GOP tax cut p

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House Republicans presented their long-promised tax cut for families, businesses and investors Thursday. It triggered Democratic accusations that the GOP was once again favoring the rich over the poor.

Portraying the measure as a boon to ordinary Americans, House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Bill Archer, R-Texas, unveiled the package in a speech to the conservative Family Research Council in a House office crammed with couples and small children.

"For families and for working Americans, we will bring a new day of hope and opportunity," Archer said.

Despite the pep-rally atmosphere, the bill's introduction ignites what is likely to be one of Congress' fiercest, least predictable battles this year. The political difficulties will be enormous as lawmakers simultaneously try to slash taxes and erase the mammoth budget deficit. The measure's huge price tag alone tells the story: $189 billion over five years, with a 10-year cost likely to balloon to about $700 billion.

Democrats immediately pounced, accusing the GOP of crafting tax cuts that would benefit wealthy families while pursuing reductions in school lunches, heating assistance programs that help the poor.

With some noteworthy exceptions, the measure delivers most of the tax reductions the GOP pledged in its "Contract With America" during last autumn's election campaign. Its cornerstone is a $500 per child tax credit for families earning $200,000 annually or less. It also would reduce the capital gains tax rate for companies and individuals and reduce levies paid by many companies.

Majority Republicans seem certain to push it through the Ways and Means panel next week, and the full House soon afterward. But beyond that, its future is murky.

Not only does a possible veto fight loom with President Clinton, but the legislation's fate in the Senate is shaky because many Republicans there prefer chopping away at the federal deficit to trimming taxes.

"I put a lot higher priority on deficit reduction than I do on tax cuts," said Senate Finance Committee Chairman Bob Packwood, R-Ore. House Republicans have vowed to pay for the tax measure by revamping welfare, continuing some restrictions on Medicare and cutting other programs. But they have not specified where most of the savings would come from.

REVENUE CUT PLAN

Apply by House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Bill Archer would allow tax reductions promised by Republicans in "Contract With America."

- Gift taxes: A $500 tax credit for gifts over $10 in families earning $200,000 or less.
- Charitable plan: The credit would be refundable, so taxpayers who owe less than $500 could use only as much as would have to offset tax liability. They would not claim tax refund.
- Charitable plan: Lower taxes for many companies that must pay the alternative minimum tax, which is almost always paid by so many deductions or credits that they could otherwise escape paying income taxes.
- More generous deduction for companies: with large amounts of costly equipment, which is almost always paid by so many deductions or credits that they could otherwise escape paying income taxes.

Refugee becomes National Merit Scholar finalist

By Karen Tolkkien Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Meet a high school senior who reads Plato for fun: Rita Pin, a senior at Twin Falls High School, has been steadily recruited by colleges since scoring a perfect 800 on the math section of the Scholastic Aptitude Test, a college-entry exam.

Rita, who once shunned the district's gifted and talented programs because she didn't want to be labeled a "geek" or a "nerd," will head to Boise this weekend to be interviewed by an alumnus from Yale University. She found out two weeks ago she was a National Merit Scholar finalist.

Principal Carl Snow said each year the school has either semifinalists or finalists, but rarely do they perform as well as Rita. "I cannot recall a perfect score," he said.

Her parents are Poun and Vanry Pin of Twin Falls.

Rita grew up in Twin Falls after escaping Cambodia with her family when she was four. Her 4.0 grade point average and her high test scores resulted from studying and reading, she said.

"I take all the (advanced-placement) classes, and I read philosophy," she said. "It's one of my fetishes."

She also read books brought home by her older brother, an Illinois State University student, including one called Humphrey Clinker.

"It's really boring, but I had fun reading it because it was written in a completely different style," Rita said the fun came in analyzing the style.

Doctors win malpractice claims limit

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a long-sought victory for the nation's doctors, the Republican-controlled House voted Thursday night to limit pain and suffering damages in medical malpractice cases to $250,000.

On a 247-171 vote, lawmakers voted to include the ceiling as part of a broader bill to impose a nationwide ceiling on punitive damages in product liability lawsuits. Final passage of the bill was expected Friday.

Supporters hailed the malpractice measure as a linchpin to reforming the nation's health care system and holding down increases in medical costs. Opponents criticized it as a further victimization of patients and relatives already wronged.

Lawmakers also voted on a matter of much less controversy to prohibit courts from awarding punitive damages to the makers of FDA-approved drugs or medical devices.

The American Medical Association, which represents thousands of physicians and lobbied intensively over the last few days to have the provision include the ceiling on malpractice damages in the Republicans' broader package of legislation to discourage all kinds of lawsuits.

The effort included radio and newspaper advertisements as well as personal contacts with lawmakers.

"I don't think there's one House member who hasn't been called," said AMA spokesman Jim Stacey. "All the stops have been pulled out."

Rep. Christopher Cox, R-Calif., said the measure was patterned after a system in his state, where malpractice premiums are one-third to one-half lower than in states with no ceiling on pain and suffering damages.

"If this loses, the chances of meaningful health care reform in this Congress are virtually gone," said Rep. William Thomas, another California Republican.

The action came as the House worked on the third in a trio of business-supported laws to recast the civil legal system.

Silvery moon won't burn Earthlings, scientists say

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Grab the moon-screens and sit on those moonlasses. Researchers say the light of the full moon causes the Earth to heat up, ever so slightly.

"Moonburn is not a problem," assured climate expert Robert C. Balling. Nevertheless, he said, precise measurements by satellites do show that every time the moon turns on its full reflected light — the next full moon comes March 16 — the Earth temperature rises by .03 degrees Fahrenheit.

That's not enough to end winter early. And even a full jar of moonbeams would not lead to a moonbanning fat. But Balling said the study does prove that moonbeams both light and warm the Earth.

"Moonlight is very much less than the energy coming in from the sun, but there is a little bit of warming and that's what we found," said Balling.

A report on the study, by Balling and Randall S. Cerveny, both of Arizona State University, will be published today in the journal Science.

Balling said that at its brightest, moonshine delivers to Earth about .0102 watts of heat energy per square meter. The Earth gets about 1,367 watts per square meter of constant energy from the sun, he said. It takes 746 watts to equal one horsepower.

The moon is not creating the light and heat, but is reflecting energy from the sun and sending it 220,000 miles across space to add a romantic glow to the Earth's night.

'Miracle' boy recovers from gunshot wound

By Liz Wright Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A 6-year-old Hollister boy is expected to be released from a Utah hospital sometime in the next several days, after recovering from being shot in the face by a 10-year-old boy.

"I think it's a miracle," said Elizabeth Knutson, his mother. "I truly believe that someone is watching over him, if not a guardian angel, someone higher, or maybe both."

Police said Greg Knutson was staying at a 13-year-old baby sitter's home on Feb. 24 when he was accidentally shot with a .22-caliber rifle by the sitter's younger brother.

The bullet entered the right side of Greg's nose and lodged in the back of his neck — missing the brain and spinal column each by about a centimeter, said

Richard Boyer, a radiologist at the Primary Children's Medical Center in Salt Lake City.

"The course of the bullet literally just threaded the eye of the needle between two life-threatening structures," Boyer said. "If you took a straight edge and a pencil and drew a line, you couldn't have done a better job."

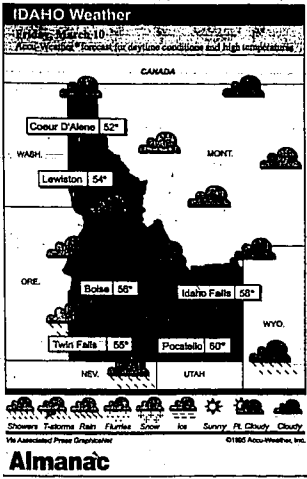

Surgeons removed the bullet Monday and Greg has been recovering rapidly ever since, said his father, Neil Knutson. Greg might require plastic surgery several times as he grows older to repair sinus damage, he said.

"A couple of millimeters in any different direction and it would've been a whole different story," Neil Knutson said.

The low caliber of the bullet and the angle of its path are probably reasons

Idaho weather summary
A vigorous low pressure center moving toward the Pacific Northwest coast caused rainfall over most states in the region except eastern Idaho Thursday. Showers are expected to develop as the low moves slowly across the Northwest. Snowfall will likely be between 4 and 6 inches in mountain areas throughout today. At mid-afternoon Thursday, reports showed precipitation was moving into the southeast part of the state. Winds were mostly light in the north, and in the 10- to 15-mph range elsewhere except parts of the south. There, gusts were between 25 mph and 38 mph at Pocatello and Mountain Home. Temperatures were above normal with most of the south in the upper 50s to lower 60s.

Rain, wind hammer West Coast as Midwest shifts

The Associated Press
Up to 8 inches of rain and wind up to 113 mph battered northern California Thursday, while temperatures dropped to record lows in the upper Mississippi Valley.
An intense low pressure system centered off the central Pacific Coast spread rain and wind inland into southern Oregon and northern and central California.
The heaviest rain was in northern California's Napa and Russian river basins, with 7.92 inches in 24 hours near Heidelberg, 7.6 inches at Yorkville, 5.7 inches at Whispering Pines and 4 to 5 inches in places, including Miramonte, Fort Seward and Willits.
An estimated 3 to 6 inches of rain fell in the Redding and Mount Shasta areas of northern California.
Heavy snow fell in California's Sierra Nevada and the Siakiyou and Shasta ranges, with another 1 to 3 feet possible in some areas.
Wind was measured at 113 mph on Mount Tamalpais in Marin County, just north of San Francisco, and gusted to more than 60 mph at San Francisco, Redding, Calif., and Reno, Nev.
A wind gust to 97 mph was recorded along the Oregon coast near the morning at Cape Blanco, the state's westernmost point.
Two more storms packing heavy rain were expected to hit the coast through Saturday.
In the north-central part of the nation, a large arctic high pressure system produced a second day of record low temperatures, including 9 at Spencer, Iowa; 12 below zero at Webster City, Iowa; 7 below at Ames, Iowa; 9 below at Carroll, Iowa; 19 below at St. Cloud, Minn.; and 8 below at La Crosse, Wis. La Crosse's previous record of 5 below had been on the books since 1877.
Farther east, the high pressure system produced scattered snow showers in the Northeast, with some locally heavy snow overnight in northern New England. Up to a foot of snow fell in the Green Mountains of northern Vermont, and as much as 6 inches fell in the St. Lawrence River Valley, the Champlain Valley and New York's Adirondacks.

Video of vicious vandalism may backfire on perpetrators

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A two-hour videotape labeled "Destruction" shows a group of teen-agers vandalizing houses and a school, microwaving a live fish and getting a dog high on marijuana.
The youngsters say they made the video for their own entertainment. But a prosecutor said Thursday that it'll be evidence when the five stand trial in juvenile court.
The videotape, made public by police this week, shows the youths in high spirits, kicking in walls, smashing toilets with hammers, cooking a live sea urchin in a microwave until it exploded and putting a paper bag on a dog's head and blowing marijuana smoke into it.
Prosecutor Terrence Martin said he expects damage estimates to total hundreds of thousands of dollars in the burglaries of seven houses and two break-ins at Terry Parker High School, all in January and February.
The houses were unoccupied, either new or being refurbished. The youngsters broke mirrors, windows, kitchen cabinets and plumbing, poured paint on carpeting and spray-painted obscene words on walls and windows.

If convicted of charges that include criminal mischief, vandalism, burglary and cruelty to animals, the five could be sent to juvenile detention centers or placed on probation.
Under state law, the parents are responsible for restitution of the damage. All of the homes vandalized were covered by insurance.
The five were released after being held in a detention center for 21 days, the maximum allowed prior to trial. A trial date could be set at their next court appearance on March 15.
Four of the youths are 15; the other is 16. They were arrested in mid-February. Not all five were involved in each case. One has nine charges, while another is charged in three.
The tape was found in a duffel bag of a teen-ager stopped for questioning after one of the burglaries, said police Sgt. D.E. Coffman.
One of the youths told WXIA-TV that when they watched the tape, it would encourage them to do more damage to the next target.

Ban may end Scholar

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department might ask Congress to revise its ban on military aid to Pakistan to keep that country from showing its nuclear secrets with Iran.
The ban, known as the Pressler Amendment, is not helping efforts to avoid a nuclear arms race between Pakistan and India, said Robin Raphel, assistant secretary of state for south Asian affairs.
The law prohibits U.S. government aid and military sales to countries believed to be illicitly developing nuclear weapons.

Greg survived, Boyer said.
Twin Falls County Deputy Prosecutor Jennifer Cewer Brown said Thursday she didn't know whether charges would be filed against the 10-year-old boy. Detective Sgt. Dan Lewin of the Twin Falls Police Department said Thursday that the shooting was accidental.
On the evening Greg was shot, the Knautsons had left their son at the baby-sitter's Twin Falls home so they could work at a data-processing company, said Elizabeth Knutson.
The baby-sitter at some point went to a store, leaving his 10-year-old brother to watch Greg, she said. Police said the 10-year-old led police into his mother's bedroom and showed them the 22-caliber rifle he said he used to shoot Greg.
Earlier in the day, the children had been playing with toy guns, police said.
Elizabeth Knutson, a close friend of the shooter's mother, said she had an emotional reconciliation with the woman at the data-processing company where they both work.
"I made a point of giving her a hug in front of everybody," she said. "I told her it's OK, it's not her fault."

She wants to shatter stereotypes of smart kids.
"A lot of people think, 'she's smart so she can't do any sports' But I prove them wrong," she said.
Contrary to the popular notion of a high-achiever, she does not sit in front of the classroom, avidly taking notes. She prefers the side or the middle, where she can listen and see what she needs. Sometimes she gets bored in class and cracks a book, studying a little on her own.
A kamie black belt, she was also on the high school wrestling team. She does ballet and is involved in school clubs from debate to mock trial.
But all her activities leave little time for a social life.
"Some people think I'm asexual," she jokes, because she doesn't date. "I think that's hilarious."
The long hours shooting up her intellectual abilities have paid off: several colleges have offered her full scholarships, from the University of Southern California to Alpertson College in Caldwell.
Rita says she prefers Yale. If not that, then Alpertson. She wants to study psychiatry at medical school someday.
Her parents don't lean on her to get good grades.
"They're very casual about it. They don't check to see if I'm doing my homework."
And Rita doesn't fret about poor grades. "It doesn't matter if I get a B or a C." Still, that's a rare experience for her. When pressed, she recalled a B in junior high drama class.
"It didn't really bother me," she said. "I just figure you can't be perfect in everything."
Court upholds ban
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A Washington law barring doctors from helping terminally ill patients die was upheld Thursday by a federal appeals court that said it protects the poor and handicapped and keeps doctors from becoming "killers of their patients."
It was the first ruling by a federal appeals court on the validity of an anti-assisted suicide law.

Moonbeams

Every 29.53 days, as it orbits the Earth, the moon goes through lighting phases, changing from nearly invisible to shining in all its glory.
From Earth, the full moon seems a gentle, silvery plane. But up there, among the lunar craters and the abandoned Apollo spacecraft, the moon at high noon is as hot as an oven. The lunar surface typically heats at 200 degrees in full sun and Balling said that throws off enough heat to travel to Earth and warm the planet slightly.
"When the moon shows a full face to the earth, the heat faces up and becomes an emitter of infrared (heat) energy," said Balling.
During the new lunar phase, the moon's unlighted side is away from the Earth. The side of the moon seen from Earth is in shadow

Estrogen cuts death rates

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Estrogen reduced heart disease deaths by up to 30 percent in older white women who took the drug for at least 10 years, researchers reported Thursday.
"Most of the benefits lingered even in women no longer taking estrogen, who still had a 20 percent reduction in heart disease deaths."
The study adds to a growing body of evidence that the drug can be critically important in reducing women's deaths from heart disease.
In November, a $20 million government study found that estrogen cut the risk of heart disease by 25 percent in women ages 45 to 64.
The new study showed that estrogen use is linked to a drop in deaths in women ages 65 to 74.

First lady carves out new role

WASHINGTON (AP) — During a tour to show off renovations in the White House, Hillary Rodham Clinton paused for a moment to criticize Republican proposals to cut Medicare.

Then she smiled brightly and changed the subject. "Let's go look at the new rugs in the East Room," she suggested.

Battered in last year's health-care wars, the first American first lady to plunge so deeply into policy-making is pulling back a bit this year. But if she is no longer a visible policy architect, she remains an advocate.

Whereas once she crafted legislation and directed the administration's mammoth health reform effort, now she visits with elderly women to stress the importance of mammograms and listens sympathetically to veterans with unexplained Gulf War ailments.

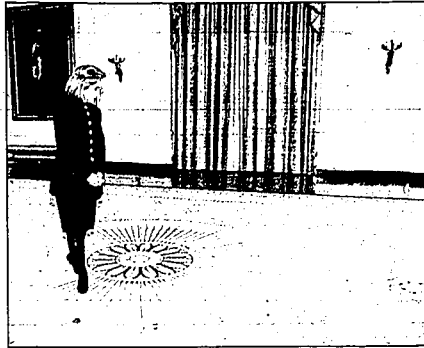

Whereas once her sharp tongue cut down critical legislators, now she munches an apple with schoolchildren to illustrate the importance of the federal lunch program.

White House aides say the shift is the result of discussions between Mrs. Clinton and the president about how her role should change in the aftermath of the health-care debate and the Democrats' election drubbing. "Their view is that Americans will appreciate her in the role of an advocate discussing the issues that she feels passionately about," said one White House aide. "Where they get uncomfortable is when they see her taking operational control over pieces of business."

Republican and Democratic analysts alike say the first lady had no choice but to lower her policy-making profile after Americans linked her so closely with the failings of the administration's health-care plan.

By the time the November elections rolled around, polls showed the number of people who viewed her unfavorably inching above those who regarded her favorably.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole took an indirect jab at Mrs. Clinton on Thursday as he joked that he's already made one pledge concerning his wife in his bid for the presidency.

Hillary Rodham Clinton poses for photographers with a new rug in the East Room of the White House last month. After delving deeply into policy, such as health-care reform, during the first half of her husband's presidency, she now is a less visible advocate.

"If I'm elected, Elizabeth will not be in charge of health care policy," Dole promised, drawing cheers at a luncheon of chiropractors.

Mrs. Clinton dismisses all the talk that she is being repackaged to improve her image, telling reporters recently, "The stories come and go and I just remain the same."

Adds her spokeswoman, Lisa Caputo: "The only thing that's going to change is her hair."

But White House officials acknowledge Mrs. Clinton is trying a new tack to deliver her message — and chafing at all the psychoanalysis of the change.

Even in her more restrained role, Mrs. Clinton still comes across as an activist first lady speaking out on the issues she believes in.

Mrs. Clinton traveled to Copenhagen this week to speak at a world poverty summit, where she announced a $100 million U.S. program to improve women's education in poorer countries. Later this month, she travels to India and four other nations in the region to examine social and development issues.

Mrs. Clinton is still actively involved in White House meetings about health reform, and she sizes up political sentiments around the country during her travels. On a recent visit to Iowa, for example, she held a private meeting with liberals and labor leaders to hear their concerns. She is sure to be an important part of the president's re-election team.

In coming months, Mrs. Clinton will continue to stress the importance of mammograms, kicking off a public service campaign around Mother's Day, and to keep pressing for answers on Gulf War syndrome. In addition, she plans to follow through on vows to get more involved in the District of Columbia community.

"What she does is use the traditional venues of a first lady to make a political statement," said Carl Anthony, historian and author on first ladies. President Clinton has lunch with students of Patrick Henry Elementary School in Alexandria, Va., Thursday as part of an effort to counter Republican proposals on school lunch programs.

Clinton decries plan to cut lunch programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton munched on tacos in a grade school cafeteria Thursday as the administration stepped up its campaign against GOP proposals to cut government education and nutrition programs.

Clinton accused Republicans of trying to sacrifice "enormous future prosperity and health for America for present, short-term gains."

He timed his visit to Patrick Henry Elementary School in suburban Virginia to coincide with the unveiling of the House Republicans' tax-cut package on Capitol Hill, hoping to portray the GOP as out to take money from poor children and give it to the rich.

Referring to the school-lunch program, Clinton said, "Some members of the new Congress have decided that cutting this program would be a good way of cutting government spending and financing tax cuts for upper-income Americans. This is penny-wise and pound-foolish."

Clinton slid his tray down the cafeteria line and bought a taco, corn niblets, processed pears and milk for $2.50. More than half the school's 400 children qualify for free or reduced-price meals.

"They took me to lunch today and introduced me to some of their classmates," Clinton said of the children. "We played 'Where's Waldo?' and had a great lunch."

Then Clinton turned serious, telling reporters that proposed cuts from Republicans in school lunches and other programs would "cost us dearly in the health of our children, the quality of our schools and the safety of our streets."

The White House is arguing that its tax-cut plan is fairer to the middle class and that Republicans would gut important programs to finance tax breaks for the rich.

Chief of staff Leon Panetta said the fundamental question for Republicans was, "How can they justify providing almost a quarter of a trillion dollars in tax benefits to the most privileged in our society by cutting the most vulnerable in our society — kids and school lunches?"

Panetta also invited agriculture groups and senior citizens' advocates to the White House to discuss the potential impact of proposed cuts.

Panel OKs halt to federal rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate committee voting along party lines approved a sweeping moratorium on federal regulations Thursday, despite warnings from Democrats that health and safety could be jeopardized.

The Senate Governmental Affairs Committee rejected a string of Democratic amendments aimed at narrowing the scope of the freeze, before sending a moratorium bill to the Senate floor by a vote of 6-5. The legislation, retroactive to last November, would prevent federal agencies from issuing more than 900 federal rules, guidelines and regulations for the remainder of the year. A similar bill already has been approved by the House.

Republicans on the committee argued that the plethora of federal regulations should be brought to a halt until Congress considers broader legislation aimed at reforming the regulatory process to make it less burdensome on business and citizens.

Senior senator backs Dole in presidential bid

WASHINGTON (AP) — South Carolina Sen. Strom Thurmond endorsed the presidential candidacy of Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole Thursday and was named regional campaign co-chairman for southern states.

In a statement, Thurmond noted Dole's being wounded in World War II and said the Kansan "served his country in time of war and he served his country in time of peace. ... His career in public service since has been dedicated to positive, conservative change. Bob Dole has been tested and proven to have the strength of character we need in a president."

Thirty-seven delegates to the GOP convention are up for grabs in South Carolina's primary next March.

The Thurmond endorsement follows several others by leading South Carolina Republicans.

Simpson prosecutors pre-empt defense strike against Fuhrman

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Taking the O.J. Simpson case into its most explosive stage yesterday, prosecutors Thursday brought on Detective Mark Fuhrman and, in a pre-emptive strike, Fuhrman and, in a pre-emptive strike, Fuhrman confronted him with defense allegations he's a racist.

Under questioning from prosecutor Marcia Clark, Fuhrman denied ever making a woman who accused him of making racist remarks in the mid-1980s.

"Instead, he set about showing the mostly black jury he was a conscientious officer just trying to do his job in the murder case.

Fuhrman said he was "nervous, reluctant" about testifying.

"Since June 13, it seems that I've seen a lot of the evidence ignored and a lot of personal issues come to the forefront," he said.

"I think that's too bad."

Simpson's lawyers have cast Fuhrman as a racist who planted a bloody glove to frame the former football star.

Clark asked Fuhrman questions about a 1985 dispute involving Simpson and his ex-wife, then quickly brought up allegations from a Los Angeles-area woman, Kathleen Bell, who said that the white policeman made racist remarks during a conversation at a Marine recruiting center.

"In 1985 and 1986, sir, can you tell us whether you knew someone or met someone by the name of Kathleen Bell?" Clark asked Fuhrman.

"Yes, I can tell you: I did not," he said firmly.

Shown a letter in which Bell outlined her allegations, Fuhrman said the conversation never took place. Also, Fuhrman said he watched CNN's "Larry King Live" show a month ago when Bell appeared, and he did not recognize the woman.

Loyola Law School Professor Stan Goldman said the prosecution's tactic: "It would have been very surprised if they had not dealt head-on with the issue to try to defuse it as a kind of pre-emptive first strike."

Outside court, defense attorney F. Lee Bailey said he has a surprise witness who will testify that Bell and Fuhrman were acquainted. Bailey said the woman was present when Bell and Fuhrman were together on an occasion other than the disputed encounter.

Clark flashed on a 7-foot screen Fuhrman's detailed, meticulously-hand-printed notes on his investigation. Clark tried to point out that Fuhrman was almost always accompanied at the murder scene by other officers, including some who preceded him there, and pointed out a glove and a ski cap near the bodies.

AP

After the tense start to Fuhrman's testimony, the detective went on to describe his role in the murder investigation the morning of June 13.

L.A. ripe for theory white cop framed O.J.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three years after the Rodney King riots left parts of the city in ashes, Los Angeles may be fertile ground for accusations that a white detective hated blacks so much he framed O.J. Simpson.

The Los Angeles Police Department said it has a terrible relationship with blacks," said Harvard Braun, a lawyer for one of the officers in the King case. "You've got a black jury, a black hero and a policeman who you can prove made racial statements. It seems like a good forum to present that theory."

Detective Mark Fuhrman, who took the stand Thursday, is one of the most critical witnesses in the trial. He says he found a bloody glove at Simpson's estate that matched one found near the bodies of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

Defense lawyers suggest Fuhrman planted it. Prosecutors call the allegations ludicrous.

How plausible is the theory? Law enforcement has certainly had its share of rogue officers who framed suspects to get a quick conviction, or planted a gun on someone to justify a shooting.

Fuhrman

But would a police officer go to great lengths to frame a football hero because he hates blacks and interracial couples?

You might say no one in this case, but on the other hand people act in strange ways," said Robert Pugsley, a Southwestern University law professor. "It's not something at all out of the realm of reality."

The defense first floated the theory last summer, backing up an allegation with a sworn statement from the women who accused Fuhrman of making racist remarks a decade ago.

The woman, Kathleen Bell, said Fuhrman told her he would pull over any vehicle occupied by a black man and a white woman, even if he had no reason.

Bell said she then asked, "What if the two people are in love?"

Bell said Fuhrman replied: "If I had my way they would take all the niggers, put them together in a big group and burn them."

Fuhrman, 43, has denied making Bell's lawyer has called the defense accusations "outrageous and despicable."

The defense theory doesn't account for other incriminating evidence that prosecutors plan to present to the jury, including Simpson's blood at the murder scene and a sock in his bedroom stained with his ex-wife's blood.

The Rev. Cecil Murray, pastor at First AME Church — the largest black congregation in Los Angeles — said it's not hard to believe a black man could be framed by a white officer. "History proves it is not only possible, but probable, and in the history of the LAPD, it is not only possible, but it is likely and probable."

Drug lord leads FBI's top 10 list

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Mexican drug lord accused of shipping Colombian cocaine into this country by the ton was added to the FBI's "Ten Most Wanted Fugitives" list Thursday — the first international drug trafficker ever listed.

U.S. and Mexican authorities were investigating whether the drug kingpin, Juan Garcia-Abrego, had bribed a former Mexican deputy attorney general to protect his organization, it was learned. The former government official, Mario Ruiz Massieu, was arrested last week in Newark, N.J., at the request of the Mexican government, which says he has several million dollars in U.S. bank accounts.

Attorney General Janet Reno announced the addition of Garcia-Abrego to the most wanted list at her weekly news conference. Most additions are announced in brief FBI press releases.

"Placement of Garcia-Abrego's name on the 10 Most Wanted List demonstrates the importance we place on wiping out these self-proclaimed drug lords who deal in human death and misery," Reno said.

"I was surprised to find that those charged with tracking him have not been on the FBI's 10 Most Wanted List."

Garcia-Abrego was born in La Paloma, Texas, but the government said he may claim dual U.S. and Mexican citizenship. He is 6 feet tall, 200 pounds with brown hair and eyes. Reno said Garcia-Abrego lives in Mexico but regularly travels to this country.

Garcia-Abrego was indicted in Houston in 1993 on drug trafficking and justice laundering charges. His Houston lawyer considers his place on wiping out these self-proclaimed drug lords who deal in human death and misery," Reno said.

Gulf illnesses puzzle studies

WASHINGTON (AP) — In one six Persian Gulf veterans suffering post-war ailments cannot be diagnosed, but early tests indicate chemical and biological agents were not involved in any of the illnesses, the Pentagon's top doctor said Thursday.

"There is no one unique, single, overriding cause" of the illnesses that have afflicted thousands of Persian Gulf veterans and have come to be known as Gulf War syndrome, Dr. Stephen Joseph, assistant secretary of defense for health affairs, told a House Veterans' Affairs panel. Joseph released updated figures of a Pentagon medical evaluation program of Gulf War veterans showing that in 84 percent of cases a clear diagnosis of health problems could be found.

Of 2,074 cases analyzed, Joseph said about 4 percent were suffering from infectious diseases, while 21 percent had psychologically related problems.

Local volunteer will receive Democrat award

TWIN FALLS — Jeanne Meyer of Twin Falls will be one of 15 volunteers to be recognized Saturday with an Outstanding Democrat Award from the state Democratic Party.

Meyer chairs Twin Falls County's Democrats. "Our party is dependent upon countless hours volunteers spend putting up yard signs, distributing bumper stickers and making phone calls," said Chairman Bill Mauk said. "Without the contributions and involvement of individuals like Jeanne there would not be a Democratic Party."

Meyer and other Idaho Democrats will convene in Boise Saturday for the annual Jefferson-Jackson Day Reunion, to be held at the Boise Centre for the Grove. New national party chairman Don Fowler will be the keynote speaker.

For information about Jefferson-Jackson—Day, contact—the state Democratic headquarters at 336-1815 or 1-800-542-4737.

Grand jury indicts former teacher on sex abuse charges

TWIN FALLS — A former Filer High School teacher was indicted Thursday by a grand jury on charges of lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor child.

Ronald Jenkins, 52, of Mesa, Ariz., was charged earlier in Twin Falls Magistrate Court with lewd and lascivious conduct, but those charges were dropped in lieu of the indictment, Twin Falls County Prosecutor G. Richard Bevan said.

Jenkins was indicted in the courtroom proceeding in order to protect the victim, who traveled to Twin Falls from out of the area to testify Thursday, Bevan said.

Jenkins quit his Filer teaching job last fall. A former scoutmaster and LDS Church leader, he was excommunicated from the church about the same time, according to his former bishop, Edward Richards. Richards declined to say why Jenkins was excommunicated.

Annual badge, patch swap planned at CSI Saturday

TWIN FALLS — Anyone with a hankering to swap and collect badges, patches, pins and hats from area law enforcement agencies is invited to attend Saturday's 5th Annual Badge and Patch Swap at the College of Southern Idaho.

Agencies statewide will be setting up exhibits of badges and patches from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., at the Eagle's Nest Room in the Taylor Administration Building, 315 Falls Avenue, according to a news release.

Admission is $2 per person, couple or family, the release said. Prizes will be awarded for the best displays.

Those who wish to show off their own collections must pay $5 in advance or $7 on the day of the show, the release said. Two tables is the limit.

Two patch drops will be held at 10:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m., the release said.

For more information or a map call Al Baxter at 543-8922.

Gas pipe accident closes street for over an hour

KIMBERLY — Police blocked off Main Street for 1½ hours Thursday after a backhoe accidentally hit an underground gas pipe, police said.

The backhoe hit the pipe while digging a hole at PM Ag Products Inc. on 121 Tyler East, said Officer Jeff Miller of the Kimberly State Police.

Police blocked off the street at 3:30 p.m. and reopened it at about 5 p.m., Miller said. Intermountain Gas Company employees shut off the gas, and were fixing the pipe Thursday evening, he said.

McRoberts will become part of Kempthorne's staff

TWIN FALLS — Darel McRoberts, a Pillsbury-Green Giant plant manager and former state senator, will soon become a natural resource and agriculture staffer for U.S. Sen. Dirk Kempthorne, R-Idaho.

McRoberts, husband of state Sen. Joyce McRoberts, R-Twin Falls, will work in Kempthorne's Twin Falls office. He will report for work on April 1, according to a news release from Kempthorne's office.

A Buhl native, McRoberts has spent 34 years with Pillsbury-Green Giant. He is manager of the company's plant in Shelley.

McRoberts served two terms in the Idaho Senate, and was succeeded by his wife.

Legislature ponders water-quality changes

By William Brock Times-News writer

BOISE — An industry-backed bill seeking to rewrite Idaho's water quality standards and water degradation policy is potentially disastrous for fish, fishermen and anyone else with a stake in water quality, conservation leaders said Thursday.

"It fails to protect the remaining good water of this state and fails to restore the waters that are already polluted," said Mark Solomon, a Moscow blacksmith who is vice president of the Idaho Conservation League's board of directors.

"This is a dangerous game for fish. It says we're willing to accept further degradation of the waters of Idaho," added Will Reid, fish program coordinator for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game's Natural Resources Bureau. Last year, more than 450,000 fishing licenses were sold in Idaho. The bill, SB 1268, will be heard this afternoon by the Senate Resource and Environment Committee, chaired by Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly. A pair of timber industry representatives did most of the work on the bill, Noh said; it has been amended twice. "There are still some differences that are legitimate," Noh said Thursday, "but at this point, my reading is that this is positive and will be a good piece of legislation." "It will not be adverse to water quality in the state," Noh said. The bill is aimed at enhancing Idaho's "economic well-being" by revising the water degradation policy.

Noh

In areas where water quality is higher than fish, wildlife and recreation requires, SB 1268 would allow water quality to deteriorate "to accommodate important economic or social development."

"This isn't an Idaho solution. It's an industry solution," said Mindy Harm, legislative liaison for the conservation league.

The bill would continue to allow Idaho's highest-quality waterways to be protected as "outstanding resource waters." Outstanding resource waters is a classification dating back to 1988, but so far, not one waterway in Idaho has been granted that status.

Under provisions of SB 1268, many decisions would be made by "Basin Advisory Groups" comprised of representatives from mining, logging, livestock, agriculture, holders of wastewater discharge permits, local government, and Indian tribes, water-based recreation, and environmental interests.

Conservationists fear the Basin Advisory Groups — or BAGs — would allow industry polluters to preside over declining water quality in a process akin to leaving a fox in charge of the henhouse.

"This process will allow industry to set the hurdles that they have to jump over," Solomon said. "Industries like mining can simply lower the hurdle."

Noh countered that BAGs will make decisions about specific lakes, rivers and streams in accordance with plans developed by public land management agencies.

Family asks for help to find missing girl

By Mychel Matthews Goodman Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — Investigators have nearly run out of leads in the disappearance of a Burley girl, and the girl's family is asking the public for help in finding her.

Regina Lee Krieger, 15, disappeared from her home more than a week ago, and hasn't been seen since.

Regina's mother, Rhonda Krieger, stood before reporters and television cameras at a press conference Thursday in Kimberly, urging anyone with information about her daughter to call local law enforcement agencies.

"My mother's instincts," said Rhonda Krieger, say that Regina "is alive, but hurt, in pain, ing the girl's disappearance point away from foul play, said Sgt. Dave Tracy with the Cassia County Sheriff's Department.

Krieger

Instead, it appears that the girl, a freshman at Burley Junior High School, left home voluntarily, Tracy said.

A likely scenario, he said, is that Krieger left with her boyfriend, known only as "Isidro."

"We don't have a last name," Tracy said. "Without a name, where do we even begin looking? But somebody out there knows exactly what's going on."

And that is what the Krieger family is counting on.

Rhonda Krieger, who is separated from her husband and lives in Twin Falls, described her daughter as "a troubled girl... who had fallen in with the wrong type of friends."

In her journal, Regina had written, that she felt threatened by Isidro, her mother said.

Black: National standards portray 'overly negative' history

By Frank E. Lockwood Times-News writer

BOISE — House Education Committee Chairman Ron Black denounced controversial national history standards Thursday, saying the new overview of American history is off-base and overly negative.

Black, a Twin Falls Republican, asked Gem State educators to ignore national standards proposed by the National Center for History in the Schools, located at UCLA. The U.S. Senate has already voted to reject the history guide, and supporters predict the U.S. House will follow suit.

While noting that foreign cultures made great contributions to America, Black suggested that these national standards focus too much on Africa, Islam, and oppression that at times the document seems irrelevant. The UCLA document, Black said, "puts too much of that other-culture, other-culture perspective" into the nation's classrooms.

"This should be titled 'World History' not 'U.S. History,'" Black said at a Thursday morning press conference, which was attended by former GOP gubernatorial candidate Larry Eastland, Idaho Family Forum director Dennis Mansfield, and a member of the Meridian School Board.

Opponents say the proposed national standards amount to political correctness run amuck — or even censorship. The guide mentions the explosion of the Challenger in 1986, but omits the U.S. moon landing of 1969. It includes 19 references to McCarthyism — but no mention of the Soviet occupation of Eastern Europe. Albert Einstein and the Wright brothers merit no recognition, but Bart Simpson and pop-star Madonna get a nod.

America has done a lot of positive things and too much focus on the negative detracts from the positive that has been accomplished by our ancestors," Black added.

"Is this appropriate to be taught in America, let alone the state of Idaho?" Black asked.

Black and the Idaho Family Forum, a Boise-based evangelical Christian group, say educators looking for guidelines might consider "Let Freedom Ring: A Basic Outline of American History" prepared by the Family Research Council.

House approves school funds bill

By Frank E. Lockwood Times-News writer

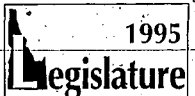

BOISE — The Idaho House of Representatives overwhelmingly approved legislation Thursday that guarantees state school funding for Blaine County.

With state Rep. Wendy Jaquet, D-Ketchum, and state Rep. Tim Ridinger, R-Shoshone, urging a "yes" vote, lawmakers voted 59 to 5 to approve legislation benefitting school districts in Blaine County. McCall-Donnelly, Pleasant Valley, and Arviz.

Under Senate Bill 1075, school districts are guaranteed to receive at least 90 percent as much money from the state in fiscal year 1996 as they received in fiscal year 1995. For Blaine County, one of the state's richest counties, that means at least 90 percent of the $1.027 million they received this year.

Lawmakers included $4.5 million for a funding floor in this week's public school appropriations budget, but SB 1075 guarantees that the $4.5 million will be distributed.

SB 1075 was backed by the Idaho Association of School Administrators and Blaine County School Superintendent Phillip Homer. Supporters said fairness demands that even the state's richest counties get some education funds from the state.

Under the current school funding formula — which seeks to eliminate some of the imbalances that exist between Idaho's 112 school districts — funding for Blaine County was in doubt.

The House Education Committee unanimously approved the measure and Jaquet told her colleagues that SB 1075 "serves as a safety net for all school districts."

"It's the only fair way to treat this situation," she added. Ridinger called the bill a matter of "fairness."

"It applies to cities that give a lot to the state in sales tax and income tax, but don't get a lot back," Ridinger said.

Jaquet, Ridinger, and Homer persuaded state Schools Superintendent Anne C. Fox to support a funding floor in January. And Thursday, the entire Magic Valley delegation backed the bill.

Planners stall decision on Bliss subdivision

By Sean L. McCarthy Times-News writer

FILER — Neighbors were angered, frustrated of simply confused by R. Todd Bliss' plans to build a 22-acre subdivision north of Filer along the rim of the Snake River Canyon.

But confusion among the county planning and zoning commission — and a vote cast by commission Chairman Erick Mickless — has delayed Bliss' zoning change for a month.

After hearing about 90 minutes of comments Thursday night from neighbors and from Bliss' attorney, the planning commission voted 7-5 to wait until April 13 to make a zoning recommendation to the county commissioners.

Commission members were equally split, too, in their opinions on Bliss' request to convert the 22 acres of farmland into residential-agricultural zoned property. Commissioner John Eberhardt of Twin Falls said the ground at 2122 E. 4400 N. looked marginal for zoning.

"I looked awful rocky to me," said Commissioner Patti Wiersma of Blaine.

Other commissioners, including C. Joyce Houston of Filer and James Lanning of Hollister, said they were concerned about how a new subdivision would affect the surrounding farmers.

Bliss' neighbors — a mix of farmers and rural residents like those he plans to build homes for — said his land four miles north of Filer is too far from the city to be suitable for a residential neighborhood.

"The roads aren't good enough to handle a lot of growth out there," neighbor John Rainmeyer said.

Fellow neighbor Melissa Joelson said if Bliss subdivides his land, other neighbors might follow suit and further urbanize the area's farmland. County Zoning Administrator Lee Taylor warned the commission against doing just that, calling Bliss' request a spot zone.

"Spot zoning is hard to control," Taylor said.

Bliss' lawyer, John Hohnhorst of Twin Falls, argued that his client's request is compatible with nearby rural homes. Hohnhorst acknowledged he also owns a few undeveloped lots adjacent to Bliss.

Todd Bliss is the son of former county commissioner and neighbor Norma Bliss.

Voting to table: Mickless, Etheridge, Houston, Lanning, Kames O'Connor of Buhl, Larry Kammer of Buhl and Jim Patrick of Twin Falls.

Opposing the motion to table: Wiersma, F.T. Thornbrow, Jr., of Hansma, Jack Thornbrow of Buhl, Don Maier of Kimberly and John Johnson of Twin Falls. Mickless, as chairman, voted last.

Ranger: Sagebrush rebels threaten officers

ELKO, Nev. (AP) — U.S. Forest Service officials in Elko County say some of their employees have been threatened.

"There have been some incidents," Waive Stager, acting forest ranger of the U.S. office, said from Buhl. "Nevada is just a hotbed."

She would not elaborate on any specific threats against local agents, saying an investigation into the matter was ongoing.

She was responding to remarks made last week by Jim Lyons, undersecretary of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, who told a congressional committee, federal agents in Nevada had been threatened.

Local law enforcement and the regional FBI told the Elko Daily Free Press last week they had received no reports of threats against federal agents to date. And the U.S. Attorney's office for the district of Nevada would neither confirm nor deny if any such threats were currently being investigated.

But Howard Zlotnick, chief U.S. attorney for the criminal division, said the office would not take such charges lightly.

"We will pursue any threat of assault against a federal agent to the maximum extent of the law," Zlotnick said.

Threatening a federal employee is a federal crime and a felony. A person convicted of the charge could be sentenced to up to three years in jail and fined $250,000. Threats involving firearms carry a maximum 10-year sentence and additional $250,000 fine.

Lyons asked U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno to launch an investigation into the matter.

While Stager wouldn't discuss any cases of employees being threatened, she said a more general problem federal employees in the area face is a lack of trust with the public, stemming from working for an unpopular employer — the federal government.

The acting ranger, who worked in Elko for eight years before being stationed in Tonopah for one year and Buhl the past three years, said public opinion of the federal government had changed to one of distrust.

And that negative attitude has led some people to take out their frustrations upon individuals who work for the federal government.

"Society in general ... is getting fed up with having government in their lives," Stager said. "Even in communities that were friendly (in the past), you're finding more dislike."

Stager said forest service personnel had been made to feel unwelcome in local communities because people here blame the workers personally for unpopular national policies.

Treasurer feuds with House over bar

By Frank H. Lockwood
Times-News writer

BOISE — State Treasurer Lydia Justice Edwards is accusing the Idaho State Bar of improperly using its political muscle to oppose common-law marriages in the Gem State.

House Speaker Mike Simpson, R-Blackfoot, says Edwards was the one who is wielding clout improperly.

Edwards says the state bar "violated their tax-exempt public entity status" and their own rules when an attorney — asked the bar's name and end common-law marriages in February 1994.

Monday Edwards informed representatives of the Idaho State Bar, a self-governing state agency, that she is expelling them from the state's local-government investment fund. That means the Bar, which governs Idaho's attorneys, will have to find someone else to invest the money: hundreds of thousands of dollars.

As treasurer, Edwards oversees $1.2 billion in government funds. She works with school districts, cities, counties, and other government agencies, pooling their resources to invest their investment funds. But from now on, the bar is on its own.

State Bar executive director Diane

Edwards Simpson

The speaker said he's concerned that Edwards is targeting the bar because she's a supporter of common-law marriages — and personally dislikes bar members' stances on the issue. "If that's the case, if that's the truth, then I think it's inappropriate," reports that Edwards entered a common-law marriage in 1970 — a union that lasted until the late 1980's. Edwards received an undisclosed settlement after her relationship with Frank Edwards ended. But the current legislation would have no impact on Lydia Justice Edwards' settlement.

Late Thursday, Edwards said her actions came after former state Bar, Probate and Trust Law Section Chairman Robert L. Aldridge — the author of the February, 1994 lobbying letter — began trying to influence lawmakers on other pieces of legislation, including child-protection laws.

"This has to do with the inappropriate use of ISB resources to further their agenda in lobbying," Edwards said.

The treasurer said she isn't retaliating against bar members for opposing common-law marriages, and suggested Simpson stick to the legislative branch.

"I'm sorry he has taken a personal interest in this. It has nothing to do with him, and I'm sure he understands that," Edwards added.

Idaho legislators exploit forest 'crisis'

By Meredith Cohn
States News Service

WASHINGTON — The all-Republican Idaho delegation says endangered species law should be changed to put human rights above animal rights even though a judge has allowed mining and logging to continue in six Idaho national forests.

Human activity in the Snake River and Columbia River basins is believed to have placed several Idaho salmon species in danger of extinction.

The judge's decision came just days before a court injunction would kick in and potentially cause miners, ranchers and timber cutters in the Sawtooth, Challis and four other forests to stay home. No worker lost a day on the job, but the delegation says it was too close.

The injunction — issued as a result of an Oregon-based environmental group's lawsuit aimed at protecting endangered salmon habitat — would have prevented miners, loggers and ranchers from continuing work after March 15, lawmakers said.

The remedy, they claim, is to reform the Endangered Species Act.

"We want to reform the law so Idahoans don't have to go through this disruptive process again and again," said Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho. "We believe it is able to help save species without throwing people's jobs and lives into limbo every three months."

The lawmakers, and conservationist group Pacific Rivers United, blamed two federal agencies for the debacle: the Forest Service and the National Marine Fisheries Service. Under current law, official from those agencies consult to decide whether activity in the forests harms endangered species.

"The experience of the people of Challis and Salmon whose livelihoods were most directly threatened by this injunction has reinforced my conviction that the Endangered Species Act must be reauthorized to include human and economic factors," said Rep. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho Falls.

Craig and Sen. Dirk Kempthorne, R-Idaho, who chairs the Senate subcommittee that will consider ESA reform, already proposed legislation changing the federal agencies' consultation process.

The lawmakers had been pressing officials from the federal agencies to resolve the matter before the March 15 deadline — when a stay of the injunction issued in January would run out. Kempthorne even called the officials to Capitol Hill last week to check on their progress.

"I'm pleased the assurances federal officials gave at my subcommittee hearing were met and had the desired effect on the judge," Kempthorne said.

U.S. District Judge David Erza lifted the injunction when he received a "biological opinion," mapping out a management plan for the endangered salmon in Idaho and Oregon.

Officials from Pacific Rivers Council said undermining the ESA consultation process would gut the bill. "The act is built on that process," said Bob Doppelt, executive director of the council.

"It's working in other states for other endangered species," he said. "If (Craigo and Kempthorne) change it, that means they want to gut the act, and they don't want to protect endangered species. They want to avoid unbridled development."

Doppelt said the salmon, and the water quality and quantity, are worth more to Idaho's economy than mining, timber and grazing jobs risked by the suit — which was a small percentage of forest-based jobs.

"The issue is jobs vs. jobs, not jobs vs. salmon," he said.

Doppelt said Idaho's economy was considered among the nation's strongest this year because of an influx of companies looking for environmental amenities and high quality of life.

According to a report from ECOVest, an Oregon-based economic consulting firm hired by Pacific Rivers Council — mining, timber and grazing jobs dependent on the six forests represent just fractions of Idaho's workforce and are also subsidized by taxpayers.

"Idaho's cattle, timber and mining industries are declining," the report reads. "The overwhelming bulk of new jobs and incomes will come from other industries."

Doppelt accused the Forest Service of bowing to political pressure from lawmakers, and from "old-world" agency officials, to protect the industries by not enforcing ESA.

He said his group will review the final analysis, expected in another month, for specific projects in the forests that will have to be curtailed because they harm salmon.

"I'd be surprised if none of the projects are stopped or modified," he said. "That means they aren't doing their job and we may have to file suit again."

The Forest Service did not return phone calls.

Water

"Put all those things together and you have an adequate public participation process," Noh said.

Idaho has a poor track record for meeting water quality standards, Solomon said. Years of non-compliance prompted a lawsuit by the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund, which in turn generated an Environmental Protection Agency list of 962 Idaho stream segments that don't meet water quality standards.

"Dirty is the biggest pollutant of Idaho's water, Solomon said, and it's also the easiest to clean up."

SB 1268 is a response to the Sierra Club lawsuit, Noh said, "and the purpose is to get that the state has a system in place."

If Idaho doesn't produce a solution, a federal judge probably will, Noh said. Even so, a new bill will not immunize the state from the Sierra Club lawsuit, he conceded.

"It's not going to make the lawsuit go away, and it's probably going to make things worse," Harm said.

"This won't pass muster with the Clean Water Act," she said, "and the last gasp of the Legislature is the worst time to seek a thoughtful solution."

Noh said he is "comfortable that this legislation is consistent with the Clean Water Act."

Voters spoke loud and clear; it's time that legislators listen

There are few sights more heart-rending than an elected official on the business end of a voters' mandate he doesn't like.

Take the folks at the Idaho Association of Counties, who'd rather the Legislature forget all about House Joint Resolution 17.

HJR 17, approved by three-fourths of the voters last November, allows voters in individual counties to set up alternative forms of government. The Legislature is supposed to write the ground rules.

Earlier this week, the state Senate finally got around to doing so - but only after the IAC and its legislative allies begged, pleaded, cajoled and bargained for a reprieve. Although the measure was passed, it contained a 15-month delay before it takes effect, and it still faces action in the House.

A lot of county officials don't like HJR 17. That's because it will put an end to the status quo, which is the most effective full-employment program for Idaho public officials since the invention of the fact-finding tour or the Washington, D.C., commissioners' convention.

Of the 384 Idaho county officials elected since 1992 who are still in office, fewer than half faced opposition in either the primary or the general election last time out.

It's easy to see why. There are relatively few people living in Dubois (population 420) who could be Clark County corner.

But maybe Clark County doesn't need its own coroner. Maybe it could contract the job more cheaply with a forensic pathologist in Idaho Falls.

Maybe Lewis County (population 3,516) doesn't need both an assessor and a treasurer. Perhaps Ada County (population 215,000) could get smarter leadership from an administrator who is paid $100,000 than from three commissioners who get $50,000 apiece.

The point is, under HJR 17, the people who live in those counties get to make that decision - by popular vote.

"As far as I can tell, there's only two ways to get out of work in this country: You can get on relief or you can get elected."

- Will Rogers

A radical concept, that - and dangerous for elected officials who now keep the coffee shops and pool halls of county seats like Soda Springs, Idaho City and Challis in business.

A Boise lawmaker has introduced a competing measure in the House that would call for an interim legislative committee to hash over what the rules should be.

One senator last week even suggested the whole idea of local-option county government ought to be reconsidered because the voters had saddled the Legislature with an "unfunded mandate."

Please. What the voters said, in a voice that not even a politician could mistake, was that traditional county government in Idaho is now a dinosaur - and a very expensive dinosaur at that. So the only real question is this: What part of "get off the dime" don't your legislators understand?

School plan follows future growth

The Cassia School District No. 151 Long Range Planning Committee supports the proposed bond election on March 14. We feel the district school board has initiated a proposed bond which follows the recommendations of the committee.

Since the Long Range Planning Committee's initial report of February 1994, the district has initiated many of the committee's recommendations in areas of curriculum, finance, academic data and administration.

We feel the current building proposal offered in this election on Tuesday, March 14, is the most timely and best solution for the widespread student population in the district.

The committee, as part of its planning process, studied the costs of venturing into such a large project. We feel that although $21.9 million is a large amount to finance at one time, the window of opportunity has opened and needs action for the following reasons:

- Bonding cost rates are on the low side of the spectrum.
- We have watched inflation almost double the cost of the current grade-school project, and we don't see inflation or building costs subsiding in the Pacific Northwest in the near future.

- The Long Range Planning Committee projected a 1 percent to 2 percent growth per year over the next 10 years. We now believe we projected the growth on the low side. The overcrowding we face at the high school level will not go away.

The College of Southern Idaho has reached an overcrowded point at its Burley facility. The opportunity for a joint venture with higher education possibilities with CSI is a most exciting concept. It offers great vocational training possibilities for more than 60 percent of our students who don't go on to college but seek higher paying jobs in the area.

- The School Board members have clustered the new buildings around already existing facilities in each community. The bond money can be spent for buildings for education, not for athletic facilities. The committee feels this is a very conservative and prudent move by the school board.

We wish it were possible for all School District No. 151 constituents to have spent the past two years with us, studying the problems and solutions of the district. It would be much easier for you to see the real needs which will be satisfied with this building project for the future.

Members of the committee are Bill Mendenhall, Grant Wyack, Jack Hunsaker, Robyn Whiteley Fehlman, Lois Cowell, Alma Turner, LeRoy Funk, Irma Bushman, Eric Fonesbeck and Larry Larson.

Look at militia may give insight

Religion not a factor in crimes

I was sickened by the headline on Page A-6 of The Times-News on Feb. 28: It read "Ex-Mormon scoutmaster faces molestation charges." The print was bold and black. I was wondering if the article had to do with the man's crimes or his religion? There was another article on the same page in regular print which read, "Probation marks end of drug bust." I was wondering why it didn't say, in bold print, "Catholic or Methodist or Congregationalist or Episcopalian" mother of 6 convicted on drug charges."

Mr. Jenkins is not even a member of the Mormon church anymore. Why the reference to it? Was it important that the public be aware of his former religious affiliations? How did the family and the friends of Mr. Jenkins feel when they saw such a bold and obnoxious headline? Did The Times-News feel that his ex-religion had a big part to play in this story and if so, why?

Mr. Jenkins is also an ex-Twin Falls resident - that might have made an interesting headline but perhaps not as interesting as the religion angle. It seems that The Times-News zeros in on the Latter-day Saint population of this valley and goes out of its way to publicize the fact that this or that Mormon resident was charged with this or that crime. I haven't seen a headline which zoomed in on an ex-Catholic or ex-Methodist or ex-Holy Roller.

In my opinion, the Jenkins family has suffered enough sadness, grief and shame due to the illness of their relative. Surely The Times-News owes them an apology for the way their religion was brought into the reporting of this story.

Constitution change not needed

Your help is urgently needed to stop a constitutional convention from taking place this fall. The Idaho Legislature passed Concurrent Resolution 103, calling for a conference of the states to convene to make "fundamental, structural and long-term reforms" in our federal government supposedly to restore the 10th Amendment states' rights.

That is what our founding fathers did in 1787 when they gathered for the first Conference of the States, which we call a Constitutional Convention. That battle has already been fought. We won! Is the Constitution suddenly deficient?

The draft bill came from the Council on State Governments, a private organization that has been promoting socialistic changes for more than three decades. It is a mail-order clearing house for legislation, which it sends out continuously to every department of state government. It certainly is not a champion of state sovereignty and unalienable God-given individual rights. The same bill came to each state to pass, without amendment.

Resolution 103 gives a five-member state delegation the sovereign power of the people at the Conference of States. A "steering committee" of the Council of State Governments will draft structural, statutory and fiscal changes that will be voted on by the state delegations. Do you know what they are? No! Liberals will control the agenda and radical changes will likely be made to our God-inspired Constitution.

If the true goal is to strip the federal government of its unauthorized powers, then a convention-empowered Conference of the States is not necessary. The states could announce their assertion of the 10th Amendment in a telephone conference call and divest themselves of federal usurpations by engaging only in those state/federal activities for which there is constitutional authority. All powers are enumerated in the U.S. Constitution; Congress has 26 powers, the president has 14, and the Supreme Court has only three. The rest are the people have not made of the power.

We do not need changes in the Constitution. Please contact our state senators and representatives and urge them to rescind Concurrent Resolution 103 and withdraw from the unnecessary Conference of the States. The fate of the U.S. Constitution is in our hands: Please act responsibly to save freedom and liberty. Call or write legislators at home or call (208) 334-2000 (capitol phone) to leave your message or speak with them directly. Please do so today, as the session ends soon!

Support Cassia school proposal

To the Cassia County School Board of Trustees and the Long Term Planning Council: We appreciate the presentation on the school bond proposal to our commission on Feb. 28. We found the information enlightening.

Based on your presentation and our own knowledge, it is our opinion that this bond proposal is worthy of support and therefore urge the voters to support your proposal with a yes vote on March 14. We are asked by businesses on a continuing basis about the quality of our school system. While we have been pleased with the programs and facilities as they currently exist, passage of this bond will make this area even more attractive to relocating businesses.

We are particularly enthused about the regional technology center and the ties it will create with the College of Southern Idaho. This far-reaching concept is the first of its kind in the state and really addresses the interests of business. With the support of students from adjoining districts, we feel this center will enhance the economy of the entire region. We congratulate you on your foresight.

We appreciate the many hours of work that has gone into this proposal and urge the voters to support this measure.

Declo Council backs school plan

To Cassia County School Board members: The Declo City Council was very pleased to have members of the School Board attend the monthly council meeting. Thank you for Mr. Doggett's and Ms. Meade's presentation with regard to upgrading the school system. We of the council feel it was very well thought out and also very well presented.

We also feel it is a privilege to be able to share in the proposed technical school because of the great opportunity it affords the students.

We of the council unanimously approve and support the School Board's plans, and offer our full cooperation.

'Yes' vote ensures strong schools

As members of the Burley City Council, we strongly support the Cassia County School bond proposal and urge all electors in Cassia County Joint School District No. 151 to vote in favor of the bond on March 14.

We are impressed by the fact that a committee composed of citizens residing in Malta, Oakley, Declo, Albion and Burley was able to study the needs of our school district and make recommendations to the school board.

We are proud of the fact that attendance at the College of Southern Idaho has been growing. It makes good economic sense to have CSI lease part of the existing Burley High School and operate its program there.

We recognize the need for a more diversified technical education program. It is important to our community that when students graduate from high school they are ready to go to work or be ready for secondary vocational training or college.

Although none of us like property taxes, the tax relief bill signed by Gov. Batt will greatly reduce the impact of the bond.

We know we need a good school system to promote our community and maintain community morale. We think that it is time for the electors in Cassia County to seriously consider the bond as proposed by Cassia County School District.

As members of the Burley City Council, we encourage the electors to provide a solid educational foundation for the future and vote in favor of the school bond on March 14.

Find answers about sheriff's office

There was an article in the newspaper about a month ago about a northern Idaho community attempting to recall its sheriff because he "has disregarded for the county" and is responsible for "a large turnover in personnel and low morale."

These same allegations could be made at several different sheriff's departments, I'm sure, but it especially sounds like the Gooding County Sheriff's Department. The turnover there has been tremendous. There is only one deputy still employed since the last administration two years ago. Also, all the jailers are new employees.

Why the large turnover? How long will this last deputy be employed before he, too, leaves? What is the problem? I personally know the last deputy who resigned from the department. He was very dedicated to the community and took his job very seriously. He was at his home when neighbors called or fellow employees called for assistance. He always took the time to help as much as he could.

As far as disregard for the county, what happened to the Drug Awareness Resistant Education program in Gooding County? Is there any drug education provided now for the children? Shouldn't the children be a No. 1 priority? And is Sheriff Jax involved in any local activities or functions to represent the Gooding County Sheriff's Department? What is Sheriff Jax doing for our tax dollars and for the future of Gooding County?

All these questions should be addressed. Talk to the sheriff's department employees or other county employees in the facility adjacent to the sheriff's department. Are they satisfied with Sheriff Jax's performance the last two years? They work closely with him and should have an opinion. I think it's time for the county commissioners and all of the community to get some honest answers and solutions. It is our responsibility.

Israel, PLO reach pact on elections

ERETZ JUNCTION, Gaza Strip — Ending months of deadlock, Israel and the PLO announced a July 1 target date for wrapping up an agreement on withdrawing Israeli troops from the West Bank and holding Palestinian elections.
Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres and PLO chief Yasser Arafat made the announcement Thursday after a two-hour meeting.
A timetable on expanding Palestinian self-rule to the West Bank had eluded the sides because of Israel's concern for the security of Jewish settlers living there.
Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Arafat had until July 1 to prove he can foil attacks by Islamic militants that have killed 56 Israelis since October.

All quiet as ship docks in Mogadishu

MOGADISHU, Somalia — Mogadishu's port, expected to be a battleground in the absence of U.N. troops, was back in business Thursday.
An Egyptian commercial vessel carrying food and other goods sailed in around noon, the first ship in port since the departure of the last U.N. troops March 2.
The Rakhisa arrived off Mogadishu on Feb. 23 but was refused permission to dock during the military operation to withdraw U.N. troops.
"Three other vessels were expected before the end of the day. Unloading operations are expected to begin today."

Blood pressure defect sparks fatigue

LONDON — A defect in the way the body controls blood pressure can trigger chronic fatigue syndrome, according to a small study.
The findings, if confirmed in larger studies, suggest that some sufferers could be helped with a high-salt diet or with drugs that boost blood pressure.
"We don't know how many people can blame chronic fatigue on this imbalance yet but if this is an important part, it would be an incredible advance for a syndrome that up until now has had no consistently effective treatment," said Dr. Peter Rowe, the leading investigator from The Johns Hopkins Children's Center in Baltimore.
"Despite a new conference in Baltimore to publicize the research, doctors in Europe said the American study merely confirms what has been known for years."

China singles out U.S. for criticism

BEIJING — China criticized the United States Thursday for its support of a U.N. resolution condemning Beijing's human rights record and said the vote would hurt bilateral relations and trade.
U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor arrives today in Beijing to sign a trade agreement strengthening copyright protection for U.S. movies, recordings and software, and opening Chinese markets to U.S. products.
Foreign Ministry spokesman Shen Guangfeng, speaking at a weekly briefing, said China and the United States enjoy "bright prospects" in economic and trade cooperation and expressed hope that Kantor's visit would promote bilateral relations.

Bolshoi Ballet director resigns in huff

MOSCOW — Yuri Grigorovich, the Bolshoi Ballet's artistic director for three decades, admitted defeat Thursday in a protracted dispute with management and resigned.
Grigorovich "is in excellent shape, but he does not want to tolerate the strife any longer," said Alexander Kolesnikov, a spokesman for the Bolshoi Theater, which oversees the ballet.
Grigorovich, 68, indicated in an interview with the ITAR-Tass news agency that he might seek a job with a ballet company in the West.
Many critics blame the strong-willed Grigorovich for the artistic decline of one of the world's leading ballet companies, and for the loss of many leading performers.

Washington offers $2 million for killers

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Hoping for a repeat of last month's arrest of a World Trade Center bombing suspect in Pakistan, Washington offered a $2 million bounty Thursday for the gunman who killed two U.S. government workers and wounded a third.

U.S. deal would send reactors to N. Korea

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States and its allies signed a deal Thursday to supply North Korea with two nuclear reactors, despite warnings from the Communist north that it would refuse the South Korean type being offered.

As part of an effort to stymie North Korea's suspected nuclear weapons program, a new organization is being created to finance and supply two light-water reactors worth some $4 billion to the north.
Officials from the United States, Japan and South Korea signed the accord to launch the Korean Peninsula Energy Development Organization, capping two days of talks with nearly 20 other countries.
Details of the accord were not immediately available, but U.S. and South Korean officials have said the deal's aim is that the south supply the reactors. Japan and South Korea will finance the majority of the project.

Signing Thursday's accord were U.S. negotiator Robert Gallucci, Tetsuya Endo of Japan and Choi Dong Jin of South Korea.

The group also discussed an agreement to provide 500,000 tons of fuel annually to North Korea until the completion of the reactors, which is not expected until 2003, Evans said.
The first delivery of heavy oil was made in January and was paid for by the United States.
Russia, Canada, Britain, New Zealand, Australia and the European Union, represented by France, also attended the meeting.
North Korea stepped up its campaign against the deal involving its bitter capitalist rival ahead of the signing.
"Legally and technically there is no reason for us to accept" South Korean style reactors, North Korean Ambassador Pak Gil Yon said in a telephone interview Thursday.

Senate approves 5% pay increase for judges

BOISE (AP) — A Senate majority resisted the temptation to lash out at the courts on Thursday and approved a 5-percent pay raise for judges.

"When we get a decision that we like, we don't go out and reward the judges," Judiciary Chairman Denton Darrington, R-Deer, said. "When we get a decision that we don't like, we should not act punitively. We ought to be fair."

The bill, approved on a 22-12 vote, was an alternative to the 10-percent pay increase judges originally proposed early in the session. Darrington said higher salaries were needed to attract attorneys in the prime of their legal careers to become judges over older ones looking for a way to move into retirement or young lawyers just breaking in.

But he also advised the judiciary it would be wise to cut the request in half. He cited the ill-feeling among legislators toward the courts since last fall's decision voiding most of last year's laws to streamline the Snake River water rights adjudication.

Supporters of the judiciary have been lobbying lawmakers intensely to overcome that resentment. If approved by the House, the pay raise proposal would siphon another $500,000 from the state's dwindling cash balance, dropping it below $2 million.

The measure would increase salaries to $83,142 for Supreme Court justices, $82,092 for appellate court judges, $77,925 for district judges and a maximum of $70,133 for magistrates. The last pay increase for judges was in 1993.

But with the higher pay also comes "increased pensions for already retired judges and larger retirement benefits for incumbent judges once they leave the bench. The judicial retirement plan provides 62.5 percent of the current salary in annual benefits after 21 years of service. Judges with 10 years of service receive 40 percent.

The lucrative retirement benefits and the fact that the legislative aid package for public schools provides no pay raises for support personnel and many teachers were cited by some critics to justify their opposition.

But Republican Robert Lee of Rexburg touched the underlying discontent when he complained about the water rights decision of 5th District Judge Daniel Hurlbut, which was argued on appeal before the Supreme Court next month.

"The only way we really have of proceeding the way this matter is proceeding before the courts is to turn down a pay raise," Lee said. "I'm going to have to vote 'No' on this pay increase in hopes that the Supreme Court will see that the people are concerned with what's happening."

Sheriff withdraws after wolf-case dispute

SALMON (AP) — Lemhi County Sheriff Brett Barsalou has withdrawn his cooperation with Fish and Wildlife Service agents following a dispute over the way they are investigating a January wolf killing.

Barsalou issued an angry statement objecting to the way three armed federal agents on Wednesday searched the ranch of Gene Hussey south of Salmon where the transplanted Canadian wolf was shot.

Hussey, 74, was not harmed, and officials admitted there was no physical confrontation. But Barsalou said the federal agents had an intimidating manner that was "dangerously close to excessive force."

"I would say that any future working relationship with the Fish and Wildlife Service is history and that's unfortunate," Barsalou said. "They brought it on themselves."

The agents reportedly were looking for spent cartridges but found nothing.

The wolf apparently had been attacking a calf when it was shot Jan. 29. Under the rules governing the wolf reintroduction in central Idaho, the predators can be killed by ranchers if they are attacking their stock.

Hussey has denied involvement in the animal's death.

Wednesday's search prompted a letter from the Lemhi County commissioners to Gov. Phil Batt, Idaho's congressional delegation, the attorney general's office and the Fish and Wildlife Service office in Portland, Ore. They protested the agents' "high-handed actions" and asked that a letter of apology be written to Hussey and Barsalou.

Batt issued a statement Thursday calling the Fish and Wildlife actions "totally unreasonable and over-reaching." He said Attorney General Alan Lance was investigating.

Meanwhile, Congressman Michael Crapo said he won agreement from House Natural Resources Committee Chairman Don Young, R-Alaska, to schedule a hearing on the incident by the end of March. And Congressman Helen Chenoweth and Lt. Gov. Butch Otter announced plans for a March 17 public hearing in Boise.

In Salmon, Barsalou said Hussey called for help when the agents arrived Wednesday, and the sheriff "lost his cool" when he saw the armed officers.

"I don't have a problem with their search warrant, but I do question why it takes three armed federal agents to serve a search warrant on an elderly gentleman," Barsalou said. "If Hussey had an arsenal up there and they knew it, that would be different, but they've got a man that's always talked to them, always been helpful."

Fish and Wildlife has offered a $5,000 reward for information leading to the conviction of the wolf killer. The penalty for illegally killing one of the experimental wolves is up to one year in prison and a $100,000 fine.

Barsalou said Fish and Wildlife has ignored his offers to help coordinate enforcement in his county. And in a written statement, county commissioners said they believed the sheriff was the "chief law enforcement officer in Lemhi County and that any outside law enforcement should coordinate activities through the sheriff's office."

Yellowstone wolves release planned

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. — Canadian wolves that have been penned in one-acre enclosures in Yellowstone National Park for nearly two months could be released in the wild within two weeks, National Park Service officials said. The release will occur no later than early April, park officials said, because the wolves' breeding season will be over and packs with pregnant females will need to find den sites.

Senate OKs TV legal notice bill

BOISE (AP) — A bill allowing government agencies to use television and cable TV for legal notices is on its way to the Idaho Senate, but its House sponsor says the measure is unlikely to become law this session.

The House voted 41-25 for the legislation Thursday, a day after first defeating the bill and then holding it for reconsideration.

The sponsor, Rep. Paul Kjellander, R-Boise, conceded his bill was unlikely to get through the Senate so late in the session. It was amended heavily before coming up for a full House vote on Wednesday.

Newspapers have been the medium for publishing legal notices and announcements since 1919, providing a major source of revenue for weekly papers in rural areas.

Kjellander told House members it's time to move into the modern era and allow other means of reaching people.

"All this bill does is create options for entities that are mandated to make legal publications," he said. "They don't have to do it."

Kjellander said some legal notices would be "clearly off limits" to broadcast dissemination because of their complicated nature, such as bankruptcy proceedings, loan foreclosures and real estate descriptions.

The bill requires at least one publication of legal notice to be in a newspaper, but others can be via radio, television or cable TV. The ads must run between 7 a.m. and 11 p.m., and the station must certify that it reaches at least as many people as a written publication would.

Broadcast stations must keep written copies of the legal notice and provide them to people upon request.

"We need to look at what the purpose of publishing is in the first place," said Rep. Mark Stubbs, R-Twin Falls. "It is public notice."

He said many people get their information from television, which is why that medium is so successful in selling advertising.

Committee kills proposal to expand springs and recall tax

BOISE (AP) — A plan to expand Idaho's resort city tax has been defeated in a House committee.

The Revenue and Taxation Committee on Thursday voted down a bill sponsored by Rep. Hilde Kellogg, R-Post Falls, that was intended to allow Coeur d'Alene to impose a local sales tax.

Under a 1978 law, "resort cities" that depend on tourism, travel and recreation-related activities for much of their revenue can impose special taxes if voters approve.

But the law limits resort cities to communities under 10,000 population. Those currently qualifying are Sun Valley-Ketchum, Lava Hot Springs and McCall. Coeur d'Alene's 1990 population was almost 25,000.

Kellogg's bill would have allowed virtually any city to impose a local sales tax with approval from 60 percent of its voters, but for no more than 10 years and the revenue would have to be targeted for a specific purpose.

Triumph of Will

Dilettantes present Will Rogers Follies

By Terrell Williams
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — It's Will-o-mania of the 1930s all over again as the Dilettantes bring America's most popular political cowboy to the stage in "Will Rogers Follies."

Dan Mink, a Jerome lawyer, steps into the starring role as easily as he spins ropes and picks guitar in the local rendition of the 1988 Broadway musical by Cy Coleman, Betty Comden and Adolph Green.

Backed by a colorful chorus of dancers and singers, Will Rogers says he's in the cheerin'-up business as he travels from the family farm in Oklahoma to St. Louis and on to the famous Ziegfeld Follies of New York City.

Along the way are his life's stories about falling in love with his wife, played by Mary Ann Anderson-Stanger, and about winning the approval of his father, played by Art Franz. The story also is about living by honest, down-home values that apply to everyone, rich or poor, in country or city.

"Will Rogers had a cowboy philosophy," Director Bruce Whitehead said. "A lot of his statements are as relevant today as they were in the '20's and '30's."

The part-Cherokee Rogers, a star of the Ziegfeld Follies in the 1920s and a Rush Limbaugh-style radio program in the '30s, may have been the most beloved man in America when he died in a plane crash in 1935. President Franklin Roosevelt considered him a potential rival for the 1936 Democratic presidential nomination.

"All I know is what I read in the paper," Mink, as Rogers, said at rehearsal this week.

Holding a current newspaper, he briefly riddled stories of the day just as Rogers was famous for doing in his day. Borrowing a line from Rogers, Mink tells his audience, "My pa always loved The Times-News on account of it never cluttered up his mind with two points of view."

Other gems include, "I'm not a member of an organized political party. I'm a Democrat." And, "Nothing hurts a political career like telling the truth."

MIKE BALSURBY/The Times-News

Above, Jerome lawyer Dan Mink will display his rope spinning skills as he stars in the Dilettantes production of 'Will Rogers Follies.' Below, Rush Limbaugh dons an eye patch as he prepares for his New York Broadway debut in the Will Rogers Follies as aviator Wiley Post.

"Will Rogers Follies" is based on a novel by Peter Stone; veteran Broadway composer Cy Coleman did the music and Adolph Green and Betty Comden, who wrote "Singin' in the Rain" and a dozen other Hollywood and stage musicals, contributed the lyrics.

Dilettantes president Lori Vaninum said the play, which ran on Broadway for four years before going on national tour last year, wasn't easy for a theater group in Idaho to land.

"We are the first community theater group in the whole Northwest to be able to do it, which is really exciting," she said.

"The rules are that no community theater group can do 'Will Rogers Follies' within 300 miles of a city where one of the touring companies is going to perform," Whitehead said. "We had to talk them into it and convince them that nobody here every went to Boise or Salt Lake to see a play."

When it came to casting the lead role, the directors were looking for an actor who also could sing, play harmonica and guitar, dance and perform difficult rope tricks.

Show bill

Cy Coleman, Betty Comden and Adolph Green's "Will Rogers Follies," this year's Magic Valley Dilettantes production, will open at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, March 17, in the CSI Fine Arts Building auditorium. The play will continue at 7:30 p.m. on March 18 and again March 23-25. A 2 p.m. matinee is set for March 19. Tickets for the evening performances are priced at $7 for adults, and $6 for seniors citizens 62 and over and students under 12. Matinee tickets are $5 per person.

Tickets are on sale daily from noon to 6 p.m. (to 5 p.m. on Sunday) at the food court at the Magic Valley Mall. All seats are reserved. For more information, call 733-7060.

A gala party on opening night will be held at the Turf Club, with cocktails at 5:30 p.m., a steak-and-shrimp dinner at 6:15 and transportation to the performance and then back to the Turf Club for a dessert bar and dancing to a live orchestra. Cost is $25 per person.

BURLEY — If Ed Austin had hung around the College of Southern Idaho, he might have been booking classes at Burley High School about now.

Instead, he's dancing there.

"It's funny how things turn out," said Austin, director of Brigham Young University's Folk Dance Ensemble, which will perform at 7:30 tonight in the Burley High School gym. "Ten years ago I was teaching clogging in Twin Falls."

Austin, 42, who lived in Twin Falls from 1980-84, was actually the director of continuing education at CSI, the outgrowth of an internship he earned at the Twin Falls school after he graduated from BYU.

"I had my own dance studio and I got involved a little in drama at CSI," he said. "But mostly, it was an administrative job."

He's still doing administrative

Folk dancing

The Brigham Young University Folk Dance Ensemble will present a folk dance program at 7:30 p.m. tonight at the Burley High School gym.

Tickets are $7 per person or $6 each apiece in groups of 10 or more, and are available at Pinetree Sports and the Book Plaza, both in Burley, and the Book Store in Rupert.

work, but on a far grander scale. "BYU's dance program has about 5,000 students in it, and of those 5,000, we have 36 of the best in the folk dance ensemble," he said. "To become a member of the folk dance ensemble, they have to first become a member of the folk dance team, which has about 200 members. Only the best dancers from that group become part of this one."

The BYU folk dancers need all the expense they can get. At tonight's show, for example, they'll be dancing folk music from Russian, Lithuanian, Mexican, Korean and Eastern European — 14 different cultures in all.

"We have two different groups of dancers, and most of them are involved with the ensemble for three or four years," Austin said. "Even so, that's a lot to learn, and once you've learned it, a lot to retain."

Although BYU has world-class dance teams, the folk ensemble is strictly a performing troupe. Its tours take it all over the world, including Quebec and the eastern United States this spring.

"We were doing a show overseas, and after it was over, this Ukrainian fellow came up and said, 'I must talk to you dancers. They have captured the spirit of the Ukraine.' I said, 'I'm sorry, but they'd have a hard time understanding you. They're all Americans.'"

Most of the women who perform in Austin's group are accomplished, seasoned dancers to begin with, he said; the men tend to have less experience with dance, and many of them are athletes or former athletes.

"The remarkable thing about our group is that 97 percent of them aren't dance majors," Austin said. "For the vast majority, it's strictly an extracurricular activity."

Music Club celebrates nearly half century of singers, songs

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In tune with the times, the Twin Falls Music Club has been serving Magic Valley musicians for almost 50 years. Group members look different today, but their mission still strikes the same note.

"When I first came to this area, women went to Music Club teas wearing hats and gloves," said club president Judy Prescott, a piano teacher who's spent months preparing her students for this weekend's Junior Music Festival and Honors Concert.

Club members remain firmly committed to sharing their love of music with others.

"Today, the object of our club is to support and promote music education in youth," Prescott said.

Flashback: In 1950, Clayton Christensen helped organize the Twin Falls Music Club with Helen Allen, its first president. Christensen, who now lives in Twin Falls, was president of the Pocatello Music Club at the time.

There was a scholarship fund back then, but the group also held formal breakfasts.

A number of professional musicians, scattered around the country, got their starts in festivals sponsored by this music club.

Concert pianist Laura Vizzutti, the daughter of Twin Falls Music Club past president Margaret Vincent, cut her musical teeth in Twin Falls. And nationally recognized pianist Mark Newirth returned home to southern Idaho last year to perform two fundraising concerts for the Music Club.

Prescott's daughter Becky, a former Miss Twin Falls who's now studying music at Boise State University, also came up through the Music Club's ranks. And Metropolitan Opera soprano Joyce Guyton learned to sing in Twin Falls, too.

"A lot more kids participate in the music festivals now," said Twin Falls voice teacher Camille Cox, who sang in Twin Falls music festivals during the 1960s, when she was a teen-ager. "I think Richard Smack (Twin Falls High School music instructor) brought more interest in vocal music to the area."

When Cox was in high school, she said, anyone could be in choir.

Jerome piano teacher Judy Prescott helps Erin Williams and Kristin Hendrickson prepare a duet for this weekend's music festival.

Music festival

The Junior Music Festival Honors Concert, sponsored by the Twin Falls Music Club, is set for 7 p.m. Saturday at the Tyler Street Baptist Church, 288 Tyler St. Admission is free.

"You got done with football and were put in the choirs," she said.

Cox, who was a student of Marty Mead, is often on the other side of the stage now, judging state solo contests and preparing students for festivals.

"The kids get nervous," Cox said. "When you know someone is judging you and actually sitting there and picking you apart, it makes you real nervous."

She remembers one festival, during her teen years, when she sang a song in a foreign language and a judge asked her what the song was about. She didn't have a clue. "You acted like you were singing about flowers," the judge told her, "but the song was about a person having trouble because a love affair was over."

Now I always make sure my kids know what they are singing," Cox said, with a laugh.

This year's Junior Music Festival will feature 500 area music students ranging in age from 7 to 18. They will be playing the piano, singing, performing on wind and string instruments and competing in 700 categories.

About 60 music teachers, all of whom must be members of the Twin Falls Music Club, will send students to the festival.

Piano is always the largest group. There are 20 categories of competition for keyboard alone.

Ratings are superior, excellent, very good, good and fair. Judges, who are mostly from out of town and who are all paid, rate piano students on everything from touch-control to finger dexterity to phrasing to posture.

Other instrumental students and vocalists are critiqued just as stringently.

Judges choose the best students to perform an honors concert at the end of festival day.

In addition to sponsoring the Junior Music Festival, the 100-member Twin Falls Music Club sponsors a scholarship program, a Christmas performance and a Parade of American Music.

The club is affiliated with the National Federation of Music Clubs, headquartered in Indiana. There are 5,300 member organizations nationwide.

This week, in the Twin Falls member organization, the spotlight is on festival.

One long-time club member even has written the festival certificates, in calligraphy — 700 of them! For the kids who love music.

Steve Floyd of Burley and Trina Smith of Oakley star in 'The King and I' at Howell's Opera House in Oakley.

Oakley Valley Arts Council takes on 'The King and I'

"It's a love story, my dear."
— Yul Brynner to Gertrude Lawrence

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

OAKLEY — It's not so much the strain of nearly two hours on stage, emoting in young English, that's the toughest part of Steve Floyd's job.

It's the ghost on his shoulders.

"Everybody comes to see 'The King and I' expecting to see Yul Brynner," said Floyd, a Burley High School band teacher who's playing the role of the Thai king in the Oakley Valley Arts Council's production of the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical that opens tonight in Howell's Opera House. "I was a voice major in college and I've done a fair amount of musical theater — 'South Pacific,' 'The Music Man,' 'Oklahoma!' — but this is much, much more demanding."

Brynner, a Russian-born Tatar actor, played the Siamese monarch more than 4,000 times between the night he introduced the role on Broadway in 1951 until his death in 1985.

"Audiences expect you to look like him too," Floyd said. "My biggest concession is to get a real short haircut."

"This was to play the arts council decided to do a couple of years ago," said Harlo Clark, an Oakley grocer who has long been actor and a director of OVAC plays. "I volunteered to direct another play, and I kind of got roped into this. If I'd known how involved it would get, I'm not sure I wouldn't have gone through with it."

Trumpeter

Vizzutti wrote the piece for wind orchestra and trumpet, but he has added strings for this concert.

In the first movement, Vizzutti uses the piccolo trumpet to evoke images of Mount Fuji. In the second section, he features the mellow, melodic sounds of the flugelhorn to recollect the Temples of Kyoto. The suite concludes with a flashy "Bullet Train" movement, in which Vizzutti, himself, gets to shine on the B-flat trumpet.

Vizzutti has been a frequent visitor to Japan, where he is well known in musical circles.

Laura Vincent Vizzutti will perform with the symphony tonight, too. She holds a master's degree in chamber music and accompanying from the University of Southern Cal-

Troupe

seven hours a week, Austin said — many do more on their own.

Although he expects to see several alumni of his group in the Burley gym tonight, he doesn't have any Idahoans in the current ensemble.

"But when I go back to Idaho, I feel like I'm going home," Austin said. "I have a lot of friends in Twin Falls and I always run into a lot of former students."

Austin said he was the first clogging instructor in the Magic Valley, but now he calls it "an area with some fine dancers."

"I've been back a couple of times since I moved back here, and we had large, very appreciative audiences every time," he said.

Tickets available

The Oakley Valley Arts Council will present Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein's "The King and I" tonight, Saturday and Monday and again March 16-18, 20, and 22-25 at 8 p.m. at Howell's Opera House. Tickets are $6 for opening-night seats, $7.50 for the other performances. For reservations or information, call 677-ARTS.

Rodgers and Hammerstein wrote in a dozen speaking parts and half a hundred other characters, chorus and extras — a tall order for a town of 600.

"The king himself has 12 children," Clark said.

The story is about a Welsh widow, Anna Leonowens, who takes her 12-year-old son to Thailand to become teacher/governess to a forward-thinking Siamese emperor who's opening his kingdom to the West.

The king, actually the Emperor Mongkut, who ruled from 1851 through 1881, is worried about British and French colonial designs on his country and determined to bring Thailand into the 19th century in order to guarantee its independence.

But the king isn't as progressive as he believes himself to be, and Anna teaches him lessons in humility and love. He dies in her arms.

Brynner, an unknown, was cast by Joshua Logan, who directed the Broadway version of the play. Lawrence, a major Broadway star at the time, was the original Anna.

Deborah Kerr played the role in the 1956 Hollywood musical, in which Brynner won an Oscar.

"The racial aspect — a white woman, an Oriental man, in love — was a big concern of the producers before the play opened," Brynner said later. "But it never turned out to be much of an issue, even in the South after the movie opened."

"Our biggest departure from the script is that we decided to go with recorded music," Clark said. "We just couldn't find enough musicians with enough time to devote to coming down here three or four days a week for two months."

Anna is Trina Smith, a Rupert native and Ricks College graduate, who's been a part of several OVAC musicals.

"It's hard work because the two central characters have so much to do," she said. "There are only a few minutes when I'm not on the stage."

The dancers and the chorus were recruited from among local adults and OVAC's ready supply of youngsters.

Smith, Bruce Bailey and Gail Gillette are handling the choreography.

"There's a lot of pressure with this play because of the number of costume changes," Smith said. "The timing has to be just right."

It's the costumes that were the biggest challenge, Clark said. Most troupes don't have a lot of feathered, brocaded material hanging around suitable for 19th century Bangkok royal court.

"Compared to other musicals I've done, this one's got me tearing my hair out," Clark said. "It's been an adventure."

ifornia and has performed and presented workshops in Japan, New Zealand, Canada and Europe, as well as in the United States. For a time, she sang and played piano in Los Angeles television studios, and she took part in a TV special with John Wayne.

She recorded her newest CD, "A Trumpeter's Dream," in Japan with her husband, band leader and composer.

The Vizzuttis have three children, Marcus, 7; Nicholas, 5 and Gabriel, 3.

"We don't know if they are musical yet," said Allen Vizzutti in a phone interview last week, "but we have a piano and drum sitting in the living room, and they bash it all around a lot."

Vizzutti had just returned home from a Syracuse, N.Y., world premiere of "Emerald Concerto," which he wrote for trumpet and orchestra. He was happy. A-plus reviews and a sold-out concert hall tend to make a musician happy.

Vizzutti travels a lot, maybe a third of the year. His wife performs with him on one or two tours annually.

When he's home, he describes the family's Seattle digs as "a tall contemporary birdhouse sitting in a rain forest"; he spends time with his wife and children and composes music.

"I like to perform in Twin Falls because it's not a nervous situation," he said.

When asked if he gets a lot of positive affirmation from his in-laws, he responded with a chuckle.

"Oh yeah," he said. "I wish (mother-in-law) Margaret had a management company."

Will

"We were really lucky to have Dan (Mink) audition," Vannirnum said.

Director Whitehead agreed, saying, "I think he's wonderful. He puts across the humility of Will Rogers very well."

Mink, lead singer of the Sagebrush and Roses band, has been spinning ropes for about five years. He also is a veteran actor and singer from various college groups in Twin Falls and in Boise.

Mink said he enjoys the "Will Rogers Follies" because it is so lighthearted and fun.

"There's no conflict, no villain, no affairs," he explained. "The only dark force that appears in this play is that he helps raise money for the poor in the depths of the depression."

Stanger, playing Betty Baker, who becomes Mrs. Will Rogers, is in her 40th play. She's working with Mink, a college classmate, for the tenth time.

"I was tickled to get this part," she said. "It's been a blast."

As the real-life mother of eight, Stanger said she has great admiration for the character she plays.

In just one year, Stanger said, Will Rogers did four full-length motion picture shows, 52 radio shows, 365 newspaper columns, spoke at 151 banquets, and toured through 19 countries on the continents.

"The thing that amazes me about (Betty) was that her husband was never, ever home, and she still loved him," Stanger said. "She supported him and encouraged him. Wouldn't that be hard? And she was a very good mother."

Whitehead, a 20-year veteran of the Dilettantes, said his 24-member cast is delightful to direct and the script is historical as well as smart and well-paced.

"This particular play is not your standard musical comedy," he said.

"It's a Ziegfeld Follies show with people dancing and singing with intermittent dialogue of Will and his wife and kids ... We wanted to make it as authentic as possible."

Rogers, casually reading his newspapers and liking everyone he met, was a Ziegfeld star for six years. Friends convinced him even to run for president.

Whitehead said Rogers' knowledge of government may or may not have been good. But one thing is for sure: This upbeat "Cherokee kid" was a national hero.

"Older citizens will remember Will Rogers," Whitehead said. "I think he would have been a popular president."

Paul Winter Consort to perform

Winter

KETCHUM - The Paul Winter Consort will perform in concert at 8:30 p.m. Saturday at Our Lady of Snow Catholic Church on Sun Valley Road. Doors will open at 8 p.m.

The Paul Winter Consort consists of three musicians: Paul Winter on soprano sax, Glen Velez on percussion and Jordan Rudes on grand piano.

Winter began recording jazz in the early 1960s and founded the consort in 1967. He has released 32 albums.

Tickets are $20 ($17 for members of the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities), and are available at the Sun Valley Center box office until 5 p.m. Saturday. No tickets will be sold at the church, and all seating is general admission.

For more information, call 726-9491.

Magic Valley Mall will host chess meet

TWIN FALLS - The Magic Valley Mall will host a Simultaneous Chess Exhibition from 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday at Center Court.

The SIMUL will feature 12-year-old Garrett Reynolds of Twin Falls, who is currently ranked No. 32 nationally in the 11-12 age group. A SIMUL is an exhibition wherein one player simultaneously plays several opponents. The player performing the SIMUL gets white every board and progressively rotates from board to board. The black player is required to make his move when the white player comes to his board. Garrett will play as many as 12 players at one time. Software Etc. and Radio Shack will display and demonstrate the latest hardware and software used to play chess.

The Magic Valley Chess Association is sponsoring the exhibition. For more information, call 733-3000 or 733-6186 after 6 p.m.

Boys Scouts set 32nd annual Cabaret

BURLEY - The Snake River Area Council of the Boys Scouts of America will present its 32nd annual Cabaret International Saturday at 7 p.m. at the Burley Inn.

Kerry Christensen, a yodeler and instrumentalist from Utah, will be the guest performer. Also on the program are The Standards, a Twin Falls capella singing group.

Tickets are $10 per couple, and are available by calling Spencer Williams at 734-0500 or the Boy Scout office at 733-2067.

The money will be used to support scouts throughout the Magic Valley.

New Theatre performs 'Perfect Ganesh'

KETCHUM - The New Theatre of Sun Valley will present Terrance McNally's "A Perfect Ganesh" tonight and Saturday at the next Stage Theatre.

The play, by the author of the stage version of "Kiss of the Spider Woman," is about the odyssey of two well-bred women through India and their encounters with the elephant-headed, human bodied Hindu god Ganesh.

Tickets are $15 for reserved seating and $10 for open seat, and are available at the Main Street Book Cafe or by phoning 726-3700.

Curtain time each evening is 8 p.m.

Gooding group plans Basque Dance

GOODING - The Gooding Basque Association has planned its annual Basque Dance for 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Saturday at the War Memorial hall on Third Avenue West and Idaho Street.

Music will be provided by the Ordago Band from Boise. The Oinkari Dancers from Boise will perform during intermission, and a lamb auction will follow. A bar will be available for adults, and chorizos, pop and coffee will be sold throughout the evening.

Cost is $4 for adults and $2 for ages 12 to 18. Children under 12 are free. The public is invited.

Legal support to help with fund-raiser

TWIN FALLS - Legal support staff (assistants, paralegals, secretaries, court reporters, etc.) in the Magic Valley area will be answering the telephones for Idaho Public Television's annual fund-raiser from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sunday.

Eric and Susan Eitesvold of the Metropolis Bakery & Cafe will provide food for the telephone crew. For more information, call Heidi McCracken at 326-3184.

Main Street features art slide show

KETCHUM - A slide show featuring artists Joe Kinnebrew, Gina Lagergren and Jack Burgess is planned for 4 p.m. Sunday at the Main Street Book Cafe, 211 Main St.

"Artist at Work" is a series sponsored by the Book Cafe. It was conceived in association with The Artists Group to publicize the Wood River Valley's wealth of artistic talent. For more information, call 726-9700.

Homeless shelter to receive auction funds

TWIN FALLS - A Silent Birdhouse Auction is planned for 7:30 to 9 p.m. Tuesday at the Weston Plaza, 1350 Blue Lakes Blvd. N.

More than 85 birdhouses have been donated by individuals, boy scouts, artists, businesses and schools in the Magic Valley. Proceeds will benefit the Valley House homeless shelter which opened in February. Community leaders have previously donated more than $60,000 to get the project started, and $60,000 more is needed to complete the purchase of the property and provide adequate operating funds. The public is invited. For more information, call Roger Wyatt at 734-7736.

Little Theater chooses spring show

TWIN FALLS - The Magic Valley Little Theater has chosen an audience participation murder mystery, "Murder of a Gangster" by Eileen Moushey, for its spring show. The audience will be involved in solving the mystery and encouraged to dress in the era of the show, the 1920s.

Tryouts will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. March 20 at Canyon Motors Subaru. People interested in trying out but unable to do so on March 20 should call Jean Hovey, Magic Valley Little Theater president, at 734-8860.

The dinner theater will be presented May 11, 12 and 13 at the Turf Club.

Ballroom Dancers eye Twin Falls chapter

TWIN FALLS - The United States Amateur Ballroom Dancers Association is organizing a chapter in the Twin Falls area. A steering committee of local dancers will be formed to guide the project and enroll members.

The local chapter will sponsor monthly social dances for members and the general public. Each dance will generally consist of a one-hour dance lesson and three hours of general dancing and dance demonstrations. The chapter will also promote ballroom dance training at local colleges and high schools and will seek to increase the number of business establishments that offer ballroom dancing to the public. Membership will be open to singles and couples. Beginners are welcome and will be helped to get started. The USABDA is a non-profit, volunteer organization and is the governing body for amateur ballroom dancing in the United States. Chapters are found nationwide.

Local dancers interested in helping form the chapter are asked to call 1-800-447-9047 or write to the USABDA, P.O. Box 400, Toano, VA 23168.

Arts Council seeks area volunteers

TWIN FALLS - The Magic Valley Arts Council is seeking area residents interested in volunteering with the organization.

People are needed now and in the future to fill positions on the group's board of directors and on a variety of committees. Help is also needed in the arts council office and at events. Projects and interests include Arts on Tour, the Foreign Film Festival, Kids Art in the Park, arts in education, Hispanic Heritage Fiesta, visual arts showcases, a bi-monthly newsletter and Old Town Twin Falls.

For more information, call 734-ARTS.

Blood, Sweat & Tears enters its 3rd decade of 'daring and innovative, a fiery fusion of jazz and rock, blues and the classics.'

Blood, Sweat & Tears sheds all for 3rd decade

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

JACKPOT — Now entering its third decade on stage, Blood, Sweat & Tears is still being called "daring and innovative, a fiery fusion of jazz and rock, blues and the classics."

Through the years, the trailblazing band has consisted of conservative-trained musicians who have played Mingus and Miles, studied Bartok and Beethoven and grown up on Ray Charles. But today, as in its glory days, the heart, soul and voice of Blood, Sweat & Tears is David Clayton-Thomas.

The British-born, Canadian-bred Clayton-Thomas joined BS&T in January 1969, and what followed was one the most extraordinary years any rock group ever experienced.

In March of that year, "You've Made Me So Very Happy" went to No. 2 on the charts; in June, "Spinning Wheel" followed suit — and stayed there for 12 weeks.

In August, BS&T was invited to Woodstock, and in October, their recording of Laura Nyro's "And When I Die" climbed to No. 2. In all, the band's first album with Clayton-Thomas sold 10 million copies worldwide.

Much of its quicksilver rise to fame could be traced to Clayton-Thomas' snarling, bone-deep bass, which gave what was essentially a pop-jazz quartet a hard, bluesy edge.

But its liberal and innovative use of brass also set the tone for jazz fusion rockers of the '70s, such as Chicago.

Clayton-Thomas was born in London to a show-business family. His mother was a music-hall pianist, his grandfather a British vaudeville. The family eventually moved to Canada, Clayton-Thomas father's native land.

The young musician began to surface in a Canadian musical renaissance of artists such as Joni Mitchell, Neil Young and Stephen Stills. He earned a trip to New York in 1965 to appear on TV with fellow Canadian Paul Anka.

Clayton-Thomas stayed in New York, playing coffeehouses for Nevada tourism office offers '95 coupon book

The Times-News

CARSON CITY, Nev. — The new 1995 Discover Nevada Bonus Book is now available.

Lt. Gov. Lonnie Hammgrum, chairman of the Nevada Commission on Tourism which publishes the book, said coupons are a well-established marketing tool in resort cities and are one of the reasons Nevada enjoys the reputation of being a vacation bargain. The book is the first coupon promotion that encompasses the entire state and not only attracts visitors from outside the state but also encourages Nevadans to explore their home state.

A new feature of the 1995 Bonus Book is a guide to the private recreational vehicle parks in Nevada, with information on particular amenities at each facility. The 52-page book is divided into sections

Clayton-Thomas and working with artists such as James Taylor and Jimi Hendrix. In Greenwich Village, he discovered Al Kooper and Steve Katz's band.

Kooper, a keyboardist, and Katz, a guitarist, had played with The Blues Project in the mid-'60s. They formed BS&T, along with drummer Bobby Colomby and bassist Jim Fielder, in 1968.

Kooper left at the end of that year, and Clayton-Thomas replaced him. A Columbia recording contract soon followed.

In Clayton-Thomas' three years with BS&T, its songs spent 52 weeks on the Billboard charts. He left in 1972; Katz and then Colomby soon followed.

But Clayton-Thomas rejoined the group in 1974, and he's performed with it, off and on, ever since.

Today, with an arsenal of digital hardware in his home in upstate New York, Clayton-Thomas' still writes for BS&T.

"To have my songs recorded by musicians of this caliber is a constant inspiration," he told one reporter.

"But live performance makes this band go. It's a great concert band and a joy to sing with."

BS&T was the first contemporary band to play the Metropolitan Opera, The Fillmore, Caesar's Palace and the Newport Jazz Festival all in the same year.

It was also the first to break through the Iron Curtain with an historic 1970 tour of Eastern Europe.

And, of course, there was Woodstock.

At 52, Rivers still rocks, rolls, remembers

JACKPOT — Johnny Rivers, who won his first Grammy Award in the '60s, just finished filming a CNN-TV segment for "Entertainment News."

The secret of his longevity? "Tenacity, mostly," he said, in a Monday phone interview. "Stay with it; that's what I've always done."

The persistent saga began in the mid-1960s, when Rivers helped launch America's disco craze at the Whiskey A Go Go in Los Angeles.

"There was nothing else going on around L.A. at the time, so I started with the blues and rock 'n' roll I had been playing in junior high and high school," Rivers recalled.

He's still got the same sound, which, he explained, is "coming around" again.

"It's what Eric Clapton does, too," he said. On stage, Rivers sings his oldies hits, such as "Mountain of Love," "Seventh Son," "Baby I Need Your Lovin'," "Rockin' Pneumonia," "Swainy" to the Music (Slow Dancin') and his only No. 1 record, "Poor Side of Town." He backs up his music well, with 30 million records sold and 17 gold records.

The New York City-born, Louisiana-bred Rivers was discovered by super-DJ Alan Freed in New York in 1958, but didn't hit the big time until after he moved to Los Angeles and recorded back-to-back covers of Chuck Berry's "Memphis" and "Maybelline" in 1964. Two years later, he did the theme song for a new BBC-TV action-adventure series starring Patrick McGeehan, and "Secret Agent Man" went to No. 3 on the Billboard charts, where it stayed for 10 weeks.

Through the years, he has been a record publisher and producer, in addition to his work in the spotlight. He's credited with discovering Jimmy Webb and the Fifth Dimension and with publishing Glen Campbell's first No. 1 record, "By the Time I Get to Phoenix." He also got Beach Boy Brian Wilson back into the studio in the 1970s to sing harmony on Rivers' chart records of Wilson's "Help Me Rhonda."

Now 52, Rivers still lives in L.A. with his wife and their three young children. A grown son from Rivers' first marriage works for a production company and is currently making a film about the history of rock.

Rivers writes songs in his spare time. Occasionally, he takes a break and heads to his place in the country,

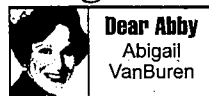

Johnny Rivers will bring his blues-rock music to Cactus Petes, where he likes to ride horses. He may soon start work on a live album, he said. Meanwhile, he's reactivating his record label, Soul City Records. He tours most of the year, but only three or four nights at a time. He's scheduled to take his music to Australia, South America, Brazil and Argentina. After he performs at Cactus Petes.

Switch in store gives credit where none is due

DEAR ABBY: My future daughter-in-law went to an all-night drugstore at 11 p.m. to fill an emergency prescription. She gave the sales clerk her major credit card to pay for it. The card was returned, and she immediately put it in her purse.

Three days later, when she attempted to pay for a purchase with her credit card, she was told that the card she was using had been canceled! The card had another person's name on it. She immediately called the credit card company, and was told that her card had been charged to its maximum limit. She canceled her card. Fortunately, the company agreed not to hold her liable for the charges she had not made.

The clerk at the drugstore had switched cards and she had used the clerk's card in its place. (The credit card company said this is not uncommon!)

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

Abby, please advise your readers always to look at their credit cards when they are returned to ensure the card has not been switched for a stolen look-alike. You may use my name.

—DAVE KINGSTON, VENTURA, CALIF.

DEAR DAVE: Thank you for a valuable tip. It takes only a moment to check the name on your credit card after making a purchase. That extra moment could spare you the hassle of replacing a stolen credit card.

DEAR ABBY: I never thought I'd be writing to you, but I have nowhere else to turn. I am 14 years old, and fear that I may be suffering from depression.

I don't see any reason for this — I have a great family and some good friends. Yet sometimes I feel just horrible when I lie in bed at night.

Abby, please tell me the signs of depression, and what to do if I have it.

—ANONYMOUS, U.S.A.

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Depression is a "whole body" illness. It can affect the way you eat, sleep, and the way you feel about yourself.

If you feel persistently sad, worthless, hopeless, and have withdrawn from your friends and activities, you may well be depressed. It is not just a "blue" mood.

While it's normal to feel sad or moody once in a while, if these feelings last for more than two weeks, you may be suffering from depression.

In most cases, depression can be successfully treated with medication and counseling.

It is very important to discuss your feelings with your parents, your school nurse or counselor.

You can also call the National Mental Health Association at its toll-free number (1-800-468-1515) or your local mental health association to learn more about depression, its signs and treatment.

Please write to me again and let me know how you are. I care.

DEAR ABBY: Please remind your readers again that some of us older folks cannot get to the telephone after only three rings. It is infuriating to get up out of a chair to answer the telephone just in time to hear the calling party hang up.

—FAY MOFFETT, JUNCTION CITY, ORE.

DEAR FAY M.: Thanks for a thoughtful reminder. Readers, I recommend letting it ring seven or eight times.

'Milk Money' reaches local video shelves

The Times-News

New movies in Twin Falls video stores this week:

"Milk Money" (PG-13) — Three 12-year-old suburban boys sit in a tree-house musing about life's mysteries. They drop three objects into a shoebox time capsule: a photograph of one boy's dead mother, an eyelash curler and a diaphragm. Of the latter, one lad says it's a travel drinking cup. The smallest of the trio, Frank, correctly states its intended purpose.

This contradiction of wordliness and naivete contributes to the general mess of "Milk Money," a silly, offensive movie directed by Richard Benjamin. The story centers on Frank (Michael Patrick Carter), whose mother died in childbirth, his science teacher-ecologist father (Ed Harris), and the prostitute named V (Melanie Griffith) who comes into their lives.

Frank and his buddies, Kevin (Brian Christopher) and Brad (Adam LaVorgna), obsessed with girls, decide they'd like to see a naked woman. So they pool their money, hop on their bicycles and ride into the city to hire a hooker.

A hustler sees them flashing around a plastic bag full of coins, lures them to a garage and tries to take the money at

'Outbreak:' Be afraid, be very afraid

By Dolores Barclay
The Associated Press

Cute little white-faced monkeys frolic in the Zaire bush, while Army doctors in protective suits survey a group of mercenaries dying of a strange virus.

It's 1967, and the Army has a unique solution to the problem: Bomb the entire area to wipe out everyone and everything in it for miles around, keep the existence of the virus a secret and, above all, cover up everything.

Hoffman Freeman Sutherland could show up there.

But Gen. Billy Ford (Morgan Freeman) and Gen. McClintock (Donald Sutherland), who were responsible for covering up the original outbreak, order Daniels off the case.

Undeterred, Daniels warns his ex-wife, Robby (Rene Russo), who's about to head up a unit of the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta, and begs her to post a warning to all health-care personnel.

When the virus shows up first in Boston and later in the small California town of Cedar Creek, Daniels willfully disobeys his superiors, diverts a plane and takes it to California, where he leads the team fighting the horrific disease.

Movie review

Cedar Creek is threatened with total annihilation — first from the virus and then by the Army. It's up to Daniels and his crew to unlock the key to the killer disease and stop McClintock and Ford from blowing up the town.

"Outbreak" will keep you on the edge of your seat, and every time someone sneezes or coughs in the audience, you'll pay attention.

There's a wonderful scene in which a carrier of the virus coughs in a movie theater without covering his mouth. A computerized overlay shows a shower of vapor radiating through the audience and tiny particles zooming up nostrils and shooting down throats.

The lively screenplay for this cautionary tale is by Laurence Dvortz, an emergency room doctor, and writer Robert Roy Pool. It is rich in medical detail and peppered with wit. And the writers have given the second unit some hair-raising scenes. Watch for the helicopter chase.

Hoffman combines grit and humor in his role — Rizzo meets Arnold. He conveys an air of believable dedication and a strong sense of humanity.

He's teamed with Cuba Gooding Jr. as a young major on his first case and Kevin Spacey as the acerbic Major Casey Schuler. Gooding and Hoffman make a great pair — the chemistry couldn't be better. Theirs goes beyond mentor and protégé; there's also a touch of Laurel and Hardy.

Freeman is substantial as always, and Sutherland, everybody's favorite villain, definitely raises the his level.

"Outbreak" is a winner, although you could take exception with the hackneyed idea of the evil military and government collusion, and the speed with which Hoffman and Gooding solve the viral horror.

Produced by Academy Award-winner Arnold Kopelson ("Platoon") and Gail Katz ("In the Line of Fire"), "Outbreak" is rated R for graphic scenes of disease-riddled victims and death; there's lots of blood and lots of oozing sores. (Associated Press) (Mall Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley)

'Hoop Dreams' gives perfect shot of truth

By Hal Hinson
The Washington Post

Movie review

"Hoop Dreams" is the most powerful movie about sports ever made. Compiled from more than 250 hours of footage shot over five years, this extraordinary documentary about two Chicago teenagers who dream of becoming NBA stars is so absorbing and comprehensive and genuinely profound that it transcends the narrow parameters of its genre.

The realities of American life are the film's true subject, particularly that debilitated segment of the population that sustains itself with impossible dreams of escape. Although it was denied an Academy Award nomination, certainly no other movie — documentary or dramatic feature — in recent memory provides such a vivid account of inner-city culture.

When the movie picks up their stories, William Gates and Arthur Agee are rising high school freshmen who see basketball as a way out of their near-desperate circumstances. Almost by default, basketball is everything to them, and when a local scout brings them to the attention of the coach at St. Joseph's High School, a private school in Chicago's affluent suburbs, it looks as if they have been placed on a fast track for success.

The prestigious St. Joseph's is famous for being the alma mater of Detroit Pistons superstar Isiah Thomas. He is also the personal hero of young Arthur, who proudly wears his jersey number. And according to St. Joseph's coach Gene Pingatore and a round table of grizzled sportswriters, William is far enough along in his development to be touted as the "next Isiah."

At first the boys seem to blossom in their new circumstances. Not only does William become a starter on the varsity, he also becomes an honor student. And though Arthur, who is slimmer and less mature physically than William, makes it only as far as the freshman squad, he also seems to be coming into his own.

Soon, though, Pingatore decides that Arthur isn't coming along as quickly as he had hoped as a ballplayer. William's scholarship is supplemented by a sponsor, but Arthur is not so lucky and once his prospects as an athlete begin to fade, he is forced to leave St. Joseph's and return to public school, where his academic performance plummets.

For all of William's early accomplishments, he too begins to have academic problems, especially after he injures his knee and is forced to miss a game. And once the troubles begin, there is very little in the way of guidance from parents, coaches or teachers for these young dreamers to fall back on. Arthur's father, for example, is shown shooting baskets with him and then hustling off to buy drugs.

For filmmakers Steve James, Frederick Marx and Peter Gilbert, who observed the boys and their families at close range, the betrayal of these young people by both families and public institutions borders on the criminal. The coaches are shown as parasites and manipulators who make pie-in-the-sky promises to their young athletes while paying lip service to their parents' concerns about the importance of scholastic achievement.

It's impossible to watch "Hoop Dreams" and not feel that American athletics exploits the fantasies of big-time wealth and celebrity that are envisioned by thousands of boys like Arthur and William. From the start, the notion of athletics as a game is nonexistent.

At three hours, "Hoop Dreams" (unrated) provides more emotion and human drama than 10 Hollywood movies. At times the frustrations of these kids and their families are excruciating. Despite all their setbacks, though, William and Arthur hold fast to their dreams.

By the time he is out of high school, William is a father and, unless by some miracle he becomes one of the select few who make a living from professional athletics, far worse off for his delusions of grandeur than he might have been without them. Yet, with so few viable alternatives available, who can blame these kids for indulging their one-in-a-million dreams?

"Hoop Dreams" isn't about the triumph of the human spirit or any of the other top 10 favorite sports clichés. It's about something far rarer in the movies and of vastly greater significance — it's about real life. (Twin Cinema, Magic Lantern Cinema of Ketchum.)

A sultry star is born in 'The Last Seduction'

Knight-Ridder News Services

Movie review

She is the exact opposite of the little girl with the little curl smack in the middle of her forehead. When Linda Fiorentino is good, she is very, very good; but when she is bad, she's better.

In "The Last Seduction," a viciously funny sexual thriller, Fiorentino is that sultriest of canons: the man-eater. She is so unrepentant it's exhilarating. Likewise the movie.

Not since Barbara Stanwyck and her ankle bracelet flounced down that spiral staircase to hell has an actress had so much fun breaking, um, hearts and drop-kicking them into the gutter.

Bridget is the kind of gal who runs through men like pantyliners. When first we meet the husky-voiced brunette with the gams longer and curvier than the Hudson River, she's managing a telemarketing service and needling male operators about their superior performance.

If this doesn't indelicately establish Bridget's, ahem, character, then the next scene certainly will. Knowing that he owes a bundle to a loan shark, Bridget blithely bilks her doctor husband (Bill Pullman) of a $700,000 drug-deal payoff before speeding off to upstate New York.

Tough toenails for Doc and the other men she leaves in her wake. If Bridget had a theme song it would be "My Way." If she had an idol (besides herself, of course) it would be Cruella DeVil. Who says there are no positive role models for women on screen?

Jazzy directed by John Dahl, who wastes not a nanosecond, "The Last Seduction" tailgates Bridget to a small town called Boston. There, she ultimately uses her black-widow techniques and her black-

Like the man who kills his parents and asks the court to have mercy on an orphan, Bridget is the type of dame who brutalizes her husband and expects sympathy as a battered wife, the type of con woman who seduces a man and complains of sexual harassment.

le — which involves staying in Boston and not immediately spending the loot — Frank asks the obvious question: "Anyone check you for a heart-beat lately?" For Bridget — who by this time has changed her name to Wendy — her heart is her least-used organ.

In this deeply satisfying B-movie written by newcomer Steve Barneick, he creates an anti-heroine as appealing as she is appalling. "The Last Seduction" derives much amusement from the fact that Bridget/Wendy is such a resourceful hypocrite.

Like the man who kills his parents and asks the court to have mercy on an orphan, Bridget is the type of dame who brutalizes her husband and expects sympathy as a battered wife, the type of con woman who seduces a man and complains of sexual harassment. She's a human Slinky, capable of contorting the truth — not to mention herself — every which way but up.

For the most part, "The Last Seduction" proceeds at a breathtaking clip with Bridget/Wendy swooning lawyer, and her swain Mr. Swale, Bridget also outmaneuvers a private eye played with canny determination by Bill Nunn. If the film has a failure, it's that one of its plot twists is unworthy of a heroine as deliciously bent as Bridget.

The moral of the story is as old as America: Beware of city slickers, especially the kind who are cute as lace pants and rarely wear them. (Magic Lantern Cinema of Ketchum)

Los Angeles Times

Movies playing in the Magic Valley this weekend. Ratings are by the Motion Picture Association of America and reviews are by the Los Angeles Times:

"The Brady Bunch Movie" — Is anyone surprised that this unquenchable TV sitcom family has finally made it to the big screen? (PG-13, racy innuendos.) (Twin Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley, Magic Lantern Cinema of Ketchum.)

"Heavyweights" — Lousy Disney comedy for pre-teens about a summer camp for fat kids. Ben Stiller plays the fitness guru who takes over the camp. Someone should have taken over the movie. (PG.) (Gooding Cinema, Ace Theatre of Wendley.)

"Hidewaway" — Jeff Goldblum and Christine Lahti deserve more than this Dean Cain supernatural thriller derivative about a man who returns from the dead linked with a killer. (R, for violence, language, sexuality.) (Twin Cinema, Jerome Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley, Ace Theatre of Wendley.)

"Just Cause" — Sean Connery is miscast as an unworlly Harvard law prof in this clunky murder mystery/thriller set mostly in the Everglades. (R, for strong violence and language.) (Twin Cinema)

"The Madness of King George" — Powered by a heroic performance by Nigel Hawthorne as the British monarch overtaken by a mysterious dementia. (Unrated, Adult themes and graphic scenes of torturous medical treatments.) (Twin Cinema) his lover's feisty, jealous 11-year-old son (Jonathan Taylor Thomas). The trouble is his mother (Farrah Fawcett) really hasn't prepared her son for her new live-in lover. (PG, for mild thematic material.) (Twin Cinema, Jerome Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley.)

"Nobody's Fool" — Paul Newman gives one of his most accomplished performances, infusing the role of an aging, Irish scamp with the easy enthusiasm and sense of the new usually associated with the young and the restless. (R, for some language and nudity.) (Twin Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley, The Movie House of Ketchum.)

"Pulp Fiction" — Despite strong writing and a revived performance from John Travolta, the Quentin Tarantino film's attempts to shock can feel strained and its self-referential quality can be tedious. (R, for strong graphic violence, drug use, pervasive strong language, sexuality.) (Jerome Cinema)

"The Quick and the Dead" — Welcome to Sergio Leone country, the West where everything is excessive and self-parody is the norm. (R, Western violence.) (Liberty Theater of Halley.)

"Babe" — With Macaulay Culkin in a wonderful "poor little rich boy" part, this Warners release is a smart, well-thought-out example of shiny Hollywood film-making, shrewdly balancing elaborate gadgetry and simple human nature. (PG, for mild violence and language.) (Twin Cinema)

"Roommates" — Peter Falk is quite good in this sudy but often surprisingly effective family generational saga about a Polish immigrant baker and his grandson (D.B. Sweeney). Julianne Moore captivates in a supporting role. (PG, for thematic elements, some sensuality, language.) (Twin Cinema)

Knights-Ridder News Service

The core of Led Zeppelin is aloft again, staking out new territory.

Jimmy Page and Robert Plant, the formerly quartet-some architects of the Zep sound, broke up 15 years ago. Now, they have rejoined forces, reshaped the familiar Zep riffs with a worldly flavor and embarked on a yearlong tour with an Egyptian string ensemble, a symphony orchestra and rock musicians.

And yes, people still care about Led Zeppelin. They care plenty, in fact: Led Zep's "reunion" CD, "No Quarter: Jimmy Page & Robert Plant Unledded," sold a quick million copies upon its release last November. And the MTV special that spawned the album earned the video network its highest ratings for an "Unplugged" show.

Of course, some doubted Led Zeppelin would ever get off the ground. Legend goes that Keith Moon, the late Who drummer, chorled when Yardbird and session guitarist Page explained his concept for a new blues-based band he wanted to form in 1968.

The band would narrow the gap between light and dark, blues and folk, hard rock and world music. Its lead vocalist would be Plant, a just-out-of-his-teens singer with little experience.

Predicted Moon: The band would sink not like a lead balloon, but like a lead zeppelin. A name was born. Fast-forward almost three decades and the name is gone, buried with the 1980 alcohol-related death of drummer Bonham. Without Bonham there is no Led Zeppelin. Page and Plant have said, "It is impossible to consider Led Zeppelin in the present tense," Plant told Rolling Stone. "Because if you took (his) drumming away, the band would sound useless."

MTV's offer to Plant to do an "Unplugged" performance pointed the way. Since he'd be doing Zeppelin material anyway, he called Page, who was coming off his ill-fated "Coverdale Page" project, a collaboration with ex-Whitesnake vocalist and Plant-soundalike David Coverdale (an acidic Plant later dubbed him David Coverversion). Page was amenable, and the two set to work, determined to avoid turning their reunion into an English-style event.

'Killing Moon' pulls players into mystery

Format: Four DOS CD-ROMs. 486/33 or better, 4MB RAM, mouse, soundboard, runs better on 8MB of RAM; even better on a Pentium with 16MB of RAM.

Estimated Selling Price, manufacturer: $59.95, Access Software Inc. Category: Mystery/comedy thriller. Players: One.

Roommated ages: 17 and up. How the game works: You feel as though you're actually being pulled into your PC monitor to become the main character, a lowly private investigator on the hunt for clues in a very intriguing murder/mystery. Filmed like a full length movie, you co-star with Brian Keith ("Family Affair") and Margo Kidder ("Superman") along with other colorful characters. You have freedom of movement to go where you want, when you want and also touch any objects on screen.

Good points, bad points: This blend of movies and computer games will eventually make 16-bit systems disappear, though it's for the high-end PC owner, not the beginner. The graphics are crisp and clear; the only thing close to this would be "Demolition Man for 3DO." To play the game, you will need to use the four CDs containing the whole story. This breaks up the momentum of the game, but it's not a major annoyance. The game features full hi-fidelity 16-bit 22KHz sound, which in itself is impressive. Hot on the heels of "Under a Killing Moon" is last week's release of "Wing Commander II" from Origin starring Mark Hamill ("Star Wars"), which takes this technology a step further.

The Verdict: The marriage of Hollywood and the PC world has started; this is real interactive technology!

The Boss, The Who release classic rock albums to mixed reviews

Wire service reports

New records

Bruce Springsteen, "Greatest Hits" (Columbia). As a career retrospective, this disc isn't adequate. Despite its 76-minute length, there's nothing from his first two albums ("Spirit in the Night," "Rosalina," "Growing Up," "Sandy," "Blinded by the Light").

The disc mostly ignores the complex, dramatic, tightly textured epics that made Springsteen the most important album artist of his time in favor of the singles that finally put him on the cover of People magazine.

As a demonstration of sustained artistic growth and ongoing commercial potential, "Greatest Hits" also fails. The disc is clearly top-heavy with great songs from his first decade — it's a long, slow slide from the glories of "Born to Run" and "Thunder Road" to "Streets of Philadelphia" and the four newly released tracks that end the album. He has reunited the E Street Band for the recently recorded ballads "Secret Garden" and "Blood Brothers," but he seems to have forgotten what they were for: hard-edged, savvy R&B-flavored rock 'n' roll. But Springsteen's projects always work on some level; here, he simply bows you over with the power of his rock 'n' roll vision. It's not the best of Springsteen — and he's not at his best, anymore — but over the past 20 years, who else was this good?

The Who, "Live at Leeds" (MCA). It's regarded as the first great live rock album, and a quarter-century later it still holds up with the best of them. So what could possibly be done to improve The Who's "Live at Leeds"? Simple. Finish the job.

Fresh from the success of last year's massive "30 Years of Maximum R&B" box set, Who archivists unearthed the entire master tape of the band's Valentine's Day 1970 performance at Leeds.

It seems what we've been getting all these years was just a small part of the story.

That entire legendary performance, save for most of "Tommy," is now included on the expanded compact disc in remastered sound. And it proves what Who fans have long known — the original four-man lineup kicked out better versions of Who classics than the bloated, 11-member band of hired hands that re-created those tunes on the Who's 1989 "Farewell Tour; Part II" tour.

Who purists may have a problem in that this is certainly NOT the classic "Live at Leeds" album they're used to.

The song lineup is disrupted with the added material and between-song chatter, with the original six-song set expanded to 14.

But in a time when most state-of-the-art live albums consist of fussy "unplugged" arrangements of classic rock songs, "Live at Leeds" is a gutsy reminder of what live rock 'n' roll is all about — a balance of noise, technique, feel and attitude. Long live rock.

Jordan ready to return to Bulls, sources confirm

Jordan

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan, estranged from the sport he adopted, is returning to the game he once ruled, a source told The Associated Press on Thursday night.

Jordan practiced again with the Chicago Bulls on Thursday, the third straight day he appeared at team headquarters, and will shortly trade in his baseball spikes for a new pair of Air Jordans.

A source close to Jordan, speaking on the condition he not be identified, said the three-time MVP has already made the decision to return to the NBA.

“He’s coming back, but he’s in no hurry to get there,” the source said. “He’s going to take a couple of weeks to tune up.”

Jordan retired suddenly only a few days before the start of the 1992-93 season. Though he has stayed in shape playing baseball, he “wants to make sure he’s near the top of his game,” the source said.

ESPN also reported Thursday night that Jordan is returning. The cable network, citing a “reliable” but unidentified source, said he will come back, but not for a couple of weeks. ESPN said Jordan is intent on being in good shape and wants to discuss the future of the Bulls with team management.

“He won’t rush back to improve the (team’s) playoff position,” the source told the AP. “It doesn’t matter to him as much whether they play the No. 1 or 2 seed as whether he’s in real good shape.”

Earlier Thursday, Bulls coach Phil Jackson talked about the prospect of Jordan’s return.

“We just have to hang tight here and wait to see what goes on,” Chicago Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. “He and I spoke about this possibility happening last September and October. It’s a

Free throws aren’t free for young Rupert athlete heading for semifinals

By Karen Baumber
Times-News writer

RUPERT — The cost of winning is high — especially if you are 9-year-old free throw champ Kody Cole.

Kody is heading to Portland, Ore., today to compete in the semifinals of the Northwest regional hoop shoot contest.

The Rupert basketball player qualified for the regional tournament by nailing 32 of 35 free throws. Kody’s age group shoot from four feet in front of the regulation free throw line.

But the price of victory has cost more than just hours and hours of practice.

Kody loves to jam a basketball on his 6-foot breakaway rim in his house. But, as Kody and his parents will tell you, he’s broken lots of things.

“I’ve broken lamps and lights,” he said.

His father, Sid Cole, said Kody has learned a lot from the little rim in the house.

“But when he starts bringing the whole neighborhood over, there needs to be a referee,” Cole said.

But putting up with his zealotry for basketball has paid off for his parents as well as Kody.

By winning the state hoop shoot contest, Kody and his parents received an all-expense paid vacation to Portland for the regional event. His parents will have to pay only for his sister, Brandi.

If Kody beats the other three boys in his age group, he will receive another paid vacation to Indianapolis for the finals.

“I’m getting real excited,” Kody said. “I’m not very nervous though. I’m just going to shoot the best I can.”

Kody seems to handle pressure well. In the state competition, Kody tied Geoffrey Herzog from Pocatello sending the two shooters to a shootout.

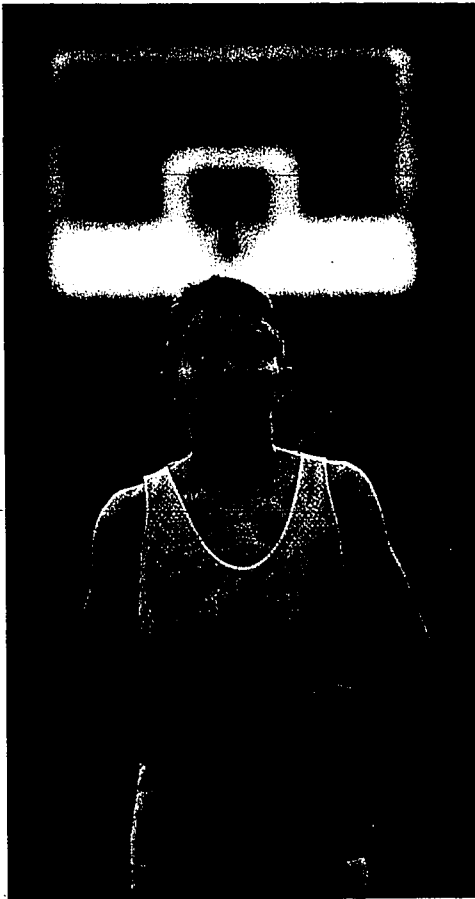

Both made hit all five in the first shootout. Geoffrey hit only four of five on the second shootout and Kody nailed all five to advance to the regionals.

“I’ve been practicing since the first of March at the Rupert Civic Center,” Kody said. “I go there everyday from 3:15 p.m. to about 5 p.m. Sometimes I practice longer and sometimes shorter. If I’m doing good I usually stay longer.”

But Kody does more than just shoot baskets. He led his city league basketball team to a second-place finish.

“My highest point scoring game was 30 points,” he said. “We were tied at first and I wasn’t there and we played a real easy team and we lost to them by a lot.”

And if Kody isn’t playing in the league or shooting at the civic center, he plays with his neighbor and mentor Lance Gibson.

“We have a giant court,” Kody said.

“We put down a giant court but we only have one hoop at our house. I play a whole bunch. I usually play with Lance or my dad.”

“He’s always been accurate in basketball,” his father said. “He just keeps making them.”

Skater Stojko keeps title in Canada; Eldredge takes 2nd

The Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, England — Defending champion Elvis Stojko, ignoring the pain of a recent career-threatening injury, won the men's title Thursday at the World Figure Skating Championships.

Stojko became the first repeat champion since fellow Canadian Kurt Browning won three titles from 1989-91.

“It’s hard to put into words,” Stojko said. “It’s a sweet victory. I’ve been through a heck of a lot in the last few weeks. People said I wasn’t going to be ready, but I knew I could do it and I’ve proved it to myself.”

Stojko touched down trying a rare quadruple jump, but he didn’t need it. Performing as Christopher Columbus to the soundtrack of “1492: Conquest of Paradise” he hit six of seven triple-jump attempts.

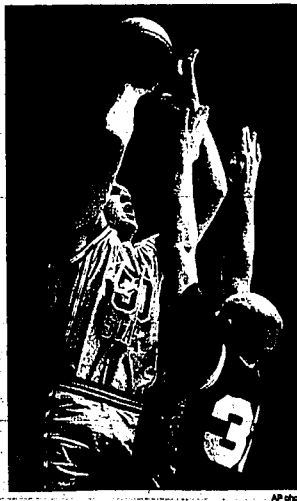

The French judge gave Stojko a perfect 6.0 for technical merit, and the Canadian received no mark less than 5.8 for either technical merit or presentation to finish first on six of the nine scoresheets.

The other three judges voted for U.S. champion Todd Eldredge, who completed a remarkable comeback.

No. 3 Bobcats hand Vandals early loss

The Associated Press

OGDEN, Utah — Quadre Lollis scored 20 points and pulled down nine rebounds as Montana State rallied late against underdog Idaho to claim a 77-66 Big Sky Tournament opener Thursday night.

Kwesi Coleman added 15 points and Eric Talley added 12 as the third-seeded Bobcats (21-7) earned a spot in Friday's semifinals.

Mark Leslie had 18 points for Idaho (12-15), including four 3-pointers, while Shawn Dirden accounted for the Vandals' other five treys on the way to a 17-point performance.

Trailing by seven points early in the second half, the Bobcats went on an 11-2 run keyed by Adam Leschman's 3-pointer and Lollis' four points — including a pair of free throws that gave Montana State a 43-41 lead with 13:34 remaining.

Nate Gardner's bucket three minutes later gave Idaho what proved to be its last lead, 51-49.

Big Sky basketball

The Bobcats overtook the Vandals 20-7 over the next seven minutes, building an 11-point lead on Talley's two foul shots with 2:40 to play.

Idaho could get no closer than 69-63, on Dirden's trey at the 1:11 mark, as the Bobcats scored eight of the game's final 11 points.

The Vandals, opening with a 16-7 run that began and ended on 3-pointers by Leslie, jumped to the early lead before Montana State countered the Vandals hot outside shooting — 9-9-16 for the game from 3-point territory — with buckets inside the paint. Lollis' three-point play and Coleman's back-to-back buckets trimmed Idaho's lead to 23-20. The Bobcats followed with Talley's baseline jumper, and then Nico Harrison's dunk off a rebound tied it at 26-26 with 3:37 to intermission.

World Indoors shine less brightly

BARCELONA, Spain — With the 1992 Olympic stadium as a backdrop, the fifth World Indoor Championships begin today with many stars missing.

The championships, already beset by numerous defections, lost two more marquee names today, including Linnor Christie. Christie, who won the Palau Sant Jordi will be the site for a championship record 695 athletes from 140 countries, the number of absent athletes will overshadow those who will compete in the three-day meet, the biggest sporting event in Barcelona since the '92 Games.

Among those absent, in addition to Christie, were Jackie Joyner-Kersey, Noureddine Morceli, Michael Johnson, Moses Kiptanui, Gwen Torrence, Dan O'Brien, Heike Drechsler and Frankie Fredericks. Joining Christie on the growing absence list Thursday was Venuste Nyongabo, the sensational, 21-year-old middle distance runner from Burundi.

Nyongabo, ranked No. 2 in the world at 1,500 meters and scheduled to compete in the 3,000, arrived Wednesday, hopeful of running. However, he did not have a visa, and after an ugly three-hour confrontation at the airport, Nyongabo boarded another plane and returned to Italy, where he lives and trains.

Williams grabs early Ping-Welch lead

TUCSON, Ariz. — After firing a 5-under-par 67 to earn a share of the first-round lead Thursday at the $450,000 Ping-Welch's LPGA Championship, Kim Williams talked about how little she missed.

"I only missed one fairway today," said Williams, who shares the lead with Karen Noble at Randolph North golf course. "I missed four greens. I putted very well — 27 puts. I missed a 1-footer but I made the long ones."

Missed seems to be a word that follows Williams around. As she entered a drug store last July in Youngstown, Ohio, a target shooter's stray bullet struck her in the neck and just missed her carotid artery. Last year's Player of the Year, Beth Daniel, was third (68) while Danielle Ammaccapane and last week's winner, Barb Thomas, were tied for fourth (69).

Surgery to end Warrior guard's season

OAKLAND, Calif. — Golden State Warriors guard Tim Hardaway will have season-ending surgery next week to repair ligament damage in his left wrist, the team said Thursday.

Hardaway will be in uniform when the Warriors visit the Los Angeles Clippers on Friday night. Hardaway scored 23 points and had 16 assists as the Warriors beat the Clippers on Wednesday.

Earlier Wednesday, Hardaway was examined in Los Angeles by Dr. Norm Zemel of the Kerlan-Jobe Clinic. Zemel confirmed the previous diagnosis of ligament damage and the need for a season-ending operation.

Until a firm date is set, Hardaway said he wanted to keep playing.

NCAA changes scoring system for tests

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. — A new scoring system in use by the Educational Testing Service will require prospective student-athletes to score an 820 on the SAT test to be eligible to compete as freshmen at Division I and II schools this fall, the NCAA said Thursday.

But the higher score does not mean students will have to do better on the tests, the NCAA said. The 820 score is nearly equivalent to a combined math and verbal score of 700 under the old scoring system.

"Student-athletes will not have to answer any more questions right in order to obtain a score," said Ursula Walsh, NCAA director of research. "The standard that student-athletes have to reach to be eligible is the same. The only thing that has changed is the number that the Educational Testing Service assigns to a particular performance on its test."

The new scoring requirements will pertain to students who take the SAT test in April, May or June.

Students who scored a 700 on the SAT test before April 1 are not affected by the new scores. Students who take the ACT test, which has not changed, also are not affected.

Xavier basketball players arrested

CINCINNATI — Two Xavier University basketball players were arrested early Thursday after a fight at a bar.

Pete Sears, 21, a senior swingman from Cleveland, was charged with assault. De'wan Rose, 22, a senior forward from Chicago, was charged with resisting arrest and disorderly conduct.

Both players were arraigned Thursday in Hamilton County Municipal Court, where their cases were continued until Tuesday.

Rose posted $1,500 bond and was released from the Hamilton County Justice Center. Sears was released from jail later in the day on a $1,000 bond.

Sears, 6-foot-4, struck a 24-year-old employee of Cooter's in the face after a fight inside the bar, police said. The employee suffered cuts on his mouth.

According to the police report, Rose, 6-8, allegedly tried to fight the bouncers. After being told he was under arrest for disorderly conduct, Rose refused to put his hands behind his back. It took three officers to subdue Rose and make the arrest.

Duper bought cocaine, supplier says

MIAMI — Mark Duper used his Miami Dolphins jersey number 85 as a code when he beaped his cocaine dealer about 50 times in eight months, the supplier testified Thursday at the ex-player's federal drug trial.

Brad Gallagher, who was working as an informant when he set up the sale of two pounds of cocaine to Duper last May, said he met the star receiver at a strip club in November 1993 months after he had been cut by the Dolphins.

Gallagher said he sold cocaine to Duper for the first time when a strip club dancer besped him from a Deerfield Beach hotel.

Gallagher arrived to find her with Duper, who paid for the cocaine, he said. The second sale came only six to eight hours later. Same pair, same place.

Duper, 36, and his brother-in-law Brian Briggs, who authorities say took delivery of the cocaine, are charged with cocaine possession with intent to distribute and conspiracy. If convicted, each could face 10-year prison terms and $4 million fines.

Celtics deny report of Lewis, drugs

BOSTON — The Boston Celtics denounced as "incited" and "gutless" a Washington Journal story suggesting that cocaine played a role in Reggie Lewis' death, and even produced his widow to say he never used drugs.

The article published Thursday said the Celtics, Lewis' family, some doctors and lawyers sidestepped the possibility that cocaine contributed to his heart problems and thus failed to prevent his death in 1993. It also said that the team could have been hurt financially if Lewis had been found to have used drugs.

Celtics chairman Paul Gaston denied that the Celtics gave Lewis anything but the best medical care and said the team would sue reporter Ron Suskind, the paper and its parent company, Dow Jones & Co., for $10 million.

Weather puts halt to America's Cup

SAN DIEGO — With time and wind running out Thursday, Mighty Mary and Young America quit their America's Cup match as the two boats were on the final turn, and no points were awarded.

With Young America almost 9 minutes in front of the all-women team, the light and unpredictable winds that had prevailed during the match faded to virtually nothing.

After almost four hours of competition, and with nightfall looming, both syndicates dropped their masts and pulled out of the race. America's Cup rules set deadlines for the boats to reach the first three markers and a course deadline of 4 hours, 5 minutes.

It was the final race of the fourth round for the women's team. Young America and Team Dennis Conner will race Friday, the final day of the round.

The women have a disappointing record of 5-16.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Perfect. The San Antonio Spurs, to a man, could think of no better way to describe their final play Thursday night.

Pro basketball

Sean Elliott got free on an inbounds play with one second left and scored the winning layup at the buzzer as the Spurs beat the Cleveland Cavaliers 100-98.

The Spurs, masters of the close game, won for the ninth time in the last 10 games overall and for the ninth consecutive time in games decided by three points or less.

Cleveland has lost five of its last six games.

David Robinson scored 26 points and Elliott 19 for the Spurs. Dennis Rodman grabbed only 10 rebounds, nearly eight under his average, but got the biggest one of the game by running down Terrell Brandon's missed 20-foot shot with one second left.

After a timeout, the Spurs' Doc Rivers inbounded the ball from half-court, finding Elliott open near the right side of the basket after he stepped away from Cleveland's Chris Mills near the foul line.

Trail Blazers 99, Heat 90

MIAMI — Otis Thorpe had his highest point total as a member of the Trail Blazers, getting 22 points as Portland kept up its mastery of the Heat and ran its career record against Miami to 14-1.

Guard James Robinson came off the bench to score 16 points, and forward Cliff Robinson added 14 for Portland, which made eight 3-point shots.

The Heat was paced by Glen Rice and Billy Owens with 16 points apiece.

Hornets 112, SuperSonics 99

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Alonzo Mourning scored 35 points and Dell Curry connected on three key 3-pointers in the final four minutes to lead Charlotte over Seattle.

The Hornets, who ended the game with a 20-9 run, posted their first home victory over Seattle in more than two years. The Sonics lost for the fourth time in six games.

Mourning also grabbed 13 rebounds. Curry finished with 22 points, including 18 on his 6-of-12 shooting from outside the 3-point line. Larry Johnson added 21 points and eight assists. Seattle was led by Kendall Gill with 23 points and 11 rebounds.

Portland guard Terry Porter loses the ball after being pushed by Miami's Glen Rice during their game Thursday in Miami.

Michigan State is at home against Wisconsin on Saturday, while the Boilermakers host Michigan.

Martin, the Big Ten Player of the Week after consecutive 29-point games against Iowa and Illinois, got off to a slow start.

The senior forward suffered through a 5-for-14 first half, but still scored 14 points. He had three 3-pointers in the first half, however, including one with six seconds left in the game 35-35.

No. 8 Massachusetts 63, Temple 44

AMHERST, Mass. — Massachusetts came up with four of a kind for the second time this season.

The eighth-ranked Minutemen beat Temple 63-44 Thursday night in the championship game of the Atlantic 10 tournament, their fourth consecutive postseason title to go along with four straight regular-season crowns.

The only team to have a longer run as conference double champion was North Carolina State, which won both in the Southern Conference from 1947-51.

The blowout was uncharacteristic of these schools, who met in the tournament championship game for the third straight year. Earlier Thursday, Hawaii surprised UTEP 66-65 and Colorado State stunned BYU 75-73.

Women's games

No. 4 Louisiana Tech 72, Arkansas State 51

RUSTON, La. — No. 4 Louisiana Tech achieved one goal. Another victory.

Raquael Spurlock's 14 points and 10 rebounds led the Lady Techsters to a 72-51 victory over Arkansas State in Thursday night's semifinals of the Sun Belt Conference women's tournament.

The Crimson Tide (21-8) saw a 9-point first-half lead dwindle to 26-24 when Alicia Dunks converted a three-point play with 15:56 remaining, but the Vols (11-16) never were able to get closer.

The victory sends the Crimson Tide into a Friday night quarterfinal game against Georgia. In other first-round games earlier Thursday Vanderbilt crushed Louisiana State 85-61 to draw fifth-ranked Arkansas, and Auburn hammered South Carolina 81-66, setting up a test against No. 3 Kentucky, who won its 37th SEC title in the regular season.

No. 22 Utah 72, San Diego State 63

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — San Diego State was thinking upset, but on a night when the Western Athletic Conference tournament provided two earlier surprises, 22nd-ranked Utah would have no such notion.

WAC player of the year Keith Van Horn scored 12 points and Brandon Jessie added 21, lifting the Runnin' Utes (25-5) into the WAC semifinals with a 72-63 win Thursday over never-say-die San Diego State.

Earlier Thursday, Hawaii surprised UTEP 66-65 and Colorado State stunned BYU 75-73.

The Aztecs (11-17) showed up with plenty of fight, leading Utah 38-27 after the first half and before the Utes assembled a 13-6 run over the next 5:11 to pull ahead, Utah led 57-50 with 7:24 left after Jessie sank two throws, but San Diego State had one more breath.

Women's games

No. 18 George Wash. 97, St. Bonaventure 86

PHILADELPHIA — Debbie Henry scored 29 points as George Washington downed St. Bonaventure 97-86 Thursday night in the quarterfinal round of the Atlantic 10 tournament.

Henry's team led 22 points into the final minutes of the game for George Washington (22-5). Tajama Abraham added 15 points for the Colonial women and grabbed 10 rebounds.

Big Sky women eye title

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — Eastern Washington's head coach Heidi VanDerwever isn't especially intimidated by playing conference leader Montana in the first round of the Big Sky women's basketball tournament Friday.

"Montana is traditionally such a power. Teams like that have such a mental advantage, and you fight that initially. But once you figure out that they run the same and shoot the same as you do, you can let down and play some basketball," she said.

The opening game has Boise State against Montana State.

The fourth seeded Eagles (8-6 league, 12-14 season) upset Montana last week to earn their first playoff berth since 1990. The victory ended a 17-game losing streak to the Lady Griz, and won an eight-game winning streak for Montana.

Montana coach Robin Selvig was philosophical about the loss.

"Losing to Eastern Washington just gave us one more in the loss column. You always know you can lose games...but that's the way it goes."

The Lady Griz (23-6, 12-2) currently lead the nation in scoring defense, holding opponents to 54.4 points per game.

Guard Sherri Brooks is 17th in the nation in steals, averaging 3.6 per game. She has an average of 12.6 points per game and four assists.

Jodi Heinrich leads the league in rebounds with an average 7.8 per game, as well as scoring an average 11.8 points. Kristy Langston-Schlimgen has an average 12.5 points per game.

Eastern Washington has been out-rebounding opponents by 2.9 boards per game, led by Lori Napier with 7 rebounds and 14.4 points per game. Kristy Missall has 6.4 rebounds and 10.5 points per game.

Boise State (10-4, 16-10) will be making its fourth consecutive appearance in the tournament and captures the league's most valuable player in Michelle Schultz.

Montana State coach Judy Spolstra is well aware of Schultz' threat.

"Michelle Schultz, Verma Guild and Kim Brydges are the keys to their attack, and we'll have to do a good job against them."

Schultz is currently 33rd in the nation in individual scoring, averaging 19.6 points per game.

Guild, a 6-5 junior, is grabbing 6.4 rebounds per game and hitting an average 10.9 points.

"Verma has dominated the post position this season. She has been the leading shot blocker in the Big Sky for the last several weeks," said Boise State coach June Daugherty.

Brydges, who shared freshman of the year honors, had 6.2 rebounds per game while scoring 11.2 points per game.

The victory sent Tech (26-3) into Saturday's championship game against No. 1 Western Kentucky, one of only two teams to beat the Lady Techsters this season.

Tech's other two losses were to Tennessee, ranked No. 1, at the time.

At the end of the conference tournament, the ranked Lady Techsters were ranked 20-11 and 12 rebounds, dropped to 20-11.

"One of the goals we set at the start of every year is to make it to the championship game of our conference tournament," said Tech coach Leon Barrmore. "Now we have achieved that goal. But we also set another goal of winning the tournament. That's our next objective."

No. 11 W. Kentucky 76, Lamar 70

RUSTON, La. — Veronica Cook's 3-point goal sparked a 7-0 run in the game's final five minutes that lifted No. 11 Western Kentucky to a 76-70 victory over Lamar in Thursday's semifinals of the Sun Belt Conference tournament.

The ranked Lady Toppers (25-3) trailed Lamar (16-12) by 40-56 Western Cook's trey shot at 4:56 energized Western, which led by as many as 11 points in the first half.

After Cook connected on her long-range shot, Tara Cosby popped in back-to-back 10-foot jumpers to put Western ahead by 16 with 3:45 remaining.

Lamar had their chances in the final 10, but missed five free throws in nine attempts.

No. 18 George Wash. 97, St. Bonaventure 86

PHILADELPHIA — Debbie Henry scored 29 points as George Washington downed St. Bonaventure 97-86 Thursday night in the quarterfinal round of the Atlantic 10 tournament.

Henry's team led 22 points into the final minutes of the game for George Washington (22-5). Tajama Abraham added 15 points for the Colonial women and grabbed 10 rebounds.

No. 1-ranked Pete Sampras returns a serve to Jonas Bjorkman Thursday in Indian Wells, Calif.

Swede throws scare into No. 1 Sampras

INDIAN WELLS, Calif. (AP) — Top-seeded Pete Sampras, coming off a second-round loss in the U.S. Indoor last month, struggled past Jonas Bjorkman of Sweden 6-3, 7-6 (7-5) Thursday in a second-round match at the $1.8 million Newsweek Champions Cup.

Sampras, ranked No. 1 in the world but looking for his first tournament victory of 1995, had eight aces in winning the first set in just 28 minutes.

But he had to rally from a 4-1 deficit to win the second set. In the world, broke Sampras' service at love in the fourth game of the second set, then held service before Sampras won three straight games to make it 4-4.

The players then held service before Sampras won the tie-breaker. Sampras, the defending champion who is playing in just his fourth tournament of the year, lost to Paul Haarhuis of The Netherlands 6-4, 6-4 to be eliminated from the U.S. Indoor at Philadelphia.

"I felt good to finally win the tie-breaker," said Sampras, who won the final two points to end the 70-minute

Martinez takes break for rain, beats Nejedly

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. (AP) — For the second consecutive day, Conchita Martinez defeated the clemens as well as her opponent as she advanced Thursday to the quarterfinals of the Delray Beach Winter Championships.

Martinez, the second seed, prevailed in the gusting 25-mph winds with a 6-0, 6-2 victory over Canadian qualifier Jana Nejedly.

On Wednesday, Martinez endured a four-hour rain delay before completing another 6-0, 6-2 rout over Catalina Cristea of Romania.

"It was cold," said Martinez, the first Spanish woman to win Wimbledon. "But once I was out there running, it wasn't so bad."

Earlier, Anke Huber, the third seed, beat Angelika Gavaldon of Mexico, 6-2, 7-5, to join two other Germans in the final eight, including top-seeded Steffi Graf and 12th-seeded Barbara Rittner, all bunched in the top half of the draw.

Martinez breezed through a 22-minute, 6-0 first set and trailed 1-2 in the second before reeling off the last five games to complete the 50-minute wipeout. "I'm very happy that I didn't complicate the match," Martinez said. "I tried to fight every ball but sometimes the wind takes the ball away."

Martinez will play unseeded Kristie Boogert of The Netherlands in one of four quarterfinals Friday. Boogert knocked off her second seed in as many days when she eliminated Nathalie Tauziat, the ninth seed from France, 6-0, 7-5.

Earlier, Anke Huber, the third seed, beat Angelika Gavaldon of

"He is a good player. He serves well, returns well, is one of the better doubles players in the world. I really need to be at my best. I thought I played a pretty solid match. I lost a little concentration in the second, got down a break, but there was only one break. Then, I played a good break."

The second round was completed Thursday with six matches including the Sampras-Bjorkman match, and there were two upsets — 10th-seeded Andrei Medvedev of the Ukraine lost to David Wheaton 4-6, 6-2, 7-6 (7-4), and No. 13 Andrea Gaudenzi of Italy was beaten by Marcello Rios of Chile 6-3, 6-0.

In other second-round action, No. 11 Stefan Edberg of Sweden beat Arnaud Boetsch of France 6-3, 6-4; No. 12 Magnus Larsson of Sweden topped Lionel Roux of France 6-2, 6-2, and No. 15 Patrick Rafter of Australia outlasted Tommy Ho 6-3, 2-6, 7-5.

In the first third-round match of the tournament, No. 7 Wayne Ferreira of South Africa breezed past Carlos Costa of Spain 6-3, 6-2. Costa had upset No. 9 Jim Courier on Wednesday.

Unknown grabs early Honda lead as Tour's stars bunch up behind

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Journeyman Jim McGovern conquered some long-standing putting problems with a late rush that took him to the lead Thursday in the first round of the Honda Classic.

McGovern, who ranked 158th in putting last season and was 148th this year, one-putted the last three holes in a bogey-free round of 6-under-par 65 that put him ahead of an international band of challengers.

Chief among them was Nick Faldo, the Englishman who won last weekend in Miami and finished with a 4-under-par 67 in the gusty, blustery winds that swept the rain-soaked Weston Hills course.

"It was tough out there," Faldo said. "This was a very good, very solid round for me."

Also well within reach were Canada's Dave Barr at 67, former Masters champ Iain Simpson of Wales at 68 and Vijay Singh of Fiji and Colin Montgomerie of Scotland, both at 69.

Seve Ballesteros of Spain and Bernhard Langer of Germany were at 70, each with a back-nine double bogey.

The most obvious absentee from the leaderboard was Nick Price, the Zimbabwean who has dominated golf since the 1992 PGA championship.

Price opened his American campaign with birdies on the first two holes, but could do no better than a par-71 in the chilly winds.

Calcevecchia had seven birdies in a round of 66 that left him a single shot off the lead.

Jim McGovern slinks a putt on the 18th hole to keep his 6-under-par 65 lead at the Honda Classic Thursday in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

"My progress is coming along nicely," Calcevecchia said after finishing off his round with his last-hole birdie.

While Calcevecchia was near the lead, he was taking absolutely nothing for granted.

"They say that winning the first one is the hardest — after that it comes easier," he said. "Well, I've disproved that. No wins are easy. They're all hard."

Calcevecchia has won only once since taking the 1989 British Open title and none at all in his last three years.

"I feel like I'm trying to win my first," he said. "I like the way I'm playing, but I can't say this is the week I'm going to win. I've got to be patient."

And patience — along with a new putter and some help from old friend and fellow pro Richie Parto — paid off for McGovern, who scored his lone top victory in the '93 Houston Open.

"I never was a really good putter, but the last six months — no, more than that — I've really struggled," he said.

After a putting session with Parker last week, "I decided to go back to basics; pick out a dime on the ball, just try to stroke it," he said — and a new putter, things improved drastically.

He dropped a 15-footer for birdie on his first hole, was three under par after five, then took the lead with his late rush.

McGovern chipped to within 4 feet for a birdie on the 16th hole that gave him a share of the lead, went ahead with a 10-footer on the next and preserved the lead with a par-saving 8-footer on his final hole.

Mike Sullivan, Mark Wiebe, Larry Rinker and Mark O'Meara shared fifth place with Woosnam at 68.

Federal mediator spurs new offer from owners, criticizes both sides

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Baseball owners, responding to mediator W.J. Usery, plan to make a "best offer" to striking players next week.

Usery, who has been attempting to forge a settlement since mid-October, spoke for about 30 minutes at Thursday's major league meeting. He had harsh words for both sides during a news conference that followed.

He had harsh words for both sides during a news conference that followed, his most detailed public comments on the seven-month walkout.

"After 30 years in this process and over 1,000 national major disputes, this one has gotten almost embarrassing and it's ridiculous," Usery said.

During talks last week at Scottsdale, Ariz., the sides took small steps toward a midpoint but then shifted into their familiar bashing modes. Usery said it was up to owners to make the next move because they were the side seeking major changes in the collective bargaining agreement.

"I think in this case the owners are the moving party," Usery said. "The owners ought to come forth with their very best offer for an agreement. ... I didn't say anything about final offer ... If the players can't accept it, respond why they can't accept it and what changes they want in it."

Colorado Rockies chairman Jerry McMorris, referred to by Usery as management's chief spokesman with the union, hinted that owners might resist changes after their next proposal.

"I feel it's time to come out with our best offer and then stand by it," he said.

Management's last offer was for a 50 percent luxury tax on the portions of payrolls above the average ($40.7 million). The union's last offer was for a 25 percent tax on the portions above 133 percent of the average ($54.1 million).

Usery said he opposed the owners' plan to start the season on April 2 with the replacement players who have been used during spring training. Acting commissioner Bud Selig said if a deal is agreed to, opening day could be pushed back.

"We haven't defined that," Selig said. "There are certain adjustments that could be made."

No time or place was set for the resumption of negotiations, which broke off last Saturday on the 16th hole that gave him a share of the lead, went ahead with a 10-footer on the next and preserved the lead with a par-saving 8-footer on his final hole.

Agent Tom Reich, speaking later outside the meeting room, said a final offer would be mistake. Reich, an influential agent among union leaders, has been at the site of the last two rounds of bargaining.

"If either side does that, ultimately negotiating, then the negotiations will fail," he said. "If you see a party issuing an ultimatum, then you'll have a party that doesn't want to make a deal. You know an ultimatum will result in a rejection."

McMorris admitted that the position of some on the owners' side of management's side had hardened, because of management's mounting losses.

"The size of the pie we have to divide continues to shrink," he said.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff

"If a man look sharply and attentively, he shall see Fortune; for though she is blind, she is not invisible."

less ruff and bluff. If South ruffed in dummy to discard a club, he would lose two spades. And if he chose the inferior spade discard, he would lose a spade and a club for the same one down.

In bridge, as in business, fortune goes to those who work hardest. The clues are there in today's defense, but West must look intently to find them.

See you for yourself in the West chair, cover the East and South cards and follow the play. West leads the diamond king and continues with the queen to South's ace.
