A tough lesson to learn

Parents must deal with teen sexuality, local mother says

By Julie M. McKinnon
Times-News writer

JEROME — Julie Robbins was 17 years old and fixing breakfast when her toddler, Misti Miller, pulled a hot pan of bacon and grease onto her head.

Officials from California's health and welfare department removed the 20-month-old diabetic child from Julie's care. They thought Misti would be better off living with someone other than her new stepfather and mother, who got pregnant with Misti at 15.

"I wasn't old enough to take care of her," Julie said. Now 23, she lives in Jerome with her husband, 26-year-old LaRon Robbins, and their three daughters.

Misti, now almost 8, lives with her maternal grandparents, Clint and Charlotte Miller of rural Jerome, who adopted their grandchild.

"Julie's life is filled with the struggles many teen mothers encounter, including dropping out of school. To help avoid other unplanned pregnancies, she wants adults to acknowledge that some teens will have sexual intercourse."

"No matter how the parents try, it's going to happen," Julie said. "The only thing you can do is face up to that fact and talk to them and give them some protection instead of avoiding it."

"The parents have to be aware of it instead of turning their backs to it. They need to help."

As a teen

Julie said she had self-esteem problems as a youngster.

"When I was little, I had real curly hair, and I was kind of hard to curl."

Her decision

For seven months, Julie squeezed into her regular jeans to hide her growing belly.

But then other Jerome High School students would call her parents late at night and say, "This is doctor so and so."

Julie Robbins of Jerome first got pregnant at 15 and now has four daughters, from left, Misti, 7, Jessika, 2, Makayla, 1, and Treanna, 4.

at," she said. "I had real low self-esteem."

Jerome County boys began paying attention to 14-year-old Julie when the Miller family moved from Utah. Julie said her parents didn't talk to her about sexual intercourse, although they installed a curfew and restricted her dating.

But Julie said she doesn't blame them for her pregnancy because they couldn't have prevented her from having sex.

The only sexual education Julie got in school was when she was a fifth grader in Utah, and educators showed some films about eggs and sperm that didn't explain how the two came together. When Julie was a student, only upperclassmen received sexual education.

Julie was a freshman when she began dating Misti's father, and they dated about a year. They were sexually active about four months when Julie got birth control pills from the South Central District Health Department in Twin Falls.

Then, just as she was going to begin using the pills, Julie suspected she was pregnant.

"At first I didn't even want to admit it — I didn't want to admit it to myself," said Julie, adding that Misti's father just didn't admit the child is his.

"It doesn't couldn't have happened to me."

"I see teen-agers say that now: 'It won't happen to me. It won't happen to me.' Bull."

Investigators find possible MIA remains

HANOI, Vietnam — Investigators digging in a remote jungle believe that for the first time they have found body tissue from an American serviceman killed in the Vietnam War, an anthropologist with the team said Sunday.

"It could be a hand or a foot. That's about all we know at this point," Robert Mann told The Associated Press after examining the remains.

U.S. and Vietnamese specialists found the remains while excavating a site near the Cambodian border where an F-4 fighter jet crashed in 1970, said Air Force Maj. Randall Garrett.

The pilot is believed to have died in the crash, said Garrett, operations officer for the U.S. MIA office in Hanoi.

"The likelihood of finding possible human tissue after 25 years is so small that no one ever really thought about preparing for it," said Garrett, who visited the site 100 miles north of Ho Chi Minh City on Saturday.

Previous field excavations have uncovered pieces of bones and teeth, enabling experts to identify 56 remains since January 1992.

Mann said the latest remains were buried deep in dense clay that protected them from exposure to air and decomposition. He said a mixture of jet fuel, oil and hydraulic fluid from the crashed plane may have preserved the remains.

Mormon Church ordains president

SALT LAKE CITY — Gordon B. Hinckley, a lifelong Mormon Church bureaucrat, counselor and administrator, was ordained Sunday as the faith's 15th president.

Although a church announcement did not mention Hinckley by name, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints opened under a system of apostolic succession in which the senior apostle — Hinckley in this case — becomes president after his predecessor dies.

Howard W. Hunter, 87, died March 3 of prostate cancer, having served just nine months, the shortest presidency in church history.

The ordination of presidents is private, with the faith's 14 apostles in attendance in the Salt Lake Temple.

The new president will announce his choices as his two counselors in the faith's governing First Presidency at a news conference today, the church said.

Hinckley, 84, is said to be in excellent health and has no history of serious ailments. A grandson of Mormon pioneers, he has served as a counselor to three church presidents since 1981 and has been an apostle since 1961.

Patient dies in 2nd error at hospital

TAMPA, Fla. — The same hospital where a surgeon amputated the wrong leg of a patient is acknowledging another mistake — two weeks later — that led to the death of a 77-year-old man.

Leo Alfonso died March 3 after a respiratory technician at University Community Hospital mistakenly removed his ventilator, hospital officials said.

Alfonso died less than an hour later, though health care workers tried for 30 minutes to revive him, hospital spokesman John Andrews said Sunday.

The technician was supposed to have taken another patient off a ventilator, Andrews said.

The employee should have checked the patient's identity visually, by speaking to him, by reading his chart and by checking his identification bracelet, Andrews said.

The hospital said the worker, who has been employed for 25 years, has a clean record. She was suspended pending an investigation.

The hospital immediately reviewed its identification procedures after Alfonso's death and all employees providing respiratory care were retrained. President Norm Stein said Saturday.

"We determined that our procedures work, but in this case they were not followed," he said.

On Feb. 20, a surgeon at the hospital amputated a diabetic man's left leg below the knee, though it was his right leg that was supposed to have been removed.

Doctors at another hospital considered trying to save Willie King's remaining leg but eventually had to amputate it below the knee.

NASA astronaut only latest first to blast off from Russian launch

BAIKONUR, Kazakhstan — With the sun rising over the frigid desert of central Asia, a Russian rocket was pushed by train Sunday to an isolated launch pad for the first space flight from here by an American.

Those who have lifted off from Baikonur Cosmodrome include Yuri Gagarin, the first man in space; Valentina Tereshkova, the first woman in space; and Alexei Leonov, first spacewalker and commander of the 1975 Apollo-Soyuz docking mission.

On Tuesday, it's Norman Thagard's turn.

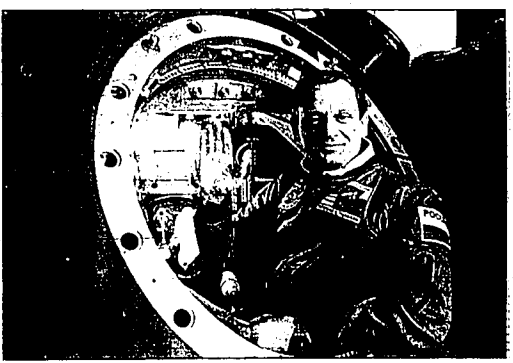

Thagard, a NASA astronaut, is scheduled to blast off Tuesday on the Soyuz rocket with two Russian cosmonauts, heading for the Russian space station Mir.

He will be the first American launched in a Russian rocketship and the first American to fly to the Russian space station.

The chief of the state museum at Baikonur, Yaroslav Nechesa, proudly displayed the crew patch for Thagard's mission in the small section devoted to U.S.-Russian joint space flight. Until now, the exhibit consisted solely of photographs relating to the Apollo-Soyuz mission.

"Twenty years ago, we were sure that this preparation would give us success," Nechesa said. "When you work together for something jointly, you always have success. It's much harder independently."

"We have a saying: Together to Mars."

NASA Astronaut Norman Thagard visits the capsule of the Soyuz rocket at Baikonur Cosmodrome in Kazakhstan Saturday. Thagard will be the first American to blast off on a Russian rocket on Tuesday.

Thagard's flight to Mir is part of a U.S.-Russian space cooperation agreement that is supposed to lead, at the very least, to the construction of a new international space station.

"NASA needs more long-duration experience in space before building such an orbiting station — thus Thagard's trip. Four NASA astronauts will follow him to Mir over the next three years, although they will go up on the U.S. space shuttle, not a Russian Soyuz rocket."

Panel OK'd Gingrich class without all facts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House ethics committee, in giving Rep. Newt Gingrich approval in 1993 to teach his college course, acted on an incomplete description of how the course would be financed and promoted, documents indicate.

The documents are important because the speaker plans to go on the offensive this week, releasing the ethics committee letter that conditionally approved the tax-deductible financing and teaching of the course, "Renewing American Civilization."

The Aug. 3, 1993, committee letter, obtained by The Associated Press, was carefully and narrowly crafted to approve only the tax-deductible educational activity described to the committee by Gingrich, who was then Republican whip. Information on Gingrich's contacts with the ethics committee came from congressional sources who declined to be identified publicly.

Gingrich described the course in letters he sent the committee May 12 and July 21, 1993, also obtained by the AP. Those letters did not mention the central role in promoting and financing the course by Gingrich's political committee — GOPAC.

In the letters Gingrich promised there would be no mass mailings, although documents show GOPAC did such mailings. Gingrich wrote that the course would be non-partisan and not attack President Clinton. Yet GOPAC documents described the course's goal as recruiting 200,000 conservative activists and in some cases bitterly denounced Clinton.

The GOPAC effort was under way for more than two months before, Gingrich sought approval for the course. Gingrich, who began teaching the course in late 1993, gave his last lecture at Reinhardt College in Waleska, Ga., on Saturday. He said he has 20 hours of lectures on videotape that can be distributed to teach others about his philosophy of government.

The ethics committee caught up with the GOPAC role when the course was challenged as a partisan activity — not eligible for tax-deductible financing — in a complaint filed in September 1994. Former Democratic Rep. Ben Jones of Georgia, who filed the complaint, provided dozens of GOPAC documents. Two months later, Jones lost his bid to unseat Gingrich from his suburban Atlanta district.

On Oct. 31, 1994, then-committee chairman Rep. James McDermott, D-Wash. and the ranking Republican — former Rep. Fred Grandy of Iowa — wrote Gingrich

The documents cited by committee leaders as omitted by Gingrich included:

- A March 1, 1993 memorandum from Gingrich stating that Jeffrey Eisenach was raising funds for the course and Joe Gaylord was involved in its development.
- The committee noted that Eisenach was GOPAC's executive director through June 1, 1993, and Gaylord was a GOPAC consultant.
- An April 23, 1993, memorandum, with a GOPAC fax cover sheet, from the organization's finance director, summarizing her efforts to raise funds for the course and her discussions with Eisenach about the budget.
- A May 3, 1993, draft letter from Gingrich, drafted at GOPAC and bearing Eisenach's initials, that was to be sent to 1,000-plus college Republican chapters.
- A July 21 letter from Eisenach to an official of the Tobacco Institute stating the goal of the course is to "train by April 1996, 200,000-plus citizens into a model for replacing the welfare state and reforming our government."

Family members wait on the bank of the Arroyo Pasajero Creek Sunday, looking at the wheel of the car they believe to belong to a relative. Rescue workers were unable to search the car due to the speed of the rushing water where a bridge on the I-5 Freeway collapsed at Coalinga, Calif., Friday.

Monterey Peninsula roads cut off in California's 'Storm of the Century'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Floods washed out all roads into the Monterey Peninsula on Sunday as waterlogged California struggled to recover from storms that battered two-thirds of the state.

At least eight people died in five days of flooding, and five more are missing after driving into a rain-swollen creek when an Interstate 5 bridge collapsed in central California.

Sunday was rain-free for most of California. The National Weather Service said showers were expected again Monday, but not the downpours of last week.

Gov. Pete Wilson asked President Clinton on Sunday to declare 39 counties federal disaster areas, which would allow individuals and businesses affected by the floods to apply for federal loans.

In Monterey County, thousands of people left their homes overnight as the Salinas and Pajaro rivers inundated some of the nation's richest farmlands, the site of John Steinbeck's "The Grapes of Wrath."

The flooding cut off the community, ties around Monterey about 100 miles south of San Francisco.

"At this point all roads are closed — the Monterey Peninsula is literally isolated," said county emergency Officer Al Friedrich. California Highway Patrol officials said roads may remain closed until today.

Many people were routed from their homes early Sunday as flood waters rushed into low-lying river-towns over-night.

"Police went down the streets with their sirens telling people to please leave," Friedrich said. "It's a scary thing to hear in the dark."

In the farming town of Pajaro, residents were in shock.

"People walked in here in tears. They looked like they were caught completely off-guard," said Salvation Army Maj. Joan Souders. "We saw people walk in here with no shoes, no socks or with water lines up to their thighs."

From the Oregon state line down to Mexico, rain, wind and snow wreaked havoc across 40 of California's 58 counties.

"It's the most widespread geographic storm in California in this century," said James Bailey of the state-Federal Flood Operations Center in Sacramento.

The storms may also be the most expensive in California history, he added, costing up to $2 billion in a state already burdened with January's Pacific storms, as well as a series of earthquakes, fires and mudslides. In Coalinga, about 50 miles west of Fresno, rescue crews were back at the scene of a fatal I-5 road bridge collapse on California's main north-south freeway.

Four cars drove into a rain-swollen creek Friday night when the overpass suddenly dropped into the water. Transportation officials believe floodwater and its debris undermined the bridge's foundation.

One driver was rescued, but six people were believed to be in the other three cars.

Rescue crews pulled the body of a teen-age girl from one car Sunday, said highway patrol spokeswoman Karen Barrows. Searchers found the last two cars.

Survivor Wayne Johnson, 45, said he saw too late that something was wrong. As he approached the span in the rain and darkness, he saw a flash-light waving.

"I thought that perhaps the road was flooded so I started to slow down... then I went up and down at an angle, and I was airborne Evel Knievel-style," he said.

He got out of his truck, but was stuck in a tree for several hours before being rescued. Southern Californians shoveled mud and pushed water out of homes and off roads in areas hit hard by the rains.

In Ventura County, a chain-link fence was being erected around the entire town of La Conchita, where a collapsing coastal bluff that destroyed nine homes a week earlier survived the latest onslaught of rain.

Mud flowing through the streets may have made a mess, but damage wasn't significant.

"Residents are returning little by little to their homes to see what's left," said sheriff's Deputy Patti Dreyer. "It's a beautiful day here except for the mud."

The debate over immigration rages on

While 8.7 legal immigrants arrived in U.S. during the '80s, nearly 2 million of them left

NEW YORK (AP) — Alejandro Soriano was working as a TV news researcher in Peru when he decided to move to New York, hoping to land a job in television production. But with limited English and a lack of connections, he ended up cleaning air shafts in public housing for $4.50 an hour.

After five rough months, he moved to San Francisco to try his luck there. He lasted only a few weeks, two spent as a cook at a fast food restaurant.

"One morning I said, 'This is enough. I'm leaving.'" Soriano said by phone from Mexico City, where he lives now with relatives. "I came with a lot of illusions, expecting to improve my quality of life... The picture I have now for the United States is not that attractive."

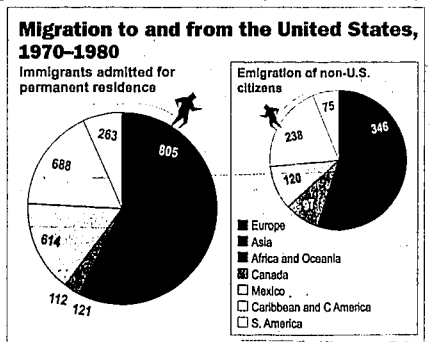

Despite America's still vivid image as a golden land of opportunity — with millions clamoring to get in — Soriano's decision to leave is hardly unusual.

"Much has been made of the 8.7 million legal immigrants who arrived in the 1980s, but less attention has been paid to the nearly 2 million who left during that decade, according to a new government study.

Their reasons for leaving are varied.

"Some get fed up or disillusioned with America, or they miss their families and the 'old country.'" Many go home to stretch their retirement dollars. Still others came only to study, learn a trade or earn enough money for a house or piece of land back home, never intending to settle here permanently.

And the outward exodus may even increase as anti-immigrant fever spreads in the United States. Proposition 187, which would deny public social services to illegal aliens, passed last fall in California and is now in the courts. The new Republican leaders in Congress are considering a plan to deny welfare benefits to most legal immigrants as well.

"No one wants to be in a place where they're constantly being told that they're not wanted, despite the fact that they're working very hard and often at jobs that others won't do," said Saranmima Archila, executive director of the Latin American Integration Center in the New York City borough of Queens. "It contributes to this general frustration."

Technology also has had an impact. The telecommunications revolution has made staying in touch with family and friends a continent away easier, and jet travel has made moving from place to place less of an ordeal.

The result is that immigration doesn't have "the same feel of permanence that it had in the past," says Paul Finnegan, executive director of the Emerald Isle Immigration Center in Queens. New arrivals "don't feel cut off from their old country and settle in as they did in the past."

The U.S. government gave up trying to keep track of people moving out during the Eisenhower administration. "The numbers were considered to be underestimates," said Bob Warren, director of statistics for the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Yet recent historical research has found that large numbers of immigrants have been giving up on America and heading home since Colonial days.

One study, co-written by Warren, concluded that about one-third of the 30 million immigrants who arrived in the United States between 1900 and 1980 left to go home or settle elsewhere.

They have gone largely unnoticed, historians say, partly because their departure doesn't jibe with the American dream.

"Emigration is the very negation of America," said University of Cincinnati Professor Roger Daniels, author of "Coming to America," a history of immigration. "It's a kind of cultural treason. So it's not something that people talk about very much."

The number is still tough to tally, mainly because people don't always end up doing what they say they will. "If you tried to collect that data from people leaving the country, all you would be getting is intentions," Warren said.

Based on recent studies, the Census Bureau estimates 133,000 foreign-born residents emigrate from the United States annually. But a study published in December by the bureau's own statisticians found emigration during 1980-1990 was about 195,000 a year, mainly due to increased immigration during the decade.

Statistical research and anecdotal evidence indicates that older immigrants are more likely to go back than those who arrive as children or young adults, mainly because it's harder to learn a new language and adjust to a new culture later in life. In addition, many are retired and can live better back home on the money they get from Social Security.

Political refugees or those escaping fighting at home often can't return. Families fleeing poverty or economic crises at home are less apt to go back than immigrants from Canada or western Europe.

Those most likely to return are those who traveled the least distance to get here, experts say. A recent INS survey of naturalization rates — a possible indicator of who is planning to stay — found the lowest rates were among people from western Europe, the Caribbean, Latin America and Canada.

Clinton orders staff to go after female voters in '96

WASHINGTON — President Clinton is boosting his White House staff and enlisting the entire cabinet to go after female voters for '96.

Prodged by the November elections — when many women who normally vote Democratic stayed home — the White House has doubled the number of "outreach" aides charged with shoring up Clinton's appeal to women.

Cabinet agencies have been ordered to spread the word about the President's record toward women.

The Small Business Administration desk that does out loans to female-owned business is among the drafted.

Clinton's positions on abortion rights, gun control, tax credits for working families, parental leave and the fight to save school lunches are all part of the blitz.

That's why Clinton so often mentions "children" when he rips the Republicans' budget cuts — hoping that resonates with women.

On the advice of Clinton's political team, the aide who handles women's outreach, Doris Matsui, is dropping all other duties to make that her sole focus.

Some Republicans say it's a brilliant stroke — and that Clinton stands to pick up some GOP women, depending on who their nominee is.

But others — including some Democrats — are more skeptical and complain it's a misstep for the White House to assume women are so different from men.

Cracked Rep. Susan Molinari, R-Staten Island, "It's demeaning that he thinks women could be that dumb twice."

The president's pollster, Stan Greenberg, declined to say whether women are key to Clinton's political math.

UConn, Tennessee, Colorado and Vandy are tops in women's tournament bracket

The Associated Press

A tough schedule and strong finish enabled Vanderbilt to join top-ranked Connecticut, Tennessee and Colorado as No. 1 seeds Sunday in the NCAA Division I women's basketball tournament.

As expected, Connecticut and second-ranked Tennessee were placed in regionals for which they are the host schools, meaning they wouldn't have to leave home to earn a trip to the Final Four in Minneapolis April 1 and 2.

Tennessee and Louisiana Tech, a No. 2 seed, extended their runs as the only schools to play in every tournament since the NCAA began sponsoring women's basketball in 1982. Mississippi and Penn State each made it to the 13th time.

The 64-team field chosen by a nine-member committee includes seven schools from the Southeastern Conference, five from the Pac-10 and four from the Atlantic Coast, Big Eight, Big Ten and Metro.

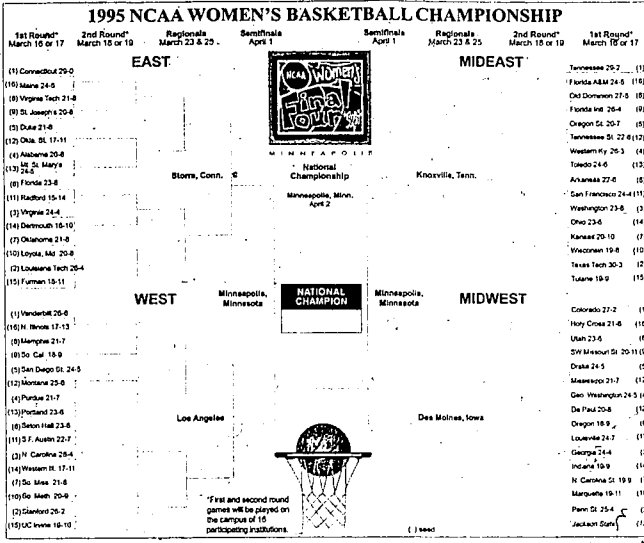

Competition begins Thursday and Friday at sites around the country. The 32 first-round winners will meet two days later to determine the 16 teams for the four regionals at Storrs, Conn. (East), Knoxville, Tenn. (Midwest), Des Moines, Iowa (Midwest) and Los Angeles (West).

Connecticut (29-0), the only unbeaten team in Division I, is the top seed in the East Regional and Tennessee (29-2) got the top spot in the Midwest. Colorado (27-2), which has won 22 straight, is No. 1 in the Midwest.

Those three had been considered shoo-ins for top seeds. Vanderbilt (26-6) got the nod over Louisiana Tech (26-4) and Stanford (26-2) for the other No. 1 spot. Nineteen of Vanderbilt's games were against teams that are now or have been in the Top 25 and they've won 13 of their last 15, including a victory over Tennessee in the SEC tournament finals.

"Their strength of schedule is excellent," said Linda Bruno, commissioner of the Atlantic 10 Conference and chairwoman of the selection committee.

While Vanderbilt would have to travel farther than any of the other No.

Kentucky coach Rick Pitino gets drenched with water after the third-ranked Wildcats beat Arkansas, 95-93 in overtime to win the Southeastern Conference championship Sunday.

Kentucky nips Arkansas in overtime for SEC title

ATLANTA (AP) — Third-ranked Kentucky (25-4) overcame a 6-point deficit in the final 38 seconds of overtime, with Anthony Epps' two free throws with 19.4 seconds remaining giving the Wildcats the lead in a 95-93 victory over No. 5 Arkansas (27-6) in the SEC tournament championship game Sunday.

It was the eighth victory in a row for the Wildcats, which claimed the SEC's automatic berth in the NCAA tournament. It was the fourth league tourney title in a row for the Wildcats and their 19th overall — more than the rest of the league combined.

Men's college basketball and Jason Lawson scored 27 points apiece, and No. 13 Villanova withstood one furious comeback attempt in the second half before finally pulling away to defeat No. 6 Connecticut for its first Big East tournament championship.

The second-seeded Wildcats (25-7) won their fourth title game appearance and beat the Huskies (25-4) for the second time this season.

I seeds to the regional semifinals, which are at UCLA's Pauley Pavilion, Bruno noted that's guaranteed to be a neutral court because UCLA isn't in the tournament.

"If they do get there, that would make it more palatable in terms of travel," Bruno said. "Someone has to go out there and play and what we want to do is create balance in the brackets. I think that's what we've done."

Louisiana Tech, which lost to North Carolina in last year's national championship game, was given the No. 2 seed in the East. That means the Lady Techsters might have to beat Connecticut on its home floor to earn a ninth Final Four trip.

Stanford was seeded second in the West, where North Carolina is the No. 3 seed.

Louisiana Tech lost to Western Kentucky in the finals of the Sun Belt Conference tournament, but Bruno said that didn't affect Tech's seeding.

The first- and second-round games will be played at regional sites hosted by the top four seeds in each region, with one exception. Purdue, seeded fourth in the West, couldn't be a host because of a high school tournament at Mackey Arena. Fifth-seeded San Diego State will be the host for that subregional.

Three of the No. 1 seeds play on Thursday. Connecticut takes on Maine (24-5), Tennessee meets Florida A&M (24-5) and Colorado faces Holy Cross (21-8). Vanderbilt plays Northern Illinois (17-13) on Friday.

The subregional sites ensure that half the first-round games will be played on neutral courts. Previously, the games in the first two rounds were played on the court of the highest seed team.

But fan support for women's basketball still isn't strong enough for all NCAA games to be played on neutral courts. That's why schools like Tennessee and Connecticut, which have strong followings, are allowed to play regional games on their own court.

Tennessee has won 60 consecutive games at home, Connecticut 33 straight.

The 'other' tournament makes its picks

The Associated Press

All the teams that appeared to be snubbed by the NCAA Tournament accepted bids to the NIT — except Georgia Tech.

The Yellow Jackets (18-12) were left out of the 64-team NCAA field for the second straight year, but this time they elected to turn down an invitation to the 32-team NIT Tournament.

"We have exams coming up this week, and we have decided to go ahead and take our exams," said coach Bobby Cremins, who said the decision was not an angry reaction to NCAA rejection.

"I noticed last year when the NIT selection was made there were a lot of teams that should have been in the NIT that did not get in. So I would like to give those other teams an opportunity."

Georgia Tech is the first team to turn down an NIT invitation since Louisville (18-14) in 1987, the year after the Cardinals won the national championship.

  - Southern Mississippi (17-12)
  - Texas-El Paso (19-9)
  - Texas Tech (20-9)
  - Utah State (21-7)
  - Virginia Tech (20-10)
  - Washington State (16-11)

that didn't make the NCAA field were Iowa (18-13), George Washington (18-9) and Texas Tech (20-9). All four accepted bids to the 32-team NIT.

Washington State (16-11) also is in the NIT field.

Some of the best first-round matchups included Georgia Tech at Ohio U., College of Charleston at Providence and Georgia at Nebraska.

The first three rounds will be held at campus sites. The semifinals and finals will be held at Madison Square Garden on March 27 and 29.

The 32-team NIT field includes four teams from the Big East (St. John's, Seton Hall, Miami, Providence), and three each from the Atlantic 10 (St. Bonaventure, St. Joseph's, George Washington) and the Metro Conference (South Florida, Southern Mississippi, Virginia Tech).

The Big 10, Big West, Big Eight, Great American, Mid-American, Mississippi Valley and Southeast conferences each got two teams.

College of Charleston (23-5), Ohio University (23-9) and New Mexico State (23-9) have the most victories among the 32 NIT teams. St. John's (14-13) had the fewest.

Bob Frederick, chairman of the NCAA selection committee, said the committee did not feel that Georgia Tech was among the best 35 at-large teams. He said the Jackets had a record of 8-12 against top 100 teams and were 10-12 against top 150 teams.

Blair goes out a winner

HAMAR, Norway (AP) — Champion speedskater Bonnie Blair got to wave goodbye to her European fans Sunday from her favorite spot: The winners' podium.

It was just the way the American wanted to end her last World Cup speedskating competition.

"It was nice," the five-time Olympic champion said after returning to the stand to pick up her second medal Sunday, an unexpected bronze in the 1,500 meters. She'd already been there once to collect her gold in the 500 and the cup in the distance.

"It was in the top three and that was a nice way to end it," she said.

Blair, 30, is retiring after individual races in Calgary, Alberta, next weekend.

But the Viking Ship in the south Norway town of Hamar, where she won two Olympic gold medals last year, was the place for her farewells to the World Cup and the people who made it special for her.

Jazz set road victory mark in Miami

MIAMI (AP) — Karl Malone had 28 points and 10 rebounds as the Utah Jazz won their eighth straight Sunday with a 96-86 victory over the Miami Heat and set a club record for road wins.

John Stockton had 15 points and 12 assists for the Jazz, who won its 21st road game. Glen Rice paced Miami with 25 points, and Kevin Willis had 12 points and 15 rebounds.

Baskets by Malone and Jeff Hornacek extended Utah's lead to 88-77 at the 2:54 mark, and the Jazz went on to improve their road record against Eastern Conference teams to 10-0.

Sonics 134, Pistons 94
AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Shawn Kemp had 25 points and 16 rebounds in just three quarters to lead the Seattle SuperSonics to a 134-94 rout of the Detroit Pistons on Sunday night.

The loss was the third-worst home defeat in Pistons history, following a 46-point loss to the St. Louis Hawks in 1958 and 43-point setback against the Knicks in 1968.

The Sonics won for the third time on their four-game road trip, while the Pistons dropped their third in four games.

Magic 110, Spurs 104
ORLANDO, Fla. — Shaquille O'Neal struggled much of the fourth quarter before delivering a dunk and two free throws in the final minute to help the Orlando Magic hold off the San Antonio Spurs 110-104 Sunday for his first victory over nemesis David Robinson.

Pro basketball

The Spurs were the only team the Magic hadn't beaten since O'Neal entered the NBA three seasons ago. Robinson holds the statistical edge in the six meetings between the All-Star centers, and had 34 points and 12 rebounds to O'Neal's 28 points and 13 rebounds in the latest matchup.

O'Neal was only 10-for-24 from the field and had been outscored 14-2 by Robinson in the final period before slumping in an offensive rebound for 104-99 lead and hitting two free throws that made it 106-100 with 36.7 seconds remaining.

Traill Blazers 102, Timberwolves 88
MINNEAPOLIS — Buck Williams and Otis Thorpe, sharing time at power forward, combined for 39 points and 18 rebounds for Portland.

Williams had 19 points and 12 rebounds and Thorpe added 20 points and six rebounds as the Blazers maintained their perfect record (12-0) in Minnesota.

Christian Laettner had 21 points and Tom Gugliotta added 17 for the Wolves. Dehydration from a stomach illness limited Isaiah Rider, Minnesota's leading scorer, to just 10 minutes and 3 points.

Hawks 104, Celtics 98
BOSTON — Ken Norman scored 13 of his season-high 34 points in the fourth period, and Atlanta Hawks went over the .500 mark for the first time this season.

The Hawks trailed almost throughout before earning their seventh victory in the last nine starts. Boston lost its fourth straight game.

Cavaliers 92, 76ers 72
PHILADELPHIA — Terrell Brandon, Chris Mills and Danny Ferry scored 14 points apiece as Cleveland won for the eighth straight time at the Spectrum.

It also was the Cavaliers' 16th victory in 17 games against the Sixers. Cleveland's last win in Philadelphia was on March 31, 1991.

Nuggets 109, Bucks 93
MILWAUKEE — Rodney Rogers scored 21 points as Denver swept the two-game series with Milwaukee for the second straight season and only the fourth time in 19 seasons.

Reggie Williams scored 19 points, Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf 18, Jalen Rose 17, Dikembe Mutombo 13 and Dale Ellis 10. Mutombo also pulled down 13 rebounds as the Nuggets won for the fifth time in eight games on the road.

Kings 105, Clippers 93
LOS ANGELES — Walt Williams scored 25 points and Steve Nisely added 22 as the Sacramento Kings beat the Los Angeles Clippers 105-93 Sunday and reached the 30-win mark for the first time since 1985-86.

Mitch Richmond added 20 points for the Kings, who had lost 10 of their last 11, including three straight.

Market can carry farmers past the loss of subsidies

Idaho farmers don't need to fear the elimination of federal agricultural subsidies. The same market forces driving U.S. budget reform are pushing every nation across the globe toward free markets. That development favors the more efficient American farmers, including those in Idaho.

Clearly, Congress needs to press ahead with plans to phase out federal farm subsidies while also phasing out needless farm tax burdens. That, after all, is the point: If you remove government payouts, then you also cut the bite from the taxman.

Among reasonable changes which Idaho's congressional delegation can support are:

- Increasing the tax deduction for health insurance premiums paid by farmers and other self-employed people. Corporations can deduct 100 percent of the cost, why not farmers?

- Reducing the capital gains tax and increasing the estate tax exemption. Those two changes would make it easier for family farms to be passed from parents to children.

True, there will be some winners and some losers with the elimination of subsidies. But there are winners and losers in every economic endeavor. There are no guarantees, nor should the federal government try to provide any.

At any rate, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, the global trade pact approved by Congress in December, will reduce government supports to farmers and impose limits on trade subsidies. European leaders are likewise pushing to end export subsidies.

Idaho farmers are among the best. They know how to compete in the world market. Elimination of subsidies and irrational federal agricultural programs will allow them to do an even better job. But they must remain alert in order to stay competitive.

Defendants deserve to find some justice from lawsuits

Like other noble causes, states' rights has become the proverbial refuge of scoundrels.

No, the Clinton administration probably doesn't care a whole lot about the integrity and independence of the civil justice system at the state level, so yes, White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta likely was just posturing last week when he said the Contract with America's proposed product-liability lawsuit reforms (which began House hearings this week) will usurp state authority. What Panetta and the rest of the Clinton camp really seem to be saying is they have run out of excuses for the logjam of litigation that is clogging America's courts, yet they don't like the GOP's solution. That solution is to restore common sense and fairness to civil procedure in state and federal courts alike, just as we always have demanded equal justice for criminal cases in all courts across the land.

Specifically, the pending proposal, part of the contract's Common Sense Legal Reforms Act, would rein in areas of litigation that have been abused to the detriment of defendants and to the enrichment of plaintiffs and their lawyers.

One of the most notable areas of abuse is punitive damages, under which awards to plaintiffs have soared into the millions of dollars against the likes of a fast-food chain over, literally, a spilled cup of coffee. The proposed reform would cap such awards at three times a plaintiff's proven economic damages, or $250,000, whichever is greater.

As well, there would be badly needed limits on the liability of co-defendants dragged into a suit—so-called joint liability—holding them liable only for damages to which their own negligence contributed. Right now, the richest co-defendant with the "deepest pockets" can be forced to pay the whole award.

Businesses say the reforms will reduce costs to consumers, which we believe is an assortment of "consumer advocates" contends the reforms will leave many victims without redress, which we doubt.

But a more fundamental issue is fairness; the reforms would return to the plaintiff more of the time-honored burden of proof—to prove negligence and to show just how he was injured—which is as it should be. As for the White House's newfound concern for states' rights: Shouldn't justice, regardless of jurisdiction, be the standard for litigation as it is for criminal prosecution?

If a suspected violent criminal has the constitutional right, say, to be Mirandized in every state and municipality, surely we should afford the same uniformity of justice to those who stand accused of negligence.

Seniors set example with 'prank'

In case Times-News readers missed the short article in the March 6 paper or didn't see the picture broadcast on KMYT, I want to elaborate on the good "prank" staged by 19 senior boys.

They came to my office last fall explaining they wanted to start a new tradition for seniors. It didn't make sense to them, they said, to do anything to harm their school, and they wanted to set a precedent by using their time and money for something positive and lasting. They wanted to provide the "Bruins" sign, now hanging above the west entrance to the new gymnasium building.

With help from at least one of the dads, they determined the appropriate size and researched outlets to provide such a sign. They raised more than $700 to pay for the materials and worked under supervision of the district's maintenance foreman, Buck Blankenship, to hang the letters one night, which took until nearly 3 a.m.

It's said that persons with negative notoriety usually receive more attention, but it's true that these high school students represent what is good about so many of our student body, and I want the community to know of this deed.

The seniors not only had the "administrators' blessing," but they were the ones to issue the challenge to the Class of '96 to conceive and carry out a "prank" as affirmative as the one made possible by these boys from the Class of '95.

The interservice, I'm sure, was nice, but the money spent to stay over was frivolous. I am sure there are books that are needed and other areas it could have been put on besides giving the teachers another day off to get a morale boost. Big deal!

The teachers should be thankful they have a job with holidays off and least two months off in the summer. Not everybody has a job and with these benefits.

Please if you need a morale booster, you have the weekends and the summer and your holidays. Don't use money set aside for our kids' education for your entertainment. This was a frivolous waste of taxpayers' dollars. Shame on you!

Davis article lacks compassion

I am writing concerning the article about the young man (Michael Davis) who recently died. I felt the article was unjust to his rights, self-respect and cruel to his grieving family.

When writing your article of such, you should put more compassion and dignity toward your subjects.

Get the facts straight, don't suppose or think they are correct. You were more concerned of Michael's being gay, rather than the loss of his life, which I find very distasteful as an editor and writer of a paper I personally subscribe to.

Timing could use a lot of work

An article in the March 2 edition causes me to write this letter.

Liz Wright reported the arrest of College of Southern Idaho sophomore Shawn Bankhead for misdemeanor domestic battery which occurred Feb. 22.

While I do not condone acts of violence of any nature, I find several things disturbing about the actions of The Times-News and your reporter. The incident in question occurred Feb. 22 and was not reported by you until March 2, a full eight days later.

I find it disturbing that The Times-News chose to run the article on March 2, which happens to be the first day of the men's Regional Basketball Tournament.

Please understand I don't condone what is alleged to have occurred in this event. I find The Times-News handled the situation very distastefully and with a great deal of sensationalism. I don't feel it is simply coincidental that the article appears on the front page of the sports section on opening day of men's play at the regional tournament.

Share your views on county plan

In a few days, Twin Falls County citizens will be invited to a series of open houses to introduce the new proposed comprehensive plan for the direction of development in Twin Falls County. The dates are March 21 at Hansen Elementary School, March 22 at Buhl City Hall and March 23 at the Shields Building at the College of Southern Idaho from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m.

The committee involved in producing this document has worked pretty hard. Since there is a lot of diversity in the group, it is hoped that we have addressed the concerns of the people. However, it is quite possible that something has been missed or not enough emphasis has been given to something we should be truly concerned with.

Last fall, in spite of one of the most miserable winter storms, a good-sized crowd attended a special planning and zoning meeting at CSI concerning dairies. It is important that those people and more turn out once again to press their cases. Writing your concerns and suggestions for regulation will be helpful to those who will be working on regulations. Unless concern is continually and forcefully expressed, it is no sure thing that enough attention will be paid to your voices.

Other concerns include transportation, roads, natural resources, recreation, public lands and economic development, among others.

Please turn out for these open houses. If we, the citizens of Twin Falls County, don't tell the elected and appointed officials what we want, they will have the pleasure and duty of "doing it their way," and that may not be what we want.

Only thing left is to take action

On March 2, the U.S. Militia Association had an audience with Lt. Gov. Butch Otter. On March 3, liberal news writer Frank Lockwood printed a liberal's view on the meeting, pretty much factual but from a liberal view.

However, it must have been too much of a load for him to bear to write an article and almost get it right. So he made up for it on March 4 with ridiculous lies, half truths, twisted facts and utter belligerent nonsense.

But this is what people read everyday and they 'buy into it.

This situation is beyond desperate; our country is bankrupt by anyone's standard, yet Clinton gives $20 billion to Mexico.

The few products we make in this country are shipped in as foreign parts. All other jobs have been shipped out of the country. Clinton is calling our economy a service economy; a service economy only moves money around in the country. We have to export to bring money into the country or we can't pay off our debt. Our Constitution is being taken away little-by-little, day-by-day.

If you belong to a patriotic organization like the National Rifle Association, American Legion or the other organizations, it's not working; there are good organizations but the degradation continues.

Our great Republicans in Washington are talking the talk, but they are not walking the walk. The only choice left is to stick your head back in the sand and go back to sleep. Idaho. Turn your back on your country like Bill Clinton did. And 20 years from now, when you look into your kids' faces and you know they are free and you know it's your fault, you'll also know you don't deserve forgiveness—not even from God.

Or you can do the only thing left, join the militia and maybe with enough people, we can put enough political pressure on Congress to turn this country around before the shooting starts.

If this kind of talk seems you, then you're not stupid. So why do you continue to sit and do nothing?

Keep budget out of Constitution

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Or., did not support the balanced budget amendment. Because he thinks for himself and chooses not to be just another rubber stamp for the Republican Party, he is now coming under fire from Majority Leader Bob Dole and other Republicans.

Hatfield claims that he doesn't believe we need an amendment that tells us we have to balance the budget. I agree with that. A few years before my time, an amendment was enacted making it illegal to sell, buy or drink alcoholic beverages. That was supposed to keep people from drinking. Did it?

I don't think it to see anybody feeling around with the Constitution. If our elected representatives can't balance the budget, they certainly aren't qualified to amend the Constitution of the United States.

—The "Contract with America" is full of political subterfuges that make it appear Newt Gingrich and his flock are doing wonderful things to the American people.

If Congress is sincere about cutting "entitlements," let it begin with substantial cuts in congressional salaries, retirements and perks. Following that, cuts to any programs would be easier to accept.

Who knows? Gingrich might even fall claiming his $2,000 contribution to public radio as a tax write-off.

I wish my employer would send us on an interservice to Jackpot to stay overnight. We could all use a morale booster. Most employers are cutting back on spending and raises and are having interservices close to home, so you go and come back.

Farming: a job, not a business

The editors of this paper campaigned hard by the power of the press to get the legislation passed making it mandatory for farmers to pay for workmen's compensation as other businesses are required to do, they said.

Thank God, more intelligent minds prevailed and the law was not passed. Even so, an entire editorial was written lamenting its nonpassage, so I would like to enlighten you as to why this was poor legislation to begin with.

First and foremost, a farmer is not a businessman, he simply has an occupation. So whom does he work for? Well, if you eat, he works for you. But the farmer has no more jurisdiction over what he gets for his produce than the consumers do when they buy it at the store. For example, if the cost of newsprint goes up, you can raise the price of your advertising and subscriptions, so your profit margin is only limited by your greed.

Next to the farmer, everything the farmer buys, he pays retail—yet the legislation allows. And as if that isn't enough, he doesn't even set the wholesale price.

It's obvious the editor has never walked a mile in a farmer's muddy boots or, in your case, you should skivish barefoot through his corral after a rainy day.

Just recently a strike was settled in Spokane, Wash. The union received more benefits and higher wages, manufacturing materials farmers have to buy.

The strikers not only closed down their own plant with pickets and violence but several other plants only remotely associated with theirs.

Perhaps farmers should follow suit and demand to at least put a wholesale price on their produce and, in the meantime, picket all the grocery stores and throw rocks at anyone trying to buy food as the union workers did in Spokane.

And then perhaps the farmer could also be a greedy businessman and buy workmen's compensation for his employees.

Information on abuse is needed

I agree that publishing too many details of the victims in the Jenkins molestation case was in poor taste at best and more probably carelessly destructive for the innocents involved. But let's get real here. Molestation and child abuse are filthy, contemptible, ugly and vile acts. When reported with clarity, those of us with any compassion will form a gruesome and sickening picture in our mind's eye.

Uncomfortable as that makes us, we need a dose of reality now and again. When faced with this, we should not and cannot take a back seat to the total repulsiveness of the situation. The picture evoked should make us furious enough to get involved and do something to see that it never happens again, or at least acutely aware that there are sick people in our society that we need to guard more closely against.

Perhaps what the public at large should be truly concerned about are the questions raised by your reporter as to the timely matter in which this was handled.

Your article stated that Jenkins quit his job, got divorced, was ex-communicated from his church and moved within a two-month period late last year, yet no one knew why. Are we to assume that after all these years he had a sudden burst of conscience? How long did the local officials wait before acting on the information given them?

Were the local officials even given the information to act on? Or was it closed away somewhere so as not to embarrass those directly and indirectly involved? I would imagine that these are questions the parents of the Arizona students left in Jenkins' care have had since his arrest in one of their schools.

I know some good people have been horribly hurt by this information being made public, and I ache for them as they are victims as well. Let us not lose sight, however, of the reality that knowledge and education is the best preventative measure we can take.

Endeavour telescopes nail their toughest target yet: The moon

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Imagine photographing a road sign while speeding by in a car. That's what astronauts overcame Sunday to take the first ultraviolet snapshots of the moon. Endeavour's telescopes can zoom in on stars at the edge of the known universe with ease, but they struggle to focus on the moon — a mere 250,000 miles away — because it and the shuttle move so quickly around the Earth. To make things even more difficult, the moon is so bright that it can throw off the telescopes' alignment system. Astronomer Randy Gladstone of the Southwest Research Institute said our closest celestial neighbor was by far the most difficult target of the planned 15½-day shuttle stargazing mission.

But Gladstone, together with other scientists on the ground and the astrophysicists aboard Endeavour, were able to collect 12 ultraviolet images of the waxing moon Sunday. Gladstone won't know how the 70-millimeter pictures turn out until after the shuttle and its crew of seven return from their voyage Friday, but he was optimistic. "All our exposures went off as planned and we think we'll really get some good images," he said. They would be the first ultraviolet photographs ever taken of the moon. Such pictures can't be made from Earth because the atmosphere screens ultraviolet light. Apollo astronauts used spectroscopes to study sunlight reflecting off the moon's surface more than 20 years ago, but they didn't take pictures in the invisible far ultraviolet.

The images from this flight will be used to test a theory that the ultraviolet surface brightness of a celestial object without an atmosphere can reveal how long that object has been exposed to space. For example, a newer moon crater should theoretically reflect more ultraviolet light than the surrounding area because dirt there was more recently exposed. "We're hoping to learn something new about the moon's scattering properties at these wavelengths," Gladstone said. "But we'll also be able to test this ... as a way to do remote sensing of other planetary bodies, such as Mercury or asteroids or other planetary satellites." The shuttle instruments were aimed at the moon again on Tuesday and Thursday, when the orb will be nearly full, Gladstone said.

JEDDAH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Secretary of State Warren Christopher, sharply critical of a major American oil company's lucrative contract with Iran, said Sunday he had dropped out of the Clinton administration's ongoing review of the deal because Conoco had retained his law firm. Among the options under consideration by the administration is ordering Conoco to abandon the contract to develop a huge offshore oil field in the Persian Gulf. The deal, worth about $1 billion, is with a government whose "evil hand" is evident everywhere in the Middle East, Christopher said before he had learned Conoco had hired O'Melveny & Myers of Los Angeles. Christopher was chairman of the firm before he became secretary of state two years ago and is vested in its retirement fund. His self-exclusion from examination of the Conoco deal removes the administration's most outspoken critic of the deal and of Iran.

Meanwhile, Christopher said Saudi Arabia and five other Persian Gulf countries, Oman, Kuwait, Qatar, the United Arab Emirates and Bahrain, had voiced their support for his drive for a wider Arab-Israeli peace in the Middle East.

In a joint declaration with the United States they also condemned "all acts of violence and terrorism" and backed the administration in seeking to maintain tough U.N. trade sanctions on Iraq.

Christopher said that Iraq's record of compliance with U.N. resolutions was "genuinely a travesty" and that 10 of the 15 Security Council members would support extending the sanctions. France, Russia and China have led a campaign to permit trade with President Saddam Hussein's government. The sanctions permit purchase of Iraqi oil only if the proceeds are used to benefit the Iraqi people. Christopher said after meeting with the foreign ministers of the Gulf Cooperation Council he would support easing monitoring procedures provided Iraq did not divert revenues to military uses.

On another front, he urged the six oil-rich countries to fulfill their pledges to assist the fledgling Palestinian Authority in Gaza and Jericho. Saudi Arabia has made good on a $100 million pledge for 1994, but Kuwait has provided only $8 million of a $25 million pledge and the United Arab Emirates $5 million of a $15 million pledge, U.S. officials said. An O'Melveny & Myers attorney accompanied Conoco officials to the State and Commerce departments last week to defend the contract with Iran, a senior U.S. official told reporters traveling with Christopher. The administration, with Christopher in the lead, has tried to curb Western loans and other commercial ties to Iran in an effort to moderate its radical policies. Until the deal was disclosed last Tuesday only a few mid- and low-level State Department officials knew it was being arranged, the senior U.S. official said. President Clinton and Anthony Lake, his national security adviser, both are "tough-minded" in their approach to Iran, so "we are not too worried that by recusing himself (Christopher) has weakened the administration's stand," said the senior official, who spoke to reporters in Jeddah on condition of anonymity. Christopher announced the decision on his flight from Israel. He said he had asked the State Department's legal adviser to prepare a recusal statement and that he had already ended his participation in talks on the Conoco deal. His chief of staff, Thomas E. Donilon, who also worked at O'Melveny & Myers, also excluded himself from discussions of the contract between a Conoco Dutch subsidiary and Iran.

'Gump' gains momentum in race for Oscar

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — The already strong Academy Award odds for "Forrest Gump" have gotten even stronger. The Directors Guild of America bestowed its top award on the man behind the box of chocolates, despite betting that its younger and, presumably, hipper members than those in the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences would honor the maker of the film noir send-up "Pulp Fiction."

With Robert Zemeckis' triumph Saturday night, "Gump" gained serious momentum to take the top Oscars in two weeks. Recent DGA winners have repeated at the Academy Awards not only as the best director, but also best picture. The last three guild winners — "The Silence of the Lambs," "Unforgiven" and "Schindler's List" — all have swept Oscars.

"I'm really nervous now," Zemeckis said of Oscar prospects after his win. "Forrest Gump," starring Tom Hanks as a good-hearted simpleton who becomes a hero, has received 13 Academy Award nominations.

The other nominees for best director were Frank Darabont for "The Shawshank Redemption"; Mike Newell for "Four Weddings and a Funeral"; Robert Redford for "Quiz Show"; and Quentin Tarantino for "Pulp Fiction."

Zemeckis, a protégé of Steven Spielberg, faced the strongest competition from the cutting-edge Tarantino. "Obviously, what makes this moment so significant is it comes from my fellow directors," Zemeckis said in accepting the prize. "Movie directing is exhilarating, exhausting, addicting, painful, rewarding and a very cool job."

Arsenic findings spur fear among California gold country residents

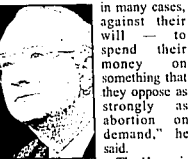

LOS ANGELES TIMES SUTTER CREEK, Calif. — For many residents of the California gold country, the abandoned ore mills and rusting mine machinery that dot the green hills are cherished icons of a storied past. The relics are part of the lure of the Sierra Nevada foothills, where the look and feel of the Gold Rush era has helped attract thousands of new residents, making the region one of the state's fastest growing during the past decade. But these days frightened gold country emigrants are learning a modern variation on the old adomation "all that glitters is not gold." High levels of arsenic have been found in new subdivisions near several old mines, triggering a panic in one neighborhood and prompting reviews of new development plans in the Sierras. Federal and state health officials, meanwhile, are scrambling for more information about a potential hazard that has not gotten much scientific attention.

ically contains minerals rich in arsenic. Arsenic is a heavy metal that can become a human health hazard after it is pulled from the ground and exposed to the air. Chronic exposure to arsenic in certain forms can cause asthma, kidney disease and cancer. For years, human exposure was limited to the handful of people, mostly prospectors, who came in contact with old mine tailings — the piles of sandy residue left over after all the gold has been extracted. But with the population boom around here, chances of exposure are on the rise, although the risks are in dispute. The arsenic issue is getting the most attention in Amador County, where a small subdivision was built in the town of Sutter Creek on top of an 11-acre tailings pile in the late 1980s. The tailings were left by the Central-Eureka Mine, which operated on and off from the 1850s until the early 1950s. Both the state and federal environmental protection agencies have reported that arsenic levels in soil in and around the Mesa de Oro subdivision are high enough — about 60 times what the state considers safe — to cause serious health problems. About 75 families live in the immediate vicinity of Mesa De Oro, but government inspectors have found elevated arsenic levels in soil of neighborhoods as far as a mile away. One of the hazards of gold mine tailings is that ore processing has reduced much of the waste to fine, flourlike particles easily spread by wind or erosion. Federal officials say they are planning a $3 million "containment project" to seal the arsenic at Mesa de Oro under two feet of fresh soil. In the meantime, they have told residents not to plant gardens in the contaminated earth or let their children play in the dirt. The Mesa de Oro investigation was touched off by a construction worker's complaint last year that he became ill digging a foundation. While no one else has turned up sick, the arsenic findings have prompted some residents to try to sell their homes and others to sue the day they ever heard of the gold country.

Gramm says he would not push to ban abortions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Phil Gramm said Sunday that if elected president he would oppose using taxpayer money to provide abortions but would not push for a constitutional amendment to overturn abortion rights. His chief of staff, Thomas E. Donilon, who also worked at O'Melveny & Myers, also excluded himself from discussions of the contract between a Conoco Dutch subsidiary and Iran.

The House is heading for a showdown on when it takes a GOP plan to cut more than $17 billion from this year's budget. Attached to the bill is an amendment offered by Rep. Ernest Istook, R-Okla., and strongly opposed by the administration, that would let states decide whether Medicaid money could be used for abortions in cases of rape and incest.

He says that he is personally against abortion, but that he would not make abortion a litmus test in deciding on his running mate. Gramm said he supported GOP 1992 platform language that would ban abortions in cases of rape or incest, but "we're going to have to recognize that there are good Republicans who differ on the issue."

The practical public policy, he said, would be to oppose taxpayer funding unless the mother's life is in danger. "I'm not going to sign a law that forces taxpayers who pay taxes — in many cases, against their will — to spend their money on something that they oppose as strongly as abortion on demand," he said. Gramm also said he would fluster the nomination of Dr. Henry Foster to be surgeon general if it reached the Senate floor, but denied that his opposition stemmed primarily from Foster's record of performing abortions. He said he was unhappy with both Foster's record as a doctor and his difficulty in recounting how many abortions he had performed. "This is a person who has trouble leveling, and there is one litmus test, and that is being honest."

Notre Dame professor wins seat in Estonian Parliament

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Igor Grazin entered the race to siphon votes from the opposition. He said he would lose. He even promised his wife he would lose. Instead, Grazin broke his promise and surprised the pollsters by winning one of the 101 seats in Estonia's parliament. A professor of law and economics at Notre Dame University, Grazin got word Friday that he was elected to represent farmers in a rural district in his homeland. The election was March 5.

"My mission was not to get into the parliament but to take away the votes that would have gone to the leftists," said Grazin, who was listed on the Estonian Reform Party ballot. "I was sure I would not be elected." While visiting the former Soviet republic on the Baltic Sea for three days, Grazin told farmers he opposed farm subsidies and tariffs. He said they would have to "work even more" to compete with other European farmers. Grazin has no intention of resigning from parliament or quitting his job at Notre Dame.

Big cheese in cheese packaging dies at 80

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Victor Dorman, who was responsible for putting paper between slices of cheese, has died from heart failure related to muscular dystrophy. He was 80. Dorman died March 4 at his home here, his son, Neil, said. He took over the Dorman Cheese Co., which had been founded by his father, Nathan, in the late 1800s. The company was sold to the Beatrice Foods conglomerate in 1986. In the 1950s, the U.S. Slicing Machine Co. developed the interleaver — a machine that cut a slice of cheese, placed it on a conveyor belt and then, with mechanical fingers, laid down a sheet of paper or parchment.

Croatia agrees to keep U.N. forces

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Facing strong international pressure, Croatia's president agreed Sunday to keep a U.N. peacekeeping force to prevent another war, but said he wants its size cut by more than half.

President Franjo Tudjman said he wants the 12,000-member force reduced to 5,000 soldiers. U.N. officials say the final number could be closer to 6,000.

Mediators were worried that Tudjman's order for the peacekeepers to leave when his mandate expires March 31 would result in renewed warfare with rebel Serbs who have held a third of Croatia since a 1991 civil war.

"This is very good news," Vice President Al Gore said at a joint news conference with Tudjman. "The departure of the U.N. presence from the scene now would lead to full-scale war between Croatian Serbs and government forces."

Croatia claims the U.N. force has created a permanent partition of the country.

Gore pledged "full U.S. support for restoring Croatian control over land lost to the Serbs, but he provided no details for ways to dislodge them."

Despite the optimism, difficult negotiations lie ahead on deciding just what the U.N. peacekeepers' role will be.

Croatia's Serbs might try to torpedo any new agreement, especially since Gore indicated U.N. troops could be placed on Croatia's borders with Serbia and Bosnia.

The Serbs said that would be tantamount to recognizing Croatian authority over Serb-held regions.

Cutting the force's size in half raises questions about its effectiveness in the tense region.

The Croatian government and U.N. officials have started talks on a new mandate for the peacekeepers.

Chris Gunnes, a U.N. spokesman in the Croatian capital of Zagreb, said the Security Council "is expected to consider the issue next week."

For the past two months, U.S. and European officials had been shuttling between Croatia's capital, Zagreb, and the Yugoslav capital, Belgrade, to defuse the crisis over the peacekeepers.

The Serbs already have said they would not accept any changes in the U.N. orders defining the peacekeeping operation in Croatia.

Tudjman's announcement temporarily stole the spotlight at the world poverty summit, where he and Gore joined national leaders from around the globe.

Haris Silajdzic, the prime minister of Bosnia-Herzegovina, used his seven-minute speech at the world forum to invoke again the tragedy of former Yugoslavia.

"How can we talk about reaffirming human dignity after concentration camps, rape camps and cattle wagons full of living skeletons were displayed on our (television) screens?" Silajdzic asked.

He said that 17,000 children have been killed in Bosnia in three years of fighting.

"Those living, some with gray hair and eyes and hearts of old men, are hardly children any more," Silajdzic added.

Tudjman said U.N. troops could stay in Croatia for a "limited period of time" but did not specify how long. He said there was no deadline for a new agreement regarding U.N. peacekeepers, "but we hope it could be in the near future."

Tudjman is expected in Washington this week for talks with President Clinton.

Report: 1,000 missiles aimed at Israel

JERUSALEM — Syria and other Arab states have 1,000 missiles aimed at the Israel and would double the number by the end of the decade, Israeli media reported Sunday.

Quoting a high-ranking Israeli defense official, the daily Yedioth Ahronoth said that Syria, Iran, Libya and other unnamed Arab countries had long- and medium-range missiles ready to launch at Israel.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, also warned that Syria was on the verge of being able to produce its own missiles, Yedioth said.

"This dictates that we should make a special effort to reach a political settlement with ... some of the countries that are threatening us," Education Minister Annon Rubinstein said in response to the report.

Major promises trade, aid to Paestinians

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister John Major, making only the second trip to Israel by a British leader, said Sunday that Britain will contribute to Mideast peace through closer trade ties to Israel and aid to the Palestinians.

Accompanying Major were 30 top British businessmen, including officials of companies that used to obey the Arab boycott of Israel.

At a welcoming ceremony, Major said stronger economic ties "can make a contribution to peace."

In interviews before leaving London, Major suggested he would offer more financial aid to Yasser Arafat's government in Gaza when he meets the PLO leader there Tuesday.

At least 110 people die in crash in India

MADRAS, India (AP) — A oil truck trying to overtake a tractor-trailer collided with a bus and all three vehicles burst into flames in southern India on Sunday, killing at least 110 people.

The Press Trust of India news agency said 23 people were hospitalized following the accident 30 miles south of Madras. The tractor-trailer was carrying a wedding party. The accident blocked the national highway, stranding about 1,500 vehicles.

Hindu nationalists win Indian elections

NEW DELHI, India — Hindu nationalists defeated the governing Congress Party in an important state election and appeared to be winning another Sunday, prompting some lawmakers to demand that Prime Minister P. V. Narasimha Rao resign.

Rao's party won a surprise victory in a less important third state. No results were available in a fourth state. All four states cast their votes in February and early March, but counting was delayed until Saturday.

The state legislative elections have no direct effect on Rao's powers, and he isn't required to hold a national election until 1996. But the poor showing in Gujarat and Maharashtra — India's richest states — will boost Congress Party dissidents who are demanding his ouster.

Oil minister outlines Iraqi goals, plans

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iraq hopes to start signing contracts with Western firms to explore and develop Iraq's vast oil fields in the next two months, the oil minister said Sunday, adding that U.S. companies stand to miss out on the lucrative deals.

The minister, Safa Jwaid al-Haboubi, acknowledged that foreigners — both Arabs and Westerners — are already working in Iraq on oil projects, despite a U.N. oil embargo. But he declined to give numbers or nationalities.

Al-Haboubi's remarks, which were given to Western journalists at a place as Iraq was concluding a two-day international oil conference, is first since the 1991 Persian Gulf War. About 120 oil experts from more than 20 countries attended.

Opposition party releases top lawmakers

SEOUL, South Korea — South Korea's two top lawmakers, held in their homes for a week by opposition members protesting changes in election law, were freed Sunday after riot police threatened to storm the building.

No major violence or arrests were reported after the 90-minute, pre-dawn showdown between 900 riot policemen and 16 members of the opposition Democrats at the homes of the speaker and vice speaker of the National Assembly.

International poverty summit ends

World leaders agree on dangers of poverty, but are divided on solutions to ending it

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Committing themselves to a pact on fighting poverty, world leaders wrapped up a summit Sunday agreeing that misery can lead to violent social upheaval, but differing on how to cure it.

The weeklong U.N. gathering, which brought together 190 countries and some 120 heads of state, was an ambitious attempt to pull together governments and aid groups to set a common global policy.

"The cry of 2 billion of infants worldwide whose lives are threatened by hunger should be enough to consolidate our resolve," said Malta's prime minister, Edward Fenech-Adami.

In speeches leading up to the formal adoption of the declaration, poor countries accused the rich ones of shirking their duties. Many Third World leaders also agreed, however, that reforms were needed in their own backyards to boost production and fight corruption.

The 10-point declaration, while non-binding, urges richer nations to spend 0.7 percent of their gross national product on foreign aid and to cancel the debt of poor countries. It says donor countries should earmark 20 percent of their aid specifically for basic social programs, while the recipient should spend 20 percent of its national budget on such programs.

The document urges improving health care, sanitation and food production, as well as literacy — especially among women as a means to lower the birthrate.

An alternative summit across town brought together 2,400 private aid groups, whose verbal barbs were credited with goading the U.N. conference into discussing tough issues.

"The final declaration isn't that ideal, but it's reasonable," the U.N. summit's host, Danish Prime Minister Poul Nyrup Rasmussen, told a final news conference.

Pope John Paul II, speaking at the Vatican on Sunday, called the summit a "sign of hope," adding it succeeded in spotlighting the huge gap between rich and poor nations.

The gathering was in part aimed at heading off new development-linked disasters like the blood baths and starvation from the collapse of Somalia and Rwanda, where competition over scarce resources helped fuel ethnic and political rivalries.

Sri Lankan President Chandrika Bandaranaike Kumaratunga noted that in her country, past programs that failed to address the needs of the country's Tamil minority were partly to blame for Sri Lanka's 11-year civil war.

"We in Sri Lanka today are compelled to face the devastating effects of shortsighted economic and social policies of the past," she said. "The marginalization of one racial community has resulted in a murderous civil war."

European Union chief Jacques Santer said Third World development is a global issue because of economic interdependence and the concern about floods of refugees that could be triggered by hardship.

But richer nations, dealing with their own budget deficits and skeptical about past aid, were not rushing to offer more money. Only Denmark and Austria used the summit to announce debt cancellation.

Countries receiving aid must "assume their own responsibilities," said Ruth Dreifuss, head of the delegation from wealthy Switzerland.

Vice President Albert Gore said Washington will funnel more of its help through independent organizations to avoid fostering bloated bureaucracies.

"Abroad as at home, we know that we have to redefine the way we fight poverty and transform the relationship between donors and recipients," he said.

Some poor nations agreed, "without reform, new financial aid 'is like

Palestinian women want end to honor killing

Los Angeles Times

JERICHO, West Bank — Police or shepherds or bikers find them: the bloodstained bodies of women, murdered and dumped outside West Bank villages and towns. A woman discovered recently by a bulldozer driver near the village of Beit Jalla had been bound hand and foot and decapitated. Sometimes, they have been strangled, shot or burned alive. More often, the victim has been stabbed or hacked to death.

The murderer, if apprehended, nearly always turns out to be a close male relative — father, brother, cousin, uncle. The men of one village, Beit Duqou, favor throwing women off their mosque's minaret.

The practice is called "honor killing," and it is so deeply rooted in the ancient Arab tribal structure that many barely consider it a crime. No accurate record is kept of how many women die this way each year in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, but sociologists believe the count may be around two dozen.

According to tradition, a man is obliged to take the life of a close female blood relative if he does something that is perceived to sully the honor of the family. The most common transgression is for an unmarried woman to have sex.

Now a small group of Palestinian women — political activists and feminists — are hoping that the establishment of a Palestinian government, and the expected end of Israel's 27-year military occupation in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, will give them a chance to change their society's attitude toward honor killings.

Palestinian women stood side by side with the young men who confronted the Israeli soldiers in the occupied territories during the Palestinian intifada, or uprising against Israeli military rule, she advocates argue. Now is the time for them to call in their political chips with Yasser Arafat's fledgling Palestinian Authority.

Palestinians say that sometimes women or teen-age girls disappear, and the only explanation offered by the immediate family is that they have "gone to Jordan."

Activists have grown up hearing the stories of women who have "gone wrong" and paid for their perceived moral transgressions with their lives.

markets for their hardship.

Cuban President Fidel Castro filled "blind and savage market laws." That doctrine, he said, "mercilessly forces budget cuts in health, education, culture ... and other needs."

Even among well-educated, wealthy families, a woman is expected to be "virgin when she marries. (Men exempt from such strictures.)

Many of society's pillars, its legal, community and religious leaders, view the practice of honor killing as a powerful deterrent, a way of ensuring social order.

"Murder is a bad and horrible thing," said Azmi Tanjeer, a Nablus lawyer who was a district court judge in the West Bank for 15 years under Israeli rule. "I am, of course, opposed to murder. But also, in my opinion, what is more important is moral stability in society. Religion, culture, tradition calls for this (honor killings). Maybe, if one woman is killed because of honor, it might stop other women from taking this step."

Government drives out student militia from Kabul

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Government forces drove a rival Islamic militia out of Kabul's southern suburbs Sunday after nearly a week of ferocious fighting that has killed or wounded nearly 1,000 people.

Presidential troops were reported to be advancing on the headquarters of the Taliban, a new force made up of religious students, at Charasyab, 18 miles south of Kabul.

Government fighter jets screamed overhead as ground forces fired hundreds of rounds of artillery and mortar fire at retreating Taliban fighters.

Pakistan Television quoted President Bushrahan, Rabban, saying the Taliban had been pushed nearly nine miles outside the capital.

The United Nations, which is trying to forge a peace plan for Kabul, has called for an immediate end to the fighting.

"The secretary general is deeply concerned by the recent upsurge in fighting in Afghanistan ... which has caused many civilian casualties," said a U.N. statement released in Pakistan.

Witnesses said dead bodies were still lying on the road in the devastated Karte Se suburb of Kabul, where much of the past week's fighting has been concentrated.

On Sunday, an exhausted head nurse at Karte Se Hospital, Sakhi Shatik, said the staff treated 106 patients for shrapnel and gunshot wounds in the past 24 hours.

Since last Monday, the hospital has treated 670 patients, he said. Another two hospitals near the front line reported more than 200 new patients.

Torrents of spring Is it a cold? Flu? Or possibly allergies?

By Cathy Walworth
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — The nose rarely knows what's attacking it, so its response is the same: It flows.

Whether it's a cold or flu or pollen invading the nose, the results are pretty much the same. "When the body is invaded it releases histamine," explained Dr. Julian Nicholson, a Twin Falls eye, ear, nose and throat specialist. When that happens, he said, the nose is off and running so that it can wash itself out.

It also starts up the white blood cells to fight infection, should it come. The blood vessels become dilated, there's probably going to be some post-nasal drip that triggers a scratchy throat, and maybe some itchy eyes, too.

So how do you know if you're really sick or if you have an allergy? Time will tell, Nicholson said.

"A cold will usually last 7-10 days," he said. "It starts off bad and gets better. You have to go more on time: If you've had it for two days and not had it before, treat yourself with antihistamines. If a patient comes back in three weeks with the same problems — Whoops! — we might have an allergy."

"If you think it's a cold for three or four weeks, you really don't have a cold," said Dr. Greg Kadlec, a Twin Falls allergist. "It's some kind of allergic phenomenon."

You don't see a real fever with hay fever, he said. That's a pretty good indication it's not a cold.

"You only see fever with infections," he said. "Viruses cause fever. 'Hay fever' is a misnomer," Kadlec said.

And if it seems as if you've got a cold year-round, said Kadlec, "That's just probably chronic rhinosinusitis. Everybody has a little of that."

In any case, the docs advise, over-the-counter antihistamines are going to help your symptoms until you or your doctor figure out what you've got.

Although you don't want to run to the doctor's office with the very first sniffle, Nicholson said, there are times when a visit is warranted.

In the meantime, relieve the symptoms of stuffy nose and the like with a hot shower, the doctors say. The steam seems to help.

Dr. Julian Nicholson checks Mable Carpenter for signs of allergies.

Vaporizers and humidifiers are fine if they work for you, Kadlec said.

"They can never hurt anything, and they're helpful for some people."

And call your doctor in the morning — or next week.

"Go to the doctor with a significant headache: a higher temperature, when you're just sicker," Nicholson advised.

Many times the simple cold or allergy has developed into a sinus infection by that point, he said. But it's still hard to tell for sure.

"A lot of times I'll go with a sinus X-ray cause I'm not sure," Nicholson said. "You basically try to hold costs down as much as you can — you don't want to get a sinus X-ray on everybody who walks in the office — you can overuse that mode of diagnosis, and they're expensive. But you want to be sure antibiotics are needed," he said.

Some of the warning signs of a sinus infection, Nicholson said, are the appearance of a lot of pus out of the sinuses, the significant headache, higher temperature, sometimes pain in the teeth or pain over the entire face.

Or, you can just get sicker.

A sinus infection occurs when bacteria has formed in the sinuses. That's the only time an antibiotic will help. Colds are caused by viruses and allergic symptoms are triggered by an allergen, whether it be dander or pollen, but none are relieved with antibiotics.

"If you really don't need an antibiotic," you should steer clear of them, Nicholson said. "We may be creating a monster down the line with overuse."

'S' in IRS stands for 'smile'

Income-tax-filing time: For Person A, it's a nightmare; yet for Person B, it's no big deal. What's the difference?

Simple: Person B died in 1993. This is the kind of sound tax planning that can prevent numerous headaches down the road.

Unfortunately, those of you who foolishly elected to continue living are going to have to file tax returns this year. That is the bad news. The good news is that the IRS is working hard to make its tax forms more "user-friendly." For example, I have here the old and new versions of Form 5213, sent to me by alert taxpayer Katie Tibbits. The two forms are identical except for the titles. The old version is titled:

Election To Postpone Determination As To Whether The Presumption That An Activity Is Engaged In For Profit Applies.

Dave Barry
Humor

What a bunch of gobbledeygook! Fortunately, the folks who work at today's IRS (motto: "We're Human Beings Just Like You, Except We Breathe Via Gills") no longer tolerate this kind of confusing prose. They have thoughtfully revised Form 5213, so that it's now titled:

Election To Postpone Determination As To Whether The Presumption Applies That An Activity Is Engaged In For Profit.

That certainly clears that up! I think all of us taxpayers should express our gratitude by filing Form 5213 this year as many times as is humanly possible.

Tibbits also sent me Form 8328, which was named by the IRS's state-of-the-art Random Noun Generator. It's called "Carryforward Election Of Unused Private Activity Bond Volume Cap."

The instructions do not give any clear indication as to what this form is for, except that it has something to do with docks and wharves. My advice to you is, if you have had anything whatsoever to do with a dock or wharf in 1994, including simply walking on one, you should flee to the Amazon rain forest immediately, because trust me, you do not want to mess with Form 8328. My eyeballs are bleeding just from looking at it.

Most taxpayers, however, are mainly concerned with Form 1040. The average time required to complete and file this form is about 11 hours, according to an IRS study of average taxpayers on the Planet Zombo. You will probably need more like a month, not counting the time required to forge receipts.

To help you with this annual chore, I've prepared the following:

Doomsday disease scenarios are contagious

Knight-Ridder News Service

The world teeters on the edge of ruin. Time is running out. Military, scientific and government leaders scurry to save humankind.

Is it nuclear war? An alien invasion? Godzilla reborn?

Hardly. It's a mere virus — minuscule, microscopic. And it's coming Friday to a movie theater near you.

"Outbreak," starring Dustin Hoffman and Morgan Freeman and directed by Wolfgang Petersen ("In the Line of Fire"), tells the story of a lethal microbe that lays waste to an African village, then travels halfway around the globe and begins to fill the residents of a California town.

The movie storms onto screens as the first major studio release of 1995 with equal prospects of rave reviews and a box office flop.

It also arrives as a telling sign of anxious times, at least if popular entertainment is any indication.

Americans are feeling more than a bit buggy about bugs — the medical kind, that is.

"We need a new fear," says Christopher Foreman, a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution in Washington, D.C., who is studying plagues and politics.

"We need something new to be frightened of, and this is plausible for us because we've had more than a decade of AIDS and because we know that there's a genuine threat of emerging microbes," Foreman says. "It's a very short step from that to a screenplay."

Or to a handbook book. "The Hot Zone" (Random House, $23), a nonfiction thriller by Richard Preston about researchers racing to contain a potentially deadly virus to a laboratory, has flourished near the top of best-seller lists for more than 20 weeks.

Meanwhile, "The Coming Plague" by Laurie Garrett (Farrar, Straus & Giroux, $25) has wildly outperformed all expectations for a book of its kind: an exhaustively researched scientific tome about viruses, bacteria and other disease-causing agents that are not contained, or won't be for long. It just entered its eighth printing, with more than 50,000 copies sold.

Television has caught the fever, too. Stephen King's "The Stand," envisioning a world winnowed drastically by disease, aired last year, while an episode of "The X-Files" last month included sophisticated techno-babble about retroviruses, blood and contagion.

More is certainly on the way, because it all makes perfect sense. With the Cold War on ice, but the millennium approaching nonetheless, a new brand of Armageddon is in order.

The notion of a medical or microbiological apocalypse works as well as any other doomsday scenario, because it reflects unexpected events in America over recent years and current confusions: about the degree to which we've conquered infectious diseases and the degree to which we remain vulnerable.

AIDS has sort of lowered everybody's threshold for panic about weird new diseases and made them more easily frightened about the specter," notes Dr. Terrie Taylor, an associate professor of internal medicine at Michigan State University who specializes in tropical diseases.

If AIDS has been the shrillest alarm, however, it hasn't been the only one.

The past decade has witnessed panic about Lyme Disease, Epstein Barr virus, chronic fatigue and the enigmatic Gulf War Syndrome.

The past few years have witnessed scares over an intestinal parasite in the Milwaukee water system, bacterial contamination of fast-food hamburgers in the Seattle area and a so-called hantavirus that caused fatal lung infections in the rural Southwest and elsewhere.

None caused an epidemic. Even so, they shook Americans' faith that modern medicine had banished certain kinds of sickness to the annals of scientific history.

Premonitions of plague are not new. On screen, for example, there was "Panic in the Streets," a 1950 thriller about a latter-day case of the Black Death in New Orleans; "The Sutan Bug," a 1965 thriller about a lethal virus stolen from a government laboratory; and, of course, "The Andromeda Strain," a 1971 thriller about a satellite that comes back to earth harboring disease-causing agents. It was based on a novel by Michael Crichton.

What's slightly different about the current meditations on medical catastrophe is they take less obvious flights of fancy and ground themselves more deliberately in public health discussions actually taking place.

"The Hot Zone" and "The Coming Plague," while derided by some critics as overly hyped and unduly alarmist, are still nonfiction books.

"Outbreak," which nurtures the scientific seeds of those books into a fantastical flower, is nevertheless strives to tuck it into a garden with legitimately scientific scenery. Its extensive production notes include lengthy information about viral threats in the world and even a quote from "The Coming Plague."

Their backers' conviction in the material's timeliness and topicality is confirmed by their rush to get "Outbreak" made before a competing project, "Crisis in the Hot Zone," based on Preston's book, could take shape. That movie, which was to be directed by Ridley Scott with Robert Redford and Jodie Foster in the lead roles, appears to be dead now.

Garrett's book, which is subtitled "Newly Emerging Diseases in a World Out of Balance," details a panoply of reasons why Americans and other residents of the globe may be

It has been christened the New Length by the fashion world — a skirt length that hits just below the kneecap.

To the real world, it probably looks more like the Same Old Length. Neither mini, midi nor maxi, it is a modest, practical length that women who reject the vicissitudes of fashion have been wearing for decades.

A better name would be the New Looking Same Old Length. This is because there are some striking differences in the overall appearance of the slinky new skirts.

Same Old Length skirts tend to be gathered at the waist, which gives them a comfortable, camouflaging fullness. They are paired with loose-fitting top

"Minced potato and white radish can remove phenols, too, according to a report in the journal Biotechnology and BioEngineering."

SLICK FINDING: Someday, we literally may be able to slip cancer's punch. Pectin, the natural fruit fiber that makes jelly jell, can prevent the spread of prostate cancer in laboratory rats by making cancer cells too slick to stay in one place, researchers report in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute. "If we had a pill that prevented cancer from spreading, then about 90 percent of all cancers could be curable," the lead researcher said, adding, however, that for the present, "You cannot go to a health food store, buy ordinary pectin and expect it to work."

PUMPING PUMMING: Anything body builders can do, you can do — if not better, then at least as profitably for your health. So says muscleman Arnold Schwarzenegger, former head of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports, who runs an annual bodybuilding competition. "If you don't have the need to be the top champion in the world, and you want to lose five inches around the waist, then you will get that and with much less training," Schwarzenegger says.

PLAY IT AGAIN, LUCKY: Speaking of hunks, Lucky Vanous, of Diet Coke commercial fame, has teamed up with fitness trainer Kaye Duke for a video called "Lucky Vanous: The Ultimate Fat-Burning System." Fitness magazine rates it one of the best of the current crop of celebrity workout tapes.

THE NAKED TRUTH: Just because you're a nudist doesn't mean that all you do is lounge around. Explaining why the group he heads changed its name from the American Sunbathing Association to the American Association for Nude Recreation, George Volak tells U.S. News & World Report: "The previous name suggested nudists are people sitting in the sun. Actually, nudists are quite active in sports and healthy exercise."

New law makes registering to vote just a stamp away

DEAR ABBY: Recently a reader asked what was involved in registering to vote. (Your reader was not registered and was too embarrassed to admit it.)

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

Fortunately for that individual, and others who are in the same boat, voting has never been easier.

Based on a new federal law that took effect this year, citizens in virtually every state can now register by mail or in person at their local town hall. They can pick up mail-in voter registration cards at their local town hall, public libraries, motor vehicle offices and social service agencies in their state. Most states mail out voter registration cards with driver's license forms.

In all cases, simply fill out the voter registration form, sign it, mail it in, and once the local clerk or registrar approves the form, you're a voter! It's the first step to being a full participant in our democracy, and you can do it any time of year. When the next election occurs in your community, you can vote for the candidate of your choice.

The strength and vitality of our democracy depend on the participation of citizens, and the new law is already helping thousands of Americans to register, and exercise their right to vote. Abby, please urge every one of your readers of legal age to vote!

MILESS S. RAPOPORT,
SECRETARY OF STATE,
CONNECTICUT

DEAR MR. SECRETARY: Thank you for informing the many interested (but unregistered) citizens. For my young readers who may not realize they are old enough to vote, the legal voting age is 18.

DEAR ABBY: I nearly spilled my coffee when my poem, "Middle Children," popped out at me from your column. It appeared originally in Good Housekeeping magazine in July 1960.

I am delighted to learn that it helped at least one "middle child" feel better about herself - though it's a bit hard to figure out how such a prominently displayed author's name could have vanished into the mists. Another lesson in humility, I guess!

My poetry still appears in national publications. And, Abby, you would do all of us poets and other writers a favor if you would caution your readers not to clip and pass printed material along to others without including the author's name, and the publication's as well. Proper credit can be given and permission to reprint can be obtained, if that is ever contemplated. Meanwhile, I do appreciate you (and Ms. Williams') kindly comments about my poem. With that warm feeling, I really didn't need the coffee to wake up.

MARY MARGARET FLOSSMOR, ILL.
DEAR MARY MARGARET MILBRATH: That lovely poem was sent to me clearly stating that the author was unknown. Thank you for setting the record straight.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter has been dating a young man for about a year, and he has asked us for her hand in marriage. Last night he told our daughter that he is a philatelist. Do you think we should consent to this marriage?

LINDA'S PARENTS
DEAR PARENTS: Why not? He has as much right to collect old stamps as you have to collect old jokes.

Looking at pros, cons of Newways

DEAR PAULA: I consider Newways skin care products a blessing, not a religion. Because Newways products are formulated for effectiveness, I do not have to spend money on facial scrubs and masks that you recommend. You should compare yesterday's skin care technology to yesterday's benefits. Then compare today's skin care technology to today's benefits.

Cosmetic Q&A
Paula Begoun

This comparison should give the public a choice. There is a difference. Newways products are made with the safest and best ingredients. Unlike sodium lauryl sulphate, ammonium lauryl sulfate does not penetrate the skin. I would really like for you to send me the research that could back up your critical statements on Newways skin care products. I can testify that I do not use the old way with facial scrubs and masks because I do not have to. Newways has the products and benefits I want. -Lillie, Livingston, NJ

DEAR LILLIE: Although I see little difference between associating cosmetics with blessings or religions, I am pleased that you find so much success using Newways products. I wasn't quite as critical of their products as you seemed to think. I was extremely critical of their claims, which I explained in detail (Jan/Feb 95 Cosmetics Counter Update) but definitely found some good products. I'm wondering where you got the impression that facial masks and scrubs were old technology? With the advent of AHAs there is less of a reason to turn to facial masks or mechanical scrubs to exfoliate skin, but for some skin types that cannot use AHAs, scrubs and some masks are still an option. (Personally, I rarely recommend facial masks unless someone has oily or acne skin and then only liquid magnesium as found in milk of magnesia, because of its ability to absorb oil and low irritancy potential.)

Rarely has someone asked me to send them my research given that I am using readily available sources, you could do the research yourself. Still, given the information you sent me, it is only fair that I turn send you mine. I am sending you articles from Drug and Cosmetics

Industry Magazine and two dermatological journals supporting my information regarding sodium lauryl sulphate, mineral oil, and formaldehyde releasing preservatives. The rest of my review is self evident from the ingredient label. You can use Ruth Winter's Dictionary of Cosmetic Ingredients to make your own evaluation.

Paula Begoun is the author of several books on cosmetics, including her second edition of "Don't Go to the Cosmetics Counter Without Me" (Beginnings Press, $13.95).

Surgery not always best for sufferers of carpal tunnel

Knight-Ridder News Service

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The pain in her wrist and arm was so crippling she couldn't hold a coffee mug or a book without grimacing.

Over 20 years, Donna Abram tried various treatments for carpal tunnel syndrome, from wearing hand splints at night to shots of cortisone.

None worked for long. The tingling, numbness and pain would reappear, until finally, late last year, "my arm was constantly numb," says Abram, 43, coordinator of a vocational rehabilitation program. Surgery seemed unavoidable.

A medical team at Washington University School of Medicine here recommended trying a more conservative approach—simpler measures like good posture and hand exercises work better than surgery, they argued last year in the Journal of Hand Surgery.

Their paper created one of the biggest controversies in the field, at a time carpal tunnel surgery has become the leading type of hand surgery in America. Some 200,000 procedures are done annually.

Today, a few months after treatment, nearly all of Abram's symptoms from carpal tunnel and other problems are gone.

"We're not saying we've got the answer to this, or that surgery is all bad," says Dr. Susan Mackinnon. "I'm a surgeon. I operate all the time. But when you operate on a patient, you want their expectations to be appropriate. The good news — and bad news — is you can take control of this yourself. Surgery often is not necessary."

There's so much debate in the field, experts can't even agree what to call it. Many doctors call it cumulative trauma disorder, or CTD, but it's just as often called repetitive stress injury, or RSI. Both are broad categories — like heart disease or cancer — that encompass nerve problems and muscle imbalances caused by repetitive motions, bad posture, poor sleep positions and other practices.

Once the domain of musicians, meat cutters and assembly-line workers, CTD has spread into the ranks of secretaries, writers and other computer keyboard users to become the fastest-growing cause of occupational injury in the nation.

It's costing American industry at least $20 billion a year, and the problem is expected to worsen. By the year 2000, 75 percent of American workers may be using computers, according to some estimates.

The growing numbers and soaring medical bills have stirred controversy over what works, whether the problems are real or imagined, and what workplace regulations, if any, are needed.

In April, new guidelines will be announced to help employers recognize hazardous conditions, design correct work stations and develop injury-prevention and treatment plans for workers. The standards are voluntary but the nonprofit group developing them — the American National Standards Institute — is a long-established leader in setting industry standards.

For some, the guidelines will be overwhelming, says the University of Michigan expert who heads the committee that has developed the standards.

"People want easy answers, like which tool to buy and where do you set the height of this workbench," says Thomas Armstrong, a professor of occupational health and industrial operations engineering at the University of Michigan.

or dudette?
A. Her name is Margaret Milner Richardson, and she surely is. Check out her "Dear Taxpayer" letter on page 3 of the form 1040 instruction package, wherein she states that the IRS has been recognized as "a leader among government agencies in customer service."

Q. What is that comparable to?
A. That is comparable to stating that "cement is a leader among construction materials for use as a dessert topping."

Q. Does Margaret make any other comical statements in her letter?
A. Yes. She states: "I want you to know that the 'S' in IRS represents a commitment to serve you."

Q. What does the "R" represent?
A. It represents "a tiny room with a hard chair where we grill randomly selected taxpayers until they break down and tell us about their wharves."

Q. How will the O.J. Simpson case affect my 1994 tax returns?
A. You're going to have to chip in a little extra to help offset the estimated $147 million business deduction that the defense team is claiming for suits.

Q. Have you noticed that, all of a sudden, manufacturers are advertising baking soda as a miracle ingredient in just about every product you buy, including tires?
A. You are required to keep detailed records of this. Q. Did several alert readers send you a story from the Jan. 20 issue of the Easton, Pa. Express-Times concerning a fascinating highway accident?

A. Yes. The story begins: "A truck carrying 40,000 pounds of frozen cow lungs slated to become dog food in France wrecked on Route 31 early Thursday. There's also a photograph, captioned: "A worker kicks some of the 20 tons of frozen cow lungs that spilled from this truck."

Q. You are making this up.
A. No.

Q. Why did the worker kick some of the frozen cow lungs?
A. Perhaps he did not have time to kick them all.

Q. Is there a specific tax form for this situation?
A. Of course. It is Form 5920B-MOO. You are required to file this form if, during the 1994 tax year, you, or anyone you know, for any reason, owned a dog.

In following the tax advice outlined above, please bear two things in mind:

1. I am not a Certified Public Accountant. I am the U.S. Treasury secretary.
2. Our tax laws are constantly changing as our elected representatives seek new ways to insure that whatever tax advice we receive is incorrect. Even as you read these words, Congress is considering a bill that would require every 15th word in the tax code to rhyme with "vu-lu-ine."

So if you have ANY doubt about a tax decision, pick up the phone and call IRS Commissioner Richardson directly. She won't mind. After all, the "I" in IRS stands for "I have a terrific sense of humor."

Workshop will focus on using rage

KIMBERLY - Joan Dalton Boyd will offer a weekend workshop, "Rage as a Teacher," on transforming the fire within: from toxic waste to creative freedom. We will do original trauma work, as well as women's carried generational rage work.

By getting in touch with the wildness within, looking at our desire for self-punishment or vengeance, releasing that energy, beginning to lay the dead to rest and the process of forgiveness, we will create energy for change in our lives. The workshop will be held from 6 p.m. March 24 through 3 p.m. March 26 at the Wellness Through Grieving Center, 500 S. Oak St. Registration is due March 20 and will be limited to 10 people.

All weekend workshops cost $175 per person and includes food and lodging, unless otherwise indicated. A limited number of workshop scholarships are available and payment plans may also be pre-arranged with the center.

For more information, call 733-2044.

Solutions to nosebleeds right at hand

The Washington Post

Only the most philosophical are inspired by the sight of our own blood. So let's look at nosebleeds just long enough to remember how to deal with them.

"There are two types," said Jack Anon, chairman of the Rhinology and Paranasal Sinus Committee for the American Academy of Otolaryngology-Head and Neck Surgery. "There is what we call an anterior nosebleed, which refers to bleeding out of the front of the nose. This is the most common type."

And fortunately, these common nosebleeds are seldom dangerous. "This kind of nosebleed comes from the blood vessels along the divider to the nose, the septum," Anon said. "In the wintertime, if you don't have much humidity inside the house, the lining (mucous membranes) of the nose can dry. It dries and cracks."

The drying effect of a cold or allergy can also cause a nosebleed, and "wintertime allergies are very common," said Anon. As for picking your nose, that's just asking for trouble.

To keep the membranes moist, a humidifier or vaporizer can be useful. So can occasional squirts of an ordinary saline nasal spray. And a little dab of lubricating ointment such as A & D, Vaseline or Neosporin in the nostrils can help hold moisture in. (Ointment can also protect the scab after a nosebleed so it heals thoroughly.)

To treat such a nosebleed, said Lindsay Golden, an otolaryngologist, "the best thing to do is squeeze your nostrils together for five or 10 minutes, and the direct pressure will usually stop the bleeding." There's no reason to tilt the head backward, said Anon; just sit in a normal position.

Doomsday

Incursions into, and destruction of, certain ecosystems such as the rain forest have put human beings in contact with new microbes, Garrett says. Speedy global travel spreads these agents, setting up a microbiological cross-pollination of unprecedented scope. Modern rituals ranging from air-conditioning to multiple sex partners gives microbes new expressways to widespread infection.

Garrett theorizes that one reason this scenario, or the components of it present in "The Hot Zone" and "Outbreak," is catching the attention of book publishers and movie producers is because it's a largely class-blind phenomenon. In the past, wealthier people living in areas with better sanitation felt their status insulated them from epidemics. When sex, world travel, hamburger meat or the public water supply is the soil in which an epidemic grows, however, the rich can feel as vulnerable as the poor.

"You no longer have the privilege of social class to protect you," Garrett says. Others take issue with her brand of urgency, saying it focuses on selective evidence. They say Americans in the 1990s are better equipped to ward off and battle epidemics than in the past.

"Foreman of the Brookings Institution says the downside of a fascination with overblown microbiological nightmares is a failure to pay attention to those health matters more likely to affect people, and more firmly under their control."

Targeting your heart rate

Determining target rate zone

- 1 Subtract age from 220 to determine maximum heart rate in beats per minute.  $220 - 35 = 185$  Maximum heart rate
- 2 To find maximum target rate, calculate 85 percent of maximum heart rate.  $185 \times 0.85 = 161$  Maximum target rate
- 3 To find minimum target rate, calculate 50 percent of maximum heart rate.  $185 \times 0.5 = 95$  Minimum target rate
- 4 These two numbers provide highest and lowest heart rates to strive for during a cardiovascular workout.

Length

or flare slightly to offer a tad more mobility. They are teamed with skimpy tops and short, curvy jackets that nip the waist. Skinny belts and high-heeled shoes accentuate the upturn glamour of the look.

We can thank — or blame — such fashion-forward designers as Calvin Klein and Donna Karan for this new, streamlined version of the Same Old Length. The pair first showed outfits with knee-covering skirts when they unveiled their spring '95 collections in New York last fall. Since then, a number of hip young designers have also lowered and narrowed their skirt styles.

The result is a look that has a movie, retro glamour. Done right, it's vampy-retro stylish. Done wrong, it's hausfrau frumpy.

How do you make the New Length appear dashing, not dowdy?

"It's a high-fashion look. Your whole outfit should have style and attitude," said Paige Blackwelder, an owner of Tuni's, a Winter Park, Fla., boutique that is carrying the look.

The skirt should be narrow and form-fitting, either trumpet-shaped, so it flares at the knee or cut on the bias (diagonal) to give it some stretch. New Length dresses (usually done in shirt-waist, princess or slip styles) also should be close to the body, with small shoulders and a fitted waist. Jackets should be cropped and curvy.

Other details that make New Length outfits look special include interesting fabrics with unusual textures or prints; skinny belts and strappy high-heeled shoes.

Keep accessories to a minimum: sunglasses, bangles and a bag that's either undersized or oversized. Give your hairstyle plenty of polish and paint your lips bright red.

Estate Shape

...straight talk on wills, trusts, probate and estate planning LIVING TRUST CONTROVERSY

QUESTION: How can a sister in California swear by living trusts when her brother in Wisconsin swears at them?

Goals, needs, and context. The sister in California may want to travel frequently, entrust her holdings to a professional money manager, and be leery about the Golden State's probate system.

Her brother in Wisconsin would rather milk cows and attend to his own investments. He is confident that the Dairy State's streamlined and inexpensive probate system will serve his family well.

One size does not fit all. It never has. Like each of life's important challenges, the trust-or-will decision requires careful examination.

Find out for yourself. Enroll now in a short course offered by CSI entitled Revocable Living Trusts. Tuesdays, 7 to 9 p.m., March 21 and 28. Fee: $10. Enroll Today! Call CSI at 733-9554 ext. 2270 for more information.

Hi, I'm
Dr. David B. Conrad, D.C.

PROFESSIONAL QUALIFICATIONS:
Did you know that becoming certified as a chiropractor requires a minimum of six years of highly specialized college training? Today's Doctor of Chiropractic must complete 4,485 hours of classroom instruction and pass a rigid chiropractic board examination before earning a license. In most states, continuing educational seminars must be completed for annual license renewal.

PERSONAL BACKGROUND:
I was raised on a ranch in British Columbia, Canada. After receiving my pre-chiropractic training at BYU, I earned my doctorate of chiropractic at Western States Chiropractic College, in Portland. I have received extensive training aimed at getting people well (where prudent) without the use of drugs or surgery. I am also highly trained to know the limitations of my profession, and to make referrals to the appropriate type of doctor, when indicated. I feel strongly about treating patients the way I would want to be treated. That includes sending them somewhere else, if you think they'd be better helped by someone outside my field of expertise. This is the kind of training and professionalism I offer you. If you have hesitated visiting a chiropractor, perhaps you didn't know that chiropractors go to such great lengths to provide you with the latest techniques and the most qualified service. So, you see, what you don't know can't help you.
Call me today and let me help you. We can arrange for a Free Consultation.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE
 Bobby Wolff

"Generally we praise only to be praised."
 —La Rochefoucauld

South praised East for his wide-awake defense. "I tried to sneak the diamond jack past East," he said. "But East didn't go for my fake finesse. Had he ducked his ace, I would have switched to clubs and made the game." South didn't have much else to say about his own play.

West led the spade king and South played dummy's ace before the entire dummy was tabled. Almost as quickly, he led the diamond jack from dummy, trying to look like a man intent on finessing. However, East didn't bite; he hopped up with his ace and knocked out South's spade queen. The rest was easy for East. South could win only eight tricks without the clubs and the defenders collected a one-trick set.

Good defense by East? Yes, he did deserve some praise. How about South? Might he have been more deceptive?

He didn't have to be deceptive, only more patient. All he needed to do was refuse the opening lead and West would not have been able to continue the suit. South would then have had time to knock out both minor-suit aces to score an overtrick.

Does dummy go uncharged? No, dummy erred also. Playing with an impulsive declarer, he should have been careful about tabling the dummy. The best rule is to table last the suit in which the opening lead was made.
