

Good morning Television listings appear on A-4, A-5

A mechanical breakdown prevented delivery of Friday's "TV Weekly" to some Times-News subscribers. For the next week, we'll publish the missing television listings in each day's newspaper.

Today, listings for Saturday and Sunday night programs appear on pages A-4 and A-5.

We apologize for any inconvenience to our readers. Watch for the next "TV Weekly" in this coming Friday's newspaper.

Today's forecast:

Partly cloudy and cooler. Highs 75 to 80 degrees. Lows 45 to 55 degrees.

WASHINGTON — The United States and Cuba reached an agreement Friday that will allow thousands more Cubans to enter the United States legally.

That is a move the White House hoped would replace the chaotic refugee exodus with "a safer, legal and ... orderly process." The agreement, initiated by negotiators on behalf of President Clinton and Fidel Castro, acknowledged the interests of both countries in ending the risky flight by raft across the Straits of Florida.

Attorney General Janet Reno said the United States would admit a minimum of 20,000 Cubans a year under existing immigration authority, not including immediate relatives of Cubans who have become U.S. citizens. An additional 4,000 to 6,000 Cubans currently on the waiting list for visas would also be allowed in.

"Currently, the 20,000 figure is an upper limit instead of a minimum, and only a few thousand Cubans have actually been allowed to immigrate each year."

"The aim is to identify Cubans who have strong reasons for seeking exit from Cuba ... and have U.S. sponsors," Reno said.

Castro's government agreed to try to prevent unsafe departures from its shores "using mainly persuasive methods," and to allow some of the 35,000 Cubans who have fled this year to return home without repatriation.

Reno said the Justice Department would announce details of immigration procedures late next week. The department will determine which Cubans will be eligible for "parole" status, which could apply to family members who currently do not qualify for immigrant visas, officials said.

"This agreement, when carried out, will help ensure that the massive flow of dangerous and illegal migration will be replaced by a safer, legal and more orderly process," the administration said in a statement released in New Orleans where Clinton was giving a speech.

The settlement was a "fair, good agreement, good for the United States," Clinton said at the airport as he was leaving for Washington.

The U.S. Coast Guard has picked up nearly 35,000 Cuban rafters trying to reach the Florida coast this year.

Tragic puzzle

Investigation team at a loss to explain Flight 427 crash

The Associated Press

ALIQUIPPA, Pa. — A blackened hillside crater yielded shattered body parts and shards of twisted metal but no answer Friday to the mystery of a USAir jetliner that abruptly fell from the sky on a clear, still evening.

"We're all very much at a loss to explain this accident," said U.S. Transportation Secretary Federico Pena.

The crew of USAir Flight 427 radioed from six miles away on final approach for landing at the Pittsburgh airport Thursday evening and gave no indication anything was wrong, the airline said. Moments later, the plane was down and 132 people were dead.

ABC reported the pilot's microphone to air-traffic control was left open and an explosive followed by some unintelligible voices and the words "traffic emergency" were heard.

National Transportation Safety Board member Carl Vogt told a news conference late Friday he knew of the transmission, but had not heard it himself.

The Federal Aviation Administration refused to discuss the report. "It's part of the investigation and it would be inappropriate to comment," said spokeswoman Sandra Allen.

Vogt said the plane's engines had been recovered and damage to them indicated they were still operating at the time of impact.

Investigators were reviewing the plane's black boxes, which record flight data and cockpit conversations. Vogt said the NTSB had not released details from the audio tapes.

"We have not ruled out a bomb," Vogt said. "We have not ruled anything out, but I am not aware of any speculation as far as a bomb."

USAir Chairman Seth Schofield said the airline had received no threats toward Flight 427 and had "no reason to believe there was sabotage."

Vogt also said the NTSB also was investigating.

Tax levies increase nearly 10%

Twin Falls County adopts budget of $17.4 million

By Sean L. McCarthy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Taking taxpayers' advice, county commissioners trimmed more than $200,000 from next year's expected expenses, but the budget they adopted Friday still will hike county levies by almost 10 percent.

The 1994-95 budget totals $17,469,788, up 9 percent from this year.

County residents' share of property taxes, once expected to rise by 14.3 percent, now is estimated to increase 9.94 percent. Final levies will be determined later this year after the assessor's office completes its annual property valuations.

County Commissioner Brent Reinke, a Republican up for election in November, had opposed the county's tentative budget because it proposed adding 31 new employees to the county payroll. Instead, Reinke favored a budget similar to the one approved Friday.

He said Friday he was still uncomfortable about passing along new taxes to county residents.

"Anything above 5 percent is just too much," he said.

But the county found little that could be cut from the budget. Salaries for county employees, frozen last year, will increase by an average of between 5 and 6 percent Oct. 1. Department spending had been rolled back to 1991 levels last year.

So where did the county cut costs this week?

Almost $200,000 in salaries was removed with the rejection of 10 proposed hires — among them: a zoning planner, two sheriff's deputies and an aide in both the public defender's and the prosecuting attorney's offices. The county budget now includes an estimated 15 new full-time workers, rather than the 31 proposed.

About $75,000 for an updated comprehensive land-use plan and the updating and indexing of county laws was cut from the general fund, Reinke said. The plan will be paid for instead by income received through the state sales tax.

The county also cut $93,000 from its capital improvements funds, $10,000 from the pest-control fund and $1,975 from the election fund.

Vatican holds its peace as abortion text wins OK

The Associated Press

CAIRO, Egypt — The U.N. population conference finally reached a compromise on abortion Friday, but could not persuade the Vatican to go along.

Vatican delegates, outspoken in their opposition to previous proposals, held their peace when a committee adopted a paragraph on unsafe abortions and the mother's health. That still left open the possibility — though unlikely — that the Holy See would join the majority.

The text is now almost certain to be adopted by the vast majority of countries when the report is brought before the full conference for approval.

The U.N. Conference on Population and Development is drawing up a 20-year Program of Action for slowing the world's population growth. But for a few paragraphs here and there, the 113-page final draft is complete.

The remaining paragraphs deal with divisive issues such as teen-age sex and contraception. Work on them has been delayed because of the abortion issue, which the Vatican and some Roman Catholic countries have kept in the forefront during the first five days of the nine-day meeting.

Forgotten issues — A8

Currently world population is growing by an additional 90 million people a year. The draft sets target spending at $17 billion a year worldwide by 2000 for basic health care for women and children, family planning and AIDS prevention. That's projected to rise to nearly $22 billion a year by 2015.

Delegates stood to express their acceptance of the compromise language on abortion at a meeting of the committee drafting the text.

Vatican delegate Rev. Diarmuid Martin told the committee that the Holy See would pronounce judgment on the text when the whole plan of action was approved.

The Vatican position "constitutes a substantial but not complete identification" with the paragraph, Martin said.

Drug-laced mother's milk leads to murder charge

The Associated Press

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. — With the pressures and demands of motherhood pulling at her, it was all Karen Henderson could do to stay awake each day.

The 21-year-old woman said she soon found that a shot of methamphetamine, or "crank," was a cheap, quick way to keep from falling asleep. Despite the occasional drugs, she breast-fed her infant son whenever she ran out of baby formula.

One day last September, Henderson awoke to find her son lying still in his crib, not breathing, his lips blue.

Two-month-old Jason died on the way to the hospital, and Henderson was charged with murder for allegedly poisoning her son with drug-laced breast milk.

"I don't think it's fair that he's gone," Henderson said during an interview in jail last week. "I don't deserve to be put through this. I'm the one who took care of him."

Last month a jury deadlocked 11-1 in favor of convicting her of murder, but found her guilty of child endangerment, for which she received six years in prison. Henderson is scheduled to be retried on the murder charge Sept. 19.

Defense attorney George Boyle said that if Henderson is convicted, any mother could be charged with murder if she took any type of drug and her baby died.

"Does that include aspirin, which is a drug?" Boyle asked. "Does that include alcohol, which is a drug? The implications are so great that it's

Snow falls in Cascades; thunderstorms cover wide area

The Associated Press

Scattered thunderstorms stretched across much of the nation Friday, while a cold front dropped hail over the Great Lakes and snow fell in the mountains of the Pacific Northwest.

A bizarre thunderstorm near Glasgow, Mont., caused a heat burst, the National Weather Service said. The temperature increased from 67 to 93 in just 15 minutes. About 20 minutes later, the mercury had fallen back to 68.

In the Pacific Northwest, a stalled low pressure system caused cool temperatures and rainfall throughout the Northern Rockies and dropped snow levels to about 6,000 feet in the Cascades. Up to 4 inches of snow may accumulate above 7,000 feet.

Extended forecast: Southern Idaho — Sunday through Tuesday partly cloudy with a slight chance of showers each day. Lows in the 40s. Highs in the 70s.

Northern Utah and Nevada:
Utah — Mostly cloudy and windy with a slight chance of thunderstorms today and Sunday. Highs today middle 80s to lower 90s and Sunday in the 80s. Lows in the 50s. The ultraviolet index forecast for Saturday is 6, a moderate exposure level.

Elko County — Partly cloudy north and east today. Highs mid-70s to low 80s.

Weather summary

A cold front moved southeastward Friday afternoon producing rain showers in the Idaho Panhandle area.

Breezy conditions also accompanied the cold front as some places reported gusty winds. Temperatures behind the cold front only reached into the 70s.

Precipitation in the Panhandle area amounted to .10 inch or less of rain.

Temperatures around the state at 3 p.m. ranged from the 80s in the southeast and 40s to the 80s for the rest of the state.

Winds were light to moderate and variable with gusty winds out of the west in the 20 mph range.

The highest temperature in the state Friday was 90 degrees at Malta. Stanley reported the lowest at 25 degrees. That reading was also the lowest in the nation.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 112 degrees at Lake Havasu City, Ariz.

In the Great Lakes region, thunderstorms developed from Wisconsin to New York. In Wisconsin, thunderstorms dropped hail near Cazenovia, Reedsburg, Necedah and Madison.

South-central Texas was drenched by rain, causing some flash floods and prompting a flash flood watch for parts of southern Texas. A thunderstorm dumped more than 3 inches in two hours in Addicks, and between 3 inches to 6 inches fell throughout the region.

Scattered thunderstorms moved across much of the Southeast.

Rainfall for the six hours up to 6 a.m. MDT included 1.16 inches in Orlando, Fla., 1.1 inches in Montgomery, Ala., and 1.01 inches in Walnut Ridge, Ark.

Pentagon sets training near Haiti

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a ratcheting-up of military forces in preparation for a possible invasion of Haiti, the Pentagon announced Friday that troops from one of its premier light infantry divisions would begin "training operations" in the Caribbean.

The Pentagon, in a statement late Friday, said the aircraft carrier Eisenhower and the command ship Mount Whitney would go to Norfolk, Va., over the next few days to pick up the troops and return to the Caribbean. The Mount Whitney was to arrive in port Saturday and the Eisenhower on Monday, official said.

It was not immediately known where the training would take place. U.S. Marines have conducted training exercises since Wednesday on Vieques, an island just east of Puerto Rico.

An invasion of Haiti would involve about 20,000 troops, including women serving aboard the Eisenhower, Pentagon officials said. Some of the forces would remain in the country for a year or more. The Pentagon didn't say how many U.S. infantry troops from the Army's 10th Mountain Division would embark on board the ships.

Several thousand were expected to set sail, along with troop transports and attack helicopters needed in an invasion should President Clinton order one, Pentagon sources, asking not to be identified further, said.

The decision to place several thousand Army troops onboard a carrier embarking on combat operations is unprecedented.

It reflects the strong views of Adm. Paul D. Miller, the four-star admiral in charge of the U.S. Atlantic Command and the advocate of "adaptive force packages" composed of several military services in the same operations.

The Pentagon didn't say when the Eisenhower and the Mount Whitney would depart Norfolk. But officials speaking on condition of anonymity indicated the warships might be ready to leave by late next week.

Budget

Property taxes then were adjusted to reflect the budget cuts.

County Commissioner Jim Fraley, who is stepping down at the end of his term this fall, thanked county employees for supporting the commissioners through "a tough year" without cost-of-living pay raises.

Reinke said county salaries need to be kept more in line with comparable jobs in the private sector "to send a message to the county that this is the place to be."

He said the clerk's office has lost 15 employees in the past year to private jobs paying higher wages for similar skills. The sheriff's department also has seen deputies leave for higher-paying posts at other nearby cities and counties, said Sheriff Wayne Tousey.

Tousey originally asked commissioners to let him hire 12 new deputies next year. Though that number was cut to three patrol deputies and one full-time clerk, he said negotiations with the commissioners were much smoother than in 1993.

A year ago, Tousey sought an independent attorney in his budget dispute with the commissioners. No lawyers were needed to increase the sheriff's budget this year.

"We worked very closely with him in getting his budget in," Fraley said. "He's been very cooperative." In response to comments at Tuesday evening's budget hearing, Tousey said he also is looking into the idea of installing a TV antenna above the county jail. The county spends upward of $3,000 to provide cable TV service to the jail's eight cell blocks.

Tousey said the TVs act as "baby-sitters" to keep inmates from fighting. But he acknowledged that local TV stations may be as effective in that capacity as cable stations are.

Commissioners said they saw no place to cut in spending for garbage control or medical needs of indigent residents.

The total bill for garbage — including construction and the placement of a new landfill at Hub Butte and fines for not closing old dumps according to federal environmental regulations — tops out at an estimated $4.2 million.

Paying indigent medical bills this year will cost the county about $1.68 million.

Those two areas account for more than one-third of the county's expenses over the next 12 months.

In 1992-93, the county spent $2.05 million on garbage and indigent medical bills — about 17.3 percent of that year's $11.8 million budget.

Crash

tigating whether birds contributed to the crash.

The five-member crew was on the last day of a three-day flight, he said.

Witnesses reported seeing the jetliner bank to the right, roll a few times and crash nose-first into a ravine. Some witnesses reported hearing an explosion before the crash; others said they heard the engine sputter, then go silent.

Hundreds saw the plane go down, including children and parents at a soccer game about a half-mile away and people outside a shopping center.

"The engines sputtered," said 10-year-old Jason Moka, who was on the soccer field with his younger brother. "Then there was fire and smoke coming out of it. Then it turned upside down, and it spun."

The Boeing 737-300 gouged out a crater in a stand of trees and shattered into countless small pieces. Only the plane's tail remained intact. All 132 people aboard — 127 passengers and five crew members — were killed in the deadliest U.S. crash in seven years.

"Usually when a plane crashes, there's some large section left somewhere, but that didn't happen in this case," said Jim Eichenlaub, Hopewell Township's director of emergency services. "They're all very small pieces."

Body parts, pieces of plane, luggage and clothing were scattered over the trees and ground.

The crash site, about seven miles northwest of the airport, was sectioned off with tape and stakes as investigators began trying to identify the debris and the victims.

The scene was declared a biological hazard because of the amount of blood.

About 60 state police officers kept the curious away from the site. Six people were charged with trespassing Thursday night.

Officials accustomed to disaster and tragedy were at a loss to describe the scene.

"There was a hand with a ring on it," the Rev. Alden Hathaway of Pittsburgh said after visiting the site. "They think it was an airline stewardess because her uniform was close by."

Vogt said it will take several days to remove the bodies and the wreckage. Crews cut a road into the rocky terrain to reach the site. Refrigerated trucks took bodies to a temporary morgue at Pittsburgh Airport.

Some victims may never be identified, said Beaver County Coroner Wayne Tatolovich.

A passenger list released by the airline showed most of the victims were from Pennsylvania.

The flight had originated in Chicago, and was to continue on the West Palm Beach, Fla., after a stop in Pittsburgh.

Schofield, the airline chairman, said there were no maintenance problems with the 7-year-old aircraft. It underwent a routine maintenance check, performed every 35 hours, on Wednesday in Hartford, Conn. The last heavy maintenance check, done every 11,000 hours, was completed Feb. 3, 1993.

It had logged 23,846 flight hours and 14,489 takeoffs and landings.

The plane's captain, identified as Peter Germano, 45, of Moorestown, N.J., had worked for USAir since February 1981. He had 9,112 hours total flying time and 3,269 hours in 737-300 aircraft.

USAir disaster

Investigators Friday combed through the wreckage of USAir Flight 427, looking for clues to the crash that killed all 132 people aboard. The crash was USAir's fifth in five years.

Food stamp fraud yields 150 arrests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal investigators say they discovered massive food stamp fraud during recent raids on merchants suspected of exchanging the coupons for cash, drugs, guns and other items.

Known as "Operation Stamp Out," the agency's investigation targeted merchants who buy food stamps from recipients at half their face value, and then redeem them for the full price from the federal government.

Some 27 million Americans receive $24 billion in annual food stamp benefits. The Secret Service estimates that $2 billion of that is illegally laundered.

According to the Secret Service, investigators discovered that food stamp recipients, who sell their benefits for cash often use the money to buy illegal drugs, frequently in open-air drug markets "outside the corrupt stores or even at the grocery store check-out counter."

At crash site in Pittsburgh, only the plane's tail remained intact

ALBUQUERQUE, Pa. (AP) — Rob Cellini finally made it up the hill to the wreckage of USAir Flight 427. "Does anybody need help?" he called out. "Is anybody alive? Does anybody hear us?"

All he heard were the echoes of his voice and a co-worker's, and the popping of the flames.

Cellini and Lew Napolitano were the first of many people — neighbors, rescuers, counselors — to come face to face Thursday night with a scene ghastly even by the standards of other plane crashes: a shattered jet almost unrecognizable as an airplane, bodies so thoroughly ripped apart that many may never be identified.

Cellini, an employee at a car dealership who came to the scene to offer his help, stood with Napolitano near a still-spinning wheel from the landing gear and saw clothes and torees, smoldering baggage, and bodies unrecognizable as either male or female.

"I couldn't stand to look at it anymore. After that, I had to get away. I knew I couldn't help anybody," he recalled Friday, standing at the dealership from which he had watched the Boeing 737 spiral nose-first to the ground as it tried to land at the Pittsburgh airport.

Cellini, 37, thought of his wife, a

USAir flight attendant who was supposed to work the next day. He thought of the victims — 132 of them — and of the families they left behind.

Napolitano, 59, said he will never forget the sight of a thigh bone covered with burned flesh and the smell of fire.

"There was nothing to look at," Napolitano said. "Everything was in shambles — it was a mess. I saw nothing that resembled a plane."

As Cellini and Napolitano ran the mile to the scene, so did other neighbors, like Dick Torreyson. He never got there. Several hundred feet from the crash site, Torreyson stumbled over a human foot. Then he saw a bone, and a torso.

"I was so shook up, I couldn't tell you," Torreyson said. He couldn't bring himself to go any farther.

Next, to arrive at the carnage where the rescue workers. Firefighter Mark New returned to the command post and slumped on the ground, his back resting against the tire of a police car.

"Debris, that's all it is," New said, shaking his head.

The plane gouged out a blackened crater in a stand of trees and shattered into countless small pieces. Only the plane's tail remained intact. By contrast, large sections of Pan Am Flight 103 remained after the jet was bombed 31,000 feet over Lockerbie, Scotland, in 1988, and intact bodies littered the area around the wreckage of the Boeing 747.

With daybreak Friday, coroners and their assistants hauled boxes of blue bags up the hill to begin trying to identify pieces of bodies.

The Rev. Alden Hathaway knows no one can answer some of the questions the witnesses will ask.

"They'll say why, and I'll tell them I can't answer that," Hathaway said. "It's very traumatizing and a very terrible thing to see — the remains of a human being in a pile with no way to identify him except for a belt and a piece of clothing."

A team of counselors was sent by helicopter to offer a hand, or a shoulder, to the cup whose hands were shaking too hard to drink his coffee, to the ambulance driver who had no lives to save.

"I've been involved in shootings, stabbings. I was involved in Hurricane Andrew, so to see a body in a tree, whether an airplane put it there or a hurricane, it's unreal," said Rich Boland, a medic with the eight-member stress team from the University of Pittsburgh.

Bush, Rodham turn on heat in Florida

MIAMI (AP) — A day after nearly winning the GOP primary outright, Jeb Bush virtually ignored his Oct. 4 runoff rival Friday and set his sights on Democratic Gov. Lawton Chiles.

Florida's other famous political relative, first brother-in-law Hugh Rodham, also looked toward November after fumbling a runoff spot, and went gunning for popular Republican Sen. Connie Mack.

Bush, the 41-year-old son of former President Bush, came within 4 percentage points of avoiding a runoff in Thursday's primary. He got 46 percent of the vote in a seven-way race. In the runoff, Bush will face second-place finisher Secretary of State Jim Smith, who won 18 percent.

In the four-way Democratic Senate primary, Rodham, brother of first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, got 34 percent. In the Oct. 4 runoff he will face former Orlando talk show host Mike Wiley, who won 24 percent of the primary vote.

Bush, a Miami developer, wasted no time in attacking Chiles, charging that the governor — who's never lost an election in 35 years — has lost touch with the people, mismanaged state government and taken advantage of the Cuban refugee crisis.

On the Democratic side, Chiles received 72 percent of the vote to 28 percent for anti-government activist Jack Gargan. A protest vote that could signal trouble for Chiles in November.

Chiles said Friday he would expect a race against Bush, who ran a get-tough, law-and-order campaign, to be a "jihad," referring to an Islamic holy war.

In the U.S. Senate race, Rodham and Wiley both went after Mack, grandson of the Philadelphia Phillies legend of the same name.

In the 5th District congressional primary, drag racer "Big Daddy" Don Garlits clinched the GOP nomination and will face first-term Democratic Rep. Karen Thurman in the fall.

Garlits, who won 144 national events on drag strips across the country, said none of those victories equaled his win in his first political race.

Quakes rock Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — University of Utah seismologists reported Friday a series of minor earthquakes occurred along the eastern edge of Sanpete Valley. The largest shock, which measured 3.4 magnitude, occurred two miles southwest of Spring City.

President Clinton talks with Henry J. Lyons of St. Petersburg, Fla., president-elect of the National Baptist Convention U.S.A., Inc., at the group's annual meeting in New Orleans Friday.

Clinton preaches family values

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Giving no ground in the political tug-of-war over family values, President Clinton said Friday, "it is simply not right" for Americans to have so many babies out of wedlock or for parents to neglect their children.

"I know not everybody's going to be in a stable, traditional family like you see on one of those 1950 sitcoms, but we'd better offer more people were," the president said in a speech to the nation's largest black church group.

Clinton also decried violence among America's young people. "We've got to keep them from being shot and kept them from shooting," the president said.

He made his remarks before the National Baptist Convention U.S.A., Inc., one day after former Vice President

Dan Quayle, speaking in San Francisco, renewed his attack on a "poverty of values" in America.

Quayle ignited a national debate on family values and became the target of political ridicule — two years ago when he bemoaned the dissolution of the family structure in America and criticized the lead character in the television series "Murphy Brown."

However, the family-values theme subsequently has become a popular issue as the nation gropes for a remedy to urban violence and other woes. Quayle is considered a potential Clinton challenger in 1996. In an arm-waving, scripture-quoting address, he said about 40 percent of all U.S. children are born into homes without a marriage and 27 percent of all pregnancies end in abortion.

"Now, I don't care what your position is, whether you're pro-choice or anti, that's too many," said Clinton, who has liberalized abortion rules since taking office.

Clinton got a warm reception. "The National Baptist Convention is Clinton territory," proclaimed its leader, Rev. T. J. Jackson.

However, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, whom the president praised for helping ensure fairness in the elections in South Africa, expressed disappointment.

"One would expect him to come here and speak of economic stimulus and jobs and economic development," Jackson said afterward.

"Instead we're getting moral lessons on how to live. They are good moral lessons, but we must fight welfare and crime with jobs and economic development."

Zeroing in on the family, Clinton said the nation has "to be more honest with our young people in teaching them to respect themselves: their bodies, their souls and their future."

"And we always talk about how irresponsible it is for young men to father these children and run off, but we've got to get more young women to make a different choice in life," he said.

Clinton said 30 years ago, one of 40 white births was out of wedlock. Now, it is one in five. Thirty years ago, one in five black births was out of wedlock; now, it's over half.

"But the white out-of-wedlock birth rate is growing much faster than the African-American rate," he said. "So we're going to have equal opportunity for all before you know it."

The audience laughed, but Clinton stopped them, saying, "You're laughing to keep from crying, but it's not funny, is it? We're going to see a merger of this. No more race discrimination, more than half of everybody's babies being born where there was never a marriage."

"That is a disaster. It is wrong. And someone has to say again it is simply not right. You shouldn't have a baby before you're ready, and you shouldn't have a baby when you're not married. You just have to stop it. We've got to turn it around."

Clinton said parents have an obligation to care for their children, discipline them and tell them, "This is right and this is wrong."

Reclusive leader ready to take control

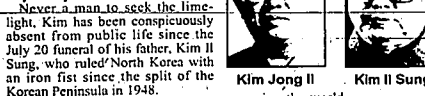

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The "Dear Leader" Kim Jong-il appears just a step away from proclaiming himself president as North Korea celebrated its 46th anniversary Friday.

Never a man to seek the limelight, Kim has been conspicuously absent from public life since the July 20 funeral of his father, Kim Il Sung, who ruled North Korea with an iron fist since the split of the Korean Peninsula in 1948.

On Thursday, the two-month anniversary of Kim Il Sung's death, Kim Jong-il was again conspicuously absent from a wreath-laying ceremony at the massive statue of the late "Great Leader" in Pyongyang.

Instead, he had a wreath delivered, the North's Korean Central News Agency reported, his inheritance of power from his father, and his holding court over a communist aristocracy, add a twist to Korea's ancient nickname of "The Hermit Kingdom."

In the last week North Korean diplomats and media have plunged into a campaign to fend off rumors that swirled through Asia by including Kim's half-brother, Kim Pyong Il, the ambassador to Finland — have been saying that Kim is waiting until a 100-day mourning period ends Oct. 16 before formally taking the post.

South Korean officials now accept that view, and say Kim already appears to be exercising the functions of the presidency.

On Monday, Kim exchanged greetings with the presidents of Mali and Sudan, Radio Pyongyang announced.

"The fact that Kim Jong Il exchanged greetings... with foreign heads of state and that it was reported by the official media suggest that Kim Jong Il is virtually carrying out the duties of head of state," said Reuters Press, South Korea's service that monitors and analyzes the North.

The day before, the radio said, Cambodia's King Norodom Sihanouk addressed Kim as "supreme leader" in a telegram observing the 46th anniversary of North Korea's founding, which was celebrated Friday.

The title of "supreme leader" had formerly been reserved for Kim Il

Middle-class tax cut unlikely

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration, which was considering resurrecting its promise of a middle-class tax cut, sent out strong signals Friday, it will not do so, at least not in time for this fall's elections.

Robert Rubin, director of the president's National Economic Council, said any decision on a middle-class tax cut would be made as part of the administration's budget process and therefore would not occur for a number of months.

Presidential Press Secretary Dee Myers also sought to dampen speculation about such a tax cut proposal, telling reporters aboard Air Force One that "there are no specific plans at this point. I don't expect any this year."

Noting that President Clinton is elected for a four-year term, Myers said, "The president has always said that he would be interested in a middle-class tax cut if economic conditions were right."

The advisers saw the idea as a way to regain the issues that worked for Clinton in 1992, halt a troubling slide in the polls and boost Democratic chances in the November congressional elections.

But Rubin said political considerations would not push the administration to hastily decide on any tax cut proposal.

"The president goes about this budget process in an extraordinarily serious way," Rubin said on CNBC. "I do not know where we will come out, but the one thing that I am highly confident of is that we will make serious, thoughtful, responsible decisions on what is best for the economy."

Rubin said the administration was just beginning the process of putting together its budget proposal, which must be submitted to Congress by early February.

He refused to even describe a tax cut as being "on the table," saying that with the budget process just starting it would take the administration, "a period of quite some number of months" to come to final decisions.

Some Democrats in Congress had been pushing the administration to serve the House of Representatives a package of tax cut, Republican congressional leaders have said they will unveil Sept. 27.

The Republican package, which will be endorsed by GOP candidates later this month, reportedly will include a $500-a-child tax credit. During the 1992 campaign, Clinton supported tax benefits worth about $300 a year per child, which would have cost as much as $15 billion a year.

Counsel appointed to investigate Espy

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal court panel Friday appointed a three-member panel to investigate whether Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy violated federal law by accepting travel, lodging and sports tickets from companies doing business with the department.

Donald C. Smaltz was named one month after Attorney General Janet Reno requested an independent counsel under the investigation.

Smaltz will determine whether Espy violated any federal criminal laws "relating in any way to the acceptance of gifts by him from organizations or individuals with business interests pending before the Department of Agriculture," according to the order appointing him.

It is the second time the three-judge panel has appointed a counsel since the Independent Counsel statute was reauthorized June 30.

Smaltz, 57, is a partner in the Los Angeles firm of Smaltz and Anderson. A federal prosecutor in the 1960s in Southern California, he has written widely on criminal procedure and government investigations of racketeering and white-collar crime.

The Martindale-Hubbell Law Directory says Smaltz now specializes in complex business litigation.

Espy had been investigated by his parent's Office of Inspector General and by the Justice Department for travel and lodging he received in May 1993 from Tyson Foods, Inc., the Arkansas-based poultry giant, which has close ties to President Clinton and his wife, Hillary Rodham Clinton.

The investigation also included sporting tickets he received from Tyson and Chicago-based Quaker Oats.

Boys endure tragic hike

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Frank Bruce and his sons had ventured into the woods for day hikes before, but nothing in the youngsters' backwoods experience prepared them for the moment their father dropped dead on a rugged mountain miles from civilization.

Unable to read their map — and having no compass — the boys stumbled five miles over rocky slopes and across meadows, relying on landmarks and their sense of direction to find their way back to cottages they had seen when they hiked in two days before.

They found help there, then led the boys back to their father's body in a clearing.

"We really didn't know where we were going," 12-year-old Jesse

Bruce said. "Our dad led us in, and we didn't have any emergency plan for the trip."

After their father died of a heart attack while hiking up a steep hill, Jesse and Isaac, 13, were forced to spend a night alone in the high mountain country before hiking out.

The Labor Day weekend excursion was the first time the boys' father had ever gone on an overnight backpacking trip.

"I can't imagine having been in their place," Sandra Leigh Thomas, the boys' mother, said Thursday. "They acted so responsibly. There's nothing they could have done any better than what they did."

"I was extremely impressed," said Raymond Gada, who met the boys and called for help.

Retired U.S. Adm. Elmo Zumwalt Jr. receives a warm welcome upon his arrival in Hanoi Friday. Zumwalt, who ordered the spraying of Agent Orange, hopes to complete an agreement with the Vietnamese to support joint research on the defoliant.

Admiral returns to the roots of war

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — Retired Adm. Elmo Zumwalt Jr. carries the tragic burden that he may have been the agent of his own son's death.

Zumwalt returned to Vietnam Friday for the first time in 23 years in memory of that son, whose death the admiral blames on Agent Orange, the defoliant he ordered sprayed during the war.

His mission during his week-long visit, he said, is to complete an agreement with the Vietnamese to support joint research on Agent Orange and to "bind up the wounds of war."

"The work I'm doing in the case of Agent Orange and as chairman of the National Mariner Donor Program are both my way of memorializing my son rather than trying to do it with bricks and mortar," he said.

For Zumwalt, it was a strange feeling to be in the territory of his former battlefield foes.

"As commander of U.S. naval forces in Vietnam from 1968 until 1970 and then as chief of naval operations until his retirement in 1974, he had seen the Communist North Vietnamese terrain through satellite photographs many times.

"But to be able to come in and meet with people who were adversaries for so long on policy issues of mutual interest is really an exciting experience," he said.

"It feels nostalgic. It's good to be back. I have for many years wanted to come to discuss important policy issues with the government of Vietnam."

Zumwalt said the Vietnamese had invited him several times in the past but the U.S. State Department recommended he wait until the trade embargo was lifted against Hanoi. That happened Feb. 3.

The Vietnamese gave him a red-carpet reception that included scheduled meetings with President Le Duc Anh and with a legendary old battlefield foe, Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap, now 83. Giap held off a half-million U.S. troops and led Communist North Vietnam to a victory over the U.S.-backed South.

At Hanoi's Noi Bai International Airport, Zumwalt was warmly embraced by one of his hosts, Le Cao Dai, a former North Vietnamese Army surgeon and now secretary-general of a national committee investigating the effects of Agent Orange.

Vietnamese women in traditional dress handed Zumwalt a bouquet of roses.

Zumwalt, 73, of Arlington, Va., was accompanied by another son, James, also a Vietnam veteran, and a leading U.S. expert on Agent Orange, Dr. Arnold Schecter.

Zumwalt's eldest son, Elmo Zumwalt III, served in Vietnam from June 1969 until August 1970 as a lieutenant junior grade commanding a patrol boat in the Mekong Delta.

He died of cancer in August 1984 at age 42. Agent Orange also was believed to have caused severe learning disabilities in his own son, Russell, now 16.

Casino question will go to voters in Florida

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Limited casino gambling would be allowed in Florida under a proposed constitutional amendment approved today for the November ballot by the state Supreme Court.

Backers had collected about 430,000 signatures to get the proposed amendment on the ballot. The high court reviewed the amendment for scope and clarity.

A total of 47 casinos could be opened. Existing horse tracks, dog tracks and jai-lai frontons would be able to open casinos.

In addition, seven counties would be allowed one casino each. Broward County would be allowed two, and Dade County would be allowed three, including two in Miami Beach.

Also, five riverboat casinos also would be allowed in counties without a standing casino.

Program overlooks concerns

CAIRO (AP) — Russian legislator Alexandra Ochirova was looking for guidance on establishing a national population program.

Le Thi Quy wanted ideas on reducing Vietnam's birth rate. Kedibone Gumbi of South Africa hoped for a discussion on empowering women and easing poverty.

All these issues got short shrift at the U.N. population conference because abortion has dominated the debate on and off the floor, leaving the three women feeling cheated.

In fact, it's hard to find a paragraph in a 113-page document has preoccupied 15,000 people for five days.

"The African Women's Caucus is enraged that so much publicity and so much time has been spent on this abortion issue that is not a priority for we African women," said Adelle Sock of Gambia, an art teacher who runs a women's finance association.

"We would like more attention put on what women can do to develop themselves," she said. "We're looking at eliminating illiteracy and educating our daughters and our sisters."

Ochirova, who wants family planning available throughout Russia, says the conference should focus on development, women's health, women's rights "and most important the problem of free choice."

"It's also very important that every country has a national program — and also very important to have some guidance on the international level on how to organize from the beginning, from zero," said Ochirova, a member of the Russian parliament.

Abortion is not a problem in Vietnam, where it is legal, said Quy of the Center for Family and Women's Studies. She said her country's concerns — population growth, women marrying at 16 or 17, and educating rural girls — were barely touched on at the conference.

Hanoi, with a population of 2.1 million, had 44,000 deliveries and 70,000 abortions in 1993, said Dr. Khong Ngoc Am, director of a family planning center in the city. "Now we want to reduce the birth rate and number of abortions and increase the use of contraceptives."

For Gumbi, a member of the African-National-Congress Women's League, it is important to look at the issue of "unsafe abortion" in Africa.

"The main concern of Africa is more on development and population — not population and development," she said.

Dr. Birgul Piyal, a public health physician who works with women in the slums of Ankara, Turkey, said "it's nonsense to talk about abortion more and more."

"We should focus on women's status especially. When women are not only educated, but when they have a good role in society ... they can find access, information, everything about family planning methods. They have other things to do than child rearing," she said.

Khadija Ali works with a volunteer agency in Somalia.

"I find myself in a situation where people are talking about abortion and family planning when in Somalia people don't even get to tonight — and that takes me back to the question of development," she said.

"If women had been empowered in Somalia — socially, economically, and politically — to decide the future of their children, we would not have had this civil war," she said.

Russian jet crash-kills 4

MOSCOW (AP) — A Russian passenger jet on a practice flight collided with a military plane and crashed near Moscow Friday, a news agency reported.

At least four of the eight people aboard were killed.

The military plane, a Tu-22 strategic bomber, landed safely shortly after the accident, with pieces of the passenger jet still stuck to its body, ITAR-Tass said.

The twin-engine Tu-134 went down northeast of the town of Yegoryevsky in the Moscow region, said Yekaterina Ageyeva, a spokeswoman for the Ministry for Emergency Situations.

Both planes were being operated by the Gromov aviation testing center, Ageyeva said.

The Tu-134 went into production in the Soviet Union in 1968 and continued to be built until the late 1980s.

Fred Meyer Inc. buys Blue Lakes Mall

TWIN FALLS — Fred Meyer Inc. has finally bought the Blue Lakes Mall, but don't expect to see a big new store on the site until at least 1996.

"We're a long ways from seeing a store there," Fred Meyer spokesman Rob Boley said Friday night. "We're setting our schedule really depends a lot on the relocation plans of the tenants that are there." The company won't see a demolition and construction timetable until the tenants have made their relocation plans, Boley said. Moreover, the company has already set its 1995 construction schedule, and the Twin Falls store isn't on it. The Portland-based retail and grocery chain plans to build five of its massive stores each year.

Three tenants on the mall property won't be moving: Treasure Cove, Sizzler and Mc-n-Ed's, Boley said.

Boley declined to reveal the purchase price of the property. Its previous owner was Equitable Real Estate.

Warrant issued for Kimberly man after he missed hearing

TWIN FALLS — A $10,000 warrant was issued for a Kimberly man charged with vehicular manslaughter who failed to show up for his preliminary hearing in district court Friday.

Juan Fernando Nino-Rivera, 28, was charged with vehicular manslaughter following a February accident which caused the death of his wife, Tommie Nino, 41.

Nino-Rivera was driving a pick-up on Rock Creek Road south of Hansen when he went off the road, overcorrected and rolled the vehicle. Nino was ejected and pinned under the truck.

Court documents say Nino-Rivera's blood-alcohol level was .249 percent after the accident; the legal limit for drivers is .1 percent.

Jackpot crash investigators to release results next week

JACKPOT — Federal investigators are finishing their study of a fatal single-engine airplane accident early Sept. 3 and should announce the probable cause of the crash next week, said Aviation Safety Inspector Walter Gerber of the Federal Aviation Administration's Reno office.

Pilot Evan Ewalt, 47, of Boise was killed in the accident three miles south of Jackpot. His two Boise passengers, 21-year-old Tyler Jabonski and his mother, Laura, 40, were in fair condition Friday at St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, Boise.

Elko County Sheriff Neil Harris said this was the third Jackpot airport-related accident this year, and there have been several in the past.

Most of the accidents are due to pilot error, Harris said. When pilots go south down the airstrip then turn around for takeoff, they don't realize the south end of the strip is at a lower elevation, he said.

Harris said the Jabonskis reported they heard a pop and then an explosive from Ewalt before the crash.

Valley School District will begin its classes Sept. 19

HAZELTON — Kids in Valley School District will begin school Sept. 19, says Superintendent Arlyn Bodily.

School officials had hoped to open the doors of the new Valley School on Monday, but Bodily said the building will not be ready as planned, giving students one more week of summer vacation.

The new building, which will house kindergarten through 12th-grade students, replaces Valley High School, and the old Eden and Hazelton Grade Schools.

Judicial system's treatment of children is target of protest

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls woman is organizing another protest of the way the Department of Health and Welfare and the judicial system treats children and their families.

Evvy Brink said the group will start its second protest at 9 a.m. Thursday at City Park. The protest then will move to the Department of Health and Welfare at 1:30 p.m.

Anyone who wants to join the protest may call Brink at 753-5434.

Lawyers spar over city's role in regional E911

By Sean L. McCarthy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The city of Twin Falls cannot withdraw from a four-county project to enhance and consolidate their 911 communications, says the project's lawyer.

The city's lawyer says the city not only can pull out of the regional E911 project, but also is entitled to the revenues generated by a $1 fee imposed on city residents' phone bills each month.

E911 attorney Leon Smith and City Attorney Fritz Wondelich argued their cases in separate memos Friday. In its Monday meeting, the Twin Falls City Council will attempt to decide which lawyer it should believe.

The dueling memos are the latest dispatches in the haggling over the regional E911 project.

Last month, the council fired off a 12-point list of demands that the E911 board has to meet by Sept. 23 to keep the city involved in the estimated $4.6 million project.

Smith's memo, received by the city Friday, represented the E911 board's official response to these demands. Smith indicated that the board could agree to 10 of the 12 points.

But the commissioners of Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln and Twin Falls counties will not ask for a court to approve their multi-year leasing plan to finance the construction and operation of the regional dispatch center, Smith wrote.

Neither will they consent to adding more board members from Twin Falls city and county to give Twin Falls majority voting rights, he wrote.

Smith's and the E911 board's response went one step further, however, to question whether the city could exclude itself from the regional project and operate its own E911 system.

Smith argues that the city cannot "opt out" because the E911 system was approved in a countywide election. The county commissioners also have jurisdiction over the funds authorized in that election to pay for the system, he wrote.

"It is my opinion that if the city attempted to opt out, the county could hand them in and would be successful against any writ of mandamus sought by the city to obtain monies from the E911 fund," he wrote.

The city would be forced to sue the county if it wants the money collected each month from the $1 phone line fee, he wrote.

Wondelich disagrees, arguing that the premise of Smith's opinion is flawed because Twin Falls city already was providing basic 911 service when county residents voted for E911 in November 1990.

Therefore, the city does not qualify as a

Business officials explore balancing Magic, Wood River valleys' trade

KETCHUM — In a showy display, Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce Executive Vice President Kent Just took off one of his cowboy boots in front of the Sun Valley-Ketchum Chamber board of directors.

Just admitted he had been embarrassed last year when he plunked down $300 for boots and accessories at Ketchum's Silverado Western Wear rather than buying them from Twin Falls merchants.

But in the fast-paced evolution of the Magic Valley and Wood River Valley economies, shopping at either place can now be considered "local."

"We know you're coming to Costco to spend money, and you're spending money in the mall and downtown and everywhere," Just said. "We'll be tickled to death to come back up here and spend those dollars again."

Pumpers defend their water rights

By William Brock
Times-News writer

RUPERT — With the state warning that some irrigators may be required to curtail groundwater pumping next year, some independent pumpers are banding together to defend their interests.

Specifically, they are threatened by a falling water table and a demand for water by the A&B Irrigation District. State water officials could order thousands of irrigators to stop pumping if A&B's 40-year-old groundwater right goes unfilled.

More than 100 pumpers have shown an interest in the newly formed Magic Valley Underground Pumpers organization, said Mack Neibaur, one of the group's organizers and a former state representative from Rupert.

"Looking down the road, the only salvation we've got is to get together and recharge the aquifer — which is our first preference or cut back on the acreage we're irrigating," Neibaur said in a telephone interview.

"People have money invested in farms from here to Astoria and we're just trying to see that they stay in business," he said. "I feel an obligation to help."

In addition to adding water to the underground aquifer, the group is contemplating a challenge to A&B's claimed right for 1,100 cubic feet of water per second; one cfs equals 449 gallons per minute.

About 100 of A&B's 177 wells came on line around 1955 — hence they don't deserve a 1948 priority date. Neibaur claims. Under Idaho law, holders of older rights must get water before those with newer rights.

The Idaho Department of Water Resources feels A&B's claim for a Sept. 9, 1948, water right is valid, said spokesman Dick Larsen. Water Resources has forwarded A&B's claim to the Snake River Basin Adjudication court in Twin Falls — where it can still be challenged.

If A&B is challenged in court, Manager Virgil Temple vowed he'll take a hard look at how much water the challengers are pumping — and how much they're entitled to pump.

"There's a lot of people over pumping out there," he said, "and once we take care

Back country residents bail out as fire approaches Sawtooths

The Associated Press

GRAHAM GUARD STATION — Firefighters dropped ball 11 miles in the Sawtooth Wilderness, Friday as they struggled to dig an indirect fire line in front of a blaze that was burning toward the Sawtooth Mountains.

The line was to run between High Pass and Jacobee Mountain in extreme northeast Elmore County in front of the charging 125,000-acre Rabbit Creek fire.

Fire bosses also had little hope of reining in the rapidly spreading wildfire, which that

"I've had this cabin 34 years, and I'm not going to lose it now. I'm going to be right here as long as possible."

— Glen Marler, homeowner in Grandjean about 50 miles southwest, and have owned their vacation homes for decades, banking on firefighters and luck to keep the flames at bay.

"It's not just a building burning down, it's a way of life," a fearful Nelda Drake of Boise said. Her family has had a cabin at Grandjean for 26 years. "It just makes me sick."

And some, like Marler, 68, remained defiant in the face of the fire that was blowing embers far ahead of him.

"I've had this cabin 34 years, and I'm not going to lose it now," the owner of a Boise electronics repair store said. "I'm going to be right here as long as possible."

To the north in the Payette National Forest, crews remained confident their lines around the old mining town of Warren would hold against the raging 82,000-acre Chicken Complex that jumped fire lines a day earlier to race within three miles of the back-country community.

That blaze — along with the 91,200-acre Corral Creek Fire and the $1,100-acre Blackwell Complex, all north and east of the resort community of McCall — were expected to burn until snow finally blankets the more than 1,000 square miles in that area south of the main Salmon River.

Manpower and equipment remained at a premium. Statewide, over 5,000 firefighters were still battling nine major blazes burning on more than 400,000 acres. And another 7,000 were on the lines of 11 other fires burning in California, Montana, Oregon and Utah.

More than 2 million acres of western timber and range have burned in the past two months.

Undercover drug bust nabs 2; more may be on the way

By Julie M. McKinnon
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Two men were charged Friday night with three felony drug counts after police officers set up an undercover cocaine buy at Kmart, said Don Walden, director of the Tri-County Drug Task Force.

And more arrests from people in the same drug ring may be coming, Walden said.

Walden said one of the men arrested Friday, Nazario Bastida of Buhl, recently got out of prison after serving a sentence on a drug trafficking charge. Bastida, who's in his late 20s, was arrested on the charge two years ago in Buhl, Walden said.

The other man had not been identified early Friday night.

Officers got two ounces and an eighth-ounce of cocaine from the men Friday after a chase of a few blocks, he said. Cocaine is worth about $100 a gram on the streets of the Magic Valley.

Both men were charged with trafficking cocaine, delivering cocaine and failure to affix an Idaho drug tax stamp, Walden said. Both were taken to the Twin Falls County Jail and probably will be arraigned Monday, he said.

When Bastida and the other man went to meet the undercover police officer at about 7 p.m. Friday to sell an ounce of cocaine, they drove away from the meeting place, Walden said. They threw an ounce of cocaine out their car window, he said.

Police stopped the men at Sherry Drive and Sherry Lane and found an ounce of cocaine in the car's trunk, Walden said. An eighth-ounce of cocaine — commonly called an "eight ball" — was found in Bastida's pocket, he added.

The drug task force was assisted by Twin Falls Police.

School officials defend proposed school site

By Michael Hoffert
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — Skeptics questioned the School Board's choice of a site for a new school building, 12 during a public meeting on next week's school bond election.

The Shoshone School District is asking voters to approve a $3 million bond issue to build a combined kindergarten through grade 12 facility on an undeveloped 30-acre site at the south end of Apple Street near the Sawtooth Foodtown supermarket.

"Do you know how much rock is there? Do you know how much it's going to cost?" asked one critic of the proposed site.

Gale Roberts, a member of the planning committee that helped choose the site, admitted that exploratory drilling of the site had not been done and that no firm estimate of the cost of site work was available.

"The $3 million bond issue would include $300,000 that could be used for site work if necessary, he pointed out.

"We're well aware that there's rock out there and that some site work will have to be done," Superintendent Max Excell said.

The planning committee looked at 13 sites in and near Shoshone and selected the south Apple Street location because it was safe, accessible for children walking to school, and big enough to build on, Excell explained.

Election Tuesday
The Shoshone School District bond election will be from noon to 8 p.m. Tuesday at Lincoln Elementary School.

The district's deteriorating school buildings are located on sites that are too small to rebuild on, according to state education requirements. Lincoln Elementary is situated on a three-acre site, whereas the state requires 10 acres for new elementary school.

Repairing the existing facilities and bringing them as near to code as possible would be as costly as building the new school, according to an architectural engineering study commissioned by the school district.

"After looking for on your community, now's the time to do this," said Jim Wrigley of First Security Bank, the school district's financial advisor.

Construction costs are increasing at an accelerating rate and interest rates are probably not going to be any lower in the near future, Wrigley pointed out.

The school district's $3 million bond issue is 5 percent of the approximately $60 million market value of property within the district, the maximum debt allowed by law.

It will be repaid over a 20-year period and cost property owners

$4.22 per $1,000 of taxable market value.

A $50,000 home in the district would pay a taxable market value of $27,500 after the homeowners exemption would be assessed $116.24 per year to pay back the bonds.

The sale of the existing school buildings and property in Shoshone could be used to help pay off the bonds, Wrigley pointed out.

Federal grants could also be used to help pay for the new school building, but they require matching money from a successful bond issue, Excell noted.

The school bond election will take place from noon to 8 p.m. Tuesday at Lincoln Elementary School.

Blaine County passes budget

By Barbara Newert
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Blaine County commissioners approved spending slightly over $9 million to run the county next year.

The $9,063,538-budget represents a 9.4 percent increase over last year, but will not raise taxes by only 5.4 percent. The balance will be generated through county fees and grants.

After three months of public negotiations, the county commissioners approved the budget Tuesday during a public hearing of any public.

County administrative assistant Pam Smith said the lack of public comment was taken as a sign of confidence in the commissioners' willingness to keep expenditures in check.

Commissioner Leonard Hartig lobbied for an additional budget reduction of $100,000 throughout the capital expense fund, the contingency fund, and a project for road improvements on Gannett Road.

Commissioners Tom Blanchard and Rupert House favored keeping the funds available to meet county needs.

The budget includes two new staff positions.

The sheriff's department will be adding a new clerical position and a full-time position will be added to the building inspector's office.

Dramatic cost savings have resulted from the county's effort to recycle trash and in trying to comply with federal guidelines for garbage disposal.

During fiscal year 1992, $128,000 was allocated to the Solid Waste account. This year that amount has grown to $137,000.

A reduction in the capital expense account for improvements at the county courthouse went from $175,000 to $100,000 and the indigent fund saw a reduction of nearly $7,000.

The budget includes $150,000 for capital land purchases and a jail study, and maintains $185,000 in the contingency fund.

Commissioners will set the levy rate at 11 a.m. Monday. The mill levy will be based on a total assessment of $2.553 billion for Blaine County properties.

Court urged to void damages award

POCATELLO (AP) — The city of Pocatello shouldn't have to pay a jury award of more than $200,000 for damages caused by a motorist's mistake, the Idaho Supreme Court has been urged.

The court heard an appeal Thursday from a judgment in a failure-to-yield traffic accident lawsuit. The court ruled the case under adverse selection and will issue a ruling later.

Pocatello resident George Lawton filed a lawsuit after his motorcycle was struck by another vehicle.

population show dramatic changes have taken place over the past five years, including growth in population, housing prices, education levels and disposable income.

To help tap that market, Sun Valley-Ketchum Chamber Executive Director Wendy Jaquet said the chamber is exploring options including hosting a Hunting Extravaganza in the autumn "shoulder" season, which would include dog trials and gun exhibitions.

KMYT General Manager Lee Wagner said times are changing quickly and people must accept that fact.

Notions about what type of folks live in Twin Falls and what type live in Sun Valley have dissolved over the years with newcomers, and those who are no longer valid in today's marketplace.

Wagner said news coverage of the Wood River Valley will likely increase because of the growth in Blaine County and the challenges that accompany growth.

"Wood River Valley and the issues you deal with up here are really bellwether kinds of issues of what we're starting to see in our community and what we are going to be facing more and more," Wagner said.

Local chambers hope that closer ties can make the 75 miles that separate the resort community from the retailing hub to seem a lot shorter.

had a chance to read either Smith's or Wonderlich's memo "in its entirety" and could not comment yet on what response the city might have.

Courtney said he also hadn't the opportunity to discuss the two memos with the City Council yet.

"That's an issue we're going to deal with on Monday with the council," Courtney said. "We're going to be dealing with legal principles now."

In 1955, he joined the Insurance Center in Burley with Joe Olenasger and had been a Certified Life Underwriter since 1958.

He had served as chairman of the Red Cross to military families for 15 years. He was a member of the Toastmasters Club and a member of the Elks Lodge since 1950. An active member of the Burley Rotary Club, Jack had served as secretary for 16 years and was also a past president. He enjoyed boating, golfing, fishing and skiing.

Survivors include his wife, Marian of Burley; a daughter, Ann Brown of Burley; a son, John F. Snow of Benion, Utah; a brother, Peter G. Snow of Burley; a sister, Mary Hatch of Mercer Island, Wash.; and 13 grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his parents and a daughter, Susan.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Monday, Sept. 12, 1994, at the Burley LDS 2nd Ward Chapel, 16th and Aldi, with Bishop Edward Evans officiating. Burial will follow at the Pleasant View Cemetery in Burley. Friends may call from 5 to 8 p.m. Sunday at the Payne Mortuary, 221 W. Main St. in Burley and from 10 to 10:45 a.m. on Monday at the church.

The family suggests that those who wish may make memorials to the LDS Missionary Fund or the Idaho Youth Ranch.

Idahoans: Gas prices too high

The Associated Press

BOISE — Idaho residents are paying a lot more for gasoline and some of them are unhappy about it.

The Consumer Protection Division of the attorney general's office said it's received seven written complaints this summer and scores of telephone calls about gasoline prices.

But an official said there's little that can be done.

"What I think is important that people understand is ... high gas prices are not unlawful unless someone can prove price-fixing," said Deputy Attorney General Brett DeLange, who heads the consumer protection unit.

Idaho's last action on gasoline prices came under former Attorney General Jim Jones. Besides some informal pressure on dealers to lower prices, Jones filed a complaint against dealers in the Pocatello area after a federal prosecution for price-fixing. It resulted in a $140,000 payment to the state, Jones said.

of them, this problem will probably wash out."

In the future, all wells should be monitored to record how much water is being used, Temple said.

Neibaur, top is concerned about the future — but he isn't ignoring the past.

For more than 30 years, he thought many of the A&B wells had been given a 1955 priority, but discovered recently that they hadn't.

"There was an injustice done back then," Neibaur said. "And we think there's such a thing as fairness."

He cited a 1964 letter from the state attorney general to the director of the Idaho Department of Water Resources, urging cancellation of A&B's groundwater permit. The gist of the opinion held that many new wells came on line before the A&B wells — and revoking A&B's permit would "place all users in this area on an equal footing."

A&B's attorney, Roger Ling of Rupert, isn't impressed by Neibaur's claim.

"An attorney general opinion has no greater basis in law than any other opinion," Ling said, "and they are certainly not binding upon a court."

"This has already been contested, early on, before the license was issued," he added. "Notice was given, and I don't believe they have the right to contest it now."

The administrative license issued by Water Resources — which assigned a 1948 priority date to all of

A&B's wells — was not protected, Larsen confirmed.

Neibaur's own water rights, which total 14.48 cfs, date from March 11, 1948; thus, his water rights are a few months older than A&B's. Though his own water deliveries have diminished, Neibaur said he has no intent to shut A&B down by making a call for water.

The bulk of the Magic Valley Underground Pumpers' efforts will go toward refilling the Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer, Neibaur said. The group hopes to send more spring runoff back into the ground and, if that's not enough, to buy water from willing sellers.

The federal Bureau of Reclamation is also looking for water to buy in the middle and upper Snake River basin. By banding together, individual pumpers hope to muster enough political clout to bargain with the bureau, Neibaur said.

Hydrologists say it could take decades before aquifer recharge yields any measurable improvement for pumpers — many of whom rely on wells more than 200 feet deep.

Neibaur insisted that aquifer recharge — if done on a large enough scale — can yield results almost immediately.

"We don't always believe the hydrologists," he said. "We're just as knowledgeable as the water hydrologists. They don't understand it. Nobody understands it."

Lake Pend Oreille sounds good to Navy's ears

BAYVIEW (AP) — Times have changed at the once totally top-secret submarine research facility here.

The Cold War is over. And military budget cuts may be on the minds of Congress, but there is an air of confidence about the future of the Navy's only northern Idaho installation.

"There's more uncertainty in the Department of Defense than usual, but less for us than for others," said George Guedel, the top civilian at the Navy's Acoustic Resource Detachment in Bayview.

Lt. Cmdr. Frederick Schulz, the commanding officer at the ARD, agreed.

"Unless the Navy wants to walk away from developing quieter submarines, we're not liable to walk away from Lake Pend Oreille," he said.

It is considered the best environment in the world for underwater acoustic testing.

The 43-mile long lake reaches depths approaching 1,200 feet. Below 300 feet, the water remains at a constant year-round temperature of 39.5 degrees, which promotes stable sound characteristics all the way to the lake bed.

The background noise pattern resembles the ocean, only quieter.

"We're here because of the lake," Guedel said. "There's only one Lake Pend Oreille."

The place where secret breakthroughs in submarine silencing are tested on quarter and fifth-scale models of new submarine designs.

The models are so large that test results can be applied to full-scale designs.

They are much less expensive to modify and test, because, from a three-dimensional perspective, they only take up 1/64th of the volume of full-scale submarines.

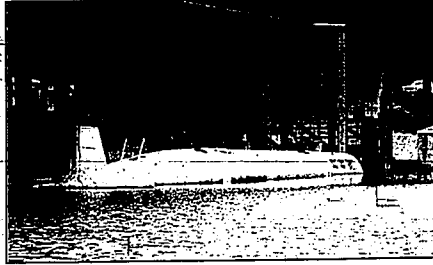

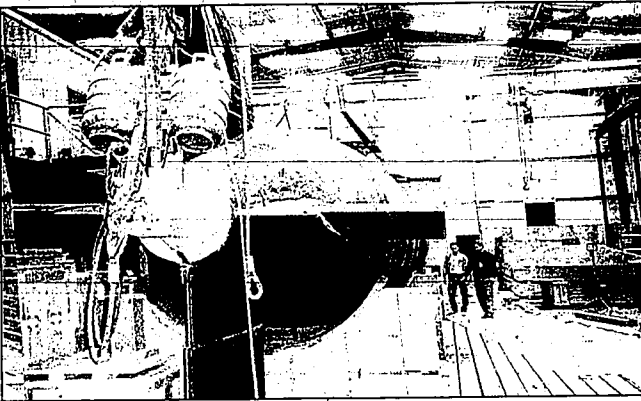

"Our main purpose is make submarines quieter, but one of our objectives is to keep costs down," Guedel said.

He said the Navy is able to stretch that savings by modifying the models to test for successive generations of submarines.

The ARD recently celebrated the 25th anniversary of the 66-foot LSV-Kamloops.

"It came here as a three-year test model and we're still using it today," Guedel said.

Each generation of submarines

employs technological advances first tested in Lake Pend Oreille. Today, a fully operational nuclear submarine emits less noise than a person speaking in a raised voice.

One major innovation tested at Bayview is the reinforced plastic sonar dome, a dish shaped sonar cover antenna built into the bow of submarines.

The dome helps improve detection of other vessels.

"You want to detect the adver-

— George Guedel of the Navy's Acoustic Resource Detachment

sary, but remain invisible," Guedel said. "If they can tell where you are, there's no point in being underwater."

The shape of the dome has been perfected. "It's not going to get any better, so we're not focusing on research there now," Guedel said.

Exciting innovations are now occurring at the other end of the submarine.

During development of the Seawolf-class sub, the ARD recently tested a radical new propeller design.

Large-model testing is nearly complete for the initial design of the Seawolf.

"We've told them how quiet it's going to be," he said. "It'll be more comfortable, when we get the data back from full-scale tests."

At about $2 billion a copy, Schulz said he's not sure if a third Seawolf will be funded.

While the Seawolf hasn't had its first voyage, the acoustic research detachment is already conducting research on the next attack submarine, tentatively called Centurion.

Schulz said new classes of submarines are significantly quieter than previous classes.

Older ships are sometimes fitted with technological advances when they are brought in for an overhaul.

He said Russia puts out more new classes of submarines with comparatively smaller technological advances than the United States.

Russia has a larger submarine fleet and is continuing to build more subs than the United States, he said.

"That's why we're still in business," Schulz said. Partly through research at Bayview, U.S. submarines remain acoustically superior to any adversary.

Guedel said some of the same natural features that make the Pend Oreille Basin a near-perfect test environment also attract some of the best researchers in the field.

"We get the best of the kind of people who like this area," he said. "We've done well in recruiting good people."

The ARD staff consists of 50 government employees. About 80 contractors are on site and about 30 non-staff researchers are involved in tests on any given day.

The ARD conducts tests daily. Except during extreme weather conditions, underwater research continues through the winter.

Guedel related a wintertime anecdote that could only happen at a Navy installation in northern Idaho.

During one extremely cold winter, the ARD had to install heat lamps to keep a hydraulic winch warm.

The lamps attracted rabbits seeking relief from the cold. The rabbits attracted a hungry mountain lion.

It wasn't long before an employee came face to face with the lion and both had a good scare.

The biggest man-caused interference in testing comes from boats.

"Recreational boats make more noise a few miles away than our subs do at less than 100 yards," Guedel said. So the Navy often conducts tests at night.

The ARD is on a portion of the former Farragut Naval Training Center.

The Navy began sonar at the station in 1945. Two decades later, the facility was playing a major role in submarine silencing.

The ARD has four underwater testing ranges in Lake Pend Oreille, including the new Intermediate Scale Measurement System, which will measure the acoustic characteristics of model designs from a 360-degree perspective.

The ARD participates in the Bayview Chamber of Commerce and often lends resources, and equipment, including the Navy's huge crane barge.

The Navy is often called on to participate in rescues in southern Lake Pend Oreille.

When it comes to new submarine technology, Navy researchers in Bayview don't want to make noise in the neighborhood either.

A community-based study this summer determined the Navy's planned sonar testing device won't bother fish.

The fish study was commissioned by the Navy under the direction of the Bayview Community Advisory Council after citizens raised concerns that sounds emitted could affect fish.

The University of Idaho helped conduct the study.

Researchers exposed kokanee salmon to frequencies and volumes of sound expected and found the fish and their food supply was unaffected.

Hobart Jenkins, chairman of the Citizen Advisory Committee, said the group is now satisfied the Navy's finding of no significant impact is correct.

Retirement fund worth $2.7 billion

BOISE — After a $200 million gain in the last fiscal year, Idaho's public employee retirement fund is worth $2.7 billion, officials said. Gerald Rudd, board chairman for the retirement system, said the annual review of earnings by a performance measurement consultant, Mellon Bank, showed a 2.8 percent return. That puts the Public Employees Retirement System of Idaho in the top 18 percent of comparable pension funds.

Rudd said the fund's long-term strategy includes a highly diversified portfolio of U.S. and international securities, bonds and real estate. PERSI has 55,000 active members who contribute to the fund, along with employers, 11,000 inactive members and 19,200 retirees drawing retirement benefits.

2 deaths considered as murder-suicide

KAMIAH — Autopsies were planned to confirm the causes of two deaths in northern Idaho but Lewis County Sheriff Don Fortney says "at this point in time we're treating it as a murder-suicide."

"There's a very little doubt" about the circumstances surrounding the death of Deana McGraw of Clewiston and her husband, Jerry. Fortney said Jerry McGraw, 43, forced his 43-year-old wife's car off the road and shot and killed her Thursday before turning the gun on himself.

Deana McGraw filed for divorce Wednesday in Clearwater County and also obtained a restraining order against her husband, Fortney said. The order was served Thursday.

Fire rages through Boise warehouse

BOISE — Wind blew a spectacular blaze at an abandoned steel warehouse into a dangerous wildfire that moved to within 25 yards of a north-east Boise subdivision before it was contained.

Investigators would sift through the rubble Friday to determine the cause of Thursday evening's three-alarm fire, Boise Fire Chief Fern Ross said. The blaze destroyed the 50,000-square-foot Gate City Steel Corp. building. Witnesses said it started about 5:45 p.m. near a crane at the center of the aging structure, which was scheduled to be demolished Monday.

More than 50 firefighters battled the fire and a 60-acre blaze that burned grass and brush on the adjacent hillside. One firefighter was injured and taken to St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center.

Boise parks to supply help to pet owners

BOISE — Boise parks officials will install dispensers for special bags along parts of the Boise River Greenbelt; this fall so dog owners can more easily pick up after their pets.

The Boise Greenbelt and Parkway Committee decided on the dispensers and more mail signs Thursday rather than passing a pooper-scooper law or banning dogs from the Greenbelt.

"I think this is a good idea because it puts the responsibility on dog owners," committee member Nancy Donald said. "But it also keeps dogs out of the Greenbelt."

Court keeps sentence

BOISE (AP) — Former Ada County businessman Frederick Bure asked the Couer of Appeals to change his sentence of 20 years, claiming a psychological report shows a substantial improvement in his mental health.

But the court Friday rejected the appeal, ruling that Judge Gerald Schroeder properly sentenced Bure based on information available at the time.

Mexico expresses interest in Idaho trade mission

BOISE (AP) — Mexican officials made overtures Friday for an Idaho trade mission to visit their country after their presidential transition this fall.

Mexican Consul Raul Lopez-Iriza from Salt Lake City discussed the possibility with Idaho Republican Sen. Dirk Kempthorne before today's Idaho-Mexico trade symposium began, and Mexican senior trade specialist Raul Ortega Trani publicly issued the invitation after the symposium began.

"It is something we will seriously consider," Kempthorne said. "I know there are great opportunities that await... It just makes tremendous sense to take advantage of all opportunities that exist in Mexico."

Idaho opened a trade office in Guadalajara earlier this year, that state Commerce Department officials say is already paying dividends.

"Two-way trade is going on today," Commerce Director Jim Hawkins said. "We have companies buying and we have companies selling in Mexico."

But Lopez-Iriza and Ortega told business leaders and government policy makers today that the North American Free Trade Agreement has created even greater trade possibilities.

"NAFTA is working," Lopez-Iriza said. "Mexico is in the process of establishing a new era of economic growth and social progress... Mexico has a high propensity to buy U.S. goods."

The symposium gave Idaho business and government leaders the opportunity to talk about trade face-to-face with the Mexican officials in an attempt to strengthen commercial ties and resolve any problems that inhibit greater trade in both directions.

Police say suspect threatened victim

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Murder suspect Michael E. Clements has been charged with witness intimidation as prosecutors allege he made threatening phone calls to a woman he's accused of shooting.

Clements, 44, of Blackfoot, was charged with first-degree murder after an Aug. 17 shooting that left one Idaho Falls woman dead and her niece wounded.

Mary Ellen Johnson-Hill, 35, died of bullet wounds to her side and hand. Lori Ann Oakes, 28, was released Sunday from Eastern Idaho Regional Medical Center after treatment for a chest gunshot wound.

Oakes and Clements were engaged and lived together prior to a breakup and the shooting at her Idaho Falls apartment. Johnson-Hill was helping Oakes move out of the apartment the night of the shooting.

According to police reports, Clements called Oakes from the Bonneville County Jail while she was hospitalized.

Pro tennis had a late start

Q. What relation to Pliny the Younger was Flory the Elder?

A. His uncle. The Elder, a naturalist, wrote 37 books about everything, and died when Mt. Vesuvius blew out Pompeii. The Younger, an orator, talked a lot, and wrote letters.

Q. Anxiety is strange, isn't it? It tears up some people so badly they'll do almost anything to get rid of it. Like get drunk, use drugs, let it out on others, people so greatly they'll do almost anything to generate it. Like gamble all until all is gone. Both extremes respond to treatment. And curiously, the treatment - group therapy - for both extremes is almost identical.

Q. No other American bird can beat the roadrunner in a foot race.

A. Where were you 26 years ago? That's when the big tennis tournaments were first opened to professionals. All those great names who played before 1968 won their fame as amateurs.

Q. What is the so-called "Printers Bible"?

A. An edition with a misprint in L.M. Boyd What's what?

Psalm 119:161 that reads: "Printers' instead of Princess' have persecuted me without cause." A favorite of newspaper-writers, that one. Typographical errors have given such names to several editions. The Lions Bible in 1 Kings 8:19 reads "Out of thy lions" instead of "loins." The Wicked Bible left out the "not" to read: "Thou shalt commit adultery."

Q. Would you believe a UFO if you spotted one?

A. Why not? All it means is Unidentified Flying Object. Twenty-six astronauts have reported seeing same.

Bowling statisticians say a perfect game of 12, consecutive strikes occurs once in about every 450,000 games.

New bowl alliance taps Fiesta as first title site

TEMPE, Ariz. — The Fiesta Bowl will be the site of the new bowl alliance's first potential national championship game after the 1995 season.

As the highest bidder among the three alliance members at $118 million, the Fiesta Bowl had the option of staging the alliance's first potential title matchup. The game will be Jan. 2, 1996.

The new bowl alliance was created this summer to replace the existing agreement that expires after this season.

On a rotating basis, the Fiesta, Orange and Sugar bowls will have the opportunity to match up the two top-ranked teams from the Atlantic Coast, Big East, Big 12 and Southeastern conferences as well as Notre Dame. The Rose Bowl will continue to invite the Big Ten and Pac-10 champions.

Grand jury will weigh felony charge against Sanders soon

CINCINNATI — A Hamilton County grand jury will consider a felony charge against Cincinnati Reds center fielder Deion Sanders within two weeks, a prosecutor said Friday.

The charge police filed Friday stems from a confrontation with an off-duty officer at Riverfront Stadium last month. The officer said he was injured when Sanders ignored an order not to drive his motor scooter through a restricted gate.

Sanders' attorney, James Keys, said he expected to talk with Sanders over the weekend and would issue a statement early next week.

"I said earlier that my client is 100 percent not guilty, that they did not have a case against Deion," Keys said. "I say that again."

Gonzalez puts 2 belts on line in light flyweight bout today

LAKE TAHOE, Nev. — Humberto Gonzalez will defend his IBF and WBC light flyweight titles at Caesars Tahoe Hotel Saturday night against Juan Domingo Cordoba in a 12-round bout.

Gonzalez, of Ciudad Neza, Mexico, won his championships last February, outpointing previously unbeaten Michael Carbajal in a 12-round bout at the Forum in Inglewood, Calif.

Gonzalez has a 39-2 record with 27 knockouts. He is the WBC's first three-time champion in the 108-pound division. He previously won the WBC light flyweight championship in 1989 and 1991.

Chris Gunter of Twin Falls pulls in a first down pass reception during the Bruins' scoring drive in the first quarter against Minico Friday night.

Bruins slip by Minico, 13-12

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — There wasn't a lot of doubt about the most important play of the night. With 1:33 to play, the Spartans trailed 13-12 and had the option of conversion.

Not once during the night had the Bruins limited Steve Dalley to less than three yards on the option pitch. Minico Coach John Billiet said the decision to be made was the play — not whether the Spartans would go for two or not.

For a second it looked like it was going to work again. Dalley once again made the first Bruin defender miss and turn it upfield — but the Bruins got there in time to knock him out of bounds and save the one-point decision.

"It's our No. 38, our speed option," Billiet said. "It had worked the whole game. This time the Bruins did a good job of defending it."

It was a bitter loss for the Spartans who seized control with their defense late in the first half and with one exception limited the Bruins to exactly seven net yards thereafter.

The difference was a 30-yard romp up the middle by Pat Thuesen that set up Twin Falls' only score and threat in the second half.

But making it more bitter for Billiet was another night of turnovers. His Spartans fumbled away possession four times in the second half.

But, not surprisingly in this battle, it was a Bruin fumble that gave Minico its chance to pull it out.

"Our offense was ugly tonight but I thought our defense played a heckuva game. I can't believe we could get all those fumbles and our offense couldn't convert on any of them," said Bruin Coach Mark Schaal.

Billiet was pleased with his defense, noting "we got pretty badly beaten up last week (in a 47-7 loss to Hillcrest), and I'm proud of the way the kids came back. But this also makes CAREY — Logan Bingham scored three touchdowns and set up another score as No. 2 Carey whipped fifth-ranked Shoshone 48-8 in a Sawtooth Conference contest Friday afternoon.

The victory puts the Panthers in the drivers' seat for a spot in the 8-man playoffs. Carey has a bye next week. A contest against Shoshone in two weeks is up in the air because Shoshone has only nine players out for the team.

It was the 16th straight regular conference victory for the Panthers, who posted their biggest victory of the season, and boosted their record to 3-0.

The Panthers didn't wait long to get on the board. On their second possession of the game, it took four plays to march 33 yards with Bingham taking it in from seven yards out. The conversion failed and Carey led 6-0.

A 40-yard pass to Chip Wood from Cameron Cook set up the next Bingham touchdown. Cook found him in the corner for the touchdown and Carey led 14-0. Cook ran in the two-point conversion.

It was Bingham again in the second quarter. A 34-yard run set up a two-yard touchdown run by Wood. Bingham caught a pass for the two-point conversion. Carey was up 22-0 at the half.

"In the first quarter, I was not pleased," said Carey Coach Heber Kirkland. "We were flat. But in the second, we picked it up offensively and defensively."

Shoshone got back into the game taking advantage of a Carey fumble. Quarterback Ray Hestley hit Justin O'Dell from 22 yards out pulling the Indians within 14 points. Hestley set up the pass on a 13-yard run to keep the drive alive.

"Defensively, I thought we were keying on the run and not enough on the pass," said Carey assistant Coach Lee Cook.

Sinking players delivered a "taxation" plan to owners Thursday and hoped it would be accepted in place of a salary cap.

conversion from Wood. Carey started pulling away 30-8.

"They came back and scored. That meant a lot," said Kirkland.

The Panthers scored on three consecutive possessions in the fourth quarter with Bingham, Jordan Hennefer and T.J. Dilworth scoring touchdowns.

The loss dropped Shoshone to 1-1.

Owners reject players' last-ditch offer; season in peril

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Baseball owners rejected the players' proposal to settle the 4-week-old strike today, but postponed until early next week their threat to call off the season and the World Series.

"We have to establish a common ground, and tragically we have failed to do so at every level to this point," acting commissioner Bud Selig said. "Nobody dreads these circumstances more than I do, or is more dismayed by them."

"We have done everything to avoid the situation we find ourselves in."

Selig earlier said that today was the deadline adding owners would "let the weekend play itself out."

"Hopefully there will be some communication. If not, we'll have an orderly announcement next week," Selig said.

Union chief Donald Fehr said baseball was running out of time with the regular season scheduled to end Oct. 2.

"It becomes progressively harder with each passing day," he said. "But we're not going to shut the doors until they shut them."

ry over Sweden's Jonas Bjorkman Thursday night. His semifinal opponent will be Karel Novak of the Czech Republic, who defeated Petr's Jaime Yzaga 6-2, 6-7 (7-9), 6-1, 5-7, 6-3. Saturday's other semifinal will pit Agassi against ninth-seeded Todd Martin, guaranteeing an American will be in Sunday's title match.

Earlier Friday, Jacco Eltingh and Paul Haarhuis of the Netherlands won the men's doubles, defeating Australians Todd Woodbridge and Mark Woodforde 6-3, 7-6 (7-1).

On Thursday, Elia Reinach of South Africa and Patrick Galbraith of Tacoma, Wash., teamed to win the mixed doubles championship, defeating Novotna and Woodbridge 6-2, 6-4.

The Stich-Bjorkman battle matched big servers who are as comfortable at the net as they are at the baseline. The difference between the two was slight.

"I was serving very, very badly," said Stich, who had 15 double-faults to go along with 13 aces. "Right now, I'm really, really tired. All the credit to Bjorkman the way he kept fighting. He never gave up. Not many guys are doing that."

Today I played my worst match of the Open. But it's very important to me that I made it into the semis, that I stayed in there."

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The world's top two players, Steffi Graf and Arantxa Sanchez Vicario, solved the tricky winds at the National Tennis Center today to move into the U.S. Open women's championship match.

Seeking her second Grand Slam title of 1994 and her second straight U.S. Open crown, Graf won the final five games to beat Jana Novotna 6-3, 7-5.

Then Sanchez Vicario, the French Open champion, defeated the 1990 champion, Gabriela Sabatini, 6-1, 7-6 (8-6).

The winners will battle for the title Saturday.

"It was difficult with the wind today to play against Jana," Graf said. "She played exceptionally well, but I was able to squeeze it out in the second set."

Novotna's loss brought back memories of the 1993 Wimbledon final, when, on the verge of winning the title, she also lost the last five games to Graf.

"You can't compare this to Wimbledon," Novotna said. "This is hardcourt. It is different games."

Novotna led early in each set, but Graf raised her game and answered with a service break of her own.

In the opening set, Novotna took a 3-2 lead by breaking Graf's service from deuce. The world's top-ranked player used it as a wakeup call. She broke her Czech opponent from deuce, held at love, broke from deuce again, then held at 15 to wrap up the first set.

While Novotna was down a set, at least she had earned a moral victory. The set took 42 minutes to complete; Graf's longest match before today was 55 minutes long.

Novotna, her nerves and game under control most of the time, broke Graf's service again in the fourth game of the second set. When Novotna held serve after a long battle, she had a 4-1 advantage 71 minutes after the two had begun play.

Two games later, Novotna had a 5-2 lead and was on the verge of tying the match at one set apiece. She reached double set point at 15-40, but couldn't close it out.

Graf finally held, beginning her five-game match-closing string and a berth in Saturday's championship match.

On the men's side, the spotlight is on Andre Agassi. Michael Stich couldn't be happier.

"Let everybody think Agassi's supposed to win," Stich said. "I like that."

Stich, at No. 4 the highest seed left in the men's field, grabbed a spot in Saturday's semifinals with a 6-4, 6-4, 6-7 (7-9), 6-4 victory

British runners outpace controversy

LONDON (AP) — Sally Gunnell put Britain's doping controversy to rest, at least for now, with two inspiring victories Friday night in the World Cup team event.

Gunnell won the women's 400-meter hurdles and returned less than 2 hours later to anchor the 1,600-meter relay team to a come-from-behind victory on a cold, damp night at Crystal Palace.

Britain also got a lift from Olympic and world champion Linford Christie, who won the men's 100-meter sprint in a rare three-race winning streak.

The British victories overshadowed another strong performance by Jamaican sprinter Merlene Ottey, who finished the season in brilliant style with a 200-meter win over Russian rival Irina Privalova.

The World Cup is a three-day, finals-only competition with eight teams representing Africa, the Americas, Asia, Europe, Britain, Germany, Oceania and the United States. Points are awarded on a sliding scale, from eight points for a victory to one point for eighth.

After the first day, favored Africa led the men's competition with 39 points, followed by Britain with 32 and the Americas with 28. Europe was fourth with 26 and the United States had 25.

Europe led the women's competition with 46 points; the Americas had 43 and Britain 36. The United States was last with 20.

Gunnell is captain of the British women's team, which was nearly forced to pull out of the competition following a recent positive dope test for 800-meter runner Diane Modahl.

The team insisted on competing despite the possibility that Britain will be disqualified later if Modahl's positive test is upheld at a hearing.

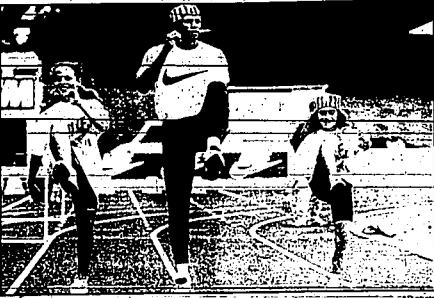

Gunnell, the Olympic, world, European and Commonwealth champion, coasted to an easy victory in the hurdles. Against a field lacking her main rivals, she won by a margin of more than 10 meters in 54.80 seconds.

In the relay, the final eight of the night, Gunnell started the anchor leg in third place behind Germany's Anja Rucker and Julia Dupuy of Cuba. With the crowd of 15,000 cheering her on, Gunnell surged in front in the final 50 meters to pulled out the victory.

"I didn't panic," she said. "I kept calm and then literally with 60-70 meters to go just found that I still had the strength in my legs. I think a lot of that was to do with the crowd. I've never run in front of a crowd like there was out there tonight, chanting my name. I just kept thinking to myself, 'Well, they want us there.' To me, that's important, that the general public still think a lot of us."

"We've just got to go out there and forget about what's been happening the last three weeks," she said. "The only positive thing that we can do is go out there and run well. That's what all the girls are thinking and wanting to do."

American decathlete Dan O'Brien trains Friday while preparing to make a run at his own world record. The girls were not identified.

Powlus-led Irish take on rivals

The Associated Press

Neire Dame quarterback Ron Powlus, who shined dark in his collegiate debut, will move into the spotlight Saturday at South Bend. That is, if he lives up to his already high expectations.

Powlus, who missed his freshman year because of a broken collarbone, completed 18-of-24 passes for 291 yards throwing seven interceptions, and needed Chris Diering's 28-yard touchdown catch with three seconds left to pull out a 24-20 win.

No. 4 Florida State at Maryland

Maryland gave up 49 points in losing to Duke last Saturday. Florida State scored 41 against Virginia. Get out the calculator.

No. 5 Miami at Arizona State

Miami (1-0) has lost all three games it has played in Arizona State's Sun Devil Stadium. Saturday, however, will be the first time the Sun Devils (1-0) get a chance at beating the Hurricanes. Miami's previous appearances were in the Fiesta Bowl, including a 29-0 loss to Arizona.

No. 14 Southern California at No. 8 Penn State

The Nittany Lions (1-0) might be a bit off balance concerning Southern Cal's attack. In recent years, passing was the key to the Trojans' offense. In opening the season with a win over Washington, however, Southern Cal rushed for more yards (169) than they passed for (129) for the first time in 28 games, dating back to 1991.

New Mexico State at No. 9 Arizona

At least New Mexico State cut down travel time for Saturday's game against Arizona (1-0). The Aggies might even cut down the points allowed, but the result is expected to be the same as it was last Saturday. They lost 70-21 at Florida.

Eastern Michigan at No. 10 Wisconsin

Wisconsin, 10-1, and Rose Bowl champion last year in the most successful season in its 105-year history, is a 17-point favorite over Eastern Michigan, which lost its opener to Nevada-Las Vegas.

and four touchdowns in the third-ranked Fighting Irish's 42-15 win over Northwestern last Saturday night at Chicago.

"I just want to have close to a flawless game," Powlus said. "We can't afford any mistakes by anyone."

Sixth-ranked Michigan figures to be a much sterner test for the Irish than was Northwestern.

Even without running back Tyrone Wheatley, out for the second week because of a separated shoulder, the Wolverines have plenty of firepower, as they demonstrated in a 34-26 victory over Boston College at Ann Arbor last week.

Completed 16-of-24 passes for 258 yards and two touchdowns for Michigan.

The game will be the last between the two rivals until 1997. Michigan leads the series 14-10-1, but in 14 games since 1978, Notre Dame has an 8-5-1 edge.

Other Top Ten teams in action Saturday will be No. 2 Florida at home against Kentucky, No. 4 Florida State at Maryland, No. 5 Miami at Arizona State, No. 8 Penn State at home against No. 14 Southern California, No. 9 Arizona at New Mexico State, and Eastern Michigan at No. 10 Wisconsin. Games involving other teams in the Top 25 will be Vanderbilt at No. 11 Alabama, Northeast Louisiana at No. 12 Auburn, Southern Methodist at No. 13 UCLA, No. 15 Oklahoma at No. 16 Texas A&M, No. 18 Ohio State at No. 25 Washington, No. 19 Tennessee at No. 23 Georgia, No. 20 Texas at Louisville, No. 21 Virginia Tech at Southern Mississippi, North Carolina State at No. 22 Clemson and No. 24 Stanford at Northwestern.

Kentucky at No. 2 Florida

Coach Steve Spurrier undoubtedly reminded his Gators (1-0) about what sloppy play can mean as they prepared for Kentucky (1-0). Last year at Kentucky, Florida made numerous mistakes, including

49ers face old friend Sunday

The Associated Press

The San Francisco 49ers are the only NFL club Kansas City coach Marty Schottenheimer hasn't beaten.

He could do it Sunday, with a player who once was the heart of 'Sag' Francisco.

Joe Montana, the 49ers' quarterback for 14 seasons, will play against his old club for the first time Sunday at Kansas City.

The game figures to be a passing duel between Montana and Steve Young, his former backup. Both had big season-opening games, as the Chiefs beat New Orleans 30-17 last Sunday and the 49ers trounced the Los Angeles Raiders 44-14 Monday night.

The last time the clubs met was in 1991, a season Montana missed because of injury. The 49ers won 28-14, as Steve Bono passed for three touchdowns. Bono now is Montana's backup at Kansas City.

Schottenheimer beat the Chiefs when he coached at Cleveland.

The only coaches to have beaten all other NFL clubs are Chuck Knicker of the Los Angeles Rams, Marv Levy of Buffalo and Bum Phillips, currently out of coaching.

Bills at Patriots

The Bills, who scored only three touchdowns in losing to the Jets, hope to untracked against a New England club that gave up 39 points to Miami last week.

The Patriots, however, also scored 35 with Drew Bledsoe passing for 421 yards and four touchdowns, and they should make a serious bid for only their third win over Buffalo in the last 13 meetings.

Pro football

Oilers at Cowboys

The Cowboys have a new coach in Barry Switzer, but they look like the same old team, with Emmitt Smith running and Troy Aikman passing. They looked Super Bowl sharp in pounding Pittsburgh 26-9 last Sunday. Meanwhile, things look dim for the Houston Oilers, who lost 45-21 to Indianapolis.

Lions at Vikings

The winner in four of the last five games in this series has scored 30 or more points. The Barry Switzer-led Lions (1-0) already have demonstrated a good offense, while Warren Moon, the former Houston quarterback, has yet to rise to the occasion for the Vikings (0-1).

Dolphins at Packers

Green Bay (1-0) will have to stop Miami's Dan Marino, who passed for five touchdowns in last week's opening victory. The Packers will be trying to win for the first time in eight games against the Dolphins.

Steelers at Browns

Cleveland Stadium was deserted by Cleveland Indians for New Jacobs Field, but was left standing for the Browns (1-0). The Steelers probably wished it had been demolished, because they lost 14-13 to the Browns last Sunday.

Broncos at Jets

The Jets, under new coach Pete Carroll, looked good in beating Buffalo and a victory over Denver (0-1) would give them their first 2-0 start since 1987. They will have to hope that John Elway fumbles as he did in key situations in last week's loss to San Diego.

Seahawks vs. Raiders

Seattle (1-0) might be just what the Raiders need in wake of their battering by San Francisco, although the Rick Mirer-led Seahawks are an improved team. Under coach Art Shell, the Raiders are 8-1 against the Seahawks.

Bengals at Chargers

It would appear the hapless Bengals (0-1) are just what the Chargers - pumped up by their win over Denver - need to go 2-0 for the first time since 1981.

Redskins at Saints

It looks as if Saints kicker Morten Anderson will increase his streak of scoring at least one point in a game to 16th in this matchup of clubs who lost their openers. The Redskins scored only seven points against Seattle.

Rams at Falcons

The Rams (1-0) will be seeking a second straight victory over a club with a new coach. Last week, they beat Buddy Ryan of the Cardinals. June Jones will be making his home debut for the Falcons (0-1).

Colts at Buccaneers

Will the Marshall Faulk show be as big a hit in Tampa Bay as it was in Indianapolis last week? The Colts' rookie rushed for 143 yards and three touchdowns in a 45-21 victory over Houston. The Buccaneers outplayed Chicago, but still lost.

Giants at Cardinals

Buddy Ryan will make his home debut as coach of the Cardinals (0-1). The Giants (1-0) have beaten the Cardinals in nine of their 11 meetings.

New records fall at swim meet

ROME (AP) — Australians Kieren Perkins and Samantha Riley set world records at the World Swimming Championships Friday, bringing to six the number of records in four days.

Perkins, the world record-holder for the 800-meter and 1,500-meter freestyles, cut 1.20 seconds off the 400 freestyle mark, clocking 3:43.80. He still has the 1,500 to swim and can attack his other two records Sunday on the final day.

Riley, winner of the 200 breaststroke Tuesday, dashed away from China's best two breaststrokes in the 100 final and won by four meters in 1:07.69. She broke the 7-year-old record of 1:07.91 set by Silke Hornig of Germany.

In other finals, Hungary's Norbert Rosza added the 200 breaststroke title to his 100 triumph, beating American Eric Wunderlich, Li Limin and Qu Yun underlined China's overall supremacy in women's events by placing 1-2 in the butterfly.

The U.S. 400 freestyle relay team of Jon Olson, Josh Davis, Ugar Tuncer and 100 silver medalist Gary Hall set a championship record of 3:16.90.

In the women's water polo final, Hungary downed defending champion the Netherlands 7-5, and in synchronized swimming, Becky Byrnes-Lancer won the solo title for the United States. She also has a chance of gold medals in the 400 and 800 meters.

Perkins set his 800 and 1,500 marks two weeks ago at the Commonwealth Games and was within 77 seconds of the 400 mark set when Russia's Evgeny Sadovy beat him at the 1992 Olympics.

Perkins won the first 100 in 21.86, 65 seconds inside world record pace, and improved that difference to 1.63 by 200 meters.

By that time, he was well clear of Finland's Antti Kasvio and New Zealand's Danyon Looke, and had no one to push him as he turned for the final lap.

At the finish, he was 10 meters ahead of Kasvio, who clocked 3:48.55 to hold off Looke for the silver.

Riley went out fast in the 100 breaststroke and was in command by the first turn. She reached it in 21.86, 1.6 seconds inside world record pace, and was four meters ahead of the two chasing Chinese when she finished.

Dai Guohong, winner of the 400 individual medley, clocked 1:09.26 for second, and Yuan Yuan was third in 1:10.19.

In the women's butterfly, Australia's Susan O'Neill led at the turn. But Looke quickly overtook her on the next lap and won in a championship record 58.98, tying her world's best time this year.

Qu clocked 59.69 for the silver and O'Neill held off countrywoman Petria Thomas for the bronze.

German star Franz Vorn Almsiek, who won the 200 freestyle in a world record time Tuesday, placed fifth, ahead of American Jenny Thompson.

Wunderlich, swimming in the unfavorable outside-lane, moved up to take the lead at the third turn in the 200 Gail Rosza, who had led for the first 100 meters, fought back to draw even, and in a tight finish, won by .06 seconds in 2:12.81.

Behind Wunderlich came another Hungarian, Karoly Gutler, the 100-meter world record-holder and world silver medalist in 2:14.12.

The Americans stayed in front throughout the relay final, although the Russians and later the Germans challenged.

By the time Hall took over from Tuncer, the Americans led by 1.33 over Germany, who had led for the first 100 meters, with Sweden third and Russia fourth.

I don't know about you, but I'm tired today.

No, I take that back — I'm exhausted. I blame it on the needle. You know — the one on our record player.

A couple of years ago, our old needle wore out, and since we mostly listen to the radio or cassette tapes, we didn't get around to replacing it until recently.

So last night, when a Neil Diamond sort of mood swept over me, I pulled out the "Hot August Night" album (remember albums?). Then I put on the headphones and I kicked back for some tuneless R&R (that's rock and relaxation translated).

At about 3 a.m., I decided it was time to get some sleep. By this time, I had worked my way through the musical soundtrack of my life with vinylized performances by the Association, the Beach Boys, the BeeGees, the Carpenters and Chicago. And they, in turn, had worked their magic on me, taking me back through time to people, places and feelings I had almost forgotten.

For example, "Cherish" by the Association took me back to seventh grade and a summer party in Jan Davis' back yard.

All of a sudden, I'm standing there like an idiot — again — helplessly watching Alan Burningham steal Gayle Hayes out from under my adolescent nose — again — because he has sideburns, an Adam's apple and long hair and he knows how to slow dance (and it doesn't hurt that he's an eighth-grader — you know how women love those older men).

How Can You Mend a Broken Heart? by the BeeGees took me to the amusement park fast food shack where I worked the summer that song was popular.

I can see the crowds of people. I can hear the carousel playing "The Band Played On" over and over and over again. I can feel the steam rising from the serving table.

I can even smell that — oh, I don't know — meat or whatever it was we were putting in the tacos that year. And it still makes me a little nauseous 23 years later.

Then I heard "The Warmth of the Sun" by the Beach Boys and found myself in a dimly lit gym at Millersburg Junior High. My hands are sweaty. My stomach is in knots.

My knees are trembling. Slowly, I start walking toward Heidi Van Ert. I'm going to ask her. I'm finally going to do it. I'm going to walk right up and ask her ... ask her ... ask her ...

Heidi, uh, how did you do on Mr. Toome's math test?

OK, so even after all these years, I still couldn't bring myself to ask the most popular girl in the ninth grade to dance. It's a fun memory.

At least, I think it is. I mean, life was simpler back then, wasn't it?

There was less stress. Less frustration. We were carefree. Weren't we?

Well, weren't we?

Until I took my musical journey back through time, I'd forgotten how hard it was to be young.

While it's true that adolescent angst seems trivial and inconsequential from the perspective of adulthood, when you're a kid, childhood trauma is still — well — traumatic.

Remember bullies? Remember pop quizzes?

Remember pouring out your deepest heart-felt feelings in a carefully worded note and then waiting anxiously for the response? Remember zits?

Such things may be fun to remember, but they weren't especially fun to live.

When it comes right down to it, the good old days weren't all that great.

For every joyful memory, to which we nostalgically cling, there is pain tucked away that we tend to forget.

And that's OK, I guess, as long as we don't diminish our attention to "today" by giving "yesterday" more credit than it deserves.

The way I see it, "today" is the only day that really counts because it's the only day we can do anything about. "Yesterday" is gone; "tomorrow" hasn't arrived.

But today is here — right now — and it's clean and fresh and full of possibility. Live it. Love it. Seize it.

With or without a musical soundtrack.

TWIN FALLS — Pastor Dale Metzger, who has always dreamed about starting his own church. On Sunday, he won't just be dreaming anymore.

The Rock Creek Community Church will be open for business this weekend. It's affiliated with the United Brethren denomination.

The (United Brethren) bishop came here in May and saw how Twin Falls is growing and decided it's a fantastic place for a new church," said Metzger, who's pastored Methodist and Brethren churches in southern Idaho for the past 11 years. "He was an answer to prayer, but it's also kind of scary to go out on your own."

The United Brethren denomination, heavy in the Midwest, has only six churches in the Washington/Idaho Oregon area, Metzger noted. It's similar in style and theology to Methodism.

Metzger will start out holding meetings in the chapel of Blay Colonial Funeral Home (yes, he's heard all the jokes).

"I figured the pews are there, there are no steps, it's air conditioned, it has musical instruments and a new PA system and it has a beautiful parking lot that will be played in the winter — why not?" Metzger said.

In preparation for the first service, Metzger has been seeking out new people in the community and talking with people who have been looking for a church. He now has about 100 local residents on his mailing list.

He's not into stealing sheep, he said, adding, "There are enough people in the Magic Valley to fill every church."

He's managed to recruit volunteers who will serve as secretary and will help in the church office. Other volunteers will lead the music.

Services will feature a special time for young Christians, a sort of children's story. Sermons will be peppered with humor, because that's Metzger's style. A Sunday School is in the works.

"You go into it with a lot of faith," said Metzger, who will receive some start-up funding from his denomination. He will also keep his other jobs, as sports director at KTFI-Radio and Sports Talk co-host on KVM-TV. His wife teaches school in Jerome.

First service set

The Rock Creek Community Church will hold its first worship service at 10 a.m. Sunday in the chapel of Blay Colonial Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road. The public is invited.

For more information, contact Pastor Dale Metzger at 734-5268. Church offices are located at 705 Fillmore St.

Metzger received his degree in communications from Boise State University. He got his seminary training at Perkins School of Theology on the campus of Southern Methodist University in Dallas.

"His years working among people have taught him a lot about how individuals relate to each other and to their church."

"What's killing the church today is people who don't give a rip about anyone else besides themselves," he said. "That's not what Christ taught, and that's not what religion is all about."

A church should be a place of love, he contends, not a gripe session.

At Rock Creek, Metzger's hoping to keep the emphasis off church politics.

"There are so many hurting people looking for somebody to be their friend, someone they can go to feel like they are loved and cared for," Metzger said. "I know some people stay home and watch church TV, but that pastor isn't going to be walking down the halls of the hospital in a couple of hours if you need him."

Metzger believes the church is a viable institution in society, but he also believes people shouldn't have to conform to an image to go there.

"It doesn't matter if you come in a three-piece suit and Cadillac or a flannel shirt — I don't care," he said. "It's what's in your heart and life that matters."

Metzger is ready to speak to the hearts and lives of people at his new church. This Sunday's sermon is titled "Read my Heart as well as my Lips."

"I like to give people something on Sunday they can take out the door with them," he said, "something they can use to face all the garbage they face during the week."

Pastor Dale Metzger will start out holding meetings of the Rock Creek Community Church at the Blay Colonial Funeral Home.

Davidian wants new church on mount

Man cleared of charges files lawsuit

By Susan Hightower

WACO, Texas — Branch Davidians may once again raise their voices in prayer at Mount Carmel, only this time with a difference.

"I do not intend to see David Koresh's faction regain control of Mount Carmel," said Amo Bishop Roden, former wife of the man who lost control of the religious group to Koresh in the 1980s.

"They have never, I don't feel, tried to fulfill the mission of the church, which ... is to provide a means of protecting the righteous during Armageddon."

All Branch Davidians are invited to return Oct. 19 for a weeklong meeting to choose a new spiritual leader, Ms. Roden said Tuesday.

She expects Koresh followers to be in the minority, but some say they won't give up so easily.

Sheila Martin, who lost four children in the fire that destroyed the compound last year, said she and other Koresh followers were waiting for his return from the dead.

"We're not going to give up without a fight, if necessary. We're not going to just let them come along and take it," Ms. Martin said.

Ms. Roden was working on a small, ramshackle white building near what used to be the sect's headquarters. It had been used as a machine shop during their 51-day standoff with federal agents.

Four federal agents and six Davidians died on Feb. 28, 1993, when agents raided the compound to arrest Koresh on weapons charges. The standoff ended when the compound burned to the ground. The remains of Koresh and more than 80 followers were found in the ashes.

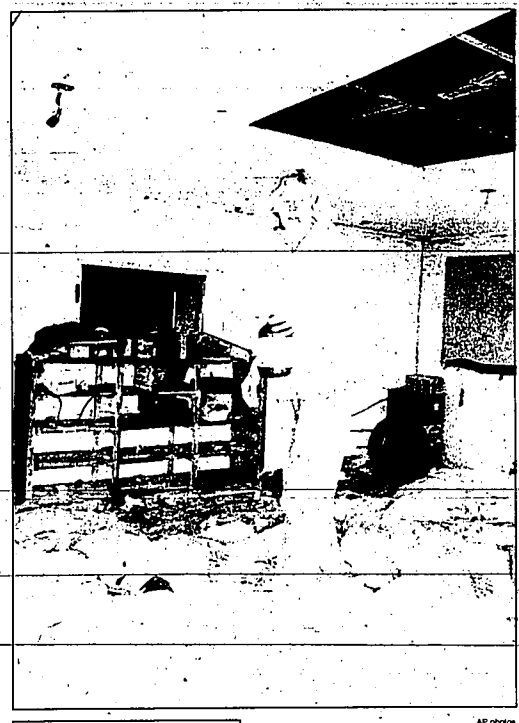

Today, tall weeds and sunflowers surround the building on the 77-acre site near Waco. There are holes in the walls, sandbags piled on the floor, shattered windows and missing doors.

Koresh defeated Ms. Roden's former husband, George, in a fight for sect leadership in the 1980s. Roden's father, Ben, founded the Branch Davidians in 1959.

The power struggle led to a 1987 gun battle at the compound that led to attempted murder charges against Koresh and seven others. The others were acquitted, and a mistrial was declared in Koresh's case. Charges against him were later dismissed. George Roden was found innocent by reason of insanity in an unrelated murder in 1989, and is confined in a state mental hospital.

Adding to the controversy is a dispute over who owns the land. The county has a lien on the property for unpaid taxes.

The land belonged to George Roden's mother, Lois, whose will made Koresh a trustee. It is now held by the General Association Davidians, Seventh-day Adventists.

Above, Amo Bishop Roden walks over a pile of sandbags in a Branch Davidian Mount Carmel outbuilding Tuesday near Waco, Texas. Roden says she plans to turn the building into a church and hopes to gather church members as early as next month to choose a new head of the sect. Left, a Bible sits atop a makeshift altar outside the Branch Davidian compound near Waco.

Man cleared of charges files lawsuit

SAN DIEGO — A Sunday school teacher cleared of inflicting satanic ritual abuse on children is suing prosecutors, therapists and the church where he volunteered.

Dale Akiki was acquitted in November on charges that he sexually abused, tortured and kidnapped nine children, ages 3 and 4, at the evangelical Faith Chapel in 1988 and 1989. He was held without bail for 2½ years.

Dale Akiki was acquitted in November on charges that he sexually abused, tortured and kidnapped nine children.

A grand jury later denounced handling of the case, concluding that therapists and parents prodded children into inventing stories of ritual abuse that never happened.

The children testified that Akiki had killed a baby, sacrificed rabbits and slaughtered an elephant and a giraffe. They also claimed he beat them and tortured them with scalding water.

In a lawsuit filed Aug. 25, Akiki claimed emotional distress, slander, libel, false imprisonment, professional negligence and civil rights violations.

The lawsuit, which didn't specify damages, was kept under seal until it was moved from Superior Court to federal court.

The lawsuit said District Attorney Edwin Miller and prosecutor Mary Avery pursued a meritless claim and that Avery tried to use the case to get a judicial appointment.

It also said the church where Akiki was a volunteer baby sitter placed him in a position of peril and provided no safeguards to prevent false rumor, innuendo and accusations from escalating into ritual satanic abuse mass hysteria which led to (Akiki's) arrest and imprisonment.

The lawsuit accuses therapists who interviewed the children of professional negligence and accuses prosecutors of deliberately selecting therapists they knew were inclined to find evidence of abuse.

It accuses the district attorney's office of withholding evidence that might have cleared Akiki sooner.

Make sure you're living each day of your life

I was recently reading about an elderly woman living in Worcester, Mass., who turned up missing four years ago.

When no one could find her, concerned neighbors informed the police. Her brother told police she had been in a nursing home.

Satisfied with that information, her neighbors began watching her property. One neighbor noticed that her mail, delivered through a slot in the door, was piling high. When he opened the door, hundreds of pieces of mail drifted out. He notified police, and the deliveries were stopped.

Another neighbor started paying her grandson $10 twice a month to mow the lady's lawn. Yet another neighbor noticed the pipes to the woman's house had frozen, spilling water out of the door. The city was called to shut off the water.

What no one guessed was that, while they had been trying to help the lady, she had been inside her home. When police finally investigated the house as a health hazard, they were shocked to find her body.

The Washington Post reported that police now believe the lady died of natural causes four years ago.

The nice external appearance of the woman's house had hidden the reality of what was on the inside.

Something similar can happen to people. We may appear all proper on the outside; but on the inside, we are spiritually dead. We may be involved in all sorts of church and religious activities on the outside but be spiritually dead on the inside. Christ intended us to have — not a life that is nothing more than a tiny facade. Now is the time to come alive on the inside as we let God control our hearts, minds and souls. It is a real life with Christ, is first an inside job.

She's only religion correspondent on network TV

By Julia Prodis
The Associated Press

DALLAS—Peggy Wehmeyer was just a fledgling TV reporter filling routine spots on Texas news and crime stories when she established a reputation as a breed apart.

"They send me on spot news, I come back with God," she said.

It was 13 years ago that she first put a spiritual spin on a news story — a mother's faith after her son's death, a plane crash survivor's questions of morality.

Now, Wehmeyer, a devout Christian herself, is ABC's religion reporter — the only full-time religion reporter in network television. Wehmeyer was selected by anchorman Peter Jennings, who wanted to add a new dimension to "World News Tonight."

The role religion plays in today's society needs to be fully explored, Jennings said when she was hired in January. He sent Wehmeyer out to "examine how faith, religion and spirituality interconnect with government and social policy."

She came back with an interview with President Clinton — one of her first stories. ABC considered himself "a person who has sinned as a child of God, who has sought forgiveness, searched for redemption and is struggling to grow and struggling to find the guidance of God in this job."

She also has covered stories about anti-Semitism, prayer in school and a Baptist minister's tormented life.

Media watchers say religion coverage on the major networks is something that has too long been ignored.

"I really wonder why all the networks haven't done it," said Robert O. Wyatt, a journalism professor at Middle Tennessee State University and author of a study about the media's coverage of religion.

"I think the general challenge is that all reporters recognize that religion is a potent force in American life," he said.

Wyatt's study, conducted last year for the Freedom Forum at Vanderbilt University, concluded that there is more ignorance about religion than bias in the average newsroom. It also concluded that the nation's newspapers and broadcasters largely refuse to take religion coverage seriously.

A study done by the Media Research Center, a conservative watchdog group that looks for liberalism in the media, found that only 211 of 18,000 network news stories in 1993 dealt specifically with religion.

"Peggy Wehmeyer is a positive step. But how many stories has she done so far? I would say less than 10," said Tim Graham, associate editor of the Media Research Center publication "Media Watch."

"You could argue that Wehmeyer's stories are better stories, but the number of stories are not going to increase greatly in 1994 vs. 1993," he said.

Wehmeyer's boss, ABC producer Sally Holm, said fellow journalists at ABC struggled with the idea of hiring a "Southern, a born-again Christian."

Peggy Wehmeyer
Blazing new trails

"I think they're not used to seeing these kinds of stories on the air. They have to get used to using Jesus in pieces," Holm said.

One reason it has taken so long for a network news program to get serious about religion coverage, she said, is that it's "tough television."

"Clearly, you can't take pictures of angels," she said.

Wehmeyer, 39, became a religion reporter at ABC affiliate WFAA-TV in Dallas in 1981, convincing skeptical editors that religion stories were hot news. She was considered a pioneer then — and remains so in her new job today.

A wholesome and energetic mother of two, she grew up without religion.

Her parents separated when she was a child and her father took her and her siblings to live in Mexico and the West Indies.

It wasn't until she was a student at the University of Texas at Austin that she found God when a Christian speaker on campus "turned on the light." A year later, she learned her mother was a German Jew — a family secret — and that many of her relatives had fled the Holocaust.

Shocked and confused, she went to Europe to visit relatives who survived concentration camps. Her Christian faith was unshaken, she said. To her mind, the only difference between a Christian and a Jew is that Christians believe the Messiah has come.

Wehmeyer has studied the Bible diligently for 20 years and attends a Bible study at a local evangelical church. She also studied at the Dallas Theological Seminary and worked there as information director. She considers herself a religious conservative, but does not align herself with the religious right.

"I'm not the religion police. I'm a journalist," she responds. "I have no agenda or need to convince people that my view of the world is correct."

Whether you're a good journalist, whether you're an atheist, a born-again Christian, a Muslim or a Jew, you should be able to cover religion well. And I would say that someone who has faith has a good chance of doing it well."

Activist pastor to lead nation's largest black church

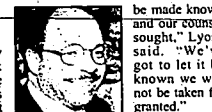

By David Briggs
The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS—A politically active pastor who says the black church should be a force to be reckoned with in Washington was elected to lead the National Baptist Convention U.S.A. Inc. into the third millennium.

The Rev. Henry J. Lyons, who headed the Rev. Jesse Jackson's 1984 and 1988 presidential campaigns in Florida, won election last Thursday to a five-year term as president of the nation's largest black church.

At a victory celebration early today, Lyons vowed to work to increase the political and economic power of blacks.

"Our presence must be felt, must be made known and our counsel sought," Lyons said. "We've got to let it be known we will not be taken for granted."

Lyons, 52, a "convention vice president and pastor of Bethel Memorial Baptist Church in St. Petersburg, received 3,545 votes to win the five-man race. The Rev. W. Franklin Richardson, a pastor in the Westchester County, N.Y., town of Mount Vernon and the convention's longtime general secretary, finished second with 3,014 votes.

Lyons succeeds the Rev. T.J. Jemison, the Louisiana pastor who was prohibited from seeking re-election after 12 years in office.

The election of the convention's third president in 42 years comes at a critical juncture for black churches. Do increasing pressure to tackle AIDS, violence, poverty and the dissolution of family life more aggressively.

In 1961, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. and some other civil-rights leaders left the convention to help form the Progressive National Baptist Convention after their candidate lost a turbulent bid for the presidency.

With an estimated 8 million members in 33,000 churches, the convention claims to be the world's largest black organization.

Lyons said the convention will seek to work closely with the National Congressional Black Caucus, President Clinton and federal agencies to address issues blacks face in their communities. From the loss of young men with bleak economic prospects to prison to a shortage of affordable housing.

Jesse Jackson stopped by Lyons' headquarters early today to offer congratulations. He said Lyons may take the convention's political and social issues to a new level.

When Clinton visits the convention later today, Jackson said, he will find in Lyons a leader willing to "speak the truth to power, and not just be awestruck."

Lyons said his plan for "total recovery" of the convention includes instituting a systematic plan for getting money, rather than relying on appeals and registration fees.

Clawson

The Clawsons have lived in the Twin Falls area for 37 years. He was employed at the College of Southern Idaho for 25 years and served as bishop of the Hazelton Ward. She has served in Primary, as ward librarian and in a stake Relief Society presidency. The couple has six children and 15 grandchildren.

The Times-News welcomes news of church missionaries. Send information to Ellen Thomason, The Times-News, P.O. Box 548, Twin Falls, ID 83303. Deadline is noon Thursday for publication on the Saturday religion page.

Prohibitionist group fighting for survival

By Shawn Dorman
The Associated Press

FREDERICK, Md. — A century after an ax-swinging, Bible-thumping, teetotaling temperance named Carry Nation terrorized saloons in the Midwest, the movement she made famous is looking for a new identity.

The number of members in the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, who pledge to abstain from "distilled, fermented and malt liquors" and "discourage the use of and traffic in the same," has decreased steadily since the repeal of Prohibition in 1933.

Prohibition began in 1920 and during the 1920s there were 1.5 million of the teetotal crusaders against drink, tobacco and other "immoral" activities. Today, there are only about 25,000.

"I don't know what happened," said Rachel Kelly, president of the temperance union for the past six years.

The organization held its 120th convention last month in a small western Maryland hotel ballroom with ample room for the 400 members attending from across the country.

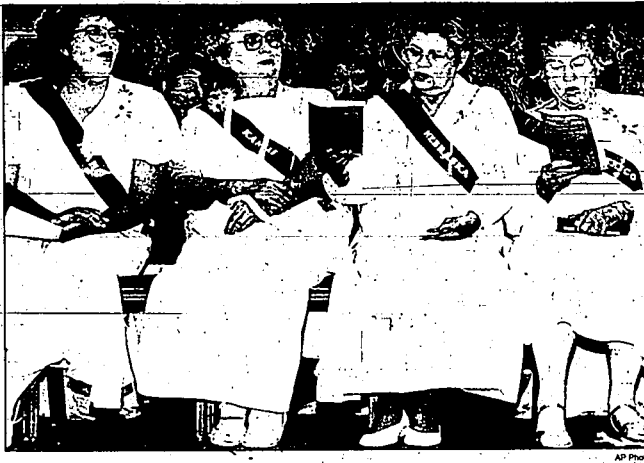

During a prayer meeting at the opening session, the cries for change were evident as delegates sought solutions to the union's dwindling membership.

"I praise God because I know he's bigger than what's the matter, one member yelled out. 'If he can give life to Adam, and Eve, he can breathe life into us again,' another added.

Since 1874, the religious group has battled against the use of tobacco and alcohol. Lately, the fight has turned to pressuring Congress to raise federal alcohol taxes.

The group also publishes and distributes "The Young Crusader," a monthly magazine for children, and leaflets with titles like "Alcohol — Death's Friend."

The union is trying to attract younger working women by relying less on rigid nighttime meetings marked by testimonials and prayer services, said Michael Zitucci, a spokesman. Instead, the organization is promoting informal luncheon meetings and urging state chapters to become involved in a wide range of social and religious issues.

In South Carolina, members have joined the fight to bring prayer to public schools, he said. The South Dakota chapter is lobbying against gambling issues during the election campaign.

"There is a very big place for them, if they take a much broader perspective," said Bernard Phillips, professor of sociology at Boston University.

Marion VanLoh, a member from South Dakota, urged members to develop programs that "hit people where they have a need."

"What we need is action where the action is," said. "We've got to have a cause. And after that we're going to need something else we can work on."

Among the programs now being promoted by the union's Youth Temperance Council is the "True Love Waits" campaign, in which teen-agers sign a pledge to abstain from sex until marriage.

Surviving through the next century also means revamping the union's organizational structure and recovering from a $140,000 budget deficit brought on by dwindling membership, said the Rev. Henrietta Griffith, president of the Kentucky chapter.

"We are drowning in red ink," she said.

One option for reviving the organization may be to revert to the kind of radical action the temperance movement used to be known for, Mrs. Kelly said.

Carry Nation gained notoriety in the 1890s for leading groups of women on destructive jaunts through saloons in Kansas and surrounding states. She was the founder of one of the group's chapters in Kansas.

"I dared to, I would take my hatchet into these taverns and bars and do the same thing Carry Nation did," she said, "but I'd probably get shot."

Columnist takes on the U.N. and its focus

By Joy Thompson

This was a busy week in the religious world.

Monday marked the opening of the U.N. Conference on Population and Development, which was heavily criticized by Catholic and Muslim leaders.

Monday evening ushered in the Jewish New Year, which kicked off a month of religious observances. And Jesus Christ was rumored to return to Earth on Tuesday. Where's a religion columnist to turn?

Well, Rosh Hashana has passed, and Jesus seems to be running behind Harold Camping's schedule. I guess population is the topic of the day.

The U.N. conference aimed to forge a world consensus on how to check the frightening population growth. Its plan advocates among other things birth-control and abortion. Complicating the U.N.'s task was a Vatican-inspired campaign against abortion, supported by Islamic leaders. Both groups believe that abortion is morally wrong.

Many of the delegates to the conference argued that the greater moral wrong would be to allow poor families to continue to fill Third World streets with abandoned and unwanted children, and not inform them of their options.

Muslims are also pushing the tools for responsible family planning. The U.N.'s aim is not to simply promote abortion, they said, but to help improve the quality of life on a soon-to-be-filled-to-capacity Earth.

I can see both sides. I too, am aggravated by the misery in the Third World. I also believe that abortion is murder, and the Bible calls murder sin. But, to focus on one moral issue and ignore the larger issues of greed, selfishness and exploitation is just as wrong.

I don't see the world's problem as too many poor people having too many babies.

The real problem is too much wealth concentrated in the hands of too few people. (It's too bad the U.N. didn't sponsor a conference on international greed.)

And while I don't agree with the focus of the U.N. plan, I do see a humanistic goal searching for a humanistic solution to what it views as a humanistic problem.

At least someone's trying to do something.

On the other hand, I feel the greatest strength of the religious community lies on the spiritual, not the political.

The Vatican and Islamic groups have diverted their energy and resources to fight an idealistic battle against the U.N. plan.

That's a waste. Those resources could be better used in the real-life trenches of the Third World — the spiritual war against sin and despair.

Pastors, ministers and religious leaders of all faiths are in a unique position to prick consciences and challenge the sins of greed and selfishness within their own ranks and throughout the world. They can inspire their congregations to commit money to feed, house and educate the world's poor. They can train members to lay down their lives to save the lives of the poor and give them the precious gift of hope.

There, I feel, lies the more noble fight for people of faith.

Yom Kippur teaches non-Jews Letter

By Jennifer Graham
Knight-Ridder News Service

It is estimated that fewer than 25 percent of American Jews attend Sabbath services each week. Visit a typical synagogue on a typical Friday, and you'll have no trouble finding a seat.

But you'll have trouble on Yom Kippur, which begins at sundown on Sept. 14. On the so-called "Sabbath of Sabbaths," reservations are required.

For non-Jews, you won't be assured a seat unless you are in "good financial standing" — meaning that you've paid your annual membership dues.

Many temples issue tickets. (Of course, synagogues make exceptions for students, visitors and the needy.)

What is this wonderful holiday, so important that 61 percent of American Jews fast and 59 percent attend services?

What is it about this day that draws people to the synagogue who rarely visit during the rest of the year?

Considering the statistics, the non-Jew might suspect this is a sort of Hebrew Christmas, a fun and fanciful holiday that involves gift-giving, merriment and food beyond compare.

Wrong. Yom Kippur is the "Day of Atonement," the most solemn of Jewish holidays, and the most demanding. And it is an observance that people of other faiths would do well to emulate.

Yom Kippur (pronounced ki-poor) ends 10 days of reflection and repentance that began at sundown Sept. 5 on Rosh Hashana, the Jewish New Year.

Its origins are explained in the 10th chapter of Leviticus, in which God gives Moses and the Israelites a plan of action to absolve them from their sins: "For you on this day, atonement shall be made for you, to cleanse you, from all your sins you shall be clean before the Lord. It is a sabbath of complete rest to you, and you shall deny a harsher act, a statute forever (Leviticus 16:31, New Revised Standard Version).

Yom Kippur might be a day of complete rest to the Lord, but to a lot of us, it is no day in the park. You aren't supposed to work; but you are also supposed to eat, drink, wear leather (considered luxurious) or have sexual relations. The most devout stay awake all night, praying and studying scriptures.

Believers will be at the synagogue most of the day for services that include a public recitation of sins and memorials to the dead.

The preceding nine days can be grueling, as well. Jews believe that on Rosh Hashana, God opens the Book of Life, where each person's fate for the year is recorded. The book is not closed until Yom Kippur, however, so for 10 days, Jews concentrate on prayer, charity and repentance to improve their chances for a good year. Some Jews approach people they might have wronged to ask for forgiveness.

Given the demands of Yom Kippur, and its somber nature, one might wonder why so many Jews flock to the synagogues for it, even if it might be their only appearance of the year.

Lackadaisical Christians do the same thing each year, on Christmas and Easter.

But those are joyous holidays, days which demand nothing from the participant but good will and a cheery heart.

True, the Roman Catholic, Eastern and Anglican churches have a solemn season in Lent, the 40 days preceding Easter. And Muslims fast and repent during the month of Ramadan. But there's something different about the period from Rosh Hashana to Yom Kippur, called, appropriately, the Days of Awe.

"For their uncompromising, sheer spirituality, these days evoke the most profound religious emotions," writes Jacob Neusner, a professor of religious studies at the University of South Florida in the "Festschrift Introduction to American Judaism."

"The synagogue takes the form of a gathering of the saints, with much introspection, confession of sin, quest for inner purity. For a few hours, we might well find ourselves in a medieval cloister or yeshiva, where people live in the here and now solely in preparation for the life to come, and really believe in sin and punishment, but also in repentance and forgiveness."

In Christian America, where the concept of sin and hell have become taboo in mainline pulpits, Yom Kippur indeed inspires awe.

Wiccan replies to letter

Last week, Beverly Frazier launched an attack on the Beauty Way of Wicca and me in a letter to the editor. However convinced people like she may be about the absolute rightness of their religion, the pluralist nature of America requires them to recognize the legitimacy and good faith of others' religions and spiritual paths. They should not demonize those who don't believe or worship exactly the way they do.

I'm sure Beverly Frazier is strong in her religion. I respect her and her convictions. It's too bad Ms. Frazier cannot return the charity of respect that I enjoy from most Christians and other people of faith. Unlike what Ms. Frazier would have folks believe through her misrepresentation, Wicca is not a new religion based on old satanic beliefs. Wicca invokes the most powerful force in the cosmos — love — that glues the universe together.

Wiccans promote perfect love and trust and believe all life is interconnected and sacred, all part of a fragile web of existence. Wiccans devoutly believe in harming no one (except in self-defense).

Insinuations or accusations that Wiccans perform blood sacrifices are vicious and insidious falsifications and lies. Another lie is that Wiccans believe or worship Satan, — which Judeo-Christian demigod would be antithetical to Wicca.

Kennedy approves of women priests

BOSTON — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy says he supports allowing women to become priests in the Roman Catholic Church.

"I count myself among the growing number of Catholics who support the ordination of women as priests," the Massachusetts Democrat said in a statement.

The church forbids women from becoming priests. But this isn't the only issue where Kennedy is at odds with church doctrine. He also supports abortion rights, despite the church's opposition to abortion.

Kennedy said he has long believed privately that the priesthood should be open to women, but had never stated his view publicly until now.

However, Kennedy said he respects the fact that other Catholics may not share his view, and he said as a public official, he doesn't think he should be trying to influence church policy.

Aircraft might fly Sunday mornings

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Charlotte-Douglas International Airport wants to start observing the Sunday morning hours of worship quite so religiously.

Traditionally, the airport has rerouted jets around neighboring congregations. But the airport is too busy to do that now and officials await approval to insulate six churches and reactivate a runway they avoid using Sunday mornings.

Living in the shadow of the nation's 14th busiest airport, the Rev. Charles Thompson of Shopton Road Baptist Church is resigned to the fact planes may soon be flying overhead during his sermon. He's also hoping the combination of a little more insulation and a normally vocal minister can prevail.

"If I can't outreach an airplane," he said, "I'm not in very good shape."

Since opening its north-south runway in 1979, the airport has tried to keep it clear of traffic between 9 a.m. and noon Sundays — part of the deal made at the time with neighborhood churches.

Then, the airport had about 20 flights during those hours. Now, some 70 flights fly in and out on Sunday mornings, which means air traffic gets backed up on the two runways being used at that time.

The airport has asked the Federal Aviation Administration to approve a plan to put in added insulation and double-pane windows in six churches within about 2 1/2 miles of the third runway.

People await arrival of Virgin Mary

COLD SPRING, Ky. — City officials estimated 8,000 people showed up at a church on the second anniversary of the predicted appearance of the Virgin Mary.

Police Chief Gene Schweitzer said he was unaware of any reports of sightings of the Virgin Mary at St. Joseph Church.

Some of those who came to the church in this northern Kentucky town last Wednesday said they came to pray, not necessarily expecting to see a vision of Mary.

"For me, it's a personal pilgrimage, something I do from my own heart," said Victoria Page, 46, of Louisville, who has visited Marian shrines in France and Italy. "I find a lot of peace in it. It's something different. It has a lot to do with faith."

On Aug. 31, 1992, about 7,000 people converged at the church after a Batavia, Ohio, woman said Mary would appear there. Church officials declined to identify the woman, who said she is a visionary.

Several in the 1992 crowd said they saw Mary in a tree or on the wall outside the church. The Roman Catholic Diocese of Covington said that nothing miraculous occurred. Last year, 5,000 people reported the same "visions."

The faithful came this year on 23 chartered buses. At night, 40 people led the crowd in prayer in the city of 2,800.

Memories not good ones on Pope John Paul's trip

By Jasmina Kuzmanovic
The Associated Press

ZAGREB, Croatia — The pope canceled his trip to Bosnia, but he's still headed to neighboring Croatia this weekend. This papal visit is long overdue: It has been more than 800 years since a pope last reached Croatian territory.

And even then, it was by mistake.

A ship carrying Pope Alexander III to Venice was blown onto a Croatian island during a storm in 1177. Catholic Hungary ruled Croatia then and for the next eight centuries, and the Vatican deemed a visit to Croatia unnecessary.

Now, with Croatia free both of Hungary and the communist Yugoslav federation it broke from in 1991, John Paul II has decided it is high time for a pilgrimage to this most Catholic of Balkan states. He will make the two-day visit today and Sunday.

Seventy-seven percent of Croatia's 4.4 million people are Roman Catholic, many of them fervent believers.

Zagreb church officials expect nearly 1 million pilgrims to come to the Hippodrome on Sunday to attend a Mass celebrated by John Paul or to watch it on giant TV screens outside the horse racing stadium.

The visit has assumed additional significance with the pope's decision to cancel a visit Thursday to Sarajevo, the capital of neighboring Bosnia, because of concern that crowds there could be targeted by Serb snipers.

John Paul may pay homage at the tomb of Cardinal Alojzije Stepinac, a staunch anti-communist. But such a papal gesture is sure to stir controversy.

Although Stepinac fought off attempts by the communist Yugoslav government to split the Croatian church from the Vatican — and was jailed as a result — he also was an early supporter of Croatia's Nazi puppet regime that took power in 1941.

That regime was responsible for the extermination of hundreds of thousands of Serbs, Gypsies and Jews. Though Stepinac began denouncing the genocidal policies as early as 1942, many Serbs still regard Stepinac as a war criminal.

Croatians again wait with Serbs, sensitivities remain high.

Serbs still control one-third of Croatia; they captured in 1991 during its war of independence from Yugoslavia.

Most of the world supports Zagreb's claim to all of the territory, and Croatian President Franjo Tudjman on Wednesday said the papal visit gave "moral support" to his country's struggle to regain what it lost.

But the Croatian government also has been faulted for whipping up nationalist fears and passions similar to those that sparked the carnage of 50 years ago. Rebel Serb leader Milan Martić, in a letter to the pontiff, published Wednesday, blamed "Croatian state terror over the (Croatian) Serbs" for the 1991 war.

But the church has changed. Cardinal Franjo Kuharic, modern-day successor to Stepinac, has been a voice of moderation.

Though he openly welcomed the Vatican government that broke from Yugoslavia after 50 years of Communist rule, he coolly rejected Tudjman's efforts to exploit the church in his bid to incite passions against Eastern Orthodox Serbs.

And when war broke out in 1991, the cardinal resisted the official hate talk and repeatedly pleaded for forgiveness to both sides.
