Militant Montanan

Confrontations with militias spread

The Associated Press

DARBY, Mont. — When an Idaho National Guard helicopter, gunship swooped over his ranch one day last month, Calvin Greenup figured it could mean only one thing — the government was attacking.

He got on the phone, and within a half-hour, 20 friends had arrived, carrying guns and ready to shoot down the chopper if it returned. It never did. Officials said later the AH-64 Apache was on a training flight and passed over Greenup's ranch by coincidence. But Greenup, a tax protester who vows not to be taken alive by authorities seeking his arrest, is glad he reacted the way he did.

"We were going to do something to defend ourselves," Greenup said this week. "We have to be prepared for whatever these people are going to bring on us."

What some call paranoia, Greenup calls patriotism. He's at the volatile fringe of a burgeoning militia movement that believes an armed citizenry is the only way to defend America from a government gone corrupt.

Militia groups have sprung up nationwide in the past year, boosted by the current anti-government fervor in politics. They train with guns, talk darkly of government conspiracies and prepare for the war they believe will be needed to keep Americans free from a tyrannical New World Order.

Despite their alarmist rhetoric, most militia groups stay within the law, advancing their ideas through the usual political process.

Baghdad may try captured Americans

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Iraq may soon put two Americans on trial for the "simple, innocent blunder" of crossing the border from Kuwait, Defense Secretary William Perry said Friday.

The trial could begin within the next few days, Perry said on the CBS-TV's "MacNeil-Lehrer NewsHour."

"The humane thing to do would be to rebuke them for it and send them back home," Perry said. "I hope the Iraqi government will have the good sense to do that."

Perry's remarks followed a renewed appeal from the White House for release of the two Americans and confirmation that Polish diplomats had visited the two prisoners in Baghdad.

"We understand there is going to be a trial very soon, possibly within the next few days," Perry said. "We understand they are being treated well."

"Earlier, U.S. officials said the Poles found the two Americans in good health but without legal representation."

"It remains our view that this situation is the result of an innocent mistake on the part of these two Americans," said White House spokesman Mike McCurry.

McCurry confirmed news reports that the two had been visited in Baghdad on Thursday afternoon by Polish diplomats. "We're glad to know that they're in good health," he said.

The Americans were arrested after they strayed across the Kuwait border into Iraq on March 13. They have been identified as David Lambert, 41, and Bill Barloon, 39, both employees of American military contractors in Kuwait.

The Polish embassy in Baghdad represents U.S. interests in Iraq.

House ratifies GOP's sweeping welfare reforms

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The keystone of the GOP's social agenda cleared the House on Friday as Republicans pushed through the most-ground changes in the nation's welfare programs since the New Deal.

"We are sweeping away a destructive system and we are putting in a system that can work," Rep. Clay Shaw, R-Fla., declared after the far-reaching welfare reform bill passed by a vote of 234-199.

But President Clinton criticized the bill, saying it was not "real" reform and was "weak on work and tough on children."

Nine Democrats supported the GOP plan, which dismantles 45 social programs and sends the responsibility for the poor and disadvantaged back to the states with few strings attached.

Five Republicans voted against it, including two Cuban-Americans who opposed a ban on aid to as many as 2.2 million legal immigrants, and a freshman who felt the bill would encourage abortions.

The five Republicans voting against the bill were Bunn, Lincoln Diaz-Balart of Florida, Constance Morella of Maryland, Ileana Ros-Lehtinen of Florida and Peter Torkildsen of Massachusetts.

The nine Democrats voting for the bill were Rep. Robert Andrews of New Jersey, Bud Cramer of Alabama, Ralph Hall of Texas, James Hayes of Louisiana, William Lipinski of Illinois, G.V. (Sonny) Montgomery of Mississippi, Charlie Rose of North Carolina, W.J. (Billy) Tauzin of Louisiana, and James Traficant of Ohio.

The legislation now goes to the Senate, where prospects are murky. Hearings are just getting under way and lawmakers in both parties have expressed reservation about cutting off assistance to teen-age mothers and other needy families.

The measure, which would save $66 billion over five years, makes fundamental changes in a web of social programs dating to the Great Depression.

It cancels the federal government's promise to provide school lunches, cash assistance, foster care support and child care to the country's neediest women and children; cuts families off welfare after five years; and requires able-bodied food stamp recipients to work.

There are no guarantees, however, that single mothers on welfare will be given training, education, child care or a job as they move from dependency to the workforce. Those details are left to the states.

"The road of the poor is going to be a tough road. It's going to be a treacherous road," Shaw acknowledged.

House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., pledged his faith in the Senate. "Our best hope now is that the Senate chooses to reject this tax-cut, bail-out bill the Republicans are calling welfare reform," he said. "Frankly, I have a hard time believing the Senate could seriously consider a bill that ravages children without requiring work."

In a raucous week-long debate, Democrats accused the GOP of pilfering school lunches, foster care and food stamps to finance tax cuts for the wealthy.

Lashing back, Republicans called Democrats the defenders of a corrupt and immoral welfare system that traps the poor, destroys families and discourages work.

Canal company seeks volunteer cleanup help

By William Brock Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Most folks have heard of the Adopt-a-Highway program — but the Adopt-a-Canal program is still pretty novel.

From now until April 8, Twin Falls Canal Co. officials will be trying to make it a household term. The company is seeking volunteers to clean up rubbish in and near small canals inside the city of Twin Falls.

Removing man-made trash will enable company workers to mow canal banks more efficiently, said Twin Falls Canal Co. Manager Vince Alberdi. The result will be a neater appearance and a safer canal system.

"It will help us, but it will help the community, too," Alberdi said.

"Hopefully this will create some awareness in the community, and people will think twice about throwing their garbage into the canals," he said.

The company has identified 25 canal, coulee and ditch segments that are looking pretty ratty. The longest are little more than a mile, while the shortest are about 400 yards.

Alberdi and other company officials are hoping school groups, churches, Scout troops, Future Farmers of America, and other organizations will lend a hand with the spring clean-up.

Written descriptions and maps depicting each area are available at the canal company office. Volunteers are responsible for the waterway and a 15-foot swath along each bank. The number of volunteers, and hours, needed for each section has already been estimated.

There is no cost to volunteers, and the canal company will supply garbage bags, then dispose of the bags when they're full.

Clean-up volunteers will be feted at a canal company barbecue.

A similar canal clean-up will be held in the fall, after water has been drained from, the system. Company officials are hoping the biennial event will evolve into a formal "Adopt-a-Canal" program.

Lab flies grow extra eyes

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Swiss researchers have learned how to manipulate a gene that makes eyes in the fruit fly and cause the insect to grow extra eyes on its wings, legs and even on the tip of its antennae.

In a study published Friday in the journal Science, scientists at the University of Basel said a fly gene they call eyesless may be a master gene that causes the formation of whole eyes.

By manipulating the eyesless gene so its instructions to the developing embryo of a fruit fly are expressed in different cells, the researchers were able to grow flies that had eye structures over many parts of the insect body.

Researchers Georg Halder, Patrick Callaerts, and Walter J. Gehring said the out-of-place eyes contained the entire eye structures, including cells that responded to light.

Magnified views of the outside of the extra eyes show they have the compound structure and bristles that are found on normal fruit fly eyes.

"The eye structures induced on the legs were on average smaller than the ones on antennae or wings, but nevertheless appeared to have a relatively normal organization," the authors report.

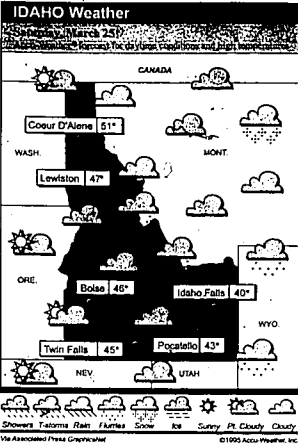

Gehring said misplaced antennae eyes looked "like little crab eyes" on stalks projecting from the fly's head.

Inside, the extra eyes included normal eye parts — the cornea, pigment cells and photoreceptors.

This is the cover of the journal carrying a report on gene manipulation creating fruit flies with eyes in abnormal places on their bodies.

Idaho weather summary

Snow continued to fall Friday afternoon after the passage of Thursday's cold front. Snow was observed from as south as Malta to Grangeville in the north. There was also some heavy snow in the higher elevations along the Wyoming border. High temperatures ranged from the mid 40s to the mid 30s. Winds were strong and gusty across much of the state, producing wind chill effects well below freezing. Precipitation reports from rain and snow were generally light across the northern sections of the state but amounts in north central Idaho ranged up to more than a quarter inch. The heaviest amount reported was Lowell's .42 inch; other reports included Grangeville .21, Moscow .03, Mullan .01 and Rexburg .02.

President's health excellent, docs find

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton has gained 6 pounds — up to 216 on a 6'2" frame — but otherwise his health statistics are pretty much the same as a year ago. "We are pleased to report the president continues to demonstrate excellent health and vigor," said his White House physician, Dr. E. Connie McNamee, after Clinton, 48, underwent his second annual physical as president on Friday.

Among the details: His weight was 216, up from 210 a year ago and close to the 215 pounds that aides said he weighed in October 1992. Clinton's blood pressure was 128 over 80, considered within the normal range. A year ago it was 132 over 74. His resting pulse rate was 55. Last year it was 57. His total cholesterol level was 203, compared to 204 a year ago.

Generally, total cholesterol below 200 is viewed as desirable and 200-239 considered borderline high. However, the total level is difficult to interpret without knowing the ratio of different components, which the White House did not supply. Among the tests Clinton underwent: hearing test, examination, exercise treadmill test, routine chest X-ray and consultations with assorted specialists.

Militias

Continued from A1 pushed the movement into dangerous new terrain. Confrontations are escalating statewide as officials clash with a loose network of anti-government activists who go by various names: militia, freemen, constitutionalists, patriots. Many refuse to pay taxes, register their cars or obtain driver's licenses. They don't recognize the jurisdiction of the courts, instead forming their own common-law judicial systems and accusing public officials of treason. Montana's traditional tolerance of rugged individualism appears to be wearing thin. Judges say they've been threatened, sheriffs won't serve arrest warrants for fear of bloodshed, and human-rights activists worry about links between militias and white supremacy groups. Some recent confrontations: Seven militia activists were arrested March 3 in the eastern Montana town of Roundup after allegedly wearing concealed weapons and intimidating officials at the county jail. Those arrested included John Trochmann, co-founder of the Militia of Montana and a featured speaker at the 1990 Aryan Nations Congress, a white supremacist group in Idaho. In eastern Montana, William Stanton was sentenced March 2 to 10 years in prison for his part in a group of freemen who set up their own court system and offered a $1-million bounty for the "arrest" of county officials. The central Montana town of Cascade was declared a freeman enclave by Mayor Tom Kloock, who then deposited $20 million in official-looking but worthless money orders in the local bank. The town council suspended him, and he is due in court March 28 on a charge of criminal syndicalism, or advocating violence or crime to advance political goals. Greenup considers them all patriots. "We're fighting for the same thing — justice back in the courts, freedom back in this nation," he said. A fourth-generation resident of western Montana's Bitterroot Valley, Greenup, 52, is holed up on his 250-acre ranch, defying authorities to serve a warrant issued after he failed to show in court to face tax-evasion charges. The state claims he owes $9,500 in income taxes and penalties, but Greenup claims the income tax applies only to corporations, not individuals. He says he's willing to die for his interpretation of the law. "I've told the sheriff what I'll do," Greenup said. "I would turn my back and he could put a bullet in my head. But I wouldn't be hauled to jail alive. I've told him personally, you've got the first shot. Don't wound me. Kill me." As Montana coordinator for an Indiana-based group called the North American Volunteer Militia, Greenup also vows to call on militia members nationwide if there's a standoff. The warning is repeated by the group's national director, Joe Holland. "How many of your agents will be sent home in body bags before you hear the pleas of the people?" Holland said in a letter to the Montana Revenue Department. "Proceed to your own peril!" All the bluster has unnerved public officials here. Darby town councilors and Ravalli County commissioners passed ordinances this month banning weapons from public buildings. Sheriff Jay Printz thinks Greenup is more talk than action, but he's in no hurry to serve the contempt-of-court warrant against him. "I'm not inclined to go up to his home," Printz said. "I don't want to have to kill the man for something this minor, and I don't want any of our people hurt." City Judge Marty Bethel said something has to be done, sooner or later. Militia members sent a 28-page document saying she would face trial in their common-law court if she didn't dismiss a traffic violation against one militia member. "Terrorism is what it is," she said. "I hope someone takes this seriously, before blood is shed. If you let these people walk up one side and down the other, all you've done is empower them."

Briefly

No new trial for Hollywood Madam
LOS ANGELES — There will be no new trial for Heidi Fleiss despite jury misconduct, and the Hollywood Madam faces at least three years in prison. "Without minimizing the seriousness of the misconduct here, I find that there is no substantial likelihood that the misconduct prejudiced the defendant," Superior Court Judge Judith Champagne said Friday in denying Fleiss' request for a new trial. The judge set sentencing for May 12. Fleiss could get up to eight years in prison but no less than three. Fleiss argued that her three December pandering convictions were tainted because jurors discussed penalties and traded votes.

The committee's nine Republicans and seven Democrats must vote to approve the nomination before the full Senate can vote. Wedding bells ahead for Larry King
WASHINGTON — Apparently undaunted by jokes his alimony payments would cover the cost of national health insurance, talk-show host Larry King is planning on getting married again. No wedding date has been set for King, 61, and actress Deanna Lund, whom he met recently in Los Angeles, said his lawyer, Mark Baronides. Lund, said to be in her mid-50s, was a star in the 1970s TV series "Land of the Giants."

Hearings on surgeon general in May
WASHINGTON — Senate confirmation hearings for Dr. Henry Foster Jr., President Clinton's choice for surgeon general, will begin in May, after senators return from their spring recess. The Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee plans to announce the date hearings will begin next week, said Mike Horak, press secretary for the committee's chairwoman, Sen. Nancy Landon Kassebaum, R-Kan. The Tennessee obstetrician-gynecologist has faced criticism from anti-abortion groups and conservative lawmakers since Clinton nominated him last month.

Credits could cost U.S. $2.2 billion
WASHINGTON — The Agriculture Department gave Russia and the rest of the former Soviet Union $5 billion in commercial export credit guarantees while doubling their ability to repay, according to a congressional auditor. As a result, taxpayers are at risk for up to $2.2 billion in defaults on government-backed loans, the General Accounting Office said, blaming the situation on the department's prevailing desire to sell more U.S. farm goods. Commuter airline rules toughen by end of 1996

WASHINGTON (AP) — Smaller planes were left some minor exceptions. For example, planes with under 20 seats would not have to have a flight attendant or a locking cockpit door.

Many smaller carriers, including those under contract to Delta, American and Northwest airlines, already are meeting the new standards, said David R. Hinson, the federal aviation administrator.

The new standards would cover 1,100 airplanes operated by 65 carriers. The rules are expected to cost $275 million over 10 years, but could prevent more than 90 accidents, Pena said.

The policy-oriented National Air Transportation Association complained about the cost and said the move was unnecessary because the smaller carriers are already very safe.

The Air Line Pilots Association and the Regional Airline Association both issued statements welcoming the change, however.

Geraldine Frankoski of the Aviation Consumer Action Project complained that it had taken too long to get the new rules in place and that action was only prompted by the number of deadly accidents in recent years.

"In time, enough passengers will be killed on the smaller planes (under 10 seats) that those rules will be updated, too," she said.

David Stempeler of the International Airline Passengers Association also said he wished the department had gone farther and included planes under 10 seats. Hinson said it would be impractical to extend the new rule to those smaller planes.

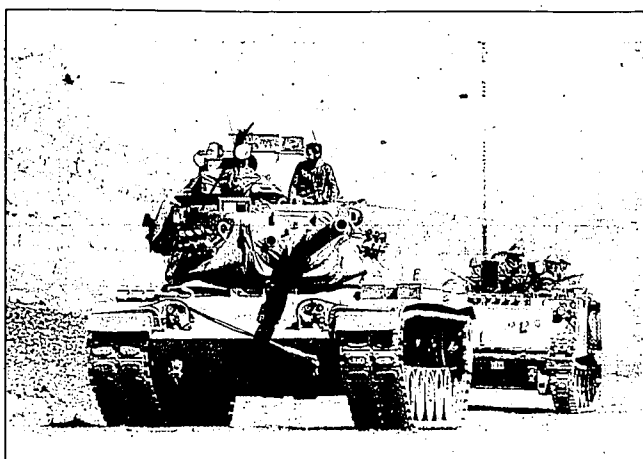

The rules are open for 90 days of public comment. Pena said he expected the final rules to be published in December, and that all airlines should be meeting the standards by the end of 1996.

The National Transportation Safety Board recommended tightening the rules for smaller planes last Nov. 15. That followed a nine-month investigation into commuter airline safety, prompted by deadly crashes in Hibbing, Minn., and Columbus, Ohio.

Regional airlines feeding passengers to major carriers — and often operating under the colors of those carriers — have proliferated in recent years.

From 253 million miles flown in 1983, commuter lines increased to 408 million miles in 1992. During that period, these carriers had 53 fatal accidents in which 337 people died.

In 1993, commuter airlines had 0.509 accidents per 100,000 flights, compared to 0.297 for major airlines.

A Turkish tank returns from an operation in the northern Iraqi town of Batufa Friday. Turkish troops destroyed three major Kurdish rebel camps, causing hundreds of Kurdish civilians to flee the assault.

Christopher keeps close watch on Turk assault of Kurd rebels

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration is keeping a close watch on Turkey's incursion into Iraq in pursuit of Kurdish rebels and reminding the Turks of their pledge to exit quickly.

So far, though, the administration has not lined up with France and Germany in cautioning Turkey against establishing a buffer zone on the Iraqi side of the border.

Nor was Christine Shelly, the State Department spokeswoman, willing to put a time limit on how long a Turkish thrust into Iraq would be acceptable to the administration.

Again labeling the rebels as terrorists, Ms. Shelly said Friday that a proposal for a buffer zone would be given "fair consideration."

Earlier, Secretary of State Warren Christopher said Turkey would be watched "very closely" on its commitment to a limited operation in Iraq.

Despite U.S. distaste for Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, the Clinton and Bush administrations, in accord with Saudi Arabia and other Arab countries, opposed moves that might split off parts of the country.

For the time being, Christopher withheld judgment on whether Turkey had violated international law by crossing the border in force and whether the operation impinges on relief efforts in the Kurdish area.

Christopher returned Thursday night from Geneva, Switzerland, where his attention over two days was focused on talks with Russian Foreign Minister Andrei V. Kozyrev on Russia's cooperation with Iran in developing a nuclear reactor complex and Russia's suppression of secessionists in Chechnya.

Since then, senior Turkish officials have said the 35,000 troops that now occupy the area would not be withdrawn until a buffer zone or some other arrangement was set up to ensure that rebels did not move in again.

French Foreign Minister Alain Juppe has declared the incursion a violation of international law while U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali has warned that the Turkish thrust into northern Iraq could threaten U.N. relief efforts in the area. He urged restraint Thursday.

Christopher said he had spoken by telephone with German Foreign Minister Klaus Kinkel, who was in Ankara on Thursday with Juppe for meetings with the Turkish prime minister, Tansu Ciller. Juppe and Kinkel asked for a withdrawal as soon as possible.

Asked about these developments Friday, Christopher said Turkish officials "have indicated to us that this operation would be limited in scope and duration, that they would do everything they could to respect the human rights in that area."

FBI seeks leads in Whitewater probe

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Whitewater and me," said homeowner Robert Welbom.

The FBI told him that investigators expect to be in the area five or six months "until they investigate everything" having to do with the finances of the 44-lot Whitewater tract, he said.

According to Welbom, who said he has no ties to the president, the FBI took copies of the sales contract and canceled checks. It was the third time the FBI has visited him in the Whitewater probe.

FBI agents in the Whitewater investigation made a door-to-door sweep this week at the Clintons' former real estate development, telling one homeowner they will work through the summer tracing the money flow for each parcel of property.

At Whitewater's Lot 7, which real estate agents have said was originally intended for the Clintons, the FBI "was trying to see if there was any connection with the president and

The Clintons were Whitewater partners with James and Susan McDougal. McDougal owned Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan until 1986, when he was ousted by federal regulators.

Prosecutor Kenneth Starr is investigating whether any money from the S&L, which failed in 1989, was improperly diverted to Clinton interests, including the Whitewater development on the White River just south of the town of Flippin in northern Arkansas.

Senator goes from politician to sex symbol

WASHINGTON — Can it be: Sen. Alfonso D'Amato — lawmaker, power broker, politician — and now, sex symbol? Hair cascading over broad shoulders, his shirt pulled down to display powerful pectorals and massive arms, the lawmaker adorns the cover of "Forever Alfonso," a romance novel for the first 100 days.

Inspired by a news conference last month when D'Amato called together reporters and news cameras to announce he'd fallen in love with socialist and TV gossip columnist Claudia Cohen, the Capitol Hill newspaper Roll Call printed a full-page spoof this week poking fun at the New York Republican.

D'Amato telephoned Thomas on Friday to get a copy of the artwork by R.J. Matson. "I always love a book with a happy ending," said D'Amato.

Witness: Gunman didn't aim at anyone

WASHINGTON — A Colorado man accused of trying to kill President Clinton wasn't aiming at anyone when he turned a semiautomatic rifle on the White House and opened fire in October, a defense witness said Friday.

Francisco Martin Duran never brought the weapon up to his eye, said Jonathan Bloom, a Richmond, Va., man who was sightseeing in front of the White House that day.

"He was shooting haphazardly," Bloom said. "He was spraying the White House. ... He was moving the gun back and forth."

In fighting an attempted assassination charge, the defense is arguing that Duran, 26, of Colorado Springs, fired only at the White House because he was angry at the government. He never intended to hurt anyone, including Clinton, they said.

Civil rights official backs affirmative action

WASHINGTON — Amid a White House review of affirmative action programs, the administration's top civil rights official Friday passionately defended the programs.

"This administration is committed to the goal of expanding opportunity for all Americans in education, employment and the economy generally. There will be no retreat from that commitment," Deval Patrick, assistant attorney general for civil rights, told a House subcommittee hearing.

Justice Department reviews dispute

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department is informally reviewing a decision by major airlines to limit travel agent commissions, the department's top antitrust lawyer said Friday.

"The question is whether airlines did this collusively or whether they did it independently," Anne K. Bingaman, assistant attorney general for antitrust, said to Rep. Michael Forbes, R-N.Y., during a House Appropriations subcommittee hearing on her department's budget.

Crash victim's cornea allows mother to see

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — With the transplanted cornea she received from her 15-year-old son, Sally Colin gazed upon her surviving children Friday for the first time in a decade.

"It was unbelievable," she said after doctors removed the bandages from her right eye. "My children, gosh they've grown. They're so big, you know."

Mrs. Colin received a cornea from her son Christopher, who died Monday after being hit by a car. The teen-ager's heart, liver, kidneys and lungs went to five other people around the country.

"My son didn't really die," the 51-year-old Mrs. Colin said. "He just got to travel a lot in a lot of different people. He got to be reborn."

Mrs. Colin, who has two other children, 13-year-old Nic and 9-year-old Astarte, had been legally blind since 1982 because of a degenerative cornea disease.

Dr. Robert Knox, who performed the operation Thursday at Sparks Regional Medical Center, said it will be six months before Mrs. Colin can receive a second cornea transplant. Her son's other cornea went to a 32-year-old man.

Line-item veto: Politically popular, but is it legal?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The line-item veto, on track for congressional passage and President Clinton's signature, appears a sure bet for one more challenge — in court.

"Breathaking in its questionable constitutionality" is how one skeptic described the proposed historic step.

The Senate passed one version of a line-item veto Thursday, following by about two months a similar House vote to surrender enormous power from the Congress to the president.

A line-item veto would give a president the power to selectively eliminate individual items in massive spending bills. A House-Senate conference must resolve differences in the two versions before the measure can be sent to an eager Clinton.

"The sooner such a bill reaches my desk, the sooner I can take further steps to cut the deficit," the president said.

Not so fast, say some experts. "The line-item veto is clearly unconstitutional," Alan B. Morrison of the Public Citizen Litigation Group said.

"We've been down this road before," Morrison said. "There's as big a constitutional flaw with the line-item veto."

Thomas Mann, director of governmental studies at the Brookings Institution, agrees. "There may be some legal precedents that will convince the courts to accept it, but that's highly questionable."

"That's the fundamental flaw," Morrison said. "The president is vetoing a 'bill' Congress never acted on."

To address such concerns, Sen. Spencer Abraham, R-Mich., wrote into his chamber's version a requirement that both houses vote a second time — on the entire package of legislative pieces. Only then would the legislation be sent to a president.

"This is a procedural nicety that doesn't deal with the political reality — Congress still would not have voted on each item, each bill," Mann said.

"The measure is breathaking in its questionable constitutionality, the extraordinary transfer of the power of the purse from the legislative to executive branch and the awkwardness of implementing it," he added.

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., voted against the measure and cited the same reason for his opposition. "This may all sound like process and a technicality, but it is the essence of what we do around here," he said.

Morrison said the House version has even greater constitutional problems because it grants a president even greater expenditure-cutting and legislation-respawning powers.

But Johnny Killian, a senior specialist in constitutional law with the Congressional Research Service, believes the line-item veto proposal that emerges from conference will be ruled constitutional, or at least escape court invalidation.

"It may be that the courts determine it's a political question not to be resolved by the courts," he said Friday, referring to an 1890s Supreme Court decision as a possible precedent for such action.

If not, he said, the courts may find it within Congress' rule-making power as long as it is not barred by some specific constitutional provision. "The term 'bill' is not defined in the Constitution," he said.

Kenneth Janda, a Northwestern University political science professor, also believes the fate of the line-item veto will be decided in court. He questioned Congress' "curious surrender of institutional power," and likened it to proposals for term limits and a balanced budget amendment.

"This Congress appears to have no problem with giving up a lot of authority and independence, and with allowing a massive increase in presidential power. Concerns about the imperial presidency no longer exist," he said.

First lady takes issues worldwide

WASHINGTON (AP) — Halfway around the globe from the Indian subcontinent, poor people in the Arkansas delta can borrow money through a program inspired by a bank for impoverished women in Bangladesh.

Hillary Rodham Clinton helped create the Arkansas program and now she's about to visit the Bangladeshi one.

Assuming an increasingly vocal role as an advocate for women, Mrs. Clinton is going global with some of the same issues she has long championed at home.

Friday, she embarked on one of the most extensive foreign trips ever undertaken by a first lady traveling without her husband. Her 12-day visit to India, Pakistan, Sri Lanka, Nepal and Bangladesh will take her to some of the world's most remote and exotic settings to discuss some of the most basic of human needs.

From Mother Teresa's orphanage in Old Delhi to a women's craft show in Katmandu, Mrs. Clinton's agenda will be health care, education and pushing back the tide of poverty, all with special emphasis on the needs of women.

Along the way, Mrs. Clinton and her 15-year-old daughter Chelsea (taking an expanded spring break) will catch magnificent sights such as India's storied Taj Mahal and the wildlife preserves of Nepal.

In announcing the trip, President Clinton called his wife "the best imaginable emissary to deliver a message to South Asia that this administration's concern for those countries is deeper than traditional geopolitics."

Dr. Bessie Dalany, 103, left, and her sister Sadie Dalany, 105, welcome a visit from Hillary Rodham Clinton Thursday at their Mt. Vernon, N.Y., home. Clinton said she had always wanted to meet the best-selling authors of 'Having Our Say: The Dalany Sisters' First 100 Years,' and invited them to visit the White House.

"Demonstrating the administration's desire to strengthen ties to the populous and impoverished subcontinent, planning for the trip went forward even after an attack in Karachi, Pakistan, earlier this month left two Americans dead and another wounded.

Mrs. Clinton is emerging as a more visible women's advocate after lowering her profile when the administration's health-care reform effort foundered.

She will be bringing much the same message to Asia that she delivered earlier this month at a poverty summit in Copenhagen and at the United Nations, where she warned that if women don't thrive, neither will the world.

Her trip equates with neither Jacqueline Kennedy's touristy "good will" tour of India and Pakistan nor Rosalynn Carter's diplomatic march across Latin America in which she discussed everything from nuclear weapons to Fidel Castro.

As she charts a course in the middle, don't expect Mrs. Clinton to pose for many photos atop elephants, and don't expect her to lecture India and Pakistan on their refusal to sign the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty.

"Before I go telling anyone about anything, I'd like to learn a bit more," she said in setting modest expectations for her trip.

Of course, she should her hosts choose to raise the treaty or any other thorny matter, the first lady will be ready to advocate administration policy.

At Mrs. Clinton's first stop, Pakistani officials are hopeful the first lady will gain a greater understanding of the country's challenges and its progress, helping to ease strained relations between the two nations.

But Abida Hussein, a leader of the main opposition group to Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto, cautions that Mrs. Clinton shouldn't "give Mrs. Bhutto undue credit and ignore her incompetence because she's a woman."

The trip is sure to test Mrs. Clinton's diplomatic skills as she champions women in a male-dominated society where "dowry deaths" and other gender-based violence is a serious problem and women's opportunities are severely limited.

The Hillary police are going to be keeping a close eye on everything she says, but ... Hillary Clinton is quite capable of dealing with that fine line between being a first lady and being an advocate for women," predicted Dianne Sherman, a long-time women's activist.

Mrs. Clinton's schedule is crafted to highlight programs that work, such as schools for girls, a self-employed women's association in Ahmedabad, India, and the Gramen Bank in Bangladesh, the inspiration for the Arkansas lending program.

Report: Lowry probably didn't harass aide

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Gov. Mike Lowry probably touched a former aide in a way that she found offensive, but a jury probably wouldn't convict him of sexual harassment, an investigator says.

Susanne Albright, Lowry's former deputy press secretary, says the governor once greeted her at his mansion in nothing more than a towel and later joked that she was lucky he hadn't dropped it.

Albright also says Lowry groped her, made lewd remarks about women wearing swimsuits in cold weather, invited her into his hotel room and said he wanted to move in with her.

But in a report released Thursday, attorney Mary Alice Theiler said she found no clear evidence of sexual harassment. Theiler called Albright a "credible person," but added that "with the facts as I know them, I do not believe a jury would find in her favor."

Sheiler's aides chose Theiler, who has represented a number of women in sexual harassment cases, to investigate Albright's claims.

Gingrich: Press lies about school lunch program

NEW YORK (AP) — Newt Gingrich accused the press Friday of engaging in "despicable demagoguery" and depicting Republicans as taking food out of the mouths of schoolchildren.

The Washington press corps, lobbyists and liberals have been "shamelessly lying and exploiting children" to save bureaucrats' jobs, the House speaker told more than 1,000 New York City government, business and civic leaders.

"It is shameful when the major newspapers of this country repeat routinely the lies of liberals who are saving the bureaucrats by using the children," he said.

lies about school lunch program

The GOP leader said Congress is increasing the school lunch program by 4.5 percent and increasing aid to women and children above Clinton administration projections.

Ten protesters were arrested and charged with disorderly conduct at the hotel where Gingrich spoke. Six were also accused of resisting arrest when they tried to chain themselves up inside the hotel, police said.

Hundreds of AIDS activists and social welfare advocates chanted and carried signs outside denouncing Gingrich for budget cuts they said threatened the nation's health.

Gingrich warned up the audience by calling New York City "the crown jewel of America" and saying he had arranged with Mayor Rudolph Giuliani to appoint a liaison to Washington to enable the city to bypass federal red tape.

Casey explores presidential bid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Pennsylvania Gov. Robert Casey, an abortion opponent, will explore the prospects of a 1996 presidential bid.

He would become the first Democrat to challenge President Clinton's re-election.

Casey filed notice Friday with the Federal Election Commission that he is forming an official exploratory committee, which allows him to raise money and seek support for a campaign.

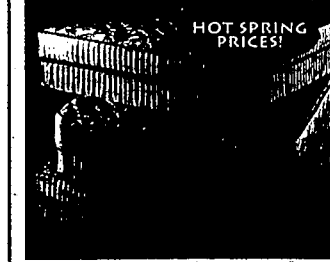

"He is using this exploratory committee for the purpose that it is intended. He has made no decision at this point," said his spokeswoman, Karen Watsh. In a statement released by his Scranton, Pa., office, Casey said he would make his decision sometime in April or May.

If he runs, he would give Democrats who don't like Clinton the choice of a protest candidate that could weaken or at the least embarrass the president.

Meanwhile, Republican Lynn Martin announced Friday that she would not seek the party's nomination for president in 1996.

Paving a path — together

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Let's share. It's a familiar concept in most churches, but pastors Dale Metzger and Fred Barton have given the idea a whole new twist. One day, Barton, who pastors the three-year-old, 30-member (interdenominational) Overcomer's Christian Fellowship, was talking with his friend Metzger, who pastors the six-month-old, 50-member (United Brethren) Rock Creek Community Church. "My treasurer is busy and had to give up the job," Barton told Metzger. "That's when the light bulb popped. "My music was weak because I had no leadership in that area," Metzger explained, "and, when God handed out the musical ability, I was out getting pizza."

Metzger and Barton decided to cut a deal. Barton, who plays guitar and sings, would lead the music at Metzger's church. Metzger's 84-year-old secretary, Marj Stevens, who once worked for the federal government and now lives at Bridgeview, would do the books for Barton.

It could work, the two reasoned. Metzger's congregation is meeting from 10 to 11 a.m. Sundays at Day's Colonial Funeral Home on Kimberly Road. Barton's congregation is meeting from 1 to 3 p.m. Sundays at St. Edward's Catholic Church on Seventh Avenue East. The logistics would fit just fine.

So far so good. For the past three months, Barton has been leading Metzger's members in hymns and choruses they love, like "Power in the Blood" and "What a Mighty God We Serve." And Metzger has been making sure that Barton's books are balanced.

"Cooperation across denominations is a concept that many pastors don't consider," Metzger said.

"And there are some pastors and church boards that feel such loyalty to their own denomination that the idea would be absurd to them," Barton added.

But both pastors say they see a call for unity gaining momentum in the Magic Valley, with weekly ministers' meetings and cross-denominational Fifth Sunday Services becoming the norm.

"A cooperative effort pays off in growth," Metzger said. "I think it will have to be this way in order for everyone to survive."

With a few notable exceptions, Barton said, most of the churches in the Magic Valley are small. The idea is that this breeds a feeling of loneliness, with small groups of people

BUDDY CHARLES MANGINE/The Times-News

meeting separately and having little contact with other churches.

"In a small church, a pastor faces a handful of people every week, and that's his life," Barton said.

When Barton leads the singing at Metzger's church on Sunday morning, it kicks him off to lead a better service at his own church in the afternoon, he contends.

The two see lots of possibilities for expanding their idea.

"Vacation Bible School is a big one, as well as after-school latchkey programs and Thanksgiving dinners and Valentine's Day banquets," Metzger said.

Added Barton, "As we cooperate more together, we can find out who and where and what the resources are."

For example, Barton might call Metzger if he knows Rock Creek has a good soprano who could perform at one of Overcomer's programs. And Metzger might ask Barton if he knows anyone who could teach a special series of classes at Rock Creek.

"The possibilities are limitless," Barton said. He's even coined a phrase for the cooperative practices.

"I say we are gathered around the gospel nucleus," he said, meaning the churches that are cooperating with each other share certain basic beliefs. "We all believe in Jesus being the son of God and in the virgin birth and one way to be saved and Jesus coming again — but we don't get into deep discussions on the minor points."

On issues like the format for baptism and communion, Barton said, Christians can "agree to disagree agreeably."

It's working for Barton and Metzger. Church members in both congregations are saying they think sharing is a great idea.

Part of the movement toward unity is a letting down of the competitive spirit, of the feeling that "somebody's going to steal my sheep."

"Fred will preach for me when I'm gone, and I've served communion at his church," Metzger explained.

But Barton and Metzger know their system will not work for everyone.

Or, as Barton put it, "There will continue to be churches and denominations and people who will not cooperate at all, but I believe they will find themselves in the minority and, sooner or later, will be a dying breed."

He added, "They are already losing numbers."

Life is like a lab where we learn from errors

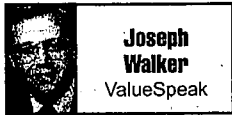

It wasn't that Michael was unwilling to do it. He just needed to get something off his chest, and his manner suggested he was anxious to do so. But he was having a hard time finding the right words.

"Uncle Joe," he said, his tone uncharacteristically hesitant, his eyes focused on a stone he was nudging with the toe of his Nike. "Have you ever made a mistake?"

"Have I ever made a mistake? Has Dick Tracy ever worn a yellow raincoat? Has Al Gore ever hugged a tree? Has Rush Limbaugh ever sipped a Snapple?"

"Sure," I responded, somewhat flippantly. "Hasn't everyone?"

Michael wasn't satisfied. "I don't mean like a stupid answer in a math quiz or something like that," he said. "I mean like a big mistake. Something that was just plain wrong. You know — something that could really hurt somebody."

Joseph Walker
ValueSpeak

This was getting serious. Michael was a good boy — tall, handsome, confident. He was popular at school, a member of the basketball and soccer teams, a good student and a faithful, active member of his church. What on earth could he have done that would elicit such distress?

"What happened, Michael," I asked. "What have you done?"

The words finally started to flow — slowly at first, then gushing like a surging stream bursting through an earthen dam.

It started out innocently enough, with Michael volunteering to pick up a video for his little brother and my son, Joe, to watch while Joe was visiting with Michael's family the previous weekend.

But a sleazy video caught Michael's adolescent attention at the video store, and before you could say, "the devil made me do it," Joe and Michael were staying up into the wee hours of the morning immersed in a steamy tale of lewdness and lust.

"The next day, I felt terrible," Michael said. "I knew I shouldn't have done it. But the worst part was when I overheard Joe and Kim talking about the movie. Joe was telling Kim how gross it was and how he couldn't figure out what was so cool about some of the stuff we saw in the show. Then he told Kim, 'You know, I used to really look up to Michael.'"

Michael paused, fighting back the tears that were forming in the corners of his eyes. "I don't think anything has ever bothered me more than hearing Joe say how he 'used to' look up to me," Michael said. "But I promise — no one will ever say anything like that about me again."

It was a hard lesson, filled with regret. But it was a lesson well learned. And now, four years later, Michael still seems to be keeping that promise. He has become an outstanding young man with a great attitude and a bright future. Joe looks up to him, perhaps more now than ever. And Michael is worthy of that respect — occasional mistakes notwithstanding.

Sometimes we think of life as a school, where every choice we face is a pop quiz that we either pass or fail when measured against an unforgiving grading curve.

What we tend to forget is that life is more like a laboratory, where we can learn as much from our failures as we do from our successes. Sometimes more.

It's not so important that we make mistakes; what is important is that we learn from our mistakes — how to face them, how to deal with them and how to get past them and move on with our lives once the lessons have been learned.

Should we be accountable for the mistakes we make? Absolutely. Facing the consequences of our decisions is essential if we're really going to learn and grow in this laboratory of life. But we can't cling to our mistakes or to the notion that we are somehow less valuable for having made them. To do so would only serve to inhibit our willingness to try.

And that would be the biggest mistake of all.

Post-abortion group wants women to feel forgiven

By Julie M. McKinnon
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Years after Kim Uranga had an abortion — and regret consumed her, making her abusive to herself and sometimes others around her — a vibrant picture formed in her mind.

With a few notable exceptions, Barton said, most of the churches in the Magic Valley are small. The idea is that this breeds a feeling of loneliness, with small groups of people

Mary explained to Jesus how a mother feels, and Jesus understood. It was then that Uranga knew she had been forgiven for having an abortion.

"He was with me all along. He cried right along with me on the table," said Uranga, who had the abortion 12 years ago. "I just needed a woman to somehow explain it to a man."

Now Uranga, director of the Woodriver Pregnancy Center and Hotline in Hailey, wants to

Bible study

Anyone interested in the Post Abortion Counseling & Education Bible study should call Kim Uranga at 788-2429 or 788-5198.

Information about post-abortion syndrome can be obtained by calling Open Arms at (814) 449-1672; Post Abortion Ministries at (901) 773-4630; Project Rachel at (414) 789-3391 or Women Exploited By Abortion at (214) 366-3600.

show other women with post-abortion syndrome that God forgives them and they shouldn't avoid him.

Uranga and Judy, who also has had an abortion but does not want to be identified, are planning to lead a Post Abortion Counseling & Education Bible study. The first 12-week group starts Thursday. After the first session, no one new will be admitted.

"I've been through it. I can give hope," Judy said. "I want to help women come to grips with forgiveness. There's hope out there for the women who have gone through it. I can validate their feelings."

Recognized symptoms of post-abortion syndrome include anxiety, depression, nightmares, flashbacks, self-destructive behaviors such as alcohol abuse, isolation, anger, regret, eating disorders and relationship dysfunctions.

Woodriver Pregnancy Center and Hotline is trying to develop a resource library with religious and secular information about post-abortion syndrome. A men's Bible study may also be formed.

Since Judy and her husband were ex-communicated from their Protestant church after she had an abortion, Judy said she also wants to be available to talk with church leaders.

Although Uranga said she started suffering from the syndrome right after having an abortion, some women with the syndrome don't feel regret for six to 10 years after, Judy said she suppressed her feelings for many years but — also with God's help — was slowly able to forgive herself.

Both women said they thought of committing suicide.

Uranga's suicidal thoughts occurred in the first two years after her abortion, while those thoughts didn't hit Judy until about a decade after hers.

Uranga said some of her symptoms of post-abortion syndrome were violent. On anniversary dates of the abortion, she would scratch her face. She would spend Mother's Days crying. Once, Uranga broke her finger during a rage when she pounded the floor. Eventually, she was prescribed anti-depressant medication.

She received counseling with her next pregnancy, and she had a memorial service with her Roman Catholic priest for the baby she aborted.

A plaque inscribed with the name that Uranga gave the baby she aborted and the date of the abortion are on the National Memorial for the Unborn in Chattanooga, Tenn. Uranga also has a framed copy of the plaque.

Both Uranga and Judy now have children, and they have talked with them about their abortions.

"One of the things that probably hit me was when they said 'Did you want me?'" Judy said.

Buddhism values lie not far from mainstream America

TWIN FALLS — Khamhakk Thanadabouth's neat frame house on one of the president streets contains a VCR, a home entertainment center and a shrine.

Every night, he comes home from his foreman's job at Rangen's, kisses his wife, spends time with his son and watches a little TV. And then he prays.

He, like most of the other 300 million Buddhists worldwide, is looking for the Four Noble Truths and the Eightfold Path.

The first truth is that existence is suffering. The second is that suffering is desire. Third, suffering can be overcome, and fourth, the means to doing so is the Eightfold Path — right views, resolve, speech, action, livelihood, effort, mindfulness and concentration.

If you think those sound like white-bread, Main Street American values, you're not far wrong.

It's ancient history

The story of Buddhism begins some 2,500 years ago with the birth of Siddhartha Gautama.

A sage predicted that the infant would become either a great king like his father or a savior of humanity.

To assure the former, his father, who ruled a domain in what is now Nepal, showered him with riches and shielded him from the world's pain.

At 29, however, the prince asked to see what lay beyond the palace walls, and his father, after attempting to make sure his son would not encounter unsettling reality, granted the wish — for a day.

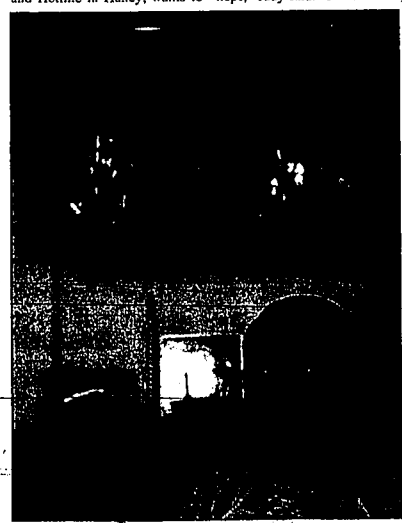

Siddhartha's father's efforts failed. His son was appalled to see sickness, the infirmity of old age and death.

He was also moved by the serenity of a beggar/monk and decided to renounce his wealth, leave his wife and son and seek the answers to human misery as a homeless holy man.

Siddhartha spent six years studying with religious teachers and engaging in radical asceticism that left him unfulfilled and in despair.

He finally achieved peace as he meditated under a fig tree, discovering the wisdom of the "Middle Path" between the extremes of self-indulgence and self-mortification and becoming Buddha, the Enlightened One.

The Rev. Ed Wolfe

About Rev. Wolfe

Pastor Ed Wolfe retired in 1992 following a 50-year ministry as a Southern Baptist pastor.

Wolfe received a bachelor of arts degree from Oklahoma Baptist University in Shawnee, Okla., a master of divinity degree from Luther Rice Seminary in Atlanta, Ga., and an honorary doctorate from the Gulf Shores Baptist Seminary in Fort Meyers, Fla. He has served as a pastor in Oklahoma, Missouri and Alaska and as director of missions in Anchorage, Alaska. He and his wife, Helen, have three daughters. They moved to Hagerman in 1993 to help start the Valley Baptist Church.

Leave behind a life of service

We ought to leave something behind when our life here is finished, something that will continue to bless those who follow. This means that the life lived has to be unselfish and giving. This is personified by our Lord during his lifetime on earth. It is at the heart of his teaching which we should obey if we would be pleasing to him. The greatest disciples of Christ are always those who live to serve others.

Pastor Anthony Bland of Longmont, Colo., told this story:

"On top of Red Mountain overlooking Birmingham, Ala., is a gigantic symbol of the wealth and riches found in the great Jones Valley that stretches below. It is a statue of Vulcan, the god of fire. All the basic ingredients needed to produce steel are found in this valley—dolomite, coal and iron.

During the 19th century, the great industrial complex and the wealth it brought were developed there. The economy built around the steel industry is symbolized by the statue of Vulcan.

"Down from Red Mountain, in the heart of Birmingham, is a park in front of a church. In that park is another statue—the figure of a little man on his knees with his hands raised to heaven. He had been the pastor of a small Presbyterian Church. Brother Bryan was a humble preacher who was often seen kneeling hand-in-hand on a street corner praying with someone. He pastored in Birmingham for more than a quarter century. He was a servant to all.

When he died, businesses closed, flags were hung at half-staff and the whole city wept in sorrow at his departure. They built a statue to memorialize this servant.

"When the statue of Vulcan has tumbled to dust and Red Mountain is worn flat, the witness and work of Pastor Bryan will remain: You, too, can leave behind an eternal moment—not a statue or mausoleum but a life of service.

"Happy are the dead who... die in the service of the Lord! They will enjoy rest from their hard work because the results of their service will go with them." (Revelations 14:13, Good News Bible).

Perhaps the greatest epitaph one could have on his tombstone is the words "He served others." Such a life of service brings behind other words, words like sacrifice, selflessness and giving.

Every life ought to be lived so that its fruits will outlast time.

Missionaries

Okeberry

Davidson

Two young men from the Magic Valley area have been called to serve or returned from serving missions for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Elder Peter Okeberry, son of Charles and Meredith Okeberry of Buhl, will serve for two years in the New Jersey Morristown Mission. He will speak in sacrament meeting at 12:15 p.m. Sunday at the LDS Church on Main Street in Buhl. Family and friends are invited.

Elder C. Dee Davidson, son of Brad and Clara Davidson of Twin Falls, served for two years in the Pennsylvania Harrisburg Mission. He will report on his mission at 9 a.m. Sunday at the Twin Falls 9th Ward chapel on Elizabeth Boulevard. He plans to enroll at the College of Southern Idaho.

The Times-News welcomes news of church missionaries. Send information to Ellen Thomason, The Times-News, P.O. Box 548, Twin Falls, ID 83303. Deadline is noon Thursday for publication on the Saturday religion page.

Militant gay group goads bishop

By Maureen Johnson
The Associated Press

LONDON — In halting tones, the Church of England's third-ranking bishop says his sexuality is "ambiguous." Another bishop announces he is gay.

Such statements may be cracking the Anglican Communion's official disapproval of homosexuality.

"We never thought we would succeed so quickly," says Peter Tatchell, leader of OutRage!, a militant gay group dedicated to "outing" prominent people as homosexuals. "We are effectively determining the policy of the Church of England toward homosexuality."

Disowned by most other gay movements in Britain, reviled by commentators and denounced by church leaders, Tatchell, a 43-year-old free-lance writer, runs his war against prominent figures he maintains are closet homosexuals from a $63-a-month apartment in a shabby public housing project in south London.

In recent months, public demonstrations, private goadings and weekly meetings with his 30 followers have yielded the biggest coup so far.

On Monday, Tatchell expanded the campaign to politicians. He announced in a television interview that he had written to 20 lawmakers from four parties, including two Cabinet ministers, urging them to come out.

Tatchell, who started his group in 1990, brushes aside charges of bullying, intimidation and intrusion into privacy.

Peter Tatchell, leader of OutRage!, a militant gay group dedicated to 'outing' prominent people as homosexuals, leads a group disbanded by most other gay movements in Britain.

"There are times when you have to use confrontational methods. ... Our tactics have put the hypocrisy and homophobia of the Church of England into the public domain," Tatchell told The Associated Press last week.

The controversy boiled over this month when the retired bishop of Glasgow and Galloway, the Rt. Rev. Derek Rowlie, 74, became the most senior Anglican clergyman to reveal that he is gay.

Days later, the bishop of London, the Rt. Rev. David Hope, called a news conference. He produced a letter from Tatchell urging him to declare he was homosexual.

"I am deeply distressed," complained Hope, a 54-year-old bachelor. He said he was celibate, neither heterosexual nor homosexual, adding, "I am talking about being more ambiguous about my sexuality."

The head of the church, Archbishop of Canterbury George Carey, issued a supportive statement and other bishops rallied around Hope and denounced the tactics of OutRage!

Stonewall, a gay-rights group headed by the actor Sir Ian McKellen, said outing "alienates possible supporters of equality."

OutRage! has yielded swift rewards by focusing on the church's quandary about homosexuality — underlined by a statement March 17 from 36 archbishops of the worldwide Anglican Communion that there were "no easy answers."

The church's official position is that homosexual acts "fall short of the Christian tradition." The church also bars ordination of practicing homosexuals; it allows marriage among priests.

Tatchell, now an atheist, was raised in a strict, churchgoing family in Australia, and came to Britain in 1971 to avoid the Vietnam draft. He plunged into left-wing politics, losing a Labor Party parliamentary stronghold in 1983 because, as he puts it, blue-collar voters rejected "a bloody queer."

New congressman's office holds daily prayer meetings

By Michelle Mitchell
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As law-makers and aides bustle around Capitol Hill each morning preparing for the day's business, those in the office of Rep. Steve Stockman, R-Texas, are praying.

Stockman, who defeated veteran Democrat Jack Brooks with a big assist from Christian conservatives last year, says he tells prospective employees he would like them to participate in the morning prayer sessions.

But he says the non-denominational meetings are voluntary and that job-related decisions aren't made on the basis of willingness to attend.

"We have got several people that don't attend," he said Friday. Stockman himself rarely attends because of scheduling conflicts.

The Baptist lawmaker who advocates prayer in schools said he recognizes the controversy about mixing church and state. But he noted that Congress, the Supreme Court and other entities open with a prayer each day.

"It seems so second nature that I'm kind of surprised over the outcry," he said after his informal prayer policy was reported Thursday by Roll Call, a Capitol Hill publication.

"Throughout the campaign, we always had prayer and it didn't seem like we should do anything different once we got elected," said Stockman, adding that most of his staffers worked on his campaign.

But Ben B'rih, a Jewish organization that opposes intrusion of religion into government, questions Stockman's emphasis on workplace prayer.

"We think that there's certainly a significant and important place for prayer and religion in American society, but it's an individual issue," said B'nai B'rith spokesman Harvey Berk.

Stockman said his emphasis on organized prayer doesn't affect his hiring or treatment of employees, pointing to his upcoming hire of a Jewish staffer. Asked if that new hire might feel pressured to attend the sessions, or excluded if he doesn't, Stockman said, "He is a mature guy."

The lawmaker acknowledged that his former top aide complained that the prayer meetings encroached on work time, but he said the disagreement had nothing to do with the aide's departure last month. The staffer, Dennis Stephens, declined to comment.

Buddhism

"Buddhists believe in hard work and family," said Thanadabouth, who came to Twin Falls 13 years ago amid the first wave of Laotian refugees to reach the Magic Valley. "But it's hard, sometimes, so far from a temple."

"Effectiveness rather than philosophical or historical demonstration has always been the hallmark of a successful religion," Karen Armstrong, author of "A History of God," wrote recently in the Chicago Tribune. "For centuries Buddhists in many parts of the world have found that this lifestyle does yield a sense of unassisted meaning."

Thanadabouth, who's 52, is among 50 to 75 Buddhists in Twin Falls County out of a Southeast Asian community of between 250 and 300. Although most, like Thanadabouth, are first-generation immigrants, many Asian-Americans have converted to Christianity.

"When I first came to this country, my sponsor made me go to church with him," Thanadabouth said. "I kept my religion, but many people change."

Like most Laotians, Thanadabouth was well acquainted with Christianity before he set foot on American soil. Although he's from a predominantly Buddhist village of about 100 families in central Laos, his wife, Yone, is Catholic. Catholicism was the religion of the French, who ruled Indochina for 150 years.

"Buddhism is centered around the temple," he explained. "Although the town I came from was very small, we had a temple with monks."

Now, the nearest temple is in Salt Lake City. On special occasions, as when Thanadabouth's mother died, local Buddhists must bring in a monk to conduct ceremonies.

"To have a temple you must have a monk, because the monks take care of the (statue of) Buddha," Thanadabouth said. "And there is no monk here."

In Buddhism, being a monk is a temporary avocation. Young men take away from a few months to several years out of their lives, shave their heads, don saffron robes and move into a temple, where they pray and maintain the premises.

Monks must take vows of poverty and cannot prepare their own food, which means everything they need to survive must be provided by the congregation.

That's not a problem in Buddhist countries, where the faithful flock to temples bearing gifts. But in Idaho, where there are perhaps 600 Buddhists, finding and maintaining a temple is a bigger challenge.

"We're having a meeting in Boise in April to see about building a temple there," Thanadabouth said. "We think we've found a building that would be suitable. Now we have to find a monk."

Buddhists mix easily with their non-Buddhist neighbors, Thanadabouth said, because they're so accustomed to it. When he first came to America, he settled in Arco — that's where his sponsor lived — and trained as a hospital orderly.

"I liked Arco, but I wanted a better job, better life for my family," he said. "So I moved to Twin Falls."

Thanadabouth guesses that at least as many Buddhists who once settled here have moved on, most of them to West Coast cities with larger Buddhist communities.

"When there is a temple, it will be easier to be a Buddhist in Idaho," he said. "Even if we must go to Boise every month."

Japan police feared cult had nerve gas even before subway attack

TOKYO (AP) — Police requested thousands of gas masks and protective gear from the military and underwent special, secret training in how to use them the day before the deadly nerve gas attack on Tokyo's subway.

A Japanese army spokesman said Friday the unusual request was made in advance of a series of raids police planned on sites connected with the Aum Shiri Kyo — Supreme Truth — religious sect.

Police have not openly linked the apocalyptic group to Monday's gas attack, which killed 10 people and sickened more than 5,000.

But in three days of nationwide raids, police have seized hundreds of barrels of chemicals from cult facilities, and millions of dollars in cash and gold. Experts say the chemicals can be used to make the nerve gas sarin, which was used in the subway attack.

Friday, police in full chemical-protection gear raided compounds in Osaka, Japan's second-largest city, and elsewhere. The chemicals seized included an agent used to neutralize nerve gas, reports said.

Authorities have said the raids were prompted by an unrelated kidnapping case. But the request for protective gear and training suggests police suspected the sect was involved with dangerous chemicals.

Japanese media reported the police request was directly linked to fears the sect had sarin and might use it to repel the raids, which began Wednesday.

The Mainichi newspaper quoted unidentified police sources as questioning whether Monday's subway terror may have been retaliation for Sunday's special training session.

The sect has denied any role in the subway attack. Its mysterious, long-haired leader, Shoko Asahara, said Friday that the chemicals seized from his group were used for manufacturing plastic, pottery and pesticides.

"Police are trying to damage our reputation," the purple-robed Asahara said in a videotape shown on Japanese TV. Asahara, whose whereabouts are unknown, accused authorities of "bashing" the sect.

But a U.S. chemical weapons expert who came to Japan to investigate the subway attack scoffed at the denial.

"The presence of all those chemicals is suggestive of a very large capability, and a potential to produce a truly nightmarish quantity of chemical weapons," said Kyle Olson of the Chemical and Biological Arms Control Institute in Alexandria, Va.

"One to two liters were used on the subway. Think of what a ton of this stuff could do."

Olson also investigated last year's mysterious deaths of seven people in Matsumoto, central Japan, which were blamed on nerve gas ingredients. He warned in February that that might have been a rehearsal for a bigger attack.

Hirofumi Yusa, a spokesman for Japan's army, said the military loaned police several thousand gas masks and chemical warfare outfits and instructed them how to use the gear last Sunday.

Yusa said the training session at Camp Asaka, just north of Tokyo, was held in response to a request the National Police Agency made in preparation for a series of raids planned at cult sites.

Henri Zvi Deutsch of California, left, Steven Carol and John Paul Sousa Mendes, both of Arizona, attend a ceremony to honor the former Portuguese consul Aristides Sousa Mendes, John Paul's father, Thursday in Lisbon, Portugal.

Wartime consul honored

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Nazi troops were three days from Paris when Portugal's dictator delivered a stern command to his diplomatic corps: "Issue no visas to persons of impure blood, or to opponents of the Nazi government."

Defying the order, Aristides Sousa Mendes threw himself into a frantic, 72-hour visa-writing blitz as hordes of refugees banged on his consulate door.

On Friday, Portugal rewarded his defiance with a plaque to its "greatest hero of World War II" — 55 years after Sousa Mendes was tossed from the Foreign Ministry and his 13 children had to flee into exile and poverty.

Scribbling around the clock at the Portuguese consulate in Bordeaux with the help of two sons, by June 18, 1940, the consul had issued permits to 30,000 fleeing Jews, Poles, French resistance fighters and other refugees. He passed 500 of the impromptu visas from the bathroom window of the train that was to carry him home in custody of the Portuguese secret police.

The weeklong commemoration was the fruit of a campaign by John Paul Sousa Mendes of Mesa, Ariz., who has fought to redeem his father's name in his native country.

Sousa Mendes died in poverty in Lisbon in 1954.

"Despite confusion raging around him and the direct threat to his family, Sousa Mendes stood by an ideal that could only bring him suffering," President Mario Soares said at a gathering of the former consul's children and families of some of the refugees he helped.

1-room school faces 5-alarm crisis

By Karen Tolkinen
Times-News writer

THREE CREEK - For the second time in less than a year, this one-room school needs a new school board.

Nestled between sprawling cattle ranches in the southeast corner of Owyhee County, the eight-student school has been torn by legal disputes, infighting and clashes with the parent-teacher organization.

Citing frustration with constant questioning from critics, two of three board members handed in their resignations and walked out of the March 8 board meeting. Owyhee County commissioners will attempt Monday night to find replacements for former Board Chairman Mel Walker and Randall Brewer.

Idaho has 16 schools with just one classroom. Even among those, Three Creek Elementary School is a rarity, the school is an entire district unto itself.

After serving just eight months, Walker wrote in his resignation letter that he had thought he could restore trust and respect to the community, which he said had been "plunged into turmoil" by the actions of the previous board.

Voters recalled board member Kim Brackett last spring after the board suspended the tiny district's only teacher with pay following threats from parents to withdraw their children from the school.

Another board member, Bethene Brewer, resigned last spring after being out-voted 2-1 on the Starr suspension.

The teacher was replaced, and Walker and Randall Brewer - Bethene Brewer's husband - filled the two board positions. Noy Brackett held onto the third seat.

The suspended teacher, Cathy Starr, filed a tort claim against the district, asking for $100,000. The board has spent more than $10,000 on attorney's fees, which PTO President Lenay Anderson said detracted from spending for students.

Walker wrote that he resigned because he felt his task was impossible, "as the last three board meetings have ended in a hostile environment, where hatred prevailed over good judgment."

Randall Brewer said in an interview that he resigned because he didn't want to put up with constant questioning of the board's actions.

"I just felt we were at a total standstill," he said. "Whenever we were trying to go forward, it was bringing up little nit-picky things like mileage driving checks ... I just decided I don't need that."

County Democrats set meeting Monday

TWIN FALLS - Twin Falls County Democrats will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Community Room of television station KMVT, at 1100 Blue Lakes Blvd. N.

Newly elected County Commissioner Dennis Maughan will be the guest speaker and the meeting promises to be the most important one of the year.

Trout disease parasite found at Hayspur Hatchery

BELLEVUE - The parasite that causes whirling disease in trout has been discovered again in Hayspur Hatchery near Bellevue, forcing the destruction of about 37,000 fish, Idaho Fish and Game biologists say.

Whirling disease is a parasitic infection of trout and salmon that causes skeletal deformation and can be fatal. It causes the adult fish to whirl around.

Though it was discovered as late as 1992 in Hayspur broodstock, it was not found in the catchable trout there since 1988. Test results were negative in 1993 and 1994 on wild and hatchery fish from Loving Creek below the hatchery.

Earlier this year, the spores of the parasite were found in a sample of fish taken from one of six concrete raceways. It can be spread by birds and in contaminated mud, but not fish to fish or from eggs.

A consensus among state and federal officials is the 35,000 fish in one concrete raceway should be destroyed, along with all of the 2,000 broodstock in an earth-bottom pond.

The catchable trout represent less than 1.5 percent of those released annually in Idaho.

Whirling disease is reported in other states. It is a concern in Idaho because while the disease can be eliminated at a hatchery, it has never been successfully eradicated in the wild. It is not a danger to people.

Workshop will explore hi-tech erosion control equipment

BOISE - High-technology erosion control equipment will be demonstrated, and plenty of contractors, suppliers, consulting engineers will be on hand for the 1995 Idaho Erosion Control Workshop, May 2-4, at the state Division of Environmental Quality in Boise.

The three-day workshop will begin with a day-long session entitled: "Advanced Erosion Control Design and Techniques." Day Two will be highlighted by a bus tour of erosion control devices in the field. Day Three will be a trade show, with vendors displaying their wares and offering information.

For more information, call Mike Allen at 334-5860, or Jody Taylor at 334-5919.

Stanley plans to honor veterans with special flags

STANLEY - The area chamber of commerce and the city will commemorate veterans by flying special flags at the Stanley Community Building.

The commemoration will start at noon Sunday, May 28, of Memorial Day weekend.

Casket flags donated by the Veterans Administration will be used and displayed day and night on the flagpole. One flag will fly continually from Memorial Day to Veterans Day, to be replaced by another flag from Veterans Day to Memorial Day.

Marine veteran Dade De Moux, who cherished his time in the Sawtooth Mountains, will be honored by his family flying his flag first on the pole.

For information, contact the Stanley-Sawtooth Chamber of Commerce, in care of the Veteran Flag Memorial, PO Box 8, Stanley ID, 83278, or call (208) 774-3411.

Filer planning commission plans public forum April 18

FILER - The Filer Planning and Zoning Commission will hold a public hearing at 7:30 p.m. April 18 at the Filer City Hall, 300 Main St.

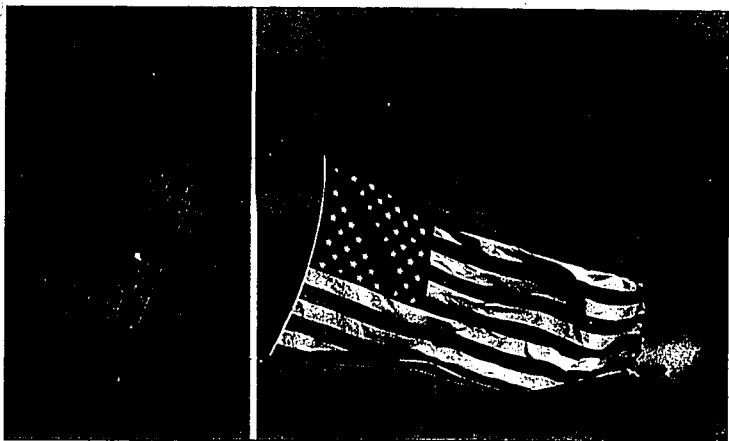

The hearing has been planned to consider a request for variance for Carolyn Hoescher to permit construction of a building within 3.5 feet of the side lot line for property located at 111 Idaho Ave. and legally described as Lot 11 and the northerly 35 feet of Lot 13, Block 3, Munyon's Addition in the city of Filer, Twin Falls County, Idaho.

A copy of the variance application may be obtained from the city clerk between 8 a.m. and noon and 1 and 5 p.m. weekdays at the Filer City Hall.

Sawtooth forest turns profit

By William Brock
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - After years of running in the red, the Sawtooth National Forest's timber program showed a $456,000 profit from logging and firewood sales in 1994.

The positive cash flow was due to higher prices and a dramatic increase in the amount of sawtimber taken from the Sawtooth Forest, said Greg Clark, acting timber staff officer.

The 1994 sawtimber cut was 9.39 million board feet. The combined cut of the five years before that was only 5.71 million board feet. One board foot equals one square foot of wood, one inch thick.

"Showing a net gain is a very significant accomplishment for the Sawtooth National Forest," Supervisor Jack Bills said in a prepared statement. The Sawtooth is not regarded as a major timber-producing forest, he said.

"Over the last few years, we have been showing an upward trend in revenues," Bills said. "... last year we broke over the top and are showing more income than expenses."

In 1993, the Sawtooth Forest lost $276,000 on logging and firewood sales. The Forest Service typically pays administrative, engineering and road-building

'Showing a net gain is a very significant accomplishment for the Sawtooth National Forest.'

— Supervisor Jack Bills

Virtually all of the increase stemmed from the Black Pine salvage sale of roughly 7 million board feet. The sale was authorized after thousands of trees were killed by wood-boring bark beetles in the Black Pine Mountains, 50 miles southeast of Burley.

It was deemed a salvage sale because the dead trees were vulnerable to cracking and splitting in hot, dry weather - rendering them worthless for mill use. The sale could not be appealed.

The contract, for up to 12.8 million board feet, was awarded to the Boise Cascade Corp. The company offered a minimum bid of $66 per 1,000 board feet.

The rest of the Sawtooth's sawtimber was cut on the Twin Falls, Fairfield, Ketchum ranger districts, and in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area, Clark said.

Private and commercial firewood sales throughout the forest came to 5.7 million board feet in 1994. Small timber sales - for things like posts and poles - totaled 2.9 million board feet.

City gets involved in Auger Falls hydro project

By William Brock
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The city of Twin Falls would get a place to dump treated sewage if a Salt Lake City developer is allowed to build a hydroelectric project at Auger Falls.

Doing business as Cogeneration Inc., developer Steve Hammen has offered the city 200 acres where it can pour disinfected wastewater from the municipal sewage treatment plant.

Spilling treated wastewater on the ground, rather than in the river, could save the city from making costly improvements to the sewer plant.

"In the long term, it would be in our best interests to have that land application system to remove some of our nutrients," said Tom Courtney, city manager. "The nutrients," including ammonia and phosphorus, are essentially pollutants.

If built, the Auger Falls hydro scheme would feature a dam across the Snake River and a 1.7-mile canal to carry water along the south bank - bypassing the falls - to the powerhouse, just upstream of the mouth of Rock Creek.

Sections of the Middle Snake River do not meet state or federal water quality standards - and are unfit for swimming. The nutrients, coupled with the river's slow, warm water, nourish nuisance levels of aquatic plants and algae.

City leaders want to nurse the Snake back to health, but they are on a tight schedule with tough - and potentially expensive - decisions to make during the current fiscal year, Courtney said.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency recently issued a wastewater discharge permit for the sewer plant. In order to comply, the city must have an ultraviolet disinfection system - rather than its current chlorine system - up and running by the summer of 1996.

Spilling treated water onto Hammen's land would forestall some of the obligations, Courtney said. The land is about five miles downstream of the Perrine Bridge.

"By getting our wastewater out of the river, it would be less expensive for us over the long run," Courtney said.

Before the city can get its wish, Hammen must get his.

Hammen needs a so-called "dredge and fill" permit from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers before he can break ground on the Auger Falls hydro project.

Courtney, on behalf of the city, has written to the Corps' district engineer in Walla Walla, Wash., explaining that the city is keenly interested in spilling its sewage treatment water on Hammen's land.

"The developer has offered approximately 200 acres of land to the city for this purpose contingent upon the issuance of permits from the Corps of Engineers," Courtney wrote to Lt. Col. James Weller, district engineer.

Vandalism issue highlights Wendell Council meeting

By Steve Koehler
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL - In the wake of recent vandalism at the middle and elementary schools, post office, homes and businesses, residents crowded Thursday evening's City Council meeting to express their concerns and hear from city officials.

"I think the first thing we need to do is recognize what's going on in our community for what it truly is. It's an act of terrorism. We are very much concerned with that," Mayor Lynn Nelson said.

"Our kids aren't safe anymore," said

Marti Fox who has a son at the middle school. "I'm afraid for my mother. The elderly people are scared because they don't know if their house is going to be next. Something needs to be done."

The first action should be to prevent vandalism, Nelson said. The city would like to set up a community watch system once the city attorney resolves liability issues, he said.

"There have been literally hundreds of people who have called to volunteer," Nelson said.

The city has bought cellular telephones and the number will be on the next water bill, Nelson said. People will be able to call day or night to report problems and get instant action.

"We're all in this together," city employee John Gneca said. "I think the people need to realize this is not Wendell 50 years ago. The whole country is changing."

"You people are our ears and eyes," Council President Michael Wetzein said. "You have to help us. You have to help yourselves. We sure would appreciate any help you can give us."

School Superintendent Larry Manly said the district has plans for alarm systems at the elementary and middle schools.

Businessman Jon Moseley said the police department needs two more officers, and that he preferred the use of reserve policemen because they are volunteers.

"But the city doesn't have the money to hire additional regular officers, and liability concerns limit using reserves, Nelson said."

"Later, Moseley said he'd be willing to pay more taxes for more police because his additional tax would be less than the insurance deductible he'd have to pay if his business were vandalized."

Nelson said he and the council are taking a more active role supervising the police department.

Range feud settles down

By Alice Sherman Hansen
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Forest Service officials thank Wild Rose ranchers Friday for working to improve conditions in the Goose Creek allotment, saying their efforts had improved both the rangeland and waterways.

"From a range management standpoint we're getting the utilization and we're approaching the standards and guidelines," Twin Falls District range conservationist Sid Lopez told the ranchers at a public review of the allotment's operating plan.

The ranchers have locked horns with the Forest Service many times over management of the grazing allotment south of Oakley.

Friday's between the two was tense - but ended with ranchers setting a date to meet with Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management officials to solve water efficiency problems in one portion of the allotment.

Twin Falls District ranger Don Oman said too many cattle were found grazing last summer in the Upper Beavertand, or north-central part of the allotment.

Ranchers said fences installed last year along a steep ridge to keep cattle away from Trout Creek have left few options for watering their cattle even in good water years.

As a result, cattle are forced into small areas near water - and their cows' conception rates and calf weaning weights suffered last year as a result, they said.

"It's costing us money to do that and lots of it," said Ray C. Bedke. The problem would be solved if cattle could access the creek a few acres, Bedke said.

But Trout Creek is home to the Yellowstone cutthroat trout, not an endangered but a "sensitive" species, Twin Falls District Ranger

Don Oman said.

Oman fears allowing the cattle to water there would encourage them to linger near the stream.

"We just need to strive to continue to protect those riparian areas ... so we don't get forced into doing something more drastic," Oman said - such as listing the trout as endangered.

The ranchers said the Forest Service had originally said it would install the fence farther down the ridge toward the creek, which they said would have enabled them to transfer water from the stream to water cattle on the other side of the fence.

But Oman said Forest Service specialists advised them to move it farther up the ridge.

Lopez predicted the Forest Service and ranchers would face more of the same conflicts as the agency implements Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt's plans to reform the way rangelands are managed.

"You're going to see more and more of this," he said. "It think it's going to continue."

Boise Republican named to Office on Aging

BOISE (AP) - Gov. Phil Batt on Friday named Rep. Jesse Berain R-Boise, as the new director of the Office on Aging, the third Republican legislator he has picked to be part of his new administration.

Berain, 66, is serving his second term in the Idaho House from District 17, a south-central Boise district.

Berain originally came to Idaho 50 years as a field worker. He has battled the last three sessions to end agriculture's 78-year exemption from the law that requires all other employers to carry workers' compensation insurance on farm workers. The House defeated the bill in the 1995 session.

Berain worked as deputy director for the Human Rights Commission 1970-73, for the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development 1973-78 and was an equal opportunity officer for the Bureau of Land Management 1978-90.

"Jesse has a long history of working to help others," Batt said, in announcing the appointment.

The appointment is effective April 17. Berain and his wife Maria Andrea, have seven children.

Earlier, Batt named former state Sen. Roger Madson of Boise to head the Department of Employment and former Rep. Pam Ahrens of Boise to run the Department of Administration.

Fox recall campaign spreads west

NAMPA (AP) - The campaign to recall elected state Schools Superintendent Anne Fox has spread from its birthplace in Pocatello west to southwestern Idaho.

Political activist Phil Summa will head up the recall drive in southwestern Idaho for Carole Wells, the Pocatello woman who is the state chairman of Foxwatch.

"I have been following the Anne Fox folks," Summa said. "I have been really concerned that so many people have decided she is no longer the right choice."

Summa's claim of mounting dissatisfaction with the new state schools chief will be tested, however, when the recall petition drive begins later this spring. Fox's opponents will have to gather just over 125,000 signatures in only 60 days to force a recall election, and then they will have to attract over 227,000 votes against her to oust her from office.

Last year, anti-tax activist Ron Rankin was unable to collect just 32,000 signatures to put his property-tax-slash initiative before voters in November.

Summa admitted a recall was improbable, but he hopes Fox will resign or change the way she does her job.

Fox, who has been under increasing criticism for political, administrative and other mistakes during less than three months in office, did not comment, but spokesman Asa Ruyle said she was disappointed that her critics had not brought their concerns to her first.

"She is taking her job seriously, and she is moving ahead," Ruyle said. "A lot of the people who voted for her wanted the things she is doing."

But with controversy swirling around her and skepticism mounting about her ability to oversee education, the state Board of Education this week essentially stripped Fox of the authority it had ceded to her predecessor, fellow Republican Jerry Evans.

Foxwatch plans rallies during it appears to educate voters about what it sees as Fox's failures before launching the 60-day petition drive.

"If this state's more concerned with conservative politics than with our education system and school students," Summa said.

Dems: Lawyers' fund may have aided students

BOISE (AP) - The $1 million that Republicans dumped into a "slush fund" for lawyers in the legislative session could have funded 35 new Idaho teachers, 500 more school computers or 33,333 new school textbooks, Democrats say.

Democratic officials on Friday issued their assessment of the 1995 Idaho Legislature, and said the session ended at C minus.

"Individually, you're looking at a failing grade on topics such as workers' compensation for farm workers and the performance of the state Department of Education in regards to the public schools budget," Democratic Chairman Bill Mauk said at a news conference.

State Republican Chairman Randy Smith said it would have graded the session A minus. He said the lawmakers should have approved a bill forbidding tax increases unless three-fifths of the members favored it, because that's what the voters want.

Smith said Democrats didn't get the message from the November general election, which resulted in a GOP landslide, that the people want less spending and taxes.

Mauk and Rep. Ken Robison, D-Boise, were critical of a bill pushed by the Republican leadership to create the "Constitutional Defense Fund," with $1 million. Sponsors said it was intended to defend states' rights, if necessary through lawsuits.

But the legislation also says the money can be used for any other purpose as decided by a panel of four Republican officials, leading Democrats to allege it was just a "slush fund" for Republican lawyers.

"Why couldn't that million dollars be put to work for Idaho's children through education and the building of adequate schools?" Robison asked.

"This state should be worrying about the education and health of Idaho's children, not some imaginary federal bogeyman."

The Democrats said the GOP majority cut environmental protection and social programs important to people.

"There really was a slash-and-burn mentality towards many of the social programs targeted at the most vulnerable sections of our state," Robison said.

Mining chief defends industry

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) - Arthur Brown did something riskier than he has ever done in his 25 years in mining.

The chief executive officer of Hecla Mining Co. on Thursday ventured into hostile territory to speak to the Kootenai Environmental Alliance about the relationship between mining and the land.

"No industry has done a poorer job of telling people its worth than the mining industry," Brown said. "People take minerals for granted and think they know all about it."

Brown told how much of daily life involves minerals, such as toothpaste and pencils.

"Everything we do exists because of our ability to mine," he said. "But we need to move forward away from wanting to stop mining altogether and recognize we have to work together."

Kootenai members grilled Brown about the Endangered Species Act, abandoned mines and mining efforts abroad.

specialist with the Corps in Walla Walla, said Courtney's letter had no bearing on whether a dredge-and-fill permit will be issued.

In a recent interview with The Times-News, Courtney stressed that the city council neither supports nor opposes - construction of the Auger Falls hydroelectric plant.

"The decision whether the Auger Falls project is good, or bad for the river has to be made by people with the scientific expertise," Courtney said. City leaders will abide by the decisions of state and federal regulatory agencies, he said.

The Corps of Engineers permit isn't the only regulatory hurdle that Hammen has to clear.

The state Division of Environmental Quality is poised to approve a water quality permit - with a few conditions. Hammen will have to guarantee minimum-water flows and dissolved oxygen levels in the river, and prevent the water from getting too warm.

Cogeneration Inc. is in the process of buying a couple hundred acres of land immediately downstream of the sewage treatment plant. The land is owned by a collection of local businessmen, including car dealer Roy Raymond and accountant Dave Cooper.

In addition to offering 200 acres for "land application" of sewage plant water, Hammen has pledged to establish a county park with hiking trails and river access - if the power plant is approved. If it isn't, Hammen said he'll have no choice but to develop a subdivision with hundreds of homes inside the canyon.

February. He commended the district for its current teacher, building and computer lab. But he also asked board members at the February board meeting to reconcile their differences for the sake of the children.

Owyhee County Commissioner Hal Tolmie said Friday he's not sure who the county will appoint.

"I'm kind of hard on us because we don't know the situation down there," he said. "It's kind of a donnybrook."

The road from the school to the county seat in Murphy covers 120 miles - less than half of it is paved.

Tolmie said the commissioners have asked resigning board members to suggest names for replacements.

But that might not be easy. "I was reluctant to give names," Randall Brewer said. "I figured, who would want it?"

Chet Brackett, married to Kim Brackett, said he will make the three-hour drive to the Monday night meeting to suggest names to the commissioners. Legally, the board needs at least one other member besides Brackett. Appointed members would stay on the board until the May School Board elections.

Chet Brackett said he would like to serve on the board. "At this point, I think I would have the interest and the time and the ability to serve. If they ask me if I would be willing, I would be willing."

Starr's lawyer, John Lynn, said he doesn't know when his client's case will be settled and declined to say whether he would follow up Starr's tort claim with a lawsuit.

"The case is complicated on a number of levels, one of the reasons of which the school district has some financial difficulty at the time," Lynn said. He said he's still interviewing witnesses in the district. "We're not pressed for time."

Despite financial difficulties, the school will have enough money to finish out the district. In his parting letter, Walker said there is enough money in the school's savings account and reserve funds to pay off the teacher and other contracts, if legal fees don't accelerate.

Otter: Militia a sign of Western unrest

BOISE (AP) — The organization of groups like the United States Militia Association is a reflection of the unhappiness of people in the West with the administration of President Bill Clinton, Lt. Gov. Butch Otter says.

Otter

"I think the militia organization and their spokesmen...are a symptom of Clinton's war on the West and (Interior Secretary Bruce) Babbitt's war on the West," Otter said Friday.

He was interviewed for KTVB's "Viewpoint" program to be telecast Sunday.

Otter, Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa and Schools Superintendent Anne Fox all spoke to the militia's Boise meeting during the legislative session.

Otter said he told people who attended the meeting he can understand their concerns "but you're doing a great disservice unless you do that in a peaceful fashion."

He defended his appearance before a group that drew criticism after leader Samuel Sherwood, Blackfoot, was quoted as saying force might be necessary to carry out the group's goals.

"Your government has got to be accessible to everybody," Otter said. "Basically they are a gang."

Parents accuse school

DEARY (AP) — A Deary couple has filed a complaint against the Whitepine School District, alleging an essay by their daughter was illegally disseminated throughout Deary High School and used at an August hearing.

Pat and Jan Eck allege the district violated a federal law aimed at protecting student records from being released without the permission of students or their parents.

Jim Bradshaw, a U.S. Department of Education spokesman, said the 1974 Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act protects transcripts, report cards, financial aid forms, disciplinary records and other information.

The Ecks complained to the state Board of Education last October about the release of an essay by their daughter, Sally.

English teacher Denise Ruiz said during a state Professional Standards Commission hearing last August that she took the essay entitled "Shadow" to Deary Principal Ray Ireland because she was alarmed by its content.

The essay was used as evidence by the attorney for Deary teacher Dennis Jensen, who took a leave of absence from the school after the Ecks alleged he made sexual advances toward Sally.

"There was an essay written by Sally after her return from the psychiatric unit that was submitted as evidence without Sally's permission," the Ecks wrote in their complaint to the state Board of Education. "The essay was handwritten but when submitted by the defense, it was typewritten."

The board eventually voted against revoking Jensen's teaching certificate, reversing an earlier decision to refuse a hearing panel's recommendation to clear him of all charges. Jensen returned to work at Deary High School on Jan. 30 after the Whitepine School Board voted to reinstate him.

Pioneer women finally recognized

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — It took nearly half a century, but the women who helped pioneer nuclear energy in Idaho finally have their recognition.

The U.S. Department of Energy on Thursday dedicated a plaque for three women who worked at Experimental Breeder Reactor-1 when it first up a string of light bulbs for the first time in 1951.

Now that the mothballed reactor is a tourist attraction, most of the men who worked on the project are commemorated by a glass-encased section of wall they signed in chalk the first time a nuclear reaction created usable energy.

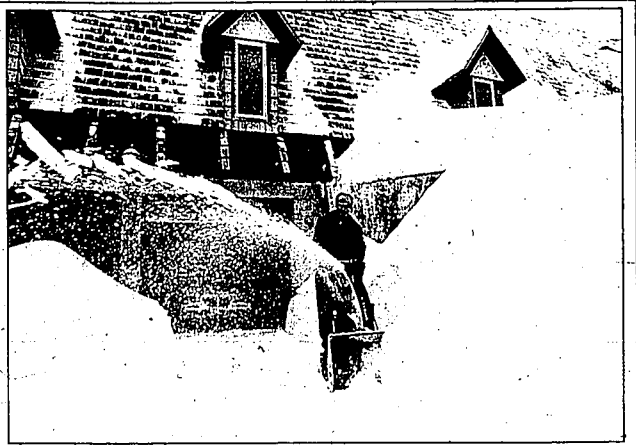

But the names of the women who worked in the office inside the reactor building at what became the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, keeping scientists on course and guarding classified information that the men too often left on their desks overnight, were conspicuously absent.

Rather than breaking into the historic showcase of chalk signatures, the Energy Department decided to give the women their own historic marker. Two of the women, Wilma Mangum, 75, of Blackfoot, and Eleanor Barnes, 66, of Las Vegas and Island Park, lived to see it. The other, Gladys Joslin, did not.

The surviving women said it was a little irritating not to be asked to sign the wall, but they got over it and never expected to be recognized.

"We finally came to our reward before we croaked," Barnes said.

They said the toughest part of their job was keeping secret information about the mission locked away when scientists and technicians scrambling to produce energy were dragging blueprints all over.

Chalet owner Russ Manley digs out his driveway in Snowbasin, Utah, Friday morning after three feet of snow fell, canceling Friday's U.S. Alpine Super G Championships.

Storm dumps snow in Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A fast-moving storm blasted northern Utah's mountains with 2 to 3 feet of new snow early Friday, stalling morning rush-hour traffic and triggering scattered power outages.

Hardest hit was the Snowbasin resort northeast of Ogden, where nearly 3 feet of snow fell overnight, forcing cancellation of the U.S. Alpine Championships super G competition for men and women.

Organizers moved the alpine championships to Park City Ski Area for Saturday's men's giant slalom. The super G, however, was not being rescheduled.

The storm also dusted Wasatch Range benches with up to several inches of snow, while other areas of the valley escaped with an inch or two.

Bad weather slowed traffic throughout the region, and was blamed for at least 35 accidents on area interstate freeways, the Utah Highway Patrol reported.

None of the accidents involved fatalities, a dispatcher said.

The National Weather Service recorded 25 inches of new snow at Alta Ski Resort, southeast of Salt Lake City, while 24 inches was reported at nearby Snowbird. Brianhead resort near southern Utah's Cedar City got 13 inches, while western Utah's Tropic registered 8 inches of new snowfall. Logan reported 5 inches and Mapleton 7.

The NWS monitoring station at Salt Lake International Airport recorded 3 inches of new snow. The storm struck the Wasatch Front about 7 p.m. Thursday, starting as rain then changing to snow.

Overnight, area roads — especially at higher elevations — were transformed into snowpacked trails.

The heavy snow snapped tree limbs and power lines across the Salt Lake Valley.

One of the most serious outages occurred in Millcreek, where four spans of distribution lines went down. SunShire ruled the Salt Lake Valley by midday, aiding Utah Power repair crews in restoring service. There was no immediate estimate of how many customers had been affected by the outages.

Mental hospital study comes to end

LEWISTON — An independent inquiry into allegations of mismanagement at State Hospital North has been completed and will be released within two weeks, the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare says.

Spokeswoman Ann Kirkwood said health care consultant Jerry Hart of Arizona looked into continuing allegations against hospital administrator Marvin Lambrecht and members of his staff in Orofino. The claims came mostly from former employees who contend, among other things, that they were unjustly treated or dismissed while at the mental hospital.

Lambrecht has denied the allegations and said he welcomed the independent probe into hospital operations.

Kirkwood said the report will be made to the department before anything is released publicly.

Boise hepatitis outbreak diminishes

BOISE — Boise's hepatitis A outbreak is fading, almost four months after public health officials imposed an aggressive "no bare hands" policy at restaurants.

In November, the state Department of Health and Welfare told restaurant food handlers to wear disposable gloves or use deli paper or tongs when handling customers' food.

Dr. Jesse Greenblatt, state epidemiologist, said he will advise against continuing the program.

"I think we've seen a good effect from it. I think we have stemmed the outbreak, at least in District 4," he said.

When the policy was announced, 275 cases had been reported statewide, 149 in the Boise area. Forty percent were linked to restaurants, schools, day-care centers and hospitals.

North Idaho principal wins state honor

COEUR D'ALENE — The principal at Dalton Gardens Elementary School has been chosen by the Idaho Association of School Administrators to receive the National Distinguished Principal Award for Idaho.

Pam Pratt and 49 other elementary school principals will be honored in Washington, D.C., in October for their leadership and innovation.

Pratt became Dalton Gardens principal four years ago after working as vice principal at Lakes Middle School.

"She has done work in several areas that we could replicate throughout the district," said Hazel Bauman, elementary curriculum director for Coeur d'Alene schools, who nominated Pratt for the award. "She's got the get-up-and-go. She doesn't wait for things to be handed to her."

Dispensary makes bonus payments

BOISE — The state Liquor Dispensary is declaring an extra dividend of nearly $2.6 million for cities and counties this month.

And Supervisor Dean Summers predicted on Friday that cities and counties will get another extra dividend of between $1 million and $2 million this summer after the books are closed out on the 1994-1995 operating year.

The payments are on top of the $4.8 million in liquor sales profits the state is distributing to local governments on a quarterly basis.

All local governments share in some of the cash based on their 1981 population, but the rest is disbursed based on a community's contribution to liquor sales statewide, returning profits to the areas where they were generated.

Voters approve money for school supplies

BLACKFOOT — Blackfoot voters have approved a $975,000 supplemental school levy to pay for textbooks, supplies and utilities for the next two years.

A total of 1,085 votes were cast Tuesday — 836 yes and 349 no — for an approval margin of 70.5 percent. The levy required only a simple majority to pass, and officials said its approval will not mean a property tax increase since it is for the same amount as last year.

"This is definitely positive and we hope it will translate to the next election," Blackfoot School District Superintendent Steve Norton said.

The district will ask patrons to approve a $3.5 million bond issue on May 16. That measure will require a two-thirds supermajority for approval, and Blackfoot voters have approved only two bond issues since 1974. The last one was for $4.8 million in 1993.

Sensors show wolves have left pens

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — Sensors on Friday indicated the six Canadian wolves penned up in Yellowstone National Park since mid-January have started roaming the park's backcountry.

But park authorities were still trying to get visual confirmation that the wolves had left the pens.

"It's snowing," spokeswoman Marsha Karle. "Maybe the snow set it off. But the distance between the times that it recorded (movement) indicate that's not it. It could be a bird, it could be... who knows?"

After the wolves refused to leave the one-acre pen in the Lamar Valley once the gate was opened on Tuesday, park officials cut a new opening in the fence.

And park spokeswoman Cheryl Matthews said an infrared motion sensor monitoring the new opening recorded six movements spread over about 90 minutes during the morning.

The gate of a second pen holding three wolves was locked open Wednesday. Matthews said officials planned to cut a new opening in that pen late Friday. The gate of a third pen holding the remaining five wolves brought to Yellowstone for reintroduction into the wild was expected to be opened early next week, she said.

That is through a gate," Matthews said. "These wolves want nothing to do with a gate. They want to get as far away as they can from human contact."

Biologists said because the wolves have avoided the gates, they have not become accustomed to humans. One called that a good sign.

"They're showing aversive behavior toward humans," said biologist Mike Phillips. "That says they're still wild."

Park rangers and biologists had entered the enclosures every five days to leave game carcasses to feed the wolves.

Tyson heads home from prison today

INDIANAPOLIS — Mike Tyson is heading home, but he's not home free. Four years of probation await the 28-year-old former heavyweight champion, scheduled for release today from the Indiana Youth Center, where he has served three years of a six-year term for rape. As part of the sentence, Marion Superior Court Judge Patricia Gifford ordered Tyson to report to a probation officer and stay out of trouble.

Tyson's police record dates back to 1978 when as a 12-year-old, he was picked up for purse snatching. He discovered boxing in reform school. His devastating punches made him, at age 20 in 1986, the world's youngest heavyweight champion. Overall, his record is 41-1, with 36 knockouts.

Canyon Springs assistant pro cards ace at Blue Lakes

TWIN FALLS — Jeff Fewell, an assistant golf pro at Canyon Springs, hit a hole-in-one during a pro-ladies tournament at Blue Lakes Country Club Friday. Fewell used an eight-iron to hit the ace on the par 3 hole 15 — a 160-yard drive in windy conditions.

The feat was witnessed by Lyn Morgan, Kathy Hanchett and Mary Chung. For results of the Blue Lakes Country Club Snake River chapter PGA pro-ladies tournament, see page B6.

Criner takes football recruiting job at Boise State

BOISE — Scott Criner, who is well-connected in Boise, has accepted a job as assistant football coach at Boise State. Criner said Thursday he will resign from his job at the U.S. Naval Academy to join the staff of Coach Pokey Allen, replacing Tom Osborne. Osborne resigned on Monday to take a job at Oregon.

Criner, 36, will coach running backs but Allen said Criner's main assignment will be recruiting. Criner is son of Boise State assistant athletic director Herb Criner and nephew of former head coach Jim Criner.

The number that has long conjured up visions of pistols, hit-record singles and malt liquor has a new ambassador.

Michael Jordan took No. 45 — his old 23 had been retired — when he returned to the Chicago Bulls. He has thus carved another potentially lucrative niche in the multi-billion-dollar world of sports marketing.

Finding the right glove will help make the baseball and softball season that much better. Clint Yeggy, right, tries on mitts as Mike Donnelly assists.

Expert advice can aid sports equipment search

By Brad Breland Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — When it comes to breaking in a new baseball glove, Bill Miller has heard it all.

"There's a million ways to break a ball glove in, from running it over with a car to soaking it in water overnight," Miller said.

As a salesman at Donnelly's Sports in Twin Falls, Miller has seen and heard many ways of taking the stiffness out of that new glove, but the old-fashioned way is still the best.

"Take a new glove before you ever use it, lightly oil it, let it sit for 10 or 12 hours and let that oil absorb. While it's sitting, tie a ball in the pocket," said Miller. "Let it start forming a pocket. Take it out, get another light coat of oil and start using it."

Magic Valley athletic equipment outlets are gearing up for spring with golf, tennis, softball and baseball right around the corner.

The key to picking the right gear is learning about the equipment before using it.

New equipment won't necessarily make you play better, experts say. "New clubs will help your game, but lessons will fix it," said Gary Van Engelen of Vano's Club House in Twin Falls.

Before taking up one of the spring sports, a player may need to talk to somebody about their needs to make sure the equipment matches what they want.

"You need an assessment first" before buying a new set of golf clubs, Van Engelen said. "The main mistake is buying one that is too stiff."

Elevation Sports' Benita Slad agrees that players could benefit from professional advice when picking a tennis racket.

"I would probably ask him if he was going to be a player that would play once a week or is he determined to get better to be a tournament-type player," she said.

Size is also a big factor. Whether it's a racket, a golf club, a bat or a glove, you need to know what size is best for you.

Tennis rackets range in size from 4 1/2 in an adult frame to a 4 1/4, Slad said. "In softball, infielders still like a 12- to a 13-inch glove. Not much smaller than that for the men. For the women, 12 1/2- to 13-inch glove would be a maximum for a ladies' softball player," said Miller.

There will be two things to keep in mind before purchasing a glove.

"The size of hand and position," Miller said.

Even weights determine some equipment preferences.

"Ten years ago, everybody swung 36-38-ounce bats. Now we've gone down to 28-30-ounce bats," said Miller. "The ball definitely comes off the bat quicker. They say bat speed over mass."

CSI's J.C. Call scored in two events: bareback and bull riding.

Carey helps Eagle riders harness lead in regionals

By Ron Gates Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — That 100 or so points College of Southern Idaho men needed to pass Weber State College for the Rocky Mountain Region Rodeo lead came in two separate ways Thursday evening.

Defending regional saddle bronc champion Ryan Carey led a CSI sweep of the top four places in that event to highlight the first of three rounds in the 19th annual edition of the College of Southern Idaho Rodeo.

Carey, third in his specialty coming in to the day, drew 79 points from the judges aboard Banner — one of the many National Finals Rodeo caliber animals on hand — to best CSI teammate Jerry Angell by four points. J.C. Call and Mike Broderson completed that demonstration of power.

"Brend riding. That's my strongest event," Carey said. "It was really a nice horse. It went just like a rocking chair."

"Last year our team strengths were in bull riding and bareback," he added. "We weren't as consistent in the broncs."

One reason for that change is Angell's seventh in the nation and presently sitting atop the Rocky Mountain standings.

"The top four (bronc) riders are all from CSI," he said. "The horses here are not like you find at most college rodeos. The better the stock, the easier it is to score high points."

Even without their domination in the broncs, the Eagle's would have picked up enough first-place points to assume the top spot.

Zack Shellabarger and J.C. Call set the tone by grabbing the top two places for CSI in the evening's first event — bareback riding. Call completed his early contribution by registering 74 bull riding points, finishing the go in a tie with Idaho State University's Jason London.

CSI still seeks win in tourney

By Larry Hovey Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Two games remain on the round-robin schedule of the McDonald's Slug-Out baseball tournament but the finals already are filled.

Ricks College pinned the third straight loss on host College of Southern Idaho-10-2 Friday night to clinch no worse than second in the four-day tournament with a 3-1 record. Bellevue, with CSI left on its schedule, is 3-0 and assured of the other side of the finals bracket.

Centralia and Treasure Valley both stand 1-2 going into today's round while CSI is 0-3.

College of Southern Idaho tries to prevent the shutout in leading off play at 11 a.m. today against unbeaten Bellevue. Treasure Valley and Centralia meet at 2:30 p.m. That will leave a 6 p.m. start for Ricks and Bellevue for the title.

Although CSI is at the bottom of the team standings, it did provide the first champion — freshman Trevor Davis winning the McDinger home-run derby. He put three out in 10 swings. Ricks' Curtis Hall, who had a grand slam earlier in the day, was second with two.

Ricks 10, CSI 2

A five-run fourth inning proved the springboard that allowed Ricks to run-ride the Eagles under the tourney's eight-after-seven rule.

The Vikings basically ended suspense in that fourth inning and then came up with three runs in the top of the eighth to put CSI in jeopardy.

John Cazier and Jody Hardy started that fourth inning with walks and the scoring began when Wade Bell and Scott Robinson followed with hits. Garrick Peterson lived on an error to unseat them and Steve Farris promptly cleaned them with a single and became a double when the CSI rightfielder overran the ball.

The Rockets, 3-1 against Phoenix this season, won despite scoring only one point in the last 2:45. Sam Cassell made a four shot with 36 seconds left for a 98-97 lead, and Hakeem Olajuwon added a foul shot with 11 seconds remaining for his 25th point.

After a timeout, Danny Ainge, Elton Portny and Barkley of the Suns missed shots before time ran out. Kevin Johnson had 27 points and assists for the Suns. Kenny Smith scored 26 for Houston.

The Rockets made 13 of 32 3-point attempts in ending a two-game losing skid.

Pacers 111, Timberwolves 97
MINNEAPOLIS — David Robinson scored 29 points and sparked a third-late rally that blew the game open Friday night as the San Antonio Spurs defeated the Minnesota Timberwolves 111-97.

Robinson scored eight points in a 21-run game that began the third quarter, opening up an 88-58 lead for the Spurs, who have won six straight.

Robinson added 13 rebounds, and Avery Johnson had 18 points and 12 assists as the Spurs ran their record to 25-4 since Jan. 24.

Pacers 103, Kings 96
INDIANAPOLIS — Rick Smith scored 31 points and Reggie Miller hit four free throws with 7.5 seconds remaining as the Indiana Pacers defeated the Sacramento Kings 103-96 Friday night.

The Pacers' fifth consecutive home win and seventh straight victory over the Kings. Mitch Richmond had 30 points for Sacramento, which is winless at Indiana since Nov. 20, 1986.

Sacramento won on an 11-0 run midway through the fourth period and took its first lead of the game on a layup by Richmond with 5:45 left.

Cavaliers 75, Hawks 74
CLEVELAND — Bobby Phills' free throw with 16 seconds remaining Friday night gave the Cleveland Cavaliers a 75-74 victory over the Atlanta Hawks.

Tyrone Hill, who had 24 points and 13 rebounds, made four consecutive free throws to give Cleveland a 73-69 lead with 57.6 seconds remaining.

Up 74-71, Cleveland turned the ball over on a 5-second call. Tyrone Corbin promptly hit a 3-point shot for Atlanta to tie it 74-74 with 33.6 seconds to play.

Shaq, Magic spoil Jordan homecoming

CHICAGO (AP) — Their names are everywhere. Their products, too.

Shaq and Michael went different shoes to leap over opponents, slung down different drinks to curb their thirst, and offered games to lead their teams.

Their first meeting in two years went to Shaquille O'Neal. Rather, it went to him and his Orlando Magic teammates, who upstaged Michael Jordan's Chicago homecoming by beating the Bulls 106-99 Friday night.

"All the attention is focused on him, especially in Chicago," said O'Neal, who had 24 points and 16 rebounds. "I can remember a few years ago when I was in high school with no money, no car, no clothes and I'm just lumpy to be here. I'm glad Michael is back."

While Jordan was gone, Shaq became the marquee player in the NBA, the player everyone wanted to see, with his basket-quaking dunks and ferocious roars after stuffing the ball. He was muscle and power, and he could, like Jordan, smile and joke.

With Jordan's No. 23 jersey retired, O'Neal's No. 32 was a big seller. "He laid the foundation with guys trying to emulate him, but there is only one Michael Jordan," O'Neal said in a congested Magic locker room where he took time to exchange greetings with film producer Spike Lee.

"Michael's back, look out Shaq," read one sign in the energized United Center, where Jordan's retirement ceremony had been held only five months earlier. Jordan may be back, but he's still marquee. He finished with 21 points but only the second-half baskets, shot 7-of-23 and committed two crucial turnovers in the fourth quarter.

Miami needed Kevin Gamble's free throws with 8.5 seconds left to preserve a 115-111 victory over the Golden State Warriors on Friday night.

Celtics 107, 76ers 75
PHILADELPHIA — Dominique Wilkins had 26 points and 13 rebounds as the Boston Celtics overpowered the Philadelphia 76ers, 107-75 Friday night.

Wilkins had 10 points and nine rebounds from Dino Radja.

Heat 115, Warriors 111
MIAMI — After the Heat scored 26 unanswered points in the first quarter, in overtime Friday night to advance to the final of the NCAA Midwest Regional.

Arkansas (30-6) almost didn't make it this far, edging Texas Southern 79-78 in the opening round and surviving overtime to beat Syracuse 96-94. Williams wasn't around for the finish of either game after fouling out. Memphis needed a day night and Arkansas needed a final 27 points and 13 rebounds.

Thurman scored 17 points, including a 3-pointer with 2:59 left in overtime to put Arkansas ahead for good.

Mingo Johnson scored a career-high 32 points for Memphis (24-13) and helped the Tigers to a 12-point second-half lead. But he picked up his fourth foul with 13:12 left in the game and scored only one point the rest of the way.

Filer softball team rocks Rimrock

The Times-News High school sports

FILER — The Filer softball team pounded out 65 hits over two games to sweep a doubleheader from Rimrock Friday, 35-5 and 36-1.

Jamie Harley was a perfect 5-for-5 in the first game, with a pair of doubles and two triples. Janalen Chandler hit three doubles en route to a 4-for-5 performance.

Defensively, Jennifer Cowger had a good game, and Kelly Amout made a diving stop at third base in the first game.

The Wildcats, now 4-0, won't play again until April 4 after spring break.

The Times-News TWIN FALLS — The season's first PGA pro-ladies tournament in the Magic Valley came on a day more suited to flying kites than playing golf.

But dozens of golfers descended into the Snake River canyon for the Blue Lakes County Club Snake River chapter PGA pro-ladies tournament.

The team led by Eagle Hills course professional Tad Holloway won the team title, while Boise's Jeff Thomson took individual honors with a round of 70.

Prize purse was approximately $3,000.

Virginia records upset
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Junior Burrough, giving up a half-toot to Kansas center Greg Osterg, scored 18 hard-won points Friday night as Virginia countered height with left and ousted the top-seeded, cold-blooded Jayhawks 67-58 in the semifinals of the NCAA Midwest Regional.

Kansas made only 2 of 21 3-pointers, its worst NCAA tournament game in Roy Williams' seven years as coach.

Virginia (25-8), the first non-Big Eight team to rank Kansas in Kemper since 1983, will meet defending champion Arkansas, a 96-91 overtime winner against Memphis, in the regional final on Sunday.

Despite having the advantages of height and a partisan crowd, Kansas lost to Virginia 67-58 in the semifinals of the NCAA Midwest Regional.

Injury doesn't cool Street's inner fire

PARK CITY, Utah (AP) — World Cup downhill champion Picabo Street doesn't fret that a muscle tear in her lower back is keeping her out of the U.S. Alpine Championships.

"This is not a World Cup event, after all, or the Olympics," Street's venues of choice.

Indeed, Street's goals have risen remarkably since she won an Olympic silver medal in 1994 and this year became the first American woman to walk off with a World Cup downhill title.

"This year I became one of the all-time greats," she said in a matter-of-fact assessment of her World Cup season. "I've reached the ultimate top again and must find new direction."

Street's 1994-95 season started off badly when she crashed in her first race at Vail, Colo. But she made an immediate comeback by winning at Lake Louise, Alberta — the first World Cup downhill victory of her career.

During the rest of the season, the 23-year-old from Sun Valley placed first in six World Cup downhill races, five of them in a row. Street was injured in a spill last week in Bormio, Italy, in the last World Cup Super G of the season.

She should be back training by May.

"This is just a minor setback," she said Friday. "It's just a discomfort for a couple of weeks, but it won't do anything to my career."

That career was at its nadir in 1990 when she was kicked off the U.S. Ski Team.

"I was given the decision whether to become a world-class skier or just an average joe," she said. "And I chose to be an athlete."

She won the NorAm overall title that season and the next. In the 1993 national championships, Street won the Super G and was third in the downhill. The following year, she was first in the downhill and second in the Super G.

Fulltime on the World Cup circuit since 1993, Street is only slightly chagrined about missing the U.S. Alpine Championships, which run through Monday. The men's and women's Super G was canceled Friday after a storm dropped up to 3 feet of snow at Snowbasin. The remaining events are at Park City, home of the U.S. Ski Team.

"But at the same time, I like to see the ones who've struggled have good results finally at the end of the season," Street said. "It's interesting to watch from an outsider's point of view."

Street has had other injuries, but none has stopped her rise to skiing prominence. A knee injury during a 1989 World Cup race slowed her down, but she still competed in her second World junior championships in 1990.

She took the silver medal in the downhill in the 1994 Winter Olympics.

"My ultimate dream now that I've won a medal is to shoot for the overall title, which consists of all four disciplines," she said. "That's my goal for the next two years."

If all goes according to plan, she hopes to be a medal contender in all four alpine events at the 1998 Winter Games in Nagano, Japan.

And beyond? "There's a lot of different doors which may open and I just don't know right now which one I'll pick," she said.

Her list of possibilities includes making music, teaching, entertaining on television or behind the camera, sports commenting, but NOT higher education.

"School is not for me," she said.

Here's a twist: Agassi cheers on Sampras

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — The best rivalry in tennis took a twist Friday when Andre Agassi led cheers for Pete Sampras.

Both won in three sets and advanced to Sunday's final in the Lipton Championships, their third meeting this year.

Agassi earned his victory first, playing a flawless third-set tiebreaker to beat Swede Magnus Larsson 7-5, 4-6, 7-6(7-1).

Then, during an interview over the public address system, Agassi encouraged the spectators to stay and support Sampras, leading them in a chant of "Petee! Petee! Petee!"

"You need to cheer for Pete tonight for two reasons," Agassi told the crowd. "He's my Davis Cup teammate, and I want a piece of him in the final."

Agassi got his wish a few hours later, when Sampras beat another Swede, unseeded Jonas Bjorkman, 4-6, 6-0, 6-1.

Sampras, seeking his third consecutive Lipton title, beat Agassi in last year's final. Both of their meetings this year were in finals, with Agassi winning the Australian Open and Sampras adding a new level and get it more exciting for the fans and for little kids. "We really bring out the best in each other. Time will tell if we can get the rivalry going like a Borg-McEnroe, but I'm looking forward to it, and I'm sure he is. It's like two heavyweights going at it."

Regardless of Sunday's result, Sampras will remain ranked No. 1 for the 81st consecutive week and 100th overall. Agassi is ranked second.

No. 2 Steffi Graf, seeking her fourth Lipton title, will face No. 9 Kimiko Date of Japan in the women's final Saturday. Date, who reached the final despite a strained rotator cuff, has won only one set in four previous matches against Graf.

The Bjorkman-Sampras pairing shaped up as a mismatch, but the Swede started aggressively and converted the only break point to take the first set. "I'm plain and simple get outplayed the first set," Sampras said. "He was really playing well. I raised my level a couple of notches in the second set."

Sampras won 10 consecutive games and served better as the match progressed, hitting six aces in the third set. When Bjorkman finally held serve at 4-0, he pumped his fist in mock celebration.

"When it goes wrong against Pete, you start thinking a lot," he said. "Then it's not so easy to play. I was really windy. Weather's not so good today."

Agassi blamed windy weather and questionable rulings for his close call against the 6-foot-3 Larsen, who is ranked 16th.

"I would have to say that is absolutely one of the worst officiating matches," Agassi said. "It just seemed like the linesmen were missing calls all over the place."

A swirling wind, Agassi said, made it difficult to gauge shots. "Wind is an incredible equalizer," he said. "It takes two people, and one might be clearly better, and it makes it very unpredictable. I felt that's what happened today."

Larsson, who beat Agassi in December in the Grand Slam Cup, lodged no complaints about the linesmen or weather. "It was a bit gusty," he said, "but I can't blame the wind."

Agassi saved his best tennis for the tiebreaker, stinging service returns and keeping Larsson off-balance. Larsson, who lost the final seven points, made four unforced errors and double-faulted by 1-3.

"Great returns," Larsson said. "I didn't feel tight at all. He just returned the ball well."

Agassi had no break-point chances in the final two sets. Larsson mixed the pace of his serves and groundstrokes and became the first player to win a set against Agassi in the tournament.

Agassi, serving and trailing 5-6 in the third set, was at duce and within two points of losing the match. But Agassi served an ace, then hit a spectacular passing shot — a running, cross-court forehand — to win the game and force the tiebreaker, >

Pavin, Sauers battle winds, hard TPC greens

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — Gene Sauers, who has won only twice in a dozen years on the tour, and Corey Pavin shared the halfway lead after another wild Friday day in The Players Championship.

Sauers championed the field with a double bogey 6 on No. 18 and shot an even-par 72, finishing 36 holes at 5-under-par 139, while Pavin, followed his first-round 66 with a scrambling, gutsy 73.

They were a single stroke better than Bernhard Langer, Davis Love and Steve Stricker and two ahead of Hale Irwin and D.A. Weirberg. Payne Stewart and Lennie Clements were at 142.

Sauers, whose claim to fame was finishing second in the 1992 PGA after taking a two-stroke lead into the final round, was certainly a surprise co-leader in a field that includes the top 36 players in the world and 71 of the top 100. "I did everything great except for the last hole. It started left and just kept going left," he said about the tee shot that found the water.

Pavin, meanwhile, was nowhere near as sharp as he was Thursday but battled the wind and hard greens to a stunner.

"It was a round that could have gotten away from me, but I didn't let it," Pavin said of his three-bogey, two-birdie effort. "I'm still in it."

A slightly gentler wind chased the players around the TPC than in Thursday's first round, yet it was still steady and still sneaking out of the palms and pines to confuse club selection and further firm up the already fast greens. "The greens are hard and hard to hit to," Pavin said. "They need some water."

Sauers said they are so firm "it's hard to find your ballmark."

The difficult scoring conditions bunched up the leaderboard with no golfer able to break from the pack Saturday's third round will start with 39 golfers separated by only five strokes.

The round of the day was by Phil

Gene Sauers of Halg Pont, S.C., chrlps from the sand trap during the second round of the Players Championship Friday in Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla.

Mickelson, who followed his first-round 78 with a 66 that included a hole-in-one on No. 13.

He's at even-par 144 with nine other golfers.

One person well separated from the pack was Nick Faldo, the hottest player in the world coming into the tournament. He followed his opening-round 80 with a 73 and his 153 missed cut. "I only hit two shots off line in 36 holes," Faldo said. He didn't explain how he accumulated the other 151 strokes.

Among the 11 players at 1-under-par 143 were Steve Ballesteros, Peter Jacobsen, Tom Watson, Ian Woosnam and Lee Janzen. Greg Norman, the runaway winner last year, made a triple bogey 132 when he hit the water at the 132nd hole and shot a 74 to be at 144, five strokes behind along with British Open and PGA champion Nick Price, U.S. Open winner Ernie Els and Mickelson.

The shot of the day came from Mickelson when he 7-iron on the 192-yard 13th hole landed well right of the hole, trickled off the fringe onto the lightning-fast putting surface and slowly curled its way into the cup.

Love, who played the front nine first, got to 6-under for the tournament and 7-under for the day but finished bogey-bogey and shot 67. He bogeyed No. 8 when he missed the

Green hits plenty of 'em to grab lead

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Tammie Green, who came close to winning a couple of the LPGA's majors championships in 1994, shot a 2-under-par 70 Friday to take the second-round lead in the Nabisco Dinah Shore.

Green, who finished third in the tournament a year ago, moved to 3-under-par midway through the first of the women's majors.

Green's 141 total through 36 holes at Mission Hills Country Club gave her a two-shot lead over Kelly Robbins and Lauri Mereten. Robbins moved into contention with a second-round 67 and Mereten had a 69.

Also within striking distance of the lead were Laura Davies and Nancy Lopez. Davies, who won last week's tournament at Phoenix, shot a 69 that left her three shots off the lead, and Lopez had a 71 that put her in a group four shots behind Green.

Green and the par-5 No. 9 when he hit traps with his second and third shots. "I hit the ball really well and only missed one green before the last two holes," said Love, whose seven birdies included a 15-footer and two 20-footers.

The wind added a new twist Friday, changing directions. "It was a completely different course today," Langer said. "The wind was a little bit less but it was out of a totally different direction. No. 17 was playing left to right yesterday; today, it is playing right to left."

Lewis fundraiser tops $200,000

BOSTON — A two-day fundraising effort for the Reggie Lewis Foundation will bring in more than $200,000, according to preliminary results announced Friday by the Boston Celtics.

The effort included a telethon Tuesday night and continued through Wednesday. Lewis' uniform number 35 was retired Wednesday night at halftime of the game between the Boston Celtics and Chicago Bulls.

Lewis died at the age of 27 shortly after collapsing on July 27, 1993 while shooting baskets. Recent newspaper reports have quoted allegations that he used cocaine. Family and friends have denied it.

Ex-Dodger top official suffers stroke

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — Former Los Angeles Dodgers general manager Al Campanis remained hospitalized Friday after having two minor strokes earlier this week, a spokesman for the Palm Springs Suns said.

Campanis, 78, is the general manager of the Suns, a member of the first-year Western Baseball League.

Larry Hausner, public relations director for the Suns, said it's expected Campanis will be released from Desert Hospital on Saturday.

Campanis had his first stroke at home Tuesday night and his second at the Palm Springs ballpark on Wednesday, after which he was hospitalized. Hausner said all tests have been positive.

Campanis was fired by the Dodgers in April 1987 after making controversial racial remarks on ABC-TV's "Nightline."

Stars & Stripes slips ahead for win

SAN DIEGO — In desperate need of a win, Dennis Conner's Stars & Stripes passed Mighty Mary with less than one mile to go for a spectacular finish in their America's Cup semifinal race on Friday.

Stars & Stripes crossed the finish line eight seconds ahead, or less than two boat lengths' separation after 18.55 miles of sailing. The margin turned out to be moot, though, when Mighty Mary's mostly female crew was disqualified for failing to perform a 270-degree penalty turn for an infraction during the crucial sequence.

It was the second straight close race on the defender course, following Wednesday's 28-second win by Young America over Stars & Stripes.

'Interim' Trojan label will be back

LOS ANGELES — The "interim" label was removed Friday from Southern Cal coach Charlie Parker, who is eager to put his own imprint on the school's 89-year basketball history.

"This is my program now, and you'll see a whole new attitude starting from day one," the Trojans' 19th coach said during a news conference. "We're going to do it with a style of play that's going to be 40 minutes of hell. When teams walk away from playing against USC, they're going to know that they've been in a war."

Parker is aware that USC athletic director Mike Garrett had counted more high-profile candidates during a nationwide search, including Duke assistant Tommy Amaker, former UCLA and Los Angeles Lakers star Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Long Beach State coach Seth Greenberg.

Kenyans in line for cross-country sweep

DURHAM, England — Can anyone stop the gold medals and three of the four team titles at the World Cross Country Championships. On Saturday, they have more than a realistic chance to go one step farther for an unprecedented sweep of all eight golds.

"That's what we're planning to do," said the women's favorite, 18-year-old Rose Cheruyot. "We are going to try."

Olson helps U.S. set medal record

MAR DEL PLATA, Argentina (AP) — Brian Olson had no idea he was setting the record for Pan Am Games medals when he gave the United States a bronze in judo Friday night.

Olson's bronze was the 370th medal for the U.S. team, one more than the Americans won in 1987 at Indianapolis.

"I'm astounded," said Olson, 22, of Colorado Springs, Colo., a resident of the U.S. Olympic Committee's Resident Training Center. "I was probably the last one to think that I would break it. That's the last thing I expected to happen by taking a medal."

"Still, it feels good that the United States is breaking records and winning medals in every sport. This shows that every sport is improving."

In 60 minutes before Olson won his medal at 65 kilograms, Colleen McDonald (Covina, Calif.) took a bronze in the 61 kilo class. That tied the record. The Americans already set a record for silver medals, but were not likely to reach the 168 golds won in 1987.

Other results Friday

JUDO — Dario Garcia, Argentina, beat Jason Morrison (Scotia, N.Y.) to win the 78 kilogram gold medal. At 86 kilos, it was Nicolas Gill, Canada, defeating Carlos Matt, Brazil. When Brian Olson (Colorado Springs, Colo.) won the bronze, it gave the United States a Pan Am record 370 medals.

The women's 61 kilo winner was Ileana Beltran of Cuba over Michelle Bueckingham, Canada. The bronze was won by Colleen McDonald (Covina, Calif.).

At 66 kilos, Odalis Revé, Cuba, defeated Liliko Ogasawara (Montvale, N.J.) for the gold.

BASEBALL — Luis Miranda

pitched a two-hitter as Nicaragua took a 1-0 victory over Argentina, clinching the silver medal. Puerto Rico defeated Panama 6-4 and got the bronze. Champion Cuba finished the tournament undefeated with a 7-0 victory over Mexico.

SOFTBALL — Michele Granger (Anchorage, Alaska), the top U.S. pitcher for nearly a decade, pitched a no-hitter as the U.S. women extended their international winning streak to 104 with a 5-0 decision over Cuba.

Puerto Rico won the first game of the women's medals round series, defeating Canada 2-0. Ivelisse Echevarria threw a two-hitter.

Cuba's men took the Dominican Republic 5-1.

WATER POLO — The United States moved into the water polo final with a 12-2 victory of Canada. Rick McNair (LaJette, Calif.) had a hat trick for the Americans.

Mediator strikes out

NEW YORK (AP) — Mediator W.J. Utery failed Friday in an attempt to put together a baseball bargaining session this weekend.

Utery, who on Wednesday night said he hoped to announce a resumption of talks within 24 hours, was publicly silent for the second straight day.

Utery heard Donald Fehr awaited a telephone call from acting commissioner Bud Selig, but hadn't received one as of early Friday evening.

"Nothing's new. Haven't heard a thing," Fehr said.

"Don and I are going to have some conversations, if not tonight, certainly tomorrow," Selig said.

Barkley shines but Rockets win

PHOENIX (AP) — Charles Barkley had a career-high 26 rebounds plus 34 points for Phoenix, but the Houston Rockets overcame the Suns 99-87 Friday night.

Pro basketball

The Rockets, 3-1 against Phoenix this season, won despite scoring only 87 points. Sam Cassell made a foul shot with 36 seconds left for a 98-97 lead, and Hakeem Olajuwon added a foul shot with 11 seconds remaining for his 25th point. After a timeout, Danny Ainge, Elton Perry and Barkley of the Suns missed shots before time ran out.

Kevin Johnson had 27 points and 10 assists for the Suns. Kenny Smith scored 26 for Houston.

The Rockets made 13 of 32 3-point attempts in ending a two-game losing skid.

Purs 111, Timberwolves 97
MINNEAPOLIS — David Robinson scored 29 points and sparked a third-quarter rally that blew the game open Friday night at the San Antonio Spurs' arena in the Minnesota Timberwolves 111-97.

Robinson scored eight points in a 21-8 run that began the third quarter, opening up an 80-58 lead for the Spurs, who won six straight.

Robinson added 13 rebounds, and Avery Johnson had 18 points and 12 assists as the Spurs ran their record to 25-4 since Jan. 24.

Pacers 103, Kings 96
INDIANAPOLIS — Rick Smits scored 21 points and Reggie Miller hit four free throws with 7.5 seconds remaining as the Pacers defeated the Sacramento Kings 103-96 Friday night.

It was Indiana's fifth consecutive home win and seventh straight victory over the Kings. Mitch Richmond had 30 points for Sacramento, which is winless in Indiana since Nov. 20, 1986.

Chicago's Michael Jordan tries to block a pass by Orlando's Shaquille O'Neal Friday in Chicago.

Shaq, Magic spoil Jordan homecoming

CHICAGO (AP) — Their names are everywhere. Their products, too.

Shaq and Michael went different shoes to leap over opponents, slurp down different drinks to curb their thirsts, use different games to lead their teams.

Their first meeting in two years went to Shaquille O'Neal. Rather, it went to him and his Orlando Magic teammates, who upstaged Michael Jordan's Chicago homecoming by beating the Bulls 106-99 Friday night.

"All the attention is focused on him, especially in Chicago," said O'Neal, who had 24 points and 16 rebounds. "I can remember a few years ago when I was in high school with my money, no car, no clothes and watching him on TV, and now I'm on the same court. I'm just happy to be here. I'm glad Michael is back."

While Jordan was gone, Shaq became the marquee player in the NBA, the player everyone wanted to see, with his basket-quaking dunks and ferocious roars after stuffing the ball. He was muscle and power, and he could, like Jordan, smile and laugh.

Way through the fourth period and took its first lead of the game on a layup by Richmond with 5:45 left.

CLEVELAND — Bobby Phillips' free throw with 16 seconds remaining Friday night gave the Cleveland Cavaliers a 75-74 victory over the Atlanta Hawks.

Tyone Hill, who had 24 points and 13 rebounds, made four consecutive free throws to give Cleveland a 73-69 lead with 57.6 seconds remaining.

Uy 74-71. Cleveland turned the ball over on a 5-second call. Tyrone Corbin promptly hit a 3-point shot for Atlanta to tie it 74-74 with 33.6 seconds to play.

Phillips was fouled by Mookie Blylock and made one of two free throws for the winning margin.

Injury doesn't cool Street's inner fire

PARK CITY, Utah (AP) — World Cup downhill champion Picabo Street doesn't fret that a muscle tear in her lower back is keeping her out of the U.S. Alpine Championships.

This is not a World Cup event; after all, or the Olympics — Street's venues of choice.

Indeed, Street's goals have risen remarkably since she won an Olympic silver medal in 1994 and this year became the first American woman to walk off with a World Cup downhill title.

"This year I became one of the all-time greats," she said in a matter-of-fact assessment of her World Cup season. "I've reached the ultimate top again and must find new direction."

Street's 1994-95 season started off badly when she crashed in her first race at Vail, Colo. But she made an immediate comeback by winning at Lake Louise, Alberta — the first World Cup downhill victory of her career.

During the rest of the season, the 23-year-old from Sun Valley placed first in six World Cup downhill races, five of them in a row. Street was injured in a spill last week in Bormio, Italy, at the last World Cup Super G of the season.

She should be back training by May.

"This is just a minor setback," she said Friday. "It's just a discomfort for a couple of weeks, but it won't do anything to my career."

That career was at its nadir in 1990 when she was kicked off the U.S. Ski Team.

"I was given the decision whether to become a world-class skier or just an average joe," she said. "And I chose to be an athlete."

She won the NorAm overall title that season and the next. In the 1993 national championships, Street won the Super G and was third in the downhill. The following year, she was first in the downhill and second in the Super G.

Fulltime on the World Cup circuit since 1993, Street is only slightly chagrined about missing the U.S. Alpine Championships, which run through Monday. The men's and women's Super G was canceled Friday after a storm dropped up to 3 feet of snow at Snowbasin. The remaining events are at Park City, home of the U.S. Ski Team.

"But at the same time, I like to see the ones who've struggled have good results finally at the end of the season," Street said. "It's interesting to watch from an outsider's point of view."

Street has had other injuries, but none has stopped her rise to skiing prominence. A knee injury during a 1989 World Cup race slowed her down, but she still competed in her second World Junior championships in 1990.

She took the silver medal in the downhill in the 1994 Winter Olympics.

"My ultimate dream now that I've won a medal is to shoot for the overall title, which consists of all four disciplines," she said. "That's my goal for the next two years."

If all goes according to plan, she hopes to be a medal contender in all four alpine events at the 1998 Winter Games in Nagano, Japan.

And beyond? "There's a lot of different doors which may open and I just don't know right now which one I'll pick," she said.

Her list of possibilities includes making music, teaching, entertaining on television or behind the camera, sports commenting, but NOT higher education.

"School is not for me," she said.

Here's a twist: Agassi cheers on Sampras

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — The best rivalry in tennis took a twist Friday when Andre Agassi led cheers for Pete Sampras.

Both won in three sets and advanced to Sunday's final in the Lipton Championships, their third meeting this year.

Agassi earned his victory first, playing a flawless third-set tiebreaker to beat Swede Magnus Larsson 7-5, 4-6, 7-6 (7-1).

Then, during an interview over the public address system, Agassi encouraged the spectators to stay and support Sampras, leading them in a chant of "Petee! Petee! Petee!"

"You need to cheer for Pete tonight for two reasons," Agassi told the crowd. "He's my Davis Cup teammate, and I want a piece of him in the final."

Agassi got his wish a few hours later, when Sampras beat another Swede, unseeded Jonas Bjorkman, 4-6, 6-0, 6-1.

Sampras, seeking his third consecutive Lipton title, beat Agassi in last year's final. Both of their meetings this year were in finals, with Agassi winning the Australian Open and Sampras at Indian Wells. "Hopefully Andre and I can bring tennis to a new level and get it more exciting for the fans and for little kids," Sampras said. "We really bring out the best in each other. Time will tell if we can get the rivalry going like a Borg-McEnroe, but I'm looking forward to it, and I'm sure he is. It's like two heavyweights going at it."

Regardless of Sunday's result, Sampras will remain ranked No. 1 for the 81st consecutive week and 100th overall. Agassi is ranked second.

No. 2 Steffi Graf, seeking her fourth Lipton title, will face No. 9 Kimiko Date of Japan in the women's final Saturday. Date, who reached the final despite a strained rotator cuff, has won only one set in four previous matches against Graf.

The Bjorkman-Sampras pairing shaped up as a mismatch, but the Swede started aggressively and converted the only break point to take the first set.

"I plan and simple got outplayed the first set," Sampras said. "He was really playing well. I raised my level a couple of notches in the second set."

Sampras won 10 consecutive games and served better as the match progressed, hitting six aces in the third set. When Bjorkman finally held serve at 4-0, he pumped his fist in mock celebration.

"When it goes wrong against Pete, you start thinking a lot," he said. "Then it's not so easy to play."

Agassi blamed windy weather and questionable rulings for his close call against the 6-foot-3 Larson, who is ranked 16th.

"I would have to say that is absolutely one of the worst officiating matches," Agassi said. "It just seemed like the linesmen were missing calls all over the place."

A swirling wind, Agassi said, made it difficult to gauge shots. "Wind is an incredible equalizer," he said. "It takes two people, and one might be clearly better, and it makes it very unpredictable. I felt that's what happened today."

Larsson, who beat Agassi in December in the Grand Slam Cup, lodged no complaints about the linesmen or weather.

"It was a bit gusty," he said, "but I can't blame the wind."

Agassi saved his best tennis for the tiebreaker.

stinging service returns and keeping Larsson off-balance. Larsson, who lost the final seven points, made four unforced errors and double-faulted 1-3.

"Great returns," Larsson said. "I didn't feel tight at all. He just returned the ball well."

Agassi had no break-point chances in the final two sets. Larsson mixed the pace of his serves and groundstrokes and became the first player to win a set against Agassi in the tournament.

Agassi, serving and trailing 5-6 in the third set, was at duce and within two points of losing the match. But Agassi served an ace, then hit a spectacular passing shot — a running, cross-court forehand — to win the game and force the tiebreaker.

Lewis fundraiser tops $200,000

BOSTON — A two-day fundraising effort for the Reggie Lewis Foundation will bring in more than $200,000, according to preliminary results announced Friday by the Boston Celtics.

The effort included a telethon Tuesday night and continued through Wednesday. Lewis' uniform number 35 was retired Wednesday night at halftime of the game between the Boston Celtics and Chicago Bulls.

Lewis died at the age of 27 shortly after collapsing on July 27, 1993 while shooting baskets. Recent newspaper reports have quoted allegations that he used cocaine. Family and friends have denied it.

Ex-Dodger top official suffers stroke

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — Former Los Angeles Dodgers general manager Al Campanis remained hospitalized Friday after having two minor strokes earlier this week, a spokesman for the Palm Springs Suns said.

Campanis, 78, is the general manager of the Suns, a member of the first-year Western Baseball League.

Larry Hausner, public relations director for the Suns, said it's expected Campanis will be released from Desert Hospital on Saturday.

Campanis had his first stroke at home Tuesday night and his second at the Palm Springs ballpark on Wednesday, after which he was hospitalized. Hausner said all tests have been positive.

Campanis was fired by the Dodgers in April 1987 after making controversial racial remarks on ABC-TV's "Nightline."

Stars & Stripes slips ahead with win

SAN DIEGO — In desperate need of a win, Dennis Conner's Stars & Stripes passed Mighty Mary with less than one mile to go for a spectacular finish in their America's Cup semifinal race on Friday.

Stars & Stripes crossed the finish line eight seconds ahead, or less than two boat lengths' separation after 18.55 miles of sailing. The margin turned out to be moot, though, when Mighty Mary's mostly female crew was disqualified for failing to perform a 270-degree penalty turn for an infraction during the crucial sequence.

It was the second straight close race on the defender course, following Wednesday's 28-second win by Young America over Stars & Stripes.

'Interim' Trojan coach will be back

LOS ANGELES — The "interim" label was removed Friday from Southern Cal coach Charlie Parker, who is eager to put his own imprimatur on the school's 89-year basketball history.

"This is my program, and you'll see a whole new level starting from now," Parker said. "I'm going to do it with a style of play that's going to be 40 minutes of hell. When teams walk away from playing against USC, they're going to know that they've been in a war."

Parker is aware that USC athletic director Mike Garrett had counted more high-profile candidates during a nationwide search, including Duke assistant Tommy Amaker, former UCLA and Los Angeles Lakers star Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Long Beach State coach Seth Greenberg.

Kenyans in line for cross-country sweep

DURHAM, England — Can anyone stop the Kenyans? Last year, Kenyans won all four individual gold medals and three of the four team titles at the World Cross Country Championships. On Saturday, they're more than a realistic chance to go one step farther for an unprecedented sweep of all eight golds.

"In 30 minutes we're planning to do," said the women's favorite, 18-year-old Rose Cheruiyot. "We are going to try."

Pavin, Sauers battle winds, hard TPC greens

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — Gene Sauers, who has won only twice in a dozen years on the tour, and Corey Pavin shared the halfway lead after another wild, windy day in The Players Championship.

Sauers stumbled home Friday with a double bogey 6 on No. 18 and shot an even-par 139, while Pavin followed his first-round 66 with a scrambling, gutsy 73.

They were a single stroke better than Bernhard Langer, Davis Love and Steve Stricker and two ahead of Hale Irwin and D.A. Weibring.

Payne Stewart and Lennie Clements were at 142.

Sauers, whose claim to fame was finishing second in the 1992 PGA after taking a two-stroke lead into the final round, was certainly a surprise co-leader in a field that includes the top 36 players in the world and 71 of the top 100. "I did everything hard except for the last hole. It started left and just kept going left," he said about the tee shot that found the water.

Pavin, meanwhile, was nowhere near as sharp as he was Thursday but battled the wind and hard greens to a standstill.

"It was a round that could have gotten away from me, but I didn't let it," Pavin said of his three-bogey, two-birdie effort. "I was looking for a slightly gentler wind chased the players around the TPC than in Thursday's first round, yet it was still steady and still sneaking out of the palms and pines to confuse club selection and further firm up the already fast greens." "The greens are hard and hard to hit to," Pavin said.

"The greens are so firm it's hard to find your ballmark."

The difficult scoring conditions bunched up the leaderboard with no golfer able to break from the pack. Saturday's third round will start with 30 golfers separated by only five strokes.

The round of the day was by Phil

Mickelson, who followed his first-round 78 with a 66 that included a hole-in-one on No. 13.

He's at even-par 144 with nine other golfers.

One person well separated from the pack was Nick Faldo, the hottest player in the world coming into the tournament. He followed his opening-round 80 with a 73 and his 153 missed the cut. "I only hit two shots off in the 36 holes," Faldo said. He didn't explain how he accumulated the other 151 strokes.

Among the 11 players at 1-under-par 143 were Steve Ballesteros, Peter Jacobsen, Tom Watson, Ian Woosnam and Lee Janzen.

Greg Norman, the runaway win-

Green hits plenty of 'em to grab lead

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Tammie Green, who came close to winning a couple of the LPGA's majors championships in 1994, shot a 2-under-par 70 Friday to take the second-round lead in the Nabisco Dinah Shore.

Green, who finished third in the tournament a year ago, moved to 3-under-par midway through the first of the women's majors.

Green's 141 total through 36 holes at Mission Hills Country Club gave her a two-shot lead over Kelly Robbins and Lauri Merten. Robbins moved into contention with a second-round 67 and Merten had a 69.

Also within striking distance of the lead were Laura Davies and Nancy Lopez. Davies, who won last week's tournament at Phoenix, shot a 69 that left her three shots off the lead, and Lopez had a 71 that put her in a group four shots behind Green.

Green and the par-5 No. 9 when he hit traps with his second and third shots. "I hit the ball really well and only missed one green before the last two holes," said Love, whose seven birdies included a 15-footer and two 20-footers.

The wind added a new twist Friday, changing directions. "It was a completely different course today," Langer said. "The wind was a little bit less but it was out of a totally different direction. No. 17 was playing left to right yesterday; today, it is playing right to left."

Love, who played the front nine first, got to 6-under for the tournament and 7-under for the day but finished bogey-bogey and shot 67. He bogeyed No. 8 when he missed the Puerto Rico won the first game of the women's medals round series, defeating Canada 2-0. Ivelisse Echevarria threw a two-hitter.

WATER POLO — The United States moved into the water polo finals with a 12-3 rout of Canada. Rick McNair (Lafayette, Calif.) had a hat trick for the Americans.

Olson helps U.S. set medal record

MAR DEL PLATA, Argentina (AP) — Brian Olson had no idea he was setting the record for Pan Am Games medals when he gave the United States a bronze in judo Friday night.

Olson's bronze was the 370th medal for the U.S. team, one more than the Americans won in 1987 at Indianapolis.

"I'm astounded," said Olson, 22, of Colorado Springs, Colo., and a resident of the U.S. Olympic Committee's training center in Colorado. "I probably the last one to think that I would break it. That's the last thing I expected to happen by taking a medal."

"Still, it feels good that the United States is breaking records and winning medals in every sport. That shows that every sport is improving."

"Ten minutes before Olson won his medal at 86 kilograms, Colleen McDonald (Covina, Calif.) took a bronze in the 61 kilo class. That tied the record. The Americans already set a record for silver medals, but were not likely to reach the 168 golds won in 1987.

Other results Friday

JUDO — Dario Garcia, Argentina, beat Jason Morris (Scotia, N.Y.) to win the 78 kilogram gold medal. At 86 kilos, it was Nicolas Gill, Canada, defeating Carlos Mat, Brazil. When Brian Olson (Colorado Springs, Colo.) won the bronze, it gave the United States a Pan Am record 370 medals.

The women's 61 kilo winner was Ileana Beltran of Cuba over Michelle Buckingham, Canada. The bronze was won by Colleen McDonald (Covina, Calif.).

At 66 kilos, Odalis Revé, Cuba, defeating Lilito Ogasavara (Montevideo, N.J.) for the gold.

For fund investors, fear of heights not always warranted

NEW YORK (AP) — Nothing scares people away from investing in stock mutual funds quite like the fear of putting up their money as the market reaches a top.

To buy at the high and then to watch your investment's value suddenly shrivel can be hard on the psyche as it is on the pocketbook. People who have taken the ride say it induces a full range of emotions from anger to disgust.

But the fear of this misadventure may give it more weight than it is due. So, at least, suggests a recent report by the advisory service Mutual Fund Forecaster in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., which looks at fund investments made just before the Crash of 1929.

"In retrospect," writes editor Norman Fosback, "it may seem as though Aug. 25, 1927, the day the Dow Jones industrial average peaked at an all-time high of 272, was an extremely inopportune time to buy mutual funds."

"Two months later, the market was nearly a thousand points lower, and many respected commentators were preaching the end of the bull market."

OF MUTUAL INTEREST

"In fact," Fosback adds, "most investors who bought at that top and held through the crash and subsequent recovery have done very well."

From the August 1987 high through Feb. 24 of this year, Fosback reckons that Standard & Poor's 500-stock composite index produced a total return, including dividends as well as price appreciation, of 85 percent. The average fund was up 74 percent over the same span.

Some individual funds tracked by Fosback rolled up returns of 200 percent to 250 percent (although there were also a few others that found a way to lose money, including the Steadman American Industry Fund, down 72 percent, and the Steadman Investment Fund, down 51 percent).

If you preferred not to try to beat the market, an S&P 500 index fund would have given you a return very close to the results attained by the index itself.

So, in most cases, time healed the wounds inflicted by the '87 crash on newcomers to fund investing, as long as they didn't compound their timing problems by selling out at the bottom.

Of course, the funds' recovery occurred because the upward progress of the market resumed, with greater speed and strength than most observers thought possible.

The Dow Jones industrial average climbed back past 2,722 just two years after its 1927 peak, and has since gone on to surpass 4,000.

If you buy today at what turns out to be a new top of the market cycle, much more patience could be required before the next move up.

There isn't and cannot be any assurance that the next correction will occur at all, or that its beneficial effects will extend to as many funds as they did this time.

Some of the "go-go" funds that attracted many investors in the 1960s never regained their former glory after the killer bear markets of 1969-70 and 1973-74.

It remains to be seen whether and when the current generation of funds concentrating on Latin American stock markets will bounce back from their losses of the past three months or so, which have been as severe as 25 percent to 50 percent.

Both the present-day Latin America funds and the go-go funds of yore are relatively specialized — not as diversified as the typical broad-based stock fund.

If you instead pick a well diversified growth-and-income fund, for instance, recovery from a down period is a likely bet if you believe that long-term economic growth will continue.

No matter when you buy, investing in any stock fund requires the willingness to face the unknown. But at the very least, Fosback's figures show that a single error in timing at the outset need not be fatal to your long-term hopes.

GARDEN ARBOR
A little lattice can go a long way toward making your garden a unique showplace. This pretty little arch can add immeasurably to its appearance - especially when the greenery gets growing. Our step-by-step instruction sheet even includes a traceable arch section. Paint the arch the color of your choice, or leave it natural and let the wood weather with age.

Plenty. THE NEW 1995 JETTA

Included in our price: 2 year/24,000 mile no-charge scheduled maintenance, 2 year/24,000 mile bumper-to-bumper limited warranty, 2 year/24-hour roadside assistance, air conditioning, dual airbags, cruise control, power central locking, anti-theft alarm system, AM/FM stereo cassette. In car talk that's called "loaded."

There's something else that no other car manufacturer gives you, not even Rolls-Royce. A 10-year/100,000-mile limited powertrain warranty. In plain talk that's called, "putting your money where your mouth is."

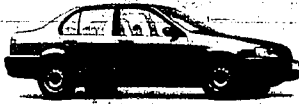

And whether you lease or buy a Jetta, it's like joining a club. It's not a very exclusive club because of the number of members. You see, the Jetta is the best-selling European nameplate in America.

But there are things that are more important when you join a club than exclusivity. Things like intelligent fellow members, low annual dues and that wonderful feeling of belonging.

*1995 first month's payment, $0 down payment, $200 refundable security deposit and $450 acquisition fee due at inception. Monthly payments total $1,542.40. Lease rate based on a 1995 Jetta GL with 5-speed manual transmission, air conditioning, AM/FM stereo cassette. 48-month closed-end lease offered to qualified customers by VW Credit, Inc. through participating dealers through 3/31/95. Fleet and dealer discount of $600 which could affect final negotiated transaction. Other options, dealer charges, taxes, reg. extra. Lessee responsible for insur. At lease end, lessee required to pay for 10.10/mile over 48,000 miles, for damage and excessive wear, and $250 fee if not purchased. Purchase option at lease end for $7,872. Dealer sets actual prices. Offered by United States Auto Club Motor Division, Inc.
