoke hanging over much of the Boise valley initially kept fire bosses from attacking the blaze with chemical retardant from air tankers. They ordered 200 firefighters for the assault because of the proximity of the town.

Idaho Highway 21, which runs from Boise to Idaho City, was closed.

To the north, meanwhile, dozens of residents returned to two central Idaho vacation communities Friday as cooler temperatures and heavy morning smoke inversions checked once-raging wildfires in the Payette National Forest.

"We're allowing them to go back up there to get the rest of their things," spokeswoman Christie Kalkowski said. "Of course, we can't force them to come back out once they are in there. I would say it was probably be some people who will stay. The fires have been so quiet the last several days some people may feel safe."

But fire bosses still believe the behavior of the 52,400-acre Corral Fire and the 36,400-acre Blackwell Complex Fire was so uncertain it was too dangerous to put any of the 2,300 firefighters and soldiers checked once-raging wildfires in the Payette National Forest.

Trees were still torching in flame, and burning embers were blowing hundreds of yards ahead of the fires' main fronts.

At the largest fire complex in the state, but another 3,000 firefighters were spread from the Panhandle to the Wyoming border, battling dozens of other blazes that were burning on more than 40,000 more acres.

The front of the Corral Fire was still

Air pollution alert in force

By William Brock
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Fueled by Idaho's wildfires, air pollution in the Magic Valley has gotten so bad that state health officials are warning people with respiratory problems to cut down on exercise and outdoor activity.

All open burning has been prohibited through the weekend, the Department of Health and Welfare announced Friday. Violations should be reported to the department's regional office in Twin Falls, at 736-2190.

Air pollution levels have been rising all week — and are particularly high during evening and early morning hours, said Steve VanZandt, air quality specialist with the department's Division of Environmental Quality in Twin Falls.

The problem is due, in large part, to smoke from forest fires and nighttime temperature inversions, VanZandt said.

The announcement, officially known as an "air stagnation advisory," warned that elevated levels of smoke have created potentially unhealthy conditions. The advisory covers residents of Blaine, Camas, Gooding, Lincoln, Jerome, Minidoka, Twin Falls and Cassia counties.

People with heart or lung disease, or with respiratory discomfort, are advised to reduce their physical exertion and outdoor activities, VanZandt said.

The burning ban and health advisory could continue into next week, he said.

"It just depends on what the smoke levels look like. If we get some clearing winds, this may abate."

about five miles west of the Civil War-era resort of Burdort Hot Springs, and seven miles separated Secesh Meadows from the front of the Blackwell Complex to the southwest.

All but a handful of residents evacuated the two communities early in the week, and Kalkowski said about 75 returned after fire managers lifted the ban on entering the area late Thursday. Some of them headed to the old mining town of Warren farther east of the fires. Access to it was also prohibited when the Forest Service moved to protect Burdort and Secesh.

But a thousand-square-mile area was still closed to the public because of the extreme fire danger.

Despite the relative lull in fire activity in the area some 130 miles north of Boise, the

Scientists peer inside ancient man

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Hospital workers wheeled the little Egyptian man in for computerized X-rays Friday, giving scientists a detailed look inside a 2,200-year-old mummy.

"We're looking at the pinnacle of 20th century technology, looking at the pinnacle of (ancient) Egyptian technology," said Smithsonian Institution anthropologist David R. Hunt.

"The sophisticated X-rays will allow the scientists to create a three-dimensional image of the mummy, including a hologram, for display at an exhibit being developed for the National Museum of Natural History."

"He's a couple years older than our average patient," quipped Dr. Wayne Olan of George Washington University Hospital. Reporters and television crews jammed the corridors for the event, amusing hospital staff and confusing real patients. Because nobody knows the real name of the mummy, hospital workers dubbed him the "Little Egyptian Man." The Smithsonian staff calls him Minister Cox, after the U.S. ambassador to Turkey who donated the mummy to the museum in 1886.

Minister Cox — the mummy — died sometime between 200 B.C. and 150 B.C., aged between 40 and 45, apparently of natural causes, Olan said.

Florida, central U.S. bear-brunt of severe storms

The Associated Press

Severe thunderstorms with hail and high winds hit the Plains states Friday while a string of summer storms dumped heavy rain across Florida and the central United States.

In Nebraska, storms dumped more than 2 inches of rain in parts of the state. High winds overturned a tractor-trailer near Grand Island, damaged the courthouse in Geneva and tore up the roof of a mobile home in Alda. There were no reports of injuries.

A tornado watch was in effect for parts of Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa as a cold front to the north spun off thunderstorms along its southern edge.

Thunderstorms along the unstable edge dropped nickel- to golf ball-size hail in parts of Wisconsin and Iowa. Late night and early morning storms with wind gusts up to 77 mph downed trees and power lines near Hastings, Neb.

The Southeast and mid-Atlantic states were drenched by summer storms while a thunderstorm in North Carolina dropped quarter-size hail in North Wilkesboro.

In the six-hour period ending at noon EDT, 6.7 inch of rain had fallen in El Dorado, Kan., and in Wilmington, N.C., and .53 of an inch in Monroe, La.

In Florida, late night and early morning storms downed trees and power lines in several areas, including Zephyr Hills and near Ocala in Orange County.

Also Friday, Hurricane Chris formed in open waters in the Atlantic but shifted away from the United States.

The National Hurricane Center said the weak system could threaten Bermuda as it strengthens in the next few days.

Overnight temperatures ran cooler than usual in the northern Plains states, with readings in the 40s and 50s, but dropped only to the 80s in the southwestern desert.

In Midland, Texas, the temperature rose to a 103 degrees Friday, tying the record high set in 1977.

Senate narrows health bill scope

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bipartisan group of senators offered a compromise health plan Friday, promising security to those with insurance, coverage for many of the uninsured, and a deficit reduction of $100 billion over 10 years.

"This is a bill that can pass this year," said Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., leader of the group.

The proposal focuses on market-based insurance reforms, and includes no request that employers pay for workers' insurance. However, all employers would be required to offer their workers a choice of three health plans, including one in which they could see any doctor they choose.

Members of the group — whose numbers reached 20 senators at points this week — said they would aim to cover 95 percent of Americans soon after the turn of the century, but felt confident they could reach 92 percent to 93 percent coverage by that time. Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell's plan aims for 95 percent by 2000.

The bipartisan proposal would seek to cover more people by phasing in federal subsidies for the poor, reaching those with incomes as high as 200 percent of the poverty level by 2004. Pregnant women and children could get subsidies until their incomes exceeded 240 percent of poverty. But senators were not yet sure if they could afford this level of subsidies.

Subsidies would be paid for through Medicaid and Medicare savings and a 45-cent increase in cigarette taxes.

The group scrapped earlier plans to impose a 25 percent tax on certain health-care health plans as well as Mitchell's proposal to levy a 1.75 percent tax on all health insurance plans to subsidize medical education and research.

To contain costs, the "mainstream" group proposed a new limit on employer deductibility of their health insurance premiums — a cornerstone of an earlier plan offered by Sen. John Breaux, D-La.

In addition, employers would lose tax breaks if they offered extra medical benefits other than dental and eye care that were free to their employees, with no copayments or deductibles. The workers also would have to pay income taxes on the value of such benefits.

Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D., said the proposal would cost $400 billion from savings in Medicare and Medicaid and $100 billion in new taxes. They would spend $400 billion and use the other $100 billion to reduce the deficit.

Benefits in the proposal would not be as generous as those in Mitchell's plan, but the senators who drafted it say they are offering only what they can pay for. A long-term care program would be limited to those with incomes below 150 percent of poverty, for instance.

The administration refused to say how long the refugees would be held or what their eventual fate would be. "We will address those issues down the line," Attorney General Janet Reno said.

The sudden about-face in policy was intended to prevent a recurrence of the 1980 Mariel boatlift that brought 125,000 Cubans to America, overwhelming schools, law enforcement and social service agencies and deepening Jimmy Carter's political problems.

Florida Gov. Lawton Chiles, a Democrat who faces a tough re-election battle in November, welcomed Clinton's move and said it lessened "the impact of this crisis on Florida." He met with the president in the Cabinet Room of the White House for more than an hour Friday evening to discuss the situation.

Without saying whether criticism had been voiced, Chiles told reporters: "A lot of views were exchanged and everybody's going to do a little thinking about it and we look forward to coming back in the morning."

A senior White House official, briefing reporters after that meeting, said Clinton will issue a statement today outlining a series of four new steps to bring pressure to bear against the Castro government.

"I think he there will be a significant cutback of remittances (to Cuba) but I don't yet know what the numbers are going to be," said the official who commented on condition he not be identified.

Clinton also will announce

"beefed-up U.S. radio transmissions to Cuba," a sharp upsurge of airline flights from the United States to the island and an initiative at the United Nations, the official said.

Chiles was accompanied to the meeting by a number of Cuban-American leaders he said wanted to express their views to the president.

The governor did not describe the meeting further, but the White House official said the Cuban-Americans used the occasion to urge "a firm response to Castro and his provocations."

Speaking before the White House meeting, Florida's two senators — Democrat Bob Graham and Republican Connie Mack — said Clinton was too vague and did not address what they see as the primary problem — Castro. "The policy seems to be to punish the rafters as opposed to punishing Fidel," Mack said.

Clinton, at an East Room news conference, said Americans "do not want to see another Mariel boatlift. They do not want to see Cuba dictate immigration policy. They do not want to see Mr. Castro able to export his political and economic problems to the United States."

House Republican Whip Newt Gingrich denounced Clinton's action, Gingrich charged the administration with "lost moral compass" by changing the policy that, since 1966, has routinely allowed Cubans into the United States after brief interviews with immigration officials.

There also were cries of betrayal in Miami, home of the largest Cuban population outside of Havana.

northern flank of the Corral Fire continuing toward the main Salmon River and was within 3 1/2 miles on Friday. Fire crews were deployed along the river to protect ranches and other buildings there.

Fire bosses estimated containment at 10 percent on the Corral Fire and 20 percent on the Blackfoot Complex. But in both cases, those secured fire lines were around the resort city of McCall on the southern and western flanks of the fires and miles from the most intense burning.

There was no target date for full containment because Blackfoot Complex was sticking to their earlier prediction that the two fires will eventually merge somewhere just above Upper Payette Lake, about 16 miles north-northeast of McCall, and could cover more than 400,000 acres of backcountry before they are finally squelched by the first significant snowfall in September or October.

Firefighters have completed a line to stop flames from running back to the south toward McCall once the two fires do join, and other crews will be setting fire traps in a spot fire that erupted under smoldering dunes on the once-quiet western flank of the Corral Fire.

But the Justice Department agreed to the buyout, and ConAgra bought Universal Frozen on Aug. 2. ConAgra immediately made the Universal Frozen plants in Twin Falls, Pocatello, and Burley, Idaho, and in Hermiston, Ore., into Lamb-Weston operations.

"It seems like it was a good fit for them (ConAgra)," Stulo said.

New Cuban arrivals held in 'hastily built' tent city

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — Hundreds of Cubans who braved the open sea on homemade rafts and boats found themselves in custody Friday, detained at a hastily built camp after a reversal of U.S. policy.

About 400 refugees were held overnight at a Coast Guard station in Key West under the new policy barring their release to relatives or sponsors.

On Friday morning, they were bused to the Krome immigration detention center west of Miami, where workers put up tents to house them, said Lamar Wooley, a spokesman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

"We're talking detention until their status is determined," Wooley said.

Wooley said Krome would be the only detention center for new Cuban refugees who reach Florida. The Coast Guard was ordered to take refugees it picks up at sea to the U.S. Navy base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, where nearly 15,000 Haitians already were being held in a tent city.

One refugee who made the 90-mile crossing went when he was told that he was among the last Cubans to be freed before the policy was changed.

With tears streaming down his cheeks, Benjamin Brennan embraced his 11-year-old son at the Cuban Refugee Transit Center near Key West.

"Thank God!" said Brennan, 38. "Can you believe it, son? We made it! We made it! We're free."

Relatives of refugees who will be detained denounced President Clinton for changing the policy that had given Cubans preferential treatment over refugees from other nations.

"We have been betrayed," said Leticia Ramos, who waited overnight in Key West in vain for two cousins who left Cuba by raft Wednesday.

"These people have been through hell in the ocean and putting up with Castro," said her husband, Jack Canario. "Now they have put up with all this and they can't even see their family."

Clinton's decision to change the Cuban admission policy, in effect since 1966, came after a rising tide of Cuban refugees raised fears of a replay of the Mariel boatlift in 1980, when about 125,000 Cubans overwhelmed law enforcement, schools and social service agencies.

The Coast Guard has rescued more than 2,700 Cuban refugees from the Florida Straits this month, including 547 Cubans on Wednesday, the biggest single day since the 1980 exodus. Friday's total by mid-afternoon was 236.

The president's decision was lauded by Gov. Lation Chiles, who had declared an immigration emergency in Florida because of the influx and demanded more federal help.

Chiles said the policy change sends a firm signal that could slow the exodus from Cuba. Cubans should be encouraged to stay home and "bring about the fall of Castro rather than escape," he said.

Chiles, who's running for reelection this fall, has made an issue of the burden illegal immigrants place on Florida taxpayers. Earlier this year, he sued the federal government to collect $1.5 billion, his estimate of the public cost of accommodating hundreds of thousands of illegal immigrants.

Florida deployed 60 state troopers to the Keys to help enforce the new detention policy.

The Cuban transit center, a volunteer processing agency that had been the scene of emotional reunions between hundreds of refugees and their families all week, was nearly empty.

President Clinton, accompanied by first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, entertains reporters in the White House state dining room following a press conference Friday. The president served cake and refreshments to observe his 48th birthday.

President Clinton turns 48; wishes for crime bill, vacation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton turned 48 Friday with wishes that Congress would pass his crime bill and fortune would smile just enough at summer's end to let him go on vacation.

His birthday was one of the few White House history to be celebrated during a nationally televised news conference.

But later, when reporters persisted in asking even more questions during the cutting of the birthday cake in the State Dining Room, Clinton begged off.

He said he was glad the patriotic confection had no candles because, "I have expended all of my hot air on you."

"The birthday news conference centered on changing policy for refugees from Cuba, his hopes of rescuing his crime bill and making progress on reforming the health insurance system."

Someone asked if his decision to find safe havens for fleeing Cubans elsewhere in the hemisphere but to stop admitting them to the United States was just a matter of "giving in to politics."

"Now, that's one of those questions designed to spoil your birthday," a grinning Clinton said before denying the premise of the question.

At the end, Clinton got a free shot as a reporter asked if he cared to make three wishes on his birthday. His answer mixed policy, philosophy and his hopes for just a bit of summer fun.

"I woke up this morning just grateful to be here; that's what I'm feeling," he replied. "I'm grateful to be alive, grateful to have my health, grateful to have my family ..."

He managed to put a bright face on what has been a bad month for him.

"You know, I like the tough fight, so this is an exhilarating period for me; I like the big challenges. I think we're all put on this earth to try to make a difference."

And the three wishes?

1. "I would wish for the crime bill to pass."

2. "... If we can open our minds and hearts to each other and play a little less politics, we can solve the health care problem, too."

3. "And I would wish that I won't have to give up my whole vacation because I still have dreams of breaking 80 on the golf course before I'm 50."

The president and his family have a vacation haven waiting on Martha's Vineyard off Cape Cod. If the press of business ever allows him to leave town.

How about birthday presents? "I got him a huge globe," said his wife, Hillary Rodham Clinton. "He wanted an updated globe because all of our globes are outdated today."

The birthday celebration was actually a White House double-header. Tipper Gore, wife of Vice President Al Gore, turned 46 Friday, and Mrs. Clinton said the party would continue on and off into the evening.

Clinton declines to criticize rate hikes

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton declined Friday to criticize the Federal Reserve's decision to raise interest rates again and some economists said he made the proper call.

Clinton, responding to a question during a White House news conference, said he saw no evidence the five increases this year in short-term rates have hurt the economy.

"When it is apparent to me that the drag on the economy will be more about slowing the economy down than stopping inflation, I will do what I can to influence that policy," he said. "But I think my policy of letting them do their job and having me do mine has worked out rather well."

The Fed pushed up interest rates half a percentage point on Tuesday in an attempt to prevent inflation from accelerating next year, he said.

Some economists said Clinton was right to be guarded.

"If you really want to communicate with the Fed, you don't put them on the spot in public," said Murray Weidenbaum, director of the Center

'If you really want to communicate with the Fed, you don't put them on the spot in public.'

— Murray Weidenbaum, director of the Center for the Study of American Business for the Study of American Business at Washington University and President Reagan's first chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.

"If it was the case that the Fed jumped interest rates a couple of percentage points and the economy suddenly screeched to a halt and we were facing an impending recession, that's the time when the president would jump in and ask what's going on," said Campbell Harvey, a professor of finance at Duke University's Fuqua School of Business.

Injecting White House politics into the process would tarnish the integrity of the Fed, said Norman Robertson, an economist and adjunct professor at Carnegie Mellon University.

"As long as we want to have an independent central bank, which I think is highly desirable," he said, "I think it is essential for the president to adopt a hands-off policy."

Clinton said his policies have produced greater economic growth than either he or the Federal Reserve had anticipated.

Woman files counterclaim on sexual assault charges

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A lawsuit filed in federal court claims ownership of the sunken passenger ship Lusitania, which was torpedoed off the coast of Ireland by a German submarine in 1915.

Muriel C. Light contends her late husband, John Light, a former Navy diver, bought rights to the wreck 27 years ago for about $2,400.

Mrs. Light's Aug. 12 claim in U.S. District Court in Norfolk; the 42-year-old congressman, who revealed the investigation last week, has denied any wrongdoing and said as recently as Tuesday that he would be vindicated.

He's seeking a second term for the 2nd Congressional District representing part of Chicago's South Side and south suburbs.

At an Aug. 11 news conference, Reynolds said the woman who accused him of sexual misconduct is a lesbian who once practiced Satan worship. Reynolds says he had tried to help a sick and disabled woman and never had sex with her. He said the woman had tried to extort money from him and presented an affidavit that he sought in which the woman recanted her story.

The woman has been unavailable for comment.

Prosecutors also have been investigating allegations that Reynolds mishandled campaign funds. The state's attorney office did not explain the basis of the child pornography charge.

Reynolds blamed the campaign-finance investigation on disgruntled former employees in league with political enemies.

"In the normal course of life all of these matters will be determined and it'll be clear that I have done absolutely nothing wrong, at all, in relation to any of these matters," Reynolds said Tuesday.

David Gibson reaches inside a bag full of wooden letters searching for the right that would lead him to the $15,000 first prize in the 1994 National Scrabble Championship.

'Voe,' 'ajar' clinch Scrabble victory

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. (AP) — A college math instructor captured the 1994 National Scrabble Championship on Thursday, clinching the $15,000 first prize with words like "scooter," "voe" and "ajar."

David Gibson, 43, of Spartanburg, S.C., was one of 300 Scrabble enthusiasts competing in a tournament that highlighted a distinct subculture and one of America's best-loved games.

Among the contestants: a stand-up comedian, forklift salesman and an organic banana deliveryman who lives without electricity in the jungle near Hilo, Hawaii.

Mark Pistoles, 38, had never played in a tournament before but was placed in the expert division by organizers stunned at the Hawaii man's prodigious ability.

"I don't have the word power that some of these people have, but you can win at Scrabble with an intermediate vocabulary and strong strategy," he said.

The players likely resembled any cross-section of humanity, except for their skill at the crosswordlike game in which point values are assigned to different words and spaces on a board.

Some contestants said they tend to habitually scramble words on street signs, menus and television into other words.

"I even do it in my sleep," said Marian Koonce, 70, of Santa Barbara.

The tournament, which began Sunday, drew an elite from around North America, as well as from Thailand and England.

During the first four days, some 3,000 words were challenged for not being legitimate words and many — including "grrr," "ag," "overlaid" and "cupcake" — were disallowed.

Two clocks at each one-on-one match limited players to a total of 25 minutes each.

Gibson's winning board included "scooter," "ajar" and "voe," another word for a bay or similar body of water.

Gibson said he hones his Scrabble skills in marathon sessions with fellow finalist Bob Lipton of Vero Beach, Fla., who was Gibson's opponent in Thursday's round.

"Our parents brought us up on the game," Gibson said.

The Spartanburg Methodist College professor said he would probably give part of the money to his mother-in-law, and might use the rest to help pay expenses of other players at the championship.

"We're so blessed," Gibson said. "It's so much. I don't need it."

Twelve-year-old Daniel Goldman of Larchmont, N.Y., made it to the championships at the Universal Hilton Hotel by studying lists and competing regularly with a club in New York City.

"Most people I play against, I know I can beat them," said Goldman, who played at the novice level.

Some players prepare for competition by opening dictionaries randomly and forcing themselves to twist whatever words they find while others use a hand-held Scrabble computer to study.

Not Mark Nymen, 27, a television producer from Leeds, England, and the reigning world Scrabble champion. He placed fifth in the expert division.

Congress pares down crime bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional Democrats and Republicans worked feverishly Friday to devise a slimmed-down, $30 billion crime bill that could pass the House, perhaps this weekend.

President Clinton endorsed the developing bill that would see roughly 10 percent, across-the-board cuts from the $33 billion plan put together by House and Senate conferees in late July.

The House took steps to allow a possible Saturday vote on a compromise. Negotiators, meeting in several rooms in the Capitol, said they were edging toward a deal that would subject the bill's crime-prevention, police and prison construction programs to reductions of roughly one dollar in 10.

"We are moving toward basic agreements," said Rep. Michael Castle, R-Del., leader of a group of about 40 moderate Republicans with whom Democrats were bargaining. "I'm happy with the tone of it."

"There's a real spirit of cooperation," said Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y.

The new version would still include money to help put 100,000 more police on the streets; extend the death penalty to 50 more crimes; require life sentences for some third-time felons; and ban assault-style firearms.

Celebrating his 48th birthday, Clinton told a news conference, "I'd had three wishes, I would wish for the crime bill to pass."

"This is a grass-roots, mainstream, nonpartisan issue, and so it should remain," he said. "It must be an American crime bill. We have worked hard on it, and I call upon Congress to pass it without delay."

The House shelved the $33 billion package last week by defeating a procedural measure, 225-210, that would have let it come to the floor for a vote.

Any changes made in that bill would have to win approval anew from House and Senate negotiators before going to the chambers for final action.

Moderate House Republicans were pleased with Democrats' support for a 10 percent across-the-board cut. "A very, very big movement on their part and they should be commended for it," in the words of Rep. John Kasich, R-Ohio.

But there was an omen of troubles ahead as Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, took to the Senate floor and said: "I won't accept an across-the-board cut. I want to cut the social spending that was added to the bill."

The moderate House Republicans, with support of their leaders, negotiated late Thursday and much of Friday with Democrats after sending Clinton a letter seeking a compromise.

Unlike many Republicans and about four dozen Democrats who opposed last week's procedural vote because of the ban on assault-style firearms, Castle said dropping the ban "is a deal issue from our perspective." Many of these Republicans supported the ban in a separate May vote.

Clinton said he agreed with this group's request to strengthen a provision notifying a community when a convicted sexual predator is released.

The group also wanted the 10 percent taken specifically from the $7.6 billion in crime-prevention spending and eliminating a $10 million grant for Lamar University, House Judiciary Committee Chairman Jack Brooks' alma mater.

Brooks said opposition to the grant was based on "demagoguery, devilment."

Moderate Republicans want to lump the bill's crime-prevention money and its $8.8 billion to help fund 100,000 new community police officers into a $12 billion block-grant program, with decisions on spending left up to local officials.

Another $10.5 billion would be spent on prisons. "Ironically, Republicans vehemently criticized the $1.8 billion Local Partnership Act, which essentially authorized crime prevention block grants, to be spent as local authorities deemed best."

The pending $33 billion House-Senate package would authorize $11.1 billion for state and local law enforcement, $2.8 billion for federal law enforcement, $10.5 billion for prisons, $1.3 billion for drug courts and $7.6 billion for crime prevention.

Unlike most authorization bills, it establishes a trust fund with money saved from shrinking the federal government — a move intended to produce $30.2 billion.

A 10 percent cut, Clinton said, "will ensure that every dollar authorized in the bill will actually be paid for."

Senate gives final approval to $27 billion bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate gave final approval Friday to a $27 billion spending bill that strengthens immigration enforcement and provides millions for disaster relief and crime-fighting programs.

The bill had been delayed by a complex and heated dispute over the budget of the agency that polices the nation's financial markets, the Securities and Exchange Commission.

A compromise over the SEC budget, reached earlier this week, allowed the bill to progress through Congress. It now goes to President Clinton.

The Senate voted 88-10 for the compromise bill, which provides money for the departments of Commerce, State and Judiciary and several agencies for the budget year that begins Oct. 1. The House approved it Thursday.

The SEC budget became controversial due to a plan by House Democrats to make the commission a self-funded agency. The SEC takes in nearly $2 for every dollar it spends, with the surplus going into the government's general fund, where the money is spent on other government programs.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and others opposed the self-funding plan, saying it would dilute congressional oversight over the SEC. They argue that such oversight is important since the SEC last year had authority to raise more than $800 million in fees, fees which Gramm argues dampen economic growth.

The compromise did not resolve the dispute between Gramm and Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., a strong advocate of SEC self-funding. The bill provides $125 million for the SEC, enough to keep the commission in business perhaps into February.

At that time, Congress is expected to reconsider the issue and provide additional money for the SEC. The agency had requested $305 million to operate in 1995.

Quick action was urged on the bill because it contains $380 million in Small Business Administration disaster relief for flooding victims in Florida, Georgia and Alabama, and relief for victims of the Los Angeles earthquake and wildfires in the West.

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., touted elements in the bill to fight crime and curb illegal immigration.

"This essentially is the crime bill," Hollings said. "It contains $475.3 million for a variety of initiatives to combat illegal immigration, which would allow deployment of 950 additional Border Patrol agents. Also included is another $130 million for Texas and other border states to defray costs of jailing illegal aliens."

It also puts the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Drug Enforcement Administration at peak staffing levels by hiring 436 new FBI agents and 311 new DEA agents.

Some senators complained that the bill includes $41 million for special projects for members of the House and Senate appropriations committees.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., voted against the measure to protest what he called the secretive way in which the projects were added to the bill, without any hearings.

Stamp dealers fight to save copies of erroneous picture

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — The U.S. Postal Service destroyed more than 3 million sheets of stamps with an erroneous picture on it before two stamp collecting companies obtained an injunction to stop it.

The stamps had been intended to honor black rodeo cowboy Bill Pickett, but the 1920s photograph used by the artist who designed the stamp was actually of Pickett's brother, Ben. New stamps with the correct picture have been printed.

Uncover of Cheyenne and the Mystic Stamp Co. of New York, which sell stamps to collectors, were trying to block the destruction of 5 million sheets of "Legends of the West" commemorative stamps. The companies obtained a federal court order Thursday, but the Postal Service already had destroyed about 3.1 million sheets, said Uncover president Jim Helzer.

"It's not good news, but there's still a lot," he said. "It would still make a lot of collectors happy."

Now that a stay has been issued, a federal appeals court will consider Uncover and Mystic's case, which has already been rejected by U.S. District Court.

The Postal Service had proposed destroying all but 150,000 of the flawed stamp sheets and selling them by mail on a first come, first served basis. A $5.90 sheet of stamps will cost $8.70 counting shipping and handling, and money will be returned to buyers if all 150,000 have been sold by the time their order comes in.

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP) — The Japanese government is lifting its 23-year ban on U.S. apple imports, clearing the way for Washington apples to be sent to Japan by December, a Washington Apple Commission spokesman said.

Japan's Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries made the announcement Friday after determining the apples were safe and cleared all necessary health inspections.

Hurricane may threaten islands

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane Chris formed in open waters Friday and took a turn to the northwest that should steer it away from the United States.

But the weak hurricane, the Atlantic season's first, could threaten Bermuda as it strengthens in the next few days, the National Hurricane Center said.

"Bermuda is the only land that could be threatened by this hurricane," forecaster Lixion Avila said. "In about three days, it will be very close to this island."

Chris moved steadily toward the northwest at 17 mph, and forecasters expected it to veer to the north in the next day or so. Sustained winds measured 47.5 mph, just over the 74 mph threshold for a hurricane.

At 9 a.m. MST, the center of the hurricane was at 19.5 north latitude and 53.9 west longitude, or 550 miles east of the Leeward Islands.

A weather trough between Puerto Rico and Bermuda is influencing both Chris' strength and direction,

Robotic underground camera assists biologist in gathering info

LIVERMORE, Calif. (AP) — There's a mole burrowing after secrets at one of the nation's most sensitive government laboratories.

No, this isn't some deep-cover foreign spy ferreting out nuclear weapons secrets. This mole does its spying underground on the burrowing owl and the San Joaquin kit fox.

MOLE — short for Miniature Optical Laid Explorer — is a remotely controlled robot. It's proving to be a valuable tool for checking out bashful animals that may be living in harm's way at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory's 7,000-acre conventional explosives range east of the San Francisco Bay area.

AP photo

Jim Woollett, wildlife biologist, uses a video robot at Site 300 of the Lawrence Livermore Lab in Livermore, Calif. The robot is partly constructed from toy parts to scurry down burrows.

guine, tending to freeze and stare at the mechanical intruder.

Woollett's job is finding where ground-dwellers live and how they may be affected by lab operations, such as road construction.

Besides pinpointing where the wild things are, the MOLE has revealed some of their habits.

For instance, the burrowing owl, an 8-inch-high bird that makes its home in vacated ground lairs of squirrels and badgers, likes corridors that twist and turn. Badgers, on the other hand, like a den with a straight-shot entrance.

"Until now, I'd say 99 percent of wildlife biologists have only been able to view a den from the outside," Woollett said. "Actually getting down inside one, I've learned so many things."

'It's a real decision-maker and that's what I'm interested in, being able to say, 'Hey, this requires some protection'

— Jim Woollett, wildlife biologist

"It's a real decision-maker and that's what I'm interested in, being able to say, 'Hey, this requires some protection,'" said lab wildlife biologist Jim Woollett.

MOLE is a vehicle about 5 inches long that rolls forward or backward on rubber treads and carries a television camera the size of a roll of film that can be swiveled 360 degrees.

The robot, designed by lab engineer John Christensen, sends back images from inside animal lairs through an 18-foot-long cord.

MOLE allows Woollett to bypass the laborious process of looking for tracks or meal leftovers at den entrances or setting up night surveillance equipment to study nocturnal animals.

It can cruise underground burrows during the day when residents tend to be at home, and deliver instant data.

Woollett is careful not to send MOLE barging into badger dens since they're notoriously private animals. "I think they'd probably try to take a bite out of it."

But other species are more san-

Children of slain mother return from midwest

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Meryem Gussal greeted her grandchildren at the airport with a young grandmother would — with lots of hugs and kisses.

She knew they would need many more. They were unaware that their mother was dead and their father admitted killing her.

Lisa Abequa, 6, and her brother Sami, 3, returned Thursday from six weeks in the Midwest. Their father, Mohammed Abequa, had whisked them away after killing their mother, Nihal, on July 4.

Abequa, 45, was jailed on murder and kidnapping charges in Jordan, his native homeland. In an interview last month, he said he killed his estranged wife during an argument.

The ensuing international custody case pitted the dead mother's family in the United States and the jailed father's family in Jordan. King Hussein of Jordan, Secretary of State Warren Christopher and even President Clinton got involved.

Researchers: Mineral selenium may play role in development of AIDS

ATLANTA (AP) — A hypothesis that the AIDS virus slowly depletes the body of the trace mineral selenium, which it uses to erupt into uninfected cells, bolsters the notion that supplements of the nutrient could combat the disease.

The theory by University of Georgia researchers was published in Friday's Journal of Medicinal Chemistry. It suggests that HIV produces proteins that consume the body's supply of selenium. Although the proteins and the genes that tell them what to do have not yet been found, scientists are trying to prove their existence.

According to the theory, HIV needs selenium, which preserves the elasticity of body tissue and slows the aging process, to trigger its growth. Once the virus exhausts the selenium in an infected cell, it breaks out in search of more, spreading the infection to new cells.

Many AIDS patients lack selenium and have taken supplements on their own. For several years, a number of researchers and doctors have encouraged selenium, as part of the patients' dietary supplement.

It was thought that AIDS patients had trouble absorbing the nutrient from food, but the new work suggests another reason for the depletion.

"If this is true, then selenium biochemistry may be the key to understanding the control of the life cycle of HIV and perhaps some of the pathology of AIDS," said Will Taylor, who headed the research team at Georgia College of Pharmacy.

He said the length of time it takes to deplete the body's stores of selenium could help account for HIV's latency period, which can last for years.

"This suggests that nutritional status may be a factor in some HIV-positive long-term survivors," Taylor said.

American observers a sign of closer ties that bind Mexico and U.S.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Thousands of Mexicans passing through polling places Sunday will see something almost unthinkable: gringos watching them vote.

Hundreds of foreigners — mostly Americans — have been accredited to monitor the secret balloting for president in a powerful sign of the increasingly close ties between the United States and Mexico.

Never before has proudly nationalistic Mexico allowed foreigners to observe its election.

But rarely has foreign approval been more important to Mexico. And never has a Mexican election meant more to the United States.

The North American Free Trade Agreement that took effect Jan. 1 as part of a broad free-market reform in Mexico has made its economic policies increasingly important north of the border.

"These elections will be a plebiscite on economic reform and the future of economic reform," said Delal Baer, a Mexico specialist for the Center for Strategic and International Studies, an independent thinktank in Washington.

They will also be a test of President Carlos Salinas de Gortari's promise to hold the cleanest election in Mexican history. There are fears that election fraud — a tradition in Mexico — this time around could spur post-election violence and lead to a resumption of a peasant rebellion in the south.

As the American and Mexican economies become more intertwined, each country's policies affect the creation and loss of jobs in the other.

Foreign investment in Mexico has almost tripled in the past six years, and most of it comes from the United States. Telefonos de Mexico is one of the most active stocks on the New York Stock Exchange.

In May, Mexico passed Japan to become the second-largest market for U.S. products; Canada remains in first place. Mexico purchased $350 million more from the United States than it sold there that month.

Even more important is the river of migrants that has flowed back and forth across the U.S.-Mexico border throughout the century, changing the character of both nations.

Salinas says Mexico's free market policies will eventually create jobs at home. Initially, however, some Mexican businesses may fail as competition heats up, forcing more Mexicans to seek jobs north of the border.

Gov. Lawton Chiles of Florida declared a state emergency this week as the number of Cuban refugees reached 500 a day. But U.S. border states see an average of 2,000 or more Mexican migrants crossing the border illegally daily, according to a study by the College of the Northern Border in Tijuana, Mexico.

Most migrants return home. But an estimated 130,000 to 150,000 Mexicans stayed in the north last year, a number surpassing the 1980 Mariel boatlift from Cuba and seven times greater than the total number of Cuban boat refugees to arrive in the United States in the past decade.

Palestinians gain control of education

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip (AP) — PLO leader Yasser Arafat called the Israelis cousins Friday, and Israel's foreign minister said the Palestinians are neighbors "we would like very much to be of help and assistance to."

Underlining that atmosphere, Israel freed more Palestinian prisoners and handed over responsibility for education in the occupied West Bank to the Palestinian autonomy government.

But on the first anniversary of the Oslo accords that led to Palestinian self-rule in the Gaza Strip and West Bank town of Jericho, the specter of continuing violence weighed heavily on the friendly words.

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres repeatedly stressed that Arafat's government must stop attacks by radical Palestinians that have killed five Israelis in Gaza since autonomy began in May if they want peace to work.

Peres was the most senior Israeli official to visit Gaza since autonomy started in May. He came for meetings with Arafat and Norwegian Foreign Minister Bjorn Tore Godal to mark the anniversary of the peace accords.

"It is in the Palestinian interest to fight terror," Peres said. "You cannot develop Gaza and other areas if the terrorists prevent the development of tourism, industry and the like."

The Izzadine al-Qassam group, the armed underground of the Islamic fundamentalist Hamas movement, has claimed responsibility for the attacks on Israelis.

Arafat's government detained some Hamas activists this week and Arafat tried to reassure Peres the problem was under control.

"We will not accept any challenge to discipline in the Palestinian territories... that any person spoils what we have agreed upon," he said.

But Palestinian sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said there would be no crackdown on Hamas and no arrests were planned.

For Israel, the future of the autonomy accord hinges on Arafat's success in controlling the militants. Polls show most Israelis support linking further concessions to the Palestinians to a proven commitment to stopping violence.

Still, Peres announced that the peace would forge ahead.

Gorbachev plans opposition party

MOSCOW (AP) — Former Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev Friday marked the third anniversary of the hard-line Communist coup that ousted him by announcing plans to form a democratic opposition movement.

Gorbachev told the ITAR-Tass news agency that "fussing and maneuvering have been substituted for a really new policy" to guide Russia.

He gave no details about the movement or its goals other than to say that it would be "a democratic movement alternative to the present regime."

Russian newspapers were filled with stories and commentary about the Aug. 18-21, 1991, putsch that briefly ousted Gorbachev and accelerated the collapse of the Soviet Union four months later.

Pope plans Sarajevo mass in skating rink

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II hopes to celebrate Mass at a battle-scarred skating rink during a one-day visit to the capital of Bosnia-Herzegovina next month, the Vatican announced Friday.

The trip to Sarajevo would be the first by the pope to the former Yugoslavia.

But the Vatican said it could cancel the Sarajevo visit, scheduled for Sept. 8, if fighting escalated. The Bosnian capital has been a battleground between Bosnian Serb forces and Muslim-led government troops for over two years.

The pope plans to celebrate Mass in the Zvezdara ice skating hall built for the 1984 Winter Olympics. More recently it was a target of Bosnian Serb gunners and snipers.

Nigerian military nabs critics

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Pursuing its crackdown on critics, the military regime arrested two prominent opponents Friday, including a favored politician who started Nigeria on the road to independence four decades ago.

There were no signs of weakening in a pro-democracy strike by oil workers that has crippled Nigeria's only significant source of foreign revenue, state news agency said. The junta leader, is trying to douse the movement by closing newspapers, jailing opponents and letting troops shoot at protesters.

Police entered the Lagos Sheraton Hotel during the afternoon and arrested Anthony Enahoro and Cornelius Adebayo, both leaders of the National Democratic Coalition opposition group.

Enahoro is famous for being the member of parliament who introduced a motion seeking Nigeria's independence from Britain in 1956. It began a process that led to independence four years later and is enshrined as a key moment in the history of this nation of 90 million people.

Adebayo governed Kwara state during the nation's last civilian government, which was toppled by the military in 1983.

Since independence, the oil-rich nation has tried but failed to establish stable civilian governments. Each experiment in democracy has ended abruptly with a coup by the military, which has dominated post-colonial history with a string of corrupt and inept regimes.

The latest crisis began after the military voided the results of the June 1993 presidential election that was to end a decade of military rule. The apparent winner, businessman Moshood K.O. Abiola, was jailed after he declared himself president last June to mark the first anniversary of the election.

The nation's oil workers went on strike July 4 demanding that Abiola be installed as president.

Canadians try rubber bullets to scare bears

WHITEHORSE, British Columbia (AP) — Officials are considering using riot guns with rubber bullets to keep bears away from campgrounds and hiking trails in the Yukon's increasingly busy Klondike National Park.

"Relocation of bears does not appear to be working," park warden Ray Breneman said. "We are looking at that alternative."

The rubber baton, developed as a self-defense riot weapon, was proven successful in Alberta's Banff National Park and in Wyoming's Yellowstone National Park, Breneman said.

In Churchill, Manitoba, which has a perennial polar bear problem, the four-simeter rubber projectile, which doesn't penetrate hide — has actually been able to chase a bear off a rotting whale and seal carcass, if only temporarily.

"Depending on how badly the bear is habituated, if it has been feeding in a dump for a while, I would say you would not be able to change its mind with a little pain," said Breneman. "But if it is a young bear ..."

Park officials have used a similar projectile from a 12-gauge shotgun but find that it's not nearly as much of a deterrent as the larger riot bullet, and there is greater chance of piercing the skin with the smaller projectile.

Sri Lanka's new leader faces war

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Socialist Chandrika Kumaratunga was sworn in Friday as prime minister and immediately began the daunting task of ending a guerrilla war that has killed 34,000 people.

Mrs. Kumaratunga created a ministry of ethnic affairs to initiate a settlement with the rebel Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam. Earlier, the rebels issued a statement in London welcoming her offer for negotiations.

"We are very happy that she is willing to talk to us. We are also willing," rebel spokesman Anton Raja said. The country's 3 million Tamils have been fighting for independence from the Sinhalese majority since 1983.

Mrs. Kumaratunga, 49, was tapped to become prime minister after her Peoples' Alliance became the first opposition party in 17 years to defeat the United National Party in a parliamentary election.

Around the valley

Investigators have suspect in stabbing

TWIN FALLS — Police investigators have a suspect in a stabbing that happened at 150 Madison late Friday afternoon, according to Sgt. Jim Massey of the Twin Falls Police Department.

An adult male was stabbed in the shoulder, Massey said. He was taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center for treatment.

Massey was unable to release any details of the stabbing Friday evening because the investigation was still ongoing.

3-vehicle accident clogs lane of Perrine Bridge Friday

TWIN FALLS — A three-vehicle accident clogged a lane of the Perrine Bridge Friday evening.

Christopher Lavelle of Twin Falls was taken to the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center with neck and knee injuries after the van was driving west on the south end of the bridge, according to Keith Schmidt of the Twin Falls Sheriff's Department.

A Ford pickup driven by Ross Deahl of Twin Falls was travelling south on Blue Lakes Boulevard North when Deahl slowed to avoid an oncoming vehicle that was losing its load, Schmidt said.

Lavelle's van stopped behind Deahl, but a motor home behind Lavelle struck the van and shoved it into the pickup, Schmidt said.

The motor home's driver, Randy Bowdrie of El Segundo, Calif., was cited for inattentive driving.

Two lanes of the four-lane bridge were already closed off for construction, and the congestion probably contributed to the accident, Schmidt said.

Pioneer Fire continues blazing in Frank Church wilderness

CHALLIS — The Pioneer Fire in the Challis National Forest made major runs Friday, growing to roughly 5,500 acres and threatening several structures.

The fire drew closer to the Diamond D Ranch and Loon Creek Guard Station. It also threatens archeological sites and the old mining towns of Ore Grade and Casto, as well as the Lost Packer Mine site.

Firefighters continue to focus on clearing safety hazards from burned areas along Loon Creek road, which is critical for crews to reach the fire.

Firefighters are trying to keep the Pioneer Fire within the Frank Church River of No Return Wilderness and away from private property.

The Beaver-Loon Creek Road from the Estes Mountain and Hecla Grouse Creek turn-off remains closed to all traffic.

Wilderness areas burned or threatened by the fire also remain off-limits.

Andrus awards economic development grant to city

BOISE — Gov. Cecil Andrus the Idaho Department of Commerce awarded a $296,000 economic development block grant to the city of Twin Falls Friday.

The grant is to help the city pay for improvements in the Twin Falls Industrial Park where Season's Manufacturing Co. Inc. intends to develop a factory.

"This is another good example of how industry and local and state government can work together to expand our economy, enhance our local services, create jobs and improve the quality of life for Idahoans," Andrus said in a prepared statement.

The Season's plant will manufacture machine and electronics parts. The plant is scheduled to open by January, and the block grant will pay for improvements to Eldridge Avenue and utility lines to the plant.

The plant should create about 55 new jobs in Twin Falls.

Sheriff's department releases name of construction worker

TWIN FALLS — The sheriff's department released Friday the name of the construction worker who fell to his death Tuesday afternoon while working on the hydro-plant project.

Jimmy Ray Parnell, Jr., 32, from Bakersfield, Calif., died on the way to the hospital Tuesday after he fell from a scaffold onto a cement floor at the hydro-plant at Twin Falls.

Officials from the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, Idaho Power, Twin Falls Sheriff's Department and TIC, the construction company working on the project met Wednesday and Thursday to investigate the cause of the accident.

Salmon advocates ask for mining halt

By William Brock
Times-News writer

BOISE — Advocates for Idaho's endangered salmon asked a federal judge Friday to halt all mining, grazing, logging and road building in six of Idaho's national forests — including the Sawtooth National Forest.

The Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund filed the petition for a preliminary injunction in U.S. District Court in Boise; the Wilderness Society and the Pacific Rivers Council are plaintiffs to the suit.

Their request for an injunction mirrors a similar court order on two national forests in Oregon.

"It's a shame that a lawsuit is necessary to force the Forest Service to do the right thing," said Kristen Boyles, defense attorney.

"We were hoping that they'd see what happened in Oregon and do it on their own, but they didn't," Boyles said. Even so, "this motion will come as no surprise to the Forest Service."

A ruling on the motion isn't expected for several weeks.

Boyles said the six Idaho forests have been added to the National Marine Fisheries Service about the effects of forest activities on salmon protection. The Salmon, Challis, Nez Perce, Payette, Boise and Sawtooth forests are named in the court action.

Sawtooth Forest Supervisor Jack Bills said his office is already consulting with the Fisheries Service about current and future activities that could be destructive to salmon.

"That's not saying it's all been approved, but we're not starting anything new without them," Bills said Friday. "We are consulting on all the activities in the forest's watersheds."

If the injunction is granted, Bills said he'd order a halt to all activities on forest land that are deemed harmful to salmon.

"But that's still a long ways off," Bills said. "At our level, at this point, we're not responding."

Craig Gehrke, director of The Wilderness Society's Boise office, said the injunction request was timed to cause minimal disturbance to traditional Idaho industries.

For instance, cattle on federal grazing allotments will be leaving soon because of drought conditions, he said.

"That's not putting a lot of people out of work," Gehrke said. "This can be done fairly quickly, if (forest officials) put their mind to it."

Gehrke said his focus is on saving endangered species, not perpetuating destructive land practices.

"These fish are on their way out," he said, "and at this stage, everything counts."

Snake River sockeye salmon were declared a federally endangered species in 1991; three runs of Snake River chinook — which were listed as threatened in 1992 — were assigned the graver "endangered" status.

Gubernatorial candidate remains upbeat

By Frank E. Lockwood
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — For a gubernatorial candidate who concedes he's in second place, Republican Phil Batt sounds pretty upbeat.

"We're a little behind in the polls," he told a GOP audience in Twin Falls Wednesday. "But by the time the election rolls around, we're going to have this thing in the bag."

Republicans have two reasons to be happy: Polls show Democrat Larry EchoHawk's lead over Batt narrowing, and history shows Idahoans aren't wild about President Clinton.

Only 28 percent of Idaho voters backed the Democratic nominee for president in 1992. The GOP hopes to portray EchoHawk and Clinton as two peas in a liberal pod, to tie an unpopular president around the neck of a popular attorney general.

"Mr. EchoHawk is very close to President Clinton, and we will point that out in a positive fashion," Batt told Republicans gathered at Twin Falls City Park.

In an interview, Batt, 67, stressed his opponent's close ties to the White House. EchoHawk, the presidential jogging partner, and EchoHawk, the recipient of Kennedy-Clinton fundraising assistance, are the images Batt evokes.

Amy Kleiner, Batt's press secretary, says their polls indicate that many Idahoans get concerned when a candidate accepts most of his money from out of state. And EchoHawk's got plenty of non-Idaho cash, a point the campaign is stressing.

While noting his opponent's presidential ties, Batt stresses that EchoHawk's White House cloud does Idaho little good.

"Why doesn't (EchoHawk) call (Clinton) when our water's leaving the state," Batt asks. Why, he wonders aloud, doesn't EchoHawk lobby for INEL or for expansion at the Air Force base in Mountain Home.

"If he's so close to President Clinton, why doesn't he get some cooperation on those matters?" Batt said.

Batt is honing his message as Labor Day approaches. He says he senses victory.

"I can feel the tide turning both in our (poll) tracking and in the response I get" from voters, he said.

The Republican nominee visited Twin Falls Wednesday for a Meet the Candidates Picnic. He's returning to the Magic Valley on Aug. 29 for a Times-News-KMYT televised debate. Then, on Aug. 31, his bus caravan will stop in Twin Falls for a GOP rally.

Calling this a "swing-vote" area, Batt said he needs to campaign here heavily. In past campaigns, Magic Valley voters have consistently backed him, Batt added.

This is Batt's second run for the governor's office. In 1982, he challenged incumbent Democrat John Evans of Burley, losing by less than 1 percent after trailing badly in the polls.

"I'm much closer," this time, Batt said Wednesday. He plans to close the gap by stressing his experience in both the public and private sectors.

"I have a history of saving money in state government," he added.

"Mr. EchoHawk — at least all the time he's been in Idaho — has worked for the government," Batt said. "I think I bring a different view of government expansion" to the voters, he said.

EchoHawk's support, Batt insists, is not based on the issues, but on EchoHawk's incredibly high name recognition. Between now and November, Batt says he'll be working hard to make himself better known in the Gem State.

ANDY ARENZ/The Times-News
Republican candidate for governor, Phil Batt, says he'll point out his opponent's ties to President Clinton.

Batt, EchoHawk continue sparring on finances

By Frank E. Lockwood
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Republican gubernatorial candidate Phil Batt says it's time to limit individual campaign contributions to candidates for state office. His Democratic opponent, Attorney General Larry EchoHawk, says it's a "non-sign reform" who is trying to change the rules in the middle of the election.

"If he's serious about this," he spent 14 years as a state senator and I doubt he ever moved to bring about campaign finance reform," EchoHawk said Friday, adding, "As him about his record."

Currently, Nevada and Washington state have passed contribution caps that limit how much one person or political-action committee can donate to a statewide candidate. Oregon and California, however, have no caps on most contests for state office.

This week, Batt endorsed similar limitations on individual and PAC donations. Batt has also criticized EchoHawk for raising most of his funds outside of Idaho. He's especially critical of a $50,000 donation the state received from actor Dustin Hoffman, and a $30,000 donation from an East Coast casino operator.

EchoHawk says Batt's stance on campaign reform doesn't match Batt's record in the Legislature. His campaign workers point to two times in the past 1800 days when Batt voted against forcing judicial candidates and PACs to disclose their donor lists. They also note a 1976 newspaper column by Batt that criticized the Sunshine Act, a law that forces candidates to file campaign financial disclosure reports. "The act had some beneficial effects, but its negative aspects may be stronger," he wrote.

Amy Kleiner, Batt's press secretary, said her candidate has consistently backed state Sunshine Laws. Batt's campaign also released a two-page record listing the Republican's votes on Sunshine legislation. "The record shows that Phil has voted for open records laws every time, so maybe it's Mr. EchoHawk who'd better go back and review the record," she said.

As for contribution caps, Kleiner said they weren't frequently debated when Batt was in the Senate.

The Republican nominee reminds Idaho audiences that EchoHawk has fund-raising help from President Clinton. EchoHawk reportedly raised $55,000 at a single Washington, D.C. fund-raising event earlier this year. Earlier this year, Batt asked EchoHawk to limit his out-of-state fund raising. The Democrat rejected Batt's suggestion.

Despite the rebuff, Batt continues raising the fund-raising issue, questioning why so many non-Idahoans want to help his opponent.

"(EchoHawk) will get most of his money from out-of-state liberal interests. I'll get most of mine from individuals and businesses within the state," Batt said.

EchoHawk says he'll be "very receptive" to campaign finance reform — after the November election. If Batt is concerned about the propriety of big donations, EchoHawk says the Republican "should have been an advocate for reform" long ago.

"I think it's inappropriate to try to propose new standards in the midst of a campaign simply because you're trailing in fund raising," he said.

Governor gets impact study on range

By William Brock
Times-News writer

BOISE — Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus has been given a review copy of the Air Force's final environmental impact statement for a controversial bomb training range in southwestern Owyhee County.

So far, the final environmental document does not bear the signature of Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt, said Andrus spokesman Scott Peyron.

"The review copy is a working document that is not for public consumption," Peyron said Friday. The state of Idaho is cooperating with the Air Force on the proposal, hence the state is reviewing it before the final version is released.

"It has been delivered to this office, and our review is beginning," Peyron said. Andrus has been briefed on the document, but hasn't had a chance to read it, Peyron added.

"We have provided Fish and Game with a copy and asked them to review it," Peyron said. "It will be interesting to hear from them about the wildlife mitigation measures."

At this point, the Air Force's preferred alternative still calls for a pair of dummy-bomb impact areas, totaling more than 25,000 acres, Peyron said. He declined to discuss other details of the latest environmental impact statement.

According to an earlier, draft statement, the Air Force already controls roughly 3.2 million acres of airspace in southern Idaho, eastern Oregon and northern Nevada.

However, the Air Force — specifically the 366th Composite Wing at Mountain Home Air Force Base — has permission to drop dummy bombs only over the Saylor Creek Range, southeast of Bruneau. Air Force officials contend the Saylor Creek range is inadequate — and they want to develop a state-of-the-art bombing range elsewhere in Owyhee County.

Among other things, the draft environmental statement lists the effects of 32 electronic "threat emitters" scattered across thousands of acres of high desert. "Attacking" war planes would be electronically "challenged" by the devices — and pilots would be forced to take evasive action.

In a typical sortie, pilots would drop non-exploding bombs, flares and metallic "chaff" to confuse the threat emitters.

Andrus is a strong backer of the new bombing range on grounds that it would ensure the survival of the Mountain Home airbase — thus safeguarding the area's economy.

Central to the plan is state acquisition of land where the bombs would fall; much of the proposed impact area is owned by the federal Bureau of Land Management. The BLM cannot turn the land over to the Air Force without an act of Congress — and approval would be unlikely in the face of growing public resistance to the idea.

Instead, Andrus is proposing for the state to acquire the land in trades with the BLM, then lease it back to the federal government for bomb training.

Lawmakers plan juvenile justice system hearings

By Frank E. Lockwood
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — If you know what's wrong with the state's juvenile justice system — or how to fix it — then the state Legislature wants to hear from you.

The Legislature's interim committee on juvenile justice is coming to File High School on Monday, 1:30 p.m. for an open hearing. The 12-member committee moves to Burley for a 1:30 p.m. meeting at the Burley Inn.

Committee co-chairwoman Rep. Celia Gould said she hopes a number of Magic Valley residents will attend the hearings.

"We'd like to hear from parents, law enforcement officials, school officials —

Kimberly schools to open Sept. 6

By Margaret Jones
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — School opens for students in the Kimberly school system Sept. 6.

Elementary students will register between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. Aug. 30. Middle school students register from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. next week.

Freshman registration is from 1 to 3 p.m. Wednesday. Sophomore registration is from 10 a.m. to noon Wednesday. Juniors register from 1 to 3 p.m. Tuesday.

Seniors register from 10 to noon Tuesday.

New students will register from 10 a.m. to noon Thursday.

Orientation for sixth grade students will be at 7 p.m. Aug. 30.

There will be no busing for preschool and kindergarten students for the first week of school.

Pictures for activity tickets will be taken from 1 to 5 p.m. Thursday.

The board released Margie Atkins, social studies teacher, from her contract. Terry Bohan was hired by the board to fill her position. Other new teachers include Tammy Kufnerheider, art teacher; James, math; Kim Vorhies, Spanish.

Superintendent John Garner announced the school had received a gift of A.L. Blanford's law library. The retired attorney's library includes volumes from 1900 on constitutional, federal and state law.

Garner said crisis prevention training will be given to the food service, bus drivers, and maintenance personnel Aug. 30 and 31.

Iowa Basic test will be given to the students in October this year. Garner said this would give the teachers and parents the test ratings by the end of the first semester.

In the past the test results were not known until the end of the school year.

The earlier tests will give teachers the information to work on the students' weak points.

The board decided to accept the revised bid of $42,217 for roof repair to be done by Professional Roofing. This money will come from $36,000 built up in the lottery.

About $2,000 from this fund will be spent on replacing windows in the high school and $5,000 will go to an irrigation project at the middle school. Grounds at the middle school are irrigated with city water.

Many children have no cavities, survey says

BOISE (AP) — A survey of 5,078 second- and six-grade students showed about 45 percent had no tooth decay or dental fillings.

Lisa Penny, dental program manager for the Health and Welfare agency, said the survey showed significant differences by area of the state.

Health District II, New Pecos, Carlsbad, Lewis, Clearwater and Idaho counties, had the best result, with 55 percent of the students showing no tooth decay or dental fillings. District IV, Ada, Boise, Elmore and Valley counties, had 54 percent.

Health District VI, Bannock, Bear Lake, Bingham, Butte, Caribou, Franklin, Oneida and Power counties, had the lowest result, 33 percent.

District III, Canyon, Adams, Gem, Owyhee, Payette and Washington counties, had 36 percent with no tooth decay or fillings.

The other districts ranged from 42 to 48 percent.

The survey was conducted to determine the prevalence of tooth decay or cavities and the use of dental sealants, plastic coatings applied to the chewing surfaces of teeth.

Statewide, 37 percent of second and sixth-graders surveyed have had one or more sealants.

Penny said parents who start dental care early can assure that their child is among those who never have a cavity.

"Daily preventive care, including use of fluoride, and regular professional care that includes dental sealant placement, can virtually eliminate tooth decay," Penny said.

Civil rights advocates decry man's acquittal

BOISE (AP) — Civil rights advocates are upset over the recent acquittal of a Gen. County man on charges of malicious harassment.

"We're not satisfied with it. The outcome does not seem to be in accord with what the evidence was," said Bill Wassmuth, director of the Northwest Coalition Against Malicious Harassment.

"If the racial mix had been the other way, would the result have been the same?" he asked.

The director of the Idaho Human Rights Commission, Marilyn Shuler, also questioned the verdict.

"I know all the facts, but it doesn't feel right," Shuler said.

But the attorney who defended Steve Carlock said there was no validity to the criminal charge.

"It was a lame case from the start, and the jury just didn't buy it," Ralph Erb said.

The case began last October when Brian Ferrey, a black wildlife biologist for the U.S. Forest Service, called on an acquaintance near Ola, Gen. County Prosecutor Doug Varie said.

"The man Ferrey wanted to see was not there, but the man's nephew — Carlock — was home. Ferrey, whose wife is white and was with him in the car, said Carlock assaulted him with racial insults and threatened him with a rifle. After an exchange of words, Ferrey left.

Salmon

gured" status earlier this week.

The number of migrating salmon returning to Idaho to spawn has declined dramatically in recent years, "and it's not so unimaginable to think about not having salmon in Idaho anymore," Boyles said.

In addition to silted and polluted water, salmon are menaced by anglers, predators and poorly designed dams.

Last year in Oregon, conservation groups sought a similar injunction in federal court. The judge ordered a halt to all future practices that might harm salmon — but the plaintiffs appealed on grounds that the order didn't go far enough.

On July 7, 1994, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals sided with the plaintiffs and ordered the federal judge to expand his decision to halt all on-going activities harmful to salmon.

"The Forest Service should have seen this coming (in Idaho) long ago and sent their plans in" to the Fisheries Service, Gehrke said. "If that had happened, we wouldn't be in injunction mode right now."

"It seems like that's what it takes nowadays," he said, "a court injunction."

Juveniles

anyone that's got an interest at all," she added.

As a Republican from Buhl is leading the committee, along with GOP state Sen. Denton Darrington of Declo.

Legislators hope to pass juvenile justice reform during next year's session. The current system isn't working. "We need to get it right now," she said. She hopes to change that in 1995.

The committee has hired Boise attorney Jeff Noland to advise them on legal matters.

Noland is on a leave from Ada County prosecutor's office, where he works full-time prosecuting juveniles. In the state's largest county, nearly half of all crime is committed by minors, he said.

"Your ear is broken into, odds are it's a juvenile," Noland said. In addition, many home burglaries are committed by minors.

Their attitude, according to Noland: "Maybe I'll get caught, maybe I won't ... they're not going to be much to me anyway because I'm a juvenile."

Noland hopes to see this attitude change. "There needs to be consequences for juvenile (offenders)," he said.

When minors break the law, there needs to be a swift intervention or the punishment "kind of loses its punch," he added. He also advocates prevention programs to steer children away from crime and a return to responsible parenting.

After the hearings end, Idahoans will count on seeing reform Noland says. "Right or wrong, changes will be made at the next legislative session," he said.

The 1995 juvenile justice reform package hasn't been drafted yet, and Goud says she's keeping an open mind. But she says the system needs more of a "correctional mentality."

The legislator toured a juvenile "boot camp" in Florida, and she said there's wide support for a juvenile work camp or boot camp in the state.

Noland says boot camps are a possibility. He predicts the Legislature will also expand juvenile detention centers around the state.

He calls 1994 a "critical time" for juvenile justice and says Idahoans must address these issues soon.

"I think here in Idaho, if we act now we can really make a difference in the future of juvenile justice," Noland said. Otherwise, he says, "We'll be in serious trouble."

Forest Service to close roads for bears

PRIEST LAKE (AP) — The U.S. Forest Service expects to close another 25 miles of roads next year in northern Idaho and Washington to protect grizzly bears in the Selkirk Mountains.

Under a plan released for public comment this week, the Idaho Panhandle National Forest will gate or obliterate two-thirds of the roads that lie within 133 square miles northwest of Priest Lake. Half the land is in the state of Washington.

Biologists say the road closures are an overdue move to save the grizzly population, estimated at 40 to 50, because the bears are protected under the Endangered Species Act.

Suspect's friend blames medication

IDAHO FALLS — A friend says first-degree murder suspect Michael Clements' treatment for depression and his consumption of alcohol are responsible for the death of his ex-girlfriend's aunt.

"I know the man's mind wasn't right that night at all," said Steve Hill, who has known Clements for a decade. "That just wasn't the man I knew. I know it was the medication. ... He could never do that. He wouldn't hurt anybody."

Clements, 44, was being held in the Bonneville County Jail without bond pending Tuesday's preliminary hearing on charges stemming from the slaying death of Mary Ellen Johnson, 35, and the wounding of Lori Ann Oakes, 28, on Wednesday night in Oakes' Idaho Falls apartment.

Hill said Clements had been off his anti-depression medication for about a week before starting to talk it again only recently and that Clements had also done "some drinking" on the day of the shootings.

Sheriff predicts need for jail expansion

BOISE — A 364-bed addition to the Ada County Jail is expected to be completed in January, but Sheriff Vaughn Killean already is looking to another expansion.

"If it happens, county property owners would be asked to start paying for the additional expansion even before the $10.6 million bond on the current project is paid off in 2002," Killean said.

"What got us to that we weren't anticipating is the growth," Killean said Thursday.

Ada County's population grew from 205,775 in 1990 to an estimated 242,421 last April, according to Ada Planning Association figures. With more people comes more crime, and if the growth continues, Killean estimated, the county would need 150 to 300 more jail beds in the next four or five years.

Dworshak Reservoir to keep its water

OROFINO — The National Marine Fisheries Service has decided Idaho's Dworshak Reservoir will not be tapped again this year for water to help endangered Snake River salmon.

Rep. Larry LaRocco, D-Idaho, said Thursday that he had been assured by the agency's director, Rolland Schmitt, that no more water would be released down the North Fork of the Clearwater River from behind Dworshak Dam for now.

LaRocco said the action came at his request after he wrote to Commerce Secretary Ron Brown last week. But the fisheries service denied a request from Clearwater River tribes to draw more water from Dworshak more than a week before LaRocco's statement.

The reservoir did not refill last spring because the fisheries service ordered water released from it to help flush migrating salmon smolts down the Snake and Columbia rivers to the ocean.

Hospitals combine services to cut costs

MOSCOW — Some departments at Moscow's Gritman Medical Center and Pullman Memorial Hospital in Washington could be combined by the end of the year following adoption of an agreement to try to integrate services.

Officials for the two hospitals — about 10 miles apart across the state line — have agreed to work toward a single health care system that could contain costs by eliminating duplicated services.

Integration of the two hospitals probably will stop short of a merger of the two boards, Pullman Memorial administrator Scott Adams and Gritman President Robert Colvin said Thursday.

But Colvin said a wide range of medical and support services could be consolidated.

Teachers reject new salary schedule

MOSCOW — Moscow teachers have voted unanimously to reject the new salary schedule offered by the district and set a deadline of Sept. 6 for a contract settlement.

The additional time is "to give the mediation process a reasonable opportunity to succeed," Moscow Education Association President Carole Jones said Thursday.

After that, teachers will meet to decide what to do, Jones said. The options are to continue mediation or "withhold services until we have negotiated an agreement with the district."

Payette fire outlook pessimistic

Though dismal conditions act as part of evolutionary process for forest

McCALL (AP) — There are textbook wildfires and then there are the blazes scorching west-central Idaho's Payette National Forest — unstoppable fire-breathing dragons overrunning thousands of acres and exploding trees like firecrackers.

They are an anomaly that typically occurs only once every 400 years, Payette Supervisor Dave Alexander said.

Even with the most advanced technology known to man, the U.S. Forest Service can only hope to herd them away from structures and pray that Mother Nature cooperates instead of aggravating the situation.

"Some people think we should have a magic hole card which we turn over to stop a fire," Alexander said. "We don't."

It brings to mind the 1988 infernos in Yellowstone National Park, which consumed more than 1 million acres of mostly lodgepole pine. As it did in nation's oldest park, there is reason to believe the destruction will ultimately improve the Payette.

An Aug. 3 lightning storm lit the fuse on the Blackwell Complex that menaced the eastern shore of Payette Lake and the Corral Fire that ignited west of the Brundage Mountain ski resort.

Even more than 2,000 firefighters and tons of retardant, the fires continue their charge through scorched creek drainages and over tinder-dry ridges. The first fire behavior team assembled since Yellowstone gave a dismal prediction: nearly half a million acres could be consumed before a "season-ending" snow storm finally squelches the flames.

The Payette National Forest's dilemma has been going for a long time.

The continuing drought set the stage. Over the past decade, the Payette should have gotten 50 inches more precipitation than it actually has. So far this year, the forest has received less than half the normal 28 inches.

Then, forests made up of the Douglas fir and Engelmann spruce that proliferate on the slopes around Payette Lake take 400 years to recycle rather than the 30- to 60-year cycle of lodgepole pine forests. Fire becomes an important part of the regeneration of spruce-fire forests.

"We are losing spruce for quite some time," Alexander said. "It's a biomass and a good deal of it is dead."

Spruce budworms and other insects take their toll in dead trees. On the Blackwell Complex, for example, the fire behavior team found the bug-killed spruce and deadfall were ripe for a scorching fire.

And the Payette blazes have burned with a kind of anger, crowning through the forest and launching hot embers up to four miles ahead of their leading edges.

The Blackwell and Corral blazes are burning so hot they not only consume dead or bug-weakened trees in their path but also incinerate green trees, sending dark columns of smoke miles into the air.

But possibly most responsible for the uncontrollable fires is the tried-and-true policy of moving to suppress fires as soon as possible after they are detected.

"With that suppression, you interrupt what would have been a cycle to clean out decadent trees," Forest Service spokeswoman Faith Duncan said.

In the face of unstoppable flame, the government marshaled an extraordinary set of weapons in central Idaho.

The military's C-130 transport planes are fitted with the Modular Airborne Firefighting System that holds 2,700 gallons of red chemical retardant to be dumped on flames in a mist. Vintage bombers like Navy P-2V Neptunes from McCall keep up constant barrages.

The remote Civil War-era buildings in the way of the fires were covered with a new type of protective foam that stays wet to the touch for up to two weeks.

Army Blackhawk helicopters shuttle firefighters and water buckets.

And infrared equipment peers through the clouds of smoke to map the true expanse of the fires.

But all the manpower backed up with all that equipment cannot stand up to the faces of the Blackwell and Corral.

Alexander said fire lines as wide as five bulldozer blades are not enough. The main Salmon River to the north may not be enough.

"We've become so adapted to technology we almost think we have control over nature," he said, but "blends, fires, earthquakes, we haven't learned to prevail in those situations."

Still, as in Yellowstone, the zones of destruction will tend into havens for wildlife.

"Fires in this country rehabilitate themselves very quickly," Alexander said. "Wildlife ushers its way back in. The elk are smiling because of the food that will be available."

Admittedly, abnormal fires like those in the Payette are a drastic way of achieving the forest's natural cleansing.

But, Alexander said, "The forest is an evolution. Change is the only constant."

Idaho agency acts to keep tourism alive

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Department of Commerce wants prospective tourists nationwide to know the whole state is not on fire.

The department, along with similar agencies in four other Western states, has launched a campaign to assure vacationers there is a lot to see in Idaho that has not been affected by the wildfires.

"We want to get the word out that you can still travel in Idaho," Commerce Department spokeswoman Georgia Smith said. "The portrait being painted in the news is that the entire state is on fire. There are plenty of places that aren't near the fires and are safe for travel."

Less than one-quarter of 1 percent of the Idaho's total acreage has burned.

Bull sends 1 to hospital

CALDWELL (AP) — A Canadian rodeo cowboy remained in critical condition with head injuries Friday after being thrown from a bull while competing at the Caldwell Night Rodeo.

The injuries suffered by Jayson Keaton, 29, of Bonanza, B.C., on Thursday were among the worst ever sustained by competitors at the southwestern Idaho rodeo.

You are capable of detecting future trends, of restaurant management, of helping people to help themselves. Current cycle relates to domestic adjustment that includes possible change of residence, marital status.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Friendship tested, you'll separate obsequious persons from those who actually have your welfare at heart. Define terms, be sensitive to element of deception -- keep guard up. (April 19-20) Bring order out of chaotic situation -- deadline exists, outline boundaries, make crystal clear what you expect from one responsible for transfer of equipment.

CANCER (June 21-July 20): Imprint style, reach beyond previous expectations. Get rid of obligation not really your own in first place. Long-distance communication venereal travel plans.

CANCER (June 21-July 20): Imprint style, spotlight originality, inventiveness. Love plays major role, relationship requires sparks. Focus on career, showmanship, entertainment program.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Family relationships require special "toss and feeding." Cancer native in dominant role, these letters, initials in name: B. K. T. Secrets revealed, be discreet, play winning game.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You'll have more room, sunlight is "allowed" to pass its rays. Darker corners of your life receive benefit of greater light. Focus on clever approach to individual usually unavailable.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Rebuild, review, revise, sharpen tools, bring report up to state of the art. Simplicity, fitness, keep resolutions concerning diet, nutrition. Love relationship might be too hot not too cool.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Bargaining power enhanced as result of survey associated with property, durable goods. Refuse to be intimidated by one who knows price of everything, value of nothing. Sagittarius involved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Review Scorpio message. Attention revolves around music, family, marriage. If diplomatic you get what you need -- otherwise nothing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emotional wounds heal, you'll also help others to place love in quiet area. Go slow, make meanings, crystal clear. Obtain view from behind scenes. Places figures prominently.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Cycle continues high, trust your own judgment, intuition. Individual from your past makes surprising reappearance. Maintain emotional equilibrium -- move forward, not backward. Into future!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You learn secret, confidence restored, adopt policy of "insensitivity is better part of valour." Focus on sensitivity, illusion, music, art, poetry.

Briefly

Bruin swim team practices Monday

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls High School swim team will hold its first practice of the 1994 season at 7 a.m. Monday at the city pool.

Any 9-12 grader interested in competitive swimming or improving stroke technique can participate.

For more information, come to the first practice or call Stephanie Crumrine at 734-3660 or J.C. Burdick at 736-8142.

Lions slate Labor Day for Run for Sight 10K

HAILEY — The 16th Annual Lions 10K Run for Sight will be Monday, Sept. 5 at Lions' Park.

The walk-run follows Broadford Road to City Park in Bellevue.

The entry fee is $12 and includes a T-shirt. Registration begins at 8 a.m. Walkers start at 8:30 a.m. and runners at 9 a.m.

To get to Lions' Park, turn west at the stop light in Hailey and take the first left past the bridge over the Wood River. The park is behind the gravel piles.

Kazakhstan misses deadline for 2002 Olympic application

LAUSANNE, Switzerland — Salt Lake City had one less rival to worry about when Alma Ata, Kazakhstan, failed to meet the Friday deadline for submitting formal applications to host the 2002 Winter Olympics.

Alma Ata had been considered a long-shot at best.

Nine other candidates, including front-runner Salt Lake City, submitted their documents to the IOC on time. The others are Graz, Austria; Jaen, Spain; Osterund, Sweden; Poprad-Tatry, Slovakia; Quebec; Sion, Switzerland; Sochi, Russia; and Tarvisio, Italy.

Representatives of the nine bidders will appear before the IOC executive board in Paris on Aug. 27. Between mid-September and mid-November, the IOC evaluation commission will visit each site.

Ogden reviews possible sites for downtown ballpark

OGDEN, Utah — The northeast corner of Wall Avenue and 23rd Street is emerging as the favorite among four sites outlined this week for a proposed downtown baseball stadium.

The stadium would be home to the minor-league Ogden Raptors, who have been playing at Serge Simmons Field. City officials have wanted a downtown ball park and have paid architects $28,000 to outline the best sites.

Those preliminary concepts were laid out on Thursday.

City officials expressed the most interest in the Wall Avenue site because it faces Ben Lomond Peak, draws on Ogden's railroad heritage and leaves intact much of the historic Ogden-Iron Works.

Highland gridders unanimous preseason favorite

The Associated Press

Pocatello's Highland High School is the unanimous Associated Press pre-season selection to repeat as the top football team among Idaho's largest schools.

The state's sports writers and sportscasters selected the Rams over the Canby Eagles, who lost the title to Highland, 37-13, in 1993's A-1 Division I championship game.

Rounding out the top five among the Biggest schools were Pocatello, Borah and Boise.

Last year's champions were also picked to repeat in three of the other five classifications as well.

Elewiston received five first place votes to claim the top ranking in A-1 Division II. Coeur d'Alene, which dropped from Division I to Division II this season, was second, followed by Madison, Caldwell and Blackfoot.

Defending A-3 champion Fruitland and runner up Glenns Ferry were picked to repeat as 1-2 this fall with 1991-1992 titlist Homedale third followed by Teton and Lapwai.

And among the smallest schools, 1993 Eight-man champion Deary suffered the biggest devaluation.

The Mustangs were picked third in the 1994 pre-season poll while Kendrick, a semifinalist last year, claimed the top spot. Carey, which lost to Deary in the championship game, was ranked second.

Notus and Shoshone rounded out the classification.

Hokey or not, Quakes shake it up for minor league fans

The Associated Press

RANCHO CUCAMONGA, Calif. — In a region feared for its earthquakes, the Rancho Cucamonga Quakes are the epicenter of a love affair with baseball.

Their perfectly manicured field and electronic scoreboard flashing with elaborate graphics belie the Quakes' membership in the Class A California League — the low minors.

"For some of us, this is our big leagues," Quakes shortstop Roberto DeLeon said. "This is the closest you'll get to the big leagues as far as a minor-league field is concerned."

With a name like the Quakes, the team isn't afraid of corn monikers. Their sparkling, 2-year-old stadium is called the Epicenter and their mascot is Tremor, a green dinosaur with purple spots whose jersey number is 4. A quake's magnitude, get it?

"Some people think it's hokey, but we have a ball with it," said Al Grainger, who brought his wife and 21-year-old daughter to watch the Quakes play California League rival Lake Elsinore. "You'll never see this kind of stuff at Dodger Stadium."

Even if the major leagues weren't on strike, the Dodgers, Angels or parent club San Diego Padres wouldn't invite fans on the field between innings to putt golf balls or race the mascot around the bases.

Or send employees dressed in black suits, crisp white shirts and teal bow ties through the aisles armed with trash bags to collect hot dog wrappers during the game.

On a warm and windy evening this week, Bill and Bobbie Richards settled into their $5 box seats armed with binoculars, radio headsets and peanuts from home.

"It's small enough where it's homey and you get to know the players," said Richards, at 61, still eager to catch foul

Miami, Moon maneuver as season openers near

Sanders' visit focal point of exhibition

The Associated Press

MIAMI — A plastic foam cup for donations hangs on the wall in the Miami Dolphins' locker room, with proceeds going toward a cure for Prime Time fever.

"Every little bit helps! Give til it hurts!" reads a note on the cup.

As team management anxiously courts free agent Deion "Prime Time" Sanders, the cup gives players a chance to support the cause. Contributions thus far total 25 cents.

"I gave a nickel," cornerback Troy Vincent said with a smile.

Make no mistake, though — Vincent, his teammates and coach Don Shula would love to have Sanders join them. The Pro Bowl cornerback will meet with Shula prior to attending today's exhibition game against the Tampa Bay Bucs at Joe Robbie Stadium.

Sanders' high-profile visit, which includes a mid-day news conference, is sure to upstage the game.

"In this day and age, you can't let that be a concern," Shula said. "We have to do all we can to put the best team we can on the field, and the players understand that."

Minnesota-signal-caller walks down memory lane

The Associated Press

The tragedy of the Kingdome has given Warren Moon a chance to take a nostalgic walk through the hallowed halls of Husky Stadium.

For Moon, that tunnel is memory lane.

Today, Moon will lead his new team, the Minnesota Vikings, against the Seattle Seahawks in an exhibition game at the stadium where he played college ball for the University of Washington.

"I'm sure I'll have a lot of reflections when I walk out of that tunnel," Moon said. "Those were some special days. I have a lot of memories that go back to that stadium for me."

The game normally would have been played at the Kingdome, but that building was closed indefinitely Thursday after two workers fell hundreds of feet to their deaths while trying to repair the dome ceiling.

So, the preseason game was moved to Husky Stadium, where Moon played his college home games and launched the campaign that earned him MVP honors in the 1978 Rose Bowl.

The rest of Saturday's schedule has the New York Giants at the New York Jets, Tampa Bay at Miami, Cincinnati at Philadelphia, Indianapolis at Pittsburgh, Buffalo vs. Houston at San Antonio, and the Los Angeles Raiders at the Los Angeles Rams.

In Friday night's games, it was Arizona at Detroit.

Packers edge Saints; Browns, Lions win

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Chris Jacke's 36-yard field goal late in the fourth quarter gave the Green Bay Packers a 13-10 victory over the New Orleans Saints on Friday night.

The Packers (2-1) spoiled the Saints (0-3) first home game of the preseason with Jacke's second field goal of the night, after a 34-yard punt by Tommy Barnhardt set Green Bay up on New Orleans' 46-yard line.

Mark Brunell, Green Bay's quarterback in the fourth quarter, scrambled 12 yards in the 28-yard drive, before Jacke came on.

Jim Everett, making his first start in the Superdome as a member of the Saints, gave New Orleans a 7-0 lead seven plays into the game. Everett passed for 56 yards in the 63-yard drive before Derek Brown plugged in for a 1-yard touchdown.

Everett completed 10 of 16 for 102 yards, threw one interception and was sacked once in the first half.

Brett Favre completed 8 of 12 for 124 yards and a touchdown in one half for the Packers, and was also sacked once.

UNLV official, Massimino to confer on salary package

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Interim UNLV President Kenny Guinn says he expects more discussions with Rolfe Massimino regarding a controversial salary package after the Rebel basketball coach returns to Las Vegas this weekend.

"No pun intended, but the ball's in his court," Guinn said Friday, capping off another week of surprises for UNLV's troubled basketball program.

Massimino has been vacationing and unreachable for comment on reports that a supplemental contract was set up to pay him some $1 million a year — nearly double the $511,000 university reports thought they were paying him.

Word surfaced Wednesday that Massimino had been given a supplemental contract guaranteeing him an additional $375,000 a year, plus other perks, with the money to be paid by a private group dubbed "The Varsity Club."

Twin Falls squad plates 144 runs

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Americans, 11-12-year-old traveling all-star baseball team finished out their season July 28-29.

"Stats for the end of the season showed a total of 144 wins and 104 losses, with 144 runs for and 104 runs against the boys."

Top batting averages for the season went to Casey Turner, with .429, Bryan Hurlburt .362 and Mike Anderson .360. The team's top pitcher was Turner. Tyler Warburton led in stolen bases.

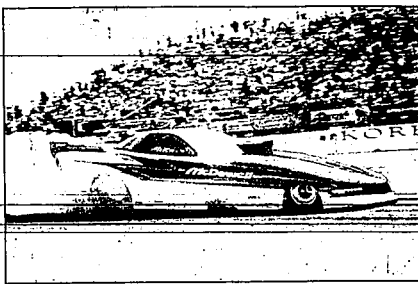

The highest slugging percentages belonged to Turner and Chris Stoker.

The highest on-base averages went to Mike Anderson, Bryan Hurlburt and Turner.

Hurlburt was the leading run scorer for the team with 22.

Gustavo Lopez led the pitching squad with 32 strikeouts in 55 innings. Warburton had the lowest ERA.

Other team members included Shawn Van Tassel, Scott Spritzer, Geoff Stringer, Seth Merritt, Vonnice Lopez and Brett Moore. The team was coached by Pete Turner and Pat Warburton.

Mitch McDowell of Jerome races down the strip at the Pepsi Nightfire Nationals at Boise's Firebird Raceway where he broke the 6-second barrier for a quarter mile.

McDowell posts 5.96 at Northwest Nationals

SEATTLE — Mitch McDowell of Jerome posted a 5.96 second quarter mile at the Northwest Nationals at Seattle International Raceway.

The Jerome native was the second Idahoan to break the six second barrier in the Top Alcohol Funny Car competition.

McDowell competed in the Pepsi Nightfire Nationals at Firebird Raceway in Boise.

French tandem takes world cycling event; Dutch woman earns 4th gold

PALERMO, Sicily (AP) — The French pair of Fabrice Colas and Frederic Magne captured the last world title of a disappearing specialty — tandem — while a Dutch policewoman set a record streak of four golds in a race with an Olympic future — women's points.

The Frenchmen outspun the German duo of Jens Glucklich and Emanuel Raasch in straight races at the World Track Cycling Championships on Friday night.

Ingrid Haringa of the Netherlands beat Russian Svetlana Samohvalova by six points in a replay of last year's world final at Hamar, Norway.

The tandem final at Palermo Velodrome was the last world race of the specialty which will be phased out from the track championships in 1995.

Colas, a 30-year-old amateur and Magne, 25, dominated both heats with times of 10.576 and 10.903 seconds over the last 200 meters.

Their third world title in six years boosted France's overall lead to three gold and two silver medals in five days of competition.

On their way to gold, the Frenchmen eliminated defending champions Roberto Chiappa and Federico Paris of Italy in the semifinals.

The Italians, who were shooting for a third consecutive title, took the bronze medal following default of the Czech pair in the race for third place.

The Czechs could not run the second heat of the consolation final as they were injured in a first-run spill.

Haringa, a former speed skater who became a successful cyclist, won her fourth consecutive world title in the women's points race.

avenging an unexpected elimination in the quarterfinals of match sprint.

The Dutch woman was a world sprint champion in 1991 and a silver medalist last year.

Active in the sport for 14 years, Haringa said "I should think about children... instead I'm looking forward to next year's world championships and the Olympics in Atlanta (in 1996)."

The Dutch cyclist piled up a winning total of 24 points in the 60-lap event, winning four sprints out of 12.

Samohvalova settled for silver with 18 points.

Ludmila Gorjanskaya of Belarus placed third, with 16 points.

American cyclists, who won one gold, two silver and one bronze medals in the first four days of competition, did not pocket any in Friday's round.

Lightning halts LPGA play

NAPERVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Ellie Gibson didn't get a chance to attempt a 25-foot birdie putt for the lead on final hole Friday because lightning and the threat of a tornado forced the suspension of play at the LPGA Chicago Challenge.

"Now, I have to get up at six in the morning to finish, then come back at one in the afternoon," said Gibson, who was tied for lead with six others at 7-under par when play was halted.

Gibson, who began the day a shot behind first-round leader Katie Peterson-Parker, was among 11 players scheduled to complete the second round Saturday morning on the White Eagle Golf Club course. She was set to finish the round before the weather siren sounded but backed off her ball when she was distracted by playing partner Connie Chillemi.

"As I was getting ready to putt, Connie Chillemi and her caddy were moving all around behind the hazard where she was going to drop a ball," Gibson said.

"I told them I was not even going to putt because they were moving all around back there. It all took about three minutes, and by that time we had to leave the course."

Peterson-Parker, who shot a 72, was tied with Kathryn Marshall, Janice Gibson, Michelle Estill, Dale Eggleston and Jane Geddes at 137. Marshall, a 27-year-old Scot who has earned just $24,069 this season on the LPGA Tour, had the day's best round with a bogey-free 66 in the windy conditions.

"I'm used to it over there," Marshall said. "If there is a good wind this weekend, it would be great."

String of 7 birdies boosts Lowery in International

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. (AP) — Showing little fear of sand and little regard for his better-known competitors, Steve Lowery carded seven birdies in a bogey-free round Friday to take the lead at the halfway point of the International.

Lowery, whose best finish in seven seasons on the PGA Tour was a second at San Diego earlier this year, earned 14 points and had a two-round total of 21 points under the modified Stableford system.

"It was one of the best rounds I've played all year," said Lowery, 33.

Lowery didn't have a "5" on his card, birdieing all four of the par-3s.

On three of them, he hit his second shot into sand bordering the green and got up-and-down for birdie.

"I wouldn't say sand play is the strength of my game," Lowery said, "but it was good today. I was fortunate that on all of those bunker shots, I had room to land the ball."

"Making seven birdies, obviously I was putting well, and I drove the ball really well, too."

Equaling Lowery's plus-14 as the

Keith Clearwater - 19
Tom Lehman - 16
Tom Kite - 16
Hale Irwin - 15

day's best score was Dave Stockton Jr., who was at plus-20 along with Mike Reid. Keith Clearwater had 19 points. Tom Lehman-17 and Tom Kite-16.

Hale Irwin, who holed out a pitching wedge at the par-4 15th for an eagle worth 5 points, was in a group at 15.

First-round leader Bruce Lietzke, who began the day with 16 points, was at 14.

Masters champion Jose Maria Olazabal vaulted into contention with an eagle and two birdies — worth 9 points — in a span of four holes to finish at plus-13 along with 1986 International champion Ken Green. U.S. Open winner Ernie Els had 7 points for plus-12 total.

Defending champion Phil Mickelson, rallying from zero points Thursday, had 11 on Friday. Tom Watson and Fred Couples also were in contention with 9 and 8, respectively. Among those missing the cut were John Daly and 1987 International winner John Cook.

Under the scoring system, a player receives 8 points for a double eagle, 5 for eagle, 2 for birdie, zero for par, minus-1 for bogey and minus-3 for double-bogey or worse.

Points are cumulative over all four rounds, with the 144-player field being reduced to 72 for the third round and to 24 for the final round.

The tournament, sponsored by Sprint, carries a purse of $1.4 million and pays the winner $252,000.

Lowery, 38th on the money list with $327,646, overcame the disappointment of his opening round, when he bogeyed and double-bogeyed his last two holes.

Rhyan takes 1-stroke lead in Senior event

COON RAPIDS, Minn. (AP) — Partly because of his son's advice — and partly despite it — Dick Rhyan had a rare view from the top of a Senior PGA Tour leaderboard.

With his golf pro son, Tad, serving as his caddy, Rhyan shot a 6-under-par 66 Friday to take a one-stroke lead after the first round of the Burnet Senior Classic.

"Tad was on the (PGA) Tour last year but he lost his card. He's getting ready to go to our qualifying school," Rhyan said.

"He decided he needed time away from playing and he wanted to watch somebody else play to get his mind cleared. He's been caddying for me for three weeks and I haven't been over par. I haven't been out of the top 20 since he's been on my bag."

"He knows how to keep me calm. He knows what to look for in my game. It's like having my caddy with me."

Going on Tad's advice, Dick used a 3-iron. The drive barely reached the green and the ball stopped some 70 feet from the hole.

Burnet Senior Classic leader Dick Rhyan chips onto the 18th green Friday on route to a 6-under-par round of 66.

"Tad said, 'Sorry, my fault,' and when I made the putt, he said, 'Thanks for picking me up,'" Rhyan said.

Tom Weiskopf and George Archer were one stroke back. Dave Stockton, Bob E. Smith and Jim Dent were two behind the leader. Jim Albus, Larry Gilbert and Bob Bruce each shot 69 at the 6,909-yard Burner Hills Golf Course. Defending champion Chi Chi Rodriguez, who hasn't won since last year's Burnet, remained in his slump with a 73.

Rhyan, an eighth-year senior still looking for his first tour victory, hadn't led after any round since shooting a 65 on the first day of the June 1993 NYNEX Commemorative.

"When you're getting four or five under and then you give two back, you think maybe that your nerves can't handle it any more," he said. "I'm going to be 60 in November and I wonder."

"But now I've got my son on my bag and that helps. He keeps reminding me to just play golf."

Rhyan's first three holes were par-birdie-birdie and he didn't give back any strokes all round. "I haven't had a day like this in a long time," he said. "All I can say is it was a very fun day."

CSI Fall Orientation - 1994

TWIN FALLS — The First United Presbyterian Church of Twin Falls began in Rock Creek Canyon in the summer of 1904. On Sunday, the congregation will return to its roots.

"This is the 90th year of the very beginnings of the church," said the congregation's current pastor, the Rev. Paul C. Reeves. "We decided we should do something to celebrate."

Join the 90th birthday celebration

The First United Presbyterian Church will celebrate its 90th birthday with "Worship in the Willows" at 10 a.m. Sunday at Rock Creek Canyon.

The event is open to the public. Some seating will be provided. Dorothy Geist is chairing the celebration.

Reeves has only been in Twin Falls for three months, so he's not an expert on his church's past. But he has been reading a lot of church history in preparation for Sunday's service.

"A Sabbath School was organized in Rock Creek Canyon, probably because there was water and it was cool," Reeves said. "There was no building at first, so the people met in the schoolhouse in the winter."

From these beginnings, when 17 charter members took on the work of the Presbyterians in the valley, the church settled into its own building — on the corner of Fourth Avenue North and Second Street, in 1909. Twin Falls wasn't even organized until 1907.

The Presbyterians moved to their present location, at 209 Fifth Ave. N., in 1918.

Sunday's celebration of all this is being called "Worship in the Willows." It will be a mixture of songs sung in the early 20th century ("Shall We Gather at the River") and a few contemporary tunes. Church member David Mead will play the role of the church's first pastor, the Rev. John Gourley, who served the Twin Falls Presbyterians from 1909 until his death in 1912.

A portable pump organ is being borrowed from the Church of the Brethren, Helen Allen, who recently retired as Presbyterian church organist, will be back on organ duty.

Reeves' sermon will be titled "Telling Stories," because, he said, that's what they did in the old days.

Violet ("Vi") Adams Trail was there.

Trail, who prefers not to share her age, joined the local Presbyterian church in 1924 and is still a member of the congregation today.

"There were 22 in my Sunday School class, and our teacher was Mina Irwin, Dick Irwin's mom," she said. "Mrs. Irwin would have had all of us out to her home. She was a wonderful teacher."

The church has 400 members on the roll now. A number of them will be on hand Sunday to hark back to the days of their forefathers.

After Sunday's worship service, everyone will play old-fashioned games with water balloons and slingshots. There will be three-legged races, too, and an old-time potluck picnic — out where it all began, in the willows.

Churches that teach will succeed

Several times in the past months, young people in their 20s have asked me to recommend churches where they can learn about the faith.

There are two reasons for this, I think, and I'll let you decide if there are more.

First, this is a generation that has more than its share of curiosity. They travel widely, study earnestly and ask a lot of questions. They will not be denied information, and they will go to great lengths to find sources that will enrich their lives.

Second, the church has failed to educate this generation. As a result, they feel inadequate in their knowledge of the Bible and faith issues. For some reason, Christianity eased up on this group of people in terms of their education.

Clark Morpheu
Faith today

Memorizing Bible verses was seen as educationally backward, and sometimes Sunday school and summer camps and schools became nothing more than opportunities to make a pair of Jesus sandals and play with water balloons.

So, they are hungry to learn. But this hunger comes exactly at a time when many congregations have folded up their Bible studies and tucked them away in the closet.

But here is a tip for church leaders everywhere: It will be the learning churches that will succeed with the twenty-something generation. If the church can't teach, these young people will stay home and learn on their own.

This is not an unusual phenomenon. Suddenly corporations are striving to become learning organizations because they know if their workers do not develop new skills and improve their knowledge base, the company is not going to grow, expand and improve. And the second big reason to become a learning organization is to achieve a quality

So, corporations are setting up in-house training programs that teach workers new skills and company values and reinforce safety and quality standards. All of that is aimed at making the corporation a healthier and happier place to work.

You may wonder what this has to do with the church. My contention is this: The church, that stops learning becomes a petty and stagnant place and eventually will feel the effect through the loss of members and revenue.

But the problem is, churches have a difficult time getting people to learn. The biggest reason is time. People have no time. The biggest reason is money. People have no money. The biggest reason is that the church is not relevant. People don't want to go to church. People don't want to be part of a religion that doesn't make sense. People don't want to be part of a religion that is not relevant to their lives.

That means clergy have to take advantage of the Sunday-morning worship hour. Sometimes these teaching moments will be very brief, a few moments to impart an enduring message. But there are ways to do it without a good deal of effort.

For instance, your worship bulletin can be used as a teaching tool. Print a two-paragraph explanation of a biblical text. Or write about one of the hymns or its origins, the circumstances that moved the composer and the tenor of the times when it was written.

If you make announcements during the service, take the opportunity to explain one of the doctrines of the church. Call it the "Did You Know Minute."

Explain, for instance, what your denomination believes concerning holy communion, baptism, marriage or death. While those church practices and doctrines are complicated, you can come up with a two-minute explanation and then add to it during subsequent worship services.

Keep all of your teaching short and simple. Never tell the people that they want or need to know because they will shift into a selective hearing mode. In other words, they will stop listening.

Of course, the best and most leisurely moment for teaching is during the sermon. There may be Sundays when you will want to preach an expository sermon, that is, taking the preaching text line by line with interpretation and application to human life. But some preachers will find that method of preaching awkward.

So you may want to do a breakout in the middle of the sermon. When you've made an interesting point, you may stop and give a two-minute explanation of the circumstances in the society at the time the Bible verse was written, for instance.

The important thing is to keep those parishioners learning. Use every conceivable method and moment. Set up a committee of teachers who will help you come up with teachable moments. Now's your chance. The twenty-somethings are begging to learn.

Mormon mother of 9 faces discipline for her writings

By Vern Anderson
The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — When Janice Allred's ninth child was two weeks old, he slumbered fitfully in the audience as she presented her paper on the Mormon concept of a divine mother in heaven.

Two years later, as Allred welcomes home a son from a two-year church mission and bids farewell to another son for two years, she waits to see if she'll be excommunicated for allowing her writings to be published.

"Of course I recognize it as a possibility, but — and this is an important distinction — in no way do I think it is justified," she said.

Allred is the latest Mormon scholar to face a church disciplinary hearing since The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints began a campaign to root out alleged apostasy or public criticism of church leaders.

Peck's words, spoken in advance of last September and two others were cut off this year. The church contends the actions are being undertaken independently by local leaders, while the excommunicants claim they are orchestrated from church headquarters.

On Friday morning, the day after her son Nephi returned from a mission to Chile, Allred was scheduled to deliver another paper at the 1994 Sunstone Symposium that questions the Mormon belief that God will never allow the church hierarchy to lead the membership astray.

"In this paper, I will attempt to show that this idea, rather than being a principle of the gospel, is actually antithetical to it," she has said.

In an interview this week, Allred said that after she delivered her mother-in-heaven paper at the 1992 Sunstone Symposium, her Mormon stake president, Carl Bacon, warned her not to speak or publish on the topic. She agreed to inform him if she planned to do so.

Allred decided this year to allow Dialogue, an independent Mormon journal, to publish the paper in its summer issue. "I just feel the freedom of belief and freedom of speech issue is so important in the church today," she said.

Allred said she had planned to tell Bacon of her decision but he found out independently in May, before publication, and told her former bishop to tell her to get it pulled. She says she never got the word and it was too late to withdraw the article anyway.

Allred's current bishop, Robert Hammond, will conduct the disciplinary hearing, which Allred understands will be held sometime after an Aug. 28 sacrament meeting at which one of her sons will be welcomed home and another sent on his own two-year mission to Chile.

On Thursday, Hammond told Allred's husband, David, a physics professor at church-owned Brigham Young University, that neither he nor his wife would be allowed to speak at the sacrament meeting. Remarks from parents are traditional at Mormon missionary farewells.

Hammond declined to comment and Bacon did not return telephone messages left at his home and office Thursday.

Allred's 26-page mother-in-heaven essay relied strictly on her interpretation of Mormon scripture. She postulated that God is both the Father and the Son (Jesus Christ) and that mankind's heavenly mother is actually the Holy Ghost and has a co-equal partnership with the Father.

Current Mormon belief holds that the Father and Son are separate and distinct persons.

Independent Mormon publication faces uncertain future

By Vern Anderson
The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Tension between Mormon Church leaders and the faith's intelligentsia has forced independent Sunstone magazine into some 20th anniversary soul-searching.

"The magazine has had to reconsider: Are we just a forum for the discussion of Mormonism? And there has been some conclusion that no, we are more than that," said Elbert Peck, Sunstone editor and publisher. "We are that, but we are also Mormons and inside the community. And we need to make sure we're not doing things out of discussion, but help people know how to process them in a faithful way."

Peck's words, spoken in advance of last Wednesday night's opening of the annual Sunstone Symposium, strike an apparent conciliatory chord with church leaders who three years ago condemned some symposium presentations and warned members to be wary of such independent forums.

Last September, the intellectual community again was rocked by what many saw as an orchestrated crackdown on dissent. The church excommunicated five high-profile scholars and feminists, frequent Sunstone contributors whose writings were deemed apostate or critical of church leaders, and other excommunications have followed. "I guess to be candid, I'm worried about Sunstone's future," said Peggy Fletcher Stack, Sunstone editor-publisher from 1980 to 1986. "I think the church leadership's opposition to Sunstone, making the name anathema, could create a self-fulfilling prophecy."

"What could happen is that moderate voices might fear an association with Sunstone and drop out. It's happening," she said.

Indeed, some scholars — especially at church-owned Brigham Young University — have stopped contributing to the magazine or Sunstone's symposiums on Mormon issues. Symposium attendance has remained constant at about 1,500, but the magazine's circulation has fallen from 10,000 to about 8,000 since the church leadership's 1991 statement.

"There are what I would call very moderate Mormon scholars who once had no problem speaking at Sunstone and now, because of the church's sanction, won't or are somewhat anxious about making that decision," Peck said.

It is one of the ironies of Sunstone's two decades that Stack, closely associated with the magazine from its inception in 1974 to 1986, later played a significant role in stirring the anti-Sunstone sentiment.

As The Salt Lake Tribune's religion writer since 1991, Stack has written extensively about the church's rift with the scholarly community and the newspaper has given in-depth coverage to Sunstone's symposiums.

America: Experiment in religious freedom

Many have considered the United States of America to be a grand experiment. I'm not sure that we any longer have the right name to the question of "A grand experiment in what?"

Yes, we are an experiment in democracy? No. Technically, we are a republic with democratically elected representatives, since we have extended enfranchisement to the great majority of our population. But history clearly tells that there have been many successful democracies and republics.

Maybe we are an experiment in "one nation under God." No again. The standard of the world has been and remains "one nation-one god."

Gods have gotten the credit for founding-ruling-or giving the laws to many nations that have enabled them to be functioning societies. Well, how about an experiment in freedom of religion?

Yes, the United States of America is a grand experiment in religious freedom.

The answer leads to other questions. For example, "Freedom of religions from what?" Try freedom from having to be sanctioned by the government, which leads to governmental control.

There was to be no "state" religion in the United States.

Another question, "Freedom of religion?" This is true, it's freedom for all Christian religions, denominations or sects (when that was not a bad word). Each of the original settlements in America was of a specific "stripe" of Christianity, and they did not mix with one another. All dissenters were shunned.

The question our grand experiment really hoped to answer was, "Can we have one nation with many different Christian religions?" The answer to that question has been a resounding "yes." The favor of God has so richly blessed our nation that there has never been one to compare.

It seems to me that, in fairly recent times, we have allowed some of the definitions of freedom of religion to be changed and have entered into a domestic experiment. Freedom for all Christian religions has become freedom for all religions. That change has destroyed our consensus on moral issues and allowed our government to abandon the absolute moral laws of God in favor of the shifting standards of human opinion.

The next change we've seen is that freedom of religion is becoming freedom from religion. This is not morality, and now Christianity itself is being pushed out of all "public" contexts. Freedom for all and freedom from all are doomed to fail, for our nation will have a religion!

The only question is, "Which religion?" The answer to that is not as difficult as it may seem at first glance, for there are really only two religions in the entire world.

Yes, only two! When we shut out Christianity—we open the door to the worship of Satan in his many guises. One knowingly or unknowingly worships Satan, or one worships the God of Jesus and Moses. Is it really possible to say that since we have shut out Christianity, we have not been going down Satan's path of degradation, demoralization and suffering? So the wind, rap the whirlwind. While we still have the political freedom, let us move our nation in the direction of the proven results of our grand experiment and away from this doomed experiment we are now embarked upon.

Clergy Corner

About the Rev. Freund

Art Freund is the pastor of the First Christian Church in Buhl. He was born and raised in St. Louis. He has a bachelor of arts degree in physics from Southern Illinois University and a master of divinity degree from the Emmanuel School of Religion in Johnson City, Texas.

He served in Vietnam with the U.S. Army Security Agency as a Vietnamese linguist. He pastored in North Bend, Ore., and Rosemead, Calif., before coming to Buhl. He and his wife, Donna, have two daughters and two sons.

Missionaries

Four young men from the Magic Valley area have been called to serve two-year missions for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Aston

• Elder Kenneth Ivan "K" Aston, son of Bonnie and Verh Aston of Twin Falls, will serve in the Texas Fort Worth Mission. He will speak in sacrament meeting at 12:45 p.m. Sunday at the Hollister LDS Church on Highway 93 and will enter the Mission Training Center in Provo, Utah; Wednesday.

Aston is an Eagle Scout and 1993 graduate of Filer High School, where he was valedictorian. He attended Utah State University in Logan for one year.

Clark

• Elder Aaron R. Clark, son of Ron and Linda Clark of Buhl, will serve in the Guatemala City Central Mission. He will speak in sacrament meeting at 9 a.m. Sunday at the Buhl 3rd Ward chapel on Fair Street and will enter the MTC Aug. 31.

Clark is a 1993 graduate of Buhl High School and an Eagle Scout. He attended Ricks College in Rexburg for one year.

Cook

• Elder James Cook, son of Lee and Sandy Cook of Carey, will serve in the North Carolina Charlotte Mission. He will speak in sacrament meeting at 10 a.m. Sunday at the Carey 2nd Ward chapel on Main Street and will enter the MTC Aug. 31.

Cook graduated from Carey High School in 1993, where he was active in sports and student government. He attended Ricks College in Rexburg for one year, where he was enrolled in the pre-medicine program.

Adams

• Elder Clay R. Adams, son of Bob and Susan Adams of Twin Falls, will serve in the Germany Dueseldorf Mission. He will speak in sacrament meeting at 10:50 a.m. Sunday at the Twin Falls 12th Ward chapel on Caswell Avenue West and will enter the MTC Sept. 7.

Adams is an Eagle Scout. He graduated from Weber High School in North Ogden, Utah, in 1992 and attended the West Point Military Academy for two years.

Church head dies at 85

YEREVAN, Armenia (AP) — Catholicos Vazgen the patriarch of the Armenian Apostolic Church, died today after a bout with cancer. He was 85.

Vazgen, born Levon Karapet Palchian in 1908 in Bueharest, Romania, died at his villa in the Armenian capital, Yerevan, just months after returning from Paris where he had been undergoing treatment.

He graduated from Bucharest University in 1936 and worked as a teacher for several years. He was ordained in Athens in 1943 and appointed head of the Armenian Orthodox Church in Romania.

He was elected Catholicos of All Armenians in 1955, and moved to what was then Soviet Armenia.

Vazgen won many foreign and Soviet awards for his service and pacifist activities. This summer, he was awarded the order of the National Hero of Armenia.

Earlier this year, he met with the spiritual leader of Muslims in the Caucasus Mountains in hopes of ending the war for control of Nagorno-Karabakh, the Armenian enclave in neighboring Azerbaijan.

He also had been active in raising donations to help victims of the devastating 1987 earthquake in Armenia.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete. Officials said he would be buried in Echmiadzin, the nearly-1,700-year-old cathedral 15 miles southwest of Yerevan.

Expensive exorcism curses hospital

NEW YORK (AP) — A state mental hospital sent a wife-killer to a free-lance cleric for "spiritual counseling" and got hit with a $12,000 bill for it.

Alphonso Pecou, 43, was dunked in a ritual mineral-water bath and anointed with olive oil, and the Rev. Alpha O. Bundo and members of his congregation said prayers over the patient's body to drive out the demonic forces.

After members of the hospital clinical staff learned what Bundo was doing, the state cut off the treatment and mailed Bundo a check for $500 — a sum based on the usual rate for more conventional counseling by a priest or pastor.

We have patients of every persuasion, and we try to be culturally sensitive," Robert Spoor, a spokesman for the state Office of Mental Health, said Tuesday. "But we indicated that exorcism was a nontraditional treatment modality that was not billable."

Now any form of "nontraditional" treatment for state mental patients in New York City must be cleared by a newly created review board of consultants.

Pecou is a Panama native with what the Mental Health Office describes as an "extreme attachment to a Caribbean religion."

Apparently convinced that his wife was insufficiently devout, Pecou in 1982 slashed her to death with a machete and set her on fire in front of his four children. He was found innocent by reason of insanity and committed to Kingsboro Psychiatric Center in Brooklyn.

In May, hospital officials decided Pecou might benefit from spiritual counseling with Bundo, the self-described primate and pastor of the United Church of Salvation, which is in Bundo's apartment.

"Reverend Bundo carried out an assessment indicating that Mr. Pecou was possessed by demons and arrangements were made for him to start an exorcism practice," Spoor said.

Pecou was escorted to the exorcism by a state hospital staffer in a hospital vehicle.

"I think a couple of administrators may have been aware of the fact that Bundo had recommended doing an exorcism and allowed the ritual proceed," Spoor said. "But as soon as the clinical staff became aware of it, they stopped the sessions."

Bundo did not return calls Tuesday. The minister, Spoor said, "appears to practice something with a resemblance to Christianity. He cites the Bible frequently."

Prominent Lutheran leader dies at 74

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The Rev. Jacob A.O. Preus, the former president of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, died Saturday while taking a walk with two sons-in-law during a visit to a daughter's home in Burnsville. He was 74.

Preus led the Missouri Synod through one of the most divisive schisms in its recent history. The battle resulted in more than 200 congregations pulling out and a walkout of faculty and students at the denomination's Concordia Seminary in St. Louis.

The faculty and Concordia's president, John Tietjen, formed a seminary in exile called Seminex. Other dissidents formed a new denomination, the American Association of Lutheran Congregations, which existed until 1988 when it merged into the 5.5 million member Evangelical Lutheran Church in America. The Missouri Synod lost about 100,000 members because of the division.

The dispute centered on Preus' concern that clergy and theologians interpret scripture literally rather than using historical and textual criticism of the Bible. During the 1975 flap, several theologians and clergy were accused of heresy.

As a leader, Preus was determined and unwavering. But he was a different kind of father according to one of his eight children, Sarah Schwab, who said she appreciated her father's sense of humor the most.

"He was the kind of guy who told the truth. He said it simply and without malice. And I would think about it and say, 'Well, he's absolutely right.'"

Preus died while he was taking an after-dinner walk with two sons-in-law in Burnsville. He was apparently struck by a massive coronary.

Briefly

Kester named pastor at local church

Kester

TWIN FALLS — The Rev. Jerry Kester has become the new pastor at the Twin Falls Church of the Nazarene, 1231 Washington St. N.

He will begin his pastorate Sunday. An installation service will be held during the 10:45 a.m. worship hour. A reception for the Kesters is planned for 1:30 to 3 p.m. in the fellowship hall. The public is invited.

Kester graduated from the Southern Nazarene University in Bethany, Okla., in 1980 with a master of arts degree in religion and New Testament theology. He has 18 years of pastoral experience as a pastor in Bethany, Okla., Overland park, Kan., Kent, Wash., and Nampa. He and his wife, Sharon, have two sons, Greg, age 13, and Brad, age 10.

Traveling preacher, teacher to lecture

TWIN FALLS — Bill Stephens will be speaking at services set for 7 p.m. Friday and Aug. 27 and 10:30 a.m. and 7 p.m. Aug. 28 at the Christian Center of Magic Valley, 181 Morrison St.

Stephens also has been involved in Christian ministry for more than 40 years. 20 of which were spent as a traveling preacher and teacher in interdenominational ministry. He has been active at conferences, conventions and camp meetings where he ministered to large numbers of ministers. He is president of Living Faith Ministries (an interdenominational audio, television and literary outreach), president of Merced Bible College and pastor of the Christian Life Center in Merced, Calif.

His traveling ministry has taken him to 23 countries and most of the United States. He has appeared nationwide on the Trinity-Broadcasting Network, and his Sunday morning services are videotaped for distribution. He has written booklets and brochures on faith-building and motivational subjects. He also publishes the monthly inspirational paper, "Faith Lines," and has a faith-building Tape of the Month Club.

Stephens was educated at Trinity University, Willamette University and Calvary Bible College.

The public is invited, and admission is free.

Lutheran church plans monthly kids day

KIMBERLY — The Redeemer Lutheran Church, corner of Irene and Washington streets, has planned its monthly Kids Day for 2:30 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Children ages 3 through junior high can participate in Bible-based lessons, songs and crafts. Recreation and refreshments are provided. Kids Day events are planned for the third Sunday of each month. For more information, call Jeanne at 423-6388.

Group to present free concert Sunday

RUPERT — Abundant Life Ministries will present Nashville recording artist LaNette Lorde Shipley in concert during morning worship at 11 a.m. Sunday at the Free Will Baptist Church, 206 E. Sixth St.

The public is invited. Admission is free, but a freewill offering will be taken.

Church to preview new youth program

WENDELL — The Wendell Presbyterian Church is sponsoring a new Logos Youth Program.

A preview night to introduce parents and children to the program is planned for 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the church, 380 First Ave. E.

The program will be held from 5 to 8 p.m. Wednesdays, beginning Aug. 31 and continuing through April, 1995. It includes worship, Bible time, play time, crafts and family time with dinner. Children in first through fifth grades are invited.

Cost is $60 per child, with a $100 maximum per family (approximately $2 per week). The fee includes 30 weeks of meals, curriculum and supplies. Scholarships are available.

For more information, call the church at 536-6270 or Carole Cox at 536-5539.

The Times-News welcomes news of church events. Send information to Ellen Thomson, The Times-News, P.O. Box 548, Twin Falls, ID 83303. Deadline is noon Thursday for publication on the Saturday religion page.

individuals with bodies of flesh and bone—and that the Holy Ghost is a separate personage of spirit. Church leaders have said that while the existence of a heavenly mother is a logical and reasonable doctrine, there is "no revealed knowledge" about her and members should not pry for it.

In Friday's paper, Allred directly contradicts a widely-held idea that Gordon B. Hinckley, a member of the church's governing First Presidency, underscored at a church-wide conference last October.

The church has always been led by prophets, Hinckley said, "and I solemnly testify that the Lord Jesus Christ, whose church it is and whose name it bears, will never let any man or group of men stand in the way of the church's mission."

Allred, an active Mormon who works in her Provo congregation's childhood nursery, contends that belief has no basis in the Bible or Book of Mormon and ignores individual responsibility to keep God's commandments and be guided by the Holy Ghost.

"The scriptures do not give any unconditional promises that the church will never fail, although there are some conditional ones, such as the condition of the promises is obedience to God, not obedience to leaders."

"Any people who have been instructed to blindly accept anything their leaders say without seeking spiritual confirmation, Allred said, "will be a people easy to deceive."

Preachers pray for success of tobacco crop

FAIRMONT, N.C. (AP) — Preachers praying for the success of the tobacco crop here step gingerly in a region where the body is regarded as a temple, but tobacco is still king.

At a recent tobacco warehouse opening, the Rev. Herman Winberry, pastor of Trinity United Methodist Church, prayed for a prosperous year and urged that there be "no secret dishonesties...but open fairness" during the tobacco sales.

Then he made a pitch directly to heaven: "Jesus, we know you spent a lot of time outdoors when you were in the flesh, so appreciate the people who work the land."

Prayer at the tobacco warehouse is as much a part of the opening day ceremony as the thick, sweet-smelling dust rising from the deep golden piles of cured tobacco.

"I have a great respect for the tobacco farmer. The farmer badly needs some self-respect about his life and his work," Winberry said. "His salary has been paid by tobacco all my ministerial life."

Winberry, who grew up on a tobacco farm in Onslow County, said a member of his church had asked him if there was anything wrong with growing tobacco. Winberry suggested the man seek an answer through prayer.

"It's a concern on the minds and hearts of many farmers," he said.

Some religion experts say the ministerial role will be more actively in tobacco farming because of mounting scientific evidence that it harms smokers. That isn't a popular position in tobacco towns, but it shouldn't stop ministers from speaking out, said Stanley Hauerwas.

"We Christians were supposed to be a lot of run out of town," said Hauerwas, professor of theological ethics at Duke University, which was founded by a tobacco baron. "Christianity wasn't meant to make you happy."

Publication

Other news organizations have followed suit.

Sunstone's higher profile in the news media, and its increased circulation in the late 1980s, contributed significantly to the concern about "alternate voices" expressed by leaders of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Peck and others believe.

The brethren see anything that happens in the church without their permission as a problem," Peck said. "And that's been true with very conservative forums and even mainstream forums, as well as liberal forums."

Daniel H. Rector, Sunstone publisher from 1986 to 1991, thinks the friction would have occurred even without heightened press coverage. He points to the ascendancy of ultraconservative Elder Boyd K. Packer, acting president of the Council of the Twelve Apostles, as the primary reason.

"This has always been an important issue for him, and as long as he's able to call the shots, it will continue to be," Rector said.

In a speech to church employees in 1993, Packer identified gay and lesbian movement, feminists and "so-called scholars" as the three greatest dangers to the church.

Sunstone and a host of other independent forums proliferated in the 1960s and 1970s as the church correlated its programs and consolidated its publications. The independent were staffed by faithful, college-educated Mormons looking for ways to, as Peck puts it, "explore their spiritual journeys."

"We have developed a critical mass of people who have become aware of critical scholarly methodologies in various disciplines — sociology, history, scripture studies, religious studies — and they want to apply these same methodologies to their Mormon experience," Peck said.

That is a natural tension because most religious leaders become nervous "when you look at the more human and environmental" rather than "the providential side of religion," he said.

Mormon leaders "don't see these things helping missionary work," he said. "But I don't think they could do anything else."

Allen D. Roberts, co-editor of the independent Mormon journal Dialogue and co-editor and co-publisher of Sunstone from 1978 to 1986, believes the church hierarchy is fighting a losing battle. It is simply impossible for the institution to meet all the intellectual and spiritual needs of nearly 9 million members, and the more repressive the leadership becomes, the more independent forums like Sunstone will thrive, he said.

unacceptable anti-Mormon bias. But the recent excommunications are respectful within the Sunstone community for their objective scholarship and spiritual commitment to Mormonism.

"We're not going to tell Michael Quinn he can't speak at symposiums, or Lavina Fielding Anderson that her (church leaders) have blurred the line between who is a Mormon and who is not," Peck said.

Sunstone founder Scott G. Kenney, who resigned from the church in the wake of the excommunications last September, is concerned that independent Mormon forums will be unfairly seen as havens for apostates, a perception that will drive away moderates.

"If Sunstone allows (Quinn and Anderson) to participate, then that's what it will become known for," he said. "But I don't think they could do anything else."

It is simply impossible for the institution to meet all the intellectual and spiritual needs of nearly 9 million members, and the more repressive the leadership becomes, the more independent forums like Sunstone will thrive, he said.

A little slice of 'heaven' in heart of Oregon

SUBILITY, Ore. (AP) — For pastor Paul Revere, getting into Heaven is easy. It's getting out that's a problem. The last time Revere drove his white car out of the 34-acre Kingdom of Heaven, he wound up in jail for displaying Heaven license plates and carrying a Heaven-issued driver's license.

State officials haven't heeded Revere's claims of celestial citizenship. Nor do they believe the forested estate Revere calls the Kingdom of Heaven embassy belongs to God and is thus exempt from county tax rolls. Heaven owes more than $10,000 in property taxes, and the county plans to foreclose.

"The Kingdom of Heaven is not of this world," Revere says in response. "The country has declared war on the saints."

Revere, the slender, bearded leader of the Embassy of Heaven church — and until 1985 known as state Department of Transportation employee Craig Douglas Fleishman — says it is impossible to serve both God and the state. He and his followers have renounced their worldly identities and function solely as citizens of Heaven. Revere says his flock numbers 200, but only five currently reside in Heaven: Paul and his wife, Rachel, their daughters, Brooke, 14, and Skye, 11, and a scholar simply named Abraham.

The road to Heaven is full of potholes and dust, but the paradisaical plot is lush with trees, wild berries and a garden. The Revere family and their pet cat live in a spacious wood cabin with a deck overlooking a stream, and a small hydroelectric plant provides Heaven with light.

A typical day features Revere preaching on various topics, Abraham working on the church translation of the Bible, and Rachel, Brooke and Skye baking bread and carrying out clerical duties.

"We are an earthly kingdom," Revere says. "Jesus has established his government on earth, just as it is in Heaven."

Verily, he says, there are no taxes in Heaven. "Jesus did not pay taxes," he says. "My rule is simple: Love God, love neighbor. I don't need 10 books of Oregon statutes to tell me how to live."

Marion County tax collectors say that if the taxes aren't paid during the two-year redemption period, Heaven will be placed on the market. Jo Stonecipher, the county's assistant legal counsel, says that each time a notice is sent to the embassy, "the note comes back asking God to bless us and informing us that the embassy is not part of Oregon and they do not owe taxes."

Revere says he intends to remain steadfast in his claim that the state has no authority over God's property. "I would rather lose my body," he says, "than my soul."

Twice under arrest this year, Revere allowed his body to erode with hunger. He refused every order by police officers, insistently stating that the state had no authority over him.

Revere's speech, sprinkled with admonitions and blessings and a "saith" here and there, offers only harsh words for worldly governments. In short, the state is the Antichrist, and the courts are the Halls of Satan. "The court is Satan's religion carried on by the state," Revere says. "There is a reason why everyone has an attorney, why the judge wears a black robe. It is part of their satanic worship."

For Revere, to participate in a worldly government is blasphemous. And that is the one charge worthy of expulsion from Heaven.

Revere tasks his followers to do what he has done: Become "unhooked" from the governments of the world.

"Throw away state-issued driver's licenses and Social Security cards, close bank accounts, give up voting, leave public schools, and tear up library cards. Reject the worldly bonds of car insurance and vehicle registration."

For modest prices, Kingdom citizens can carry Heaven documents, kindly issued by Revere from the embassy in Sublimity, about 20 miles southeast of the seat of state power in Salem.

Though they are invalid, Revere has issued between 200 and 300 license plates for use in the United States and Mexico. Recently, he began printing passports, complete with embossed gold lettering and a watermark from Heaven.

"I'm a bureaucrat for Jesus," he says. "Currency may be next, although Revere says, 'I don't believe handing a Federal Reserve note is condemnation.'"

He says the group prefers to use gold and silver, and also relies on generous gifts, ranging from bags of wheat to computer systems, from area Christians.

Revere says Heaven's income from cash sales of license plates, documents and brochures is God's business and no one else's.

Membership lists are closed as well, and Heaven citizens are impossible to track except by their former worldly identities, which are secret. Revere refused even to utter his former name or that of his wife, Rachel, who once was called Marilyn.

Revere considers the Kingdom a sovereign nation. He established the outpost in 1987 to serve citizens living in what he calls foreign lands such as Oregon, Utah and Texas. He hopes to have "embassies" in every foreign state someday.

Heaven citizens are accountable only to God, Revere says, and he considers "arbitrary regulation" such as speed limits to be no more than a good idea.

At least a dozen Heaven drivers have been caught speeding in the United States, then carted off to jail for their other-worldly documentation.

Revere says he expects to be arrested again himself in August for not showing up for his next court date, but he doesn't seem concerned.

"Just because they pretend that we are not God's people but residents of the state of Oregon," he says, "doesn't change anything."

Non-Mormon historian offers unique insight

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — As a faithful member of the United Methodist Church, Jan Shippo was baffled by the Mormon community she lived in for a year in Utah.

Her Mormon neighbors in Logan seemed different. There were obvious behavioral distinctions, such as their abstinence from alcohol, coffee and tobacco.

But Shippo saw something more. "It was very clear that there was an almost ethnic character to being Mormon," she said. "That was intriguing to me, and so I just kept worrying away at it until I figured it out. It took me almost 20 years."

Now Shippo, who drinks "a little fee black because 'that's the only real kind of coffee,'" is often called upon — even by Mormon leaders — to offer insights about a church that prohibits the consumption of tea and coffee.

Shippo, professor of religious studies and history at Indiana University-Purdue University, Indianapolis, was born and raised a Methodist and wouldn't dream of converting to Mormonism.

Nevertheless, her opinions about The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints are valued by Mormons and non-Mormons alike.

She calls herself an "inside outsider."

"I guess I'm an anomaly in a way," said Shippo, a featured speaker Saturday night at the 1994 Sunstone Symposium. "I mean I have worked with people who don't like the Mormons, as well as people who love them."

In fact, she and John W. Welch, a Mormon law professor at Brigham Young University, are co-editing a book on the diaries of early Mormon apostle William McEllean.

In 1835, McEllean became one of the first members of the church's Quorum of the Twelve Apostles, but he later became disillusioned with the church and was excommunicated three years later.

His journals are fascinating, Shippo said, because of comparisons that can be drawn between the church in the 1800s and the way it functions today.

"The reason I study the Mormons and I continue to study the Mormons is my interest in how religion works," she said.

Shippo believes it was her 1985 book, "Mormonism: The Story of a New Religious Tradition," that caused her to be seen as someone capable of explaining Mormonism to non-members and outsiders' views of the faith to Mormons.

For example, when Ezra Taft Benson died in May and was succeeded by Howard W. Hunter as church president, Mormon Apostle M. Russell Ballard joined Shippo on National Public Radio to discuss the transition.

"People don't realize the extent to which there is a language, there is a way of saying things," she said. "So in a sense, I speak Mormon."

She adds, however, that "Mormon" is an ever-changing language that requires constant research and contact with those who speak it to maintain fluency.

Shippo has lived in Utah for only one year in 1960 when her husband worked at Utah State University. But she visits the heart of Mormondom frequently and considers herself a friend to to Santa Fe, N.M., as a pastor, chaplain and educator, and is a contributing author to the Christian book, "Cults, Sects and the New Age," by the Rev. James J. LeBar.

Burner said the 1960s and 1970s are often regarded as the peak years for cults but many international groups, such as the Unification Church of Sun Myung Moon, continue while new cults appear and others splinter and die.

"The danger is that most people don't want to do this," Burner said of his efforts to track such groups and educate people about them.

Mormons of many stripes.

Her Saturday address for Sunstone, "The Difficult Problem of Maintaining Balance Between Center and Periphery in an Expanding Church," focuses on the difficulties faced by Mormon leaders in meeting the needs of everyone as church membership surges past 9 million.

"One of the things in an expanding church is that if there is not enough gravitational force between the center and the periphery, then the church will spin off in another direction," Shippo said.

"And if there's too much force, it will essentially collapse in the center and end up with a big black hole."

Shippo believes that Mormons are interested in what she has to say because she holds similar values of family and spirituality and does not harbor ulterior motives.

"I think you begin with the fact that my concern is with Mormonism, and not as a political movement or a social movement or a cultural movement, but with the entire gestalt, which I am convinced begins with religion," Shippo said.

Welch compares Shippo to Thomas Kane, a non-Mormon whose work as a mediator between the Mormons and the federal government helped keep the so-called Utah War of 1858 a bloodless one.

As a federal army headed West, Kane managed to convince Utah territorial governor Alfred Cumming that the Mormons were not in rebellion. The Army came and stayed three years but no blood was shed.

Kane's role was necessary, Welch said, for the church and outside parties to avoid misunderstandings.

Shippo meets the same needs, he said.

"Although she is an outsider, she knows our language. She knows our documents. She appreciates our contributions of Mormon thought and culture," Welch said.

Explicit discussions cross political line

LYNCHBURG, Va. — A TV station yanked the Rev. Jerry Falwell off the air after viewers complained that his sexually explicit discussion of allegations against President Clinton crossed the line from religion to politics.

WTLV-TV in Jacksonville, Fla., suspended the "Old Time Gospel Hour" Monday and will cancel it if Falwell continues to focus more on politics than religion, said the station's president and general manager, Ken Tonning.

Complaints had mounted in recent weeks, and the station acted after one viewer spoke up about what Falwell's show prompted her 9-year-old son to ask.

"He asked me what oral sex was. I asked him where did he hear about that, and he said he heard it on Jerry Falwell's show on television," said Cathy Corby, who tuned in herself to hear Falwell explicitly describe sex acts related to a sexual harassment claim against Clinton.

People only objected because Falwell's message is conservative, spokesman Mark DeMoss said Tuesday. He said he didn't know of any other stations pulling the show. Falwell's church is based in Lynchburg.

The Corbys and eight friends picketed WTLV-TV Sunday over what they called a political show masquerading as a religious one.

Single churchgoer numbers are growing

GREENVILLE, S.C. — An increasing number of people filling the pews on Sunday morning are single, sending some South Carolina churches a message that they need to do more for people without spouses.

"By the year 2000, it's projected half of the adults will be single," said Tim Cleary of the Southern Baptist Convention. "Do you choose as a church just to minister to half of the adults in your community or do you see your mission and Christ's mission as speaking to all the adults?"

Cleary, who is a single adult ministry specialist for the Convention, notes that Jesus was single. "The single lifestyle is as viable as the married lifestyle, and the Bible certainly bears that out," Cleary said.

Officials say Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian and other churches now are catching up to an era in which marriage isn't considered the only way to go. Meanwhile, singles' social and prayer groups are popping up in Roman Catholic churches.

But, Cleary said, churches need to be careful not to think of themselves as a "marriage bureau."

"Some churches think 'Let's get these poor single adults together and meet somebody and get married and be happy' and a whole new person," he said. "The church needs to be showing single adults how to live their lives as whole people."

Envoy to Jewish state visits president

JERUSALEM — The Vatican's first envoy to the Jewish state presented his credentials Tuesday to the Israeli president, who elected him for the long delay but added "better late than never."

Archbishop Andrea Cordero Lanza di Montezemolo, 68, holds the title of papal nuncio, which is equivalent to ambassador. He had served as apostolic delegate in Jerusalem since April 1990.

For years the Vatican refused to recognize the Jewish state. That changed Dec. 30 when the two established diplomatic ties, completing a process that began with the U.S.-brokered Middle East peace process in 1991.

"I think that the pope, the Vatican, have realized it's high time to talk to the state of Israel and talk to the Jews through the state of Israel. It's a little bit late, but better late than never," President Ezer Weizman said at the reception Tuesday.

Israel's envoy to the Vatican, Shmuel Hadass, met with Pope John Paul II earlier this year. He is expected to present his credentials this fall.

Court orders church member to pay

MONTPELIER, Vt. — A divided Vermont Supreme Court has ordered a member of a communal church to pay child support to his ex-wife even though church doctrine prohibits such payments and the man has no income.

But the Supreme Court ruled that Eugene Hunt of the Community at Island Pond should not have been held in contempt of court for failing to make child support payments because it infringed on his freedom of religion.

The court found that Hunt's obligation to care for his children outweighed his freedom of religion and thus he should be required to make the $50 a month payments to his wife.

"The order represents the least restrictive means for the state to further a paramount interest in having parents recognize their obligation to provide material support for their children," said the ruling, written by Chief Justice Frederic Allen.

Hunt has been a member of the church for 14 years. His wife left the church in 1989 and they were divorced a year later.

Hunt has maintained that neither he nor the church recognizes his wife's decision to leave him and so he cannot support her outside the church community.

Modern monks toil the high-tech way

BERRYVILLE, Va. (AP) — When the monks at Holy Cross Abbey in Berryville, Va., need guidance, they usually turn to God. But no amount of prayer could help them decipher the computer system a donor had given them to improve their fruitcake sales.

For that help, the Cistercians turned to computer specialist Ed Leonard, an acquaintance from Loudoun County.

Within months, Leonard had streamlined the production and sale of the mail-order cakes. But seeing how easily the monks adapted to computers made him wonder whether the keyboard — not the kitchen — might be their most promising source of income.

So Leonard started a much more ambitious project: He quit his job as an executive for a computer equipment maker and two years ago founded the Electronic Scriptorium, a Sterling, Va.-based business that farms out data-entry work to monasteries across the country.

Cave art depicts age-old religion

SEMINOLE CANYON, Texas (AP) — Shallow caves in the river canyons of southwest Texas and northern Mexico harbor ancient paintings that tell the spiritual story of a long-lost world.

Indigenous people, not known by any formal name, created the animal and human figures some 3,000 to 4,000 years ago.

Archaeologists aren't sure what happened to the artists, but their pictographs have endured through the ages.

Now the cave paintings are gaining wider appreciation as the public discovers them and the Rock Art Foundation works to identify and preserve them while exploring the world of the ancient artists.

"The paintings are the one real key to their existence," said Jim Zimgrat, professional photographer who became captivated by the cave art in the 1950s and has been documenting it ever since.

The art can be found on private ranches in Val Verde County. It is most accessible to the public at Seminole Canyon State Historical Park off U.S. Highway 90, about 40 miles west of Del Rio.

"The thoughts behind the paintings of Val Verde County where the Pecos River meets the Rio Grande. There are approximately 250 known sites, many of which contain three, four or five works of art. A number of rock art sites were covered by water when nearby Lake Amistad was created.

spent much of her career searching out and studying the rock art.

"After a while it gets you and it just starts telling you what it is," Turpin said. "I think it is probably one of the most exciting things for an archaeologist — to be able to look at the workings of people's minds."

The illustrations are of animals and humans with animal features, representing the perilous out-of-body voyages of a shaman, or spiritual leader, Turpin said.

The art indicates the painters had a unified "belief system" long before the days of Christ, she said.

"To me it ranks as one of the oldest religious systems in the New World," she said.

The art itself may have been part of a communal religious ceremony, Turpin said, noting the height of some of the cave pictographs, which may have required assistance for the artist.

The pictures are done in black, white, red and orange paint created from minerals that are believed to have been heated and ground then mixed with animal type of binder, possibly animal fat.

The sites are located primarily in the part of Val Verde County where the Pecos River meets the Rio Grande. There are approximately 250 known sites, many of which contain three, four or five works of art. A number of rock art sites were covered by water when nearby Lake Amistad was created.

Religious groups form coalition against gambling

CHICAGO, Ill. (AP) — Anti-gambling activists Tom Grey calls it a David and Goliath story.

The $330 billion gambling industry, which promotes casinos as the promised land of wealth, is being taken on by small bands of religiously motivated individuals who believe their neighbors are getting ripped off.

If Goliath, in the form of gaming corporations enticing communities with promises of new tax revenues and jobs, is getting stronger, so is David, according to Grey.

The spring, activists from 24 states and 10 faith groups met in Chicago to revive the National Coalition Against Organized Gambling. The national organization arose from burgeoning grass-roots movements opposing the spread of legalized gambling, said Grey, coalition spokesman from Galena, Ill.

"I think we have them right where we want them," says Grey, an anti-gambling advocate for the United Methodist Church.

There is nothing directly in the Bible about gambling, and some churches have sponsored various forms of chance such as bingo and raffles to bolster their budgets.

But there is a great leap from church bingo halls to casinos and riverboat gambling, say gaming opponents who have been able to build coalitions from the Mormon to the Roman Catholic churches to oppose the spread of large-scale gambling operations.

"We drew a line. Tactically, you cannot eliminate all gambling," said Grey. "Americans love to have their right to freedom to sin."

If prohibition is not feasible, that does not mean most Americans want their communities to turn into the next Atlantic City or Las Vegas, advocates say.

In just the past year, the proliferation of casino gambling has stirred people in local churches from Wyoming to Ohio to organize opposition efforts, said William Evans, an adviser on government relations in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

"It's been inspiring to watch this thing develop," Evans said.

In Missouri, Citizens for Life and Liberty, an anti-gambling group, works closely with religious groups in opposing casinos. They offer speakers to churches and even sent out proposed inserts for church bulletins where Bible verses against covetousness and idolatry are quoted under the headline "God's Word on Gambling."

"Churches all across the state have become activated," said Mark Andrews, chairman of the state group.

And in his home state of Illinois, religious leaders have helped stop the spread of casino gambling into Chicago, Grey said.

"We believe the tide has turned on gambling," he said.

But the growth of legalized gambling in states such as Mississippi, where since 1992 the number of casinos along the Gulf Coast has risen from one to 14, has left other church leaders less hopeful.

The Rev. Weston Ware, associate director of the Christian Life Commission of the Southern Baptist convention, says gambling is not the major issue in any denomination.

Ware said it may take 15 to 20 years before Americans treat the issues of how gambling robs poor families of needed income and contributes to child abuse the same way they have the problems associated with drunken driving and cigarettes.

"Probably, the realities of life as we'll have to see more people hurt by gambling," he said.

And one argument religious groups remain sensitive to is the charge they are hypocritical opposing gambling when some churches sponsor bingo games or raffles.

The Rev. Stephen J. Sidorak Jr., executive director of the Christian Conference of Connecticut, said there is a major difference between church-sponsored games of chance and casino gambling.

Charitable gambling meets social needs, Sidorak said.

"The other is almost a pick-pocket form of industry where money is taken from everyone's pocket and put in the hands of a few," he said.

Harassment causes change in clergymen

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — When children approach the Rev. William Carr after Mass, arms outstretched, the priest tells them: "I don't hug. Let's shake hands."

That wasn't always so, said Carr, pastor of Wichita's Church of the Resurrection. He used to hug parishioners as a way of expressing compassion and priestly love. But lately, the only recipient of his hugs after Mass is his 3-year-old niece. "And I tell her it has to last all week," he said.

The new sensitivity about sexual harassment and molestations of clergy sexual misconduct have made Carr and others in the clergy change their style of doing things.

"We all feel somewhat restrained," said the Rev. Dorothea Janzen, associate pastor of the Holy Family Memorial Church in North Newton.

"All kinds of touching have to be more guarded."

Janzen's denomination, and many others, have developed guidelines under which clergy are supposed to act as they conduct their ministry.

"It's sad," said Carr, echoing the sentiments of other clergy. After all, touch is even scriptural. There are several references to the healing touch of Jesus, and the apostle Paul admonished the faithful in first-century Corinth: "Greet one another with a holy kiss." (1 Corinthians 16:20).

However, that behavior could lead straight to court in the '90s.

Pastoral counseling is a particularly difficult area. While members of the clergy want to maintain confidentiality, they also recognize that transference, the redirection of feelings and desires, is common in the counseling setting.

Janzen is a proponent for keeping the office door open during counseling or of using a door with a window in it. "It's a good rule of thumb," she said.

Jehovah's Witnesses prove cooperation, coordination can build kingdom in days

SALMON (AP) — Some said it couldn't be done. But Jehovah's Witnesses in Salmon proved that with a whole lot of cooperation and even more coordination, their new Kingdom Hall could be built from the ground up in just days.

With about 200 people working on the project during each phase of construction this spring, the Witnesses finished the first wall at 7 a.m. on Thursday. As framers finished their job, sheetrockers, electricians and plumbers moved in. Next came the painters, masons and carpet-layers. Others worked outside on the landscaping, hauling dirt and river rock, planting trees, shrubs, and perennials dug from their own gardens.

By Sunday, Jehovah's Witnesses were holding their first meeting in the new building.

"I just cried," said Cheri McFarland. "This has been in the making for so long."

Plans for the new Hall began about two years ago. First members raised money to buy the land. Then they sold the old hall, using the receipts coupled with a low interest loan from the Jehovah's Witnesses Watchtower Society building fund to buy materials.

Meetings were held in the Salmon Public Library's basement. One member built cabinets for the hall while another Witness from out-of-town drew up architectural plans. Another Witness drove to St. Louis, Missouri to pick up new chairs manufactured by a Witness in Canada.

Meanwhile the local building committee laid the ground work for construction.

Cheri McFarland says a regional building committee of Jehovah's Witnesses sent the local committee a long list of things to do before construction could begin.

"They said, 'If you do every step and you don't leave one out, everything will work out,'" McFarland said. "Included were such things as permitting, insurance and labor force. We had a list of things to do before construction could begin."

to work on "quick builds."

Those with trade skills like carpentry and plumbing, are scheduled in and out of the camp only for the phase of construction that applies to them. For example, once the building is framed in, the carpenters leave as sheetrockers, plumbers and electricians move in.

Lemhi County building inspector Gary Goodman wasn't surprised that the building was completed in the designated time. He was impressed with the quality of the workmanship.

'The primary purpose of the Kingdom Hall is to spread the Good News. It just tied people up to where they couldn't do that.'

— Jim McFarland, Jehovah's Witness

Nickie Adams who headed up the well-constructed building that exceeds the code in every area, he said. "It was fun to watch and fun to inspect."

While builders were crawling about the project site like an army of well-trained ants, others were in the tent kitchen cranking out 1,000 meals per day. The portable kitchen, which has a wooden floor laid over pallets and enclosed by plastic tarps, passes from town to town: new halls are built. About 200 Kingdom Halls are built in the United States.

Many, though, turn the church-rising into a family outing, either camping in recreational vehicles or staying with Salmon families. Camp included a sandbox for children, a First Aid unit, and a lost and found. Volunteers came from as far away as Utah, Montana and Wyoming.

Dog-tied by the end of the weekend, most had worked all day and gabbled all night.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff

"There is no such thing as pure pleasure; and anxiety always goes with it." —Ovid.

Put yourself in today's East chair and defend against South's no-trump game. Look at only the North and East cards and follow the play carefully. See if you can avoid an anxious moment when crunched time is at hand.

West leads the spade five and East's queen wins. When East returns the spade 10, West overtakes with his jack and returns the deuce, South winning the ace. South cashes the king and queen of diamonds and overtakes his jack with dummy's ace. On this, East has an easy discard of a club. When dummy cashes the fourth card now? Should East protect the Q-J-10 of clubs or should he hold on to four hearts?

If East discards a heart, he has overlooked a key element in partner's defense. The heart discard allows South to win four heart tricks and South wins his nine tricks.

But is it more dangerous to unguard the clubs? Not if East pays heed to partner's plays in spades. When West overtakes the ace of spades, South leads back the deuce to South's ace. West is marked with five spades and South with only three. Further, his deuce is a suit-preference signal indicating strength (an entry) in the lower suit (clubs). Had West's entry been in hearts, he would have led back the spade king after his overtake of East's 10. So, if partner has an entry in clubs, there's no need for East to protect that suit, and a club discard holds South to eight tricks.
