$60 billion bid for middle class

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Trying to reclaim the middle class he courted in 1992, President Clinton Thursday proposed a $60 billion mix of tax cuts to help Americans raise and educate their children.

"More jobs are not enough. We have to raise incomes," Clinton declared as he joined a bidding war for a middle-class tax cut already under way on Capitol Hill.

He also outlined deep cuts in government programs to help pay for the cuts. Republicans scoffed that Clinton was following their own proposals for tax relief and said he was welcome to help them.

Clinton's plan — centerpiece of a 10-minute address from the Oval Office — would provide a $500-per-child tax credit for all children under age 13 in families with incomes up to $60,000 a year.

Families earning between $60,000 and $75,000 a year could claim a reduced child credit. Those earning over $75,000 would not get any credit.

Please see TAX/A2

Highlights of Clinton's tax cut plan

The Associated Press

COSTS: Total price tag: $60 billion over five years. The money would come from $24 billion in spending cuts and a two-year freeze on discretionary government spending that would save $52 billion, leaving an extra $16 billion for deficit reduction.

TAX CREDIT FOR CHILDREN: A $500 tax credit for all children ages 12 and under in families with gross income of up to $60,000 a year. Families earning between $60,000 and $75,000 a year could claim a reduced credit. Those earning more than $75,000 would not get any credit.

TAX DEDUCTION FOR EDUCATION: Families earning $100,000 a year or less could deduct up to $10,000 a year for college tuition or other post-high school education. Families earning between $100,000 and $120,000 would get a reduced reduction. Those earning more than $120,000 would not get a deduction.

INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS: Families earning up to $100,000 annually could take a tax deduction of up to $2,000 per person for putting money into individual retirement accounts. The maximum IRA deduction would begin to phase out at an income of $80,000. Current law only allows IRA deductions for families earning up to $50,000.

SPENDING CUTS: All Cabinet departments would survive, but scores of programs would be reduced or eliminated. The biggest hits would come in the Departments of Energy, Transportation, and Housing and Urban Development, along with the General Services Administration and the Office of Personnel Management.

EFFECTIVE DATE: All of the tax and spending proposals would take effect Jan. 1, 1996.

When Stephen Tigner refused freshman initiation at Shoshone High School, he was threatened and physically assaulted.

One family vs. tradition

Despite complaint, Shoshone High initiation will continue

By Frank E. Lockwood
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — Stephen Tigner, 15, is a boy accustomed to taunts and teasing. But when seniors at Shoshone High School wanted Tigner and other freshmen to sport silly outfits for a freshman initiation, Tigner refused to go along.

He had heard that other boys in other years had endured diapers or feminine attire during homecoming week — all in the name of tradition. He wouldn't be hazed, he decided.

"I always get teased at school, ridiculed. I'd rather not be humiliated and ridiculed," Tigner explained.

So Tigner announced he was skipping initiation.

Life got ever more miserable. On school grounds, he was threatened. Away from school, he was tackled, attacked by rock throwers and splattered with french fry sauce as he walked past a local politician's house.

Some of the sauce missed its mark, hitting the home of a city councilman instead. The taunts escalated.

School officials, including Principal Ben Christensen, said they were powerless to protect Tigner off of school grounds. Told of his plight, they advised him to call police.

Instead, Tigner's parents, Clyde and Claudia Tigner, asked the Shoshone School Board to intervene and abolish initiation. But board members didn't share the Tigners' distaste for the ritual. Monday, the School Board voted to keep the event — with some changes.

Shoshone Superintendent Max Excell said the message from other parents was, "We don't have any problems with it."

Initiation, he said, is about "bonding."

Carter role mixed bag for Clinton

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — At a time when President Clinton is struggling to convey leadership and reinvent his presidency, Jimmy Carter has stepped in again to work on a seemingly intractable international crisis.

It is the third time in a year that Carter has done so, leading critics to assail Clinton's command of foreign policy.

As Carter prepared for possible talks with Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic, Clinton aides insisted Clinton does not have to do anything on the person on the perpetrator's former resident in Bosnia — or anywhere else.

While voicing skepticism about Karadzic's sincerity, they also said any progress Carter could achieve would be welcome, given the inability of the West to end the Bosnia conflict.

But Carter's newest role — following his negotiations in North Korea and Haiti — comes at a particularly sensitive time for the White House, with Clinton trying to regain the upper hand after the Republican takeover of Congress.

"It does raise questions about the administration's ability to do the country's business," said Brookings Institution foreign policy analyst Helmut Sonnenfeldt. "I'm always uneasy when outsiders ... get into these situations because you're not in control and you can get maneuvered into positions that you may not like."

Republican partisans were quick to pounce on the latest Carter venture as a sign of weakness in U.S. policy.

"It's embarrassing to Clinton and bad for the United States to have a semi-autonomous foreign policy run by an ex-president," said Bill Kristol, chairman of Project for the Republic Future.

Even within the administration there was division over whether the White House should make Carter an official emissary or keep his mission at arm's length.

"Even though in the end he will do our bidding ... it makes the administration ... look like they're not in on it," said an official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

But Clinton aides said it raises Carter's standing as an independent that allowed him to provide an opening for Karadzic.

Butterflies aren't free

The Associated Press

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Two men have pleaded guilty in the nation's first federal case against butterfly poachers.

The men face up to five years in prison and $250,000 in fines for conspiring to violate U.S. wildlife laws by netting 2,200 rare butterflies on federal land, U.S. Attorney Michael Yamaguchi said Thursday.

Richard J. Skalski, 39, a pest exterminator from Redwood City, and Mare L. Grinnell, 40, a Santa Rosa businessman, are to be sentenced next year. They entered pleas separately over the past week.

The two men admitted taking butterflies from federal preserves in 10 states, Mexico and Germany. Among U.S. sites were the Grand Canyon, Point Reyes National Seashore and Yosemite National Park.

Chronic diseases kill fewer Americans

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Despite the outbreak of AIDS, Americans are living longer than ever — an average of almost 76 years, the government reported Thursday.

The overall death rate in the United States was the lowest ever in 1992, falling to 504.5 per 100,000 people, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said. A total of 2,175,613 people died.

The 1992 infant mortality rate reached an all-time low of 8.5 deaths per 1,000 live births, compared with 8.9 per 1,000 in 1991.

The average life expectancy climbed to an all-time high of 75.8, the number of years a person born in 1992 could expect to live. That was up from 75.5 in 1991.

Death rates for 12 of the 15 leading killers dropped in 1992, said CDC statistician Ken Koehneke. But deaths from AIDS jumped sharply and there was little or no change in the rates of death from diabetes and kidney disease.

"Things look very good," Koehneke said. "Unfortunately, the main increase was in HIV," the virus that causes AIDS. "HIV is definitely holding back bigger gains in life expectancy," he said.

The death rate for AIDS jumped 11.5 percent, AIDS, which killed 33,566 Americans in 1992, rose a notch to become the eighth leading cause of death that year.

The CDC expects the AIDS death rate to jump even higher for 1993. A definition change will boost the rate.

Top 10 causes of death

While deaths from AIDS are more numerous than ever, lower death rates from other major diseases mean Americans are living longer. The average U.S. life expectancy is now 75.8 years.

House freshmen on the move to new offices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oldies music fans looking to get their "I Got You (Ba-De-Ba-De)" records autographed may have to do some huffing and puffing.

Having the best known name in the House freshman class didn't win Sonny Bono a conveniently located office.

Out of luck in the House office lottery, the California Republican of "Sonny and Cher" fame wound up with digs on the fifth floor of the Cannon building — a place where few elevators go. The floor houses not only members of Congress, but Capitol odds and ends packed into messy metal storage cages.

Incoming House Speaker Newt Gingrich said recently that he hoped not to have to put any of his new freshmen into the fifth-floor Cannon wasteland. But it wasn't to be.

"I don't care. Whatever," said Bono. "If I have to take a flight of stairs, that doesn't bother me. I'll get some exercise."

The Republican elections sweep turned the Capitol real-estate market upside down — sometimes messily.

Rep. Robert K. Dornan, R-Calif., for instance, a conservative known for theatrical attacks on Democrats he stages nightly on the floor of the Furniture and stacks of boxes line the fourth-floor halls of the Rayburn House Office Building as Thursday is moving day.

House will be moving into the personal office space of outgoing House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash.

Lotteries take place in phases, in order of seniority. So newcomers — Democrats and Republicans alike — got the last picks. But even some of the GOP's 73 newcomers cleaned up. After all, their overall odds were much better than their 13 Democratic counterparts.

Because freshmen choose their lottery numbers in alphabetical order, Roger Wicker, R-Miss., was destined to choose last in the freshman lottery Monday. But the only number left by then happened to be the best number for the freshman: 1. Wicker will be moving into Cannon 206, an office low enough from the ground for easy access and serviced by plenty of elevators. "It was close to the Capitol and that's why I chose it," he said.

Former Seattle Seahawks wide receiver Steve Largent, R-Okla., replaced Jim Inhofe, a former con-

'So much for majority perks.'

— Rep. Helen Chenoweth of Idaho, who drew a poor office gressman who just became a senator, before the 103rd Congress ended. So Largent got to pick his space with that crowd; not the freshmen.

"I got lucky," said Largent, who quickly added, "I'd have an office in a closet. It really doesn't matter to me."

Rep. Helen Chenoweth, R-Idaho, unfortunately, got the closet, choosing next to last among freshmen.

"So much for majority perks," she quipped, describing her office at 1719 Longworth as "pretty grim kind of dim and dark." She hopes she'll at least get a paint job.

But paint won't solve the problem for most of her staff, who will be located on the other side of the building, "about half a mile away."

"I could live with pea-green walls, but I want my staff with me," she said.

Taxpayers will see no bonanza from any plan to reduce levies

By Martin Crousinger
The Associated Press

Analysis

WASHINGTON — Don't plan on filling your pockets from any of the three tax-cut proposals on the drawing board.

The Clinton, Gingrich and Gephardt packages are long on rhetoric about helping the downwind middle class but short on the bucks to pay for more than pennies a day in tax relief.

There is a reason for that. Any time the government talks about giving tax relief to the middle class, it can get expensive very quickly.

And with a law requiring that any tax cuts be offset by spending reductions, the economics of the situation become apparent.

Of course, the whole process has more to do with politics than economics. Economists believe tax cuts should come only when there is a need to boost the nation out of recession — hardly the situation at present with the Federal Reserve boosting interest rates to slow the economy down.

But after the landslide victory Republicans rang up with their talk of less government and lower taxes, no politician wants to listen to what a bunch of economists believe.

"After 15 years of rising taxes and shrinking wages, it's time to put something back in the pockets of our working families," Rep. Dick Gephardt, D-

Mo., declared on Tuesday in unveiling his tax cut proposal.

Gephardt's approach would be to offer tax relief to every family in America making less than $75,000 a year, regardless of whether they have children or not.

He didn't say how much money each family would get from his plan, but government statistics show that even as little as $200 per family — less than $4 per week — could total $21.4 billion annually.

That figure is based on the latest Internal Revenue Service statistics showing that 107 million taxpayers, 94 percent of the total, had pretax incomes under $75,000.

That $21.4 billion estimate, or $107 billion over five years, also is the price tag the Republicans have put on the centerpiece of their tax relief program — a $500 tax credit per child for families earning less than $300,000 a year.

For a family making $100,000 with two children, that would mean a reduction in their taxes of $1,000. But the 64 percent of taxpayers who have no dependent children would get nothing from the Republican proposal.

And Democrats complain that the program, by offering a tax credit rather than a refund, would do nothing for working families so poor that they pay nothing. A family with two children making less than $15,000 annually would see no benefit.

The administration was working on the details of Clinton's plan right up to the last minute. It was expected to provide tax relief to families with children but with a lower cutoff than the Republican plan, possibly $100,000.

The administration has made a point that it, unlike the GOP, will specifically spell out how to pay for cuts.

In advance of Clinton's speech, estimates of the cost of Clinton's tax relief were around $55 billion over five years — with $35 billion of that for families with children and the rest going to provide a new tax deduction for the costs of college and vocational training.

By contrast, the price tag on the Republican "Contract With America" package was put at $184 billion over five years, including tolling back tax increases on Social Security recipients passed last year, a cut in the capital gains tax and other business tax breaks.

While Republicans contend they will come up with more than enough spending cuts to pay for their program, they did not spell out where they would come from.

The betting is that whatever tax relief gets passed next year will be far below the GOP contract plan, especially since both parties have put Social Security and other popular entitlement programs off-limits for budget savings.

Raid gets man rich

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The government will pay $2.75 million to a man who suffered permanent injuries when federal agents shot him during a drug raid based on an informant's false tip.

Under the agreement reached Wednesday, Donald Carlson, who was shot three times in 1992 after opening fire on the agents who battered their way into his home, will receive $2.5 million plus $250,000 placed in a medical trust fund.

Family sues doctor in abuse case

PITTSBURGH — A couple and the teenage daughter who once leveled sensational charges of sexual molestation against them are suing a psychiatrist who they say failed to evaluate whether the girl's tales were lies.

Richard and Cheryl Althaus, who were arrested on abuse charges before their daughter, Nicole, recanted, contend Dr. Judith Cohen should have asked more probing questions of the girl.

On Thursday, a state jury began deliberations in the malpractice case against Cohen and her former employer, the Western Psychiatric Institute and Clinic at the University of Pittsburgh.

The Althauses have not specified how much they are seeking in damages.

Lawmakers back Rowland

WASHINGTON — A bipartisan group of almost 100 members of Congress urged President Clinton to name retiring Rep. J. Roy Rowland, D-Ga., to replace ousted Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders.

Rowland, 68, is a former family physician who was unenthusiastically critical of the Clinton health care plan. He also has opposed higher taxes on tobacco.

Rowland led a bipartisan House group that crafted a health care reform plan that stopped far short of Clinton's goal of universal coverage and avoided his mandate on employers to pick up most of the costs.

He also has been a leader in efforts to prevent infant mortality, helped create the National AIDS Commission and sponsored legislation that provided cancer treatment for veterans exposed to radiation in the 1940s.

Doctors lament welfare cuts

WASHINGTON — Millions more Americans will be forced to go without health insurance if the new Congress slashes the welfare rolls, doctors who favor a Canadian-style, tax-financed universal health system said Thursday.

Almost 40 million Americans now lack health insurance, and their ranks would have swelled to 50 million had it not been for a dramatic expansion in Medicaid, according to the doctors' report. "The Growing Epidemic of Uninsurance."

Study links herpes, AIDS patients

WASHINGTON — Genetic evidence of a new herpes virus found in tumors of Kaposi's sarcoma suggests the deadly cancer that strikes more than a fourth of all gay men with AIDS may be caused by a virus.

A research group led by a team at Columbia University reports that unique DNA sequences, or fragments of genes, were isolated from tissues of Kaposi's sarcoma lesions taken from AIDS patients and that the gene material may be from a previously unknown human herpes virus.

Report details world's hungry

WASHINGTON — About 1 billion people are ill or disabled because they didn't eat enough of three vital nutrients — a deficiency that could be eliminated at a cost of $1 a year for each affected person, the World Bank reported Friday.

Deficiencies of Vitamin A, iodine and iron cause blindness, goiter, anemia, retardation and death in over 1 billion people, and at least twice that many are at risk, the report said.

Insurer will alter policy on eye care

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's largest vision care insurance plan agreed Thursday under government pressure to halt a practice the Justice Department said virtually ended discounts on eye exams, glasses and contact lenses for its 15 million customers and others.

Vision Service Plan, of Rancho Cordova, Calif., which insures consumers in 42 states and the District of Columbia and will enter four more states Jan. 1, agreed to stop the practice immediately to settle a complaint filed in U.S. District Court by the department's antitrust division.

The insurance company had required its 17,000 member optometrists and ophthalmologists to charge its clients the same lowest prices they charged dry customers. This is the first case in which the Justice Department has challenged one of these so-called "most favored nation" clauses operating on a nationwide basis.

"We believe this has had the effect of stopping discounting nationwide and raising prices for consumers," Assistant Attorney General Anne K. Bingham, head of the antitrust division, told a news conference.

Where Vision Services dominated a market, Bingham said, "Doctors have necessarily had to think twice before cutting their price" for a competing discount insurance plan or for individual customers because they would have to give the same low price to virtually every customer.

In California, where 90 percent of the state's optometrists and ophthalmologists are members of the plan, the average price for an eye exam and glasses or contacts is between $100 and $110, she said.

In eastern states where Vision Service does not dominate markets, the same service averages $70 to $80, she said.

Lobbyists deck congressional halls

WASHINGTON (AP) — Playing Santa Claus to Congress, two package delivery workers cruised the corridors of the Rayburn House office building this week, pushing oversized carts piled high with presents from lobbyists.

In the Longworth building next door, another messenger loaded with gourmet fruit baskets was hopping from office to office to drop them off.

So what is the thoughtful lobbyist giving to members of Congress this holiday season?

From Ralph Vinovich of the Tobacco Institute, it's a hefty box of gourmet oranges and grapefruits for the Senate Republican cloakroom. RJR Nabisco has shipped in hundreds of wooden casks laden with cookies, crackers and other munchies made by the company.

The United Transportation Union is distributing pewter serving plates. And the Recording Industry of America has sent double-compact disc sets of Barbra Streisand's concert at Madison Square Garden.

Members of Congress and aides are allowed to accept gifts valued at up to $50. For anything worth more than that, a specific waiver must be obtained from the ethics committee, and it must be reported in annual financial disclosures.

But it may be the last year for the traditional Christmas largesse on Capitol Hill. Under pressure to reform itself, Congress is poised to enact lobbying and gift legislation this year that could ban most gift-giving by lobbyists.

Incoming Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., has promised early action on the lobbying and gift issue, and the bill's Democratic supporters say they plan to re-introduce the bills that died in the last session of Congress.

because of Republican roadblocks.

In the meantime, the practice continues. Some congressional aides say the gifts are not as numerous or as extravagant as in past years, but a typical Capitol Hill office still collects a hefty pile of presents.

Among the bounty:

• Bottles of chardonnay wine from the Securities Industry Association, and another chardonnay from the Duberstein Group, a lobbying firm.

• Four-pound boxes of candy from long-distance company MCI, Belgian chocolates from General Instrument Corp., almonds from Blue Diamond Growers, eight-gallon tins of popcorn in assorted flavors from Americitech, the regional telephone company, and from Cray Research, the supercomputer maker, cookies from BellSouth, and tote bags stuffed with food from the National Food Processors Association.

• Gift boxes of sample products, including toilet paper, from Kimberly-Clark; boxed product assortments, including pain relievers, from pharmaceutical maker Bristol-Myers Squibb; and T-shirts, salad dressings, and other food items from Philip Morris.

• Toy carliners from Caterpillar, Inc., Christmas wreaths from Weyerhaeuser Corp., and holiday wrapping paper from Champion International Corp.

• Gourmet fruit selections from Trinity Marine Group of Guilford, Miss., and more fruit from drug maker Merck & Co.

• A large gourmet food basket, including fancy cheeses, crackers and candy, sent to Dole's office by the National Association of Wholesaler-Distributors.

Women's advocates wage new campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Few American women know that if they are raped, their birth control fails, they just forget in the heat of the moment, they may still have a chance at preventing pregnancy.

Women's health advocates are out to change that, petitioning the government to approve popular birth-control pills as "morning-after" contraception and promoting "emergency contraception kits."

"A lot of abortions could be avoided and a lot of unplanned pregnancies could be avoided if people knew to use this method," said Dr. Jane Hodgson, a founder of the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology.

But the campaign has opened a new political front: "Pro-abortionists have tacitly acknowledged that the birth-control pill can cause early abortion," said Judge Brown of the anti-abortion group American Life League.

Studies show high doses of six brands of birth-control pills taken within 72 hours of unprotected intercourse lower a woman's chances of becoming pregnant about 75 percent.

The reason: High levels of the pills' hormone estrogen, or estrogen plus progesterin, can prevent a fertilized egg from traveling through the fallopian tubes and attaching to the uterus, proponents explain.

Today, birth control is sold especially as post-coital contraception everywhere from Switzerland to China, but the Food and Drug Administration doesn't allow packaging on pills sold here to mention emergency use.

Now, health providers are petitioning the FDA to change that, saying the method could lower the country's 3.5 million annual unintended pregnancies.

"Millions of women are being hurt," said Janet Benshoof of the Center for Reproductive Law and Policy, which joined the American Public Health Association, the American Medical Women's Association and Planned Parenthood of New York in the petition.

Feinstein win made official

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The most expensive Senate race ever is now officially over.

Sen. Dianne Feinstein's victory over Republican Michael Huffington was certified Wednesday by Acting Secretary of State Tony Miller.

Feinstein's final margin of victory was 158,564 votes, or 1.9 percent of the 8.5 million votes cast.

Huffington still has not conceded the election, saying he is investigating reports of massive voter fraud. He did not return a telephone call Wednesday.

Huffington spent a record $29 million on his losing campaign, including an unprecedented $27.5 million of his own money. Huffington outspent Feinstein by a 26-1 margin. Their combined expenditures topped $41.4 million.

Heed some wise voices when attacking deficits

Hear, hear! to Meredith Bagby. And hear, hear! to Sen. Bob Kerrey. Bagby is a 20-year-old economics student at Harvard University. When she began learning about how our government taxes, spends and borrows, she was horrified.

So she saved up $2,500 from part-time jobs, did some research and published "The First Annual Report of the United States of America."

"Every corporation must report each year to its shareholders," she said. "The federal government should be required to account to the American people in the same way."

Her 70-page report is modeled on the annual reports of real corporations. The difference is, if a real corporation turned in a report as grim as Bagby's, the stockholders would riot.

Some of her findings:

- Our various levels of government spend more each year than what is on deposit in all of our banks.

- The U.S. government owes nearly $16,000 for every person in America.
- Fourteen cents of every federal tax dollar goes to pay interest on the national debt.

"The symptoms of this ailing society are stark," she wrote. "We spend more than we create. We have unbelievable amounts of debt. We have an ever-growing bureaucracy which takes decisions, money and power out of the hands of citizens."

These words come at a timely moment. We're in our current fix because, for decades, Congress has based its budgets and tax policies not on what's good for the country, but on what's good for re-election campaigns. Our leaders pander to our selfishness and self-delusion, telling us we can have this benefit and that program without paying for them.

Now, with a change in congressional leadership, we have a chance for change. But with the two parties competing to offer the juiciest tax cuts and the least pain, prospects are dubious at best.

Which brings us to Sen. Kerrey. The Nebraska Democrat chaired the Bipartisan Commission on Entitlement and Tax Reform. He is trying to push his balky flock toward meaningful change, but interest groups are already howling with rage.

Among other things, he proposed:

- Raising the retirement age to 70.
- Subjecting all entitlement programs (including Social Security, federal pensions, Medicare and farm subsidies) to means-testing: If you don't need help, you wouldn't get it under Kerrey's plan.
- Cutting most entitlements by 10 percent and then hold their growth in line with inflation and population growth.

These proposals may be harsh, and they may not go anywhere. But this kind of independent, no-holds-barred thinking is what's needed if we really want to reduce our debt.

So far, Kerrey and Meredith Bagby are voices in the wilderness. But they're worth heeding.

Jiminy Cricket, nation needs a conscience

Jim Spencer

O God of compassion, when we have more than we need, we believe it is only our just desert. When others have less than they need, we believe it is their just desert. We are satisfied to respond to their need with charity, not justice. When the poor demand justice, we withdraw even charity and call it fairness. Our charity helps us be callous more than it helps those who endure hard lives. Teach us the justice of Christ, and grant us the gentleness of your Holy Spirit.

I prayed that prayer at a Methodist church service. But it wasn't until Mary Banks called me at work that its meaning finally hit home.

Banks was upset by what she had seen last Friday at the Hampton (Va.) Nutrition Center on East Mercury Boulevard. Banks saw dozens of people forced to stand outside in a cold rain in order to pick up food stamps.

"It made me feel really bad," said Banks, a 47-year-old housekeeper at Langley Air Force Base. "There were old people out there, people of all races. To me, they were treating all those people like deadbeats. They lined them up and degraded them. As a taxpayer, I don't want people treated that way. Did they mean to degrade them, is it just poor management, or is it that they just don't care?" I wonder. But more to the point, I wonder how many other Americans would look at what Mary Banks saw and instead of seeing victims, see a bunch of lazy freeloaders reaching for a handout.

In these days of welfare reform, bashing the poor has become a national sport. The superstar of this blame game is the incoming Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives. It's their fault, New Gingrich tells us, when he speaks of the poor and their problems.

We are only too happy to believe him. It has to be their fault. We didn't create the underclass. We didn't make unwed teenage girls have babies they can't take care of. We didn't make anybody drop out of school without the skills to find or keep a job.

The chorus of the current welfare reform is not "He's not heavy—he's my brother." It's "Let's dump this dead weight."

We are close to deciding that certain Americans, namely the least of us, aren't entitled to health care, housing and food. Those who stand up can count their blessings for anything the rest of us deign to give them. Above all, no one should ever complain about what they must go through to get it.

Right now, the only thing in limitless supply for America's poor is contempt. The new notion in this nation is that poverty is a character flaw. Although they have never been terms of endearment, the words "welfare queen" have been expanded into a catch-all phrase that describes anyone receiving public assistance. This lets those who don't need help replace consolation with condemnation for those who do.

When political leaders encourage the transition from benevolence to malevolence is easy.

Of course, too many children are born out of wedlock. Of course, too many people have grown to depend on welfare checks to pay for clothes, food stamps to pay for food and housing subsidies to pay for rent.

Things are certainly out of control. In the past, I've called for laws that would force welfare mothers and the fathers of their children to use involuntary birth control in exchange for public assistance. I've also endorsed residential schools for the children of the underclass that in some ways approximate the orphanages Gingrich talks about. There's no question this country needs radical welfare reform.

But, as folks like Mary Banks remind us, what it needs just as desperately is a conscience.

Cattle photo misleads on creek

Your picture this week of cattle near Silver Creek and your statement under the picture that "livestock near stream banks is a cause of deteriorating water quality" was misleading as far as Silver Creek is concerned. An aggressive program has been going on for several years to fence livestock from Silver Creek by adjacent property owners. Most of this is being done in cooperation with the Nature Conservancy and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. The main reason for the fencing is to improve fish and wildlife habitat and not because of water quality. Water quality has been very good in Silver Creek in spite of the drought.

Evidently, the picture was to demonstrate poor water quality in Idaho and the reason for the meeting Dec. 12 in Twin Falls hosted by the State Division of Environmental Quality. I attended the Monday night water meeting and was struck by the contrast with the way conservation groups operate. Ms. Kincannon of the Idaho Conservation League and Mr. Marvel of the Idaho Watershed Project dominated the meeting with public comment which berated the state DEQ and the federal Environmental Protection Agency for not doing enough to solve water quality in the state.

The DEQ, in 1992, had identified 36 state streams for cleanup, and the Idaho Conservation League sued to expand the list to 962 streams. The number of streams is probably higher than 36 but why not clean up the worst 36 and then expand the list. By diluting the state's resources over 962 streams, nothing will be done. The ICL is only slowing the agency up in its work.

I maintain these conservation groups of Ms. Kincannon and Mr. Marvel are only understanding for their own personal satisfaction. They attend a lot of meetings and get a lot of press, but they do not "hands on" work to accomplish anything positive. In contrast, the Nature Conservancy is quietly working with land owners in fencing and tree-planting projects. They are raising private and federal funds to pump all out of creeks and buying lands to manage them for improved stream quality. They are accomplishing something positive while the ICL and the Idaho Watershed Project are just attacking the state and federal government in their work.

I think the Nature Conservancy's method is much more effective and can be proven. The results being accomplished on Silver Creek and many other places in Idaho are excellent.

close, a new religion which was born in the 1960s seeks ascendancy — environmentalism. Like prophets perambulating the desert, activists like Bill Chisholm cry out their warnings of impending doom.

In many ways, such warnings ring true. Images of overcrowded streets, rampant crime and pollution are powerful. Species after species disappearing, rain forests being burned off, dangerous radioactive waste, overpopulation, the greenhouse effect and ozone holes are just some of the warnings of these latter-day prophets.

Idaho is among the last states to retain something of the primordial emptiness that the native Americans once enjoyed. Like Mr. Chisholm, I too would like to see fewer fences marring the landscape and less debris cluttering the roadsides (beer cans, junked cars, rusty equipment). However, his "spherical thinking" turns out to be nothing more than an inflated version of circular reasoning.

Take, for example, Chisholm's position on Micron Technology's search for an expansion site. He likens the expansion proposal to human steroid use — "creating the illusion of strength while it erodes the body's infrastructure." Nothing could be more distant from the truth. A decent company like Micron would provide jobs and create a much stronger infrastructure to our local economy. A large, clean employer like Micron should be welcomed into any community.

The issue Mr. Chisholm raises runs far deeper than one company. The issue is this: Does mankind have the right to subdue the earth and use resources which the earth has to offer?

The new-age religion of environmentalism has a version of Genesis written by Charles Darwin. A religion that teaches us that we are the product of random evolution can certainly preach that a snail has just as much right to exist as a child. A religion that considers the use of fish and animals for food as interspecies slavery and rape will certainly advocate the reduction of grazing on public lands and feedlot operations.

Few would disagree with the principles of conservationism (i.e., being good stewards of the land), but the depth of Mr. Chisholm's arguments come from the environmental "hopes" of a de-industrialized, depopulated society. His view of the future Utopia is nothing more or less than a neo-stone age.

If that is our only hope, then we have no hope.

Weigh benefits of construction

The explosion of construction in the Twin Falls area these past years is alarming. The anticipation of a possible decision of Micron locating in Twin Falls concerns this citizen about all the negatives that this decision could bring. It requires very careful thought as to whether the extra revenue is worth the additional taxes, more sewer, more water wells, more crime, more schools and more road congestion. These are just a few of the negatives that this would entail.

Kudos to Buhl building panel

I would truly like to thank that portion of the community which has worked on the building committees for the Buhl schools for the past four years. You have spent a lot of time and energy in studying all of the building problems and making proposals to the board of trustees. Your efforts are truly appreciated.

Also, I thank those who voted in the last two bond elections. Your opinions have been expressed. And, contrary to what has been stated before in another letter to the editor, I would like to personally thank the senior citizens for supporting the bond issue the past two elections. We cherish your input and support.

The unfortunate part about the process is that it's apparent not enough of the community got involved four years ago. A window of opportunity has been missed with the lowest interest rates in modern time. Time and money have been wasted. It's apparent to me at least that a piece-meal approach will now have to be taken to fix the number of building problems over a long period of time. The comprehensive plan that was submitted by the public would have provided an immediate solution to most of the identified problems for some time down the road.

Hopefully, the community will roll up its sleeves and finally come to a consensus to what it wants. I would like to thank Kirk Charlson for his comments at the meeting last week. I'm not sure how many people at the meeting were listening, however. Your comments were well said, Kirk. I hope the next proposal has as much thought and study as the previous ones and that the next one is successful.

Newcomers can pay for growth

Do you believe that newcomers to the Magic Valley should bear more of the burden of paying for schools, water systems, waste systems — all those things we are going to pay for made necessary by growth?

Many communities faced with rising costs and increased taxes to meet the needs of newcomers are adopting "impact fees."

It now takes a family of four newcomers seven years of paying taxes to meet what longtime residents have paid into the system.

If you stopped paying taxes and the newcomer paid, it would take seven years for them to pay their fair share.

It is time.

Wreath thief goes too far

To the person or persons who took the beautiful wreath I had made from the front of my home outside:

It must have been a "night job" because it was there when I went to work at midnight but gone in the morning.

The wreath represents eternal life with Christ. Do you plan on going? You'll never get there doing what you are doing. You must give your life to Christ and repent of your wrongdoings. If you do that, then I'll be glad it all happened.

Article adds insult to injury

This is in regard to your front-page story on suicide in your Dec. 12 paper.

Don't you think the family of the 89-year-old Twin Falls County man is suffering enough? Evidently not.

Suicides leave deep feelings of guilt, inadequacy and sorrow. To blame his family for his death is inexcusable. They certainly don't need The Times-News pointing a finger at them.

Your article was disgustingly insensitive and unnecessary.

Russian team wins Chess Olympiad

MOSCOW — The Russian senior team, which had started weakly in the 31st Chess Olympiad, ended the two-week tournament on Thursday in first place with a crushing defeat of Germany.

The team, also known as Russia-1, downed Germany 3.5-0.5, giving Russia a final score of 37.5 out of a possible 56.

Bosnia, which drew 2-2 with Bulgaria in the final round, took second place with 35 points.

The U.S. team needed to win by a 3.5-0.5 margin to have a chance at the bronze, but managed only a 2.5-1.5 defeat of Yugoslavia. They finished with 34 points, 0.5 behind England and Russia-2.

Swede parliament OKs EU membership

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Parliament approved Sweden's membership in the European Union on Thursday by a 278-36 vote.

Despite a day of sometimes rancorous debate, the ratification passed easily, as expected. It was endorsed about a month after 52 percent of voters said "Yes" to membership in a hard-fought referendum.

Sweden, Finland and Austria now all have formally approved EU membership, expanding the trade bloc to 15 members encompassing some 370 million people. The three new members will take up their positions in the EU's Executive Commission in Brussels, Belgium, on Jan. 1.

Vietnam passes copyright protection law

HANOI, Vietnam — Vietnam has passed its first law to protect copyrights for books, films, music and computer software. But the law has special hurdles for foreigners.

To qualify for protection, foreigners must begin selling their publications and products in Vietnam within 30 days after they put them on sale anywhere else in the world, the Saigon Newswriter said.

This may mean the law, approved Monday, will do little to discourage counterfeiters.

Vietnam has protected trademarks and patents since 1989, but the lack of a copyright law has spawned an industry of bootleg goods.

N-Ireland loyalists meet with British BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Northern Ireland's pro-British extremists, with several hundred members behind them, met the British government Thursday to discuss the price of peace.

The political representatives of Northern Ireland's two "loyalist" paramilitary groups, the outlawed Ulster Defense Association and Ulster Volunteer Force, had never had formal negotiations with Britain.

The meeting came two months after both Protestant-based groups ended their campaign of killing members of Northern Ireland's minority Catholic community. Another meeting is expected next Thursday.

New coalition gives Ireland a premier

DUBLIN, Ireland — The monthlong government crisis ended Thursday with the election as prime minister of a fiscal conservative remembered for once trying to tax children's shoes.

The new leader, John Bruton, heads a politically awkward coalition of his Fine Gael party with the left-leaning Labor Party and the small, Marxist-oriented Democratic Left.

Despite the ideological conflicts, Bruton said there would be continuity in the Northern Ireland peace process undertaken by the previous government, which collapsed Nov. 17 in a scandal over its handling of a child-molestation case.

Liberian rebels kill 48, move to capital

MONROVIA, Liberia — Rebels hacked and burned 48 civilians to death Thursday and cannon fire shook Liberia's capital as the country's civil war returned to Monrovia for the first time in almost two years.

Hundreds of Liberians carried bodies of the victims to the city cemetery and then marched through the streets of Monrovia demanding an end to the violence. "We are tired of the killing!" they chanted.

The attack, which began about 6:30 a.m., marked the first such violence in Monrovia since rebel leader Charles Taylor tried to seize the capital during an assault from October 1992 through January 1993.

There have been fears that Taylor would attack Monrovia again soon, but it was not clear if Thursday's attack was by Taylor loyalists.

Bad Mexican moonshine leaves 31 dead

TEMIXCO, Mexico — Police are enforcing a ban on all alcohol sales in this impoverished region south of Mexico's capital following the deaths of at least 31 people poisoned by methanol-laced moonshine.

Another 19 people remain hospitalized after drinking the bootleg liquor, made from cactus and known as mezcal. They face permanent blindness if they survive.

Moonshine liquor is widely sold in Mexico, usually by the cup to the poor. Nevertheless, such mass poisonings are rare.

Russian army faces test in Chechen fight

MOSCOW (AP) — In these early days of its intervention in Chechnya, the Russian army has displayed low morale, confusion about its role in the breakaway republic and an unwillingness to fight against their countrymen.

Combined with the political howl set off in Moscow, experts say the Chechnya incursion could drag the army into a quagmire in which it is unable to attack and unable to withdraw.

An estimated 10,000 to 40,000 Russian soldiers, supported by tanks, warplanes and helicopter gunships, moved into the southern republic Sunday and were surrounding the capital Grozny by Thursday.

Already, according to Independent Television, as many as 70 Russian soldiers had been killed.

The Chechnya operation is being mounted at a time when the army is mired in its deepest financial crisis since the 1991 Soviet collapse. Only half of the $12 billion 1994 military budget has been delivered.

Pavel Felgengauer, a military analyst for the newspaper Segodnya, wrote Wednesday that the army was ill-prepared for such a large-scale undertaking. In the event of full-scale war, he predicted, hundreds of soldiers would die because of unpreparedness.

"Because of permanent money shortages, the Russian troops have had no real training for the past two years," he said.

Four days into the invasion, soldiers in the field were confused about their exact role and were asking why the Kremlin waited three years to deal with rebel Chechen President Dzhokhar Dudayev.

One officer said troops were asking him why they were there.

"The soldiers are coming to me and asking: If Chechnya is part of Russia, who are they trying to conquer? Our own people?" said the officer who requested anonymity.

Several Russian officers from the Pskov paratroop division resigned this week in protest of the actions in Chechnya, according to another officer.

Since the incursion began, there also have been logistical problems.

The newspaper Segodnya said, "Military activity in the past couple of days has made it clear that the Russian army does not have enough troops to blockade Grozny." It said tank movements were bogged down outside the city.

Just as former Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev used the military in failed attempts to preserve the union, Yeltsin defends the use of force as necessary to hold the Russian Federation together.

But experts say it's questionable whether today's conscripts and officers have the stomach to fight a battle that would inevitably involve civilians and ethnic Russians living in Chechnya.

In the August coup of 1991 and the October 1993 storming of the Russian parliament, soldiers were loathe to take on civilian targets, to open fire on fellow countrymen.

Gorbachev, who once sent troops to the Baltics and other independence-seeking Soviet republics, said the Chechnya operation was a blunder. The army should not be put "in a position where they are dealing with women and old people and children," he said in an interview Wednesday.

CSI men, women defeat North Idaho

COEUR D'ALENE — The College of Southern Idaho men's and women's basketball teams swept North Idaho in their first Scenic West Conference road games of the season Thursday night.

The men rallied from a halftime deficit to win 83-71, while the women posted a 69-61 win.

The victory keeps the No. 5 Golden Eagle men undefeated on the season and 3-0 in Scenic West Conference action.

Both teams travel to Ricks Saturday night.

Soldier Mountain ski area open with discounted tickets

FAIRFIELD — Soldier Mountain is open for skiing under new ownership, and is celebrating the snow's arrival with discounted lift tickets.

Both chair lifts are open, and the cost is $14 for an all-day pass. The mountain has 3½ feet of snow at the base, and 4½ at the top of the mountain.

Skiers can hit the slopes between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m., and kids 6 and under ski for free. For more information, call 764-2526.

UNLV crushes Chippewas

The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Henry Bailey scored four touchdowns, three in the first half, and Mark Byers forced two crucial fumbles Thursday night as UNLV celebrated its first appearance in the Las Vegas Bowl by routing Central Michigan 52-24.

Bailey scored the first two times UNLV had the ball as the Rebels opened up a 31-0 halftime lead and cruised to the win over a Central Michigan team playing without All-American running back Brian Pruitt.

Playing before a home crowd of 17,562 that included as many Central Michigan fans as from UNLV, the Rebels scored 38 consecutive points to open the major college bowl season with their first postseason win in a decade.

UNLV (7-5) did it in spectacular fashion, making big play after big play against a porous and tiring Chippewas defense. Central Michigan scored two meaningless touchdowns late in the game with UNLV's second team on the field.

Pruitt, who ran for 274 yards when the Chippewas beat UNLV 35-23 earlier this season in Michigan, bruised a knee in practice and did not play.

His absence was felt as Central Michigan (9-3) could not control the ball on the ground and could not stop UNLV on defense in a game that matched the winners of the Mid-American and Big West conferences.

UNLV turned the game into a rout early in the second half, taking only 14 seconds to score on its first possession of the half. The Rebels needed only five plays to go 75 yards on their next possession to go ahead 45-10 midway through the third quarter.

Bailey, alternating between lining up as a wide receiver and in the backfield, had 177 yards in the first half as he ran for two scores and caught a pass for another. He opened the second half for the Rebels by going over from a yard out for his fourth score.

Central Michigan came back to threaten briefly in the first half, pulling within 14-10 on a 53-yard pass from Erik Timpt to Terrence McMillan on the last play of the first quarter.

UNLV running back DeJohn Branch is upended during a run in the first quarter of Thursday's Las Vegas Bowl.

The Chippewas had a chance to take the lead on their next possession when they drove to the UNLV 6 before Byers forced Timpt to fumble on a third-down play and Keith Washington recovered for the Rebels.

Sore toe sidelines Oakley; streak ends

Newsday

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Charles Oakley sat out Thursday night's game against the Sacramento Kings after the dislocated second toe on his right foot became too painful for him to play.

The New York Knick forward's streak of consecutive regular-season games ends at 268, including 266 starts, dating to April 12, 1991.

Oakley attended the morning shootaround at Arco Arena, but the pain in his foot worsened when he returned last night.

"It's bad now. I've been feeling the pain a little more lately," he said.

He planned to speak to team doctor Norman Scott after the game "about some things we can do, maybe make some suggestions."

Since first experiencing the pain in training camp, Oakley has said he wants surgery to relieve the pain of his toe, which has a congenital malformation that keeps it out of alignment with the other toes. Scott has said that surgery would not improve the condition.

Nothing has helped Oakley, not daily treatments, occasional breaks from practice nor a custom-made shoe designed by Nike.

"Going up and down the court and coming down on it, the pressure takes its toll on the other toes," he said. "It got to the point where I just can't play."

Oakley said he did not know whether or not he will play Friday night against the Suns in Phoenix. "As of right now, we'll see what happens," he said.

Jazz stop Bullets, continue road streak

The Associated Press

LANDOVER, Md. — Considering how the Utah Jazz are playing on the road, Jeff Hornacek thinks the team may want to reconsider going home to the Delta Center for the holidays.

Hornacek scored a game-high 22 points, and Karl Malone added 17 points and 13 rebounds as the Jazz beat the Washington Bullets 95-85 Thursday night. Utah's sixth straight road victory matched the franchise's longest road streak, set in 1983-84.

"We started out with exactly the reverse — we couldn't win on the road and we won at home," Hornacek said. "Now we're winning on the road. We're just executing better on the road right now."

That's welcome news for the Jazz, which is two games into a six-game road trip, its longest of the season.

"We've never been a bad road team," said John Stockton, who had 12 points and 14 assists. "We've just lingered around 500. But with execution, we can win games on the road."

Reserve Antoine Carr scored 15 points.

Pro basketball

11 in the third period as Utah pulled away to win its third consecutive game. David Benoit added 15 points.

Washington, which has lost four in a row and five of six at home, got 21 points and 10 rebounds from Chris Webber and 14 points and 10 rebounds from Jwan Howard.

Benoit scored the game's first 6 points, and the Jazz used a game-opening 10-2 run to take a 20-16 lead after the first period.

Nuggets 101, Heat 99

MIAMI — Rodney Rogers hit a game-winning 8-footer with three seconds left for the Denver Nuggets, who overcame 29 turnovers and a 20-point deficit to beat the Miami Heat.

Hinrich ended his two-driving layups in the final 38 seconds, tying the game each time. But the Heat lost for the fifth time in six games.

NEW YORK — The Dallas Cowboys placed 11 players in the Pro Bowl and the San Francisco 49ers had nine in voting announced Thursday.

As expected, Emmitt Smith, Troy Aikman, Michael Irvin and Charles Haley were selected in voting by players, coaches and fans for the Feb. 5 game in Honolulu.

Joining those perennial choices from the Cowboys were defensive tackle Leon Lett, safety Darren Woodson and offensive tackle Mark Tuinei, all for the first time. Also selected for the NFC team on offense were Dallas Mark Stepnoski, Nate Newton, Jay Novacek and Daryl Johnston.

and Woodson all will be starters. Tuinei thought he had been the victim of a practical joke.

"I always go home to Hawaii anyway, but this year it will be even more special," Tuinei said. "I was surprised. When I heard that they were kidding. It's just amazing that I'm still around after 12 years."

Irvin ran up and kissed Tuinei several times on the cheek.

"Everybody's happy for Mark Tuinei," Irvin said. "He's been in the league forever.

In Hawaii he'll be king for a week."

San Francisco's Jerry Rice will be making his ninth appearance, and will have with him teammates Steve Young and Brent Jones on offense. Deion Sanders and Merton Hanks in the secondary. The backups from the 49ers were Jesse Sapolu and Bart Oates on the offensive line. Dana Stubblefield and Tim McDonald on defense.

Six Pittsburgh Steelers led the voting for the AFC squad, four of them starters: Dermontti Dawson on offense; Rod Woodson, Carnell Lake and Greg Lloyd on defense. The backups were guard Duval Love and linebacker Kevin Greene, who leads the NFL with 14 sacks.

Two players chasing NFL records also will start for the NFC. Minnesota's Chris Carter, whose 111 receptions is one short of Sterling Sharpe's single-season mark, will be at wide receiver along with Rice. Green Bay's Sharpe will be a backup.

Indians close out Wildcats

By Brad Breland
Times-News writer

FILED — Shoshone's defense in the first half and the Indians' offense in the second half made the difference as Shoshone downed Filer 48-31 in non-conference girls' basketball Thursday night.

"Things didn't start out well for the hometown Wildcats as they turned the ball over just two seconds into the game. Filer continued to have trouble, missing its first seven shots and not making a basket for the first five minutes of the game."

Meanwhile, Shoshone led 6-0 with Lindsay Payne leading the way with four points. Payne picked up her second foul late in the first quarter and sat for the rest of the period and the first half of the second quarter.

"She picks up fouls early in the game," said Shoshone coach Tim Chapman. "Then she says she'll never foul again."

She was true to her word, ending the game with 10 points and two fouls.

Without Payne on the floor, Shoshone kept the heat on Filer and built up an 8-point advantage.

Filer still had shooting trouble, going 2-for-10 in the first quarter and 3-for-13 in the second quarter, and hitting on less than 25 percent of their shots.

"We wanted to get a hand up every time they shot the ball," said Chapman. "Every shot they took, we had a hand in their face."

The Indians poured it on in the third quarter with a 17-8 run that put the Indians up by 17 points. Midway through the quarter, Shoshone went on a 7-0 spurt keyed by a three-pointer by Amy Schelling.

"You've got to give credit to Shoshone. They forced us into things we don't usually do," said Filer coach Bruce Lenington.

Filer had one last shot to come back early in the fourth quarter. The Wildcats cut the lead to 42-31 on a Marjorie Lutz bucket along with a pair of free throws by the junior.

Shoshone, going without shooting a free throw in the first 30 minutes of the game, tied it in the end with charities by

Bruin boys face state's top teams

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — From the best in Region III to the best in the state, the Twin Falls Bruins have a tough weekend in store.

Coach Dan Vogt and his 1-1 Bruins travel to Pocatello to meet Highland Friday night and return home to take on undefeated and No. 1-ranked Centennial on Saturday.

If the Bruins could pick one to win, it would have to be Friday because that one counts in seedings for the regional playoffs in late February.

But Highland appears in the middle of another talent cycle, not so much from a basketball standpoint but from pure athletics.

"Their big man inside is (6-6 Brian) Deathridge and he's one of the better ones around," said Vogt. "After that they just have good athletes who can play defense and run very well."

The Bruins go into this one blind because "they were scheduled to play at 9 p.m. Saturday so we went up to scout — only to find out they'd moved the game to late afternoon," said Vogt. "Consequently, we

The rest of the NFC starters on offense will be New Orleans' William Roof and Detroit's Lomas Brown at tackle, and Minnesota guard Randall McDaniel. On defense, it will be Green Bay's Reggie White and Bryce Paup; Minnesota's John Randle; Washington's Ken Harvey; Detroit's Chris Spielman; and Arizona's Aeneas Williams.

Baseball owners decide against salary cap — for now

CHICAGO (AP) — Baseball owners didn't push the salary cap button Thursday, avoiding for at least a week a chaotic winter filled with lawsuits.

In what was a sign either of hesitation, posturing or genuine desire to make a deal, owners gave the ruling executive council authority to declare an impasse in talks and impose the cap if there isn't an agreement by Dec. 22.

"We want to reach a negotiated settlement, and we say that with every ounce of sincerity we can put forth," management negotiator John Harrington said. "And this gesture is just that, it's the olive branch to say, listen,

'... let's make peace for now and many years to come.'

— John Harrington, management negotiator

let's make peace for now and many years to come."

Union head Donald Fehr said talks probably will resume Monday in the Washington area, but he wouldn't predict if players would make a new proposal.

"While we do not agree that we are at an impasse, we do agree that it is appropriate to continue talking, and we are encouraged by that," Fehr said by telephone from his office in New York. "Obviously, if they are willing to negotiate, so are we."

Talks broke off Wednesday at Rye Brook, N.Y., and mediator V.J. Usery predicted then that the sides might return to the table as soon as this weekend.

"It'd be a nice Christmas present to the fans to give them back baseball, to open the camps and have spring training," Usery said from Alexandria, Va. "I'm very happy with the decision."

Owners approved a resolution that gave the executive council the power to impose the salary cap if there isn't a settlement by Dec. 22. The vote was 25-3, according to several participants, with the Baltimore Orioles, New York Mets and Toronto Blue Jays in opposition.

"If the union really wants to reach an agreement, we're going to give it more time," acting commissioner Bud Selig said. "But it must address ... our central issue: establishing a relationship between revenues and salaries."

Owners, who are threatening to open the 1995 season with replacement players, want players to accept a predetermined percentage of revenue or agree to a tax mechanism that will penalize clubs with high payrolls. The union, which won free agency rights for the 1976 season, says caps and punitive taxes would crush the market for players.

"It was done in the spirit of trying to open one more window of opportunity for both management and the players to create an agreement," Harrington said, "and we're making an appeal to the players and their wives and their families to truly understand that implementation is not in our minds and our hearts."

NHL talks break off with no settlement in sight

NEW YORK (AP) — The NHL season, its fate more precarious with each passing day, broke off in further jeopardy Thursday when informal talks broke off and no bargaining was scheduled between the main negotiators.

For the second straight day, lawyers for both sides met in an attempt to find a common ground to NHL commissioner Gary Bettman and union head Bob Goodenow can continue bargaining.

Two spokesmen, Arthur Pincus of the NHL and Steve McAllister of the union, and a management source all said they had no knowledge of any further meetings between the lawyers.

The Canadian Press, however, reported more talks are planned over the weekend. Maple Leafs general manager Cliff Fletcher, speaking from Toronto, told CP: "There will be more meetings."

The lawyers met the last two days in New York, hoping to clear the way for a new round of bargaining between Bettman and Goodenow.

The two talked briefly by telephone late Wednesday, but Pincus said there was no contact between them Thursday.

Lions try to halt Vikings' title march

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Lomas Brown wouldn't want it any other way. Football players live for games like this.

The veteran tackle knows there's only one way to slow Minnesota's march to the NFC Central title. The Detroit Lions have to defeat the Vikings on Saturday.

"Nobody on either side will be intimidated," Brown said. "Everybody will step up, without anything being said, people having to be told how important this game is. The Vikings know it, and we know it."

"I'm not saying one side will dominate. But we'll step up."

The Vikings (9-5) can clinch their second division title in three years with a win. The Lions (8-6), who from the division in 1991 and 1993, would move closer to a wild-card playoff berth if they win. Detroit also would remain in the hunt for another divisional crown.

When these teams met in Minneapolis during the second week of the season, the Vikings won 10-3. The Lions lost three of their next four games and were pretty much left for dead after that 2-4 start.

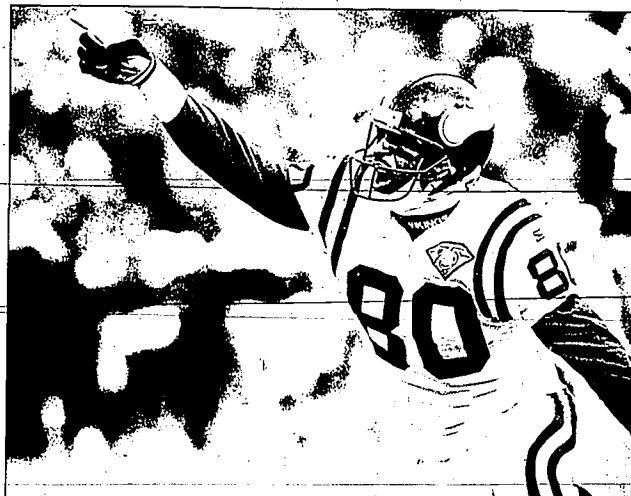

A quote by Vikings placekicker Foad Rezak has been taped to every Lions locker this week. "Well, I don't think we have to worry about them," Rezak said back then.

"They wrote us off," Brown said. "Now, this has come back to haunt them."

The Vikings come into the game with the best passing offense in the NFC, the result of uniting quarterback Warren Moon with wide receiver Cris Carter.

Moon needs 13 completions to reach 3,000 for his NFL career. He leads the league this season in completions with 356 and in passing yards with 4,078. Both figures are Vikings records.

Moon is on a pace to complete 407 passes, which would set the NFL record of 404 he set in 1991.

Cris Carter, taking passes from Minnesota quarterback Warren Moon, has helped the Vikings become the NFC's top passing offense.

This is Moon's third 4,000-yard passing season, which ties Dan Fouts for second in NFL history behind the five by Tom Brady.

In the process, Moon has put Carter on the verge of breaking the NFL record for catches. Carter has 111 catches, one shy of the record set last season by Sterling Sharpe.

"Warren is very accurate," Carter said. "But the biggest thing he brings to the Vikings is his sense of professionalism. He works very hard in practice. He has a very, very high drive. He's positive, upbeat and, besides, he's a good quarterback."

The Lions will try to counter with the NFC's top running offense. That translates to two words: Barry Sanders. He leads the league with 1,721 yards on 302 carries.

But, lately, the Vikings have put the clamps on Sanders. In the five games since Sanders rushed for 220 yards against the Vikings on Nov. 24, 1991, they have limited him to 49.5 yards per game. In the first meeting this year, Sanders gained only 16 yards on 12 carries.

The Lions have scored only three points in their last eight quarters against the Vikings.

"They were just better than us up there," Brown said. "They took the game away from us. Hopefully, we'll correct our mistakes and turn the tables."

The Lions have won three straight and six of their last eight. The Vikings have snapped out of a three-game losing streak to win their last two games.

Big Sky players earn more honors

Sheriden May, Idaho's record-setting running back, was named to his second All-American team on Thursday, making first team on the American Football Coaches Association honor squad.

May was joined on the first team by Boise State defensive lineman Joe O'Brien and Scott Gragg, Montana's 6-9, 305-pound offensive lineman. No other Big Sky Conference players were on the honor squad.

The same three players were named first team on Wednesday on the NCAA's Division I-AA All-American team.

O'Brien was the Big Sky's most valuable defensive player this season, leading the Broncos (13-1) to the league championship and into Saturday's I-AA championship game against Youngstown State.

Salaam, Brooks top player, coach

ST. LOUIS — Colorado running back Rashawn Salaam was named college football player of the year and Oregon's Rich Brooks was named coach of the year by The Sporting News on Thursday.

Salaam led the nation in rushing with 186.8 yards a game, in scoring with 13.1 points a game and 24 touchdowns, and in all-purpose yardage with 213.6 per game. With 2,055 yards rushing, he became only the fourth NCAA Division I-A back to surpass 2,000 yards in a season. The winners were Barry Sanders, Marcus Allen and Mike Rozier, like Salaam, Heisman Trophy winners.

Brooks rallied Oregon from a 1-2 start to a 9-3 record and his first Rose Bowl appearance since 1958. Brooks, 53, is in his 18th season at Oregon and has a career record of 91-108-4. He is 67-59 in his last 11 seasons at Oregon, which is making its fourth bowl appearance in six seasons.

Agassi gives $1 million to kids' charity

LAS VEGAS — Andre Agassi made a $1 million donation Thursday to fund a major renovation of a Boys & Girls Club in the tennis star's hometown.

Agassi presented the gift to the Boys & Girls Clubs West Las Vegas club. The money will be used for a $2 million project to provide a larger facility in the economically depressed area of town.

Agassi, who lives in Las Vegas, made the donation through the Andre Agassi Foundation.

Las Vegas dusts Argentina in soccer

PACHUCA, Mexico — Diego Maradona was held scoreless as the Las Vegas Dustdevils of the Continental Indoor Soccer League defeated Argentina 3-2 Thursday in an indoor soccer tournament.

David Doyle's second goal of the night from 20 yards out with three seconds remaining gave the Dustdevils the victory. His shot came after Argentina had knotted the score with eight seconds remaining.

Maradona, who has been banned from international soccer and is playing in defiance of the sport's governing body, assisted on both Argentine goals.

Maradona was able to play because the four-day Intercontinental Indoor Soccer Tournament is sanctioned by Mexico's soccer federation and not by FIFA, the international ruling body that barred the Argentine star for failing a drug test at last summer's World Cup.

The win puts Las Vegas in first place in Group B with a 2-0 record.

Wisconsin players to miss bowl game

MADISON, Wis. — Two Wisconsin players involved in a shoplifting investigation will miss the Hall of Fame Bowl on Jan. 2, the school announced Thursday.

Defensive back Donny Brady and outside linebacker Syllas Pratt were charged following an incident involving a video game at a variety store Wednesday, police Lt. Lew Bennett said.

Brady, a senior from North Bellmore, N.Y., faces a Circuit Court hearing Dec. 23 on a theft charge, Bennett said.

Pratt, a senior from Hempstead, N.Y., was charged with disorderly conduct under an ordinance that can be resolved by paying a municipal fine, Bennett said.

Owners OK Padres sale to Texas man

SAN DIEGO — Major league baseball owners on Thursday gave the go-ahead for television producer Tom Werner to sell the San Diego Padres to Texas software millionaire John Moores.

The sale is expected to be completed in the next few weeks, said Larry Lachino, a former president of the Baltimore Orioles who is assisting Moores.

A source close to the negotiations said Moores will pay approximately $580 million to be majority owner of what was the worst team in the big leagues during the strike-interrupted 1994 season. Werner and 14 other Southern California businessmen, including 10 from San Diego, bought the Padres from Joan Krooc for $75 million in 1990.

World Cup goalie, Buffalo ink pact

BUFFALO, N.Y. — After playing some football and doing a little acting, World Cup goalkeeper Tony Meola said it was time to get back to soccer.

Rather than going to Europe and playing the outdoor game he is most familiar with, Meola signed Wednesday with the Buffalo Blizzard of the indoor National Professional Soccer League.

Meola is expected to shore up Buffalo's porous defense, which is allowing a league-high 17.5 points per game and is in fifth place in the six-team American Division.

Broncos are better, but face San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Looking at the San Francisco 49ers' performance, Denver Broncos coach Wade Phillips gets the feeling he has seen it before: The dominating offense, the defensive punch and a roster loaded with playmakers.

"They certainly compare to the team we played in the Super Bowl in 1989," said Phillips, whose Broncos (7-7) play the 49ers (12-2) on Saturday with their playoff hopes riding on the result.

Phillips was defensive coordinator five years ago when the Broncos lost their Super Bowl meeting with San Francisco 55-10. Both clubs are trying to get back for the first time since then.

San Francisco enters with a nine-game winning streak and is seeking to wrap up a homefield advantage throughout the playoffs. The 49ers already have secured the NFC West title and a first-round bye, but are anxious to maintain their edge after stumbling into the postseason last year by dropping their last two regular-season games.

"We're in an attack mode," said San Francisco's Steve Young, who's also closing in on his fourth straight passing title.

"This is huge," added Young. "If you look at it now, it's the biggest game of the year, because we can achieve all the things we wanted for the regular season this weekend, and you can't believe what a great thing that would be."

U.S. Open champ nabs World lead

MONTEGO BAY, Jamaica (AP) — Ernie Els found his groove, and not even a four-putt double-bogey could take him out of it.

The U.S. Open champion had seven birdies on the back nine, overcoming a double-bogey on the 11th hole to shoot a 7-under-par 64 and take a first-shot lead Thursday after the first round of the Johnnie Walker World Championship.

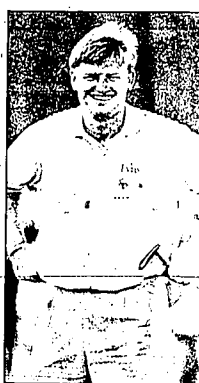

He rarely found trouble off the tee and his irons were crisp and close — he had six birdie putts from inside 12 feet and two putted from 35 feet for birdie on the par-5 17th.

His only trouble was a minor bump in what he called one of his best rounds ever. Back-to-back birdies got him to 3-under, but he pushed his 2-iron off the tee on No. 11 — a 342 yards shot — and hit a wedge just off the right of the green.

His first putt slid down a slope 25 feet past the cup, and his putt coming back was 4 feet past. He missed that one, too, taking a 6.

He overcame that, just like he did at Oakland when he began the U.S. Open playoff against Colin Montgomerie and Loren Roberts with a triple-bogey before beating Roberts on the second extra hole. "I got pretty hot under the collar, but the next hole I made a 12-footer for birdie and so it kind of helped," Els said.

He followed that with birdies from South Africa's Ernie Els watches his 15-foot putt roll in on the 18th green Thursday.

20, 10 and 6 feet, two-putted from 35 feet for birdie on the par-5 17th and capped his round by rolling one in from 25 feet for his 64. His 31 on the back nine tied the championship record held by four players.

"I putted great today and hit the ball pretty nicely," Els said. "Except for 11 I was never in any trouble."

The rest of the field could be. "If Ernie keeps doing what he is doing, we're all just here fighting for second place," said Montgomerie, whose 67 put him in second with Nick Faldo and Mark McCumber.

Trevino wins Senior Player of the Year award again

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. — Lee Trevino, who won six tournaments in a year curtailed by neck surgery, was voted Senior PGA Tour Player of the Year on Thursday for the third time.

Trevino, who also won in 1990 and 1992, was operated on in October. He increased his career list to 24, tying him with Miller Barber for the most in Senior Tour history.

Only four players — Peter

Thomson in 1985, Bruce Crampton in 1986, Chi Chi Rodriguez in 1987 and Trevino in 1990 — have won more than six official events in one year.

The 55-year-old Texan earned $1,202,569 in 1994, fourth on the Senior Tour money list and his best year as a senior. He led the Senior Tour in sand saves and putts per round and was ranked in the top 10 in eight statistical categories.

Davies sets record to open Ladies Masters tournament

GOLD COAST, Australia — Laura Davies set a course record with a 9-under-par 64 in the opening round Thursday and took a 3-shot lead in the Australian Ladies Masters.

Davies, the leading money-winner on the LPGA Tour this year and the defending champion in this tournament, had five birdies on her first nine holes and then ended with four successive birdies.

Australians Corinne Dinah and Karrie Webb, Scotland's Dale Reid and New Zealanders Jan Higgins were tied for second.

Davies' round was only one shot off her career-best 10-under and she could become the first player, male or female, to win tournaments on five tours in a calendar year. The British golfer has won three times this year in the United States, twice in Europe as well as on the Asian and Japanese tours.

Australian Karen Lunn and Alison Nicholas of England were tied at 68.

Americans Lori Garbacz, Tracy Hironaka and Marianne Morja were bracketed at 69 by 1992 winner Jane Crawford of Australia and Annika Sorenstam of Sweden, winner of last week's Australian Open.

Jan McGill, the 1993 U.S. Amateur champion, had a disappointing debut round as a professional.

Welding-tank blaze ignites at Hamilton

TWIN FALLS — Firefighters evacuated workers and rerouted traffic Thursday after a tank of welding gas caught fire at Hamilton Manufacturing Inc. just south of downtown.

"If the bottle had ruptured and come in contact with oxygen we would've had a big boom," said Captain Zane Walker, of fire station No. 3 of the Twin Falls Fire Department.

No one knows how the acetylene tank ignited, Walker said. Apparently there was a leak at the top of the tank, he said. Acetylene creates a scorching blue flame when combined with oxygen and ignited. A man working in the metal shop of the manufacturing building at 118 Market Ave. noticed a small flame coming from the tank at about 11:27 a.m., Walker said.

The worker ran out of the building; firefighters evacuated about five people from the metal shop and diverted traffic in case the tank exploded, Walker said.

No one was hurt, and nothing was damaged, he said. Two fire trucks and eight fire fighters stood by, he said. Eventually the flame subsided and firefighters smothered it with dry chemicals.

Junior-high student, 14, held after pocket knife discovered

TWIN FALLS — Police arrested a 14-year-old girl Thursday on a misdemeanor weapons charge after teachers found a pocket knife inside her purse at school.

The student, who had accidentally left her purse in the hallway at Robert Stuart Junior High, will be sent through the juvenile court system, said Officer Don Hall, a campus police officer.

The girl told police that she had the knife in her purse, but forgot it was there, Hall said. The pocketknife, with a four-inch blade that locks when extended, belongs to her parents, Hall said.

"She didn't intend to hurt anyone, is what she said," Hall said. The girl will be charged with misdemeanor carrying a concealed weapon on school grounds, he said.

"We have to send a message to the kids so they understand," he said. "School grounds are no place for this sort of instruments."

Food, shelter programs may benefit from federal funds

TWIN FALLS — Emergency food and shelter programs in Twin Falls, Cassia, Jerome and Minidoka counties may be eligible for a portion of federal funds given to those counties.

The counties were selected by a national board chaired by the Federal Emergency Management Agency. The board distributed Congress-appropriated funds to help expand the capacity of food and shelter programs in high-need areas nationwide.

Twin Falls County will receive $23,258; Minidoka will receive $13,558; Cassia will receive $11,827; and Jerome will receive $6,477. A local board of county commissioners and representatives of agencies will determine how funds will be distributed.

CSI staffers donate money for building planetarium

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho employees Thursday presented a $70,000 check to their financial support for the college's planetarium project.

The employees had a goal of $50,000 to raise for the planetarium project and began their fund-raising efforts in late August, said Joan Edwards, CSI vice president of planning, research and development.

Edwards said there are more than 300 employees at the college, and more than half gave donations for the planetarium. The check was given to Alan Frost, co-chair of the planetarium fund-raising committee, during CSI's annual Christmas celebration.

Recall issued for Grandrich halogen portable work light

TWIN FALLS — A recall has been ordered on a portable halogen work light manufactured by the Grandrich Corp.

Grandrich has marketed the lights at local retailers such as Emst Home and Nursery and Fred Meyer. The light — Model No. HLK300Q, UPC Code 082785-04252-9 — has experienced plastic box melting.

Work lights purchased between Oct. 1 and Nov. 29 should be returned prepaid to: Grandrich Corp., 16202 Distribution Way, Cerritos, CA, 90703.

A new work light will be sent, freight prepaid, within four weeks.

Father charged in infant butting

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A 21-year-old man was charged Thursday with felony injury to a child after police said he shook and battered his 6-week-old son, cracking the infant's skull.

Magistrate Charles Brumbach set a $10,000 bond for Keith Goodman, formerly of Kimberly, rejecting defense arguments that Goodman didn't intend to harm the child.

"I deem it highly inappropriate to play with a child leaving bruises and a head fractured," Brumbach said.

Goodman requested a Dec. 23 preliminary hearing in Magistrate Court to determine whether there is enough evidence to go to trial. He was assigned attorney Jonathan Brody of the public defender's office to represent him.

The baby, Joshua, was in fair condition Thursday at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, according to a hospital official.

Police say Goodman admitted injuring his son Wednesday by butting heads and "bouncing" the child's head back and forth "like a ball," according to the affidavit of Detective Charles Dudley of the Twin Falls Police Department.

Goodman told police that he was only playing with his son; meanwhile, his wife, Rita, was asleep in their room at the Wagon Wheel Motel in Twin Falls, Dudley said Wednesday.

Rita Goodman told police that Keith had awakened her at about 7:30 a.m. and told her that he had butted heads with the child and noticed a large bruise on his son's head, Dudley wrote in his affidavit.

When Rita took the baby to the hospital, workers in the emergency room alerted police, Dudley said.

Rita Goodman had filed a restraining order against her husband, but had later asked the judge to drop the order, Goodman's lawyer, Brody, told Magistrate Brumbach Thursday.

"And that request was denied," Brumbach replied.

Homeless companions Randy McKenzie and Debi Hepp have found a way to help themselves while helping others as volunteers at South Central Community Action agency in Twin Falls.

Couple finds room at the inn

By Julie M. McKinnon
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Last Christmas, Randy McKenzie was cold, depressed and lonely while "living" on the Boise River; this year he still is homeless, but he has found help, hope and friendship.

"In and return for the shelter, food and clothing he and his homeless companion Debi Hepp have been given, the former Boise couple pack food baskets for needy Magic Valley residents and do other tasks for their benefactors."

"People helped us, gave us a start," said 31-year-old McKenzie, who is trying to get a job. "We took. We should put back into the system."

"We just got out of Boise more or less to start our lives over, and it's working out so far."

McKenzie and Hepp left their makeshift Garden City camp with his dog Buddy and headed for Twin Falls just before Thanksgiving. When they first arrived, they spent three nights in their car, thinly shielded from cold winds by blankets and boxes lined outside.

Then, after trying to work for a room — and much-needed showers — at various Twin Falls motels, the couple stopped at the Holiday Motel. There they found manager Shelley Winkelman, who gave them food and a room for the night.

Winkelman, who had nearly given up on helping homeless people seeking handouts at the motel, also sent them to South Central Community Action Agency, making them promise to volunteer there. The couple has more than kept that promise: McKenzie has logged more than 120 hours, and Hepp has more than 105.

"We're getting back on our feet, finally. Our lives are so much better off than they were."

— Randy McKenzie

"They are excellent volunteers," said agency assistant John Ricketts, adding the agency was behind on packing emergency food baskets until McKenzie and Hepp — who work about 40 hours a week — showed up. "You name it, they've been able to do it."

Besides giving them items and paying for their motel room, Ricketts said the agency is trying to find them permanent housing and enroll them in job-training classes at the College of Southern Idaho. McKenzie, a former bridge builder, has work-related injuries, and both have mercury poisoning, they said.

"He's kind of limited on the amount of weight that he can lift," Ricketts said. "He will try, which is a lot more than a lot of people."

McKenzie and Hepp have decided to stay in Twin Falls, which they said is friendlier than Boise.

"We feel like we've finally got a family," said Hepp, who turns 38 on Saturday.

"We're getting back on our feet, finally," McKenzie said. "Our lives are so much better off than they were."

The couple, who also do chores at the motel, have unknowingly helped out more people than those who get food they package at the agency. Some items they sold to Winkelman were donated to needy families.

"They're getting the money for the food, and someone else is getting something — it's kind of a neat little circle," said Winkelman, who has invited the couple to celebrate Christmas with her family. Winkelman and her husband, J.R. Winkelman, also are going to take each one shopping for a gift to give the other.

"They're going to have a Christmas," she said. "They deserve it."

Fees place arts groups on guard

By Karen Tolkinen
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Leaders of local arts groups say newly boosted fees for using Twin Falls school buildings may force them to find other accommodations.

"The costs are so prohibitive that no one could possibly afford to rent the facilities," said Lori Van Rinsum, president of Magic Valley Little Theater and the Dilettantes. "Unless they're willing to renegotiate the prices, we're going to look elsewhere."

When School Board members voted to set fees for using the new high school auditorium Tuesday night, they also raised fees for classrooms, cafeterias and kitchens in local schools.

In some cases, fees shot to 13 times their previous levels. A cafeteria that formerly rented for $15 a night now costs $200. Prices range from $15 an hour for a classroom to $700 per day for the high school stadium.

Dale Thornberry, district facilities director, prepared the list of recommended price increases with rate information from the Idaho Falls, Pocatello and Meridian school districts and the College of Southern Idaho.

In most cases, the new rates are comparable to or higher than those charged at the other schools, he said. While Meridian would charge a commercial group $40 an hour for a cafeteria, Twin Falls will charge $50. Commercial and political groups generally will pay higher rates than nonprofits.

Van Rinsum said the costs are too high.

The Dilettantes have used the Bickel Elementary School cafeteria for eight years to rehearse plays. For the past five years, they've paid $15 a night. Board member David Sass said the five nights a week for four hours a night for 10 weeks before opening night.

Now they'll be charged $200. Although the Dilettantes are a not-for-profit group, the mission statement approved by the School Board classifies her group as a commercial operation.

From now on, the Dilettantes may rent space from churches, Van Rinsum said. Because extra revenue goes for scholarships, the group can't afford such a large increase, she said.

Board member David Sass said the new rates are reasonable because they pay for keeping the school open for longer periods. A new $20-per-hour

E911 board weighs offer for loan from Key Bank

By Sean L. McCarthy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Negotiations are continuing with Key Bank of Idaho to lend $3.6 million to the four-county "enhanced" 911 board, despite the reluctance of a Twin Falls city official.

The E911 board voted 2-1 Thursday night to allow its lawyer, Leon Smith, to hammer out details of a lending proposal with Key Bank.

Gooding County Commissioner Win Henslee and Jerome County Commissioner Veronica Lieberman voted to move forward with a loan agreement. The Key Bank proposal doesn't require the issuance of bonds.

"I feel very comfortable with doing this without going through the bonding process," Lieberman said.

But Twin Falls Vice Mayor Art Frantz said he was uncomfortable with the interest rates proposed by Key Bank. The bank has offered to cap the rate at 9 percent for the first 10 years of the 20-year loan. Frantz said WestOne Bank, in particular, may have a better deal with a fixed interest rate around 7 percent.

"It might pay to look into the other proposition," he said.

Twin Falls County Commissioner Marvin Hempleman, the E911 board chairman, did not register his "yes" vote until prompted afterward by Smith. Lincoln County Commissioner Clarence Tew was absent.

Smith told the board members that they should heed Frantz's concerns, especially since the Twin Falls City Council still must sign a joint resolution before the E911 plan can be confirmed by a judge. Smith suggested that the board have a financial expert evaluate both banks' lending proposals, "to satisfy yourselves" about the decision.

The board agreed. Board members like Key Bank's offer because it allows the E911 board to borrow money without issuing bonds. WestOne Bank and BankOne, the only other banks to make offers, would sell bond issues as part of their long-term loans.

The board needs to borrow about $3.6 million to fill an empty $900,000 emergency dispatch center built near Jerome. The E911 system would service residents in Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln and Twin Falls counties.

In other business, Project Manager Al Sandner gave board members individual copies of the dispatch center's bid specifications and personnel manual. Sandner said he hoped the board could approve the bid specifications next week so he could send them out to potential contractors.

The board's next meeting is Dec. 21 in Jerome.

BOISE — State Water Resources Department officials are telling lawmakers that they'll need another $30 million if they're obliged to live with last week's water court ruling by 5th District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt.

In the ruling, Hurlbutt faulted lawyers from the department and other employees of Attorney General Larry Echols' office for "inconsistency" in their arguments before the court on a wide range of issues — including interpretations of the new laws.

Hurlbutt also ruled that new water laws passed this year were unconstitutional and would permit the state's lawyers to waste time and resources in the Snake River Basin Adjudication.

But the state struck back Wednesday as David Shaw of the water department told lawmakers that the ruling so dramatically increases the demands on the department that it is probably impossible for the state to pay the bill.

At the same time, however, Shaw pointed out that a decade and more than $20 million have already been invested in the 150,000-claim adjudication that remains critical to settling water disputes, defining huge federal claims and validating rights for holders seeking agricultural financing.

"To stop the adjudication is intolerable," Shaw told the special House-Senate committee overseeing the process last Wednesday. "But given the decision, I don't see how we could go forward."

Water rights claimants have already paid more than $20 million to finance the adjudication. The U.S. Supreme Court stifled the state in refusing to shake the federal government pay its share for the water it is claiming.

But analysts estimated before Hurlbutt's decision that another $40 million would probably be needed — this time from taxpayers — and now Water Resources predicts that could hit $70 million.

About three-quarters of each year's adjudication budget goes to IDWR, although Hurlbutt's ruling raises serious questions about whether anyone fully understands what the department's role in the court proceeding is.

Hurlbutt ruling uncorks new money request

Money

Wednesday, the committee called in a number of witnesses in an attempt to determine the ramifications of Hurlbutt's decision that Deputy Attorney General Cheryl Jacobson said would be formally appealed next week to the state Supreme Court.

Committee co-chairman Laird Noh, the Kimberly Republican who heads the Senate Resources and Environment Committee, said it appears it will be difficult for lawmakers to take any action until the appeal is resolved.

"Everyone is still in the process of letting the dust settle," Noh said.

But an expert on the Idaho Constitution and other attorneys laid out for the committee an analysis they maintained shows that Hurlbutt failed to fully analyze the state Constitution and other laws when he issued his decision.

"The opinion strikes me as one that is long on conviction and passion and short on constitutional analysis," University of Idaho constitutional law Professor Dennis Colson said.

Colson, with the financial backing of IDWR, wrote an opinion stating that the Idaho Constitution could be read in such a way as to make the 1994 water laws constitutional.

Hurlbutt ruled that the laws violated the separation of powers by changing the jurisdiction of his court after the adjudication began.

But Deputy Attorney General Michael Gilmore called that conclusion unprecedented and completely counter to a string of federal and state court rulings.

Hurlbutt addressed some of those previous rulings by writing, "The hopelessly never-ending, enigmatic process of 'traditional' Idaho water adjudications has left an extraordinary void in Idaho water law and the rights of Idaho water users."

But Gilmore said that at both levels, the law is clear that the Legislature has the authority to change court procedures except if the change would violate a property right or void a legal contract. He said lawmakers have the authority to transfer the entire adjudication out of Hurlbutt's court to any other it chose.

Steve Sanders, the assistant Oregon attorney general handling that state's Klamath River adjudication, agreed with Colson's assessment of the ruling and warned that if it withstands the appeal, it could completely terminate any state administration over federal water rights as now authorized under the so-called 1951 McCarran amendment.

For his part, Hurlbutt wrote in his ruling that the McCarran amendment would require him to excuse the federal government entirely from the state adjudication if the 1994 Legislature's laws were followed, because the laws violate the very specific restrictions that the U.S. Supreme Court has placed on federal participation in state water adjudications.

Colson said that never-tampered-with constitutional provisions and state law and court rulings over the past century do not support Hurlbutt's conclusion that the separation of powers doctrine was violated when lawmakers attempted to modify the way in which the adjudication would be handled.

He maintained that "the Constitution specifically authorizes the Legislature to change the method of district court proceedings to reflect changing times — something he said the 1994 laws did when they made the Department of Water Resources a technical expert on adjudication rather than a party to the lawsuit and elevated the director's reports above any evidence provided by water rights claimants.

But he said if the state Supreme Court fails to agree with that interpretation, the only way the Legislature will regain any control over the adjudication — and any other court proceedings for that matter — will be by amendment to the constitution.

And the issue, he said, goes far beyond the water rights adjudication and would have an effect on every voter's ability to have a say in government.

"The passions of the moment should not prevail when the Constitution stands in the way," Colson said.

"Otherwise the voter loses control of government if the Constitution doesn't matter. The rules of the game are up for grabs."

But in his decision, Hurlbutt wrote that he was clarifying the rules.

"This decision serves to explicate and clarify the constitutional roles of the three branches of government with respect to an ongoing judicial proceeding," he wrote.

Salmon plan draws reactions

Furse: Proposal spreads burden

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oregon Rep. Elizabeth Furse joined Washington Sen. Patty Murray on Thursday in support of the Northwest Power Planning Council's adoption of a new salmon protection plan proposed by seven U.S. senators.

Furse said that postponing Wednesday's vote, as the senators had requested, "would have been asking the council to wait another year for recovery to start in earnest."

"That's like asking a dying man to hold tight for a year while we build a new hospital," Furse said.

Murray and Furse, both Democrats, are emerging as some of the leading salmon-protection advocates in Congress. On Wednesday, Murray refused to sign a letter asking for a delay in the vote signed by her colleagues from Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana.

Furse said the plan the council approved Wednesday is "based on sound science and will clearly move us toward bringing out salmon back."

"The courts are one step away from taking over the Columbia River," she said today.

"Postponing a council vote would have been nothing short of inviting the courts to step in and substitute their judgment for our own Northwest expertise," she said.

"This plan seems to spread the costs of recovery so that no one interest bears the full burden," Furse said.

Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, organized the letter Wednesday, which also was signed by Republican Sens. Slade Gorton of Washington, Mark Hatfield and Bob Packwood of Oregon, Dick Karmath of Idaho and Conrad Burns of Montana.

Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., was the only Democrat to sign the letter.

"We are writing to express our serious concern that the council is proceeding too hastily to reach a final decision on its revised Salmon Strategy," the senators said in a letter Tuesday to council chairman Angus Duncan.

Murray said on Wednesday that delaying action was imposing a death sentence on the fish.

Andrus blasts GOP criticism

BOISE (AP) — Outgoing Gov. Cecil Andrus disputes Republican claims that the salmon recovery plan adopted by the Northwest Power Planning Council will devastate Idaho's farm recovery by taking badly-needed water.

The council voted 6-2 Wednesday to adopt a new $177 million drawdown and reservoir flush program to help salmon make it through the Snake-Columbia river system to the Pacific Ocean and back to spawning grounds.

GOP Sen. Larry Craig and Gov.-elect Phil Batt on Wednesday said if the drawdown is carried out, it will cost up to 2.6 million acre-feet of Idaho water. That could cause between 300,000 and 400,000 acres of irrigated farmland being taken out of production, they said.

Andrus, a major sponsor of the drawdown plan, said Craig doesn't know what he's talking about.

"It's not going to take any farm land out of production that people want to remain in production," Andrus said. "It will be a willing buyer-willing seller."

He said some of Idaho's major water user associations helped put the plan together. "Those are the people who have the water out there," Andrus said.

"I would hope the people believe me," the governor said. "No water from Idaho will be used to flush the fish that has not been procured by a willing buyer from a willing seller."

"Sen. Craig has been in lockstep with the out-of-state power interests, the hydro interests downstream for many years. He hasn't changed and I don't suspect that he will," Andrus said.

"The salmon are part of the heritage and quality of life of the state of Idaho. This decision is one we have to even know that we have an anadromous fishery."

Andrus, noting the vote for the plan was 6-2, said Batt will have a hard time reversing the decision, even if he carries out his threat to replace Andrus, two appointees with his own people.

"It's not that easy," he said. "The rules are such that if you are going to amend that plan, it will take six votes to do it. They won't have six votes after he puts those two people on."

Fee

custodial fee, for example, will pay for overtime for the janitor.

"I'm completely sympathetic to taxpayers who say their tax dollars paid for the facilities," he said. But the school buildings' main purpose is education, and outside groups strain the maintenance budget, he said.

Michele Hamilton, president of JUMP Co., said she had been interested in performing in the new auditorium. But she said she canceled her plans Thursday when she heard what the cost would be: three times the cost of CSI's auditorium.

"I really hope CSI doesn't follow suit, because it would really end community theater," she said.

The school district needed to update its fee policy because old rates weren't meeting costs, Thornsbury said.

"It was not done with the intent of gouging the public," he said. "It's not what the public wants, that can be changed."

Cassia judge must decide if 20-year-old man is juvenile

By Jennifer Bunch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — A Cassia County judge must decide what to do with a 20-year-old killer the Idaho Supreme Court wants resentenced because his original punishment was invalid.

Abel Laros is being held as a juvenile at the Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center, despite having served more than a year of an adult sentence in the Idaho state prison south of Boise.

In a 1992 trial, Laros, then 17, pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter, admitting he shot 21-year-old Juan Ramos of Heyburn through the head with a .45-caliber handgun.

But in April 1994, the Idaho Supreme Court ruled unanimously that Laros' sentence of eight to 10 years in the penitentiary was invalid.

The high court said that Laros could be sentenced as an adult for the crime, but only after a special hearing is held to determine if there are grounds to treat him as an adult.

If he is sentenced as a juvenile, Laros will be free to leave detention when he turns 21 in October 1995.

In a court hearing Thursday, Cassia County Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Howard Smyser argued before 5th District Judge George Granata Jr. that Laros' crime was serious enough that he should face an adult punishment.

"Certain juveniles pose such a danger that we have to treat them differently than the typical juvenile," Smyser said during the hearing.

'We need to look at this hearing as if it took place two years ago and not today.'

— Raymundo Pena, defense attorney

Defense attorney Raymundo Pena argued that Laros should be sentenced as if he were still a 17-year-old, because his original sentence was declared invalid due to an error in the criminal justice system.

"We need to look at this hearing as if it took place two years ago and not today," Pena said.

Otherwise, he said, Laros, whom Pena referred to as a juvenile or child, would be deprived of due process.

Pena said it isn't fair to say that if Laros were still 17, he might have a chance for juvenile rehabilitation, but now that he's 20, he doesn't have a chance and should be sent to the penitentiary.

Judge Granata gave the attorneys until Jan. 13 to file their arguments for sentencing, based on evidence presented in Thursday's hearing. At that time, Granata said he will have 30 days to set the new sentence.

The legal problem arose because Laros changed his plea. First, he faced a second-degree murder charge, according to court documents. Then, under a plea bargain, he pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter.

A juvenile accused of second-degree murder can be tried as an adult, while a juvenile accused of voluntary manslaughter must go through a court hearing, according to the Supreme Court opinion.

Cassia County sheriff's deputies found Ramos dead in a pickup truck on June 8, 1992. The truck had come to a halt in front of Cassia Truck Parts, near the 2nd block of West Main Street, after a bullet pierced the truck's cab and struck Ramos in the back of the head, according to court testimony Thursday by Sgt. Dave Tracy.

According to Tracy, Laros and Ramos had at least two run-ins at local bars. Ramos had been trying to drive away when Laros raised his gun and fired, Tracy said.

Hearing on Simpson marriage delayed

Newsday

LOS ANGELES — A hearing into whether prosecutors can introduce evidence of marital discord between O.J. Simpson and his ex-wife was put off Thursday.

That step came after the defense said it needed more time to study the more than 1,000 pages of evidence and witness statements delivered by the prosecution last Wednesday.

Defense lawyer Gerald Uelman argued that the 11th-hour delivery of the documents was a deliberate attempt to prevent Simpson from getting a speedy trial.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito ordered Deputy District Attorney Christopher Darden to turn over today any information the prosecution has not yet given the defense, except for matters that are still under active investigation. Ito said that Friday he would set a new date for the hearing.

Simpson's lawyers are to push today to delay arguing the merits of DNA evidence until after opening statements at his trial and that a jail guard should not be allowed to testify about what Simpson said during a tearful outburst last month during a visit with his minister. The two issues will be dealt with before the court breaks for the holidays.

The defense filed a motion earlier this week seeking to argue the merits of DNA evidence in front of the jury during the trial instead of at a pretrial hearing. The prosecution is fighting the move on the grounds that there is no authority in the law to do so and that it would break up the normal trial schedule.

The arguments on whether to admit as evidence a statement made by Simpson to his minister, Roosevelt Grier, Nov. 13, were postponed until Friday, because Deputy District Attorney William Hodgman was ill.

Deputy Sheriff Jeff Stuart testified Wednesday that during the visit with Grier, a former defensive lineman with the New York Giants and Los Angeles Rams, Simpson slammed down the intercom telephone, yelled something, poured the coffee and began to cry.

Because the defense contends that conversation was privileged, Stuart was prevented from testifying about what Simpson said. The prosecution is arguing that with his outburst, Simpson waived his right to keep the discussion with his minister confidential.

Declo receives OK to seek water grant

By Teryl Zollinger
Times-News correspondent

DECLO The city is one step closer to getting a new water system. Mayor Jay Darrington was contacted this week and given the go-ahead to submit a full-fledged application for a community development block grant.

That's great news for the City Council, which has been seeking funding for the past two years. The city hopes to get $425,000 in grants and another $250,000 loan from Farmers Home Administration for the project.

In order to qualify, Declo must show that the water system pays its own way. During November's meeting, the City Council determined that it must re-evaluate and increase customer rates. There have been no rate increases for over 30 years.

Emil Peterson, of the Region IV Development Association, estimated it will take a year to install the updated water system, which includes a new well. He said that construction will hopefully begin in April.

In the meantime, Peterson will work with the council to try to remedy any weaknesses in the application. He's been working on gathering more conclusive evidence on Declo's problems.

The two significant problems are contamination from coliform bacteria and a lack of water pressure. Currently, the city's water system can't pump water fast enough to fight a major fire.

The year-end audit was presented by certified public accountant Garth Beck and unanimously approved by the council. Beck, of Evans & Beck in Burley, asked the council to consider some changes for 1995. He suggested the budget conform to bookkeeping records rather than prior budgets.

Declo residents Blaine Hamilton and his wife questioned the council about a new street to be located near their home. The street is part of a new housing development two blocks south of Main Street. Hamilton said that he wanted it blacktopped because of problems with dust and water drainage.

Mayor Darrington said that when the road was first annexed into the city, back in 1972, it was annexed "as planned." There were no stipulations at the time which said that the developer or the city must pave the road.

Hamilton again said that his road is nothing but problems and adding another gravel road would just compound an already bad situation. He suggested requiring the developer to blacktop the road. "All costs could be recouped through selling the property,"

Peterson said that he would check the Idaho Code to see if a developer is required to make street improvements.

Hamilton, who also wants his road replaced, asked if he and his neighbors had to pay for improvements.

Mayor Darrington said "no," but that a local improvement district (LID) would have to be passed. A LID would in turn increase taxes for all Declo property owners. He also said that blacktopping a road is very expensive.

Declo's recent overlay of Main Street's three blocks cost $30,000.

Utah sets to start smoking ban

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) Utah is about the blow out the match on smokers in restaurants, public buildings and most workplaces as it prepares to implement what its authors say is the toughest clean air law in America.

The measure was passed by the Legislature this year and businesses have had a year to get used to the idea. It takes effect Jan. 1 and will essentially ban smoking in all public places, with a few notable exceptions.

"Utah will be on the vanguard in protecting the health of its citizens against secondhand smoke," said state Sen. Robert F. Montgomery during a news conference Thursday in the State Capitol.

Simply put, the law will prohibit "the possession of lighted tobacco products in enclosed indoor places of public access and publicly owned buildings and offices."

It also requires workplaces that don't cater to the public to ban smoking unless three-fourths of the workers agree to allow smoking in a secret ballot. The employer can also set smoking areas providing equal smoke-free areas are provided to those who don't light up.

There are a few other exceptions. Bars and taverns, for instance, can allow smoking, and hotels and motels can have smoking rooms. Lobbies, however, and other areas of general public access must be smokefree.

Wife kills husband

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) A woman fatally shot her husband early Thursday after a drunken argument, the Kootenai County sheriff's office said.

James Caba, 59, died of a single gunshot wound to the chest with a .357 Magnum revolver, deputies said.

Darlene Caba, 49, told investigators she was in fear for her life when she shot her husband at their Beauty Bay home, deputies said.

Co-op pact on dump might be extended

CARLSBAD, N.M. (AP) — The U.S. Department of Energy and New Mexico are expected to extend a cooperative agreement allowing the state to address concerns about the federal government's nuclear waste dump near Carlsbad.

The government said on Thursday that extension of the agreement, originally signed in 1988, should be signed late this month.

It gives the state a way to handle problems related to the long-term operation of the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant, experimental programs, transportation safety, potential socioeconomic impacts and communication.

The storage facility is now scheduled to begin accepting plutonium-contaminated waste in 1998. Waste from the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory is expected to be among the first ship to the dump.

Andrus: Changes don't end conservation

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus warned the state's timber industry today that it should not use the national political realignment as an opportunity to gain revenge on past opponents but to reach out and work with them toward more effective solutions to difficult problems.

In fact, Andrus predicted that key newly empowered Republicans could re-energize the environmental community as it was in the early 1980s under former Reagan administration Interior Secretary James Watt.

In the last public address before retiring after 14 years as the state's chief executive, Andrus told the Idaho Forest Industries Council it will be a major mistake to think last month's Republican electoral sweep means an end to 30 years of environmental and conservation legislation.

Andrus

"Change will be made," he acknowledged in remarks prepared for the council's annual meeting in Coeur d'Alene.

But, he added, "There is no evidence that I know of that the new Congress is going to even try to repeal or radically change the basic structure of environmental law. It just isn't going to happen, and for one very fundamental reason — the American people don't want it to happen."

The public wants better resource management and smarter solutions to environmental problems, Andrus said, but voters have not mandated the dismantling of the Endangered Species Act or any other major environmental or conservation initiative.

He argued that the change in congressional control that has put Alaska Republican Don Young in charge of the House Natural Resources Committee makes it more important than ever for the industry to keep searching for moderate resolutions to key environmental questions like forest health and wilderness.

"I fought with Don Young for years over Alaska issues," said the former Carter administration interior secretary, who presided over the enactment of the Alaska Lands law.

"With all due respect, he is not going to get it done on these tough, practical and complicated issues," Andrus said. "He is really skilled at one thing — stopping things from happening."

He maintained that the public as well as environmental activists will be watching every congressional fight over endangered species, clean water or mining reform and use it to raise money and regroup for a new attack on the GOP.

"Don Young, or someone else, will become their fund-raising poster child and they will capitalize on the controversy they and he create," Andrus predicted. "Don't forget that Jim Watt was the best thing that ever happened to The Wilderness Society and the Sierra Club in the early 1980s, and this new era will play out just the same way, I believe."

And he expressed hope that rather than being reinforced in their "blindly partisan" past support for Republicans, key industry members will learn that there are Democrats who have agreed with them on most of the major issues.

Insurer to pay for diabetic class

BOISE (AP) — Blue Cross of Idaho says it will improve its health coverage for diabetics in the form of outpatient lessons about the disease.

Staffing Jan. 1, the state's largest health insurer will cover the kinds of educational services Idaho's 50,000 diabetics need to stay healthy.

They include lessons on using insulin, monitoring blood-sugar levels, eating right and exercising. "We take part shots at the insurance industry, but this is something they've really done right," said Dr. Cynthia Clinkingbeard, medical director of the Humphreys Diabetes Center in Boise. "This is health-care reform working at the grass-roots level."

The idea is that spending money up front to keep people healthy reduces hospital bills in the long run.

The added Blue Cross coverage will not boost premiums for the 215,000 customers eligible, Blue Cross spokeswoman Tracy Grubbs said. The state's second-largest insurer, MSB Blue Shield of Idaho, does not offer it now, except in one managed-care product marketed only in northern Idaho.

Four states, including neighboring Oregon, require health insurers to offer the benefit, Idaho does not.

Up to now, Idaho diabetics who needed classes sometimes paid the full fee — if they could afford it.

Blue Cross' policies were contradictory. In some cases, it paid about $3,500 for basic workshops, including insulin lessons, if the patients were hospitalized, but not if they went to a place like Humphreys, where the bill for a similar workshop was closer to $500.

"We said, 'Wait a minute, this doesn't make sense,'" Andrus said. "This is not the most prudent way to assist our customers and control our overall healthcare costs."

Diabetes is a chronic disease caused by insufficient production of insulin in the pancreas.

People who learn to manage their illnesses can live longer and prevent long-term complications, such as amputations and blindness.

"It saves sick days from work; it saves hospital days; it saves feet; it saves eyes; and it ultimately saves lives," Clinkingbeard said.

Defunct hospital now abuse center

LEWISTON (AP) — The defunct River Crest psychiatric hospital in Lewiston is likely to become an alcohol and drug treatment center, a non-profit group says.

It appears St. Joseph Regional Medical Center is not going to take over the property. Instead, St. Joseph's will finish its vacant sixth floor to provide the other service left behind as River Crest shut down its child and adolescent mental health treatment.

The former River Crest facility could be operated by a local non-profit corporation now formed by a board of directors.

The partnership that owns the property will meet Monday to negotiate a lease agreement with an option to buy, said Dr. William Cone of Lewiston, a retired psychiatrist and one of the property owners.

If it goes according to plan, the new inpatient and outpatient substance abuse center could open its doors Jan. 10. It will offer 46 beds.

St. Joseph's assumed the lease River Crest had in Moscow for outpatient counseling because it was larger than the space St. Joseph's was using.

King Hussein of Jordan is flanked by bodyguards as he leaves the Islamic Conference Thursday in Casablanca.

Islamic leaders offer aid to Bosnia

CASABLANCA, Morocco (AP)—Islamic leaders Thursday urged military aid for Bosnia's Muslims and vowed to combat religious fanaticism. But appeals for unity were undercut by rifts among Arab participants that remained unresolved at the close of a three-day summit of the 52-member Organization of the Islamic Conference.

Jordan's King Hussein, who left abruptly Wednesday, failed to gain a mention in the final document on Jordan's role in overseeing Muslim holy sites in East Jerusalem. Palestinians objected out of fear it would weaken their claim to sovereignty over that sector of the city.

Iraq was angered by a resolution calling for it to refrain from menacing its neighbors and to comply with U.N. resolutions stemming from its 1990 invasion of Kuwait.

"Despite all the goodwill efforts, we regrettably found that the Gulf War has left an open wound which has to be healed," said Morocco's King Hassan II.

Participants, who came from Europe, Asia and Africa found some common ground. They agreed on a 182-article communique on issues ranging from terrorism in the Islamic world to technology and culture.

The plight of Bosnian Muslims united leaders. Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic attended as an observer, and his government received pledges of $300,000 to $5 million from each Islamic state.

The Bosnia resolution went beyond the expected call to lift the arms embargo. The Islamic states said they would cooperate with any U.N. members "who exhibit a willingness on their own initiative to provide Bosnia with the means for self-defense."

They renewed a call to reinforce U.N. peacekeepers with Muslim troops, a suggestion rejected by Western countries which fear it could allow fundamentalist countries like Iran to gain a foothold in Europe.

The Islamic leaders called for streamlining procedures to allow military support, including airstrikes, to protect peacekeepers and civilians against Serb attacks.

The leaders also approved a separate six-page document — the Casablanca Declaration — which complained about "a ferocious campaign to tarnish Islam," denounced "extremism and religious fanaticism" and called for a media effort to "clarify misconception" that have associated Islam with violence.

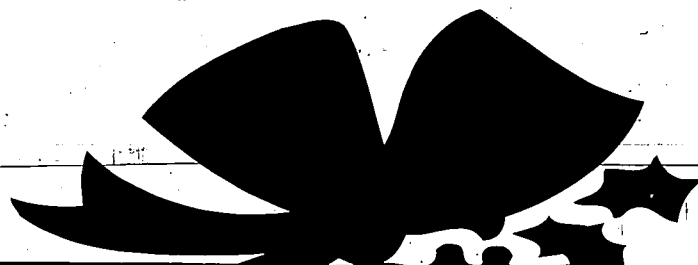

It condemned terrorism as "a blatant disgrace to Islamic teachings and a violation of our values, culture and heritage."

Hog futures surge on signs of tight supply

Hog futures prices made their strongest daily gain in six months Thursday and signs of tightening in the abundant supplies that recently pushed prices to a 14-year low.

Most other commodity futures also rose, with strong gains in cotton and copper. The Commodity Research Bureau's index of 21 commodities rose 1.15 points to 230.79.

Live hogs for February delivery surged 1.18 cents on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange to 38.10 cents a pound. It was the strongest single-day advance in a hog contract since June 13.

The thinly traded December contract, which expires next Thursday, ended 0.40 cent lower at 33.72 cents a pound after a late plunge prompted by a large sell order.

February frozen pork bellies jumped 1.15 cents to 39.30 cents a pound; February live cattle rose 0.33 cent to 70.50 cents a pound; January feeder cattle rose 0.45 cent to 75.12 cents a pound.

Hog futures have been climbing in fits and starts since Oct. 18, when near-term deliveries hit a 14-year low of 29.97 cents a pound due to burdensome supplies of slaughter-ready animals.

Ex-baseball commissioner resigns from MK board

BOISE — Peter Ueberroth, former commissioner of Major League Baseball, has resigned from the board of directors of Morrison Knudsen Corp.

Company officials said Ueberroth told Board Chairman William Agie that his increasingly busy schedule did not allow him adequate time to serve on the board.

Ueberroth joined the MK board in 1989, shortly after Agie became chairman in 1988.

Ueberroth served as baseball commissioner in the 1990s and organized the 1984 Olympic Games in Los Angeles.

MK, an Idaho-based worldwide construction, engineering and railroad car company, said it does not plan to replace Ueberroth on the board.

Money

Tax time becomes high tech

Knight-Ridder News Service

BRADENTON, Fla. — Although many people still struggle through 1040 forms with pencil and adding machine, electronic brains and lightning-fast data networks are gradually replacing every step of tax paying, from computing deductions and filling out forms to transferring returns to taxpayers' bank accounts.

Nationally, the number of electronic filings has grown from 583,462 in 1989 to 12.3 million last year.

Computer-assisted tax preparation, filing and payment systems are growing in popularity because they cut costs, reduce waste, expedite tax returns and generally make life easier for taxpayers and government agencies alike.

"In some cases, you can elect to get your refund deposited directly by computer into your bank account," said John Schnellman of the Internal Revenue Service's south Florida office. "Also the computers do a lot of the simplistic work, things like simple addition, simple subtraction, making sure there are no entries missing on lines where there should be an entry and so on. Computers do a lot of checking on those little details people sometimes miss, so the accuracy rate of these electronic methods is higher."

It won't be long before taxpayers will be able to save money and transmit returns instantly through commercial on-line computer services. CompuServe and America Online are both developing systems with the IRS that will allow computer users to file 1040 forms inexpensively and almost instantaneously, Schnellman said.

"It'll be available this coming filing season," he said. "This year they're anticipating about 30,000 returns to be filed on the on-line service."

Consumers with personal computers already use a variety of inexpensive (less than $100) software packages such as TaxCut by MECA Software, TurboTax by Intuit or MacIntax by Softview to simplify tax preparations.

Unfortunately home computers can't do everything — most taxpayers will still have to root through checkbooks and receipts to provide the records computer programs ask for. A tax preparation program takes care of all the math, distributes and compiles the information properly and prints out completed IRS-acceptable forms.

Every year tax preparation software is updated to keep up with ever-changing tax guidelines. Early versions of the 1994 tax software are already available, but most consumers won't start buying the programs until 1995, said Robert McKinnick, a sales representative at Mr. Software in Bradenton. "Tax software really kicks in around January, and then they sell like wildfire. After tax time, there's a resurgence when people are looking at the software and trying to make things easier next time."

Home tax preparation software prints out paper forms for consumers to send to the government — but taxpayers who are in an even bigger hurry to file their taxes and receive refunds can do so electronically.

Some lucky taxpayers with simple filing requirements can fulfill them in minutes using a touch-tone phone. In late December, the IRS will send its 1040 TEL form and information package to all Florida residents who meet certain eligibility requirements, said Susan Carroll, a marketing coordinator for alternative ways of filing for the IRS.

After filling out a few simple lines on the 1040 TEL form, the taxpayer can call an IRS voice-mail system and dial in the information from their forms. The IRS system, called TeleFile, takes care of the arithmetic, Carroll said.

"It's quick and easy," she said. "The TeleFile system is going to do all the math, calculate the refund and send it home without a computer. It's very accurate, and the telephone will automatically compute whether the filer is due a refund."

The TeleFile system is restricted to people with relatively simple tax filing requirements, but other taxpayers can speed up their tax returns by filing them electronically through a tax service company. The IRS allows such companies to input taxpayers' tax returns into computers and transmit the returns by modem directly to the IRS database, according to a spokesman.

GOP bill could hurt Orange County suits against brokers

Orange County Register

WASHINGTON — A bill proposed by an Orange County, Calif., congressman would make it tougher for Orange County to win lawsuits should the county sue brokerage firms in the fallout of the $2 billion investment-fund loss, legal experts said.

The legal reforms proposed by Republican Rep. Chris Cox of Newport Beach, were intended to eliminate frivolous lawsuits, but the Cox bill would set higher standards for proving fraud and establish harsh penalties should the plaintiff lose.

The bill, which includes a provision making it apply retroactively to cases pending at the time of enactment, was written by Cox for the "Contract With America" — the Republican game plan for the first 100 days of the new Congress.

Jan Adler, a securities attorney who helped San Jose recoup $30 million of about $60 million lost in investments similar to those made in Orange County, said Wednesday that Orange County could face significant obstacles if the Cox bill were the law when Orange County filed suit.

"If the Cox bill had been in place at the time we were representing San Jose, it would have severely impeded our efforts to recover the tremendous, tremendous taxpayer losses suffered by the city," Adler said.

And if the county lost the case, the Cox bill would require the county to pay the sizable legal bills of the Wall Street firms.

Among the more controversial provisions, the Cox bill would require Orange County to prove that the brokerage firms knew that statements made about investments were misleading at the time they were made.

Existing law requires the county to prove that the securities firms acted recklessly.

How to sort through the giant pile of holiday music without blowing a fuse

The Baltimore Sun

Superstar Christmas albums

Though it's hardly unusual to find big-name artists releasing Christmas albums, the pop action this year is exceptionally heavy.

Not only are there new Christmas albums from Mariah Carey, Kenny G, Natalie Cole and Neil Diamond, but they're being greeted with the same sort of enthusiasm non-seasonal albums by these artists would inspire.

The truly astonishing thing about this burst of superstar activity is that some of the albums are really quite good. Perhaps the most surprising of the bunch is Kenny G's "Miracles: The Holiday Album" (Arista 18767), which channels the saxophonist's straightforward melodic approach into a series of tastefully soulful instrumentals that update the standards without ever getting too jazzy. Though, to be honest, it does seem a bit odd that he ends the album with a rendition of "Brahms' Lullaby."

Then there's Mariah Carey's "Merry Christmas" (Columbia 64223), which may look like just another attempt to cash in on Christmas cheer, but is actually the work of

Twas a month before Christmas, and all through the house
Echoed vile imprecations as the critic did grouse.

Why, just look at these Christmas CDs piling higher...

You wish you could just throw them all in the fire!

It isn't as if you dislike Christmas cheer;

But when playing these albums, that's not quite what you hear.

someone who genuinely loves this music. Granted, Carey's gospel inclinations come through a lot stronger than might be expected on traditional tunes like "Silent Night," but that hardly diminishes the effect of her performance; in fact, her soulful ornamentation adds oomph to the reading of "O Holy Night." But the album's real strength is the conviction she brings to otherwise comely fare like "Santa Claus Is Comin' to Town," while the way she augments "Joy to the World" with a bit of the Three Dog Night hit is pure genius.

Too bad Donna Summer's "Christmas Spirit" (Mercury 314 522694) doesn't have that kind of flare; though earnest and well-intentioned, it manages to make Summer's diligent performances seem deadly dull.

Deciding just how much style to bring to a Christmas album isn't easy. Natalie Cole is all over the map musically with "Holly & Ivy" (Elektra 61704), an album that can't seem to decide whether it wants to play it straight or jazz things up. As a result, it's hard to follow the thread as the album moves from the big band pizzazz of "Jingle Bells" to the cutesy "Caroling, Caroling," to the bluesy "Merry Christmas Baby."

Even Neil Diamond seems to have learned the value of consistency, as "The Christmas Album, Volume II" (Columbia 66465) largely avoids the stylistic quirks that hobbled its predecessor. Apart from a reggae version of "Rudolf the Red-Nosed Reindeer" (1), the arrangements here are big and lush, delivering the sort of orchestral grandeur associated with Christmas albums of the '50s and '60s.

Then again, if that's the sound you want, why not go to the source?

Many of Frank Sinatra's best Christmas performances from the '60s have been collected in "The Sinatra Christmas Album" (Reprise 45743), including a version of "Go Tell It on the Mountain" sung with Bing Crosby, and a 1968 rendition of "The Twelve Days of Christmas," done with Tina, Nancy and Frank Sinatra Jr.

But if you want is an album that looks as good as it sounds, the only possible choice is the collector's edition of Elvis Presley's "If Every Day Was Like Christmas" (RCA 66506), which packs 24 Christmas classics into a sleeve that folds open to reveal a pop-up picture of Graceland at Christmas.

Traditional Christmas albums

For some listeners, though, Christmas means choirs, organs and maybe an occasional orchestral arrangement. Something in other words, like the Mormon Tabernacle Choir's "This Is Christmas" (Bonneville Classics 9402). A brand-new recording, it presents the venerable choir precisely as we've come to expect them — big sound, semiclassical settings, perfect diction — but with a selection that brings a few surprises, including an arrangement of

Tonight at the improv: 'A Christmas Carol'

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — What the Dickens is new this holiday season? Improvise something. Good old stand-up, banter-with-the-audience, hassle-the-hecklers, finger-in-the-eye improv is coming to Ketchum's Sun Valley Repertory Co., starting tonight, starring Scrooge, Marley and the entire Cratchit family.

"I've been in this business for a long time, and I thought it was jaded," said Kevin McCauley, artistic director of the Sun Valley Rep, which opens its fifth winter season tonight in Ketchum's nextStage Theater. "But these guys make me laugh so hard, I'm crying."

These guys are Scott Creighton and Shandell Sosia, a couple of New York-based actors doing business as the By the Seat of the Pants theater company. Through Christmas, they're taking "A Christmas Carol" with a twist.

"The format is that the audience basically dictates what the actors do," McCauley explained. "Maybe one will do Scrooge and the other Marley, and then they'll switch, or they'll take their characters in whatever direction the audience suggests."

"A Christmas Carol in Improv" will morph into more or less straight improv after Christmas, Creighton and Sosia will be around until mid-January, then return to February.

"Everyone in the audience writes a word or phrase on a 3x5 card, and the actors read it," McCauley said. "They establish a character and like it pretty much wherever the audience wants it to go. It's a riot."

The Sun Valley Rep is also launching its production of a David Mamet's satire, "Revenge of the Space Pandas," next Tuesday. It's the story of a planet where the Fraternity of Pandas calls the shots, and where everyone who's not a panda is no one at all.

Patrick Hamilton's "Angel Street," a murder mystery, will begin its run in late February, and McCauley plans to cap off the season with a children's production of Lionel Hart's "Oliver!"

"We've done improv here before, but this is the first time we've devoted so much of a season to it," McCauley said. "I think people will love it."

In the past, the Rep's Christmas season productions have included Carol Burnett, Cliff Robertson, Richard Dreyfuss and Martin Sheen, but not this time.

"It's an incredibly business movie-making season this winter," McCauley said. "So we'll have celebrities this season, but they'll be in the audience."

Ticket information

The Sun Valley Repertory Co. will present "A Christmas Carol in Improv" tonight, Saturday and Sunday and Tuesday through Dec. 24, and David Mamet's "Revenge of the Space Pandas" Dec. 20-24 at the nextStage Theater in Ketchum. Curtain time tonight, Saturday and Sunday is 8 p.m.; next week "Pandora" will open at 7 p.m., followed by "A Christmas Carol." Tickets are $10 for reserved seats and $5 for general admission, and for tonight's performance only, tickets will be two for the price of one.

The British Invasion of 1994: Herman's Hermits re-emerge

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

JACKPOT — The mid-60s music scene was dominated by The British Invasion, the first wave of which became household names: The Beatles, The Rolling Stones and Herman's Hermits.

The Beatles are gone, the Stones have gone gray and prosperous, but the Hermits are still into something good.

The group will bring its hits such as "Can't You Hear My Heartbeat," "Misty Brown You've Got a Lovely Daughter," "I'm Henry VIII I Am," "There's a Kind of Hush" and "I'm into Something Good," to Cactus Petes next week.

From the beginning — in Manchester, England, in 1964 — the band has chalked up more than 23 hit singles, 10 hit albums, three movies and a number of TV shows and concert tours. Record sales, to date, total 40 million.

Since 1971, and the departure of co-founding vocalist Peter Noone to pursue a solo career as a musical comedy actor, the group has performed nonstop.

Ticket information

Herman's Hermits will perform two shows a night Tuesday through Dec. 25 at Cactus Petes Resort Casino in Jackpot. Shows are at 8 and 11 p.m. The dinner show features an Oldies but Goldies special menu. Dinner show prices start at $7.95; there's a $5 cover charge for the cocktail show. For reservations and information, call 1-800-821-1103.

Original members Derek "Lek" Luckenby, the lead guitarist, and Barry "The Beat" Whitman, the drummer, guide the band, which still averages "more than 200 one-night stands a year."

A typical touring schedule takes the Hermits to Germany, Belgium, Holland, the Scandinavian countries, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the United States on a regular basis. The group still performs in its home country, too.

Golden Oldies make up a large part of the show, and audiences are invited to sing along.

Herman's Hermits will play in Jackpot through Christmas.

Brooks' career enters new phase

Knight-Ridder News Service

It certainly seems as if Garth Brooks has been around longer than the six years he's been releasing records.

In that short time, he's established himself as a country icon as formidable as Hank Williams or Willie Nelson, a king of Elvis Presley and Michael Jackson proportions in his field.

Whether Brooks' music proves as durable remains to be seen; what's clear is that he's accomplished the rare twin feat of enormous commercial success and substantial stylistic influence. His six albums have sold 35 million copies; two — "No Fences" and "Ropin' the Wind" — have sold more than 10 million each and rank just behind "The Bodyguard" soundtrack as the best-selling albums of the '90s. "Ropin' the Wind" and "The Chase" were the first albums in history to debut at No. 1 on both the Billboard pop and country charts. Brooks' two home videos have sold more than a million copies combined, and he's starred in two NBC prime-time specials. He's notched 18 hits on Billboard's country charts.

Brooks

They make up the selections on his new album, "The Hits," which arrives in stores Tuesday.

Brooks' success, in fact, is responsible for country's explosion as a musical force that — at least in terms of radio listeners — has overtaken rock 'n' roll. Brooks' was the boot that kicked open the doors for Alan Jackson, Wynonna Judd, Travis Tritt and any number of country musicians enjoying greater record sales and concert audiences than their forebears.

He's well on his way to being "the artist of the decade for the '90s" — a goal he declared for himself in 1991. But Brooks, 32, prefers a more modest assessment. "I feel like a part of it, but not the guy that's changing everything," Brooks says from his manager's office in Nashville, the day after jetting to Detroit to tape some promotional messages that will be aired over K mart's in-house video system.

Nashville notes

"Because Vince Gill is having a good year, or Clint Black, or Wynonna — she has a lot of pop people coming over that maybe wouldn't listen to country before. Then they give me a listen where they wouldn't give me a listen if it weren't for Wynonna. It works both ways."

This is an odd time for Brooks, both reflective and forward looking. He's no fan of greatest hits records; "I hate 'em," he says. His marketing savvy — he studied advertising at Oklahoma State University — tells him that all these collections do is drain sales from the rest of his catalog.

But once convinced that now was the time to release "The Hits," Brooks decided to do it his way. For starters, it contains all 18 of Brooks' hit singles, a whopping total by Nashville standards.

Brooks is also using "The Hits" as an opportunity to pump his other albums via a CD "zoom" that will be distributed free with the new album. This separate disc samples all 61 songs from his albums, along with Brooks' comments.

Stardom: Stewart has made it so

NEW YORK (AP) — It doesn't just seem so. It is so. Patrick Stewart is inescapable these days. And it's not just Stewart as Capt. Picard saying, "Make it so."

The actor graces movie screens in "Star Trek Generations" and Broadway in Dickens' "A Christmas Carol." His magisterial vocal cords supply the voiceovers in commercials for RCA, Pontiac and other products. With an "Avast, ye matey" pirate-like bravura, he even voices an animated character in the new movie "The Pagemaster."

And if that's not enough, he's called "intergalactically sensual" by the latest Playgirl magazine, which suggests he can "reduce you to a puddle of libidinous mush."

The 54-year-old Stewart, who has a grown son and daughter from a past marriage, says he's comfortable with his sex-symbol status, though he doesn't understand it.

"I personally don't get it," he says, denying that any mock modesty is at work. "Nevertheless, it seems now to be a fact and one that's not going to go away. So I have determined to sit back and enjoy it. As I've said before, if it would have been nicer if it had happened when I was 19."

Back then, he was still having a go at a career in journalism, which he tried right out of school.

"If I'd had had these then," he says, tapping The Associated Press tape recorder, "I would probably still be a journalist. One of the reasons that I packed it in was that my shorthand was so bad that I was constantly getting into trouble for misquoting, writing things wrong. I used to just make it up."

So Stewart, who grew up in the English town of Mirfield, near where he lives now, jumped to acting. Associated with the Royal Shakespeare Company since 1967, Stewart has played such roles as Shylock, Titus Andronicus, King John and Henry IV.

Referring to a one-man play he's done titled "Uncle Lies the Head," in which he plays kings, prime ministers, generals, traders, union leaders and the like, he allows that he's certainly filled a lot of authority figure roles.

"There's just been an awful lot of them in my career," says Stewart, whose biggest such role of course is Jean-Luc Picard, commander of the Starship Enterprise.

"I had a pretty good role model in my father," who was a military man, he continues. "There is a good deal of him in Capt. Picard. He would have recognized a good deal of what the good captain does."

Picard says he's always been interested in power and the use of power. "So I've always been interested in what power does to a human being. Therefore, I've been attracted to those kind of roles."

But now, he's consciously taking on other kinds of parts. Stewart recently finished making the film of Paul Rudnick's Broadway play, "Jeffrey," in which he has his first overtly homosexual role, as the title character's best friend. And he's filming the romantic comedy "Let It Be Me," in which he plays what he describes as a dancing coach who's a bit of a huffer.

"For a year I've been planning for this moment. I didn't want to wake up on an early June morning, having hung up a space-suit for the last time, and find that I had nothing to do and that I was going back into a world that only knew me as Capt. Picard."

During the seven-year run of the syndicated TV series, "Star Trek: The Next Generation," he continued working on stage and doing some brief cameos "to remind the world out there that I was an actor. I was more than just captain of a spaceship."

Music

"The Twelve Days of Christmas" that serves as a brief tour through six centuries of music history.

On the opposite end of the choral spectrum is "A Wavely Consort by Christmas: Chant from East Anglia to Appalachia" (Virgin Veritas 55193). An example of "old-time" music, this album blends the medieval with Early American so dearly you'd think they really did go conglating with banjos in Merry Old England.

Providing a balance between the two is "Christmas with Carol Arts" (BCAS 10988) by the Baltimore Choral Arts Society, a beautifully low-key recording that mixes traditional carols and hymns with a well-chosen selection of classical Christmas pieces.

Brass choirs are always a big favorite around Christmas time, but the Canadian Brass could easily put an end to that. "Noel" (RCA 62638) is the quintet's newest and most irritating seasonal offering, a bloated, cutesy, over-arranged collection that could turn even the most faithful Cratchit into a sneering Scrooge.

Much better is "Pops Christmas Party" (RCA 61685) with Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra. In addition to a wide array of tastefully presented favorites, it boasts perhaps the best rendition of Leroy Anderson's "Sleigh Ride" on album.

It's also a remarkably lively album, which is more than can be said for the determinedly bland "A Family Christmas" (GTS 4575) by John Tesh and the Christmas Orchestra. Unless you plan to spend Christmas in an elevator, give this a wide berth.

But if all you want is tuncful simplicity, it's hard to beat "Noel: A Traditional Christmas Songbook" (November 11). Between the unaffected charm of Deirdre Jenkins' voice and the understated power of Paul Jason Smith's piano accompaniment, it's the next best thing to singing the carols yourself.

Country Christmas albums

It used to be that you could always count on country singers to crank out a couple of dozen cornball Christmas albums every season, but as the new Nashville begins to change the way business is done in Music City, what we're seeing is less quantity and more quality in the seasonal offerings.

Take Trisha Yearwood's "The Sweetest Gift" (MCA 10912) as an example. Although the album is clearly Christmas-oriented, it makes a point of maintaining Yearwood's musical identity throughout. So, in addition to seasonal chestnuts like "Away in a Manger" and "The Christmas Song," we also get spirited Western swing like "Reindeer Boogie" and the heart-tugging ballad "It Wasn't His Child."

Sammy Davis Jr.'s new trend toward traditional tunes on "Christmas Time's A Comin'" (Mercury 314 522 638), but Bill makes it all sound like a Sammy Kershaw album, from the honky-tonk take on "Winter Wonderland" to the Cajun-tinged "Yuletide." (Mercury 314 522 638) But Bill makes it all sound like a Sammy Kershaw album, from the honky-tonk take on "Winter Wonderland" to the Cajun-tinged "Yuletide." (Mercury 314 522 638)

Yuletide. (Mercury 314 522 638) But Bill makes it all sound like a Sammy Kershaw album, from the honky-tonk take on "Winter Wonderland" to the Cajun-tinged "Yuletide." (Mercury 314 522 638)

New Age Christmas albums

Never mind that true New Ager prefer to celebrate the winter solstice; New Age is quickly becoming one of the season's most popular musical genres. Its low-key, tuncful and wonderfully atmospheric, adding to the holiday spirit without seeming to force itself on listeners.

Some of it is also strikingly beautiful: Lit Story's "The Gift" (Windham Hill 11151) may be the most enjoyable instrumental album of the season, offering rich, tuncful treatments of familiar carols in flute, lyrical piano (with occasional double bass) arrangements. It's not often that an album without singing brings such a vocal quality to the music.

Story isn't the only pianist with a new Christmas album in the stores, though. David Lanz brings a light, lean touch to "Christmas Eve" (Narada Lotus 61046), making it the sort of album that's perfect for a quiet evening in front of the fireplace. Buck Thompson, by contrast, opts for a rather more rollicking sound on "Yuletide" (Daring 3010), a collection of carols that at its most raucous harks back to the glory days of James P. Johnson.

Those looking for a slightly larger-sound may prefer "Star of Wonder" (Narada Lotus 61043) by Tingstad and Rumbel, which offers older carols in instrumental settings that evoke the richness of a full orchestra without the sonic excess. (Rumbel's oboe playing is particularly affecting.) Or, if more of a chamber ensemble sound is in order, there's always the piano/cello/guitar sound of Lana Moon and "Spirit of the Holidays" (North Star 40066), an album that's almost too soft-focus for its own good.

Gregorian Chant Christmas albums

Christmas being a rather well-known Christian holiday, it's no surprise that it would turn up as the subject of Gregorian chants. And after the platinum-plus sales of "Chant" by the Benedictine monks of Santo Domingo de Silos, it was inevitable that we'd see them return with "Chant Noel" (Angel 55206).

Not exactly an album of carols, its seasonal content lies mainly with the lyrics — meaning that unless you speak Latin, these chants will sound like pretty much any other.

The Benedictines may not be the only monks on the market, but they remain the most listenable. "Chants of the Season" (RCA 68007), by the Choir of Mount Angel Abbey is also nicely sung, though the recording lacks the deep resonance that makes the Benedictines so memorable; but "Gregorian Chant, Christmas Chants" (Milan 35668) is more interesting for its programming than the performances themselves.

Sports video games get real

Knight-Ridder News Service

Games people play

For years and years, Electronic Arts has dominated the video football game market with its Madden Football.

Each year, Madden '92 or '93 was the game to have. It featured tips from pro football's favorite announcer and great game play. This year, Madden '95 has 1,000 different injuries the players can suffer, individual player stats throughout the season — something fans have long wanted — and improved graphics.

But Madden is also getting some competition.

Sega's NFL '95 debuted Nov. 15 about the same time as the new Madden game — and Sega says it gives "die-hard football fans the ultimate football game with the most realistic details."

In the past, the Sega NFL games have been difficult to play and the graphics haven't been as good as those on the Madden cartridge. The Sega players were more difficult to follow across the screen.

We got a video of the new Sega game — they didn't send us the cartridge so we can't tell you if the game is actually better than its predecessor — and it looks good. You can play with actual pro players (you can't on Madden, though on Madden, the players' numbers correspond to the stars. No. 22 for the Cowboys has remarkably similar ability to that of Emmitt Smith, for example).

You can trade players on the Sega game and pick up free agents (you can't on Madden). You can even create a dream team (OK, you know the drill by now).

All 1,500 of NFL '95's players perform according to their skill ratings in 13 categories. You can even control the receiver and create interesting head-to-head matchups where you control the receiver and your opponent controls the defensive back.

Also there are new field perspectives (again, not on Madden). When the ball is snapped, the QB can see 10 yards downfield, rising to 65 yards when he drops back to pass.

The new king of 16-bit football is Sega Sports NFL '95," says David Winding of Game Fan Magazine "blows away the competition."

NFL '95 costs about $65, nearly the same as the Madden. As for which game is better, well, stay tuned.

A new movie, a new album: 'Tis the season of Natalie Cole

Rockbeat

NEW YORK (AP) — She felt the darkness envelop her soul and try to claim her life as she tumbled into the abyss of alcohol and drug addiction. But Natalie Cole was rescued from self-destruction by the strongest weapons she had: Her belief in herself, and her belief in God.

"I look back on some of the events in my life and God just put his hands on my shoulders and said, 'We've got to get this one — she's just lost it. Get in there and pull her out.'"

"Between my hardheadedness and God's grace, he knows just what I'm capable of and he had something for me to do, and by golly he just wasn't going to allow me to take it away."

Cole's journey from despair, alcohol and cocaine abuse to understanding herself and meaning, fences with her family and friends was a difficult but joyful one. In the process, her professional, personal and spiritual lives have blossomed.

Now, once again, it's the season of Natalie Cole.

After the phenomenal success of her 1991 Grammy-winning "Unforgettable" album, in which she hit a sweet nostalgic note by singing her father's standards and performing a specially engineered duet with him, Cole's star is blazing.

She's making her debut in a feature movie, "Lily in Winter," a made-for-cable film airing Tuesday on the USA Network about a 1930s woman and the bond she shares with a young boy and the out-of-wedlock daughter she abandoned. She's also starring Monday on PBS' "Great Performances" with "Natalie Cole's Unforgettable Christmas," a concert of songs from her album, "Holly and Ivy."

Cole also appeared in the annual Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade and, on top of touring, concerts and speaking engagements, there's even been some talk of a biopic.

"Holly and Ivy" offers something for everyone — the bluesy "Merry Christmas, Baby," the gospel-spirited "Joy to the World," a frisky "Jingle Bells," the silky "A Christmas Song," Nat "King" Cole's signature hit, and other holiday confections.

"We really wanted to make it untraditional, but at the same time traditional," she said. "I love 'Jingle Bells.' I think that's probably the hottest version. It's really, really cool and it's fun and it reminds me of the old times. Stuff that my dad would do, or Duke Ellington or Pat Boone."

Growing up, Christmas was indeed old-timey in the Cole home. A towering tree was set in the atrium of their halfway and, on Christmas morning, little Natalie would peep through the bars of the banister to catch a glimpse of the goodies below.

"My parents would sit up the night before and not only wrap presents, but would unwrap some presents ... like that great big walking doll," she recalled with a special lightness to her voice.

"I don't remember any Christmases that my father wasn't there. If nothing else, he made sure he was home for Christmas. My mother would give wonderful, grand parties and we'd have a wonderful suckling pig with an apple in its mouth. It was a very Christmasy time in our home — quite a lovely experience."

She tries to re-create those moments for her family, even if they can't be home in California for the holidays. This Christmas, she plans to be home with her husband, producer-arranger-musician Andre Fischer, and their four children, ranging in age from 21 to 11.

Fischer, who comes from a celebrated musical family, met Cole in Japan in 1975 when he was a drummer for Rufus and Chaka Khan.

"My first attraction to her had nothing to do with music," he said. "I wanted to take her out on a date — not sit and listen to music."

"I know I have a good nucleus and I've been looking for that all my life. I found that with my wife. She's my friend. We knock heads, we love each other and we're stubborn. I'm very, very proud of her. ... I love her very much, and I think if my dad were here he'd think the same."

Fischer produced "Holly and Ivy" and was at the helm of other Cole albums, including "Unforgettable."

"She's the consummate professional," he said. "She's self-correcting, and for me as a producer that's very important. ... Arrangements, she basically leaves up to me. She gives me a couple of spots and I'm familiar with her style."

Natalie Cole sings with her father, Nat, in this undated photo. She is starring in a feature movie this winter titled "Lily in Winter." At right, Natalie today.

"Natalie has her own unique way of phrasing — it's a lot like her father's how she lays melody across music."

Cole said her part of the job was relatively easy because the arrangements were so great. "It's not easy getting these traditional Christmas songs to sound that much different," she said.

But, Fischer is quick to add, "The main thrust of songs and tones comes from Natalie. ... She always has an inclination for what she hears. It's instinct."

Her acting, too, is instinctual and natural.

"She's so bright and quick to comprehend the concepts underneath the work," said Nina Foch, a veteran actress who also teaches drama at the University of Southern California's film school. "She has a special, natural quality. She has such a strong line under her songs, and that really carries over into acting."

"I guess the thing for us artists to do is not limit ourselves," said Cole, whose previous credit was a small part in "I'll Fly Away," the acclaimed TV series. "That's what I learned from this whole experience: I can really do this — even though the hours are crappie and it was grueling ...

The first few days, I said, 'What have I gotten myself into?' But I must tell you, the hardest part was sitting around ... not the acting."

Delbert Mann, who won an Academy Award in 1955 for "Marty," directed "Lily in Winter." "I really feel genuinely about Natalie," Mann said. "There's not a false moment in her. She plays with a tremendous honesty."

That honesty comes across in her music — it's creamy, no-nonsense and without pretense. And her honesty shines when she talks to you; she has the gift of putting you at ease, of sharing personal truths: There's nothing to hide.

Her face is as open as her heart. Her eyes are an innocent brown and as warm as a roasted chestnut; her smile wraps itself around a playful thought.

Despite a lifetime of celebrity and fortune, Natalie Cole is just Natalie — up front, upbeat and ... real.

Over the years, she has told her story countless times: her drug abuse and recovery; a fractured relationship with her mother, since made the daunting task of being Nat "King" Cole's daughter and living up to his name and talent; her mother's racism toward dark-skinned blacks; growing up affluent and privileged; her fiery relationships.

"She hasn't been tainted from all the schmutz she's been through," her husband says.

So unaffected is Cole that her ego went into hiding when she first saw herself on screen.

"It was strange. I'm not a great fan of watching myself anyway," she said. "Usually, you're your own worst critic and you spend a lot of time squinting. I'm just kind of floating on the encouragement of others right now."

Still, there is a strong sense of self, though the process of believing in Natalie Cole was a slow one for the 47-year-old performer. First, she had to face her addiction problem, seeking help at Minnesota's Hazelden Foundation. Then, she had to reconcile her hostility over being in her father's shadow and to learn how to gracefully carry the Cole name.

"I saw that one of the biggest and one of the most extreme foundations I received was when 'Unforgettable' came out. There were steps leading up to it. I was in therapy. I was and still am a recovering alcoholic," she said.

"The danger is that people will want to make you a role model and it just can't be so. For some reason, I was just chosen to get this far; there's no particular thing about me to deserve to be where I am."

So Cole just puts her trust in God and tries not to plan too much.

"I am constantly smiling to myself saying, 'God what are you up to now?' When I got this part in 'Lily in Winter,' literally coming out of the blue, I said the first day of shooting, 'God, what are you planning for me now?'"

"I put my little costume on and I looked at myself in the mirror and I got hysterical and I laughed for about 15 minutes. ... If I had lusted and wanted this and planned it, it might not have happened. So my plan is to let God plan it."

But she keeps coming back to something she put on hold years ago: She abandoned her pre-med major at the University of Massachusetts so she could sing. Now, she's thinking of getting her master's degree.

"I could not be on the road, not do movies, would have to be totally dedicated to this," she mused. "I'm tempted. ... But it's scary. These days, when you're off the circuit for too long, people want to forget about you."

"Our little ego — we don't want to be forgotten."

European crews invade American Old West

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The setting is a vintage Hollywood Western: a rugged cowboy in a cobweb-covered saloon.

But a closer examination reveals some differences. The actors are German, doing a commercial for a cocktail mix.

It's not just movie and television Westerns that are being filmed these days at Arizona's Old West towns. German, Italian and even Japanese models, actors and film crews are flocking to the state to make commercials and do still photo shoots.

"The Europeans just love the Western — they love the Western look," said Sue Birmingham, who with her husband, Ed, owns ApacheLand Movie Ranch. The 85-acre location has its own stage town and is located east of Apache Junction at the base of the Superstition Mountains.

American companies also are taking advantage of the foreign fascination with the Wild West. A Marlboro cigarette ad uses Arizona as a backdrop for commercials geared to Spain and Hong Kong, while Kellogg's cereal used the state for a European commercial.

First built in 1939 for the William Holden-Jean Arthur movie "Arizona," Old Tucson, which also has been a theme park since 1959, has been used to film more than 200 feature films.

"We're seeing increased traffic from European firms," said Jay Cole, film production manager at Old Tucson.

"The reason they come here is they like the Old West look," said Cole, who suspects the current country Western music craze in England has probably heightened that popularity.

There have been 37 film and photo shoots at Old Tucson so far this year, including four feature movies and 16 industrial film for a European petrochemical conglomerate, he said. Eight of the projects were commercial photography shoots for German and Asian fashion and shoe catalogs.

Old Tucson, located 12 miles west of Tucson, has about 125 projects in 1994. About half of them major motion picture projects.

General Screenings said Arizona film production has increased to have 100 projects in the state.

German film production company, Old West, said it has been filming in Arizona for several years.

Yuma, Lake Powell, Page, Coconino County and the Navajo-Nation are among locations with offices.

"Often we don't know they're even here," Warren said.

Bob Bradshaw is replacing a Western set burned down about eight years ago on his 90-acre ranch in Sedona's breathtaking Red Rock country.

Bradshaw was involved in Arizona's movie and site-location business for a quarter-century before the advent of the state film offices.

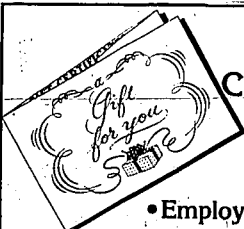

He said TV-commercial work such as a recent Spanish Marlboro ad made on his ranch keeps his operation busy.

"We're always having these models shoot out here — mostly clothing," he said.

A decision by 20th Century Fox to open a major animated film production facility in Phoenix will be a big boost to the industry.

"That's a permanent part of our production landscape now," said Warren. "It sends a very strong message to Los Angeles that Arizona is a production center."

Man dressed by wife doesn't prefer yellow

DEAR ABBY: I've been told that I look good in blue—every shade from pale blue to royal blue.

My wife thinks I should widen my horizons, and since she does most of the shopping, occasionally she will bring home colors that make me wince.

One time she bought me a yellow shirt with matching yellow pants, a yellow tie and — you guessed it — bright yellow socks!

Abby, I'm 6 foot 3 and heavy; if I dyed my shoes orange, I would have looked like Big Bird hopping down the street.

I think she knew she overdid it when she asked, "You do like it, don't you?"

All I could answer was, "Sweet." Keep in mind she is free to select whichever colors she wants to wear, and she can even choose the color we paint the house. But my question is: At age 45, should my taste prevail, or must I resign myself to having my "horizons widened" in this personal area?

TWEETIE IN BROOKSVILLE, FLA.
DEAR TWEETIE: Your wife's taste seems to be "for the birds."

You are old enough to make your own choices, so come the Fourth of July, declare your independence, and do your own shopping.

DEAR ABBY: My husband died three weeks ago of liver failure. We had been married for 18 years. We had only 40 years old. Our children and I are experiencing an immense amount of grief.

Abby, please advise your readers not to say, "Well, at least he's not in pain, or suffering anymore."

People do not realize how that can tear a grieving person apart. It may seem selfish, but I wish to God that I was still taking care of him and helping him through his pain and suffering. At least he would still be with us.

— SELFISH IN SEATTLE

Dear Abby
Abigail
VanBuren

DEAR SELFISH IN SEATTLE: Those who use that phrase are thinking only of the release from suffering of the person who has died — not the one(s) left behind to bear the pain of their own grief.

Perhaps the safest thing to say to someone who has lost a loved one is, "I'm sorry about your loss." Period.

DEAR ABBY: I went to a wedding shower last Sunday, and — are you ready for this? — a guest had brought her wedding album to the shower; as the bride-to-be, "Nancy," was opening her gifts, the entire groom's side of the family was occupied looking at the guest's pictures!

I understand the young woman who brought the album wanted everyone to see her wedding pictures, but don't you think this was the wrong time and place? At least she could have waited until the bride-to-be finished opening her gifts.

My heart really went out to Nancy. This was supposed to be her day, and the look on her face when she saw what was going on in the back of the room was heart-breaking. Abby: where are people's manners? I know that several of the guests read your column, and I hope when they read this, they will realize how rude they were.

— A CARRY FRIEND, CHERRY HILL, N.J.

DEAR FRIEND: The people who were looking at the album during the wedding shower were rude. And the guest who brought it to the shower showed incredibly poor judgment.

'Lion King' trailers give sneak peek at 'Pocahontas'

Knight-Ridder News Service

If you've taken the kids for another visit to "The Lion King" since its Thanksgiving re-release, you may already be fielding the question "When's 'Pocahontas' coming out?" Disney has tackled on a four-minute trailer for "Pocahontas," next summer's animated blockbuster, to the re-release of "The Lion King."

The "Pocahontas" trailer lays out the story's premise: explorer John Smith falls in love with the beautiful Native American princess, then shows a full-length musical number.

The animation looks wonderful — though not quite the match of "The Lion King."

Judging from the trailer (and rumors that they've kept the original story's tragic ending, in which the princess dies), "Pocahontas" will be Disney's most "adult" cartoon yet.

The "event trailer" strategy worked for "The Lion King." Last year, Disney stuck the entire "Circle of Life" number onto prints of "Sister Act II: Back in the Habit," its Christmas release.

And just in case you miss the point, the trailer for "Pocahontas" loudly announces the movie's June 23, 1995, release date. Twice.

'Dumb and Dumber' — 'Nuff said

By Stephen Whitty
Knight-Ridder News Service

Jerry Lewis has a lot to answer for. Sure, he's a humanitarian. After all, he raised all that money for charity. Occasionally he even kept Dean Martin from singing. We'll give him that.

But did he have to go and inspire another generation of comedians to be just like him?

Martin Short makes faces on every talk show he invades. Eddie Murphy is remaking "The Nutty Professor."

And Jim Carrey is making a fortune. "Dumb and Dumber" is Carrey's latest assault, and it's as bad as only faux cinema de Jerry could be. Carrey, who has quickly made a major career out of this, gets the Lewis part (you can tell because he has chipped back teeth, a howl haircut and clothes that don't fit). Jeff Daniels, who used to have a career, gets the thankless part — the chinless, straw-haired best friend.

Together, they get the sort of jokes you'd usually only see in "I'm Not a Sex Addict."

There are jokes, for example,

Carrey

about runny noses. Laxatives. Food fights. There are eight gags about frozen muzzles and frost-bitten tongues. There are even three separate routines about wetting yourself, which may be a record, or a good thesis topic if Carrey is ever hailed as a genius in France. "Urine Trouble Now — Liquid Lettiments in the Cinema of Jim Carrey."

Oh sure, "Dumb and Dumber" has some sort of plot about funny assassins, a damsel-in-distress and a cross-country chase. But chiefly it's a string of jokes aimed at 6-year-olds. And maybe it's an excuse for the camera to move in and Carrey to overact in extreme, close-ups, exploding every line with head-shaking, eye-popping stink.

That's what Lewis used to do, too, of course, but at least he occasionally had director Frank Tashlin, who knew how to sell a sight gag. All Carrey has along for this ride across America is his ego. And while that's big enough to let him ride in the commuter lane, it doesn't help the picture. Neither do any of the other passengers. Carrey, or desperately, Daniels does all the slapstick required (and more) and Lauren Holly pretends to find him amusing. Charles Rocket, briefly famous for being fired from "Saturday Night Live" for cursing on air, shows up as a villain. Teri Garr, briefly famous for nothing, shows up for no reason at all, looking wrinkled and bosomy and badly dressed. (It's the Sally Kirkland role.)

Movie review

They all scream at the top of their lungs. Some of them — well, just Carrey, actually — even got paid a lot to do so. But hardly any of the movie works — the characters are such rude cartoons that, when Carrey suddenly, seriously talks about finding someone to love, it looks like an outtake from another film. About the only things this movie has going for it are two or three mild puns and a few intentionally awful songs on the soundtrack.

Well, one other thing, perhaps. After all, every bad Jerry Lewis movie Jim Carrey makes is one that Jerry Lewis doesn't have to. (Twin Cinema, Burley Theater)

'Speechless' ripped from today's headlines

Los Angeles Times

Movies playing in the Magic Valley this weekend. Reviews are by the Los Angeles Times and ratings by the Motion Picture Association of America:

"Speechless" (PG-13). Michael Keaton and Geena Davis star in a romantic comedy as speech-writers who work for opposing political candidates. Also starring Christopher Reeve, Bonnie Bedelia and Emie Hudson. Directed by Ron Underwood. (Twin Cinema, Jerome Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley)

"Disclosure" (R). Adapted from Michael Crichton's tantalizing contemporary novel about sexual harassment in the workplace, this unexceptional potboiler offers few surprises, not in Barry Levinson's direction nor in the acting of Demi Moore and Michael Douglas as predatory female boss and vulnerable male employee. The special effects are exciting, but the film forgets to clear up key plot points that the novel crisply disposes of. (Mall Cinema, Jerome Cinema)

"Drop Zone" (R). The sky-jumping stunts are the only reason to check out this techno-action starring Wesley Snipes as a lawman in aerial pursuit of a gang of fliers led by Gary Bussey. But where are the flying Elvis? (Twin Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley)

"Interview with the Vampire" (R). A devil's bargain was made when Tom Cruise and Brad Pitt were cast in this atmospheric version of Anne Rice's sweepingly popular book. Director Neil Jordan ("The Crying Game") and his team have done a gorgeous job with the visuals and the mood, but that miscasting has resulted in a fatal anemia where emotion is concerned. (Twin Cinema, Liberty Theater of Hailey)

"Junior" (PG-13). The prototypical-American studio comedy, as slickly commercial as the audience-pleasing director Ivan Reitman can make it. Arnold Schwarzenegger stars as a man who becomes pregnant. Danny DeVito and Emma Thompson are suitably impressed, but the film, unable to work up a comic head of steam, never manages to be more than lightly amusing. (Twin Cinema, Jerome Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley)

"The Lion King" (G). The side-kicks steal the show in this animated extravaganza from Disney. A worthy successor to "Beauty and the Beast" and "Aladdin," but without as much magic. (Century Cinema of Burley)

"Little Giants" (PG). A big deal: a warm comedy for all ages about two very different brothers (Rick Moranis, Ed O'Neill) who assemble equally different kinds of teams in a competition to determine which one will represent their small Ohio town in the Pop Warner junior league. With Shawna Waldron. (Shoshone Showhouse)

"Miracle on 34th Street" (PG). John Hughes, the force behind this remake of the much beloved Christmas fixture, has done a fine job in casting Richard Attenborough as the old gen who says he's the real Santa and Mara Wilson as the little girl who begs to differ. But Hughes, who co-wrote the new script, has tampered with the original's innocence in ways that prove irritating. (Twin Cinema)

"The Pagemaster" (G). Mixture of live-action and animation starring Macaulay Culkin as a scared boy who gets swept in bookish adventures at the library. Its aim seems to be to get kiddies to read. Wily in places, but lacks verve. (Jerome Cinema)

"The Professional" (R). Luc ("Le Femme Nikita") Besson's American debut about a weebegone hit man, played by Jean Reno, who pairs up with a 12-year-old mopper whose family has been offed by drug lords. It's a vile little exercise in amoral mayhem. (Ace Theatre of Wendell)

"The Santa Clause" (PG). "Home Improvement's" Tim Allen makes a socko big-screen debut as a sarcastic workaholic toy company marketing exec who, much to his surprise — and his disenchanted small son's delight — becomes Santa Claus. Smart, sharp holiday fantasy for the '90s, with an engaging story and amazing special effects and production design. With Eric Lloyd, Wendy Crewson and Judge Reinhold. (Twin Cinema, Jerome Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley)

"Star Trek: Generations" (PG). Going boldly where no one has gone before is not what it used to be. This seventh intergalactic adventure is the first to feature both Starship Enterprise captains (William Shatner and Patrick Stewart) as well as the first to give most of its time to the crew of TV's "Star Trek: The Next Generation." But it aspires to do no more than fit snugly into the patterns of the past and will be of primary interest to the already converted. (Twin Cinema, Jerome Cinema, Gooding Cinema)

"The Swan Princess" (G). Determinedly old-fashioned in its visual design, Richard Rich's animated musical retelling of the German fairy tale about a princess turned into a swan nevertheless has its charm. Featuring the voices of Jack Palance, Howard McGillin, Michelle Nicastro, Sandy Duncan, John Cleese and Steven Wright. (Liberty Theater of Hailey, Ace Theatre of Wendell)

"Trapped in Paradise" (PG-13). Not even the considerable presence of Nicolas Cage, Jon Lovitz and Dana Carvey as three larcenous brothers stuck in an idyllic village on Christmas Eve can save this unfunny, rambling, overlong stab at Capra-corn. (Twin Cinema)

Rock of ages: Velour and vinyl return with a vengeance

"Just like before, it's yesterday, once more."

— The Carpenters

Knight-Ridder News Service

PHILADELPHIA — There's no pleasant way of putting this. So brace yourself. The '70s — the years that gave us cascading hot-roller curls, sideburns that spread like poison suns, and (do we have to) remember? boogie, oogie, disco — are back.

They're trendy. Hot. And cool. Maybe for the first time ever.

Remember that big yellow have-a-nice-day happy face? Back.

John Travolta as box-office babe? Uh-huh.

And what about those '70s television high points: "The Brady Bunch," "Charlie's Angels" and "Cliffhanger"?

On cable.

It's all back in a big way. Along with bell-bottoms, chokers, and — John Denver, are you listening? — chukka boots.

One of this year's most talked-about young filmmakers, Quentin Tarantino (director of "Pulp Fiction"), says his movies are steeped in the music and images of the 1970s.

Alternative rock bands that guard their avant-garde reputations the way Farrah Fawcett guarded her hair spray have recorded "If I Were a Carpenter," an entire album of songs originally performed by the Carpenters.

The grunge-generation groups have actually gone public saying their musical souls were significantly influenced by the Carpenters' strawberry syrup music.

Last summer, Philadelphia radio station WMGK-FM switched its musical format to all-'70s all day.

And, nightclubs have followed a trend that began in California and New York, offering 1970s disco nights. One local club has even opened a 1970s nostalgia lounge.

"There is still a little bit of misguided romanticism about the era," said Thomas Surrency, a history professor at the University of Pennsylvania who grew up in the 1970s.

"The main aspect of the 1970s that is desirable now is that it was the pre-AIDS era, the era when the sexual revolution, which started in the 1960s, came home."

Jive talkin': The Bee Gees were a '70s icon, influencing hoards of young hipsters with their tight pants and smooth moves. Fads, fashions and funk from the '70s is surfacing frequently in today's movies and music.

But 29-year-old John Hopkins of Philadelphia sees the trend more simply. "As we move toward the insecurity of the year 2000, we want comfort," he said. "We want peanut butter and 'Starsky and Hutch.'"

"In 1976, during a serious budget crisis in New Jersey, Assemblyman John Ewing postponed debate to give his colleagues a recap of what had happened on the television mini-series 'Rich Man, Poor Man,' which they had all missed because of the legislative session."

Most over-30 types agree that the '70s were a decade that wasn't even attractive when it was happening. But for some unexplainable reason, twentysomethings think the '70s are "bitchin'," "far out" and "dy-no-mite."

"In the '80s it was the '60s. Now it's the '70s," said David Grey of Northeast Philadelphia, who is 24. That means, of course, that he was "born" in 1970.

"It was big hair and big shoes. Ohmygod, it was bad dancing. Not a good time. You know, I don't know why it's being revived," added his friend, Kim Rapp, also 24.

They made their observations while attending the grand opening of the Leisure Suit Lounge, the third-floor 1970s-themed bar at The Bank dance club at Sixth and Spring Garden.

The rest of the club is edge-of-the-century-laser-light-show-postmodern-plat. So it's probably club owner Stephen Starr's private joke that the 1970s lounge is, literally, inside what used to be a vault.

In the lounge, a visitor faces a full frontal attack of retro pop culture. The floor is covered with furry shag carpeting — brown and burnt orange. There are beanbag chairs — green and yellow polka dots — plopped here and there.

And the walls. They're plastered with a collage of the once-hip. Pages from old People magazines show the Bee Gees in their tight disco pants. Billy Joel with studs of thick hair. Steve Martin being a wild-and-crazy guy, and a young J.D. Simpson sporting an Afro. The dance floor is painted like a giant Twister game board. (Right foot green! Left arm red!) And the jukebox is filled with songs like "Having My Baby" by Paul Anka, "Show Me the Way" by Peter Frampton, and "Fernando" by ABBA.

There is a giant photo of the Brady Bunch, a shrine to Farrah Fawcett and another to David Cassidy. There is a small reproduction of the rear end of the Partridge Family bus sticking out over a doorway, and album covers — Donny and Marie, Fleetwood Mac, Elton John, America — nailed to the wall.

"These were my mother's," said a young woman, pointing to her chunky wooden platform shoes. She gave her name as simply Iota ("like Cher").

"I was coming-up-the stairs and my boyfriend was way ahead of me," said Natalie, 21, wearing a "furniture" on my feet.

The rest of the 23-year-old's costume was a pair of black brushed-denim bell-bottoms, a shiny polyester blouse with wide lapels, and a fitted black blazer. Her straight long hair was pulled back, young Jane Pauley style, with barrettes.

"I'm dressed as the cool girl who went out with Jimmy," the guy with the Trans-Am, she said.

"Edith, stifle yourself!" Archie Bunker "Jane, you ignorant slut."

"Saturday Night Live."

The '70s weren't exactly years of deep thinking.

Not like the 1960s, which have practically been granted sainthood in Americans' collective social memory.

The '60s had protests and Jimi Hendrix and social upheaval.

The '70s gave us Billy Carter and mood rings and "The Gong Show."

But the '70s did have one thing the '60s didn't. A clear conscience.

"The motto was if it feels good, do it," said Kenneth Richardson, a psychology professor at Ursinus College.

10. He was an architect.

"They don't know where the future is going, so I think they are trying to get back to the ignorance of the past."

Could be.

But young people wallowing in the camp and tackiness of the '70s say it's actually just for fun.

"I'm sure it's going to be a fleeting fad," said Alicia Jacobson, 22, who was listening to "The Bump" at the Leisure Suit Lounge.

"Yeah," agreed her friend, 25-year-old "Traid" Thomas. "I guess next will come the '80s."

They grinned in unison.

"God, what does anyone want to remember from the '80s?" Jacobson wondered aloud.

"Valley girls."

'Blown Away,' 'I Love Trouble' reach local video stores

The Times-News

New videos in Twin Falls stores this week:

"Blown Away" (R). Stephen Hopkins' mostly passable thriller isn't quite as one-dimensional as its title implies. As the picture begins, imprisoned IRA soldier Gaerity (Tommy Lee Jones) murders his cellmate, retrieves part of a bomb he'd hidden in the man's guts, blows a hole in the wall of his cell and vanishes into the darkness. The film then turns to Boston, where a bomb squad is led by nonchalant daredevil Dove (Jeff Bridges), who appears to be a little too much in love with the life-and-death nature of his job.

Just as Dove is on the verge of retiring, someone starts planting bombs all over the city. Under normal circumstances, Dove could turn the job over to Franklin (Forest Whitaker), but Dove has an uneasy feeling that someone is trying to kill off members of the bomb squad — someone very brilliant and very, very sick. That someone is Gaerity, and his return both sinks the film and saves it.

Jones plays this eccentric killer with such maniacal verve that believability becomes a minor matter. Coming off his picture-stealing performance in "The Fugitive," Jones gives another one here, and while the drawled precision of his work in that earlier film was a lesson in restraint, his acting here is gloriously hammy and theatrical. Like lethal Rube Goldberg creations, his bombs aren't merely meant to explode; they're macabre jokes, designed with killer punch lines (Washington Post) (Video West, Blockbuster).

"I Love Trouble" (PG). Funny how some movies just look better on a TV screen. "I Love Trouble" is an example. It's a small movie with little power, full of predictable plot turns. Perfect movie-of-the-week fare starring Julia Roberts and Nick Nolte.

It's an inoffensive, cute romantic comedy-adventure. Its heart is in the right place and it tries awfully hard, but miscasting and an incredible leap from reality prevent it from securing a place among such inspired past pairings as Irene Dunne and Cary Grant; Grant and Rosalind Russell; Katharine Hepburn and Spencer Tracy or Claudette Colbert and Clark Gable.

Nolte and Roberts are out of their league — especially Roberts, who is too much of a lightweight to engage in the type of sporty repartee and cerebral mindgames that Dunne and crew could handle in their sleep. The raspy Nolte does a lot better and probably could pull it off with, say, an Ellen Barkin or a Glenn Close.

Nolte and Roberts play reporters from competing Chicago newspapers. Peter Brackett (Nolte) is a successful columnist who's just published his first book. Sabrina Peterson (Roberts) is just beginning to cover serious breaking news stories after being on the style beat.

Their rival stories and constant attempts to out-scoop one another make the first half of the movie fast and fun. Then, the filmmakers take a tumble. The two rivals (Sabrina's now a big star) decide to pool their information and work on the story together, as they run all over the place stumbling over dead bodies and dodging killers with nary a word from any managing editor.

The danger element is dumb enough but, on the business side, reporters who sell out a story to a rival publication probably would be suspended without pay or fired on the spot. (Associated Press) (Blockbuster, Video West)

"Baby's Day Out" (PG). John Hughes' ("Home Alone," "Sixteen Candles," "Miracle on 34th Street") has an extremely narrow view of America. To Hughes, the only people who exist in this country are white, Christian and privileged, and there's no room for anyone else.

Even in his current remake of "Miracle on 34th Street," Hughes shows only white youngsters visiting Santa Claus at a Manhattan department store — no blacks, Asians, Hispanics or Indians.

He populates his pictures with rude, violent and sadistic children and adults who romp about in a cartoonish fashion all for laughs. In "Baby's Day Out," a man's groin is set on fire and Hughes thinks it's funny.

In the movie, the infant son of a young, self-involved wealthy couple (all Hughes families are upper class) is kidnapped by a trio of lower-class fools (all of Hughes' villains are lower-class fools).

There are no real laughs here, just silly sight gags at the expense of a baby. The twins playing Baby Blank, Adam and Jacob Worton, are adorable and definitely steal this worthless movie. But that's not enough to recommend it.

Drop your rental money on something else. (Associated Press) (Video West, Blockbuster)

"Relentless 4" (R). A serial killer on the loose. (Associated Press) (Video West, Blockbuster)

"Ernest Goes to School" (PG). More Jim Varney. (Associated Press) (Blockbuster, Video West)

"The Wedding Gift" (PG-13). Dying woman wants to find a new wife for her husband. A comedy. (Associated Press) (Video West, Blockbuster)

"A Place for Annie" (PG). Sissy Spacek stars in drama about mother and daughter. (Associated Press) (Blockbuster, Video West)

"Direct Hit" (R). Drama about hit man starring William Forsythe. (Associated Press) (Video West, Blockbuster)

The type of box-board that's used for detergent and cereal boxes is often made from recycled newspapers. It's just one of the many products that was created out of the 5 million tons of U.S. newsprint that was recycled last year. More than a third of all newsprint was collected and turned into useful products again.

IN A PREVIOUS LIFE, IT WAS THE SUNDAY PAPER.

So do your part. After you read this ad, recycle this newspaper. Who knows? It might come back to you in its next life.

Read. Then Recycle.

102 CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to the many people who were so kind to think of us with phone calls, cards, flowers, gifts of food, donations, & prayer following the loss of our father & grandfather, Fritz Bybee. We have been overwhelmed by the support and acts of kindness that we have received this past week. This was truly a comfort in our time of sorrow.
