Abortions snag Clinton nominee

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — Henry Foster Jr., President Clinton's choice for surgeon general, revealed Friday he had performed fewer than a dozen abortions during nearly 30 years as an obstetrician-gynecologist. The abortions "were primarily to save the lives of the women or because the women had been the victim of rape or incest," Foster said in a statement. He said he also personally had delivered "more than 10,000 babies." The revelation seemed certain to pose obstacles to confirmation for the 61-year-old medical educator. Foster served last year as acting president of traditionally black Meharry Medical College in Nashville, Tenn., where he also had been a vice president and dean. Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., who chairs the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, "is extremely disappointed in the way the White House has handled this nomination," said spokesman Mike Horak. That committee holds confirmation hearings on surgeon general nominees. Kassebaum was informed privately at a White House welfare summit last Saturday that Foster was under consideration, and she asked if he had performed abortions. She was told Monday that "he had performed one therapeutic abortion and now she hears today that many more had been performed, some ostensibly not therapeutic," Horak said. Rep. Robert K. Dornan, R-Calif., said on the House floor, "This is a male version of Joyceelyn Elders and worse. She was a doctor, but she never said she performed abortions." But Rep. Nita Lowey, D-N.Y., said in a statement, "The idea that performing a legal medical procedure could even possibly disqualify Dr. Foster ... is an absolute outrage." Echoing a phrase that Clinton himself often invokes, Foster said, "If abortion is provided, my wish is that it be safe, legal and rare." The nomination of Foster to replace Joyceelyn Elders has drawn support from organized medicine and criticism from conservatives and anti-abortion groups. White House press secretary Mike McCurry said officials who conducted background interviews were aware he had performed a limited number of abortions.

Blast probe steers away from gas

By Liz Wright Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — New evidence suggests a flammable liquid might have been involved in an explosion Tuesday which flattened a house and seriously burned its renter, fire officials said Friday. State Fire Marshal Donald Bailey is investigating the explosion at 232 Ash Street. Investigators there discovered a blackened, 5-foot-wide semi-circular burn pattern on the concrete floor of Wilson's bedroom, said Phillip Clough, commander of the Twin Falls Fire Department. "The indicators point away from the idea that it was a natural-gas explosion," Clough said. The pattern suggests a flammable liquid of some kind, but that's not enough to explain how the entire house blew up Tuesday afternoon, Clough said. "That's what makes it so bizarre," Clough said.

The explosion leveled the one-story home and blew bits of the walls and roof into trees and nearby homes. One neighbor, said he heard a loud boom and saw flames shoot up to 170 feet into the air. The renter, David Wilson, was found lying outside the rubble, covered by a blanket given to him by neighbors. Clough said investigators have not yet been able to interview Wilson, who was in critical condition Friday at the University of Utah Burn Center. Wilson's bed was found near the blackened pattern on the floor, its mattress springs collapsed from the intense heat of the explosion, Clough said. The state fire marshal started investigating Wednesday and will continue next week, Clough said.

Wendell students meet civil rights activist Rosa Parks via computer link

By Terrell Williams Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — Until he visited last week with Rosa Parks, fifth-grade student David Wright hadn't given the civil rights movement much thought. "I heard of her in the third grade in social studies class," he recalled. "I heard she was on a bus and some white man wanted her out of her seat. I just thought, it was a long time ago. Who cares about it now?" Wendell school media specialist Pam Crawford said nine students from teacher Daniel Kuka's class sat in on the live, two-way interview with Parks, broadcast by computer through the national America Online Inc. computer service.

'She was a brave lady. I would have given up my seat.'

— David Wright, Wendell fifth-grader

"I cannot express the excitement the kids had," Crawford said. "We were talking with someone that was instrumental in changing the history of the United States." In the hour-long session, Parks received typed questions from classrooms throughout the country and sent her own typed answers back. A class in Chicago asked if her actions on that December day in Alabama in 1955 were planned. Surely she must have been weary those days, they said. "That particular day that I decided was not the first time I had trouble with that particular driver," Parks replied. "He evicted me before, because I would not go around to the back door after I was already on the bus."

When more people got on the bus, the seats were filled with one white man left standing. Contrary to standard accounts of the story, Parks said it was the bus driver, not the man standing, that demanded she give up her seat. When she refused, the driver called the police, who arrived in just Please see ROSA/A2

Guth leaves controversy, heads north

The Associated Press

SALMON — With Idaho's salmon traps played out and its wildlife managers under siege, Norm Guth is leaving for a sportsman's paradise in Alaska. The 56-year-old Salmon-area outfitter and Idaho Fish and Game Commission member says bureaucratic intrusion is making it increasingly difficult to make a living in the Idaho backcountry. "Regulation in Idaho controls everything so we can't grow or expand." So Guth and his two sons have purchased 160 acres near Lake Iliamna, about 50 miles from Anchorage. His first glimpse of nearby Cook Inlet delighted him after years of watching Idaho's migratory fish runs decline. "We didn't see thousands of salmon, we saw millions of salmon," Guth said. The Guths will offer fishing on four streams choked with migrating salmon. When those adult spawners die their remains are eaten by zooplankton that in turn feed monster trout. That kind of opportunity is all too rare in Idaho, despite efforts by a Fish and Game Commission created in 1938 to keep political meddling out of wildlife issues. But the last days of Guth's 12 years on the panel have been spent defending its charter from often-bitter partisan challenges.

"Our responsibility is to protect, perpetuate and preserve the fish and wildlife resources of the state," he said. "It doesn't mean protecting logging, mining or other activities." His last commission meeting is in early March. Please see GUTH/A2

When he moves north, Guth will leave behind an outfitting tradition started by his father along the Middle Fork of the Salmon River in 1942. He took up the float trip and fishing business in 1953, and it was his rafts that carried President Jimmy Carter down the wild river in 1978. Guth was appointed to the Fish and Game Commission by Gov. John Evans, then reappointed by Gov. Cecil Andrus. His district used to extend from the Nevada border to Salmon. And even when it was divided and the southern portion given to a new commissioner, Guth still was responsible for the sprawling county of Lemhi and Custer counties in central Idaho. But wrangling over his remote lodge in the Frank Church-River of No Return Wilderness has been a far larger frustration. Environmentalists challenged a Forest Service decision to grant Guth a lease he exchanged for some mining claims to build the lodge. He said it was impossible to house clients in tents during the cold months they fish for steelhead on the main Salmon River. The dispute continues, and the years of conflict have taken their toll. "I had an immune system disease about five years ago," Guth said. "The stress of Please see GUTH/A2

Quake traps 2 Wyoming miners

GREEN RIVER, Wyo. (AP) — Mine rescue teams were searching 1,600 feet underground Friday night for two trona miners who were missing after an earthquake in southwestern Wyoming that sent nine other miners to a Rock Springs hospital.

Two 8-member teams were inside the Solvay Minerals' trona mine about 22 miles west of Rock Springs looking for the miners reported missing after the earthquake measured at 5.4 shook Sweetwater County on Friday morning.

The teams searching the mine on foot were forced to move slowly as they checked the safety of the mine each step of the way. By 6:30 p.m., mine officials predicted it would be late Friday night before the missing miners would be found.

The miners, two of 55 in the mine when the earthquake occurred at 8:26 a.m. Friday, were reported missing only after mine officials were able to bring the rest of the miners to the surface, said Rick Casey, Solvay's vice president of operations.

"Everyone was saying 'Yeah, we think we are all here,'" he said. "It took about three hours. There was about a mile and one-half or two to walk. When you get to the gathering point, you want to sit and wait until you declare somebody is missing."

Two rescue teams from Solvay entered the mine at about 3 p.m. Friday. The teams were prevented from entering the mines for several hours because of dust and high levels of deadly methane gas. Casey said the ventilation system that usually keeps the mine's air clear of methane was damaged by the earthquake.

The names of the miners were withheld at the request of their relatives, but Casey said both were relatively new employees from the Rock Springs-Green River area.

The miners who left the mine did so on foot because of fears that vehicles operated in the mine could ignite the methane. "Fifty-three came out and the ones that came out were pretty scared," said Al Harris, public information officer for the Sweetwater County Emergency Management Agency. "They were described as being pretty shook."

Casey said the nine miners sent to Sweetwater County Memorial Hospital suffered only minor injuries when they were hit by falling debris during the earthquake. A hospital spokesman said most of the workers had been released by 3:30 p.m.

Trona is the raw material used to make soda ash, a primary element in the manufacture of items including baking soda and glass. Wyoming is the world's leading producer of the substance.

The last major earthquake in Wyoming occurred about a year ago in the Star Valley near the Idaho border. That tremor was measured at 5.9.

Jobless

Continued from A1 thousands of job opportunities. Combined with a static labor force, that pushed the jobless rate back below the national level for the first time in two months.

But analysts said the January figures could change later this month once statistical revisions are made to unemployment figures for the past several years. Those revisions also precluded the calculation of regional unemployment rates.

Nationally, the jobless rate rose three tenths of a point to 5.7 percent as the economy produced fewer jobs than in any of the previous 11 months. Payrolls increased by just 134,000, the smallest rise since 101,000 jobs were created in January 1994. The decline in the state jobless rate was the largest since the rate dropped a full point from 7.7 percent in December 1987 to 6.7 percent in January 1988, and it returned Idaho's rate below the national, where it had been for 33 months before the escalations in November and December.

There were no figures available for the Magic Valley from the Department of Employment. It was the first really good news for Republican Gov. Phil Batt, whose first five weeks in office have been plagued by controversy over the Fish and Game Commission and nuclear waste storage at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

Total employment hit its highest level since May at nearly 565,000 as 6,000 fewer Idahoans were off the job than in December. The improvement in the job picture pushed the rate below 6 percent, where it had been since the fall of 1993. Despite the year-end spiral, the average unemployment rate for 1994 was just over 5.1 percent.

Rosa

What did you think about in jail, came the question from a member of a class in Pelham, N. Y.

Parks, now 82, replied: "I was thinking mostly about how inconvenient it was, stopping me from going home and doing my work, something I had not expected. ... I felt more annoyed than frightened."

David said the direct communication with this historical woman gave him a new interest in civil rights.

"I remember more from that than when I write something on my hand," he said. "She was a brave lady. I would have given up my seat."

Classmate Lydia Strunk said support for Parks led to a peaceful boycott of the bus company that lasted a year and led to the Supreme Court ruling that segregation on public buses was illegal. "Now blacks are able to sit in the front of the bus or wherever they want to," Lydia said.

Thanks to funding from a recent bond issue, the Wendell Elementary School has just opened a new library, made from 2½ half former classrooms.

Crawford said the library's new computer equipment includes a telephone modem, software and the America Online computer service. Here, she said, students are learning to retrieve and process an endless wealth of information. "You can reach out," she said, "and grab the world and make it a little less huge and a little more personal."

The Times-News regrets the error.

Guth

Continued from A1 the appeal may have triggered it."

Guth said he will file no sales tax in Alaska, and his bill for licenses and permits will drop from upwards of $30,000 to about $300.

He also will be away from complaints about the Fish and Game Commission, even though Guth praised new Republican Gov. Phil Batt's decision to back away from a mid-January call for all six commissioners to submit resignations.

Batt had said he wanted to have the option of replacing the commissioners over complaints that they were running a renegade state agency out of touch with Idaho sportsmen. But he later apologized and started an effort to build a better working relationship with the Department of Fish and Game.

"In my book, it took a real big man to do what he did," Guth said. "He has my respect and gratitude for what he did there. When I was just appointed, I had the same people land on me."

He said every year some legislators and others push for the ouster of the commissioners and Fish and Game Director Jerry Conroy over allegations that they cater to non-residents and exotic wildlife.

Guth said he would refuse to fire Conroy, and that Fish and Game's efforts to boost hunting and fishing opportunities are by and large a success story.

"With the exception of pheasants, everything is at the top of the continent," he said.

Modern farming practices have been primarily to blame for the popular game bird's dwindling population. Farmers are installing sprinklers and removing cover along fence rows.

"You can't raise them on a pool table," Guth said. But while he will be well rid of the controversy, Guth said he will miss the chance being a commissioner gave him to share his love of wildlife.

"One of the most enjoyable things was working with the caliber of people in Fish and Game," he said. "We never had any serious personalities."

Nicole's sister breaks down while detailing abuse

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nicole Brown Simpson's sister broke into sobs on the witness stand Friday as she told of how O.J. Simpson humiliated his wife in public and once hurled her against a wall and threw her out of the house.

Denise Brown, who has stated publicly she believes Simpson killed her sister, detailed a series of incidents for the jury at his murder trial — including one in which the former football star grabbed his wife's crotch at a crowded bar and declared, "This is mine."

As she related another incident — the blowup of his mansion — she began to sob, and the prosecutor asked that court be adjourned 10 minutes early.

"It's just so hard," Brown said, sniffing and wiping her eyes with a tissue. The jurors were excused for the weekend, with Ms. Brown's powerful account the last testimony they will hear until Monday.

The defense objected repeatedly to Brown's injecting her opinions with such remarks as "the loved the attorney" and "he has a big ego." The jurors were told to disregard such comments.

During a break in questioning, Simpson looked across the room at Brown and shook his head with a disgusted look. He appeared to try to catch her eye several times, but she stared straight ahead.

Prosecutor Christopher Darden tried to start his narrative of the Simpsons' relationship with accounts of abuse dating to 1977, but the defense objected, and the judge barred the prosecution from going further back than 1985.

Brown recounted an incident she said occurred in the late 1980s during an outing at a restaurant bar with Simpson, his wife and friends. The restaurant was crowded, and Simpson was instantly recognized and treated to drinks by admirers.

"We were all drinking and goofing around and being loud and dancing," Brown said. "At one point, O.J. grabbed Nicole's crotch and said, 'This is where babies come from and this belongs to me.'"

She said Ms. Simpson seemed used to such treatment. "I thought it was humiliating," Brown said.

Another time, she said, she and her boyfriend dined with the Simpsons at a Mexican restaurant and ended up at Simpson's estate, where they were drinking and dancing.

"I told him he took Nicole for granted, and he blew up," Brown said. "He started yelling — 'Me? I don't take her for granted. I do everything

O.J.'s son pleads no contest to charge

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — O.J. Simpson's oldest son pleaded no contest Friday to driving with a suspended license and misdemeanor hit-and-run.

Jason Simpson, 24, was placed on three years informal probation and fined $700.

"He basically got what everyone else gets" for the same offense, said Deputy District Attorney Shari Silverman.

No one was hurt on Oct. 5, when a Jeep Simpson was driving rear-ended a pickup truck. A witness followed the vehicle and got the license number.

Simpson could be sent to jail if he is caught driving without a license while on probation, Silverman said.

for her. I give her everything." "And then a whole fight broke out. And pictures started flying off the walls. Clothes started flying. He ran upstairs, got clothes — started flying down the stairs, and grabbed Nicole, told her to get out of his house, wanted us all out of his house, picked her up, threw her against a wall in Brown said.

At that point, Brown choked out the rest of her description through tears: Simpson "picked her up, threw her out of the house, she ended up on her — she ended up falling, she ended up on her elbows and on her butt. ... We were all sitting there screaming and crying and he grabbed me and threw me out of the house."

Brown took the stand after two of Ms. Simpson's former next-door neighbors said that the Simpsons quarreled about sex and that he once parked around the corner from her house late at night and stood outside, seemingly trying to peer in.

Prosecutors offered the testimony in an effort to depict Simpson as a jealous, obsessed man who stalked his wife after she had moved out in 1992.

Carl Colby, a former neighbor of Ms. Simpson's, testified that he called 911 in April 1992 after seeing a man standing, then pacing, outside Ms. Simpson's house around 10:30 or 11 one night.

"I didn't recognize him. I said to myself, 'what is a man of this description doing outside at this time?'" Colby said.

But moments after he called police, he got a closer look and realized it was Simpson, who frequently visited his children at his wife's house.

He was embarrassed that I'd called 911 because I didn't feel Mr. Simpson was a threat to me or anyone else in the neighborhood," Colby said.

Colby said that Simpson "seemed to be hesitant and to be attempting to perhaps observe something that may have been occurring inside the house." But he said Simpson never stepped onto the property.

Colby's wife, Catherine Boe, who preceded him to the stand, Simpson had parked around the corner instead of at the curb or in Ms. Simpson's wide driveway.

In cross-examining the couple, defense attorney Robert Shapiro offered an innocent explanation for Simpson's presence, suggesting the former football star might have a meeting arranged with his estranged wife.

And Shapiro suggested that Simpson parked around the corner rather than leave the car under a tree that could drop sticky debris if.

Both witnesses said they did not know whether Ms. Simpson was home that evening.

Ms. Boe said she learned about trouble in the Simpsons' relationship from her visits with the couple and by overhearing them arguing from her kitchen door. The fights, she said, were over the couple's supposed infidelities.

Once, Simpson came to her kitchen when Ms. Simpson wouldn't let him see their children, and "I fed him a piece of peach cobbler," Ms. Boe recalled.

During the kitchen conversation, "he implied she was upset over his womanizing," Ms. Boe said, "but that was in the past. His womanizing was in the past."

Another time, she said, she was walking with the Simpsons in the park with the couple's sons, who were good friends, and the Simpsons began arguing.

He was angry at her for being with another man and she was angry at him for being angry at her," Ms. Boe said.

"He said she was sleeping with somebody who'd been staying at her house," Ms. Boe said. "I was sure she was not. ... But when I told O.J. that, she scoffed at me, as though to indicate that I should believe her."

"But I did believe her," she said of Ms. Simpson, "because she had never lied to me."

On cross-examination, she said the man who was Ms. Simpson's house guest was named Keith and "Nicole told me she slept in the spare bedroom."

Keith Zilmanovich, who became Ms. Simpson's lover at one point, is expected to testify that Simpson once spied on their love-making through a window. That incident, like the one in which Simpson was seen outside the home, is alleged to have taken place in April 1992. But the exact dates have not been disclosed in court.

Simpson, who is on trial in the June 12 slaying murders of Ms. Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman, didn't acknowledge Ms. Boe and Colby in court and showed no reaction to their testimony.

Ms. Simpson moved into the rented house in January 1992 and filed for divorce from Simpson in February of that year.

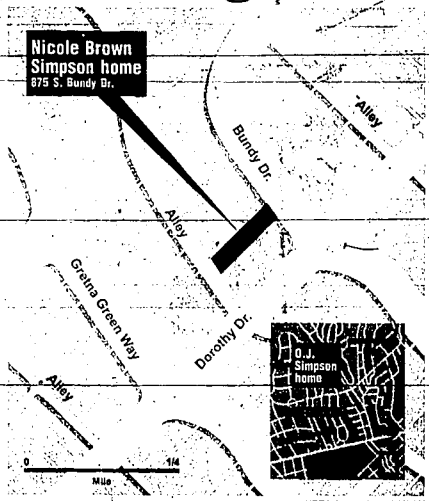

The divorce became final in October 1992, although the couple reconciled later and Ms. Simpson moved back into Simpson's estate for a time. When they split up again, Ms. Simpson moved into a condo, where she was slain.

In another development, it was disclosed in court that a new witness, Leif Tilden, says he saw four men near Ms. Simpson's condominium the night she was slain.

Simpson attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr. complained that the defense had not been told about the witness, who according to ABC is an actor and puppeteer who worked on the TV series "Dinosaurs."

Darden said Tilden had been interviewed by prosecutors within the previous 24 hours. He said the witness' statement would be turned over as soon as it was transcribed.

The prosecutor suggested that Tilden's account does little to bolster the claim of defense witness Mary Anne Gerchak, who allegedly saw four men, some in knit caps, leaving the area of the murders.

Stenographer in Simpson case perserveres, hills and all

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — You think prosecutor Marcia Clark was upset when defense lawyer Johnnie L. Cochran Jr. waited until the last minute to turn over the names of more than a dozen new witnesses?

Try sitting in Janet Moxham's chair. Moxham has a tedious job to begin with, typing court testimony at a rate of 250 words a minute on a stenograph machine no bigger than a loaf of bread.

But in 15 years of court reporting, Moxham, the lead stenographer on the O.J. Simpson double murder trial, has never seen the likes of this. Defense witnesses with hard-to-spell names disclosed at the last minute. Lawyers interrupting each other too furiously for her to keep up. And the dread of everyone looking over her shoulder.

Thanks to new technology, every word of Moxham's words is now on the 26-key court stenograph machine is instantly transmitted — types and all — to media around the world.

"Nothing compares to this," said Moxham, who reports to work at 7 a.m. and stays until late in the evening completing trial transcripts, with only a few hours left for sleep some nights. "When all the media attention, it's intimidating."

One of her worst headaches has grown out of one of the trial's most contentious issues: surprise witnesses mentioned for the first time during opening statements by lead defense lawyer Cochran. Moxham had thought she was prepared for the surprise witnesses programming her stenograph machine to automatically key in the proper spellings of all the case's major players, including anticipated witnesses. Cochran's surprises forced her to wing it on phones.

As a result, she typed the name of Mary Anne Gerchak, a West Los Angeles jeweler who claims she saw four men run from victim Nicole Brown Simpson's condo; as "MERRY-ANNE GEAR CHASE." Howard Weitzman, Simpson's first criminal defense attorney, came out MR. WHITES PLAN. Mark Partridge, a Chicago-area attorney who sat in the front-left section with Simpson on his return flight to Los Angeles the morning after the June 12 slayings of Nicole Simpson and her friend Ronald Lyle Goldman, was typed as MARCH PARLTD EYE.

Anybody who subscribed to a wire service got to see these mistakes as instantaneous transcripts flew into newsrooms for the first time in trial history.

There have been other typos since the trial started.

Instead of writing "ANY COMMENT BY THE PEOPLE," Moxham accidentally hit the wrong key one day last week and wrote "ANY COMMENT BY THE PEOPLE." Instead of typing, "ARE THERE ANY RULINGS THAT YOU OBJECTED TO," a mistroke on the 26-key stenograph machine came out as "I AM LAME RULING." And once Superior Court Judge Lance A. Ito was referred to as JUDGE EATS.

"We're not perfect," said Moxham, who under normal circumstances has the luxury of editing her transcripts before they are made public. "The world is seeing us on our bad days."

On Tuesday, Moxham and Christine M. Olson, who is assisting with court reporting on the Simpson case, were still working out the kinks. But, overall, they were getting used to the trial's pace.

"It's hectic, but it's OK," Moxham said. "We've started testimony. There are a lot of questions and answers, which gives us a little break."

Moxham, who has worked for Ito for more than four years, is no novice when it comes to high-profile cases. She produced the transcripts of financier Charles Keating's trial and was anxious to participate in the Simpson proceedings.

"I like working criminal cases," Moxham said. "They're interesting and they're hard work. But this is indeed a challenge."

Dealing with the hot and heavy debate was the first obstacle to overcome.

"It's tough when the attorneys start talking over each other," Moxham said. So, by using new technology available for the Simpson trial, she programmed her machine to flash a message to the computer terminals on the defense and prosecution tables whenever the attorneys were interrupting each other. It reads: "Rude, rude, talk one at a time."

The lawyers usually ignore her. Then there are the lawyers who won't finish a sentence, she programmed her machine to flash a message to the computer terminals on the defense and prosecution tables whenever the attorneys were interrupting each other. It reads: "Rude, rude, talk one at a time."

"Mister Cochran is a very nice man," Moxham said. "But he's very hard to record. He swallows a lot of words and he talks very fast ... Marcia (Clark) sometimes gets going, too."

So Moxham told them, via computer: "Slow, slow."

"When I've done that, no one seems to look," she said. "So I just put my head down, close my eyes and write as fast as I can. You just hope the next person who stands up is a little slower."

Courtroom antics aside, nothing has been more disconcerting for Moxham than the knowledge that every word she types is translated from shorthand by a computer hooked up to her stenograph machine and sent over the wire to the news media.

"I didn't really want to do it," she said. "It's like your rough notes. But the judge really wanted to do it. This is the time to show what court reporters have to offer."

Simpson seeks book deal for his story

The Washington Post

Buoyed by the tremendous initial success of his jailhouse book, "I Want to Tell You," O.J. Simpson through a representative is sounding out publishers about an autobiography, publishing sources said Thursday.

While the book wouldn't be issued until after the trial is over, a deal now would bring in additional funds to pay Simpson's ever-increasing legal bills.

At the moment, the sources said, conversations between Simpson's representative and publishers have been preliminary. One reason is that publishers realize the marketability of any autobiography will depend heavily on what the jurors decide. "I strongly feel it would be premature to make any deal," said one publisher.

Lawrence Schiller, who conducted the jailroom interviews with Simpson for "I Want to Tell You," denied approaching publishers.

"I have no knowledge of any formal or informal proposals that have been made for an autobiography," the television producer and director said.

Simpson is believed to have received over $1 million for "I Want to Tell You," which is subtitled "My Response to Your Letters, Your Messages, Your Questions." All the proceeds are going to his defense fund.

Schiller, meanwhile, is receiving an undisclosed amount directly from the publisher, Little, Brown. "Like any writer, I'm being paid for my services," he said.

Friends give to Clinton

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton's fund to defend himself against legal problems has passed $600,000.

The total includes $1,000 contributions from old Arkansas chums and Washington lobbyists, political friends such as Jimmy Carter and such celebrities as Garrison Keillor and Barbra Streisand.

In its first six months, the fund collected more than 5,000 gifts of under $200 each from sympathetic Americans in all 50 states. It paid out $321,134 to lawyers in Washington and Little Rock, defending Clinton in a sexual harassment suit and in the Whitewater land deal.

Radio personality and writer Keillor donated $1,000 — the maximum amount the fund would accept — as did Streisand and actors Sean Penn and James Garner.

Clinton's campaign consultants, James Carville and Paul Begala, gave $1,000 each, as did pollster Peter Hart, adviser Lloyd Cutler and former Secretary of State Cyrus Vance. Clinton himself and his wife Hillary started the fund with $1,000 each, and Tipper Gore, wife of Vice President Al Gore, gave a like amount.

Business figures also dotted the list: Lew Wasserman, chairman of entertainment giant MCA, donated $1,000, as did hair-care magnate Vidal Sassoon, and Arthur Coakley, president of the Laborers International Union, gave $1,000.

At least two dozen Washington lobbyists gave to the fund. The donor list showed a $1,000 donation from lobbyist Michael Bernan, president of the Duberstein Group, and $500 from associate Steve Champlin; $1,000 each from John Orlando and William Cable of Thompson's CO; and gifts totaling $4,200 from people connected with public relations firm Hill & Knowlton, where former Clinton legislative chief Howard Paster is chairman and CEO.

But many of the donations appeared to be from people like Cathy Henric of Pettisville, Ohio, a babysitter who said she saw Clinton ask for help on television last summer and sent in $300.

"I think he's honest and deeply religious, and a lot of his problem is because he's been falsely accused," she said. "It makes me mad to see the politicians telling all these lies about him."

Fund trustees set the average contribution was $104.

Supporters from Clinton's home state of Arkansas gave nearly $27,000, including many with political ties to Clinton dating from his time as governor. Bunker and former chief of staff William H. Bowen gave the maximum, and former Clinton legal counsel Sam Britton Jr.

"The fact that (donations) come from people in all 50 states and even that the contributions are, on the average, small, is a source of satisfaction for both the president and Mrs. Clinton," said Nicholas Katzenbach, co-chair of the trustees.

He defended the fund's creation, saying it is "in the interests of all of us that the president and Mrs. Clinton, with the financial burdens from litigation of these claims, are not distracted from the other heavy burdens that the president of the United States has."

Myers to co-host 'Equal Time'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dee Dee Myers, President Clinton's former press secretary, will be a guest host for two weeks on the "Equal Time" television program with Mary Matalin, political director of George Bush's losing re-election campaign.

The half-hour cable program, carried on CNBC weekdays, has rotated Democratic co-hosts since Jane Wallace left the show last April.

Myers resigned as President Clinton's press secretary in December and makes her debut on the speaking circuit March 1 in Las Vegas. The two-week "Equal Time" assignment — widely thought of as an extended tryout for a permanent position — begins March 14.

Shuttle's jet leak minor; rendezvous still planned

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Ice propellant trickled from a leaking jet aboard Discovery Friday as the shuttle chased a Russian space station around Earth for a historic rendezvous early next week.

Mission Control assured the five Americans and one Russian aboard Discovery the leak was minor and, if it did not worsen, would have no impact on Monday's close encounter between the shuttle and the orbiting Mir station.

If the leakage increases, the crew will have to go to the extreme measure of shutting off all three jets in that section. Discovery still would rendezvous with Mir, but would have to stay at least 1,000 feet away instead of coming within 35 feet.

"We're hopeful that the leak will resolve itself and stop," Mission Control told the astronauts as they wrapped up their first workday in space. "Right now, it does not affect your rendezvous."

The steering jet failed and began leaking nitrogen tetroxide shortly after Discovery reached orbit early Friday.

Commander James Wetherbee and pilot Eileen Collins, the first woman to pilot a U.S. spaceship, turned the seeping jet toward the sun to melt any frozen fuel that might be preventing the thruster valve from closing. This has always stopped leaks before.

After several hours, Wetherbee still could see propellant scattering in all but one direction.

"As we look at the darkness of space, you can see the snow coming out of the aft end, that continues to come like a very, very small leak," he said. The jet was losing 2 pounds to 3 pounds of propellant per hour, considered a manageable rate of seepage, NASA said. It posed no safety hazard to the shuttle or crew.

Discovery's crew was instructed to keep the leaking jet above 40 degrees Fahrenheit. The temperature of the thruster was in the high 50s Friday afternoon.

The leaking thruster is one of two that failed. They are among 38 large steering jets on Discovery.

The 250-mile-high rendezvous is the top priority of Discovery's eight-day mission.

It is intended as practice for the first shuttle-Mir docking in June. NASA officials insisted before the flight that the June docking would proceed whether this rendezvous was accomplished or not.

U.S. and Russian spaceships have met in orbit only once before, during the 1975 Apollo-Soyuz docking. Discovery began its journey from the same pad that the Apollo rocket-ship took off from; the shuttle left right at the start of a five-minute launch window.

The astronauts kept ahead of schedule despite the leaking thruster and other equipment problems, including blurred camera monitors.

They began work on the more than 20 experiments in Discovery's small laboratory and cranked up the shuttle robot arm. The 50-foot arm will be used later in the mission to release and retrieve an ultraviolet telescope, and move two spacewalkers around the cargo bay.

The mission is due to end Feb. 11.

Clinton budget may spur frenzy of spending cuts

By Tom Ramm
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Any other time, budget cuts of $144 billion over five years would be a hefty sum.

Not in 1995. President Clinton's budget for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1 will be pounced on by newly-empowered Republicans hungry to raise the ante.

Rather than pronouncing Clinton's budget "dead on arrival," a frequent Capitol Hill putdown in recent years, the first GOP Congress in 40 years will use it as a starting point for even bigger cuts that would affect millions of Americans.

Analysis

Clinton's spending plan formally goes to Congress on Monday. But Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., has already suggested a spending cut total of about $340 billion, more than twice what Clinton is proposing.

It could all lead to a bidding war over spending cuts that would leave few government programs or services untouched, with Congress readily accepting all the cuts suggested by the president as well as by their own leaders.

Clinton's proposals to abolish the Interstate Commerce Commission, auction off power marketing administrations, sell naval petroleum reserves, chop subsidies to Amtrak and other mass transit systems and consolidate housing programs all seem likely to be embraced by the Republican-led Congress.

"They've all been proposed before — by Republicans."

About the only program that seems off-limits is Social Security. Both parties have vowed to leave it alone.

Clinton has extended that protection to Medicare. But Republican lawmakers have made no such promise.

Social Security, veterans' benefits and Medicare account for more than half of all domestic spending — and if Social Security is left alone, that means large cuts will be needed elsewhere.

During the Reagan and Bush years, nearly all presidential budgets were gleefully pronounced "dead on arrival" by Democratic congressional leaders. But in those days, the president and Congress were pulling in different directions — with Reagan and Bush wanting to cut domestic programs and Democrats in Congress wanting to protect them.

"This year, with Republicans in control of both houses of Congress for the first time in 40 years, both parties are basically pulling in the same direction — it's just a matter of the force of the pull."

"This president read the tea leaves and he wants to be re-elected," said James Miller, former Reagan budget director and now president of Citizens for a Sound Economy, a conservative think tank.

"I can see (House Speaker) Newt Gingrich and (Senate Majority Leader) Bob Dole going over his list of major proposals and saying, 'hey, I can live with this or this.' So it's not dead on arrival," Miller said in an interview.

"We are going to take the opposite position," Gingrich said. "We are going to genuinely take two weeks, and actually look at every aspect of his budget, and adopt everything we can."

The battlefield will be over areas where Republicans and the White House do not agree. When the smoke of conflict clears, an awful lot of dead and battered federal programs will be left on the field.

In addition to expected fights on Medicare spending, there is likely to be a major confrontation on one of Clinton's pet programs: AmeriCorps.

Clinton has proposed a major increase in the year-old program — already bigger than the Peace Corps ever was — in which students perform community or national service in exchange for college tuition.

Gingrich has attacked it as "so-called volunteerism" and threatened elimination.

Beyond the spending cuts, his seems likely that middle class Americans will get a tax cut out of this year's budget battles.

Both Clinton and the Republicans in the GOP "Contract With America" have proposed a $500-per-child tax credit — although Republicans would give it to families making up to $200,000 a year and Clinton would limit it to those making less than $75,000.

Charger coach's daughter dies while scattering mother's ashes

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The daughter of San Diego Chargers quarterback coach Dwain Painter was swept to her death by a wave as she scattered her mother's ashes into waves along the rocky Mendocino coast.

The body of Debbie Menta, 32, was found Friday morning by Coast Guard rescuers.

Painter's 23-year-old son, Doug, Painter, also was injured in the freak accident trying to rescue his sister, but pulled himself to safety and was in stable condition Friday, hospital officials said.

The two were scattering the ashes of their mother, Diane Painter, who committed suicide hours after San Diego won the American Football Conference championship Jan. 15.

Friends said Mrs. Painter, who was divorced from her husband, was upset she would not be going to the Super Bowl with him. She started her car in the garage of their home in Bellevue, Pa., and died of carbon monoxide poisoning.

"It's just a series of family tragedies," said Leo Menta, father of Debbie Menta's husband, Mark Menta, of the San Francisco suburb of Foster City. The couple have an 18-month-old son, Taylor. He said Dwain Painter was on his way to Mendocino to be with his son.

The brother and sister were scattering the ashes at the site because Mrs. Painter had often visited Mendocino with her daughter.

"It's one of the favorite spots for the mother and her," Leo Menta said. "When the mother came out they always went up together."

On Thursday, Doug Painter was found by artist Joy Verner staggering naked along the Mendocino Headlands about 120 miles north of San Francisco, "bloody from top to bottom," she said. Doug Painter told authorities he and his sister stood on a high rock above the ocean at sunset Thursday to scatter the ashes of their mother.

AIDS now tops youth killer list

WASHINGTON (AP) — Though AIDS is now the nation's No. 1 killer of young Americans, claiming one of every five who die between age 25 and 44, it doesn't mean the average person suddenly is at greater risk.

Instead, it was a trend long expected as experts made the highways safer but failed to find an effective treatment for the fatal HIV virus.

"When it becomes No. 1, people are very surprised," acknowledged Dr. John Ward of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. "Hopefully, this news will sober people to the point where each individual says, 'Wow, maybe I need to do something to enhance my life.'"

In 1993, AIDS replaced accidents as the leading cause of death among Americans aged 25 to 44. It killed 35 of every 100,000 young adults, or 28,090 people. The same year, about 32 per 100,000, or 25,960, died from accidents, followed by cancer, heart disease, suicide and murder.

Although accidents were the top killer for years, the AIDS jump was not unexpected. In 1992, accidents killed only 1,179 more than AIDS did.

And while nothing impeded the steady rise of AIDS deaths since 1982, seat belts, air bags and drunk-driving crackdowns gradually made the highways safer. Consequently, accidents killed 152 more people in 1993 than the year before, while AIDS killed 3,461 more.

Complicating the picture is that HIV doesn't kill overnight. It incubates inside apparently healthy people for as long as 10 years before finally sicken them. So virtually every 25-year-old who died of AIDS caught the virus in his or her teens, most likely from sex without a condom or injecting drugs with a dirty needle.

Clinton eyes $.90 hike in minimum wage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defying solid Republican opposition, President Clinton Friday proposed increasing the minimum wage by 90 cents an hour over two years.

"The only way to grow the middle class and shrink the under class is to make work pay," Clinton said in a Rose Garden ceremony. "In terms of real buying power, the minimum wage will be at a 40-year low next year if we do not raise it above $4.25 an hour."

He proposed boosting the rate to $5.15 over two years through two 45-cent increases.

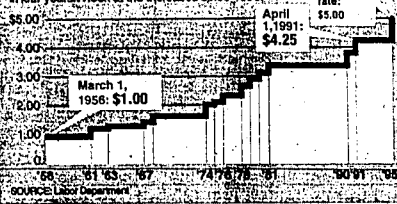

In a measure of the difficulty that the proposal will face in the Republican-controlled Congress, not one GOP legislator was willing to attend the ceremony.

On Capitol Hill, House Speaker Newt Gingrich said that while he thought Congress ought to give Clinton's proposal full consideration, "I personally am very skeptical about it and think it will destroy jobs, especially for minority teen-agers."

"A lot of studies indicate that when

Minimum wage gains since 1956

President Clinton wants to raise the minimum wage; his advisors want to make it $5.00 an hour, the first increase in four years. A look at the increase since 1956.

you raise the minimum wage, the people who suffer the most are young black males," he said.

Asked about strong resistance to the proposal by House Majority Leader Dick Armey of Texas, a onetime economics professor, Gingrich said, "He didn't say he would smother it. ... He said he would fight it, and that's his prerogative."

Armey has said he'd like to do away with the minimum wage altogether and would fight any increases "with every fiber of my being."

In reply, Labor Secretary Robert Reich said, "Well, he's bigger than I am, he has more fibers in his being, but we're going to fight very hard for this minimum wage increase because it's just, it's right, it's necessary, it doesn't cost jobs and we want to make work pay for the average American."

Reich said a majority of Republicans — including Gingrich and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole — voted for two 45-cent increases in 1989. "If you did it before, why wouldn't you do it now?" Reich asked.

The last increase, 45 cents an hour, was in 1991.

House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., said Democrats will fight for Clinton's proposal "because it's right for our economy, and it's right for the hard-working families who are the heart of our party, and country."

"To the Republicans, lower wages and fewer benefits are just money in the bank for American business — never mind that people are suffering while those profits soar," he said.

Commission removes reactors from scrutiny

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission removed two reactors at a Texas nuclear power plant from its list of reactors needing special scrutiny for safety reasons Friday.

Three other reactors in Illinois and New York remain on the list.

The agency, in its semiannual review of the country's commercial nuclear power plants, said the Houston Lighting and Power Co. had taken action to correct past problems at its twin-reactor South Texas nuclear facility in Bay City, Texas.

"Effective action has been taken to correct identified problems and programs for improved performance have been implemented," said the agency. The two reactors at South Texas were put on the close-watch list in June 1993.

But the NRC said safety and operational improvements at two reactors in Illinois and another reactor in New York have not been sufficient to warrant a lifting of special surveillance orders.

The agency said reactors No. 2 and 3 at the Dresden nuclear power plant near Morris, Ill., still are cause for concern. The power plant, operated by Commonwealth Edison Co., was first singled out for special monitoring in 1987, went off the special-watch list the next year, but returned to the list in 1992.

"A sense of progress is now evident. ... However, much remains to be done," James M. Taylor, the NRC's executive director for operations, wrote the Illinois utility.

He wrote that progress at the Dresden plant has been slow and uneven. Both Dresden reactors were shut down in the summer for worker safety and operating improvements, and were restarting in November.

The NRC said that the No. 3 reactor at the Indian Point nuclear power plant near Buchanan, N.Y., also should remain under special safety surveillance because of operational and maintenance shortcomings. The reactor, operated by the Power Authority of New York, has been on the watch list since June 1993.

The NRC also continues to keep close watch on two Alabama reactors that have been shut down and await permission from the NRC to resume producing electric power. The two Browns Ferry reactors, operated by the Tennessee Valley Authority, have been on the watch list since April 1986.

Meanwhile, it said the January review indicated three nuclear power plants "showed signs of a declining trend in safety performance warranting closer attention" by the agency staff. This suggests that if improvements are not made these plants might be placed on the special watch list in the next review at midyear.

The three reactors are the Cooper nuclear power plant near Nebraska City, Neb., operated by the Nebraska Public Power District, and reactor Units 1 and 2 at the Quad Cities nuclear power plant near Moline, Ill., operated by Commonwealth Edison.

Two other Commonwealth Edison reactors — Units 1 and 2 of the LaSalle plant near Ottawa, Ill. — were removed from the so-called "trending list" because of operational improvements, the NRC said.

Shelby pleads not guilty; trial date set for April 3

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — David Shane Shelby pleaded not guilty to charges of threatening the president and possession of illegal firearms in federal court Friday.

U.S. Magistrate Ronald Boyce set an April 3 trial before U.S. District Judge David Winder.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Paul Warner said officials have not heard from Indiana, where another warrant has been issued for Shelby, so they will go ahead with a trial in Utah.

Shelby was indicted by a grand jury Thursday.

The indictment lists three rifles, four handguns, several pipe bombs and explosive components and accuses Shelby of illegal possession of firearms and destructive devices.

The Kentucky man was arrested Jan. 25 in Ogden after he allegedly tried to mail a light-bomb to President Clinton and a gun to cult-murderer Charles Manson.

The Indiana Federal warrant accuses Shelby, 29, of mailing threatening letters to President Clinton and Vice President Al Gore. Defense attorney Joseph Fratto said if Indiana doesn't move quickly, that state could be in danger of violating his client's right to a speedy trial.

Also known by several aliases, Shelby is wanted in Kentucky on bank fraud charges.

He is being held without bail in the Salt Lake County Jail.

Boyce did not set a date for a pre-trial hearing.

Clinton to name Sasser ambassador

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton plans to name former Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., to be U.S. ambassador to China, congressional sources said Friday.

After serving three terms in the Senate, Sasser was defeated last year by Republican Bill Frist.

Sasser would succeed J. Stapleton Roy, a career foreign service officer, who has served in Beijing since July 1991.

However, it's not yet clear that Sasser has agreed to take the job.

James Pratt, Sasser's former press secretary, said Sasser was considering a number of options. Pratt added that Sasser "continues to have a great deal of interest in public affairs and public service, including foreign affairs and foreign relations."

Israel, Arab leaders delay crucial decisions for another day's meeting

By Anthony Shadid
The Associated Press

CAIRO, Egypt — The first summit to bring together Israel and its Arab peace partners offered something for everyone.

But crucial decisions for a lasting peace were put off for another day. Israel got a declaration on terrorism for Israel, Egypt a nod toward its goal of a nuclear-free Middle East, and the Palestinians a pledge to speed up negotiations on their future.

But ways to curb attacks on Israelis by Islamic militants, the most serious threat to peace, weren't even discussed at Thursday's summit.

"Such meetings cannot discuss specific ways and means, but to reaffirm our stand against all kinds of violence that would undermine the peace process," Egypt's foreign minister, Amr Moussa, said after the five-hour session.

It was a polite way of saying nothing concrete was done.

In the end, the summit may well have been more symbolic than practical, marking Israel's ascent as a partner in regional politics.

Israel has long resisted multilateral meetings with its Arab neighbors. But televised images of the summit — of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin casually sitting next to Jordan's King Hussein, PLO leader Yasser Arafat and Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak — provided dramatic proof of the region's fast-changing landscape.

The images were even broadcast on Syrian television, and Al-Hayat, the London-based Arabic daily distributed throughout the Middle East, displayed a photograph of the four leaders on its front page.

Analysis

Rabin himself was aware of the symbolism. While praising a summit statement condemning terrorism, he said the meeting as a "peace bloc" was more important than the formal declarations.

Arafat secured a pledge to speed up the negotiations on Palestinian autonomy, considered crucial if he is to salvage his authority in the Gaza Strip and West Bank city of Jericho.

The expected fruits of the 1993 Israel-PLO peace accord — jobs and independence — have not come about, and Arafat has been unable or unwilling to crack down on Islamic extremists who use terrorism to undermine the accord even more. Their latest blow was a Jan. 22 suicide bombing that killed 21 Israelis.

Israel and the PLO will resume talks next week in Cairo, and diplomats from Egypt, Israel, Jordan and the PLO will gather in Washington on Feb. 12 to discuss everything from education to a regional nuclear-free zone.

But Arafat's key demands at the summit — an end to the closure stamped on the West Bank and Gaza last week and a halt to expanding Jewish settlements — were hardly addressed, and only then peripherally.

However, the Israeli Cabinet will consider this weekend a recommendation by its security forces to ease the closure, which cuts off thousands of Palestinians from their jobs in Israel.

As expected, Arafat's opponents were quick to condemn the summit. Islamic Jihad, which claimed responsibility for the Jan. 22 bombing, said in Al-Hayat that the meeting was meant to shore up Rabin's sagging popularity, "which is stumbling under the strikes of the crusaders."

"The four summit leaders agreed to back Egypt's proposal for a 'mutually verifiable Middle East zone free of weapons of mass destruction — nuclear, chemical and biological.'"

Egyptian officials have been adamant that if Israel refuses to sign the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, Egypt will not renew its commitment when the treaty is renegotiated in April. Israel has stayed mum about its nuclear capability, but it believed to possess about 200 warheads.

Egypt's call has drawn support from Libya, Syria and Kuwait. But it has put Egypt at a crossroads with its American patrons, who have lobbied hard to line up support for the treaty's renewal.

The statement and the promise of future talks may offer Egypt a way to sign the Non-Proliferation Treaty while pointing to Israel's commitment to work for a nuclear-free region.

Of the four leaders, Hussein had the least to gain and the least to lose. Proceeding smoothly with its peace with Israel and facing a relatively tame opposition, Jordan gains credibility as a regional broker. It needs little more.

Chechen rebels lie in wait for expected Russian attack

SAMASHKY, Russia (AP) — Chechen fighters turned a strategic town on their rebel republic's western border into a fortified camp Friday, anticipating an all-out Russian attack.

They dug new trenches throughout the town of Samashky, set up large-caliber machine guns and brought in fresh forces to shore up their positions after several days of Russian shelling.

"We expect an assault by the Russians any minute," said Rashid Tatiyev, 28, a volunteer wearing a camouflage uniform and a combat helmet with a green Muslim ribbon on it.

Also Friday, the 33-nation Council of Europe suspended membership talks with Russia until Moscow ends its war on the tiny, breakaway republic in Strassbourg, France, condemned the "indiscriminate and disproportionate use of force by the Russian military" in Chechnya.

And in Moscow, there were more signs that one of the architects of the bogged-down, widely unpopular war was in trouble.

An influential newspaper said President Boris Yeltsin had confronted Defense Minister Pavel Grachev about a secret bank account in Germany. It said Grachev, who is hospitalized for what aides called a routine checkup, came down with a bad case of "cowardice."

Neither the Defense Ministry nor Yeltsin's office would comment on the report in the daily Segodnya, which said more than $20 million from the sale of Warsaw Pact military equipment was stashed in the account.

Grachev has been intensely criticized since Russian troops rolled into Chechnya to suppress the southern region's three years of self-proclaimed independence.

The war has embarrassed the army, which has made few advances against the Chechen irregulars. Thousands of people have been killed and most of Grozny, the Chechen capital, has been destroyed.

Russian troops invaded Chechnya on Dec. 11 and tried to storm Grozny on Dec. 31. Despite their vastly superior force, they now control only part of northern Chechnya and the north side of Grozny.

The war has recently been spreading into Chechen-held territory in the south and west, and toward Ismailov, previously unscathed, are finding themselves on the front line.

Despite the Russian government's claim two days earlier that Russians controlled Samashky, Chechen fighters and volunteers held the town and all approaches to it on Friday.

They said roads around the village had been mined, although cars still passed through on the main road to Grozny.

The town's population had swelled to 20,000 with refugees, but most residents have fled in the last few days. Hundreds of fighters remain, and some defiant residents.

"We won't go anywhere," said 38-year-old Tamara Tsamysava, a fighter's wife and the mother of three children. "Let them kill us here."

Samashky, 18 miles west of Grozny, is important for Russian troops because of the paved road that goes through it.

In subfreezing temperatures, Russian convoys looped around Samashky on a dirt road to Grozny a few miles to the north. But because of a midwinter thaw the road is now muddy and difficult for tanks.

"The Russians would very much like to use the good paved road through Samashky to quickly move their troops and vehicles," said Khadzhi-Murat Bashayev, a Chechen field commander.

Besides trying to take Samashky, the Russians have shelled the towns of Bamut and Arshiy almost daily, according to Magomet Ibrahimov, Chechen security chief in Achkhoy-Martan, six miles south of Samashky.

Ireland frees 5 more IRA prisoners in gesture of peace

DUBLIN: Ireland (AP) — Ireland freed five IRA supporters from prison Friday in a gesture toward peace and urged Britain to follow suit.

The release, the second in the five months the Irish Republic Army has observed a cease-fire, came at a delicate moment in negotiations toward peace.

Among those freed Friday was Pamela Kane, the only woman among IRA prisoners in the republic. She was jailed in 1990 for 10 years for armed robbery and had not been due for release until 1997.

The others are Pat Flanagan, serving a 10-year sentence for arms possession; John McBride, serving an 18-month sentence for arms possession; and Ken Gaffney and Peter Sheehy, serving three years for arms possession. All had been due for release no later than May 1996.

A leaked document this week raised fears among Northern Ireland's Protestant majority that Britain and Ireland are negotiating the eventual union of the British province and the Irish republic.

Mexico tops finance agenda

TORONTO (AP) — The setting was Canada, but the topic was Mexico.

Finance ministers and central bank officials from the world's seven largest economies gathered Friday for talks expected to focus on the economic woes of a nation outside the club — Mexico.

The recent nosedive of the Mexican peso has sent shock waves through the ministries and markets of the world's wealthy nations, reminding them of how economies are closely linked and how an economic dwarf can quickly become a giant.

Meeting over dinner Friday night were officials from the Group of Seven — which includes the United States, Canada, Germany, France, Britain, Italy and Japan — along with their central bankers and the chief of the International Monetary Fund.

The officials are scheduled to meet again this morning, part of a regular series of talks prior to the G-7 summit June 15-17 in Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Some Europeans are unhappy at being dragged into what they see as a North American problem.

Several European countries — reportedly Germany and Britain — abstained from voting for a Mexican rescue package Wednesday at an IMF executive board meeting. They complained they had not been adequately consulted before U.S. officials and the IMF worked out the agreement that calls for $17.8 billion in IMF assistance to Mexico.

President Clinton's plan to provide Mexico with $40 billion in loan guarantees fell apart after strong resistance from Congress. He subsequently scaled the American participation to $20 billion from a Treasury fund that he put at the disposal of Mexico through an executive order.

Greenland premier threatens secession

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Greenland's premier threatened Friday the Danish government with seceding from Denmark reportedly proposed cutting the island's annual subsidy by about 97 percent.

Premier Lars-Emit Johansen's comment was seen more as a sign of frustration than intent to break relations, since semi-independent Greenland depends heavily on Danish aid.

But it came days after trouble arose in Denmark's relations with its other autonomous North Atlantic territory, the Faeroe Islands, located between Scotland and Iceland. The disagreements could test Denmark's "home rule" accords, under which Copenhagen handles foreign policy, defense, justice and currency for Greenland and the Faeroe Islands. It also pays subsidies to the local governments.

The talks on Greenland's annual subsidy, a sum equivalent to $500 million, collapsed Thursday.

According to the Copenhagen daily Berlingske Tidende, Denmark wanted to reduce the subsidy to just $12 million, about 2.5 percent of the usual amount. Denmark has cut aid to the world's largest island many times in recent years, but never as much.

Danish officials said Greenland's economy, based on fishing, is in sound shape. In 1993, the island had a $23 million budget surplus.

But Johansen said Greenland's fishing exports were threatened by competition from other countries, notably Russia, Canada and Norway.

If the subsidy reductions continued, "one has to be prepared that Greenland will cut its ties with Denmark," Johansen told the Berlingske Tidende daily.

Greenland officials could not be reached for comment Friday evening.

Denmark faced complaints this week from the Faeroe Islands over its refusal to set up a high-level inquiry into a banking scandal.

Peru, Ecuador agree to cease-fire terms

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — Negotiators for Peru and Ecuador agreed Friday on cease-fire terms in their clash over a disputed section of remote jungle.

"We reached an accord that was approved by everyone," said an elated Sebastiao do Rego Barros, Brazil's acting foreign minister. Brazil, Argentina, Chile and the United States were involved in the talks in Rio de Janeiro as guarantors of the Rio-Protocol pact that ended the 1941 Ecuador-Peru war.

The two countries have been battling the past eight days over a 50-mile stretch of border region around the Cenepa River about 530 miles north of Lima, Peru's capital.

The area, which has gold, uranium and possibly oil deposits, has been the scene of repeated disputes due to undefined border posts.

U.S. donates planes for African peace

HARARE, Zimbabwe — The U.S. military will donate 10 transport planes and other equipment to help African armies boost their regional peacekeeping capability, U.S. and Zimbabwe officials said Friday.

But Zimbabwe, set to send 1,000 troops to help oversee a peace pact in Angola, said it wasn't sure it can afford to maintain the planes it's been offered.

U.S. embassy spokeswoman Maura Keniston said the military was donating equipment it no longer needed. Included are a total of 10 C130s being made available to African governments.

U.S. to improve Romania military

BUCHAREST, Romania — The United States will spend $1 million to help Romania bring its military management in line with NATO standards, a senior U.S. official said Friday.

Romania was the first country to sign the Partnership for Peace treaty, seen as a preliminary step for former East Bloc nations to join the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The project is intended to help Romania reform and improve its military budgeting practices and develop a defense planning system compatible with NATO standards, a statement from the American Embassy said.

Diamond thieves still on loose

ANTWERP, Belgium (AP) — Part of Antwerp's biggest diamond heist has been returned, but the three men who staged the spectacular robbery last December remained at large.

An international arrest warrant has been issued for two Israelis and a Brazilian known to diamond traders worldwide, a police spokesman said Friday.

Earlier this week, an unidentified man walked into an Antwerp courthouse with a bag containing 10.3 pounds of cut and uncut diamonds and half a million dollars in 15 currencies.

Police estimated that the returned diamonds were worth $4.7 million, but declined to provide a value for all the stolen diamonds.

Pain, bitter memories remain after half century

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — She survived World War II to become a president's daughter. Others in her family were not so lucky.

Her mother and one sister died in a hail of gunfire. A Japanese occupation soldier skewered her baby sister on his bayonet.

Victoria Delgado's tragedy was one of many in the Battle of Manila, which began 50 years ago Friday when U.S. forces invaded to save thousands of interned American civilians and troops.

As night fell on Feb. 3, 1945, the U.S. 1st Cavalry Division sped down Manila's broad avenues. The month-long battle that followed became one of the great tragedies of the Pacific Theater: 18,000 U.S. and Japanese soldiers were killed, 100,000 civilians died, and the city was destroyed.

As the Americans closed in, Japanese troops went on a rampage against civilians — including the family of Elpidio Quirino, who became president of the Philippines three years later.

"We passed a (Japanese) sentry," Delgado, the late president's daughter, was quoted telling the Today newspaper in an interview published Friday.

Students dressed as American soldiers carry comrades inside the University of Santo Tomas campus during a reenactment of the liberation of Manila from Japanese forces during World War II.

"He opened fire. ... My sister Norma ... was dead on the spot. I saw my mother fall with the baby in her arms. ... As we ran, the sentry took the baby from my mother's arms, threw her up in the air and caught her with his gleaming bayonet."

about 50 Americans, gathered Friday at the University of Santo Tomas, where students re-enacted the freeing of about 3,700 U.S. and other Allied civilians interned there. The crackle of gunfire blared out from megaphones as the "troops" burst through the gate and led the prisoners to freedom.

"We commemorate this event, not to turn victims against past oppressors but to remind ourselves that whoever is involved, war is the most evil invention of man," President Fidel Ramos, a former general, told the crowd. "We cherish peace and the memory of those who died for it."

Although the U.S. 1st Cavalry Division freed the prisoners within hours of entering the city, the Japanese held out for a month of ferocious fighting, despite orders by their commander, Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, to evacuate.

The Japanese command structure collapsed and troops went on a rampage of rape and murder. Thousands of other civilians were killed by U.S. artillery fire.

"The city was utterly destroyed when I first walked in," said George Sharpe, 79, of Kensington, Md., a battalion surgeon with the 6th Infantry Division.

As the battle dragged on, the main Japanese force retreated into the 150-year-old walled Spanish enclave of Intramuros. U.S. troops pounded them with artillery, and cultural treasures such as the Manila Cathedral and beautiful Spanish-era churches were destroyed.

California school gets snowball in mail

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — It had a snowball's chance in the U.S. mail. And it made it.

A snowball shipped 3,000 miles through the mail from Maine to California arrived intact Thursday, delighting science students at the Redwood Intermediate School who had anxiously awaited the overnight delivery.

"We got the snowball and everyone went. It was crazy," said 14-year-old Brandi Justice. "It was wrapped pretty good."

Eight-graders in Holden, Maine, packed the snowball in dry ice and sawdust Wednesday and sent it off in a homemade container. Ben Hale, 13, and Nate Waring, 14, designed the packaging in a science class taught by David Palmer at the Holbrook School in Maine.

Palmer connected with Redwood science teacher Craig Fox on the Internet, then students began exchanging ideas and letters.

The snowball arrived around 8:45 a.m. in this community 30 miles west of Los Angeles, where temperatures rose into the 80s Thursday.

The California students immediately sent a message via computer to their peers across the country.

3 women cry rape in sex scam

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The phone rings late at night. In a sexy whisper, a man persuades a woman to unlock her door, undress, put on a blindfold and wait for him in bed.

At least three women did so, thinking he was their boyfriend, and had sex with the so-called Fantasy Man — one woman twice a week for two months.

Now they want police to charge Raymond Mitchell III with rape.

The 45-year-old businessman says he was just fulfilling the women's fantasies and the sex was consensual.

Police aren't sure what to do. Investigators are looking at whether Mitchell claimed to be someone else, which could constitute rape by fraud.

Fantasy Man has become the talk of Nashville. And tabloid television has been calling.

"My callers can't believe how incredibly stupid, gullible and horny women can be," said WLAC talk radio host Dave Macy.

But Connie Vaupel, who got Mitchell, a co-worker, charged with attempted rape in 1989, defended the alleged victims.

"These are not stupid women," she said. "They were convinced of something that was not true. He had enough information beforehand to convince them. Believe me, this guy is slick."

Mitchell, who's married with two children, isn't talking with reporters but has talked to police, who say he has cooperated fully.

In the Vaupel case, a plea bargain was accepted and Mitchell's record was wiped clean after he completed two years on probation.

No decision has been made whether to present the current case to a grand jury, said Rosemary Sexton, the Davidson County assistant district attorney. She declined to discuss it further.

Meanwhile, newspaper reports of Fantasy Man have brought new claims from women who said they, too, received calls from Mitchell. Police said there were at least three such complaints, but they won't give any details.

David L. Raybin, a former prosecutor turned defense attorney, said: "The government is going to have a very heavy burden to carry, to establish that the women were deceived."

Raybin serves on the Tennessee Sentencing Commission, which in 1989 updated an 1870 criminal code on "fictitious husband rape" and came up with Tennessee's current rape-by-fraud statute.

About 40 states have similar laws, and prosecutors have won rape-by-fraud cases across the country, Raybin said.

Raybin said the law may have false names, claiming to be the women's boyfriends. But prosecutors may decide they don't have a case if he told the women "I'm whoever you think I am," Raybin said.

Mother convicted

LANCASTER, Ohio (AP) — A woman accused of helping her son and his friends cover up the murder of two 16-year-old girls, then making everyone pizza, has been convicted.

Prosecutors said Elsie Sheets thought her son's schoolmate, Abby Worrell, was harassing her, so she schemed to kill the girl.

The 54-year-old Sheets, of Baltimore, Ohio, was convicted Thursday on 12 counts, including complicity to commit aggravated murder, complicity to commit gross abuse of a corpse, evidence tampering, obstructing justice and complicity to commit arson. She could get up to 42 years in prison at her Feb. 10 sentencing.

Fish perish after water to pond is diverted

FILER - About $12,850 worth of fish died this week when someone apparently diverted water from fish ponds at a local trout hatchery.

Police are investigating the case as felony malicious destruction of property, and are asking anyone with information to call Lt. Bob Gauthier at the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department at 736-4040.

On Sunday or Monday, someone pulled a wooden board used to divert water from a nearby creek into the ponds, Gauthier said.

The lack of fresh flowing water cut oxygen in the fish ponds, causing the fish to suffocate, Gauthier said. The company, Seape of Idaho Inc., lost 12,850 pounds of fish, worth about $1 per pound, he said.

Car windows catch bullets in lot near Bridgeview Estates

TWIN FALLS - Someone with a BB gun Friday shot out the windows of four cars parked near the Bridgeview Estates nursing home, and police say it's not the first time.

"They've done this several times before," said Sgt. Jim Mildon of the Twin Falls Police Department.

Police are investigating the 2 p.m. shooting, which broke four side windows of cars parked on the street in front of the nursing home. No one was in the cars at the time of the shooting, Mildon said.

Holes in the windows indicate the suspect shot with a BB gun or pellet gun, Mildon said. In the past, the front window of the building and several cars in the parking lot were targeted by the BB gun. "There's no reason for it," Mildon said. "It's strictly malicious destruction of property and there are a lot of people upset because of it. They are having their windows put in as we speak."

"We're going to get extra patrol" for the nursing home, Mildon said. More than $1,000 damage was caused, he estimated.

Trained volunteers available to help file tax returns

TWIN FALLS - Internal Revenue Service-trained volunteers will begin helping taxpayers in filing their returns starting Thursday.

Assistance will be offered on Thursdays, except for March 16, from 2:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the College of Southern Idaho's Shields Building, Room 211. There also will be Saturday sessions starting Feb. 11, except for March 11, from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. at the KMVT Community Room.

No appointments are necessary, and the general public is welcome.

The program is designed to help low-income, elderly, non-English speaking or disadvantaged taxpayers who can't afford professional preparation of their tax returns.

Dance performances will highlight movies, musicals

TWIN FALLS - Dance concerts following the theme of "Movies, Musicals and More" will be presented today by the Lori J. Head School of Dance.

Performances are scheduled for 2:30 and 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium at the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Center. Cost is $5 for adults and $2 for children under 12. The afternoon show has been scheduled to accommodate church, senior citizen and children's groups, and admission for people in groups of 10 or more is $1 each.

For more information, call 733-8918.

City, county await FAA's OK before starting on terminal

TWIN FALLS - The city and county are waiting for the Federal Aviation Administration to give them the final OK to begin work on a new airport terminal at Joslin Field.

A contract totaling $2,383,877 has been awarded to Ewing Co. of Boise for construction of the terminal at the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport south of town.

Architect Harold Gerber said the contracts should be awarded by Feb. 9. Construction probably won't begin until sometime in March because work will interfere with the baggage claim area in the existing terminal, Gerber said.

Construction would be completed within 300 days.

Public defender nabbed on DUI

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

JEROME - Hours after persuading a magistrate judge to drop a murder charge against one of his clients, Twin Falls County Public Defender Mike Wood was arrested on a misdemeanor-drunken-driving charge last week.

Police arrested Wood shortly after midnight on Feb. 28 after pulling him over for having only one working headlight on his van, according to an affidavit by Deputy Richard Ustiek of the Jerome County Sheriff's Department.

Wood, 49, of Eden, could not be reached for comment Friday. Tuesday, his lawyer, James Meservy, entered a written plea of innocence on Wood's behalf.

Deputy Ustiek pulled over Wood just as he was driving onto the eastbound on-ramp of Interstate 84, according to his affidavit. Wood got out of his car, approached the patrol car, and had to be ordered three times to return to his van, Ustiek wrote.

Wood smelled slightly of alcohol and "appeared to have difficulty maintaining his balance" when he walked, Ustiek's affidavit said. His clothing was disheveled and he "appeared to stagger as he walked," the affidavit said.

Police also found out that his license had expired, the affidavit said. When asked if Wood had drunk any alcoholic beverages that night, Wood said no, and said he would "respectfully refuse" to perform a sobriety test, the affidavit said.

Wood also declined to take a breathalyzer test, according to the affidavit.

Six hours later, Wood posted a $500 bond at the Jerome County Sheriff's Department, according to court documents. A pre-trial conference is scheduled for 1:45 p.m., March 13.

The day before Wood's arrest, Magistrate Michael Redman had dropped a second-degree murder charge against Wood's client, Olivia Jimenez, in the shooting death of her husband. That night, Wood was seen reveling in a society hall tavern.

Toy troubles

Sometimes children just have a little trouble learning to share. Bored with his toy motorized car, 2-year-old C.J. Neaderhiser walked away from it. But, as soon as 5-year-old Heather Cox began enjoying it, he became quite upset. C.J. is the son of Jim Neaderhiser; and, Heather is the daughter of Barbara Stoneroad, both of Twin Falls. Jim and the children were playing at Frontier Park.

Domestic violence leads injuries to women

By Julie M. McKimmon
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - About one-third of women nationwide who go to emergency rooms are there for domestic-violence injuries. One-third of pregnant women are physically abused. One-half of female homicides were committed by a spouse or partner.

Domestic violence is the leading cause of injury to women, causing more injuries than vehicular accidents, muggings and rapes combined.

And public-health workers must begin to identify victims of domestic violence and offer them help, the South Central District Health Department's pregnancy services coordinator said Friday.

"We have continued to tolerate it for too long," said Terri Pendleton, who also is a registered nurse. "I know it's a source for a lot of the community health problems that the health department is trying to deal with."

About 55 health-department employees from administrators to receptionists were at a session Friday to talk about the health department's new guidelines for dealing with domestic violence. Case studies and scenarios were used to help identify some signs of domestic violence and to show ways to give victims of both genders support, such as supplying information about Volunteers Against Violence in Twin Falls.

"We all have a part in identifying domestic violence and in intervening," said Pendleton, adding that domestic violence is not always physical. "Over the last decade, it has looked like and continues to look like open season on women."

DOE eyes INEL as possible site for nuclear reactor

By William Brock
Times-News writer

IDAHO FALLS - To maintain the destructive power of America's nuclear weapons, the U.S. Department of Energy wants to build a tritium-producing nuclear reactor - and is eyeing the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory as a possible location.

The Snake River Alliance says the federal government cannot justify a new reactor and won't even reveal how much tritium it already has. The alliance is an Idaho nuclear watchdog group.

Making more tritium would mean more federal spending, more radioactive waste for long-term storage, and more tension between the U.S. and other nations, an alliance spokesman said Friday.

In addition to the INEL near Idaho Falls, the Energy Department is pondering four other sites in Nevada, Texas, Tennessee and South Carolina.

INEL sits atop the Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer, which provides drinking water for most of southern Idaho. Highly radioactive waste from U.S. Navy and other reactors has been stored there since the mid 1950s.

According to a recently released "implementation plan," the Energy Department is considering several methods to produce tritium - ranging from heavy and light water nuclear reactors, to a high-temperature, gas-cooled reactor, to a nuclear accelerator.

In addition to making new tritium, the Energy Department wants to recycle tritium recovered from nuclear weapons, purify it, then refill the warheads with a fresh supply.

Tritium is a radioactive hydrogen isotope with a half-life of 12.3 years. Its potency decreases as it decays. Tritium is used to increase the explosive power of nuclear bombs.

If no new tritium supply is found by 2011, federal officials say they'll have to dip into a "strategic reserve" that's being saved for "emergencies and contingencies."

If that happens, America's nuclear deterrent eventually will be lost, the Energy Department warned.

Tritium was produced in the United States for 40 years, until production was halted in 1984. A total of 14 reactors were capable of producing tritium, but none are active today.

It will take an estimated 15 years to design and build a tritium production facility.

Uncle Sam and the Snake River Alliance have locked horns over tritium reactors in the past, said alliance spokesman Kerry Cooke, in Boise.

"We've fought this fight at least three times," Cooke said, "and once again the DOE has come stomping along, saying: 'We're going to build a

Teen expected to recover after science project accident

By Mychel Matthews Goodman
Times-News correspondent

MURTAUGH - A local teen-ager is expected to recover from a head injury received when a homemade device - first suspected by investigators to be a pipe bomb - exploded outside his home near Murtaugh.

But 18-year-old Justin Rickett - J.J. to friends and family - is no mad bomber, his father, Dallas Rickett says. The popular senior at Calvary Christian School in Burley "hasn't a hurtful bone in his body," he added.

No one witnessed the explosion, which hurled a 10-inch pipe and its base 50 feet through the air before smashing into the boy's head, crushing the skull above his eyes.

"We may never know exactly what happened," said the boy's father. "The doctor says J.J. probably won't remember the accident."

The boy's mother, Lyn Rickett, came out of the house when she heard the explosion. She found Justin and his rocket launcher lying in the mud, and a gunpowder burn on the ground some 50 feet away.

Dallas Rickett was out of town when the accident occurred. He has gone over the accident scene time and again to make sense out of what happened to his son.

The boy had been working on an electronics science project for an Accelerated Christian Education convention scheduled for next month. Rickett thinks his son was testing a rocket display to add to his project Saturday afternoon, when his experiment went awry.

Justin had packed gunpowder loosely into the 1/2-inch barrel of the pipe, attached a long fuse to the homemade firing tube, and had shielded himself behind a wooden gate, Rickett said. The pipe must have tipped over before detonation, he added, because the explosion propelled the device itself, tumbling end over end, through the air.

Somehow the pipe - or its base - crashed flat against Justin's forehead, Rickett said. Had the pipe not cart-wheeled through the air, it would have pierced the boy's skull like an arrow.

Instead, it shattered the bone in his forehead and destroyed his upper sinuses, but spared the boy's eyes and brain. Justin

Company pleases former valley residents

By Karen Tolkinnes
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Nine former Magic Valley residents who now work for Micron Technology Inc. say they're happy with their jobs.

The only drawback workers cited was the potential to work too much and burn out because of the company's rate of growth.

"I could work 24 hours a day, 365 days a year," said engineer Pat Doherty, 1988 Twin Falls High School graduate. "It's not the type of job where you punch the clock at 9 to 5 and pass the job on to someone else... If you are a driven individual and constantly take on everything that you could take on, there's always so much to do that you overload yourself."

The nine, selected by Micron's public-relations department as people "comfortable" with talking to the press, hold jobs ranging from engineering to public relations.

About 200 people from the Magic Valley work at Micron in various positions. The Boise-based company may add a 3,500-worker plant in the Magic Valley.

No line operators or technicians were included in the list. "We didn't want to put anyone else on the spot," said Micron spokeswoman Julie Nash. "It's an uncomfortable position to be in."

Doherty, who has a degree in electrical engineering, said the company pays for him to take on-site training courses. He's working on a master's degree.

Carolyn Schoenborn, a manufacturing-training coordinator and 1969 Twin Falls High School graduate, said the job might not be good for someone interested in working only 40 hours a week.

"The thing I've had to watch is you can become a workaholic," she said.

3 Kimberly children come down with whooping cough

By Mychel Matthews Goodman
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — According to the South Central District Health Department, three children in town have been diagnosed with pertussis — also known as whooping cough. Though she doesn't expect many more cases to develop, Cheryl Becker, nurse epidemiologist with the health department, is encouraging anyone with a suspicious cough, or a cough that has lasted longer than two weeks, to be tested for the highly contagious respiratory disease. Most coughs won't turn out to be pertussis, but health officials have been cautious since an outbreak of the disease in northern Idaho, Becker said. More than 100 cases of pertussis have been diagnosed in northern Idaho recently — 32 cases in January. "We don't know where (the cases in Kimberly) came from originally," Becker said. "But we know that there are probably cases that occur on a regular basis in this area. "The (whooping cough) immunization is only about 85 percent effective," Becker continued. "So there is a possibility that a child that has been immunized could come down with it." Immunity may decline with time, "so it's the older kids who will usually come down with it," she added. In infants and small children, the classic symptoms are easy to detect, she said. A "whooping" noise may accompany the cough, or a cough may be severe enough to cause vomiting. But frequently, the disease goes undetected in older children and adults, she added. "They can develop pertussis, and have much milder symptoms (than younger kids)," she said. "They may just have a cough that continues on for a few weeks. It's aggravating that they have this cough that hangs on, but they don't necessarily think of it as being pertussis." And neither do doctors, Becker said. Unless whooping cough has been diagnosed in the area, doctors may suspect that the flu-like symptoms are caused by other culprits. And while the symptoms of the disease in adults and older children are less severe than in younger children, the disease is no less contagious — and it can cause serious problems for infants, she said. "Infants can develop encephalitis, and pneumonia," she said. "They can develop some very severe complications as a result of the infection pertussis." Anyone with the classic symptoms, or a prolonged cough, should be checked by a doctor or the health clinic, Becker said. But she advises parents to call first, to avoid exposing a waiting room full of people to the disease. "And check your immunizations," Becker said. "Make sure you are current."

Man takes 4 hostages, then releases them after talk with mom

SOUTH SALT LAKE, Utah (AP) — A 26-year-old man talked with his mother before releasing four hostages unharmed from a Taco Bell restaurant and turning himself over to police Friday afternoon. South Salt Lake Police Capt. Drew Long identified the hostage-taker as Gino Montoya, who used a police officer's gun to take the hostages just before noon. Two or three shots were fired inside the restaurant on State Street near 21st Street, but there were no injuries. Long said Montoya was booked into Salt Lake County Jail for investigation of 14 counts of aggravated kidnapping. Bail was not immediately set. The man had demanded to talk with his girlfriend and mother, and his mother arrived and spoke with him by phone at about 2 p.m. Montoya released the hostages within minutes and walked out the restaurant into a phalanx of officers.

Stacey Strebel, a manager at Wendy's, said the man banged on the car at the window, but the driver refused to give up her car. "I had the gun to her head and he said 'Give me your car. She said no,'" Strebel said. The driver pulled away and the man, seeing Jewkes running toward him, ran to the Taco Bell next door. He initially held at about 12 hostages, but several were allowed to leave by the back door. Long said most of the hostages were employees. At one point, Montoya asked a hostage to get beer from a nearby convenience store. Police, however, intercepted the hostage on her mission and didn't allow her to return. Another hostage was sent to tell police of Montoya's demands, but returned to the car he had told her he would start cers. One hostage who was allowed to leave told a KSL reporter that the man acted crazy. "He says that he's not going to kill anybody but himself. Then he changes his mind and says he's going to kill everybody," the witness said. Long said Montoya flashed gang signs while in the restaurant. Jewkes was taken from the scene by ambulance because of emotional distress, but later was reportedly doing well. Long said the officer had been placed on administrative leave, which is standard procedure in such cases.

Batt: Disclosure of assets would be good idea

BOISE (AP) — Last month, Gov. Phil Batt made an unprecedented disclosure of his personal assets and net worth, and placed his holdings into a blind trust while he is governor. He said Friday it wouldn't be a bad idea to require all future governors to make a similar disclosure. "I wouldn't object to such a law," he said Friday, during the taping of the weekend "Viewpoint" program on KTVB. "It might not be a bad idea to require the chief executive to give a financial statement. I see nothing which would infringe on his rights doing that," he said. Batt said he would not favor a law requiring the governor to make public several years of income tax returns. "I think that's another matter. They are very personal in nature and involve a lot of other people," Batt said. "I would not favor a bill which would require that." Batt disclosed last month that he and his wife Jacque own farmland and other assets that could be worth up to $1.6 million, and said his net worth is close to that amount. He placed his holdings into a blind trust and said he would sell 400 shares of Idaho Power Co. common stock.

Obituaries

MURTAUGH — Margaret Wolverton, 78, of Murtaugh, died Tuesday, Jan. 31, 1995, at the Cassia Memorial Hospital in Burley, following a brief illness. Margaret was born June 24, 1916, in Santa Ana, Calif., to Alois and Jewel Jamison. She grew up and attended schools in Santa Ana, graduating from Santa Ana High School in 1934. She married Merle Wolverton in 1937, and the couple began farming with her family in Orange County, Calif. In 1965, they moved to Idaho and purchased a farming and cattle operation near Murtaugh.

She loved to cook and will be long remembered for providing huge, delicious meals for both the field workers in days gone by and for her growing family. Her sons, Mike and Dor, continue to operate the Murtaugh family farm today. Survivors include three sons, Gary (Kay) and Mike (Bobbi) of Murtaugh and Don (Georgina) of Twin Falls; and six grandchildren, Blaine, Christa, Gina Dawn and Sarah of Twin Falls; Gary Jr. of Kimberly and Matt of Murtaugh. She was preceded in death by her parents, husband and one sister. The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Monday, Feb. 6, 1995, at Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls. Interment will follow at Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls. Friends may call from 2 to 5 p.m. Monday and from 9 a.m. until the time of the funeral on Monday at the funeral chapel. In lieu of flowers, the family suggests memorials in Margaret's name be made to the Elks Rehabilitation Hospital of Boise or to Cassia Home Health of Burley. Contributions may be left with funeral chapel staff at the time of the funeral or mailed to Reynolds Funeral Chapel, P.O. Box 1142, Twin Falls ID 83303. The family extends a heartfelt thanks to Sharon Shorill and Leo Hartwig for their love and dedication in caring for Margaret.

tritium production facility. "This one doesn't make any more sense than the others," Cooke said. The Energy Dept. held public scoping meetings in the fall of 1993, and the department noted that many members of the public asked why the department was pushing ahead with new nuclear weapons facilities. Many people said the Energy Department needs to figure out what to do with its excess plutonium, and develop safe options for long-term storage of radioactive wastes. Producing tritium also produces radioactive waste, Cooke said, "and if they build a reactor in Idaho, we'll have to deal with that waste — long after the tritium has disappeared." "It's crazy that they're even contemplating this," she said. "The wastes are already coming home to roost (in Idaho), and now they're suggesting creating a whole bunch more of it."

From a global perspective, cranking up production of tritium could be a big step backward in the quest for world peace, Cooke added. "He says that he's not going to kill anybody but himself. Then he changes his mind and says he's going to kill everybody," the witness said. Long said Montoya flashed gang signs while in the restaurant. ## Violence

A self-quitting showing clients how to identify domestic violence should be given to everyone who comes to an appointment alone, said Margaret Howard, lead community health nurse for Twin Falls County. Howard said the quiz also will give clients information about the cycle of abuse, from battering to forgiveness seeking and then back to battery. One important thing to remember is to not try to control victims of domestic violence, which is part of an abusive act, by insisting on when and how they need to get help, said Robin Oliveira, shelter manager for Volunteers Against Violence. "One thing that is really easy to fall into is control," Oliveira advised the public health workers. "It's got to be their decision." Pendleton said domestic violence in the United States is not new: In colonial times, men were allowed to "discipline" their wives under the "rule of thumb," meaning they could beat their wives with a stick no bigger than a man's thumb. "That law has been repealed, but the attitudes have not," she said.

Company

But she said line operators and technicians face less stress: Operators will work 12 hours a day for three days, have three days off, then work 12 hours for four days and have four days off. It helps workers use the extra days off to plan more vacations. She said she likes the computer chip manufacturer's work atmosphere. "I like the whole culture. It's very aggressive in trying new things. It allows me to be very creative," she said. Karen Connolly, internal audit manager at 1981 Twin Falls High School graduate: "I believe they are the most dynamic and progressive corporation in Boise in terms of growth and opportunity and technological challenges for persons of my background." She was in Minneapolis this week, helping Micron to try to acquire Zeos International Corp., another microchip manufacturer. Susan Rowe, government affairs coordinator and 1984 Valley High School graduate: "You get to be rewarded when the company does well. It's a wonderful opportunity to provide some very good jobs in an area outside agriculture. It might be a good way for the valley to diversify its economy." Bridget Bedke, personnel supervisor and 1986 Burley High School graduate: "Because of the size of Micron, you have people from all different cultures and races, and I have personally been able to work with all kinds of people from different backgrounds." Marilyn Whitney, investor relations coordinator and former Twin Falls High School student: "It's been an educational process. It's an exciting place." Micron is challenging and stimulating and has no drawbacks, she added. Jerry Huddleston, material copier and Twin Falls High School graduate: "They're very conscious of legal requirements of (Environmental Pollution Agency) standards that any one community would have. They want to stay within those guidelines. Quite honestly, I can't think of a company I'd rather work for." Ron Rehwalt, administrative supervisor and Minidoka High School graduate: Micron's worker training program is "like a mini-university that has really helped raise the level of workers' knowledge and their opportunities." Phil Romasz, manufacturing planner and Twin Falls High School graduate: "For people willing to work hard and make sacrifices, the sky's the limit. He has a good solid job with a good future, he said.

Once the brain has healed, he will probably travel to UCLA to have a plastic-protective plate inserted into his skull. The accident has put all of Justin's plans for the future on hold, if not destroyed some of his plans completely, his father said. Just a few hours shy of getting his private pilot's license, Justin had hoped to become a commercial pilot. Damage to his sinuses has now ruined any plans of flying in a pressurized cabin. "Justin was in the running for volleyball the limit. He has a good solid job with a good future, he said.

Frosty treasure

JENNIFER BUNCH/The Times-News

Nearly $26,000 worth of ice cream has been used over the past 10 years to perfect the Qwik-Dip hard ice cream "dream machine." Glen Cox, of Burley, one of Qwik-Dip's inventors, demonstrates the machine. At the touch of a button, a ball of hard ice cream can be served every three to seven seconds. Cox said. Investors have started to market the machine across the country, he said. Jim Gillette, also of Burley, and Cox have been working on the machine more than four years, he said, after it was sent to Burley by a Utah inventor.

Reservoir levels will help dry years

The Times-News

OKALEY — All the recent rain and snow has farmers and ranchers smiling.

Mountain snow pack is good, so far, but winter isn't over yet, and southern Idaho has a ways to go to recover from recent dry years.

The area needs at least two years in a row of an above-average snow pack to fill the Oakley Reservoir to a comfortable level, said Phil Morrissy, a hydrologist with the Natural Resources Conservation Service.

"It's good to keep in mind that the reservoirs are still low," Morrissy said, despite a snowpack double what it was last year.

"It's good compared to previous years, but I think everyone was hoping for 20 to 30 percent above average," he said.

The Oakley Reservoir is 12 percent full, Morrissy said. Under normal conditions, the reservoir would be between 30 and 40 percent full, he said.

While the reservoir should provide enough water for farmers and summer recreation, after summer the supply will most likely be below a comfortable level, Morrissy said.

"We could say with some confidence that we're still in a drought. We probably have enough water to get through the season, but the reservoir would almost be empty after the summer," he said.

Melting that has occurred so far is due mostly to rain, Morrissy said, noting that the temperatures haven't been warm enough to cause snow to melt. Snow levels expected through April are uncertain, he said.

"It's encouraging, considering some of the past dry years, that we do have a good snow pack this winter," he said.

CSI center offers career-planning class

BURLEY — A personal career-planning class is set to begin soon at the College of Southern Idaho Mini-Cassia Center.

Susan Westendart will coordinate "Out of the Maze" for men and women who want to explore their career options. Attendance is required at all four classes, which will be held from 1 to 4 p.m. Fridays, beginning Feb. 17. Registration should be completed by Thursday.

Group proposes low-income housing

BURLEY — Twenty-four units of low-income housing could go up in Burley, if bankers are able to arrange the financing.

The Idaho Community Redevelopment Corp., a consortium of 10 banks, has proposed various housing projects across the state, said Ann Lawless, spokeswoman for the Idaho Housing Agency.

The plan for Burley is to build 24 units of housing, 18 of which would be affordable to low-income families, Lawless said. Bankers expect arrangements with developers to close in the second quarter of 1995, she said.

The banks came up with $35 million to loan to developers, Lawless said. If all proposed projects go through, $71 million in low-income housing units will be available across the state, she said. So far, the consortium has opened 261 units, she said.

Practice will refuse Medicaid patients

MOSCOW (AP) — Moscow Family Medicine, Latah County's largest primary health-care provider, has announced it no longer will accept new patients under state Medicaid reimbursement rates.

Peter Berger, medical management administrator for Moscow Family Medicine, said the cost of care for Medicaid recipients has increased 25 percent in the last year.

The seven-physician practice has had to write off most of that expense, he said, because it is reimbursed only about 60 percent of what it usually would charge.

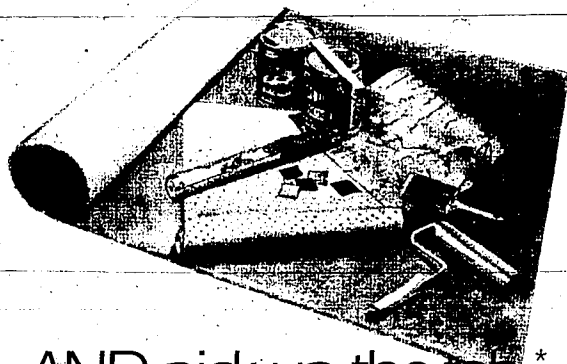

"We don't really want to do this but at the same time we are a business," said Dr. Dan Schmidt, Latah County coroner and a physician at Moscow Family Medicine.

Berger said the practice would still see established Medicaid patients, as well as the poor who are in need of prenatal care and all children.

He said Moscow Family Medicine did not want to be a boutique clinic caring for the rich and healthy, but in order for it to retain physicians the practice must adequately compensate them for their work.

"None of us ended up doing what we are doing to say we don't want to see patients," Berger said. "We know we are doing our share and even with the changes we still feel we are doing our share."

Small staffs, slow growth boost state aid to schools

The Associated Press

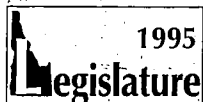

BOISE — Slower-than-expected enrollment growth and below-capacity staffing in some school districts combined this winter to increase the amount of state aid going to every classroom in the state.

In fact, the support package will provide $96 per-classroom—more than educators expected in money they are allowed to spend any way—even though most districts have no choice but to use the cash for such basic operating expenses as utility bills.

State Schools Superintendent Anne Fox told the Senate Education Committee Friday she would officially declare the $620.5 million state appropriation for the 1994-1995 school year sufficient for distribution formula demands.

That declaration is required under the new formula enacted last year to short-circuit the court challenge by some school districts to the adequacy of the state's financial commitment to quality education.

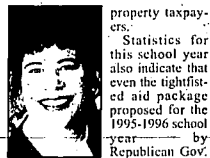

Analysts said enrollment statewide was up by less than 4,900—2,000 students under the original estimate. Combined with the fact that some districts did not have the full complement of teachers and administrators authorized by the formula for state reimbursement, that more than offset the fact that teachers and administrators on the job around the state had more seniority and education than initially anticipated.

The net result is that districts statewide will get $531 per classroom to spend without any strings attached rather than the $435 they expected. That is on top of the state's per-classroom earmarked for improved safety and curriculum and school supplies.

The new formula determines how many teachers and other employees each district can bill the state for and what their basic salary and benefit payments are based on experience and education. Districts can hire more staff or pay higher salaries, but the extra cost must be borne by local property taxpayers. Statistics for this school year also indicate that even the tightfisted aid package proposed for the 1995-1996 school year by Republican Gov. Phil Batt probably will meet the formula requirements, although analysts believe it would provide little if any discretionary cash for the 112 districts.

The formula also earmarks $300 per classroom for improved safety next year and there is no special disbursement for curriculum or supplies.

The smaller-than-expected enrollment increase this year reflected a slowdown in the economic expansion that has attracted tens of thousands of people to Idaho from other states.

That could translate into enrollment growth in the next school year below the 8,000 now projected, which would mean less from the state aid package would be siphoned off for salaries and benefits.

Court: County made legal decision

BOISE — The Ada County Commission made a legal decision in an industry case, the Idaho Supreme Court says, instead of making a factual finding. The court Friday voided an order from the commission refusing supplemental aid to three residents of a residential care facility. The court said that was a legal decision, and the county commissioners had no authority to make it. The case was sent back to the county for further proceedings. William and Barbara Slobo, operators of a residential care center, requested supplemental aid from the county. They argued the needy people in their care received $762 in federal and state benefits, but their actual cost of care is $1,200. The court said the determination of whether someone is "indigent" requires an analysis of the reasonable costs of care and income or assets available. "This is clearly a factual, not legal determination," the court said.

Officials say fire was deliberately set

IDAHO FALLS — Investigators think someone tried to burn down the house of an Idaho Falls man killed Tuesday in a California gun battle. Robert Carl Benson, 37, died at the scene of the shooting in a desert area about five miles north of Indio, Calif. Louis Bynington, 38, also of Idaho Falls, was shot six times but was released Thursday after two days in the hospital. A third person, Danny Ysiano, 22, of Coconella, Calif., was in serious condition with a single gunshot wound. A fourth man remained at large, said Sgt. Wayne Walker of the Riverside Sheriff's Department. The remaining suspect may be from the Idaho Falls area, and he apparently drove to California with Bynington and Benson, Walker said. The fire at Benson's Idaho Falls home was discovered by his sister Friday morning when she arrived to finish packing his belongings, according to a police report. The fire caused minimal damage before fire crews responded, but investigators think arson was the cause.

Judge finds senator's permit valid

IDAHO FALLS — Seventh District Judge Ted Wood has settled a dispute between Bonneville County and state Sen. Stan Hawkins over a 1.32-acre square-foot strip of undeveloped property. The six-month-long squabble finally was decided in Hawkins' favor. Wood ruled in an 11-page decision that the Udon Republic obtained a valid license to use the land, and the county has no right to revoke it. The land in question originally belonged to the city of Udon, which had it platted as an alley separating Hawkins' Udon property and a county work shed.

Homeless task force receives state grant

SANDPOINT — The Bonner County Homeless Task Force's program of helping families get back on their feet has won it a $446,000 grant. The non-profit group on Thursday announced it received the three-year Supportive Housing Grant from the Idaho Department of Housing and Urban Development. "The money will come in handy, we have a lot of needs for it," said task force member Barbara Woodruff. The funds will go to such things as case management, transportation and medical care for people at the Blue Haven shelter.

BLM director sees role as mediator

BOISE — The new Idaho director of the U.S. Bureau of Land Management says her job is ensuring the agency is not considered the "Bureau of Livestock and Mining." But the Idaho Conservation League does not expect Martha Hahn to be a "green" — a rabid environmentalist. Hahn took over as the BLM's Idaho director in mid-January, and will be sworn in Wednesday by the man who appointed her, acting BLM Director Mike Dombek. She will control management of 11.9 million acres; nearly one-fourth of the state.

Evidence of disease found in drug raid

IDAHO FALLS — A small outbreak of a potentially deadly strain of viral hepatitis has prompted law enforcement authorities to warn intravenous drug users about the danger of sharing needles. In a drug raid Wednesday at an Idaho Falls house, authorities found evidence some of the residents had "hepatitis C," said Craig Peterson, regional director of the Idaho Bureau of Narcotics. "We want the word out there that if people are going to be stupid enough to be IV drug users, then they need to be aware of this," he said. There is no cure or vaccine for hepatitis C, and a person can become a contagious carrier without showing any symptoms, said Bobbe Crump, nurse epidemiologist and acting physical health director of the District 7 Health Department.

Officers capture dog after it bit 3 people

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — An animal control officer spent more than four hours chasing a 160-pound dog that had attacked and bitten three people before it was cornered on a patio and captured.

Animal control officer Debra Myers said her ordeal began when a 17-year-old boy was bitten on the hand Wednesday night in front of a restaurant on Washington Boulevard. "The animal charged him" and nearly took off a finger, Myers said.

Fifteen minutes later, the dog, named Grizzly, stopped an 18-year-old man attempting to go into his yard. "He said it lunged at him and sank its teeth into his thigh. He let go, she screamed like a girl and it hit go," she said.

Although she chased the dog for 90 minutes, it avoided capture and she called off the hunt for the night. But at 12:30 a.m. Thursday, she was notified the dog had bit another person. "This time, David Dean, 30, said he was out walking when the dog came "out of nowhere" and ran at him.

Fearing a mauling, Dean said he dropped to his knees to wrestle with the animal and was bitten on the arm and scratched on a leg. "I was thinking I wasn't going to make it home without getting bit some more. I was lucky I didn't get bit harder... I wouldn't want to do it again!" Myers said Dean had bite marks from elbow to wrist. The animal was captured four hours later. "You can't outrun animals," Myers said. "They can go under vehicles and come out on the other side before you can bend down and look. You don't really want to put your face down there anyway, especially when you're dealing with an aggressive dog."

"I mean, it's terrifying when you have a dog that is all teeth and it is coming toward you and all you have is a little pole to protect yourself." The dog was locked up at the Ogden Animal Shelter. The three bite victims were taken to hospitals and treated and released.

Myers said Friday authorities do not yet know if the unleashed dog had been vaccinated against rabies but it will be watched while it is held. Rabies symptoms generally show up within about five days.

Although Myers said officials know where the dog lives, they remain unsure of the owner's identity. "We had someone come forward and say it was their dog and they had been looking for it, and when they found out they were going to be issued a citation for a dangerous dog, it suddenly became her mother's dog."

For men, lies are 2nd nature

LM. Boyd
What's what?

On the matter of telling lies, Helen Rowland, author of Unpopular Lies and War on Lies, theorizes, "Telling lies is a fault in a boy, an art in a lover, an accomplishment in a bachelor, and second-nature in a married man."

Typical lifespan of a cow is 30 years. And you can say as much of a termite.

Underground, in Poland's vast Wieliczka salt mine over 700 years, countless work horses never saw daylight. There they were born. There they died.

Among the Deques are social groups of people who like to get together and cook.

A client corrects: "As a stamp collector of 40 years, I can assure you there's no U.S. postage stamp that depicts John F. Kennedy, Jr., as a man joy-riding a flag at his father's funeral. However, it may appear on the stamp of some other country."

If the hen's egg is four times the width of the male's head, it will take the snailk about 20 minutes to swallow it. Students of such have stopwatched the performance.

Q. Coca-Cola's recipe is supposedly secret. Likewise Kentucky Fried Chicken's. And countless others. Which is the oldest of them all?

A. Benedictine, the liqueur first concocted in 1510 by Dom Bernardo Vincelli at a Benedictine Abbey. It, too, has had many imitators.

If you put the popcorn plus a little water in a sealed jar and keep it in the refrigerator overnight, it'll pop better, I'm told.

Q. Where have most of the dinosaur fossils been discovered?

A. North America.

Our Love and War man reports the average matrimonial engagement now lasts 14 months. That's five maybe six months longer than 19 years ago.

Q. Are tsunamis less dangerous to cruise ships?

A. Not at sea. Waves go so deep and crest so far apart, surface waves rise as little as an inch a mile. Ship passengers feel it little if at all. It's the massive pile-up against the land that's sometimes so catastrophic.

Despite the presence of the high-powered stars from the 49ers and Cowboys on the NFC side, the AFC, which hasn't won a Super Bowl since the Los Angeles Raiders did it in 1984, actually has matched up fairly well with the NFC in the Pro Bowl over that span.

Making a place for everyone

Spiritualists at start of women's movement

You probably think the feminist movement started back in the 1960s, a fairly recent movement that has come under intense criticism during the past decade by Christians who promote so-called family values.

But the truth is — at least according to a new scholarly book about feminism's link to the 19th century Spiritualist movement — the assault on free women from a male-dominated society began before the Civil War. And its principal leaders were women who went around the country demonstrating their ability to communicate with the dead.

Clark Morphew
Faith today

This was startling news to me when I sat down with Ann Braude, a professor of religious studies at Macalester College in St. Paul. She has written "Radical Spirits" (Beacon Press, $15), which demonstrates how Spiritualism gave women the voice they needed to break away from virtual slavery.

One of the unwritten rules for women before the Civil War (1861-1865) was that females could not speak publicly. If they had something to say to a wide audience, they either found a man to make the point or they kept the thought to themselves. Which meant, of course, that those ideas of liberation that were already festering in women's minds never got expressed.

But when Spiritualism became the vogue in the late 1840s, women not only had a reason to speak in public but also had permission because people, especially men, believed spirits of the dead were speaking through women rather than women speaking their own thoughts. Braude says there were 200 women before the Civil War who traveled the United States and made their living convincing audiences that they could go into trances and that the dead would speak through them.

During those long speeches, the early Spiritualists challenged the very foundations of a culture designed by men for their own comfort and power. The first Spiritualists, Braude says, were "theological anarchists" because they challenged virtually every authority and did it with the credibility of the angels.

"Spiritualism allowed women to cut through the authority of the church, clergy, even the Bible," Braude says. "They challenged slave holders' power over slaves, husbands' over wives. It was a transitional moment in women finding their own voice."

This group of women were a lively and interesting bunch. Susan B. Anthony was a Spiritualist who used the religion to push her views on women's suffrage. When women were finally allowed to vote in 1919, the primary votes that had called for that change in law were the popular trance-speaking women of the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

And they drew an influential crowd that included novelists, poets, well-heeled businessmen, journalists and even politicians, including Abraham Lincoln and his wife, Mary Todd Lincoln, who believed she could communicate with her dead son, Willie.

In some cases, the Spiritualists railed against marriage and advocated free love. One popular Spiritualist speaker, Victoria Woodhull, tried to mount a campaign for president.

They held séances for small groups. In camp meetings and concert halls, women in trances claimed that spirits spoke through them. They drew thousands of listeners, and their speeches almost always contained some message about women's liberation.

TWIN FALLS — Smack dab in the middle of Twin Falls, Idaho — "Conservative-ville, U.S.A." — is a small, but growing, group of people known as the Unitarian Universalist Fellowship.

These people call themselves a haven for religious liberalism in a very traditional area. Their denominational literature uses even stronger words: The Unitarian Universalist movement is a "refuge for liberals, a haven for heretics, a shelter for skeptics."

How do such individuals fare in a hothouse of conformity? Just fine, thank you, they say. Their major problem is that few people know who they are.

Where to meet

The Unitarian Universalist Fellowship of Twin Falls meets at 10:30 a.m. the second and fourth Sundays of each month at the White House, 365 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. Coffee is served following the morning service. Call 734-6551 for more information or to be placed on a mailing list.

"People ask me, 'What is this Unitarian Church?'" said Karen Fothergill, a lifelong Unitarian. (Unitarians are not "Moonies," though they probably wouldn't turn one away.)

The Boston-based Unitarian Universalist Association, which traces its American roots back to the Massachusetts settlers, actually grew out of the 1961 consolidation of two religious denominations, the Universalists and the Unitarians. Members believe — strongly — in the right to make up one's own mind about what one believes.

There is an old anecdote (reprinted in one Unitarian pamphlet) about a group of liberals coming to a fork in the road. On one sign are the words, "To heaven." On the other, "To a discussion about heaven." Without hesitation, the Unitarian Universalists choose their course. They wouldn't think of missing a discussion.

In a Unitarian congregation, you might find an agnostic sitting beside someone who believes in a personal God. The church makes no official pronouncements on God, the Bible, Jesus or immortality. Members are free to wonder about, or even doubt, the existence of God, the effectiveness of prayer or the value of scripture. They believe that religious wisdom is everchanging and that revelation is continuous.

"In the end," according to the Unitarian Universalist Association, "religious authority lies not in a book or person or institution, but in ourselves."

"We appeal to people who long ago gave up on the idea of organized religion," said Julie Fanselow, a Unitarian who was raised in the Lutheran church. "In my teens, I started having questions because I really wanted to live a good life, but I couldn't believe everything I had been told."

Fanselow, with Monica Tognetti, started the local fellowship two years ago. The group now numbers nearly two dozen.

That's how the Twin Falls Unitarians became one of approximately 1,000 congregations, numbering some 200,000 people, in the United States. Before the Twin Falls church was organized, Unitarian congregations closest to Twin Falls were in Boise and Pocatello.

Like many of the smaller Unitarian fellowships, the Twin Falls group is lay-led. Like all Unitarian fellowships, it's also self-governing.

The church has no creed, which often

Survey tackles eternal question: Your money or your spiritual life?

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Jesus said no one can serve the dual masters of God and money, but he has not convinced a majority of well-off Americans.

In a national survey on faith and finances, nearly two-thirds of lower-income Americans agreed with Jesus' admonition, but less than half of the respondents earning more than $50,000 agreed.

Meanwhile, poorer Americans were most likely to count their financial blessings, ask God for guidance on financial affairs and believe their financial situation is a reflection of God's regard for them.

The findings show that while church leaders are often stereotyped as being preoccupied with money, in practice many clergy are uncomfortable with the topic and avoid it, said a leading researcher on religious giving.

"I think basically, in our society, the church has not provided a constructive agenda, or even a theological context, for money," said Sylvia Ronvalde of the Champaign, Ill.-based research organization empty tomb inc. "People don't know what a biblical approach to money is."

A random sample of 1,000 people were interviewed by telephone in the faith and money survey conducted last fall by Louisa Harris & Associates for the Minneapolis-based Lutheran Brotherhood, a nonprofit insurance and financial services company. The survey had a margin of error of plus or minus three points.

incomes of $25,000 and less, have thanked God for their financial well-being.

Seventy percent of the respondents, including three-quarters of those in the lowest income group, said their own financial situation reflected God's regard for them either a great deal or somewhat.

The positive response does not mean lower-income people think God holds them in low regard, Thoreson said.

Rather, she said, "I think they do feel God is taking care of them, and they are grateful."

In findings resonant of Scriptural passages, a substantial gulf emerged between richer and poorer Americans in their attitudes toward money.

Numerous passages in the Bible warn against placing too much emphasis on possessions. In a famous saying in the Gospel of Mark, at the end of a parable in which a rich man rejects the faith rather than give his money to the poor, Jesus says "It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for someone who is rich to enter the kingdom of God."

In the Gospels of Luke and Matthew, Jesus says pointedly that no one can serve two masters: "You cannot serve God and wealth."

In response to a survey question framed in the biblical language, 65 percent of both the lower- and middle-income respondents agreed with the statement "You cannot serve both God and money." Forty-seven percent of the respondents earning more than $50,000 agreed, while 48 percent disagreed.

More than three-quarters of the lower-income respondents also agreed that the love of money is the root of all evil. Half of the high-income respondents disagreed.

Church news

Scouts will celebrate organization's anniversary

TWIN FALLS — Cub Pack and Boy Scout Troop 65, in conjunction with the First Christian Church, will commemorate the 85th anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America during the 10:50 a.m. worship Sunday at the church, 601 Shoshone St. N.

Youth Director Michael C. Twile will present the message, "Doing a Good Deed Daily," and Cub and Boy Scouts will participate in the service. A reception honoring past and present scouts, scouters and guests and celebrating the church's continued sponsorship of scouting activities since 1924 will be held after worship. The public is invited.

Speaker at First Assembly to talk on life, faith

TWIN FALLS — Duane Parrish will speak at 10:50 a.m. Sunday at the First Assembly of God, 189 N. Locust.

According to Pastor Ted Britain, Parrish underwent a major brain operation a few years ago and was unable to read, write or speak for some time. Parrish will tell his story of human despair, divine power, healing and the power of a grateful spirit. Britain says the positive faith and spiritual insight with which Parrish speaks will inspire courage to face life and deal realistically with doubts, fear, conflicts and obstacles.

Preaching 'peace of mind' demands living it every day

For the past quarter century, there has been an inordinate emphasis on so-called "peace of mind." The watchwords of our society seem to have become security, contentment and comfort. Our desire is to avoid the unpleasant and find release from the tensions of life. After all, didn't Jesus himself say, "My peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you?"

What we often fail to remember is that these words were spoken just a short time before the crucifixion in the garden, the trial and the execution.

For too many today, the desperate search for peace of mind is an effort to find a spiritual narcotic or a tranquilizer that will put the mind in a state in which it will not be bothered by the radical disturbances of a critically ill patient. To witness the complacency often evidenced in some of the churches, one would be led to believe such a tranquilizer had been found.

Can I sit in my house in comfort and complacency if my neighbor is starving and dying? But then that raises the old question, who is my neighbor? Is it the refugee from Haiti, the homeless from Bosnia, the hungry, suffering millions of our world? Can I put faces on these statistics and not be profoundly moved and disturbed? Can I walk through the blighted areas and slums of the inner city or the desolation and poverty of some of our Indian reservations, witness the bitterness and racial hatred that still exists in this land of freedom or observe the rising tide of immorality and delinquency and not cry out with Paul, "I have a great sorrow and unceasing anguish in my heart?"

Have we developed a superficial piety in our churches that substitutes "going to church" for "being the church?"

About the Rev. Robert Smith

The Rev. Robert Smith was raised in Illinois and earned a bachelor of divinity degree at the Northern Baptist Seminary in Chicago.

Smith pastored in the inner-city area of Chicago for seven years and directed a community center on the south side of the city. He served as the executive minister for the American Baptist Churches of Idaho and Utah for 19 years, retiring 11 years ago. Since his retirement, he has served as an interim pastor for a number of churches in the Magic Valley. He and his wife, Dorothy, live in Twin Falls. They have two daughters and four grandchildren.

We need to stop seeking and preaching "peace of mind" as an end in itself, rather, find and teach it as a gift of God—given as a result of the losing of ourselves in the service of Christ.

The Times-News invites area clergy to submit columns of 400 words or less. Column topics can include a point of doctrine, religious perspective on current events or social commentary. Send columns to Denise Turner, assistant features editor, Box 548, Twin Falls, ID 83303.

Sound and fury of Chelyabinsk reveal need for God

CHELZYABINSK, Russia — As evening comes in Chelyabinsk, the picturesque sights and sounds of the Russian culture bring another day of adventure to a close.

A common saying is, "To live in Russia, you must be willing to go through the worst of life every day, with no hope for anything better; then if the better ever comes, you must not hope for more, or you will be miserably hoping all your life."

Located twelve time zones on the other side of the world from southern Idaho, the giant city of Chelyabinsk, quietly down as darkness creeps across the Ural Mountains, signaling a change of pace for its million-plus inhabitants. The people have come through another day without many of the comforts so common in other countries. They have come through another day without God.

Yet, as sure as the sun sets and then rises again, the need of all people are awakening to their need of finding the God that, for many years, they thought did not exist.

Almost every day, schools and places of business and families contact us, asking if we will come

Common sense rules in Russian town

The Russian people are carving out a good life using God-given common sense and lots of determination.

All walkways are now covered with a solid sheet of thick ice, so the people are ice-skating. Children are sliding along on their way to school, while women dressed in elegant fur coats and high-heeled boots are passing them by.

These people give a short kick with one foot, then slide for three or four feet, kick again and slide along, all the way to their destinations. We Americans hold ourselves rigid, fearful of slipping and falling down, while these folks are enjoying a bit of recreation that is only available when the icy winter comes.

Setting up recycling programs isn't necessary here because there are few plastic bags and aluminum cans to litter God's world. Anyone who owns a bag uses it over and over again to carry home eggs, potatoes, and other daily needs.

Every evening we hear a steady "whap, whap, whap," as families take turns beating their carpets thrown across racks in the courtyard. This is a daily chore, usually involving the entire family. When there is fresh snow, the carpets are spread with snow, then swept clean. This serves as a refreshing freeze-dry cleaning method.

When you don't have a vacuum cleaner, you use whatever God has given.

New Senate chaplain faces lawsuit over counseling

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Rev. Lloyd John Ogilvie, the Hollywood minister elected as U.S. Senate chaplain last week, is the target of a lawsuit by a woman who claims he talked her out of having an abortion after she became pregnant by an elder in Ogilvie's church, then refused to counsel her further despite her attempt at suicide.

Elisabeth Saret, 29, claims that Ogilvie assigned her to elder Clifford H. Woosley, 44, for "spiritual counseling" and that when she became pregnant, Ogilvie told her to give the child to Woosley and his wife to raise. Saret gave birth to the child she had with Woosley in February 1994.

Ogilvie said in a telephone interview Monday that he did counsel the pregnant Saret and was "saddened by her situation. But some of the things she has said are not true."

The lawsuit was filed in Los Angeles Superior Court on Jan. 6, two weeks before Ogilvie was nominated to the Senate post by Majority Leader Robert J. Dole, R-Kan. Saret is suing Ogilvie, Woosley and the First Presbyterian Church of Hollywood, which Ogilvie pastors, for fraud and intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Ogilvie said he did not mention the lawsuit in applying and interviewing for the chaplaincy position because "I did not know the content of the accusations; I felt it would be confusing at that point to bring it up." He said he knew there was to be a lawsuit only because of a telephone inquiry from a reporter at the National Law Journal. As of Monday, Ogilvie said he has not been served with legal papers.

Ogilvie, 64, is scheduled to assume the duties of chaplain on March 13. The chaplain opens most Senate sessions with a two-minute prayer and is available to counsel the senators and the Senate's 6,000 staff members. A six-member or seven-member committee of senators chose Ogilvie from a pool of 206 candidates for the $115,700-a-year post.

Ogilvie is the host of a daily radio show and a nationally syndicated television show. His Presbyterian church, with more than 3,500 members, is one of the denomination's largest.

Saret worked as a clerk for Woosley's Los Angeles law firm. In a companion lawsuit filed last November, Saret is suing Woosley and his firm, Gilbert, Kelly, Crowley & Bennett, for sexual harassment and wrongful termination. Her attorney would not comment.

Ogilvie says that Woosley and Saret met in the workplace and not through the church. Saret is not a member of Ogilvie's church but had attended services there, Ogilvie said. He said that he counseled her because he knew she was involved romantically with Woosley, who resigned as a church elder.

A parishioner embraces the Rev. George Kuhn following Mass at St. Brigid's Roman Catholic Church, where he has preached for more than a decade and is now leaving.

Parting is such sweet sorrow for priest, N.Y. congregation

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Inside St. Brigid's Church on the Lower East Side, parishioners wept as "Padre Jorge" preached his farewell sermon.

Across the street in Tompkins Square Park, the site of frequent clashes between police and demonstrators, leather-jacketed anarchists said they, too, would miss the Rev. George Kuhn.

Kuhn, a Roman Catholic priest, spent his eight years at St. Brigid's feeding squatters, championing a proposed shelter for people with AIDS and generally making himself unpopular with authorities.

For a man dubbed "finbrand cleric" in a tabloid headline, he seemed mild-mannered as he celebrated his final Mass there on Jan. 15.

Wearing thick glasses and green vestments, the 56-year-old priest came down from the lectern and delivered his homily in the aisle, in Spanish, surrounded by worshippers.

He said the church is not immune from racism: "The most segregated hour of the week is 11 a.m. on Sunday, because everyone goes to their own church."

This did not appear to be true at St. Brigid's, where black and Puerto Rican parishioners mingled with a sprinkling of orange-haired punks.

Most stayed after the service to kiss Kuhn goodbye. When Kuhn came to St. Brigid's in 1986, he already had four arrests — for anti-war and anti-nuclear protests — under his clerical collar. Once there, he was arrested several more times for crossing a police barricade to feed squatters who had taken over an abandoned school.

Someone asked Kuhn about his boss, Cardinal John O'Connor, who had turned 75 that day and offered his resignation — routine in such cases, and not immediately accepted — to the Vatican.

"Every time I've been arrested down here, he's called and said, 'Right on,'" Kuhn said.

Not everyone has been so supportive: Parks Commissioner Henry Stern said Kuhn's departure "is definitely an event to celebrate."

"The Rev. Kuhn, who is a fine man, always allied himself with the homeless and drug users and other people who were trying to take over Tompkins Square Park," Stern said. "I suspect he'll do fine work elsewhere, where there's not an urban park."

Whatever Stern might wish for, Kuhn is not being removed from St. Brigid's because of his activism; it is just time for him to move on. He will take a 3- to 6-month sabbatical before accepting a new pastoral assignment.

Killer bees kill teen son of missionaries

RICHMOND, Va. — The 14-year-old son of a missionary couple assigned to Panama died when a swarm of African killer bees drove him off a mountain cliff, the Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board said Tuesday.

Andrew Nicholson, son of Glenn and Pauline Nicholson, was climbing in the Chame Mountains with a classmate during a school-sponsored camping trip Saturday when they were attacked near a ridge by the swarm.

The boys ran along the ridge to escape the stinging bees; but Nicholson, who was allergic to bee stings, stopped, swatted at the bees, lost his balance and fell nearly 100 feet, according to the classmate, Andrew Scoble, 16.

Mormons sound call for foster care

SALT LAKE CITY — Mormon leaders are urging church members to consider Gov. Mike Leavitt's plea for citizens to provide foster care for needy children.

In a statement issued Tuesday, the faith's governing First Presidency said such children, regardless of religious affiliation, "need the care of kind, loving parents who will soothe, comfort and provide a safe environment for them."

In his State of the State address, Leavitt appealed to "good people to do what government can't do and that's be a family to a child who isn't safe going home."

The address by the state's Mormon chief executive followed by 36 months a similar appeal by Gordon B. Hinckley, first counselor to President Howard W. Hunter in the First Presidency of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Leaders urged those interested in becoming foster parents to contact the state Division of Family Services by dialing 538-HOME.

Bolivia, Brazil to have LDS temples

SALT LAKE CITY — Mormon church leaders have announced plans to build temples in Bolivia and Brazil.

The proposed temple in Cochabamba, Bolivia, would be the first in that country, while the Recife, Brazil, temple would be Brazil's second, according to the First Presidency of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

A temple in Sao Paulo, Brazil, was completed in 1978.

The Mormon church has 47 temples throughout the world and another 11 temples in various stages of planning or construction.

Baptist church fights alcohol at arena

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Members of a Baptist church close to a new downtown arena have voted to fight the sale of alcohol at the arena.

City officials have expressed optimism they can work out their differences with the Downtown First Baptist Church, but said for now the two sides have agreed to disagree.

The 20,000-seat arena is being built 15 feet too close to the church to qualify for a city beer permit. Slated to be finished in August 1996, the arena is four blocks from the world headquarters of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Book puts '90s spin on Jesus Christ's life

Chicago Tribune

Lee Strobel is a walking, talking irony.

He's an ex-journalist who once turned his back on the Chicago Tribune's fast track to run a small-town newspaper. A former atheist who became an assistant pastor at Willow Creek Community Church, a non-denominational church in South Barrington, Ill., that's one of the largest in the country. A pastor who shuns the "reverend" tag — "just Lee," he says — at a church that lets visitors (many of whom aren't Christians) to ignore the collection plate — this rock-infected, humor-infected service is on the house. And he's also an author whose book about Jesus is attracting attention far afield from the stained-glass crowd.

Nor long ago, Strobel is behind a microphone on downtown Chicago to be grilled by listeners on "The Catherine Johns Show" on WLS Radio. His book, "What Jesus Really Said" (Zondervan), has the audacity to say that what happens if Jesus had chats with the likes of Madonna (the singer, not his mom), Bill Clinton, Rush Limbaugh and Bart Simpson.

"Jesus was unpredictable," said Strobel a couple of weeks later in a living room in his northwest suburban home. "He was always saying the unexpected."

In that vein, it could be said that Strobel's new book is check-full of tales of the unexpected. The very title is raising a few eyebrows — and hackles. In exploring what he thinks Jesus would say to modern celebrities, Strobel is striving to make religion relevant to a cynical contemporary world. But isn't purporting to speak for God a bit, ahem, presumptuous?

"First of all," Strobel says, "I'm not pretending to have divine revelation from God, but that Jesus would say to these people, Whenever a preacher gets into the pulpit on Sunday, what's he doing? He's in effect saying, 'This is what I believe Jesus would tell us today about our life circumstances.' Where does he get that information? He gets it by reading the Bible and seeing what Jesus taught."

As for as Madonna is concerned, Strobel says he thinks Jesus "would see by her own admission that it's her sense of mediocrity and her desire to overcome that that's driving her — it's a self-esteem issue." Jesus, opines Strobel, would look beyond Madonna the media icon to see Madonna the person, someone who lost her mother at a young age and who was "torn off" by the trappings of traditional religion.

If people have a less than compassionate concept of God, Strobel lays the blame on his own word. He blames evangelical Christians.

"In many ways, it's become an us-versus-them mentality," he says. "A lot of Christians become insular and rail against those in disagreement."

Often, Strobel says, Christians are like the goofy neighbors on "The Simpsons." On a recent episode, he relates, "the neighbor was gone for a while. When Homer and Marge saw her, they said, 'Where have you been?' And she said, 'I've been at a Christian camp learning to be more judgmental.'"

The Fox cartoon has been a lightning rod for criticism, and that hasn't been limited to the Christian crowd. Some schools and libraries, you might recall, once banned Bart Simpson. T-shirts with Bart Simpson's name on them are also being sold.

In one episode, Bart was in danger of flunking out of the 4th grade. He had to pass a test he hadn't studied for. So he asked for a one-day reprieve. He says, "This is hopeless. Well, Old Timer, I guess this is Madonna sits with her father, Tony Ciccone, in 1992. A new book by a former journalist and now assistant pastor has written 'What Jesus Would Say,' which included speculation at what the rock singer and Christ would talk about.

the end of the road. I know I haven't been a good kid, but I have to go to school tomorrow. I'll fail the test and be held back. I just need one more day to study. Lord, I need your help. A teacher strikes, a power failure, a blizzard — anything that will cancel school tomorrow. I know it's asking a lot, but if anyone can do it, you can. Thanking you in advance, your pal, Bart Simpson."

Bart, a notorious bad kid, prayed from the heart, and Jesus might say, "I caught you doing something good," Strobel says.

During Strobel's Tribune years, his coverage of the Pinto Case (a series exposing the Ford Pinto's propensity to explode after a collision) grew into a book called "Reckless Homicide," which has been used as a supplementary text in some law schools.

Strobel remembers a different side, and the view from inside wasn't pretty. He remembers the workaholicism, the carousing, smuggling official documents out of federal court — temporarily, of course — to beat the Sun-Times. He remembers the cavalier way he'd interview crime victims and parents whose children had died, thinking only of his byline and never of their pain.

Those, he says, were some of the reasons he joined his wife as a spectator at Willow Creek in 1980, armed with an attitude and a reporter's notebook — he was sure he'd find some scandal, he says.

After 18 months of investigating the historical and archeological basis for Christianity, he found himself persuaded.

Redemption is possible, even with murder

By Paul Galloway Chicago Tribune

Commentary

CHICAGO — In "I Want to Tell You," O.J. Simpson indicates he has devoted much time and effort to reading, praying with evangelist Rosey Grier and discussions about scripture with Paula Barbieri, a model who has posed in the altogether for Playboy and whom Simpson describes as "very spiritual."

"These revelations are not surprising to people in trouble often turn to God."

"For many of us, our backs had to be up against the wall before God got our attention," says the Rev. Marvin C. Manar, chaplain at the state juvenile correctional institution in St. Charles, Ill.

Former heroin user who served time in prison. Stateville for drug possession and armed robbery before a conversion experience outside the walls, Manar opines: "I'll bet O.J. has called God many times these last months. You might see a conversion of him before it's over."

Although conversions typically occur when an inmate confesses his crime, repents and vows to lead a new life.

Simpson, of course, maintains his innocence, so such a scenario now seems remote.

However, if it happens that he's guilty as charged and at some point admits his culpability, expresses remorse and is forgiven under the tenets of Christianity, some will question not only his sincerity but also the matter of forgiveness itself.

Are there no limits? Isn't forgiveness an affront to victims? How can we know redemption is real?

The story of Vaughan Booker dramatically addresses these concerns.

Growing up in Philadelphia, Booker was an Eagle Scout, an altar boy, a track star in high school.

At 18, he married Annabelle Banks; they had two children and a troubled marriage undermined by his drinking and philandering.

In 1967, when he was 25, his wife told him she had been seeing a man who was the true father of their 1-year-old son. A skilled archer, Booker killed her with five metal-tipped arrows.

She died forward to June 17, 1992. That's when Booker, was ordained an Episcopal priest; today, he's rector of Meade Memorial Church in Alexandria, Va.

"You can trace his transformation in 'From Prison to Pulpit: My Road to Redemption.' He wrote the book to show others there is hope, no matter what they have done. Sentenced to life for first-degree murder, he was befriended by an Episcopal priest, received a college degree, was ordained a deacon, had his sentence commuted, was paroled in 1982, became a Xerox salesman and entered a seminary in 1989.

Booker says he was inspired by Moses, King David and St. Paul, chosen by God despite their involvement in killing.

"These stories showed me that people can change, that all things are possible through God's mercy. How deeply mined we may be in our sin or our guilt or our anger. I made a decision to repent and accept my punishment. Some people want to hear remorse in my voice; they want to see me beating my chest and wearing sackcloth. But it's been 28 years, and wounds heal."

So forgiveness has no limits? "Fundamentally, there is nothing God could not forgive. There is nothing so horrible that we can do that God cannot bring redemption out of it," says Paula Datsko Barker, assistant professor of historical theology at Seabury Western Theological Seminary in Evanston.

She says: "The doctrine of redemption is grounded in the crucifixion and resurrection. When people ask if there is anything that can't be forgiven, I think of Christ on the cross offering forgiveness to his murderers. The resurrection is an affirmation that in fact God can bring life out of the worst death-giving we can do."

We must still employ discernment in affirming the authenticity of any particular claim of redemption, she says. Booker seems to pass the test. She says: "You look for a changed way of life that has endured over a long period of time and involves connections and service to others."

Should victims and their families forgive?

Walter Wangerin, who teaches theology at Valparaiso University, has said: "You do not have to forgive to maintain your Christian identity or your spiritual relationship to God. I counsel sexually abused young women, I see how angry they are when someone tells them they must forgive their abusers. Forgiveness must be freely given. It is a marvelous gift God empowers us to give."

And Thomas Parker, who teaches theology at McCormick Theological Seminary: "Forgiveness does not wipe away the past. Victims need to express anger, but forgiveness is essential in not allowing a tragedy to dominate you."

Choir of voices reacts to effect of Christian talk radio

Dallas Morning News

Radio talk shows were dominated by liberal voices.

At least, that's the way Christian conservative Martin Maddoux remembers the early 1970s when he started "Point of View." One of the reasons he launched the pioneering talk show was because he was weary of what he was hearing.

"There was not a single conservative anywhere that I could hear. Every one of them was actually syndicated," he said. Maddoux, who broadcasts from Farmers Branch, Texas, in the suburbs of Dallas, "I kept banging my fist on the dashboard of my car. So I decided either I would shut up or do something about it."

From a half-hour program launched out of frustration, "Point of View" now is two hours and is nationally syndicated. It reaches more than two million listeners. It's also in the midst of a burst of popularity for radio talk shows.

Eventually, half to three-quarters of all radio will be talk, said Michael Harrison, editor of the trade publication TalkersMagazine. But the televangelist scandals of the late 1980s hurt Christian broadcasters, particularly those television syndicated. Many were taken to install accountability measures, said David W. Clark, former president of the National Religious Broadcasters and head of KMC Media in Dallas.

For example, the broadcasters' group requires nonprofit members with broadcast-related expenses of $500,000 or more to be members of the Evangelical Council of Financial Accountability.

Today, the NRB reports that at least 325 Christian stations have a preaching, teaching and news format. Religious programming is the third-largest format in the country and is predominantly evangelical Christian.

The first Christian radio broadcast came from an Episcopal Church in 1921. Today, the NRB reports that at least 325 Christian stations have a preaching, teaching and news format. Religious programming is the third-largest format in the country and is predominantly evangelical Christian. On "Point of View," topics run the gamut. Recently, Maddoux applauded the resignation of U.S. Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders, challenged the Rev. Jesse Jackson's criticism of the conservative Christian Coalition and said he was angered by CNN's "demonizing" of Christians in a recent education story.

Critics say some outspoken Christian hosts use the airwaves to practice hate, not religion. "I can't call any of these religious radio programs Christian radio programs because they don't meet any Christian criterion," said Dr. Mel White, minister of justice for the Universal Fellowship of Metropolitan Community Churches.

Dr. White, a former ghostwriter for Pat Robertson and Jerry Falwell, said some of these radio talk shows distribute misinformation about gays and lesbians that trickle down from conservative Christian leaders.

"The leaders of the radical right refuse to acknowledge that their anti-gay rhetoric has trickled down to suffering and to death," he said. "Not many people listen to the '700 Club' in comparison to who listens to the Rush Limbaughs and religious radio."

Meanwhile, some conservative Christian broadcasters stoke controversies when they say schools are teaching new age and occult theology or when they criticize distribution of condoms to school children. And phones jam as hosts discuss abortion, school prayer, marital sex, homosexuality, government policies and a long list of what they say are President Clinton's failings.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff

"No eye to watch, and no tongue to wound you. All earth forgot, and all heaven around us."

Last August, the United States fielded an eight-man team in a bridge competition... Thomas Moore.

Today's hand features Marvin Pulvers of New York City, who was a main force in staging the tournament. He played the South cards in a preliminary event.

Pulvers won his club king and saw little he could use in dummy. He had nine winners in top tricks and a 10th could come only from the diamond suit.

After he drew trumps, any play would succeed if diamonds were 3-3. What if they were 4-2 the actual and more likely layout?

In that case, cashing the ace and leading a low diamond would win when either opponent held K-x. Rejecting that possibility, Pulvers cashed his ace and led the queen. This blotted East's 10 to bring dummy's nine into play...

Playing for J-x or 10-x in either hand offered twice as many Bridge score table with columns for NORTH, SOUTH, EAST, WEST and various card counts.

Vulnerable: Both Dealer: South
The bidding: South West North East
Opening lead: Club jack

BID WITH THE ACES South holds:
North South
1♥ 1♠
2♦ 2♣

ANSWER: Two hearts. Not much here. Take the simple preference to North's first-bid suit.

How to Buy a Great Used Car

There are certain basic things you should look for when you examine a car.

1. First set the previous owner's name.
2. Automatic Transmission fluid should be pink and not smell burnt.
3. Coolant shouldn't be rusty and no green stains on the radiator.
4. No oil spots around the engine.
5. Look for rust, especially in the trunk, wheel wells and rocker panels under the doors.
6. Look for new belts, floppy body work, panels that don't match.
7. Listen for wear rattle, rattle at idling or in gear.
8. Make sure the car comes with a usable jack and lugwrench.
9. To check shocks and suspension push down and rock the corners of the car. It should not bounce more than 2 times.
10. Seats shouldn't be saggy or ripped. Make sure belts and controls work.
