Militia leader zeroes in on 'socialist' programs

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Americans must wean themselves of "socialist" government programs, the leader of the United States Militia Association told about 40 people Tuesday evening.

With CNN, Associated Press and local news media looking on, Samuel Sherwood offered to help police quell riots and natural disasters.

But Twin Falls County Sheriff Wayne Tousey says he doesn't need the help.

Earlier Tuesday Tousey said his force is large enough to "quell anything short of an out-and-out riot" and anyone not trained to his standards is a county liability.

"Relying on all kinds of weapons, standards and mind-sets would be committing suicide," Tousey said.

In case of a larger emergency, 332 Idaho National Guard soldiers are assigned to help law enforcement in the Magic Valley, according to Major Jim Ball of the Idaho National Guard.

Tousey said his department is about 90 strong — including up to 20 deputies, 20 detention officers, 30 reserves and nine administrators. He also has many search and rescue volunteers trained by his department.

Tousey gets help from other local law enforcement in the area, he added.

Bill Peters, a local militia leader, claims his militia group has more Twin Falls-area members than Tousey has deputies and reserves.

Tuesday, Sherwood, leader of the United States Militia Association, said the Twin Falls area has between 50 and 100 militia members.

Later Tuesday, Sherwood told a crowd of 40 people at the Pioneer Club's meeting room that they should be prepared for all sorts of disasters, not just "American against American."

Civil war will rage in the country against an increasingly tyrannical government, he predicts. But when asked when the militia group should fight back in defense, he said "it is up to each individual to decide."

Sherwood advocates peaceful, legal means to obtain militia objectives, he said. He also touched on a number of other topics, including:

Bill Trowbridge of Twin Falls makes a comment during a speech by Idaho Militia leader Samuel Sherwood, right, Tuesday evening at the Pioneer Club in Twin Falls.

The national deficit is out of control.

The country should get out of the United Nations.

A biblical prediction holds that someday a "wormwood star" will hit the earth and kill one-third of everything.

Idaho politicians will side with him when they realize how powerful his group will become, Sherwood said.

"They'll become good staunch constitutionalists the moment we have got the numbers."

U.S. Haiti mission in dispute

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — When Army Capt. Lawrence Rockwood left his base in Haiti to inspect a notorious Port-au-Prince prison, knowingly flouting authority, he says he believed he was carrying out President Clinton's directive to U.S. forces.

The Army, however, had a different interpretation and is about to court-martial Rockwood for the human rights work he tried to do.

Rockwood, a counterintelligence officer, is accused of disobeying orders and of dereliction of duty because he left his base last Sept. 30 without authorization to inspect the national penitentiary.

There he feared inmates were being tortured, even executed.

For the 36-year-old son of Air Force veterans, it was a move out of frustration after he was unable to interest his superiors in intelligence data indicating prison conditions were horrendous.

"We knew there were between 400 and 500 people there. I had information that people were being tortured and executed and bodies were being taken to the dump," Rockwood said in an interview with The Associated Press.

He wanted to conduct an assessment at the national penitentiary and find other prisons in line with the mandate he had heard Clinton outline in a Sept. 15 speech to the nation.

Clinton cited ending brutal human rights abuses as one of the top priorities in authorizing U.S. military intervention in Haiti.

"What bothered me was I got a shrap of the shoulder. We're not interested in this. This is not a priority," Rockwood said, recounting his efforts to get permission to conduct inspections from the Joint Operations Center for the 10th Mountain Division, the force that spearheaded the U.S. effort in Haiti last fall.

Potential bombing witnesses may be let go

The Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY — FBI agents hunting the elusive "John Doe 2" milled a Missouri motel Tuesday, capturing two men who traveled a path of cheap motels from Arizona to Oklahoma that paralleled the movements of bombing suspect Timothy McVeigh.

Gary Alan Land and Robert Jacks — objects of an FBI all-points bulletin — were arrested at daybreak in Carthage, Mo., as material witnesses in the Oklahoma City bombing.

A driver's license photo of Land, a 35-year-old drifter with a record of petty crimes, bore a passing resemblance to the heavyset, square-jawed figure in the FBI sketch of John Doe 2, wanted in the nation's worst domestic terrorist attack.

The man arrested had a mustache, a feature not pictured in the drawing. However, an apartment manager who saw Land on April 3 said he was almost-shaven then.

Asked if Land could be the muscular, tattooed John Doe 2, FBI spokesman Dan Vogel said: "We don't know that. We have not determined whether he is or not."

Later in the day, a law enforcement source in Washington, speaking on condition of anonymity, said federal investigators might release Land and Jacks because they were having trouble finding grounds to hold them.

Meanwhile, the death toll from the April 19 explosion reached 141, including 15 children. About 30 people were missing.

In other developments:

Federal agents escort Gary Alan Land, center, from the Carthage, Mo., jail on his way to an appearance in federal court in Springfield, Mo., Tuesday.

$142 million to pay to investigate the bombing, keep federal agencies in Oklahoma City operating and bolster anti-terrorism efforts. The request also includes money to tear down the federal building and establish replacement offices for hundreds of displaced workers.

FBI agents descended on the Kingdom and other documents used by some GOP senators to challenge his credibility. At times, he grew animated in explaining his medical decisions and defending his positions.

He gestured with his hands, and at times his voice rose an octave. As Sen. Barbara A. Mikulski, D-Md., observed, this should have been a pinnacle of achievement for someone three generations removed from slavery. "Your people came to this country in chains," she said, "and you've dedicated your life to breaking those chains."

Nominee stresses credentials to be surgeon general

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Henry W. Foster Jr. tried to convince a Senate panel Tuesday that he is a man of integrity who learned the values of hard work and education from his family in rural Arkansas and has the qualifications and vision to be surgeon general.

But Republicans on the panel raised questions about the effectiveness of a teenage-pregnancy prevention program he started, about whether he knew of a bovine vesicular syphilis experiment on black men before it became public in 1972, about his performing hysterectomies to sterilize mentally retarded women and about his candor in revealing his abortion record.

At a packed confirmation hearing before the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, the 61-year-old obstetrician-gynecologist from Nashville said he had come to "set the record straight" about "who I am and what I stand for."

In generally calm, measured tones, Foster disputed published accounts and other documents used by some GOP senators to challenge his credibility. At times, he grew animated in explaining his medical decisions and defending his positions.

He gestured with his hands, and at times his voice rose an octave. As Sen. Barbara A. Mikulski, D-Md., observed, this should have been a pinnacle of achievement for someone three generations removed from slavery. "Your people came to this country in chains," she said, "and you've dedicated your life to breaking those chains."

On a central issue that has dogged his nomination, Foster maintained that contradictory information he provided about how many abortions he had performed in his 38-year career was "an honest mistake" — the result of not reviewing his record and of misunderstanding what he was being asked in "the middle of a casual conversation."

"Hence," said Foster, "the issue of my nomination is not abortion nor my credibility. Rather, the issue is do my professional credentials qualify me to serve as surgeon general?"

Rockwood's supporters did not take kindly to his decision to break away from his compound alone and hitch a civilian ride to town. That violated a policy requiring military personnel to travel in pairs and in convoys of two or more military vehicles.

It was also "conduct unbecoming an officer," another of the charges for his court-martial, scheduled to start May 8.

Rockwood could have avoided marrying his 10-year military career with a court-martial by accepting an administrative discharge, in which a commanding officer determines guilt or innocence and punishment, said Col. James A. Campbell, chief of staff of the 10th Mountain Division at Fort Drum, N.Y.

But Rockwood rejected that course because he said he wanted to focus attention on what he considered the military's "terminal negligence and dereliction of duty," in failing to conduct prompt human rights assessments.

The Pentagon's inspector general is investigating Rockwood's allegations that Maj. Gen. David Mendel, commander of the 10th Mountain Division, and his staff failed to address alleged human rights violations.

Campbell would not discuss specifics of the case but said the military sees it as a matter of discipline. To the surprise, Rockwood had not been in a disciplinary problem in the past, Campbell said.

But Rockwood, a Buddhist, sees things differently, taking into account international principles of law to protect lives and human rights.

He recalled at the age of 8 or 9 visiting the Dachau concentration camp with his father, a veteran, and told him he had helped liberate another camp.

"He told me that the reason that these things are created is because of blind obedience and cynicism," Rockwood recalled.

Oklahoma bombing arrests

Several arrests have been made in connection with the bombing of the Alfred P. Murray Federal Building in Oklahoma City.

Arrest

Among those testifying were Ed and Linda Paulsen, owners of Paulsen's Military Supply in Antigo, Wis. The Paulsens were linked to the case when one of their crumpled business cards was found in the police car that took McVeigh to jail.

"We told them what we've been saying all along, that we have absolutely no association with the man," Paulsen told The Associated Press.

At a federal court hearing for McVeigh's buddy James Nichols, FBI Special Agent Randall Farmer testified that an informant heard Nichols bragging that "the technology existed for a super bomb that could blow up a federal building."

The conversation took place about six years ago, Farmer said. The testimony came at a hearing on a motion to dismiss charges against Nichols, who's being held in Alcatraz, Mich.

He's charged with conspiring with his brother, Terry Nichols, and McVeigh to make and detonate bombs on his Michigan farm. The Nichols brothers aren't charged in the federal building bombing and McVeigh isn't "charged" in the Michigan case.

Nichols was ordered held in federal custody until a preliminary hearing May 12.

Also charged in the Michigan bomb case is Nichols' brother, Terry, who is being held in Wichita, Kan., as a material witness in the Oklahoma City case. Terry Nichols' attorney said he would appeal an order transferring his client to Oklahoma City to appear before a grand jury.

McVeigh and the shadowy John Doe 2 are the only people named as suspects in the Oklahoma City bombing.

The FBI has described John Doe 2 as a possible co-suspect. Larry's neighbors in Mesa, Ariz., said he was often seen lifting weights outside his trailer.

Craig, militias rap promotion of bomb probe leader by FBI

the head of the Oklahoma City bombing investigation was promoting Tuesday to be deputy FBI director despite his recent career for poor management of a 1992 Idaho siege that left three dead.

Heavy promotion to the FBI's No. 2 position was announced less than a month after he received a written Justice Department reprimand for "management omissions" during the fatal standoff with white separatist Randy Weaver.

The decision by Attorney General Janet Reno to promote Potts was bitterly criticized by the head of a militia organization as confirming "the worst nightmares" of disaffected Americans that their government is above the law.

The Oklahoma bombing has focused widespread attention on private military groups whose leaders have been accused by critics of encouraging violence by using violent anti-government rhetoric. Two men-being held as material witnesses once tried to join a militia in Michigan.

Reno announced she had accepted FBI Director Louis Freeh's recommendation that Potts be made deputy director, a position he has held in an acting capacity since December.

"Mr. Potts has been directing the investigation of the Oklahoma City bombing and the results to date are a tribute to his ability to coordinate a complex nationwide multi-agency investigation," Reno told reporters. Potts has been directing the effort from FBI headquarters in Washington.

Reno called Potts "the very best the FBI has" and said that his promotion reflected a "long and distinguished career in law enforcement and the confidence the director has in him."

In a separate statement, Freeh said it is because of Potts' success such great skills that placed him in personal charge of the FBI's priority investigation" of the Oklahoma City bombing.

But Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, who has called for Senate hearings into the siege, said he was "very disappointed" by Reno's decision. "Her action was certainly not appropriate to the time and did not also fit with what I think was the prudent thing to do for the sake of the reputation" of the FBI, he said.

"I am not a militia member," said U.S. Militia Association in Blackfoot, and Gerry Spence, Weaver's lawyer, said Potts' promotion would only fan fears among Americans in the militia movement who believe the government is conspiring against them.

"If people feel those things, then she just confirmed their worst nightmares," said Sherwood. "This is a terribly immature and insensitive decision," said Sherwood, whose group lobbies for the creation of citizens' militias under the control of states.

Spence, who successfully defended Weaver against a charge of murdering a deputy marshal during the siege, said Reno had missed "a very good opportunity to restore people's confidence in the FBI."

The FBI has come under intense public criticism for its role in the siege, which began when authorities tried to arrest Weaver at his Ruby Ridge cabin in north Idaho for failure to appear in court on a federal weapons charge.

A deputy U.S. marshal and Weaver's 14-year-old son were fatally shot. Later, Weaver's unnamed wife, Vicki, was killed by an FBI sharpshooter and Weaver himself was wounded during the subsequent standoff.

Freeh concluded the shooting of Weaver's wife was accidental. Potts received the mildest punishment among several FBI officials who were disciplined for what the Justice Department sought to be widespread errors in the bureau's handling of the siege.

Deputy Attorney General Jamie Gorelick found that Potts "did not advise the FBI as though to ensure that his intent with regard to the rules of engagement was properly reflected in the final rules."

She criticized the FBI for exaggerating the nature of the threat posed by Weaver and for deploying sharpshooters before talking enough with the U.S. marshals who first attempted to arrest him.

Logan Canyon slide blocks traffic

LOGAN, Utah (AP) —

Transportation officials are trying to remove a 225-ton boulder that slid down the side of Logan Canyon and crushed onto the highway.

The 12-foot-tall rock remained in the eastbound lane of the canyon Tuesday afternoon after rolling down the canyonside just after midnight about a half-mile above Wood Camp.

"It narrowly missed Utah Department of Transportation highway worker Louis Hoppie, who had returned to the canyon after taking some travelers to Logan.

Governmental stupidity takes hit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government stupidity found no defenders Tuesday as lawmakers took a look at "Corrections Day," House Speaker Newt Gingrich's proposed cure for dumb bureaucratic behavior.

But Rep. Bill Clinger, R-Pa., pinpointed a major complication in Gingrich's blueprint as the proposal came under a legislative microscope for the first time at a House hearing. "Now we just have to figure out how to do it," he said.

There were plenty of questions about how "Corrections Day" would work and whether it would give unfair advantage to special interests. "I must admit that I am skeptical," said Rep. Anthony Deltson, D-Calif.

Gingrich, R-Ga., has been winning applause from audiences for months with his suggestion that Congress adopt a streamlined process to repeal government actions widely viewed as insane or destructive.

On Tuesday he told colleagues at a joint hearing of the House Rules and Government Reform committees that a monthly "Corrections Day" would "send a signal of change to the country" and "rebuild faith in elected officials."

Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., said he saw two pitfalls: Special interests might receive special access and "corrections" might be based on anecdotes. "We've noticed both problems so far this year," he said.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich gestures while testifying on Capitol Hill Tuesday before a reform committee on "Corrections Day," Gingrich's idea to wipe out examples of government stupidity in mere hours.

citing lobbyists with "unprecedented" access and anecdotal evidence that later turned out to be wrong.

Gingrich agreed anecdotes were no basis on which to legislate. Still, he told several, including the tale of treatment plant to stop raw sewage from being dumped in the Pacific. The city has applied for a waiver it is likely to get.

The complications of setting up the program have been apparent in the length of time it is taking. Gingrich initially promised 20 to 30 corrections a month starting in March; he's now saying four to five a month, starting as soon as possible.

Among the reassurances he made Tuesday to doubting Democrats: "Committees would hear expert testimony on the proposed corrections.

"He'd consider requiring a two-thirds majority to pass a correction, guaranteeing some Democrats would be on board. "This will not work if it's just a partisan game," he said.

In the Senate, "maybe we could get an agreement over there that there are things so common-sensical that they could actually just pass."

Proposed corrections would have to be judged by standards of "relative cost, relative dumbness" and "relative urgency," he said. The bottom line: "If it's silly to go home and defend it, why don't we quit doing it?"

Flashbacks traumatize veterans after federal building bombing

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Every night since the Oklahoma bombing, Vietnam veteran Jim Robinson has been going on what he calls "night patrol" in his pajamas.

He rises from bed in his sleep, rustles through the bushes in his back yard in a search for the enemy, hides behind his living room furniture and crawls into the car in his garage.

He wakes up in bed with grass stains, cuts and bruises, wondering where he has been.

"I puts you right back where you were 25 years ago. You-ary to do a reality check. It's real hard sometimes," he said at the Oklahoma City Veterans Center, where he volunteers.

Center. The bombing occurred the week before the 20th anniversary of the fall of Saigon.

"Some of them won't even turn on the TV or pick up a newspaper because it's just too threatening. It creates too much anxiety, too much despair," Keane said.

When Vietnam veteran Robert Kinney saw reports of the bomb blast on TV, memories of Vietnam came flooding back.

"It's like the past becomes the present. You can't discern the time," said Kinney, 44, who was at the local veterans center for counseling.

The other night, when his dog butted into the back door, he flashed back to Vietnam and thought his house was being hit by enemy fire.

"I was out the back door," he said.

Vietnam veteran Bert Moore of Edmond has had trouble sleeping — especially since he saw the picture of a firefighter cradling the limp, bloody body of a toddler in front of the federal building.

"I've had bad dreams, mostly of the things I've seen when I was in Vietnam. I had to shoot a little ol' boy. He was 4. He had a live grenade. I knew he was going to throw it at me. It was me or him," said Moore, 58, who was in Vietnam in 1970 and 1971 and now is a volunteer helping veterans get benefits.

When Robinson hears reports of the death toll rising at the federal building, he thinks of the body counts he kept in Vietnam when he recovered the corpses of American soldiers on the battlefield.

"It keeps me stirred up," Robinson said. "I'd love to put the uniform back on and get these guys."

For comfort, he sees his two grandchildren, ages 3 and 5, every day.

"I had to see the hope and innocence of their faces to know there is hope," he said. "It started bringing me back to reality. It reassures me that life is going on."

At the Veterans Center alone, counselors have met with 135 veterans since the bombing — one-third more than in 1994. And nearly every one was having flashbacks, nightmares and signs of "hypervigilance" — a feeling of being in constant danger.

Robinson, 46, served as an infantryman in Vietnam in 1966 and 1969 and was diagnosed with post traumatic stress disorder in 1984. He is on full disability because of it.

He had been coping pretty well with his anxieties before the bombing. He reduced his counseling sessions to once every two weeks, instead of every week, and was having fewer nightmares.

But on April 19, when the bomb ripped apart the federal building and snuffed his office five miles away, he suffered a major setback. He's been "getting counseling nearly every day."

When he felt the blast, he instinctively ran outside, as if his Army tent had taken a direct hit. He stood in the parking lot, shaking. His adrenaline was surging.

"My reaction was, 'Go to war — ambush patrol,'" he recalled.

For a week after the bombing, he was sure he was seeing bodies lining the highway as he drove to work.

Russian figure skater Yulia Kiriilova holds Bree, the troupe's 8-month-old mascot, Monday in Oklahoma City. Bree had been sleeping in an open suitcase that was blown shut by the bomb's blast. The cat's leg was cut by flying glass, and several troupe members were injured.

"I couldn't see the traffic. All I could see was dead bodies, torn up and mangled like they were in Vietnam, like they were downtown," Robinson said. "I had to keep saying, 'I'm in traffic. I'm on the freeway.'"

By the time he arrived at work, he would have an excruciating headache from trying to concentrate so hard.

Numerous other veterans from across the country have also been traumatized by the bombing, according to Terence M. Keane, director of National Center for Post Traumatic Stress Disorder at the Boston Veterans Administration Medical

Stephen Stills organizes benefit concert

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Stephen Stills will give a benefit concert for children who lost their parents in the Oklahoma bombing.

Stills promised some surprises and a new song from "best of the best" Nash during the show at the Oklahoma City Zoo Amphitheater.

"Graham has written a new song. It's called 'Half Their Angels.' I can't wait to hear it," Stills said.

Stills and Nash, formerly of Crosby, Stills and Nash, will play along with Michael Hedges and the Seventh Wave, an Oklahoma City band.

Study: Exercise can cut risk of falls among elderly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Exercises based on Tai Chi, a Chinese martial art described as slow-motion Kung Fu, can help the elderly reduce the risk of falling, a multi-million-dollar cause of injuries.

A study of 2,328 elderly people in a program of general exercise showed that falls can be reduced by about 13 percent, and that Tai Chi training was the most beneficial, reducing injuries by 25 percent, researchers reported Tuesday.

Results of the study are to be published Wednesday in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Michael A. Province of Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis, lead author of the study, said that falling is a significant health risk for people over the age of 60.

"For the elderly, falls are a big deal," said Province. Injuries from falls are "a big medical problem. They can even be a death sentence."

Suspect wrote legislator

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oklahoma bombing suspect Timothy McVeigh wrote to Congress three years ago complaining that New York state law prohibited possession of "noxious substances" and "stun guns."

"I strongly believe in a God-given right to self-defense," McVeigh wrote in the Feb. 16, 1992, letter to Rep. John LaFalce, D-N.Y. "Should any other person or governing body be able to tell another person that he (or) she can't save their own life?"

Museum director leaves after bomb fury

WASHINGTON — The director of the Smithsonian Institution's Air and Space Museum resigned Tuesday, a casualty of protests by World War II veterans over the way the museum had planned to depict the atomic bombing of Japan 50 years ago.

"I believe that nothing less than my stepping down from the directorship will satisfy the museum's critics, and allow the museum to move forward with important new projects," said Martin Harwit, noting that the controversy over the Enola Gay exhibit had not ended with its cancellation.

The Enola Gay was the B-29 that dropped the atom bomb over Hiroshima on Aug. 6, 1945. Following a second atomic attack, over Nagasaki, Japan surrendered on Aug. 15, ending the war.

Harwit's critics said the exhibit, as planned, would have depicted the United States as the aggressor and Japan as the victim of World War II.

Guantanamo refugees to come to U.S.

WASHINGTON — In an abrupt about face, the Clinton administration said Tuesday thousands of Cuban refugees held at Guantanamo Bay will migrate to the United States — something the White House once it had vowed never to happen.

Announcing an extraordinary agreement with Cuba, Attorney General Janet Reno also vowed to ship back to Havana any Cubans who try to reach the United States by boats and rafts.

"The only way of coming to the United States is applying in Cuba," she told reporters at the White House.

House supports visit by Taiwan's leader

WASHINGTON — The House approved a resolution Tuesday urging the State Department to reverse its policy and allow a private visit by the president of Taiwan.

"Refusing to grant a visitor's visa to the president of a thriving democracy does not make sense," said Rep. Doug Bereuter, R-Nebr., chairman of the House International Relations Subcommittee on Asia. "It is not a common sense foreign policy."

President Lee (Cag-buj) has been invited by his alma mater, Cornell University, to return to the Ithaca, N.Y., campus for a ceremony in his honor, but the State Department denied him a visa last June.

Departments boost math, science education

WASHINGTON — Two federal agencies are joining forces to encourage students to choose careers in math, science and technology.

Education Secretary Richard Riley and Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary signed an agreement Monday to share use of their research facilities in meeting an objective of the Goals 2000 education reform program.

Both Cabinet members said they want to help the United States achieve the goal of being first in the world in math and science education, one of the goals of the education reform program enacted last year.

Youths charged with disrupting funeral

LINCOLN, Neb. — Three boys accused of disrupting a Jewish funeral with mocking gestures and a shout of "Heil Hitler" were charged with trespassing and disturbing the peace.

Witnesses told police that the boys climbed a fence around a Jewish cemetery during a service April 17. As 50 to 60 mourners watched, the boys began spitting and making exaggerated gestures of weeping.

The boys walked away when a mortuary employee approached, witnesses said, but made a Nazi salute and shouted "Heil Hitler" before leaving.

State appeals court throws out conviction

RALPH, N.C. — The state Court of Appeals Tuesday ordered new trials for two people convicted in the Little Rascals day care sex abuse case.

The attorney general said he would take the case to the state Supreme Court.

In a unanimous opinion, the state's second-highest court ruled that testimony by the parents of alleged victims in Robert Kelly Jr.'s trial was inadmissible and also threw out the conviction of a second defendant, Kathryn Dawn Wilson.

Kelly, co-owner of the Little Rascals center, was convicted in April 1992 on 99 counts of sexually abusing 12 children there. He was sentenced to 12 consecutive life terms. He is currently in Central Prison at Raleigh.

Amtrak train derails after hitting truck

ALLENDALE, S.C. — An Amtrak train struck a tractor trailer that was stuck on a rural crossing and derailed Tuesday morning.

About 55 people were taken to hospitals, but none was seriously injured.

The Silver Star, headed from New York to Florida, slammed into the truck near Sycamore, about 70 miles south of Columbia.

The truck's empty trailer had sagged on the raised tracks, said Highway Patrol Lance Cpl. Melonie Anderson. Driver Leroy Ellis of Fairfax, got out and tried to flag down the train, but it was unable to stop in time, Anderson said.

The train was traveling at 79 mph, Amtrak spokeswoman Debbie Hare said. Anderson said that is within the speed limit.

Texas makes jalapeno state pepper

AUSTIN, Texas — Another burning issue is on its way to the governor. A resolution declaring the official pepper of Texas passed the Senate on a voice vote Monday. It has already won House approval, and Gov. George W. Bush plans to sign it, according to Bush spokesman Ray Sullivan.

Texas leads the nation in production and consumption of the jalapeno, according to the resolution, which praises the pepper as a "culinary, economic and medical blessing" to the state.

Moscow to rethink Iran plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Russia has agreed to rethink its proposed sale to Iran of gas centrifuge equipment that U.S. officials say could be used in a nuclear weapons program, the State Department said Tuesday.

The review raises the possibility President Boris Yeltsin will announce cancellation of the deal when he meets in Moscow with President Clinton next week, spokesman Nicholas Burns said.

There was no indication, however, that Russia was also reconsidering the projected sale of two nuclear reactors as part of a $1 billion deal to help construct a nuclear power complex near the Persian Gulf.

Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev said last week the deal would not be canceled. He likened it to the U.S. agreement last October with North Korea to help provide nuclear reactors for civilian energy production.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher tried to convince Kozyrev otherwise in three meetings with him here last week, the last on the topic court Saturday.

Clinton Sunday called both deals "profoundly disturbing" and announced he would ban all American trade with Iran, ending purchases of Iranian oil by American firms and sale of $326 million in drilling equipment and other American goods to Tehran.

Christopher Monday urged other nations to take similar steps against an "outlaw state" he said spends hundreds of million of dollars a year on international terrorism.

"The immediate response was mixed," Burns said. Japan had postponed a $542 million loan and that several nations in the Middle East had backed the move.

On the other hand, Germany argued diplomacy would be more effective in discouraging Iran from building atomic weapons and the European Union, which includes Germany among its 15 members, decided against the embargo for now. The EU wants to maintain a "critical political dialogue" with Iran, EU spokesman Josep Coll i Carbo said in Brussels.

Prince Charles marks war's end

HAMBURG, Germany (AP) — To remember the dead and reconcile the living, Prince Charles and Winston Churchill's grandson came Tuesday to Hamburg, one of the cities most ravaged by British bombing during World War II. Labeled by hundreds of British bomber raids, Hamburg surrendered on May 3, 1945, rather than face more. It was the largest German city to end its war without a fight.

Prince Charles is welcomed by Bishop Maria Jepsen in Hamburg Tuesday.

"Hamburg was very much in the front line of the bombing. Then we occupied it and governed it," said British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd. "The theme today is very much commemoration and reconciliation."

Hurd accompanied Charles and Britain's minister for armed forces, Nicholas Soames, the grandson of Britain's wartime prime minister, at a memorial service in St. Michael's Lutheran Church. Charles returned the waves of 50 people outside the church.

Reflecting dark and cultural ties that go back to the Middle Ages, there is a saying that Hamburgers are simply Londoners who speak German.

"A friendly exaggeration," said Helmut Kalbitzer, 82, a former German resistance fighter. "Yet no one made Hamburg suffer like the British."

On the night of July 28, 1943, 42,000 residents died in a 43-minute civilians killed in the blitz. Charles' gesture is an unusual one, since official Britain has seldom shown remorse over the air war, its major weapon against Nazi Germany before the Allied landings on the continent in 1944.

Hamburg, a city of 1 million people, had lost 118,000 dead and 60,000 disabled by war's end. Nearly 300,000 homes were destroyed.

Within 10 years, the rubble had been cleared and the city rebuilt. A recent survey found that Hamburg is per capita the wealthiest city in Europe.

"A radical socialist who had lived on the run from the Nazis during the war, Kalbitzer was allowed to create a trade union the day the war ended. A week later, British authorities gave him the keys to the old labor union hall and instructed him to kick out the British engineering battalion bivouacked there.

"That was an amazing thing. It's hard for people to grasp that now," Kalbitzer said in an interview. "The British army moved out to let Germans move in. We all understood it as a sign of trust, for a democracy that didn't yet exist."

Germany will wait to extradite man accused of fraud

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — Singapore apparently will have to wait at least a few more months to get its hands on Nicholas Leeson, the former trader whose wrong bets are blamed for the collapse of Britain's Barings bank.

Leeson has been held in Germany since March 2, the day he arrived in Frankfurt from Singapore and was arrested at the airport.

A German prosecutor said Tuesday there was clearly enough evidence to justify extradition. Waving a binder containing 1,000 pages of Singapore documents, prosecutor Hans-Hermann Eckart said it will take months to translate them all into German, then work the case through the courts.

Leeson is fighting extradition, contending he does not trust Singapore's strict judicial system and fears the conditions of Singapore's jails. He would face seven years in prison if convicted of forgery with intent to commit fraud, just one of 12 charges Singapore is pressing.

Eckart said it's the only one so far that "has been... sufficiently proven." Still, it is enough under German law to extradite Leeson to Singapore.

The prosecutor said Singapore's filing of 11 additional charges of "forgery and cheating" will actually delay the process. Eckart said some of the new charges don't appear to be crimes in Germany yet all must be reviewed.

In the meantime, "Mr. Leeson is going to stay in Frankfurt Höchst jail," Eckart said. "He is very satisfied with the conditions he faces and with how he is treated. As far as I know he is in good health."

South Asian summit starts on sour note

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Old rivalries got in the way of efforts Tuesday by seven South Asian nations to build a regional trading bloc.

The South Asia Free Trade Area would encompass 1.2 billion people in India, Pakistan, Nepal, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, Bhutan and the Maldives.

Foreign ministers for those nations gave the proposed bloc impetus Monday when they agreed to begin work on a regional trade agreement. The first step would be to lower certain tariffs by Dec. 8.

But numerous regional disputes have plagued closer cooperation and they cropped up again in speeches at the start of a South Asian summit Tuesday.

President Farooq Leghari of Pakistan called for a regional accord on nuclear disarmament — a stand opposed by India, the only other nuclear-capable country in the region.

Leghari also appealed to South Asian nations to help resolve the India-Pakistan dispute over the Kashmir region. India has resisted outside involvement.

Opening the summit, Prime Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao of India avoided contentious issues and urged the seven countries to join the global trend of regional trade systems.

The trade agreement, which aims to increase South Asia's $3 billion in annual trade, must be ratified by the nations' parliaments before it can be implemented.

During the three-day summit, the leaders also are expected to discuss ways of reducing terrorism and poverty in South Asia.

Americans set free

MOSCOW (AP) — Three Americans detained on suspicion of spying near the Chinese border have been released, Russian officials said Tuesday.

Foreign Security Service officials in Vladivostok said the trio had been released by border guards, who took them into custody Sunday near Khasan on the Sea of Japan.

TAR-Tax news agency said.

On Monday, TAR-Tax quoted border authorities who said the Americans were caught carrying video footage of a section of the Russian border, the Khasan checkpoint and an alarm system.

French archaeologists discover queen's pyramid

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Archaeologists have discovered a 4,000-year-old pyramid for a previously unknown queen at Sakkara, famous for the step-pyramid that was the precursor of Egypt's major pharaonic monuments.

The find was announced Tuesday by French archaeologist Jean Leclant and Abdel-Halim Nouraddin, president of Egypt's Supreme Council for Antiquities.

"It's a very, very important discovery," Nouraddin told reporters. "This no doubt will add much information for us about this period of the Old Kingdom."

He and the French archaeological team said further research would be needed to pin down exactly who the queen was.

Inscriptions found at the pyramid and adjacent funerary temple identify her as Queen Mentites, and Leclant says she is believed to be the daughter-or-granddaughter of Pharaoh Pepi I.

Pepi I ruled during the 6th Dynasty, from 2345 B.C. to 2181 B.C., and the team believes Mentites was part of the French Egyptologist Jean Leclant Tuesday points toward the ruins of a newly discovered pyramid near Sakkara, Egypt, dating to around 2,200 B.C. Her name translates as "beloved of her father."

Pepi I is buried at Sakkara, south of the great pyramids on the Giza plateau, and the French Archaeological Mission headed by Leclant has found a trio of pyramids for his three wives in the last five years.

The new pyramid, long hidden in the sand, looks more like a pile of rocks than a monument to royalty.

But Leclant proudly showed part of a stele, inscribed with Pepi I's name, that has been raised atop a rebuilt section of the funerary temple, where people worshipped the dead queen as a divine intercessor.

"For a scholar, it is a big pleasure to know a little more of the story of ancient Egypt," said Leclant, 74, who has worked on digs in Egypt for nearly 50 years.

Sakkara is best known for the six-step pyramid of Pharaoh Zoser. Royal architect Imhotep built the 180-foot structure in about 2620 B.C. It evolved within decades to the straight-sided shape of pyramids including the famous trio at Giza.

Minister visit may revive war memories

BEIJING (AP) — Japan's prime minister arrived in Beijing Tuesday for a visit freighted with memories of his country's wartime occupation of China.

The Japanese Imperial Army brutally occupied China from 1937 to 1945, and Chinese leaders have made it clear they feel Japan has not yet cleared the historical slate.

Before he left for Beijing, Prime Minister Tomiichi Murayama's own governing coalition was unable to agree on whether Tokyo should issue a formal apology for its wartime conduct to mark the 50th anniversary of the end of World War II.

The Socialist party, which Murayama heads, had hoped to pass a resolution before Murayama's trip expressing Japan's apologies and its determination never to make war again.

But many members of the coalition's dominant Liberal Democratic Party say Japan has apologized enough and that an apology resolution would insult the families of the war dead. The resolution has been postponed to June and may be shelved altogether. During Murayama's five-day visit, China is expected to press its demands for a break on repaying $7 billion in outstanding Japanese loans and grants. Murayama is expected to rebuff the Chinese demands.

France refuses embargo of Iran

PARIS (AP) — France has no intention of joining the U.S. trade embargo against Iran, Foreign Minister Alain Juppe said Tuesday.

"We do not believe in unilateral embargoes," Juppe said. Iran is one of France's leading sources of oil. In 1993, Iranian exports to France surpassed $1.6 billion, while France sold about half that much in goods to Iran.

On Monday, the United States urged other nations to join a commercial embargo against Iran. The United States in the embargo, meant to punish Tehran for supporting terrorism and pursuing nuclear weapons.

"France very much shares American concerns regarding Iran," Juppe said. "That is why we are maintaining crucial dialogue with Iran."

Thailand suicide up

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) Thailand's suicide rate increased by 50 percent last year, a health official said Tuesday.

Dr. Chutti Panpreecha, director-general of the Department of Mental Health, blamed the rise on an increase in the number of people suffering from AIDS, cancer, drug addiction and depression.

Former judge Maughan dies at 82

By Frank E. Lockwood
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — As a missionary, Reed Maughan defended the faith in Nazi Germany and refused to salute Adolf Hitler's swastika-embellished flag.

As a secret service agent, he protected President Roosevelt in the 1930s and kept quiet about FDR's occasional secret jaunts from the White House.

And as an Idaho judge for nearly 20 years, Maughan fought to uphold the rights of police officers, crime victims and average citizens — as well as the rights of criminals.

Maughan, 82, died Monday morning at the Bridgeview long-term care unit in Twin Falls.

Area judges — and law enforcement officials — expressed sadness at Maughan's passing.

LT. Bill Stonemets of the Twin Falls

Police Department said the city has lost "a wonderful man" and a great judge.

"He called the shots on the bench the way he saw them and I gained a lot of knowledge from this gentleman," Stonemets said.

"He'll always be remembered by us old-timers," Stonemets said.

Twin Falls Magistrate Judge Mel Edwards said Maughan was "a credit to the judiciary."

"He was an extremely dedicated, professional individual," Edwards added.

Maughan was born on January 15, 1913, in Wellsville, Utah, the youngest of Thomas and Emily Maughan's six children.

A child of the Beehive State — and the son of a farmer — Maughan dreamed of going East, of finding a job in Washington, D.C.

After two years at Utah State University in Logan and a two-year mission for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Maughan hopped a train to the nation's capital.

He worked first as a foot cop in Washington, D.C., then found a job guarding the White House and its occupants. Putting in long hours, watching a justice system that — even in the 1930s — was painfully slow bothered Maughan.

"He was very frustrated at the way justice worked and I know he wanted to do something that would allow him to have a hand in that justice," Maughan's son, Doug, recalled Monday. "He wanted to be on the other side of the bench."

Reed Maughan's dreams took him to Washington, D.C. but his heart — and his family — called him back to the American West. He married his childhood sweetheart, Myrtle Walters, on Aug. 31, 1935, in Washington, D.C.; a marriage that was later solemnized at the Logan, Utah, temple.

Jury selection begins in kidnapping case

TWIN FALLS — Lawyers began selecting jurors Monday for a trial against a Colorado man who claims an ancient, reptilian warrior witnessed an attack on his former girlfriend.

Jack Peel, 48, is charged with first-degree kidnapping, aggravated assault and aggravated battery. He has asked to summon the spirit of "Larkin the Executioner" through hypnosis to testify to the Sept. 25 crime, said 5th District Judge Daniel Mehl, but he probably won't allow it.

Peel's ex-girlfriend, Connie Price, testified in October that Peel woke her up with a hand over her mouth and a gun to her head. She said he forced her to drive down a dirt road, then shot her in her arm when she tried to flee.

Jury selection continues today.

Emergency medical services will stage mock accident

JEROME — The county's emergency medical services department will stage a mock accident Friday at Jerome High School to demonstrate the dangers of drunken-driving to high school seniors.

The mock accident, and a video presentation preceding it, are part of the EMS "Sober Graduation" program and will begin at 9 a.m. Friday at the high school.

For information, contact Blaine Patterson at 324-8811, ext. 59.

Thursday is post office's Customer Appreciation Day

TWIN FALLS — Residents can poke around the post office Thursday as part of Customer Appreciation Day.

Many post offices in Idaho will have open houses and give tours Thursday to show people how the U.S. Postal Service delivers more than 580 million pieces of mail nationwide each day.

Contact your local post office for more information. The Twin Falls phone number is 733-4380.

The U.S. Postal Service also reports that southern Idaho residents rate their post offices among the best in the country, according to consumer surveys conducted for the service.

The region, which includes Boise, Pocatello, Idaho Falls and Twin Falls, ranked tops in an 11-state area for customer satisfaction, the polling firm of Opinion Research Inc. found.

Air Force base jets schedule late-evening flights next week

MOUNTAIN HOME — Military jets from the Mountain Home Air Force Base will be doing some late-evening flying during the week of May 8, the base has announced.

Specifically, warplanes will be working on their night moves-to-maintain their combat readiness.

Southern-Idaho residents may notice an increase in nocturnal activity from jet airplanes.

For more information, call Lt. Don Borchelt in the 366th's public affairs office at 828-6800.

Council OKs zoning requests for subdivision, offices

TWIN FALLS — The City Council approved the following zoning requests at its regular weekly meeting Monday night.

Professional offices for James Bjieri on two lots north of Addison Avenue East and south of Sigrid Avenue.

A luxury-home subdivision on 20.5 acres known as Canyon Gate northwest of town near the Snake River Canyon.

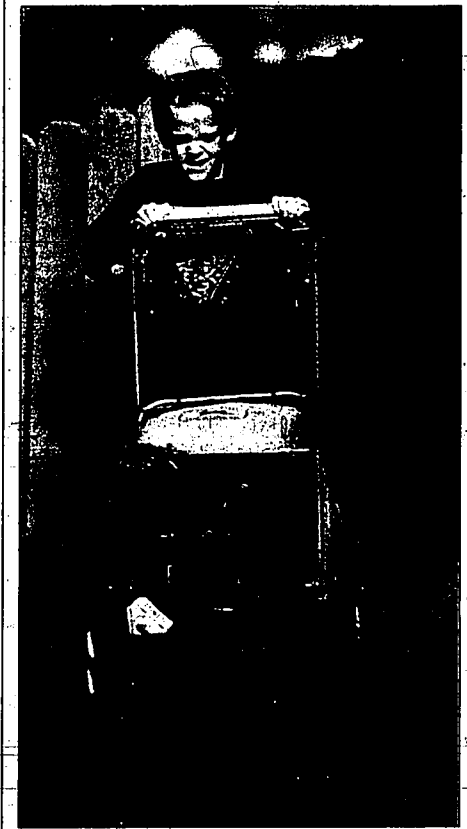

Four-plex construction by Joe Russell at 2140 Elster Boulevard.

Professional offices in the home at 2188 Addison Ave. E. for Deborah Silver, LeRoy Hayes and Judy and Doug Polk.

An ordinance defining and regulating storm water treatment for new developments, as well as an ordinance requiring new subdivisions to provide open space and parks.

Compiled from staff reports.

Helping his father with his moonlighting job, 8-year-old David Horton mows the front lawn of the offices of Gary Walker and Kent Pockock on Falls Avenue. His father, Jim Horton of Twin Falls, said he mows yards in his spare time to earn extra money.

Johnny Horizon Day cleanup scheduled

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — It's less than a week until Johnny Horizon Day, an annual community effort to clean up the roadsides in the county.

Johnny Horizon Day this year will be held on Saturday.

The county commissioners and the Twin Falls Lions Club will offer lunch to those who help out. Food and drink can be had after the cleanup at noon at the following locations: the Red Barrel restaurant in Castelford, the Flag fairgrounds, Nat-Soo-Pah and the Murtagh-Lewis Church.

Here is a list of area coordinators for this year's effort:

- Buhl — Kenny Hulce, 543-5211
- Castelford — Suzanne Murphy, 337-6501
- Filler — Bud Compher, 236-4207
- Hansen — John Hinton, 423-6356
- Hollister — Terresa Taylor and Rex Hoyt, 655-4310
- Kimberly — Geraldine A. McAdams, 423-5271
- Murtagh — George Anderson, 432-5322

Federal officials in West subjected to threats

Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — A rash of bombings and threats aimed at federal land managers in the West has prompted an FBI investigation, as well as memos from higher-ups in Washington, urging workers in the field to be extra careful out there.

Environmentalists and former government workers said Tuesday they suspect the unusually high level of anti-government violence is linked to anti-government militias and the anti-environmentalist "Wise Use" movement, which both gained ground rapidly in the West in the months before the bombing of the Oklahoma City federal building.

A Justice Department spokesman dismissed those claims as "speculation." Still, spokesman Jim Sweeney said concern for the safety of government workers prompted the Justice Department to file a lawsuit against local officials in Nye County, Nev., where a county commissioner pursued one federal agent with a bulldozer and local officers arrested three more federal agents

EPA sees Auger Falls dam as threat to water

By William Brock
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Breaking ranks with the state of Idaho, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency is sharply critical of the water-quality threat posed by a hydroelectric scheme on the Snake River at Auger Falls.

The federal agency maintains the Idaho Division of Environmental Quality made the wrong decision when it agreed to grant a water-quality permit to Cogeneration Inc. of Salt Lake City.

The EPA is asking the Army Corps of Engineers to deny a crucial dredge-and-fill permit, needed by Cogeneration to build its dam. The Middle Snake River already stipulates state and federal water quality standards, and new projects that further degrade the river are not acceptable to the EPA.

The 10-foot-high dam would span the Snake River about one mile downstream of the Twin Falls sewer plant. Water would be routed through a 1.7-mile canal to a power-house near the mouth of Rock Creek.

If built, the 43.6-megawatt Auger Falls facility would be — by far — the largest privately owned hydroelectric plant in Idaho.

DEQ Regional Administrator Bob Lupton in Twin Falls said his agency did its homework before it agreed to issue a water-quality permit.

"We have no scientific basis for saying no," Lupton said Tuesday.

"The DEQ's conditions for the Auger Falls hydro scheme are the toughest in Idaho," Lupton said. Among other things, the agency set standards for water temperature, dissolved oxygen levels, and minimum water flows in the Snake River.

Even so, "if the EPA had the authority to overturn this particular certification, we would do so," Charles Findley, EPA's Seattle-based regional water division manager, said in a letter to the Army Corps of Engineers.

The feds insist the DEQ's conditions will be difficult to enforce — and question Cogeneration's ability to comply.

"It is unrealistic to expect that the operators of this project will consistently and reliably meet their operation of the facility to reach water-quality standards," Findley wrote.

Lupton, of the DEQ, doesn't agree.

"We think they (Cogeneration) can keep their promises and we think we can enforce the agreement," he said, noting that penalties for non-compliance could hit $1,000 a day.

Cogeneration President Steve Harmsen, a Salt Lake City businessman, said the EPA "has consistently taken the attitude that nobody can be trusted."

"The possibility (for diminished water quality) exists, but the probability is very, very minor," Harmsen said Tuesday. "Just because something could happen doesn't mean we should eliminate that activity."

To enhance water quality, Cogeneration has offered to let the city spill treatment water from the sewer plant on land he owns in the canyon bottom. Presently, the sewer plant pours its treated wastewater into the river — but dumping it on land would expand the capacity of the plant and save the city millions of dollars.

The offer stands only if the hydro project is approved. If it isn't, Harmsen said he'll have no other option than to develop hundreds of home sites inside the canyon.

"Instead of having hundreds of houses down there, this may lead to something that will contribute to the clean-up of the river," Lupton said.

Writer finds treasure for county

By Sean L. McCarthy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Thanks in part to Teddy Keaton, the county will receive more than $38,000 from the state to help pay for park improvements at Balanced Rock west of Castelford.

The Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation will chip in $38,000 in revenues from RV-sticker sales for the county to develop an overnight RV park, including an info booth, two new bathrooms, a security gate and drinking fountains, at Balanced Rock. About $11,900 in local money also will be spent on the project.

The winning grant was submitted by Kectonaa Bull resident and former state Senate candidate who agreed six months ago to be the county's grant writer.

She said Tuesday the county also just gotten approval for a grant that will provide boats and snowmobiles for the sheriff's department.

"It's a coup for the county to start pulling in the grants," she said in a phone interview from Boise, where she is researching state and federal block grants Tuesday.

Working under contract at an hourly rate of $20, she has been paid $12,759 since November 1992 to research and write grant proposals for the county.

"She's a subcontractor for Twin Falls County. She's not a county employee," said County Commissioner Brent Renke.

Nevertheless, the county transferred $25,000 from the sheriff's and criminal justice funds to the commissioners' special-services budget last fall to cover Keaton's

He was born Jan. 15, 1913, in Wolfville, Utah. He was the last surviving child of Thomas and Emily Maughan. Reed attended school in Wolfville, Utah, and two years at Utah State University in Logan, Utah, while participating in his family's dairy farm. From 1937-1953, he served in the Swiss-German LDS Mission. On Aug. 31, 1955, he married Myrtle Walters in Washington, D.C., and the marriage was later solemnized in the Logan, Utah LDS Temple.

Reed P. Maughan
Reed was a member of the Secret Service assigned to the White House during the Roosevelt administration in 1949 and Myrtle moved their family back to Utah's Cache Valley where he worked in his brother-in-law's construction company. In 1958, the family moved to Buhl where they operated drive-in restaurants until 1970. During that time, he served on the Buhl City Council and also one term as mayor of Buhl. Reed was appointed to be a Twin Falls County Justice of the Peace in 1966, and retired from the 5th Judicial District in 1985. He continued to perform weddings until recent years.

Elma Williams
66, of Twin Falls, died Sunday, April 30, 1995, at the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center in Twin Falls.

She was born Sept. 22, 1908, in Laird, Saskatchewan, Canada, the daughter of Henry and Anne Bergen Friesen. In 1920, the family moved to Idaho. On Dec. 23, 1926, she married August V. Williams in Boise. They owned and operated a garden plant business and raised and sold peonies. Mrs. Williams retired in 1971. She loved to play bridge. Survivors include one son, Wesley Williams of Twin Falls; one daughter, Herman Friesen of Twin Falls; and one sister, Elsie Eldred of Twin Falls. She was preceded in death by her husband on Feb. 6, 1958; her parents; one sister, Hilda Woodhead; and one brother, Earl Friesen.

A graveside service will be held at 1 p.m. Friday, May 5, 1995, at the Memorial Park in Twin Falls. Friends may call one hour before the funeral on Friday at Twin Falls. With the Rev. James Frable officiating. Friends may call from 4 to 8 p.m. Thursday at the funeral chapel. Burial will be at 10 a.m. on Friday at White Mountain in Twin Falls.

Marie Arnold
69, of Burley, died Monday, May 1, 1995, at the Cassia Memorial Hospital in Burley.

Marie Arnold was born March 18, 1896, in Marseilles, Ill., the daughter of Ed and Ida Belle Vinson Thompson. When she was a year old, the family moved to Shawnee, Okla., where Marie attended school. She married Arthur Arnold in May, 1915. In 1918, they came to Idaho and lived in Kimberly, Burley and Idaho Falls, where Arthur worked as an electrician. In 1922, they moved to Bakerfield, Calif., and moved back to Shawnee in 1927.

Marie's family returned to Kimberly in 1933, where Arthur joined his brother, Wes, and father, E.M. Arnold, in the grocery and hardware business. After Art's retirement and expanding several winters in Bakerfield and in Mesa, Ariz., they bought a home in Burley in 1954, where Marie had since resided. Arthur died in 1965.

Marie's love of music started at a very young age and continued throughout her life. She sang in the Methodist Church choir wherever she lived, and was guest soloist in other churches and organizations. Marie also gave piano lessons to many children in Kimberly and Burley. She was active in the Burley Music Club.

Marie survived one son, Thomas Arnold of Austin, Texas; one daughter, Margaret Nelwith of Kimberly; two grandsons, Tom Nelwith of Twin Falls and Mark Nelwith of Pocatello; one grandnephew, Leslie Arnold of Pocatello, Texas; and two great-granddaughters. She was preceded in death by her husband and one sister.

The funeral will be held at 1 p.m. Friday, May 5, 1995, at the McCulloch-Hansen Mortuary, 321 E. Main in Burley. With Pastor Stephen Rose officiating. Burial will be at Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls. Friends may call one hour before the funeral on Friday at the funeral chapel.

Memorials are suggested to the Burley Music Club Scholarship Fund, in care of Jacky Handy and may be left at the mortuary.

Mine owner offers $10,000 reward for information about cyanide leak

CHALLIS (AP) — The owner of a mine where 20,000 gallons of cyanide solution has leaked from a holding pond is offering a $10,000 reward for information leading to the conviction of vandals. —TWIN FALLS — William Frank Hodge, 71, of Twin Falls, died Jan. 18, 1995. A memorial graveside service will be held at 3 p.m. Thursday at the Twin Falls Cemetery. Arrangements are under the direction of Blay Colonial Funeral Home and Crematory in Twin Falls.

Mont. The leak from three pits in the pond's rubber-liner was discovered during a routine check by the Forest Service. The pond is near the Yankee Fork of the Salmon River, upstream from Challis.

Yankee Fork District Ranger Greg Johnson said the liner was still flexible and didn't appear to have deteriorated. The mine was closed two years ago. Owner John Lawrence has been shipping his concentrates to Canada and has decided to close Freshers Cove.

Challis residents say the leak is a danger to the town's water supply. "If that's the case, then I certainly support catching whoever did it," she said Tuesday. "I have to wonder if the vandals' old man winter and ice."

The National Marine Fisheries Service said the Forest Service on November 23, 1993, letter that the liner was so old, it should be replaced. The service is the federal agency in charge of salmon recovery. Snake River chinook salmon, which spawn in the Yankee Fork drainage, are endangered. The pond is 650 feet above the Yankee Fork River.

It will be several days before officials know the seriousness of the leak. Results from water samples around the pond probably won't be back for several days, said Kent Fullenback, information officer for the Challis National Forest.

Sherwood in contact with Utah law officials

The Associated Press
United States Militia Association founder M. Samuel Sherwood, who claims a nonviolent stand but says an overbearing federal government could prompt citizens to resort to bloodshed, keeps in regular contact with law enforcement authorities in Utah, a state investigator confirmed on Tuesday.

Challis residents say the leak is a danger to the town's water supply. "If that's the case, then I certainly support catching whoever did it," she said Tuesday. "I have to wonder if the vandals' old man winter and ice."

Wolf likely cause of new calf death

SALMON (AP) — Another calf has been killed at a ranch in the Salmon area, and area ranchers think it could be a black wolf or wolf hybrid that has been spotted in the area recently.

"This occurred long before the Oklahoma thing," she said. In an interview on KIDO radio in Boise on Tuesday morning, Sherwood contended to distance himself from the more militant elements of the militia movement, claiming to be cooperating with law enforcement agencies to identify potential lawbreakers.

"Some suspect it's one of the 15 wolves released by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in January, but an official with that program says it isn't likely. Ted Koon, biologist in charge of the Idaho wolf release program, said he's making arrangements to fly to the Salmon area next time an apparent wolf kill is reported. Then he will go along with Sheriff Brett Barsaoui to investigate.

When biologists arrived in Salmon Friday to look for tracks and examine the first dead calf, they used tracking equipment to check for radio-collar signals. They found none, said Koon.

"He's in fairly close contact, invites them to some of the meetings they have done here and some of the meetings they have up there," Beckstead said. "He provides us, well, various kinds of information in person or regularly by mail."

"Whatever it was started at the tank and chewed off the ribs just like a chainsaw," said rancher Quinton Snook. "This is getting past the funny stage."

Salmon veterinarian Bob Cape examined both calves and suspects a large canine did it, but couldn't be more specific. "About all we can say is there's a big predator out there," he said. If another of Snook's calves is killed, and it is determined that a radio-collared wolf did it, Koon said he'll recommend that the rancher be compensated.

Almo man, 92, dies in truck accident

The Times-News
ALMO — A 92-year-old Almo man was killed in a single-vehicle accident Monday after his truck drifted off the road and ran into a tree.

According to a police report, the 1983 Ford Rancho pickup driven by Wesley Nathaniel Rice glanced off a fence before running head-on into a tree east of the Elba-Almo Highway at 4:15 p.m.

While heading north on the highway approximately one mile from Almo, Rice's truck gradually steered off the straight road, driving on the shoulder of the highway for 361 feet before colliding with the tree, the report said.

Finding staff is priority at new agency

HOISE (AP) — Idaho counties struggling with how to handle young lawbreakers should not look to the new state Juvenile Corrections Department for immediate relief.

"In one month as a department, and I'm the single employee," interim Director George Neumayer said Monday.

Plans for new juvenile facilities such as a work camp — are on the back burner for the moment. Right now, Neumayer is focusing on hiring a staff.

He said the department's immediate priorities are developing a database to track juvenile offenders, hiring seven district liaisons to work with counties and the new department and hiring about 20 staff members by July 1.

It also will host a series of meetings with county officials to define county and state obligations for juvenile detention and rehabilitation and implement an action plan generated from those meetings.

The department plans to build three facilities: a 50-bed work camp, a 25-bed diagnostic center, and a new detention center in eastern Idaho. But Neumayer said completion dates "would be a wild guess."

A total of 597 juveniles are in the state's justice system, now run by the Department of Health and Welfare.

Idaho has nine secure detention centers and 15 non-secure facilities, including one in Elmore County that two teen-agers fled before allegedly killing a Forest Service officer in the Payette National Forest last week.

Once it's up and running, the Juvenile Corrections Department will make a difference, Neumayer said.

"There will be more programs, more assistance, more of everything," he said.

Until then, counties like Elmore are on their own.

"If I were Elmore County, certainly, a secure facility would be the first priority," Neumayer said.

Sandpoint man to receive inventor honor

SANDPOINT (AP) — A Sandpoint inventor soon will join the ranks of famous inventors such as Thomas Edison and Alexander Graham Bell.

Dr. Forrest Bird, who invented the first practical medical respirator nearly 40 years ago, in July will be inducted into the National Inventors Hall of Fame. Six others will be inducted, including the inventors of bubble gum and bullet-proof vests.

Bird, 74, invented a family of medical respirators designed to control the flow of oxygen into the body of patients with respiratory or cardiac illness. He's credited with freeing patients from the old "iron lung" with his invention.

One of his designs for premature babies in 1970 lowered the death rate for low birth weight infants from 70 percent to less than 10 percent.

All of the inventors to be honored were selected by votes of the hall of fame's selection committee.

Bird was born in 1921 at Stoughton, Mass. His father, a World War I pilot, encouraged his son to solo in an airplane by age 14.

He reasoned that the best way to find a solution to a mechanical problem was through an extensive base of understanding. He was an inquisitive soul.

"I often irritated certain individuals I believed had information I needed through my lengthy questioning," he said.

He served as an officer in the U.S. Army Air Force in World War II and was a technical air training officer, which allowed him to learn to fly almost every airplane available.

Supercharged airplanes were beginning to fly beyond the altitude where pilots could breathe unaided, allowing Bird his chance to develop technology for aiding breathing.

He attended numerous medical schools and a specialty residency. That allowed him to develop what became the "Bird Universal Medical Respirator" for acute or chronic cardiopulmonary care.

Bombing brings on a rash of threats

HOISE (AP) — Police in Ada and Canyon counties have responded to eight bomb threats in the past 13 days.

That's more than usual, but not uncommon after an event like the Oklahoma City bombing, Mike Dillon, an FBI agent in Boise, said Monday.

Bomb Police Lt. Jim Tibbs said bomb threats are rare — about one every two or three months. But he has logged seven within the city limits since April 19, the day of the Oklahoma City bombing.

Nerves are still frayed at the Veterans Hospital in Boise, after his first bomb scare in more than a decade. Someone called last Monday and Tuesday and warned hospital officials that there would be a "vacant lot" if Bill Clinton was to be president on Wednesday.

Officials at the hospital took the call seriously.

"But our head of mental health tells us generally people who are going to do a bombing call Bill Turner said.

Nothing was found on the hospital grounds, and no more calls have been received.

Canyon County sheriff's deputies evacuated dispatchers from the courthouse in Caldwell for an hour Saturday night after someone called and reported a bomb.

Again, nothing was found after sheriff's deputies called in reserve officers to help with the search.

Back seat of stolen car holds $400,000 in checks from mine

CHALLIS (AP) — Officials say a weekend car theft could be the biggest crime ever reported in Custer County.

Two 16-year-old girls were taken into custody in West Yellowstone, Mont., on Monday after crashing a stolen car into a snowbank.

Although they apparently didn't know it, in the back seat were $400,000 in checks from the Hecla Grouse Creek mine.

"They had no idea" the checks were in the car, said John Bryant, chief sheriff's deputy in Custer County. "But they probably will when we get them back."

The car belonged to Lorrie Terry, the accounts payable clerk at the mine. She said the checks were sealed in envelopes and ready to be mailed Monday.

"My first instinct was that somebody was playing a prank on us," Terry said.

Bryant said the girls will be returned to Custer County and charged with grand theft.

TWIN FALLS — Two more readers sent in favorite recipes for Gnocchi, in reply to another reader's request. Other recipes for Gnocchi will be shared in the coming weeks.

The first recipe, from Clady Slane of Haisley, is a Better Homes and Gardens recipe. The second recipe is from Marie Hamilton of Filer, who also sent in a favorite recipe for Crisp Mustard Pickles — another reader request.

POTATO GNOCCHI IN GORGONZOLA SAUCE

(Russet or round white potatoes work best for gnocchi (NYOD-kee) because of their drier texture. Significantly, potatoes vary in moisture content, the amount of flour you need may vary.)

- 1 pound baking potatoes, peeled and quartered
- 2 tablespoons snipped fresh chives
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- ½ cup finely chopped onion
- 2 tablespoons margarine or butter
- 2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
- 1½ cups milk
- ½ cup crumbled Gorgonzola or blue cheese (1 ounce)
- 3 tablespoons dry white wine
- Crumbled Gorgonzola or blue cheese (optional)
- Snipped fresh chives (optional)

In a 3-quart saucepan, cook potatoes, covered, in a small amount of boiling salted water for 20 to 25 minutes or until tender. Drain well, pat the potatoes through a food mill or potato ricer or mash well with a potato masher.

In a medium mixing bowl, combine potatoes, 2 tablespoons chives, salt and pepper. Stir with a fork until combined. Use a wooden spoon to stir in enough of the 1 cup flour to form the mixture into a ball, adding ½ cup flour at a time.

Roll the dough out onto a lightly floured surface. Knead in enough of the remaining 1 cup flour until dough is soft and not sticky to the touch (this should take about 3 minutes). Divide the dough into 4 equal portions, divide each into 16 equal portions (for 64 total). Form into balls. Roll balls from a fork onto a waxed paper-lined baking sheet, pressing lightly with the tines of the fork dipped in flour as you drop them. Cover and chill the dough balls until ready to cook.

In a 3-quart saucepan, cook gnocchi, half at a time, in a large amount of boiling lightly salted water for 1 to 2 minutes or until gnocchi have risen to the top and have a breadlike texture inside. Remove with a slotted spoon; keep warm while cooking remaining gnocchi and sauce.

For sauce, in a 1-quart saucepan, cook onion in hot margarine or butter until tender but not brown. Stir in 2 tablespoons flour. Add milk all at once. Cook and stir until thickened and bubbly. Cook and stir for 1 minute more. Remove from heat. Stir in the ½ cup Gorgonzola or blue cheese and wine.

Serve gnocchi with sauce. If desired, sprinkle each serving with additional Gorgonzola or blue cheese and snipped fresh chives. Makes 8 appetizer servings.

GNOCCHI

- 2 pounds baking potatoes
- 1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
- 1 whole egg
- 1 extra egg yolk
- 2 tablespoons butter, softened
- 1 teaspoon salt

Boil potatoes in jackets until cooled. Peel and put through a ricer. While potatoes are warm, blend with flour. Add lightly beaten egg and yolk, butter and salt. Place on floured board and knead lightly. Keep dough soft. Roll into sticks 1 inch thick and about 10 inches long. Cut into ¾-inch pieces. Dent each piece in the middle with a fork. When ready to serve, place in boiling salted water. Cool until they rise to the top of the water. Drain and place in a warm bowl.

Chicken and Potatoes Dijon is a nutritious, one-dish meal that can be made in less than 35 minutes.

Chicken and spuds

Recipe gives time-strapped cook chance to make nutritious meal for family

What's for dinner? This simple question is a source of endless frustration, according to a new survey recently released by the National Potato Board. The survey found that 84 percent of women wish they could skip making dinner some days.

Why the frustration? Women point to a lack of family support and a lack of adequate time as key reasons. Employment outside the home offers an escape from dinner-time responsibilities. Cooking is still considered the "woman's job," 80 percent report.

To meet the needs of time-pressed family cooks, home economists for the National Potato Board have developed a recipe for Chicken and Potatoes Dijon, a nutritious, one-skillet meal.

It teams crusty, skillet-fried potatoes with tender chicken breasts and a creamy mustard sauce seasoned with tarragon.

This dish satisfies the requirements of today's home cook.

It takes less than 35 minutes, the amount of time women said they wanted to spend to make dinner. It's made in one dish, so clean-up is easy. It's nutritious, which pleases mom; and it's made with potatoes, America's favorite vegetable, which ensures acceptance by the whole family.

CHICKEN AND POTATOES DIJON

- 1 1/3 pounds (4 medium) potatoes
- 4 green onions, sliced
- 4 (4 ounces, each) boned and skinned chicken breast halves
- Salt and pepper, to taste
- 2 cups egg garlic, minced
- 1 tablespoon Dijon-style mustard
- 2 teaspoons chopped fresh tarragon or ½

1 teaspoon dried tarragon leaves
2/3 cup dry white wine or chicken broth
¼ cup light sour cream

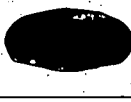

Pierce potatoes with tines of fork; micro-bake on HIGH 10 minutes. Cool potatoes 2 minutes; cut into ½-inch cubes.

Spray a 12-inch nonstick skillet with vegetable cooking spray; add potatoes and onions and cook over medium heat, tossing occasionally, adding more vegetable cooking spray as necessary, 10 minutes.

Push potatoes to side of skillet to allow room for chicken. Add chicken to skillet;

to 1 teaspoon dried tarragon leaves
2/3 cup dry white wine or chicken broth
¼ cup light sour cream

Pierce potatoes with tines of fork; micro-bake on HIGH 10 minutes. Cool potatoes 2 minutes; cut into ½-inch cubes.

Spray a 12-inch nonstick skillet with vegetable cooking spray; add potatoes and onions and cook over medium heat, tossing occasionally, adding more vegetable cooking spray as necessary, 10 minutes.

Push potatoes to side of skillet to allow room for chicken. Add chicken to skillet;

Cook with potatoes, tossing potatoes occasionally, about 15 minutes until potatoes are tender and chicken juices run clear. Season with salt and pepper.

Remove chicken and potatoes to platter; keep warm. Add garlic to skillet; sauté, stirring, 1 minute.

Add mustard, tarragon and wine; cook on high heat until reduced by half. Remove from heat, whisk in sour cream. Season with salt and pepper. Pour sauce over chicken; serve immediately.

Makes 4 servings.

Tips for the dinner hour

• If children are old enough to take some responsibility for cooking in the kitchen, have them prep the meal before you get home from work.

• Don't cater to finicky eaters in your family. If children don't want to eat the dinner served, have them fix their own alternative. A simple, healthful choice: microwave-baked potato with topping of canned chili, leek-toppers, or cooked vegetables and shredded cheese.

• Does your family have erratic schedules that prevent everyone from sitting down to dinner together? Divide leftovers (such as chicken, a la king, or meatloaf) in meal-size portions and freeze in plastic containers.

• Menu planning for nutrition and health may seem especially difficult, because there is so much conflicting information about what foods really are helpful. As a general guideline: eat less meat, cut back on fats and have five or more servings of fruits and vegetables daily.

• Most people plan a meal in three components: meat, starch and vegetables. One easy way to increase your fruit and vegetable consumption is to serve potatoes as the starch. Most other starches are grains; potatoes, however, are a vegetable. If you serve potatoes and another vegetable at dinner, you've already provided two of the five servings of fruits

'Food Chairman' offers tasty treats, southern style

By Cathy Walworth
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — If someone is known by the title "Food Chairman," you figure the person earned it. Jerry Dudley, 47, is no exception.

"I've worked in cafes all my life," Dudley said recently. "I was in a cooking school, I table set for four kids; a husband of 46 years and a little southern style and, you've got a food chairman."

Mississippi Mud Cake is kind of different, Dudley said. A glance at the recipe tells us it's good, too.

MISSISSIPPI MUD CAKE

- 2 sticks margarine, room temperature
- 2 cups sugar
- 2 eggs
- 2 tablespoons cocoa
- 1 can coconut, or 1 cup
- 1/4 cup chopped pecans or walnuts
- 1 tablespoon vanilla

1 1/2 cups flour, self-rising
Mix ingredients in order listed. Grease and flour 8-by-10-by-1-inch jelly roll pan; bake at 350 degrees for 30-40 minutes or until toothpick comes out clean.

Spread marshmallow cream over the hot cake top; let cool.

Use a cream cheese frosting, or: 1 box powdered sugar (1 pound)
1/2 cup soft margarine
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 cup cocoa
1/2 cup Pet milk

Mix all together and spread over marshmallow cream. Sprinkle walnuts over top if you like.

From a cooking school, Dudley shares this recipe for Scotch Shortbread.

SCOTCH SHORTBREAD

- 1 pound butter, room temperature
- 1 cup powdered sugar
- 4 cups flour
- 1/2 cup cornstarch
- In large bowl, cream butter with wooden spoon. Gradually add sugar. Add flour that's been sifted with cornstarch. Cream until dry ingredients have been blended.

Gather mix into a ball. Knead with warm hands on a lightly-floured board for 5 to 10 minutes. With rolling pin, roll out to ¼-inch thick; use a springerle roller for designs on top or cut into 1½-inch squares and pinch top with fork.

Bake on ungreased cookie sheet at 325 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes or until barely showing signs of browning. "The tops don't brown much," Dudley said, "nor do the shapes change with baking."

Remove to rack, allow to cool. Bake in a fat-lined or lightly-oiled tin. You can eat at once, or allow to mellow with age.

Dudley, who works for Health and Welfare in Burley, got this Sugar Cookie recipe from a 93-year-old client.

Thirsty mushrooms won't live

Dear Cathy,
I read in The Times-News that you could help with problems. I have a big one, in my lawn. I have toadstools. Not fairy rings, but big mushrooms that are spreading. I have called all nurseries and even the agriculture department. They say there is nothing I can do. Please, can you help me?

Signed, Hold the Mushrooms, Please.

Cathy Walworth
Green thumbsprints

Dear Hold,
I have good news for you. You've got good soil. Mushrooms in the lawn show up when there's organic material decaying in the soil below. Mushrooms are the result of a fungus feeding off the organic material.

The fungus likes moist, shady conditions in rich soil. Pull the rug out from under mushrooms by watering the lawn slowly for long periods of time — usually about six hours or so in most of our soils. — so that the water and the grass roots go deep into the soil.

You won't have to water again for 10 to 14 days, unless it gets really hot later on. Then, your grass will wilt at about four to seven days and want another drink. Deep watering saves water and allows the grass roots and soil to go through a wet/dry cycle. Don't add fertilizer.

The mushrooms want shallow surface water to survive. Deny it, and, in the process, cultivate a healthier lawn. As whatever it is that's decaying beneath the surface dissipates — usually an old tree root — the mushroom's food will disappear. Too healthy watering practices and lack of food will prevent further outbreaks.

Dear Readers,
Send for the free booklet, "Profitable Plants" for your Guide to the Best Backyard Crops. The 32-page booklet lists dozens of ways to harvest money out of your back yard by raising extra herbs, flowers or vegetables. Send a SASE to Homestead Gardens, P.O. Box 1059, Bellingham, Wash. 98227-1059 or call 206-676-5647.

Another tip: Have you heard that using treated wood in raised beds is dangerous? Such reports surface every once in a while. The CCA (chromium copper arsenate) treated timbers were tested by Master Gardeners in Texas. Between 1.1 and 1.3 parts per million of arsenic was found all over the beds — near the timbers and far away.

Arsenic is a natural soil substance that appears at levels up to 20 ppm. Dangerous levels are around 200 ppm. The Master Gardeners agreed with the EPA. CCA-treated timbers are safe for use in vegetable gardens. But don't eat the wood, and wear gloves when you handle it.

What's hugging your garden? Send your garden questions to Cathy Walworth, in care of The Times-News, P.O. Box 548, Twin Falls, Idaho 83303.

Fungus poses human threat

By Cathy Walworth
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Gardeners, beware. There's a fungus out there with your name on it.

The May issue of American Rose magazine reported that sporotrichosis, a fungal infection, can (if left untreated) invade vital organs like the heart and lungs, and cause death. It enters the body through any little cut, and won't go away without proper treatment.

Sporotrix schenckii, the fungus that causes the relatively rare disease in humans, might first show up as an infected thorn prick, or a small, red pimple. David Pike, president of Witherspoon Roses in Durham, N.C., had a little rose that looked like that, but it didn't go away.

The sore got a lot worse. Pike felt tired and listless. The pimple hurt. Pike's doctor told him he probably had a spider bite and gave him antibiotics. They didn't work.

A staph infection was suspected. Pike was hospitalized for seven days and given stronger drugs. His condition improved a little. But a month later, a red streak was running from the site up the wrist and curving around the arm. The fungus was heading for the lymph nodes.

The hospital tried heat wraps, which made the situation worse. Doctors finally ordered a biopsy. Ten days after that, the infection was identified and correctly treated by Dr. John Perfect of Duke Medical Center's Infectious Diseases Unit.

Because sporotrichosis is rare, hardly any body knows how to treat it. Or even what it looks like. Symptoms vary from one person to another, but most cases show up as localized reddish nodules or abscesses in the lymph nodes, skin and subcutaneous tissue.

Sporotrix is found in mulches, such as sphagnum moss, peat moss, humus, wood chips or shavings and passive compost piles. Prick your finger on a rose, and you've invited the fungus inside.

Thorn pricks are a common way for the fungus sporotrichosis to enter the body.

Dr. Perfect said that, occasionally, an outbreak will occur in a particular area and can be traced back to commercial sphagnum. He

Soil bacteria wreaks havoc

The Times-News

Make sure soil bacteria doesn't ruin your spring, or your life, wrote Dr. Lakshmi M. Sridharan, in the May issue of American Rose.

Two of the deadliest bacteria in soil are Clostridium tetani, the culprit behind tetanus, and Clostridium perfringens, the bad-guy that causes gas gangrene.

We tend to minimize the seriousness of tetanus in this country, since most of us get booster shots when we were kids. But those shots wore off a long time ago, said Dr. Sridharan. Tetanus is a disease to be wary of.

The bacteria releases a toxin called tetanospasmin into the bloodstream. When it reaches the central nervous system, lockjaw isn't far behind. Death can follow spasms of the respiratory muscles. Once the toxin attaches itself to nerves, therapy is of little use. Tetanus is easily avoided with a booster shot. Clostridium perfringens likes wounds. It causes gangrene. We'll spare you the details.

Dr. Sridharan warned against fungus infections associated with compost piles. Fifty to 100 deaths a year in California have resulted from infections of coxioidiomycosis, a pulmonary disease. This fungus is a distant cousin to the blue-gray spores seen on citrus and breads.

A face mask could have prevented the deaths.

Trump to open club at his Florida estate

Los Angeles Times

Donald Trump plans to open his 118-room Palm Beach, Fla., estate, Mar-a-Lago, as a club for such honorary members as Prince Charles and others. (ush enough to pay an initiation fee of $100,000 each.)

Ocean and Lake Worth, was built for cereal heiress Marjorie Merriweather Post and her then-husband, stockbroker E.F. Hutton, in 1927 at a cost of about $2 million.

To turn the house into a club, Trump, who bought Mar-a-Lago in 1983 after Post's death, had to install a fire sprinkler system, even in the hand-gilded, 34-foot-high living room ceiling. Of the 32 bedrooms in the estate, Trump converted 35 into suites for club members. He built a 900-foot-long wall for privacy and security, and he's creating a 25,000-square-foot spa in the three bomb shelters.

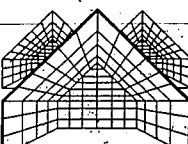

"It will be done early next season," he said.

REAL ESTATE FACTS BY: SID LEZAMIS

Q: How do local and national economies differ?

A: National statistics are merely averages of all the local economies. If you plan to buy or sell a home soon, there's no reason to listen to national statistics to make your decision. Instead base your plans on sound advice from local professionals. These include real estate companies and agents, mortgage lenders, appraisers, attorneys and bankers. These community leaders understand what's happening in today's local housing market.

To learn more about how the local economy may affect your decision, start by calling a real estate agent. Ask to be kept informed about available housing, current prices and mortgage rates.

The country-style home is still winning popularity contests, just as it has for many years. Nearly 30 percent of the participants in Associated Design's nationwide 1995 Homes from the Heart survey said they preferred an exterior with a country flavor. At the same time, more than twice that many opted for a home with a front porch, probably the most obvious design element found in farm and country style homes.

But despite coming out on top, country didn't win by much. In fact, it lost ground. Last year, more than 37 percent asked for country styling. This year the competition was a whole lot stiffer. Ranch was right up there with 26 percent of the vote, and contemporary was almost as high.

When it came to interior features, almost all of the survey participants wanted to make sure they had plenty of storage space. Ninety-four percent asked for a walk-in closet in the master suite. 88 percent requested a pantry, and 83 percent requested towel/linen storage in the master bathroom.

In creating the Heartridge, the staff took the preferences into account, along with most of the others that scored 20 percent or better. The Heartridge is a basically country-style home, but the arched windows and extensive use of brick on the front facade add a decidedly contemporary flavor. Inside, you'll find a large pantry and an even larger walk-in closet in the master suite, plus a roomy linen closet.

Features requested by 70 percent or more included a master suite isolated from other bedrooms, a utility room adjacent to kitchen/garage, a patio or deck, and two basins in the master bathroom. Sixty percent or more wanted a basement, wood frame construction, a front porch, a fireplace, a work island in the kitchen and a side entry garage with extra storage.

The popularity of great rooms held steady at 50 percent, while the desire for a formal living room continued to decline as it has for a number of years. Today's families are, by and large, much less formal. Formal dining rooms also dropped in popularity, but formal entries held firm.

Home offices are more in demand than ever. Forty percent asked for an office space — about the same that wanted a computer center. These percentages just keep catching up a few points every year. The same is true of sun rooms and screened porches, which allow families to get closer to the out-of-doors while staying protected from inclement weather and flying insects.

Several other shifts of note: last year nearly half the participants said they wanted a wood exterior, while a little more than a quarter wanted brick. This year, brick scored higher than wood. And when it came to size, readers wanted less. Last year's preference was for a 2,500 to 3,000 square foot home. This year the preference was for a 2,000 to 2,500 square foot home.

Scented soaps add special touch to bath

Pamper yourself or a friend with delicate scented soaps molded into shapes.

These soaps can be rather expensive to purchase, but are easy and cheap to make at home.

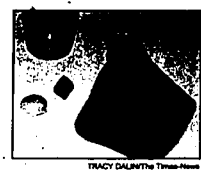

Supplies needed:

- 1 1/3 cups gentle soap flakes
- 1/2 cup soft water
- Food coloring
- Scented oil
- Cooking oil
- Waxed paper

Valley Crafts

Tracy Dalin

Mix the soap and the water together in a medium size bowl. Stir with a metal spoon to make a paste. Add the coloring and mix to desired shade. Remember, as the soap dries and hardens, the color may lighten. Next, ing oil and mold paste into desired shapes. Try making hearts, balls or other shapes. Place shapes onto waxed paper and let them harden overnight. You can also shape them by using candy or cookie molds. These make your soap shades look professional and expensive. Lightly coat shapes with oil or non-stick cooking spray. Press soap paste into the molds and let harden overnight. Shapes should slip out after 24 hours.

Bath times take on a whole new feeling and smell with these wonderful scented soap shapes.

Protect yourself

The most important thing you can do to protect yourself in the garden, or during any outdoor activity, is immunize yourself. Here are some other tips.

- Always wear gloves, socks and shoes and preferably a long-sleeved shirt.
- Have a first-aid box handy. It should contain alcohol swabs, bandages and antibiotic ointments.
- Protect yourself in the heat. Drink lots of fluids. If you become dizzy, lightheaded, or nauseated, get out of the sun immediately.
- Never put pesticides in containers other than the original. Children don't know the difference. Original containers tell what the product is and list antidotes to use in case of emergency.
- Mix all pesticides outdoors. Stay upwind while spraying. Wear safety glasses when spraying.
- Allow the spray to dry before allowing pets outside. The spray can be absorbed through their pads, which will make them sick, and sometimes kill.
- Learn how to safely fall off ladders. Try to roll when you land.
- Check for ticks when you come indoors.
- Wash hands thoroughly after working outside. Especially after spraying, composting and gardening.
- If you are stung by a bee or wasp and your throat begins to swell, call 911 because you are having a reaction.

(Adapted from "Safety Tips," American Rose magazine, May, 1995)

Fungus

treats the fungus — you guessed it — a fungicide.

Fluconazole worked. But treatment costs about $25 a day for six months. That works out to about $4,500. Pike got lucky and was admitted to a study group at Duke Medical Center, so he was spared the expense of treatment. But he wasn't spared the aftermath.

Pike lost 30 pounds and a lot of hair. He also found that the side effects of blurred vision and false hepatitis weren't a bed of roses, either.

Dr. Perfect, who successfully treated Pike, advises that gardeners wear thorn-proof gloves and wash hands with an anti-bacterial soap after yard work.

The common name for Pike's disease, by the way, is Rose Fever.

A few items are all that's needed for scented soaps, add a few drops of scented oil (available at most craft and specialty stores). Mix well again. Lightly coat your hands with cooking

3-way switches efficient, easy to install

James Dalley began writing a column called "Cut Your Utility Bills" 13 years ago for the local newspaper in Cincinnati.

His column now appears weekly in more than 350 newspapers from California to Maine. The 45-year-old Cincinnati native holds a bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering and a master's degree in marketing.

Recently, he has increased the range of money-saving ideas addressed in his column.

His columns now include low-cost do-it-yourself projects, information on new home energy products and environmental topics, in addition to information on reducing water, telephone, gas and electric bills. To reflect this increase in range of topics, Dalley has renamed his column "Sensible Home."

Here is this week's offering:

Q: We waste electricity leaving our hall and basement stair lights on because we don't have three-way switches at each end. Is it possible to add three-way switches ourselves? I cannot afford an electrician. - T. S.

A: Adding three-way switches to turn a light on at either end in a hall or stairway not only lowers your electric bills, and bills replacement costs, but it improves safety.

Installing a wireless three-way switch (TWS) is the simplest method to add one. It uses a transmitter switch at one end of the hall and a receiver switch on the other end. It takes about five minutes to install yourself.

The small transmitter switch is powered by a 9-volt battery. It is placed on the wall surface (no cutting and looks like any ordinary wall switch. When you flip the switch, it sends a signal to the receiver switch, switching either switch to turn the hall or basement light on or off.

The existing hall switch is replaced by the receiver switch, which is powered by standard 120-volt house power and is wired exactly the same as the old switch. A short antenna wire hangs down and is hidden inside the wall.

Wireless lamp wall outlets are also available.

A battery-operated wall switch sends a signal to a wall outlet. These are ideal for adding a switch near your favorite TV chair, near your bed, etc. The new switch can be located up to 50 feet from the wall outlet.

If you have a book closet, garage, utility room, etc., and have to fumble in the dark for a light switch or pull string, add a battery-operated wireless in-line switch at the door. It can control a light fixture mounted anywhere in the closet or the room. It can also control a vent fan.

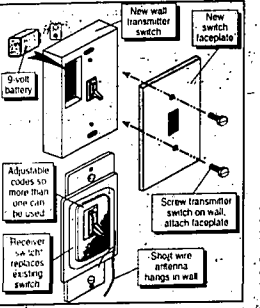

The same type of simple wireless technology can be used to install a back door or gate doorbell. Both the outdoor button and indoor chime (8 notes or musical tones) are powered by long-lasting batteries. Plug-in (120-volt) chimes with a wireless outdoor switch have adjustable volume.

For more safety and security, install a do-it-yourself wireless doorbell/intercom kit. A microphone/speaker is built into the battery-operated outdoor unit so you can talk to visitors before opening the door.

Installing standard hard wired TWS's is not difficult. Two single-pole/double-throw (SPDT) switches and three-wire cables are needed. Make sure the switches have adequate amperage ratings for the lighting load planned. Switch off circuit breakers first.

NEVER work on a live circuit. Write for Update Bulletin No. 654 listing the manufacturers of wireless three-way switches, wall outlets, in-line switches and doorbell/intercom systems, specifications, prices, installation instructions and a hard wiring diagram for a TWS. Please include $2 and a self-addressed envelope.

Handshakes hard to handle for some arthritis sufferers

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing about your response to "Unshakable in Milwaukee," the woman who asked how to avoid handshakes, which caused her great pain in her arthritic hands.

You suggested: "... very quickly say, 'No handshake, please. I have arthritis.'"

Abby, she may not want to announce to someone she's just met that she has arthritis. Also, many people won't hear her quickly enough, as handshakes are automatic.

My suggestion would be to take a cue from Sen. Robert Dole, who carries a felt-tipped pen in the hand of his paralyzed right arm. Always carry something in your right hand. And when someone tries to shake your hand, offer your left hand but horizontally, with your palm facing the floor.

This works well for a man I know at church. People automatically clap his left fingers from below with their already extended right hands, rather than squeezing his knuckles together from top to bottom.

"I hope this helps "Unshakable" and others. Please don't use my name, because I don't want it publicized that I'm getting arthritis either!"

IF MAY 3 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You have marvelous sense of humor, you travel more than most persons, you are versatile, romantic, constantly having more questions than answers. Centric Sagittarius persons play significant roles in your life. Current cycle relates to change of venue, trips, visits, participation in creative projects, marital affairs. Romance slazle toward end of May. During June emphasis on possible change of residence, marital split. December also memorable for you in 1993.

ARIES (Mar. 21-April 19): Changes take place at home - dismantle the oldden. Focus will be on structure, design, model. There is a decision relating to marriage. Get demands, commitments in writing. (Taurus to April 22; May 20). Money leak will be plugged - you'll be more financially secure as a result. Plumbing problem in kitchen, pipe, sewer, to be checked. Whistling sound, interesting at first, becomes annoying.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Grab opportunity while it is present. Very soon financial backing will be required to fund desires. Focus on disorderly conduct. Give up obligation you should not have carried in first place.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Long-range prospects surge forward - soon you will have your own way. Terms are suitable. Give up obligation you should not have carried in first place.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Light shed on, darker corners of life. Break free from prison of inhibitions, preconceived notions. Answer: Time to make fresh start, take charge of your own destiny.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Intuitive intellect reliable, trust, hunch. Cancer, Aquarius persons in picture; these letters, initials in names B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I gain victory convince other's you're right.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): What was nebulous will be solid tonight - you might call it a done deal. Don't be misled by one who is envious, lacks talent, inspiration.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Apparent love boomerangs in your favor - you get proverbial second chance. Includes career, love, financial transactions. Be cautious. Give up obligation you should not have necessary documents in hand.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Sagittarius messages. Puzzle will be solved conjunctly with money, where it will come. Question of possible inheritance. Rooming lack.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't trail along - create your own course of action. Family members privately resistant will decide. "From now on we're with you all the way!" Domestic adjustment relates to marriage.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Other people search for good miracles - encourage their high esteem but insist they be realistic. Promise concerning employment service check will be kept - don't equate delay with deferral.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): You'll re-evaluate (redefine) of love. Was lackluster performance will be upgraded to your standards. Dream or vision based on more than imagination.

Low-fat sandwiches can be high on taste

By Linda Gliza
 The Hartford Courant

Hold the mayo.
 Hold the cheese.
 Hold the ham.
 What's left to put between two slices of bread? A limp lettuce leaf? Those tasty deli sandwiches — the ones piled-high with ham, cheese, corned beef or tuna salad, and oozing with mayonnaise — are, the latest foodnuts criticize for their high fat and sodium content. In last month's issue of Nutrition Action Healthletter, the Center for Science in the Public Interest took on the lunchtime staple, just as the article reported. And a juicy New York-style corned beef sandwich, thicker than your bite, packs a salty punch. The corned beef, cured in a seasoned brine, has a sodium content equivalent to that of two Quarter Pounders.

The magazine's nutrition team came to its conclusions after buying and analyzing 12 of the most popular kinds of sandwiches at chains and independent shops in Chicago, Los Angeles, New York and Washington. The nutritionists awarded a "best bite" designation to five sandwiches: Two were 9-ounce sandwiches: turkey with mustard (370 calories, 6 grams fat, 1,407 milligrams sodium), and roast beef with mustard (462 calories, 12 grams fat, 993 milligrams sodium). Three were 6-inch Subway subs: ham and cheese (322 calories, 9 grams fat, 835 milligrams sodium); turkey (308 calories, 9 grams fat, 1,383 milligrams sodium); and veggie and cheese (272 calories, 9 grams fat, 859 milligrams sodium).
 —So what is the lunch-bunch supposed to do when a growing stomach signals that it's noontime? You don't have to forsake your favorite tuck-in shop or decide to throw-in bag until retirement, although the make-your-own approach is the most certain way to know exactly what and how much is in your sandwich.

Of course, if you splurge on a Reuben, don't choose a serving of guilf for dessert. Instead, balance the high-fat sandwich with low-fat choices including fruit, vegetables and pasta or other grains for the rest of the day.
 Here are some other tips when ordering sandwiches:

- Use tuna packed in water rather than oil, or drain oil-packed tuna thoroughly before using.
- Trim the skin and hardened fat from cooked chicken before chopping for a salad.
- Use feta/yogurt and more whites in egg salad. (Cholesterol is concentrated in the yolks.)
- Thin regular mayonnaise with an equal amount of low-fat yogurt — you'll get the flavor of the mayonnaise, and the yogurt will provide added creaminess. Or try a low-fat mayonnaise. Check the label, however. A cholesterol-free mayonnaise, for example, doesn't necessarily mean fat-free.
- Use a low-fat condiment, such as mustard, instead of mayonnaise. (A single-tablespoon of mayonnaise contains 12 grams of fat.)

Recipes

 Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese and add spaghetti sauce. Serve immediately.

CRISP MUSTARD PICKLES
 6 medium cucumbers, chopped
 3 cups chopped onion
 3 sweet red peppers, chopped
 1 medium head cauliflower, cup up

1 quart small pickling onions
 1 cup salt
 4 cups sugar
 1 quart vinegar
 1/2 cup ketchup
 1/2 cup dry mustard
 1/2 teaspoon turmeric
 1 tablespoon celery salt

Layer vegetables and salt in bowl; cover with cold water. Let stand overnight. Drain; rinse with cold water.
 To make sauce, combine sugar and vinegar, heat to boiling. Mix remaining ingredients; add some of the vinegar mixture, cooled; mix and add to boiling mixture. Stir well.

Add drained vegetables; cook 15 to 30 minutes. Pack in hot, sterilized jars; seal at once. Process in boiling water bath (212 degrees) five minutes. Makes 69 pints.

Here's a recipe for Three Bean Pasta, which took first place honors for Creative Soup Beans of Twin Falls at this year's Filler Bean Festival.

THREE BEAN PASTA MAIN COURSE

1 1/2-cup can beef bouillon
 3 cups dry pink beans
 3 cups great northern whites, dry
 1/2 cup dry black beans
 1 1/2-cup can V8 juice
 1 18-ounce can tomato paste
 1 onion, diced
 3 pounds round steak cut into 1/2-inch cubes
 2 cloves garlic, smashed and kernelled
 1/2 cup olive oil, divided, green preferred
 2 pounds medium shell pasta
 1/2 cup butter
 2 tablespoons Italian seasoning (prepared blend or your own)
 Salt, pepper, Tabasco to your taste

Add 2 cups water, V8 and bouillon to the pink beans. Bring to a boil for 2 minutes. Set aside for 1 hour. Then cook at a bubble boil until done but firm, about 1 1/2 to 2 hours.
 Add water if required.
 Add 8 cups water to the whites. Bring to boil for 2 minutes. Set aside for 1 hour. Then cook at bubble boil until done but firm, about 1 1/2 to 1 3/4 hours. Add water if required.

Add 8 cups water to the black beans. Bring to a boil for 2 minutes. Set aside for 1 hour. Drain the water and replace with fresh water. Cook for 30 minutes. Drain the water and cook until done, about another 20 to 40 minutes.

Drain the water and rinse the beans thoroughly and add them to the cooked pink beans.

In a separate oven pan, saute meat cubes in 1/2 olive oil and butter, turning as meat browns. Be cautious and saute at temperature to avoid browning the oil and butter.
 Add onions, garlic, tomato paste, 1 teaspoon coarse black pepper, 1/2 teaspoons salt, 3 strong dashes Tabasco, 4 cups water. With lid in place, put in 400-degree oven for 10 minutes.

Reduce temperature to 350 degrees and bake 2 hours. Add Italian seasoning and bake for an additional 20 minutes.

Cook the pasta separately in large pot with lots of water according to package directions, but do not overcook. Drain and rinse well with hot water. Add remaining olive oil to pasta shells, and turn gently from the outside inward until all shells are coated.
 In your largest pot (a 7-quart canner is just right), place the pink and black beans and pasta and white beans and meat sauce. Stir carefully and bring to a simmer over medium heat. Adjust texture by adding V8 and water mix or, if thickening is desired, puree some of the beans and return to pot. Adjust seasoning.

Simmer the whole mixture for 15 minutes to blend all ingredients and serve with French or Italian bread.
 Note: Never use the water the black beans were cooked in to avoid odd coloring, and combine the white beans at the last opportunity to retain their whiteness.

 and vegetables nutritionists recommend daily.
 • Make "down time" work for you. Plan menus and update grocery lists during commute times; prep the next day's meals (such as washing salad greens) when there's a lull in cooking dinner.
 • Shop weekly — early Saturday morning is a good time — and be sure you have everything you need for the week so you're not caught waiting in long lines during peak hours for one or two items you forgot to buy for the day's dinner. Avoid waiting time in long lines during peak hours.
 • Children can be a help or a hindrance when grocery shopping. If you like to dawdle and ask for the latest cereal, don't take them. However, if your children can be counted on to pick up the milk, eggs, etc., quickly and efficiently, you can work faster by taking two shopping carts so you can divide and conquer.

Peppers add spice, vitamins

By Charles Perry
Los Angeles Times

A few months ago, one of the food-fear stories that periodically stampede the public made the news rounds.

This time a study was said to have shown chile peppers to be associated with stomach cancer. Some people started looking uneasy at lunch and waving away the hot sauce.

The story eventually died down. People went back to thinking of chiles as an excellent source of vitamins — raw peppers, even mild ones, are among the most concentrated sources of Vitamin C in nature, and ripe red peppers are among the best for Vitamin A. And it should be noted that the stomach cancer rate has declined in this country over the last 20 years, while chile-eating has quadrupled.

At the moment, the habanero pepper is the hottest chile available, either fresh or bottled. The chile writer Jean Andrews reports, however, that there are chiles in South America that make the habanero taste like a bell pepper, so it's only a matter of time before we see "aji rocoto" in our supermarkets. Eventually we'll find, or gene-splice, absolutely the hottest pepper in the world, and what will the chile-heads do next?

They'll still have new territories to explore.

After all, in its natural state, the hot stuff in chiles — a group of chemicals called capsaicinoids — is diluted with all sorts of inessential ingredients such as, oh, vitamins and flavoring elements.

Those who really want to set their mouths on fire, throw their metabolisms into a whirl and pop sweat from their brows like Donald Duck can start messing with the pure item: industrial capsaicin extract.

The rest of us will probably settle for a medium burn, an appetizing aroma and nutrients, stuff like that.

CORN FRITTERS WITH SERRANO CHUTNEY

- 2 cups sifted flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon black pepper
- 1 cup low-fat milk
- 2 egg yolks or equivalent egg substitute, lightly beaten
- 2 egg whites, beaten until stiff
- 2 cups fresh or frozen corn kernels, partly cooked and cooled
- 2 tablespoons chopped serrano chiles
- 1 cup finely chopped onion
- Oil

Mix flour, baking powder, sugar and black pepper in bowl. Gradually add milk and yolks, stirring until smooth. Add whites, corn, chiles and onion. Gently fold mixture until well blended.

Place 1/2 inch oil in 10- or 12-inch heavy skillet. Heat until drop of water bounces and sizzles. Carefully drop heaping tablespoons of batter into hot oil. Fry until golden on 1 side, then turn with spatula and fry other side. Drain fritters on paper towels. Then keep warm.

When all are done, serve immediately on heated platter with Avocado-Serrano Chutney. Makes 25 to 30 fritters.

AVOCADO-SERRANO CHUTNEY

- 3 serrano chiles, seeded, stemmed and minced
  - 2 avocados, peeled, seeded and diced
  - 4 tomatillos, husked and diced
  - 4 green onions, white part only, chopped
  - 1 large or 2 small red tomatoes, coarsely chopped
  - 3 tablespoons chopped cilantro
  - 1/4 cup lime juice
- Gently mix chiles, avocados, tomatillos, green onions, tomatoes, cilantro and lime juice in ceramic bowl. Allow to stand at room temperature 30 minutes before serving. Makes 3 cups.

Easy ways to spruce up chicken breast

By Lori Linsenberger
Knight-Ridder News Service

A story is told that, during a visit by British Prime Minister Winston Churchill to the United States, he attended a dinner at which he asked the server for chicken breast.

"In this country," the woman gently chided him, "we say 'white meat' instead of breast."

Some time later, she received a large-and-beautiful corsage from Churchill with a note. It said, "Please do me the honor of wearing this on your white meat."

We Americans eat 73 pounds of chicken every year. We particularly like chicken breast because it's convenient, with little visible fat or waste to worry about. Skin and fat removed, it's a relatively healthy food. And we like its versatility; it can be used anywhere, from the wok to the grill to the oven.

Here are some ideas for cooking up chicken breasts quickly and deliciously.

SALSA CHICKEN

Heat the oven to 375 degrees. Rinse and pat dry 4 skinless, boneless chicken breasts. Place a chicken breast in the center of a piece of aluminum foil about 8 inches square. Repeat with remaining chicken breasts. Fold the pointed, thin end of the chicken under the thick end, so the meat will cook evenly. Top each breast with 3 tablespoons of mild or medium salsa.

Wrap well and fold the edges of the foil to seal the salsa inside. Bake for 35 minutes. If using frozen chicken breast, bake 45 to 50 minutes.

Makes 4 servings. Serve with rice, pasta, beans or plain baked potato. (Recipe by Charlotte Balcomb Lane)

APPLES AND CHICKEN

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Pound 4 chicken breasts flat with the rim of a saucer.

Prepare the filling: In a bowl combine 2 apples (peeled, cored and chopped), cup raisins, 3 tablespoons apple or orange juice, 1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice, 1 tablespoon flour and 1 teaspoon cinnamon. (Throw in a few walnuts or pine nuts if you have them.)

Divide the mixture into 4 equal parts and place in the middle of chicken breasts. Roll up and secure with a toothpick. Spray a baking dish with non-stick cooking spray. Place breasts in a dish. Spread any remaining mixture over the rolled-up chicken pieces. Cover with foil. Bake for about 35 minutes. Makes 4 servings. Serve with rice, risotto or stuffing.

SESAME-CHICKEN NUGGETS

Cut 4 boneless, skinless chicken breasts into 1-inch chunks. Place in large bowl. In a large non-stick skillet over medium heat, toast 2 tablespoons sesame seeds until golden brown, stirring often. Sprinkle toasted seeds over chicken chunks. Heat 1/2 cup chopped zucchini and 1/2 cup chopped red bell pepper, cook and stir 5 to 6 minutes or until chicken is no longer pink. Squeeze nuggets with purchased sweet-and-sour sauce, barbecue sauce or honey.

Makes 4 servings. Accompany chicken with cooked to meat noodles. (Recipe from Fast and Healthy Magazine.)

CURRIED CHICKEN CARIBE

Heat 1 teaspoon oil in a large non-stick skillet. At medium heat, cook 4 boneless, skinless chicken breasts and 1 small onion, chopped, for about 5 minutes.

Meanwhile, in a medium bowl combine 1/8-ounce container of plain yogurt, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, 1 tablespoon apricot spreadable fruit or preserves, 4 teaspoons creamy peanut butter and 1/2 teaspoon curry powder. Mix until well blended. Turn chicken over; stir in yogurt mixture.

Reduce heat to low; cover and simmer 5 to 10 minutes, or until chicken is fork tender and juices run clear, stirring occasionally. Makes 4 servings. Serve with rice or couscous. (Recipe from Fast and Healthy Magazine.)

CHICKEN PRIMAVERA POTATOES

Pierce 4 potatoes with a fork; place on paper towel or microwave-safe roasting rack in microwave. Microwave on high (100 percent) for 15 minutes or until tender, turning once halfway through cooking. Cover, let stand 5 minutes.

Meanwhile, heat 1 teaspoon oil in a medium non-stick saucepan over medium-high heat until hot. Add 1/2 cup chopped zucchini and 1/2 cup chopped red bell pepper; cook and stir until zucchini is crisp-tender. Stir in 1/2 tablespoon flour, 1/2 teaspoon garlic powder and 1/4 teaspoon pepper.

Add 1/2 cups skim milk; stir until well-blended. Cook and stir until thickened and bubbly. Stir in cup grated Parmesan cheese and 2 cups cubed cooked chicken breast; cook until thoroughly heated.

To serve, cut potatoes in half lengthwise, cutting to but not through bottom of potatoes. Mash slightly with a fork. Spoon chicken mixture over hot potatoes. Makes 4 servings. (Recipe from Fast and Healthy Magazine.)

Note: You can cook chicken breasts over a weekend, cool, cube or shred and refrigerate until ready to use — but not for longer than four or five days. To steam chicken breasts, place in a collapsible steaming basket in a Dutch oven or other large pan with lid. Fill with about 1 to 2 inches of water. Steam for about 30 minutes. Watch carefully to make sure water does not evaporate completely during cooking. Save chicken stock for future use.

GARLIC BAKED CHICKEN

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Rinse 4 chicken breasts and pat dry. Arrange on a baking sheet or in a shallow baking pan. Spread 1/2 teaspoon minced garlic (bottled minced garlic is fine) over each piece of chicken.

Bake, uncovered, for about 30 minutes or until chicken is tender and no longer pink. Makes 4 servings. Serve with steamed vegetables and warm bread. (Recipe from "American Heart Association Quick and Easy Cookbook.")

Bruins sweep match

By Kevin Miller
Times-News writer

... 321 is the best we've shot in a couple of weeks.

— Gordon Kerbs, Minico golf coach

BURLEY — Par for the course this season, the Twin Falls boys and girls swept Tuesday's Region III golf match.

The Bruins girls finished 62 shots ahead of second-place Minico, but the boys had to count their shots more closely.

— Led by Jason Stephenson's five-over-par-76, the Twin Falls boys edged the Spartans by five strokes with a 316.

Stephenson and Pocatello's Jason Morgan tied for top individual score. Morgan shot a one-over-par 36 on the front nine at the Burley City Golf Course.

Austin Gillett of Minico also shot a 36 over the first nine holes.

The Spartans' Kody Buerkle made up for a rough start with the best back nine of the match, shooting an seven-par-37. Buerkle finished tied for fourth overall with a 79.

Steven Hansen of Minico took third with a 77, topping the Spartans' best round-in-weeks, Coach-Gordon-Kerbs said.

— "I'd like to knock it down a little bit, but 321 is the best we've shot in a couple weeks," Kerbs said.

Region III teams return to Burley May 11 for the state-match qualifying district meet. The top three boys' and girls' teams and top five individual finishers from that match will advance to the state championships in Lewiston on May 19 and 20.

Teams can also advance to state by meeting qualifying marks at the district match. Boys' teams must shoot 325 or less to receive an automatic state bid. Girls must shoot 340 or less.

Three of the five girls' teams beat the qualifying mark Tuesday. Burley shot a 342, only two shots over the qualifying mark.

With four of the five best individual scores, the Twin Falls girls scored an easy win, shooting a 253. Whitney Lewis shot a match-best 81.

Boys' teams:

Twin Falls (78): Jason Stephenson 78, H. Mortenson 78, C. Koster 81, R. Bess 81, C. Taylor 84
 Minico (81): Steve Hanson 77, K. Berman 78, A. Grubb 80, J. Orvey 81, M. Holman 107

Thunder Gulch to make Derby noise?

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Serena's Song, a possible lady in waiting for the winner's blanket of roses, and Timber Country, who's already demonstrated championship form at Churchill Downs, will represent trainer D. Wayne Lukas on Saturday in the Kentucky Derby.

And don't forget Thunder Gulch.

"He's a stepchild," Lukas said Thursday. "He has a horse status on a desk of him that has charisma. He happens to be the least-heralded one of the group, but he's not without ability."

Thunder Gulch beat Derby contender Saveat Prospect in both the Fountain of Youth and the Florida Derby at Gulfstream Park before finishing fourth in the Blue Grass Stakes on April 15 at Keeneland.

That loss in a race without pace, won by longshot Wild Syn, dropped Thunder Gulch further behind Timber Country in the area of media attention, although Timber Country, the 1994 2-year-old champion, is winless in three starts this year. Timber Country clinched his championship by winning the Breeders' Cup Juvenile on Nov. 5 at Churchill Downs.

Both colts dropped a notch in the eyes of the media when Lukas announced last Saturday that Serena's Song would skip the 1 1/4-mile Kentucky Oaks for 3-year-old fillies and instead challenge colts in the 1 1/4-mile Derby.

A winner of five straight stakes, Serena's Song beat seven colts in the Jim Beam on April 1 at Turfway Park. In the Derby, she apparently will have to beat 18 colts.

Besides her stablemates, other rivals will include Talkin Man, winner of the Wood Memorial; Afternoon Delites; unbeaten in five races before being nipped at the wire in the Santa Anita Derby, Fyrmaid; Reak; the Flamingo winner; Dazzling Falls; the Arkansas Derby winner; Junron, third in the Santa Anita; Tejano Run, second in the Blue Grass; and Wild Syn.

While Serena's Song, who won the Jim Beam from wire to wire, might beat Timber Country and Thunder Gulch, Lukas feels she won't hurt the chances of the two colts.

All sports could feel IRS impact

The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The Internal Revenue Service, in a decision that could have repercussions throughout professional sports, approved a complicated plan Tuesday to help keep the Royals in Kansas City.

"Great news. Christmas came in springtime," said Mike Herman, president of the Royals and principal architect of the plan developed before the death two years ago of team founder Ewing Kauffman.

If the IRS had not approved the plan, the Royals probably would have been sold to Kauffman's estate and 'be sold to the highest bidder without regard to where the new owner would operate.'

But now, assuming major league owners also agree, the club becomes the property of the Greater Kansas City Community Foundation and Affiliated Trusts. A board of directors will have six years to find a buyer committed to keeping it in Kauffman's beloved home town.

"We don't have to get the highest price," Herman said. "We have to keep the team in Kansas City. If we can't find a local buyer in six years, or if we feel the club is in jeopardy, then we look elsewhere for a buyer."

Under the plan, the Ewing M. Kauffman Trust will make a charitable gift of the stock of the Kansas City Royals Corp. and $50 million in cash to the Greater Kansas City Community Foundation and Affiliated Trusts.

The $50 million, along with $40 million to be raised locally, will fund expected losses for the six years.

"Mr. Kauffman is giving a gift with a restriction," Herman said. "It's saying keep it in Kansas City and you can sell it to someone in Kansas City at a price that will keep the team in Kansas City."

The Royals claim huge losses—the past few years, resulting from Kauffman's free agent buying spree in the late '80s and early '90s. In unpopular-cost-saving moves this spring, Cy Young winner David Cone and catcher Doug Mientkiewicz were traded.

Herman agreed the IRS decision does not guarantee Kansas City of keeping its team. Attendance was only about 16,000 for each of 101 first four games of this same-shortened season. "We have to get the attendance up. We have to get the fans back," Herman said. "We'd love to have revenue sharing and a salary cap. That would certainly be nice for a small market. If we do

Bulls bottle up Hornets for 103-80 win

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan was everywhere — swishing 3-pointers; energizing the crowd with soaring slams; defending 3-foot-3 Muggsy Bogues on the perimeter and double teaming 6-10 Alonzo Mourning under the basket.

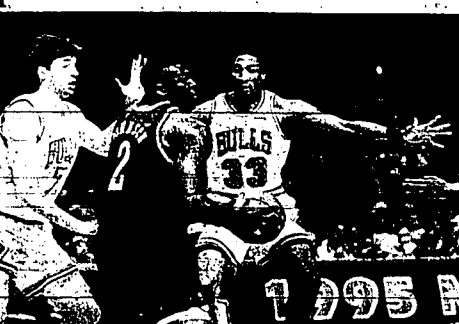

With Mourning not a factor, the Chicago Bulls attacked the boards, negated the Charlotte Hornets' only real matchup advantage and took a 2-1 lead in the first-round playoff series.

Jordan scored 25 points, including 13 during a 19-4 run that spanned the end of the second quarter and start of the third, as Chicago won 103-80 Tuesday night.

"This is one game, and that's all you can say. Momentum has to be built next game," Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. "But one thing we do know is that we're now in the driver's seat in this series."

Chicago, 14-1 at home against Charlotte since the Hornets entered the NBA in 1988, can wrap up the series Thursday night at the United Center.

Elliott layup boosts Spurs to next round

DENVER — Sean Elliott hit a driving layup with 33 seconds left Tuesday night as the San Antonio Spurs beat the Denver Nuggets 99-95 to complete a three-game sweep in their first-round playoff series.

San Antonio, which withstood a furious fourth-quarter Denver comeback, advanced to the second round of the NBA playoffs, where they will meet the winner of the Seattle-Los Angeles Lakers series. The Lakers lead the series 2-1.

David Robinson and Avery Johnson scored 24 points each to lead the Spurs, who beat Denver for the seventh straight time this season. Elliott finished with 18 points.

In a game marred by five technical fouls and fan misbehavior, Denver played the second half without coach Bernie Bickerstaff, ejected just before halftime.

Suns sweep Portland

PORTLAND — Charles Barkley scored 47 points and Phoenix led wire-to-wire in eliminating Portland 117-109 in the first round of the National Basketball Association playoffs.

The Suns swept the opening series in three straight games.

Spurs

After Elliott's basket, Denver's Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf missed a 20-footer, and the Nuggets fouled Johnson, who hit one of two free throws with 9:30 seconds left for a 96-93 edge. Denver got the rebound, but Reggie Williams passed up a 3-point shot to set up Dikembe Mutombo's dunk.

Trailing by one, Denver fouled Elliott, who hit 14 of 16 free throws with 2:17 seconds left. Elliott made the first free throw and sealed the win when he rebounded his own miss.

Bryant Smith and Rodney Rogers scored 20 points each to lead five Nuggets in double figures.

The Spurs, who blew out Denver in the first two games of the series, seemed to be on their way to another easy win, leading 83-71 at the end of the third quarter. But the Nuggets battled back and tied the game on Dale Ellis' 3-pointer with 37.1 seconds left.

Two players were ejected in Game 2 for rough play, and Game 3 was just as physical, with 63 fouls called.

Bulls

Mourning, deflating in Game 2 with 23 points and 20 rebounds, was missing in action most of Game 3. He had two points and one rebound in the first half and finished with 13 and seven. When he did get in position to score, the Bulls committed hard fouls or tore the ball from his grasp. He committed six of Charlotte's 23 turnovers.

"They made the adjustments," Charlotte coach Allan Bristow said. "They put Michael ... on Muggsy and double-teamed off that. It gave us problems in the shot and we could not get offense out of our big men."

Jordan said guarding Bogues "was one of those suggestions I came up with at practice. I thought it would give us a little more rebounding and let us help out on (Mourning). We were trying to get to him before he made his move, just keep a hand on him, steal the ball, knock the ball down, just not let him get any rhythm."

Rather than crediting the Bulls' defense, Mourning criticized the officiating of Terry Durham, Steve Javie and Mike Mathis.

"Any time you are away from home and things aren't going well for you and you are working as hard as you can and calls are against you, you are playing a losing battle," said Mourning, who missed seven of his nine shots. "It's frustrating playing against not just five but eight guys."

Outrebounded 45-34 in Sunday's 106-91 win, the Bulls had a 38-26 advantage Tuesday to hand Charlotte its worst playoff loss in franchise history. They pulled down 13 offensive rebounds to Charlotte's eight, helping them shoot 48 percent.

"Our big guys provided us with some space to rebound, and we controlled the defensive boards," Jackson said.

Johnston scored 22 points for the Hornets, who shot 43 percent. "We got a little unraveled," Johnston said. "We've got to come back and maintain our composure."

Miller, Pacers sweep Atlanta

J. ATLANTA (AP) — Larry Brown never expected a sweep.

But for the second year in a row, that's exactly what he got from his Indiana Pacers.

With big games from Reggie Miller and Mark Jackson, the Pacers led into the second round of the NBA playoffs with a 105-89 victory over the Atlanta Hawks on Tuesday night.

"I was just hopeful that we would win the series, but I feel pretty good," Brown said.

Last season, the Pacers swept Orlando in the best-of-5 series, then beat the Hawks 4-3 in the conference semifinals. In the second round, Indiana will meet the winner of the New York-Cleveland series, which the Knicks led 2-1.

"We knew that we were going to have our hands full with this Atlanta team," said Miller, who scored 32 points to finish the series with 95. "We came in here with the attitude that we were down 0-2 in the series and we wanted to come out and play good defense."

The Hawks bolted to a 7-0 lead and led throughout most of the first half before Miller, and the Pacers took control.

Miller scored 12 of his points in a decisive 26-5 second-half run. "They're an excellent team," Hawks coach Lenny Wilkens said. "Reggie Miller had a great game, but the guy that I thought that really made the difference was Mark Jackson. I thought that he just ran the show part regular season."

"It's special to go on to the second round," said Jackson, who finished with 19 points.

"We have a great opportunity to show the nation something."

Mookie Blaylock led the Hawks with 20 points.

Atlanta took a 67-63 lead on Stacey Augmon's free throw with 4:46 left in the third quarter, but the Pacers took control at that point.

Miller hit a driving layup, and Antonio Davis followed with two free throws to tie it at 67.

An drew Lang's two free throws put the Hawks back in front with 4:49 to play, but Rick Smith scored on a dunk off Miller's feed and Miller quickly followed with a 3-point basket and a three-point play to give Indiana a 75-69 lead.

Indiana kept up the pressure, leading 85-72 after three quarters and getting the first two baskets of the final quarter for a 17-point advantage. The Pacers' biggest lead was 93-74 with 9:15 left, coming on a 17-footer by Hayeswood Workman.

"When you have guys like Reggie Miller, who can light it up from the outside, and Rick Smith, who can do damage on the inside, that's just too much pressure on your defense when you're not making shots," Atlanta's Grant Long said.

Actually neither team shot that well. The Pacers hit just under 50 percent and the Hawks just over 42. Smith finished with 17 points and 14 rebounds.

Augmon added 14 points and Long 13 points and 10 rebounds for the Hawks. They shot 36 percent with 13 points in the final nine minutes.

Sonics look for means to stay alive

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Maybe Seattle's 25-point victory over the Los Angeles Lakers in their playoff opener came too easy. Whatever the case, the SuperSonics are on the verge of another early exit from the playoffs.

"From here on, we've got to go out and play," said Seattle's Sam Perkins, a former Laker. "I'm not going to dwell on what went wrong. You've got to take care of your own business, just leave it out there."

"It ain't over. All we've got to do is just play." If it were only that simple. Obviously, it's not.

The Lakers lost seven of their final eight regular-season games before being hammered 96-71 by the host Sonics last Thursday night in the opener of this best-of-5 first-round playoff series.

But two days later, the Lakers won an 84-82 decision in Tacoma, Wash., and Monday night, Los Angeles held on for a 103-101 victory at the Forum to take a 2-1 lead in the series.

In Game 2, the Sonics made only three of their 18 shots in the fourth quarter while being outscored 15-11.

In Game 3, the Lakers went 31-of-37 from the foul line to 15-of-24 for the Sonics, and were especially accurate when the game was decided, making 11-of-12 free throws in the final 4:04.

If the Lakers win Game 4 at the Forum on Thursday night, they will advance to the second round and send Seattle home until next season. If the Sonics win, Game 5 will be played in Tacoma on Saturday.

Seattle won an NBA-high 63 games last season and was seeded first in the Western Conference before being upset by eighth-seeded Denver in the first round of the playoffs.

This year, Seattle had a 57-25 record and was seeded fourth in the West. The Lakers were 48-34 and seeded fifth.

None of that matters now. "We're playing like a group of guys who do have playoff experience," said point guard Nick Van Exel, one of six Lakers who hadn't taken part in a playoff game before last week.

Seattle SuperSonics, from left, Ervin Johnson, Shawn Kemp and Steve Scheffer watch the scoreboard as they fall behind in the second half of Monday's loss to the Lakers in Los Angeles.

Van Exel said, "I've got a lot of confidence right now and the team has confidence in me and that even gives me more confidence. I've just got to come out and keep playing strong and keep being the team leader."

Van Exel has scored 65 points in the 44 for Payton so far in the series. It could be Payton is being bothered by the left ring finger he broke in a game against Dallas on April 13. If so, he's not saying, and after Monday night's game, he waved reporters away.

"I don't think he's telling anybody," Sonics coach George Karl said. "It's something that he has a little bit of macho pride in that he wants to play with it. He's made that statement pretty clearly to everybody, and he doesn't want to hear about alternatives, options, or if it's bothering him. He's going to play."

Threatt, a friend of Payton since the two were teammates in Seattle during the 1986-87 season, said he has noticed a different Payton.

"It seems like the last two years that I watched him, his confidence is not as high (in the playoffs) as it is during the regular season," Threatt said. "He tends to back off."

Rockets set player aside

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets placed Vernon Maxwell on an indefinite leave of absence Tuesday, saying the volatile guard wouldn't return to the court this season.

The team would not elaborate on why Maxwell was put on leave or say whether the guard will be paid for the rest of this season. Maxwell, who played only 16 minutes during Game 1 of the Rockets' first-round playoff series with Utah and missed Game 2, did not immediately return to a telephone call from The Associated Press.

"We want only the best for Vernon and we understand that this is in his best interest," Rockets vice president Bob Weinbauer said. Houston, attempting to defend its

Maxwell

NBA title, is tied 1-1 in its best-of-5 series with the Jazz. "It's always a challenge to find a new piece to the puzzle in the middle of a playoff series like this," Weinbauer said, "but they played the last game with the players they had."

Maxwell argued with coach Rudy Tomjanovich after Game 1 and complained of a hamstring pull Friday. He was sent back to Houston for treatment Saturday, just before the Rockets' 140-126 victory in Game 2.

WALTHAM, Mass. (AP) — Boston Garden fans, subdued and sometimes surly toward the Celtics this season, have reason to roar again. The old building should be filled tonight with a noise that echoes the excitement of the Larry Bird era.

The Celtics might need that edge in Game 3 against the Orlando Magic, who have much better talent, but still must show they can succeed in the playoffs.

"Our fans have come out all season," Boston's Dominique Wilkins said Tuesday. "We didn't play that well here this year and we caught a lot of hell. We showed pride in bouncing back, so I think they'll be behind us."

Boston rebounded from a 124-77 blowout in Friday's opener and handed the Magic just their third home loss of the season, 99-92 Sunday.

The Celtics were only 20-21 at home in Bird's 13 seasons, with them, they had a 452-81 home record, losing more than nine home games in just two of those seasons.

The Magic's 39-2 home record was the NBA's best this season but they were just 18-23 on the road. They finished with seven straight road losses.

One was a 119-114 loss to Boston on April 13 in which the Celtics had 10 more free throws and made 17 more free throws. Shaquille O'Neal made just two of 11 foul shots. He had made eight, the Magic would have won.

Cavs' Ferry seeks shot at Knicks

CLEVELAND (AP) — Danny Ferry wants another track at

"I thought it was there. I hope I had that opportunity again," said Ferry, whose last-second 3-point attempt clanged off the rim at the final horn Monday night and let the New York Knicks take a 103-97 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

The Knicks, leading the best-of-5 series 2-1, flew back to New York after the game, and the Cavaliers took Tuesday off. The series resumes in Cleveland on Thursday night, then returns to New York on Sunday if a Game 5 is necessary.

Ferry was on the floor all for the final seconds of a close playoff game was something of a personal victory. The second overall pick in the draft in 1989, Ferry has occasionally a role player in the NBA, a small forward trapped in a 6-10 body that's not quick enough to create shots or guard many other small forwards.

But on Monday night, after he had played just three minutes in the previous game, Ferry was inserted in the third quarter to help pull the Cavs out of a momentum lull. The move paid off almost immediately when Ferry sank two quick 3-pointers. He scored all nine of his points in the third quarter. "He gave us the real big lift," coach Mike Fratello said. "We needed somebody to make a couple shots, and he came in and did it for us."

The Cavs' stay at the top throughout the second half, closer team leading by more than five points, and it turned into a parade to the free throw line in the fourth quarter.

But even the experience of Magic, who was part of three championship teams with the Chicago Bulls, didn't help Sunday as the Magic's all-time playoff record fell to 1-4.

But there may be only two more Celtics games in the Garden for the fans to see. If the team loses the best-of-5 series, its last game in the building that opened in 1925 will be Game 4 Friday night.

With O'Neal, Antwanine Hardaway and Horace Grant, the Magic clearly are more skillful.

But even the experience of Magic, who was part of three championship teams with the Chicago Bulls, didn't help Sunday as the Magic's all-time playoff record fell to 1-4.

Southwest opens Utah recruiting center
SALT LAKE CITY — Southwest Airlines has opened a corporate recruiting office in Salt Lake.

The so-called Southwest People Department "is the fourth office of the Dallas-based airline will operate. It is primarily responsible for recruiting, career counseling and coordinating internal promotions and transfers in the airline's northwest division."

It will handle recruiting affairs for Salt Lake, Boise, Spokane, Seattle, Portland and Oakland.

The regional manager is Louis DeRango, who said the airline is growing at 10 percent a year.

Boise Cascade in China paper venture
BOISE Boise Cascade Corp. has formed a joint venture to manufacture and sell carbonless paper in China.

The Idaho-based wood products company announced on Monday that it had an agreement with Shenzhen Citing Co. for the proposition.

When a near-term expansion is completed, the venture called Zhuhai Huwin Boise Cascade Specialty Paper Company Ltd. will be the largest producer of carbonless paper in China.

Boise Cascade said the company will build a second plant, contributing 50 percent of the initial $12 million to $14 million investment.

Carbonless paper is used primarily to make multiple copies of business forms without carbon sheets.

The venture will operate a plant to produce 3,000 tons of carbonless paper annually. The company will build a second plant, to be completed in the middle of next year, that will produce 10,000 tons a year.

Union, firm agree on 3-year contract
POCAHELLO The International Association of Machinists has ratified a new three-year contract with FMC Corp. that calls for an 8.5 percent pay increase over the life of the deal.

The agreement, ironed out over five weeks in advance of the April 30 expiration of the old contract, was ratified by 58 percent of the members of Local 1933.

Union President T. Gene McAffee said opposition came from workers concerned about how new terms would affect job seniority and other responsibilities.

"In order for this business to remain cooperative in the future, employees will have to assume more leadership roles and responsibilities, and some members don't know how to accept that," McAffee said. "It's going to take some time to change mind sets."

The contract calls for 3 percent pay increases in each of the first two years and 2.5 percent in the final year. It also increases life insurance coverage and pension amounts and provides pay incentives for employees increasing their skills and accepting a redistribution of work to reduce injuries.

Picking your retirement spot: A final test

Newday

David Savageau probably knows as much as anyone about good retirement spots, but 15 years after his own retirement he has yet to choose one.

"That place has to have mountain vistas, be outdoors-oriented, have good weather to do all the things we always welcome you," said the author of "Retirement Places Rated," which is heading into its fourth edition this summer.

From his Boston suburb, he has his eye on towns from New Hampshire to Tennessee to Colorado. "I really don't know," he said.

But Savageau does know a lot about how to pick a place, a process that has changed over the past five years as seniors have changed.

"People are not moving any more just looking for fun," said Mary Lu Abbott, editor of the magazine "Where to Retire." "Now they're thinking about putting down roots and settling themselves in a new community."

That shift shows up as senior surveys increasingly list safety, low cost of living and work opportunities along with recreation and health care as top priorities.

And that shift has changed the collective expert advice to this, as expressed by Abbott: "Look inward. Look at yourself and your interests. What do you want to be doing for up to a third of your life? Then exhaustively look for places where you can do those things."

A good place to start is retirement-relocation advice books. Lee Rosenberg's "50 Fabulous Places to Retire in America," for example, includes a lot of extras and entertainment ideas when the grandkids come. Savageau's book points out the many popular retirement spots with military bases — which Congress is expected to continue closing, hurting local economies.

The universal advice — and most common expert comment — is that seniors visit in all four seasons any spot in serious contention for retirement. If possible, stay a while and try to live like a retiree. He said, Vacation Exchange Club at (800) 638-3841, which publishes house-exchange catalogs, said many seniors use its service to arrange long stays.

Experts also recommend reading a local newspaper for at least six months, for social and political news. That's how a couple considering one retirement spot learned that a local junior college was about to be converted to a medium-security correctional facility.

A local newspaper also can be a good source of information on retirement relocation experts who do the top concerns for seniors deciding where to move:

- Health Care: To find the closest hospitals, turn to the "American Hospital Association's Guide to the Health 'Care Field," in most libraries. You can then ask those hospitals for physician referrals.

But the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations is in the process of issuing performance reports on almost every hospital in the country. Each report is $30 and available by calling (708) 916-5800.

• Cost of Living: If you're thinking of moving to cut your expenses, but you really rather stay where you are, a budget makeover could help you stay put, advised Jane Cooper, a retirement planning counselor at Equitable Life Assurance.

• Relocation: The National Climatic Data Center in Asheville, N.C., publishes a book called "Comparative Climatic Data" for 270 localities in the United States. Call (704) 271-4800; the cost is $8, including shipping and handling.

• Recreation: Your best bet is to call each state's tourism department. Many of these offices send you detailed promotional materials for little or no charge. Most also have toll-free numbers. To find the one you need, call (800) 555-1212. Ask for the tourism department number of the states that interest you.

• Employment: Local chambers of commerce are the best bet for unemployment statistics. And area offices for the aging can give you some feel for sentiment toward hiring seniors, and maybe even tips on senior job hot lines in your area. Ask for continuing education opportunities, public libraries and public transportation. Most of that's available from local chambers of commerce.

with the appropriate state law enforcement agency.

Typically, many people want to sell houses worth a lot of money and relocate in areas with lower real estate prices. Experts advise retirees to consider not buying a comparably priced home — and investing leftover money for added income.

Experts also advise seniors to be wary of housing sales. One test: Avoid anyone who demands money up front.

Savageau recommended two firms with national real estate listings available for free. Just call and indicate the locale you're interested in: United National Real Estate Co. at (800) 999-1020, and Homes and Land Publishing Corp. at (800) 277-4337.

Japan gives .S. cod shoulder during talks on trade problems

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — The Clinton administration insisted Tuesday there must be a breakthrough this week to resolve America's biggest trade headache with Japan.

But the atmosphere coming into the latest round of auto negotiations has been decidedly chilly.

The U.S. side, frustrated that the talks have made so little progress after nearly two years of bargaining, has threatened to roll out record-setting trade sanctions against Japan if there is no headway soon.

The Japanese, already unhappy because the administration has done so little to brake the precipitous drop in the U.S. dollar, are complaining of high-handed U.S. tactics. One official even complained last week that America's ultimate economic goal was to make his country a Japanese Transport Minister Shizuka Kamei later said he regretted using such figurative language but his comment revealed the trade tensions that exist between the two nations.

Against this backdrop, top negotiators from both countries met in this Canadian Pacific city Tuesday for a second day of talks in advance of negotiations today between U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor and Japanese Trade Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto.

This is obviously an important round of talks as they are going to lead to a reach agreement, said one senior administration official, who spoke on condition that his name not be used.

The administration, which has made a major point of the hawkish of its trade foreign policy, "is desperate to achieve a successful market opening agreement with Japan, in autos and auto parts, which last year accounted for nearly 60 percent of America's record $66 billion trade deficit with Japan."

The United States wants to increase the number of Japanese dealerships that carry American vehicles; to relax Japanese regulations governing repairs and inspections; to let key U.S. auto spare parts; and to obtain new commitments from Japanese automakers that they will increase their purchases of parts for new vehicles.

But the Japanese, outside of the auto sector as the crown jewel of their industrial might, have accused the United States of seeking managed trade and of trying to bring pressure by allowing the dollar to fall to record lows against the Japanese yen.

The dollar dropped further Tuesday as currency traders became concerned that this week's talks will produce no breakthrough that will significantly narrow the U.S. trade deficit. A further drop would add upward pressure on the dollar because it dumps more unwanted dollars into the hands of foreigners.

Other administration officials, also frustrated that the talks have not been used, have said the United States has begun drawing up a list targeting more than $1 billion in Japanese imports for punitive tariffs of 100 percent in what is the most drastic such trade sanction case in U.S. history.
