The bridges of Blaine County

Rising Big Wood River menaces residents' life lines

By Julie M. McKimmon
Times-News writer

BELLEVUE — Down in Poverty Flats, residents and business owners alike worry about what will happen if — or when — the Big Wood River floods and takes Glendale Road's low bridge with it. Without that one-lane bridge, about 150 people — such as Mike and Shelley Hurlless and their two young children, who live a mile from the bridge — will have to travel about 30 miles to get to the point where Glendale Road intersects with Idaho Highway 75 south of Bellevue.

But that living and working in Poverty Flats doesn't mean they know there's not much they can do if the Big Wood River gets out of hand as more melted snow surges south from the Boulder, Smoky and Pioneer mountains. Extra culverts were put under Glendale Road just west of the bridge; Doug Sluder of Glendale Construction shared rock up around the nearby canal's head gates. "It's just a matter of time," Mike Hurlless said. "I was born and raised in Ida-aho, and it's one of the things you cope with. "I guess we'll just fish out some furniture down here that came out from up north... it's my feeling that the river needs to take its own course."

The Glendale Road's span over the Big Wood River west of Idaho Highway 75 is just one of five bridges concerning Blaine County officials. The last time the Big Wood River had record flooding was in 1983, when Star Bridge near Bellevue — one of the five bridges in danger — went out, and water "mushroomed" over Glendale Bridge, said Wood River Fire and Rescue Assistant Chief Bert Lassman.

It would take fire and emergency-medical personnel about an hour to get to about 350 residents west of those bridges if the spans flood or give way. Flooding at the U.S. Highway 20 bridge, which is not anticipated since 3,000 tons of large rocks were put in for stabilization, would further impair their response time, said Wood River Fire and Rescue Chief Dan McKemp.

With snowpacks double their normal depths for this time of year, the Big Wood River continues to rise with warm

White House guard, 'fence jumper' hurt in shooting

The Washington Post and The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A member of the uniformed division of the Secret Service and a man who climbed the White House fence were both shot in an armed confrontation on the grounds Tuesday night, authorities said.

Neither of the two men was reported to have suffered a life-threatening wound in the confrontation, which occurred about 10:45 p.m. EDT. The spokesman said that according to preliminary reports the intruder, who he described as a "fence jumper," was armed. No information was available about any motive in the incident.

The intruder and the Secret Service officer were being treated at George Washington University Hospital.

A spokeswoman at the hospital, which is located seven blocks from the White House, said a uniformed Secret Service officer and a civilian were both brought to the hospital shortly after 11 p.m.

The officer was shot in his arm, while the other man was wounded in his upper body, said the spokeswoman, Merle Goldberg. Both were in stable condition and it was not immediately known whether either would need surgery, she said.

She said neither injury was life threatening. The identities of the two people who were shot were not immediately available.

Acid haulers use I-84

By Kevin Miller
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The first two shipments of nitric acid from Washington state passed quietly through the Magic Valley and southern Idaho Monday on its way across the country.

The acid is contaminated with uranium. "The real hazard in this shipment is the nitric acid itself," Energy Department spokesman Terry Brown said.

The federal Energy Department is sending 183,000 gallons of the contaminated and corrosive acid in tankers along Interstate 84. The first 4,000-gallon shipment of 52 shipments left the Hanford Nuclear Reservation Monday destined for Portsmouth, Md.

Nitric acid is a commonly used industrial chemical solvent. Radioactivity in the acid is only slightly above the natural level of uranium ore, Brown said.

Every Monday for the next 26 weeks, two trucks will leave Hanford on the cross-country trek, Brown said.

Transporting the hazardous material, once used in the decommissioned PUREX facility at Hanford to extract plutonium and uranium, which was later used to make nuclear bombs, is necessary to decontaminate the plant, Brown said.

The PUREX plant was last used in 1992, he said.

The acid is destined for Hinnam, where British Nuclear Fuels will process and recycle the acid.

Beatrice Hinnamford, a spokeswoman for the Snake River Alliance, said the transfer and sale of nitric acid to Britain constitutes nuclear proliferation.

The nitric acid will be used to dissolve spent nuclear fuel rods, recover nuclear material and create nuclear bombs, Hinnamford said.

"We had raised questions about these shipments from the beginning," she said.

The Energy Department conducted an environmental assessment and transportation risk assessment before the shipments began, Brown said. Shipments are marked with radioactive and corrosive placards on the tankers.

Emergency response teams in Idaho have been made aware of the shipments and the dangers involving spills, said Steve Oberg of the state INH Oversight Program.

OKLAHOMA CITY — Standing just a block away in the haze dawn light, they were expecting to hear warning signals before the nine-story bulk of the federal building was brought down with strategically placed explosives.

But buffeting winds drowned the sirens, and when the remains of the building collapsed Tuesday with a thundering boom, survivors of the bombing and relatives of the dead instinctively ducked, recoiled and trembled.

"I wasn't expecting it, I heard the explosion and it brought it all back," said Prescott Salyers, who was pinned under concrete for four hours after her fifth-floor office tumbled to the ground more than a month ago.

"That's what it sounded like," she said, wiping away tears. "That's what I remember."

As on April 19, it started with a loud boom, followed by a billowing cloud of dust.

But this time, there was no bleeding, no frantic screams, no throngs of people fleeing.

Strange lobby battles sugar, peanut farmers

WASHINGTON (AP) — M&M's, Coca-Cola, environmental crusaders and political conservatives.

Odd bedfellows, they're waging a common war on two of agriculture's most entrenched federal beneficiaries — sugar and peanut growers.

After decades of enjoying a government-sheltered market and higher prices, the farmers find themselves on the defensive in a fierce lobbying battle on Capitol Hill.

"It's big food against the farmers," said Dalton Yancey, a lobbyist for the sugar growers, who are searching for compromises that might stave off elimination of their program.

Both sides are hiring lobbying firms, lawyers and public relations consultants. That there is any doubt about the outcome is a sign of the new political climate in Washington.

Much of American agriculture has since the 1930s been protected by an array of price support and subsidy programs. Congress tinkers with them periodically, but changes usually are minor.

This year, however, is different. The Republicans who control Congress were elected on an ideological tailwind that favors free markets and disdains government involvement in the economy.

Balancing the budget has taken precedence over balancing farmers' checkbooks.

Perhaps more important, nearly half of the members of Congress weren't here for the 1990 farm bill, when the growers last rolled over their opposition.

On Tuesday, Reps. Dan Miller, R-Fla., and Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., teamed with Sens. Judd Gregg, R-N.H., and Harry Reid, D-Nev., to introduce a bill that would repeal the sugar program.

The fierce assault against the programs hinges on three arguments. The food giants like M&M's, Coca-Cola and Nabisco say the government programs artificially inflate commodity prices, making their products more expensive for consumers.

Conservatives argue price supports are contrary to the GOP's free-market philosophy.

Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., left, meets with reporters on Capitol Hill Tuesday. With him are Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., Allen Rosenfeld of Public Voice, a lobbying group, and Rep. Philip English, R-Pa.

And environmentalists argue the sugar program has resulted in government-subsidized pollution of Florida's Everglades.

The government supports prices for sugar and peanuts in similar ways, by limiting domestic supply and tightly controlling imports.

The domestic market in peanuts is reserved for growers who hold federally issued quotas. Sugar prices are supported by government loans and quotas. While the programs cost the government relatively little, they result in higher prices.

The growers argue the price support programs insure consumers a stable food supply, provide jobs and helps counter subsidies that foreign governments provide their growers.

And the growers contend the food companies are interested not in consumers, but in profits they could reap if prices for their raw materials declined.

To protect itself, the sugar industry has pumped nearly $12 million in campaign contributions into Washington since 1979, according to a study by the nonpartisan Center for Responsive Politics.

A recent Georgia peanut grower newsletter noted that a special campaign had raised more than $248,000 for donations to political campaigns, to "help Georgia peanut growers gain access to the needed votes."

"We think there is less support for this kind of program than there has ever been before," said Mike McLeod, a lobbyist who heads a coalition of food companies that make most of the peanut butter, candy and snack foods Americans eat. His clients include Procter & Gamble (Jif peanut butter), Nabisco (Planters nuts), and M&M Mars (candy).

Foes of the sugar program include some of the same companies as well as Coke and Pepsi, Kraft and General Foods, which have hired some of Washington's best lobbying and public relations talent.

Mitch Head, a lobbyist for peanut producers, said the food producers' blitz started immediately after last November's elections. "They came out really hard because they smell blood, particularly with the Republican victory," he said.

Rep. Pat Roberts, R-Kan., the chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, feels besieged. "It's been an incredible time period," he

1st man convicted under new domestic violence law

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — A man was found guilty Tuesday of beating his wife into a coma and driving from state to state with her in the car trunk.

It was the first conviction under the nation's new domestic violence law.

Christopher Bailey showed no emotion as the jury verdict was read in U.S. District Court: guilty of kidnapping and violating the federal Violence Against Women Act, passed by Congress last August.

Prosecutors claimed that in November, Bailey, 34, beat his 33-year-old wife, Sonya, then drove for six days around West Virginia, Kentucky and Ohio with her unconscious in his car-trunk. He finally took her to a hospital in Corbin, Ky.

Sentencing was set for Aug. 21. The kidnapping conviction carries a maximum sentence of life in prison. The domestic violence charges carries a punishment of up to 20 years for serious bodily harm or permanent injury and up to life if the victim dies.

Mrs. Bailey remains in a coma, and doctors testified she would never have a normal life.

8.4 million seat belts to be fixed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nine car manufacturers agreed Tuesday to repair or replace Japanese-made seat belts on more than 8 million cars sold from 1986 through 1991 because of concerns the buckles sometimes jam or fail to latch or unlatch.

The agreement for a voluntary recall — one of the largest in history — was reached with seven Japanese manufacturers and two American manufacturers who had the Takata Corp. seat belts: the Transportation Department announced.

The automakers were American Honda Motor Co. Inc., Nissan North America, Inc., Mitsubishi Motor Sales of America Inc., Mazda Motor of America, Inc., American Suzuki Motor Corp., Isuzu Motors America Inc., Subaru of America Inc., General Motors Corp. and Chrysler Corp.

Ford Motor Co. and Daihatsu Motor Co. have not reached an agreement with the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, said William Hoehly, the agency's associate administrator.

Daihatsu, which no longer makes vehicles in the United States, is continuing to meet with the government.

Hoehly said Ford told the government "they don't believe they have any vehicles that have the Takata belts."

Transportation Secretary Federico Peña called the government action a recall. Hoehly said there was no formal finding of a defect in the buckles, but that consumers will be notified within four months and if the companies did not acknowledge a defect, the government's agreement with the automakers would be re-examined on a case-by-case basis. "The bottom line is that the belts will be replaced or repaired free of charge and there's a lifetime warranty," said Ricardo Martinez, head of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

"Our investigation showed, and the automakers acknowledged, that buttons in these buckles have broken and others may break in the future," said Peña. About 8.4 million cars were equipped with the belts. Ford could not be immediately reached for comment, but in an April letter to the government, Ford officials said they had only found six consumer complaints among the 265,000 vehicles with the belts that they said.

At least 90 injuries — but no deaths — have been reported from accidents where the belts were used, according to NHTSA documents. There have been 931 consumer complaints the Takata belts jammed or failed to lock or unlock.

The agency has been investigating the TK-52 and TK-A7 belts since October.

There have been more than 700 complaints about the Takata belts, with some consumers indicating the orange plastic piece of the belt button had chipped off and fallen into the buckle, jamming it.

Several lawsuits claim the buckle came undone during a crash. Automakers supplied by Takata have reported thousands and thousands of warranty claims for seat belt repairs or replacements.

Honda has sold an estimated 37 million cars with the belts in the United States and has received 251 of the consumer complaints, according to NHTSA records. Nissan has sold some 2.01 million; Mitsubishi, 699,181; Mazda 376,967; Suzuki 115,874; Subaru 101,005; Isuzu, 89,902; Chrysler 951,040 and General Motors 466,902, according to NHTSA documents. The documents said Ford had sold 265,000 cars with the belts and Daihatsu, 7,514 such vehicles.

The list of makes includes some of the companies' most popular vehicles, including the Honda Civic, Accords and Preludes; Nissan Infiniti; Mitsubishi Eclipse; and Mazda MX-6 and 323. Most of the vehicles sold by the U.S. Big Three automakers that have the belts, such as the Chrysler Colt, were imported from Japan and some of them also sell under Japanese brand names, such as GM's Geo Tracker and Metro as the Suzuki Sidekick and Swift.

Pentagon announces war disease research

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon announced a $5 million grant program Tuesday to promote research into ailments afflicting veterans of the Persian Gulf War.

The money would be awarded to universities, hospitals and research institutions to examine three issues:

• Epidemiological studies of health problems afflicting Gulf War veterans.

• Health effects of pyridostigmine bromide used alone and in combination with other chemicals. This is an anti-nerve gas agent that some have linked to mystery ailments afflicting some veterans.

• Clinical research examining specific cases and exploring modes of transmission and causes of Gulf War-related illnesses.

The grants, intended for institutions outside the federal government, are being administered by the Army Medical Research and Materiel Command.

"The federal government has a responsibility to make every effort to respond to the needs of American veterans and soldiers," President Clinton said in a statement. "We are working hard to make sure that treatment and extensive research for veterans will not be delayed as it was for Vietnam veterans exposed to Agent Orange. The Department of Defense is taking the right steps in actively pursuing new research efforts."

Dr. Stephen Joseph, who is heading a Pentagon examination of the Gulf War ailments, said the Defense Department will release a study of 10,000 veterans by the end of July containing clinical evaluations of a variety of ailments. The idea, Joseph said, is to ensure that those who are victims of what is sometimes called Gulf War syndrome are assured that every avenue of inquiry has been explored.

Joseph reiterated conclusions reached in an earlier study of a smaller group of patients.

"We see no evidence of chemical or biological warfare agents as having been used in the Gulf War playing a part in this syndrome," Joseph said. But he added, "I don't think we have any evidence that makes us expect to see something unusual or a new disease, but that's the issue ... We will try to follow every lead that seems reasonable."

Study looks at memory loss

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — People may lose some ability to remember as they age because they've shifted much of the job to a less efficient part of the brain, a study suggests.

Using brain scans to watch the mind in action, researchers found that such people may move much of the work away from areas behind the forehead and beneath the left temple, and put more of a burden on an area in the back of the brain.

"As we age, it appears that depending on how good we are at memory, we may be using less efficient brain circuitry to remember things," researcher I-m Hazellett said Tuesday.

Researcher Hazellett conducted brain scans on people of a wide variety of ages as they performed a memory test. Among the older participants, those who performed best showed the same pattern of brain use as the younger participants. "Some people with good memories have younger brains," said Hazellett, a psychologist at the Mount Sinai Medical Center in New York.

The findings may give clues for training people to improve their memory by getting them to use different parts of the brain, she said in an interview.

AMA group says use live babies as donors

CHICAGO (AP) — Babies born with most of their brains missing should be allowed to be used as organ donors before they're dead, a policy-setting committee of the American Medical Association says.

The proposal to change state laws to allow such transplants has created dissent within the AMA and renewed a debate among ethicists. Critics charge it's killing one patient to save another.

"It is," acknowledged Dr. John Glasston, chairman of the AMA Council on Ethical and Judicial Affairs, a nine-member committee whose opinions are considered AMA policy.

But anencephalic newborns, as they are known, are doomed and "don't have any consciousness," said Glasston, a retired North Carolina orthopedic surgeon.

Donating their organs would help ease a serious shortage for children needing transplants and help the parents of the anencephalic newborns deal with their grief, Glasston said.

But George Annas, a Boston University professor of health law, said, "You can't kill babies to take their organs no matter how many lives could be saved."

The committee proposal appears in today's edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Pig hearts for humans 2 years away

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Scientists hope to begin clinical trials transplanting hearts from pigs into humans within two years, an announcement that promises to renew a fierce ethics debate.

"This may ultimately prove the solution to the organ shortage," said Dr. Ernest Prentice of the University of Nebraska Medical Center. But, "it's the most controversial therapeutic proceeding in the history of medicine."

The first transplants of animal organs into dying humans began in 1963, and failed dramatically as patients' immune systems launched immediate attacks that killed the foreign tissues. Doctors tried everything from a sheep heart that beat just 10 minutes in a person to a chimpanzee kidney that kept another patient alive nine months, an unmatched record.

Fire destroys vintage B-29 bomber

COPENHAGEN, Denmark — A vintage B-29 bomber went up in flames as it prepared for its first-flight since crash-landing on an arctic lakeshore in 1947, the leader of an effort to retrieve the aircraft said Tuesday.

Darrell Greenmeyer blamed a leak in a newly installed fuel tank for the fire, which did not seriously injure any of the four crew members but destroyed the World War II-era plane. He did not know what sparked the fire. "The plane was developing good power and we were on our way. I was developing a great sense of joy until somebody (yelled) 'fire,'" Greenmeyer said by telephone from Greenland.

Cells tested to track down viruses, tumors

SAN FRANCISCO — After a dozen decades of failing to find a "magic bullet" for disease, scientists are investing millions of dollars this year in immunological agents they hope will wipe out tumors and viruses without the rigors of standard drugs.

These "bloodhounds" agents are called monoclonal antibodies, natural immune cells engineered to sweep through the blood until they find a tumor, virus, infection or other pathogen, latch on and kill it.

Cyclist kills self after striking girl

ELIZABETH, Pa. — A motorcyclist accidentally killed a 6-year-old girl, then fell to the ground, cried "Forgive me!" and shot himself to death.

"He just suddenly turned into judge, jury and executioner, all at once," said Edward Scheiber, the man's father.

Witnesses told police 25-year-old Jason Scheiber rode his motorcycle rapidly down the road where Tiari Stevenson was riding her bicycle from Pittsburgh to this small, rural community about 20 miles from Pittsburgh.

The motorcycle hit the girl and dragged her about 75 feet. Lt. John Brennan of the Allegheny County Police said Scheiber then walked to the side of the road, lay down in the grass, pulled a .30-caliber pistol from his pocket and shot himself in the head.

Wilson's fund-raising effort falling short

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Contributions to Gov. Pete Wilson's presidential campaign have dropped since throat surgery last month silenced him, and his formal announcement may be delayed again, a campaign source said Tuesday.

Earlier this month, campaign chairman Craig Fuller said the Republican has received about $15 million in pledges. However, actual receipts have lagged since Wilson's April 14 surgery to remove a benign nodule from his vocal cord.

Campaign sources said they now expect to have only about $6 million in hand by the reporting deadline of June 30.

"The governor's recovery from his surgery obviously is taking a little longer than we anticipated," campaign press secretary Dan Schuur said.

Army makes changes at Ranger camps

EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. — The Army is making some changes in Ranger training here as a result of the Feb. 15 deaths of four soldiers who waded for up to five hours through chest-deep water.

The changes include stationing a helicopter refueling truck at Camp Rudder, the Rangers' headquarters in a remote corner of the 724-square-mile base, and installation of water-depth markers in the swamp where three officers and an enlisted man died of hypothermia.

CIA director wants to combine spy work

WASHINGTON (AP) — "One of the things that I intend to do is to ensure that we get the most out of our imagery capabilities," CIA Director John M. Deutch said Tuesday he wants to create an agency combining the intelligence offices that interpret spy photographs.

"This would be a highly creative part for a critical and highly sensitive part of the intelligence business. Photo analysis is spread among the CIA, with its National Photographic Interpretation Center; and numerous Pentagon departments including the individual military services and the Defense Mapping Agency.

"One step that I would propose, we take is to establish a new national imagery agency that will pull together all aspects of collection, analysis and distribution of imagery," Deutch told a CIA-sponsored conference at George Washington University on the early years of the U.S. spy, satellite program.

Study says feds help most by going away

Here's a flash: People run their own business better than Washington does.

No less an authority than the federal government says so. You'll find that admission in a recent Interior Department audit of Bureau of Indian Affairs programs that concludes tribes that took over federal programs expanded reservation services, created new jobs and reported "a sense of pride and accomplishment," according to a report by the department's inspector general.

Imagine. If autonomy from one of Washington's worst-run agencies works for Indian nations, mightn't it work for the rest of America?

Almost from its inception in 1872, the BIA has done more harm than good for the people it was supposed to be helping. It's engendered a culture of dependency that has progressively paralyzed the traditional economies of hundreds of tribes.

On some reservations, five generations of families have never held a job. Alcoholism is four times more prevalent among Native Americans than in the population as a whole, the high school dropout rate nearly double, and infant mortality leads the nation.

It's not just that the federal government has destroyed the independence of Indian tribes; its economic determinism has actually created powerful disincentive for progress. Virtually every economic decision, from land-use to housing development, either has to be cleared by the BIA or another federal agency or conform to their standards.

The subjects are that Indians are still wards of Washington, incapable of independent judgment.

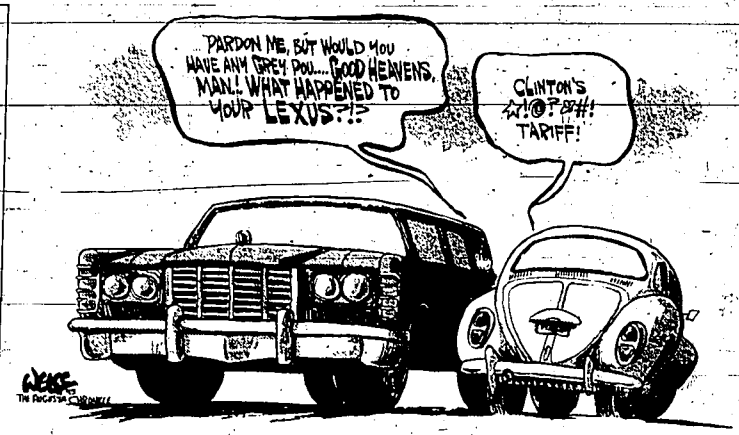

That kind of mind-set is a recipe for disaster for any community, be it the high desert to the inner city. And that's not going to change solely because of the devolution of authority from the BIA and its sister agency, the Department of Health and Human Services' Indian Health Service. So far, only 29 of the 580 federally recognized tribes have signed "self-governance" agreements with the BIA, according to The Associated Press.

But one tribe, which also runs IHS programs, increased its employment of tribal members and their spouses from 89 to 147.

Six other Native American nations increased their police forces; six added judges or other court personnel; one started a veterans affairs office; and eight tribes increased their spending on housing.

Small change, but change for the better. The BIA and IHS don't bear sole responsibility for the mess on American Indian reservations, just as other federal agencies can't be blamed for everything that ails the rest of the country.

But they have often been the biggest impediment to people solving their own problems. That's the real reason of the revolution American voters wrought at the polls last November. Some of the first Americans are living proof.

Many stories are just too bad to believe

AUSTIN — There's an old saw about financial fraud: If an investment sounds too good to be true, it is.

The same is true with horror stories about the government. If it sounds too bad to believe, it is.

In this nation, we now have an entire industry dedicated to telling untrue stories about the horrors of government. The pharmaceutical companies are supporting a whole array of foundations — the Washington Legal Foundation, the Progress and Freedom Foundation, the Competitive Enterprise Institute and Citizens for a Sound Economy — that trash the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, The National Rifle Association has spent years attacking the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms in incendiary language. Timber, mining and ranching interests are giving money to "property-rights" groups all over the country and spreading ludicrous tales about innocent property owners forced into bankruptcy or sent to jail over petty violations of laws preserving wetlands or endangered species or water quality.

For many years, manufacturers have been generously pouring dollars into the campaign to convince people that the tort system is out of control. Their stories are famous for half-truths. Almost everyone has by now heard the story of the lady who spilled a cup of McDonald's coffee on her lap and sued. Imagine! Some idiotic jury gives her $1 million because she doesn't have enough sense not to spill her coffee. Not exactly. The woman suffered severe second- and third-degree burns, spent eight days in the hospital and underwent skin grafts. She tried to settle her case against McDonald's for $20,000, her total medical bill, but the company refused. The jury found against the company because, in addition to the facts in this case, it turned out that McDonald's has more than 700 other claims pending by people who had also sufferred painful burns — but the company still had no intention of reducing the high temperature of its coffee.

The old dodge of telling half the story has become an art form among highly paid public-relations specialists hired by special interests. And we wonder why there is so much anti-government feeling in the nation. Many of these absurd anti-regulatory stories have been picked up by Republican members of Congress and repeated in all their half-baked glory on the floor of the House of Representatives. There seems to be no end to the gullibility of right-wing Republicans and talk-show hosts when it comes to government horror stories. During the House debate on regulatory reform, Rep. Dave McIntosh of Indiana solemnly recounted a story about how the Occupational Safety and Health Administration has mandated that buckets be used to hold paint in the bottom so little kids won't drown in them. That story is just flat untrue.

Ronald Reagan was famous for continuing to repeat untrue stories long after the facts had been established, the press spent years patiently trying to correct him and finally concluded that it was just one of the old boy's amiable foibles — he never let the facts get in the way of a good story, especially if it supported his political ideas. Citizens for Sensible Standards is a coalition of 230 public-interest groups (these are the ones that don't have a financial stake in public policy). The coalition has issued a report called "Myths and Consequences," detailing the full facts in 25 popular horror stories that have been cited by members of Congress. From the alleged case of pineapple pesticide testing in Ohio to the hole-in-the-bucket fairy tale, the report explains how these stories distort the truth, tell only part of the story or are just made up out of whole cloth.

Meanwhile, those of us who are interested in real cases of bad government find our cups runneth over. Quite aside from the question of whether the Republican agenda is good or bad public policy are the problems presented by the fact that the Republicans just don't know how to write laws. That's understandable. Not only haven't they had to do it much for 40 years — but also, in their ideological zeal when they took over Congress, they fired the staff members who do know how to write laws. Now, the Law of Unintended Consequences is catching up with them.

What the Republicans intend to do is, in my opinion, bad enough, but what they are doing through accident, arrogance and stupidity is even worse. Connoisseurs of bad government, heads up!

CROW EATEN HERE: In an effort to keep my own column free of error and half-truths, let me acknowledge two recent blunders.

In a column about agricultural policy, I stated that Tennessie is involved in corporate farming. Actually, Tennessee has had a farm subsidiary in more than 20 years, and, according to a reliable source, it lost its corporate shirt at it way back when. In writing about the investigations that followed the David Koresh disaster, I got it exactly backward: ATF was the outfit that investigated and reported the FBI was the outfit that investigated it and proudly announced that it had done nothing wrong.

Commissioners waste money

I would like some answers from the Twin Falls County commissioners. You had two bids for the Twin Falls County landfill transfer station in Buhl, and you gave the job to the high bidder, Starr Corp., who was nearly $20,000 more money than the low bidder, Petersen Brothers Construction Inc. Both companies are capable of constructing this job in a professional manner, and many hours are spent in putting bids together. On May 9, many phone calls were placed to the commissioners office asking for an explanation of why they authorized the spending of nearly $20,000 to the high bidder. The response was that this project has some specific Environmental Protection Agency specifications in it and because the high bidder has done several of these projects and is scheduled in the fine points of these projects. Therefore, they, the commissioners, felt the high bidder to be more qualified.

But not asked my friend, the truth of the whole matter is that it's just a big cover-up because the commissioners don't have a good reason for why they have spent $19,500 of our tax money. The following is how that high-tech EPA specifications read on the bid form. You judge for yourself.

"There will be a floor drain with adequate grate protection in the lower floor connected to a 1,000 gallon collection tank. The tank is to have access for pump removal of collected contents."

Basically, this is nothing more than a septic tank system — pretty high-tech, wouldn't you say? Can you believe that the commissioners have authorized the spending of nearly $20,000 of the taxpayers' money simply because the high bidder has more schooling in septic tank systems? What a bunch of hogwash!

County commissioners, I pray nearly $1,000 per month in taxes. Yes, per month. I demand that this project be awarded back to the low bidder, or that the three commissioners pick up the difference between high bid and low bid out of their pocket and not the taxpayers.

I would like you people out there, taxpayers of Twin Falls County, to call and remind our commissioners that we the people of Twin Falls County demand honesty, integrity and complete concern for the taxpayers and not their own selfish interests, whatever they may be.

Time to stand up and be counted

Who are we, you and I? Are we still "we the people?" When did we allow the government "of the people to become the government "for the people?"

Who intends up there in the great Congress of the United States?

Do you feel, as I do, the slippery sands of freedom beginning to erode under our feet in this great land? Oh, don't get me wrong — we'll fight to get it back, but what are we waiting for? Why are we letting the fear of irrational, idiotic terrorist kooks cloud our minds? What are we afraid of anyway? Big brother in Washington will protect us even if he has to kick in every door in the country, confiscate our firearms and kill if he has to!

Have no fear. Killys is here! We are endowed by the Constitution of the United States, with the power of the ballot box and the voice God gave us to let the government know just who is in charge. Our vote put them in there and our vote can damn well get them out.

It's time to stand up and be counted! Our voices can be heard. But let us hope that it won't be too late and the sounds of gunfire and marching feet have already drowned us out.

Community shows lack of pride

As a former student of Shoshone High School in the hospital and underwent skin grafts. She tried to settle her case against McDonald's for $20,000, her total medical bill, but the company refused. states that she knew there wouldn't be survivors, yet she took her first-aid kit, then left it in the pickup. She saw smoke and debris scattered over the area, stated she wasn't there to ogle but did just that. She also claimed the scene to be on her mountain (perhaps Bureau of Land Management would disagree) and that she had a right to be there. Morbid curiosity does not entitle her to free access in a situation such as that.

The resentment of Ms. Huxhold for the emergency medical technician who asked her to leave the scene is apparent. By admission, Ms. Huxhold was screaming and her husband was swearing at the EMT. I have friends in emergency medical services who have, many times, commented on how bystanders have helped or hindered them. Emergency personnel do not need Rescue 911 wannabes. However, bystanders who are cooperative and willing to listen and help are of great benefit. Ms. Huxhold needs to realize that emergency responders are trained to handle these situations. They have much more to consider than just looking for bodies. They have a responsibility to ensure the safety of all persons at the site. I'm sure one of their concerns was that Ms. Huxhold or others could become more victims. One of the things that has been emphasized to me is try not to make a bad situation worse. Remember, this is a woman who has just seen Jesus. Rational thought is questionable.

While Ms. Huxhold's initial intentions may have been good, she placed herself and others in danger. Other factors were present which may have contributed to unsafe conditions. Obviously, Ms. Huxhold does not know anything about hazardous materials. Nobody knew what the plane was carrying, and what potential danger there was to emergency personnel, as well as bystanders. The EMTs on scene certainly didn't have time to explain the reasons behind the request for her to leave. Ms. Huxhold said she felt the rush of adrenaline and thought about how she could save lives. If she truly has this desire, EMT classes, as well as first-responder classes and volunteer organizations such as fire departments and search and rescue organizations, can use the help. Training is provided.

Another benefit of these classes is they teach students to think before they act. This would have been beneficial to Ms. Huxhold. The trained people were doing their jobs and do not deserve to be admonished for trying to protect Ms. Huxhold as well as others.

Anti-radicals law may close down cult

TOKYO — A Cold War law passed to restrict leftist radicals is what officials said Tuesday could be used to ban legally the sect believed responsible for the Tokyo subway nerve gas attack.

The Subversive Activities Prevention Law has been applied before only to eight individuals, all radical leftists.

But no group has ever been singled out, partly due to criticism from Communists and others that the law could be used by the government in political disputes.

The Aum Shinto Kyo (Supreme Truth) cult, whose leaders are under arrest on suspicion of murder in the March 20 subway attack, is the first religious organization even to be investigated as a potential subversive group.

French premier targets unemployment

PARIS — France's new premier mapped out a war on poverty and joblessness in his first policy speech Tuesday, promising to raise the minimum wage and to offer employers financial incentives to hire young people and the long-term unemployed.

The minimum wage, currently the equivalent of $1,200 a month, will be raised "significantly" July 1, Alain Juppe said, without committing himself to any specific figure. A year ago, it was raised 2.1 percent to match inflation.

Companies will be exempted from paying benefits and will receive a $400 monthly subsidy for every minimum-wage hire who has been out of work more than a year.

The government also will subsidize employment of young minimum-wage earners just entering the job market, Juppe said without elaborating in his speech to the National Assembly.

Ex-student leader fasts in China jail

BEIJING — A student leader of the 1989 pro-democracy protests has been on a hunger strike since his weekend arrest, vowing to die unless the government promises democratic reforms, a human-rights group said Tuesday.

Twelve other activists also have been arrested in the past few days, two picked up Tuesday and 10 reported earlier by the New York-based group Human Rights in China.

China is approaching the sixth anniversary of the June 4, 1989, military crackdown on the protests in Beijing, when troops killed hundreds of unarmed people in Tiananmen Square. In past years, the period leading up to the anniversary has brought more surveillance and detentions for dissidents.

Wang Dan has been on a hunger strike since he was arrested Sunday, the human rights group said.

German police capture 2 escapees

BONN, Germany — Two escaped convicts who roared around northern Germany for two days in a Porsche with police on their tail were captured without a shot Tuesday and their hostage freed.

At a downtown intersection in the northern city of Osnabrueck, police vehicles rammed the kidnappers' car — a Volkswagen Golf GTI they stole Tuesday morning after ditching the Porsche.

About 15 officers rushed the VW, hauled out the two desperados and rescued the captive, a prison guard used by the kidnappers as a human shield.

The 51-hour drama started Sunday morning when inmate Peter Snaedinger and Guenther Finneisen grabbed guard Dietmar Kraft at a high-security prison near Celle in northern Germany.

Bus crash kills at least 10 in England

LONDON — A bus carrying pensioners on a day's outing overturned and crashed in western England Tuesday afternoon, and police said that at least 10 people were killed.

"There are 10 people dead," police Inspector Keith Jones told Channel 4 news. "There are still people trapped and it is too early to give an exact figure."

Confusion was caused by rescuers' inability to reach all the people in the overturned bus. A crane was brought to the site.

Bosnia battlefields are quiet; diplomacy noisy

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnian battle zones were largely quiet Tuesday with the exception of Sarajevo but efforts on the diplomatic front suffered an apparent setback.

U.S. envoy Robert Frasure was recalled from Belgrade after failing to persuade Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic to formally recognize Bosnia and Croatia in exchange for the suspension of U.S. economic sanctions, the Clinton administration said.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher summoned Frasure, a deputy assistant secretary of state, home to Washington after a week of talks broke down over conditions for lifting the sanctions in exchange for recognition of the two enemy states.

Accepting Bosnia and Croatia, two former Yugoslav republics, as independent nations would have been a blow to Bosnia's Serbs and their dream of a Greater Serbia.

Serbs in Bosnia control about two-thirds of the country, with the long-term objective of uniting the land they hold with Serb-controlled territory in Croatia and Serbia.

Diplomatic sources in Sarajevo said word from Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic that he would be ready to negotiate did not appear to move the peace process forward.

Karadzic reiterated his previous stance that he would consider an international peace plan as the basis for negotiations, the Bosnian Serb SRNA news agency reported.

Sudan won't extend cease-fire with rebels

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Sudan has refused to extend a two-month cease-fire with southern rebels that expires Sunday.

A Foreign Ministry official said Tuesday the government wanted to consider the benefits of extending the truce, brokered by former President Jimmy Carter in March to allow a campaign against a parasite that causes river blindness.

German court clears ex-spies

BONN, Germany (AP) — Most of the East German spies whose tentacles reached into the heart of West Germany can't be prosecuted by the state that absorbed them after their defeat, Germany's high court ruled Tuesday.

The Federal Constitutional Court ruling should help to clarify the legal framework for Germany's reckoning with its bitter Cold War legacy.

Conservatives and victims of communist repression denounced the ruling, saying it gave credibility to a corrupt and criminal regime. Representatives of some 6,000 former East German spies rejoiced.

Tuesday's ruling was an "encouraging signal" that would end years of "uncertainty, defamation and prosecution," said Markus Wolf, the legendary East German spy chief.

Defendant will represent himself

POCATELLO — A defendant in a Pocatello hostage and extortion trial will represent himself, but can ask legal advice from his former defense attorney.

Mark McGrath, 36, Monday told U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge he wanted to dismiss his public defender, Monte Whittier, and represent himself.

McGrath said he has a different defense strategy than Whittier. Lodge reluctantly agreed.

He decided Whittier can remain at McGrath's side to provide him advice during the trial. Jury selection began Tuesday and could run for three weeks.

McGrath and co-defendant Steve Atchison, 35, were charged in a 15-count federal indictment after eight people were taken hostage last summer in downtown Pocatello as part of a bungled extortion plot.

Pocatello board scuttles interchange

POCATELLO — A controversial freeway interchange at Chubbuck has been scuttled as the Hamcock Planning Organization policy board voted to recommend using the money for another project.

At the board's meeting Monday, members voted unanimously to recommend to the Idaho Transportation Board to use $10.1 million in federal funds to improve the Pocatello Creek interchange instead.

Sen. Evan Frazier, R-Pocatello, chairman of the Idaho Senate's Transportation Committee, pushed the Chubbuck project despite much local opposition, including Chubbuck Mayor John Cotant.

Officials said another $2.9 million is needed to finish the Pocatello Creek project and Frazier said he would use his position on the Transportation Committee to seek state funding.

Signs assert private ownership of land

GRANGEVILLE — Forest Service officials are looking for a person calling himself "The White Knight" or "The Blue Knight" who is posting signs claiming private ownership of national forest lands.

Michael Merkle of the Nez Perce National Forest said Monday forest employees have discovered 10 signs posted around the McComas Meadows-Sugarloaf area, about 25 miles east of Grangeville. The signs describe the range and township of the forest lands and conclude: "Signed: The White Knight, 13th day of March 1995. This deed is finished." Below the lettering is a colored map of the described area, and alongside the map is a happy face with the caption, "Have a Nice Day."

New deans arrive at Idaho State

POCATELLO — Interim engineering dean Jay Kunze has been named to the permanent post at Idaho State University.

The new pharmacy dean, Barbara G. Wells, will join the growing ranks of women administrators at Idaho State when she arrives June 30.

Kunze, as associate professor, has been interim dean since Hary Charly died last June. Kunze has been at Idaho State since 1993, after moving from the University of Missouri at Columbia where he was nuclear engineering chairman for 10 years.

Gibbs pleads guilty to reduced charge

POCATELLO — A Pocatello man charged with rape after a woman said she withdrew her consent when he refused to wear a condom has pleaded guilty to a reduced charge.

The felony aggravated battery conviction of John J. Gibbs, 24, carries a maximum penalty of 15 years in prison and a $50,000 fine.

"We felt it was in the best interest of the victim. It was also in the interest of justice," Hamcock County Deputy Prosecutor Kay Lyon said Monday.

Rural school district can't fill board seat

PLUMMER (AP) — While advocates warn that voters want term limits on elected officials so badly they will punish politicians who oppose them in the future, a Panhandle school district cannot find anyone to fill a seat on its board.

"I can't really remember the last person who filled that position," said Kathy Kolar, Plummer-Worley Joint School District chairman and board member for the past five years.

The rural district's northern zone has been perpetually unrepresented on the board despite district advertisements to fill the vacancy and repeated discussion of the problem at every board meeting.

"You can see the difficulty in getting people to serve," Kolar said. "If they'll serve 20 years, that's better than not having anybody at all."

In last week's election, there was no candidate on the ballot for that area and no one in the area voted.

Under Idaho's state and local term limits that were unaffected by the Supreme Court's voiding of state-imposed congressional term limits, school board members can serve no more than six years during the previous 11. That restriction will be initially felt in the elections of 2000 because the calculation of valid terms did not begin until this year.

And Kolar maintains it takes about five years for a school board member to begin to understand school finance and the other technical issues surrounding public education.

Because the existing board of the consolidates school district operates relatively amicably, the persisting vacancy has not created any insurmountable problems. But it still leaves the zone without representation although much of the area is comprised of retired people and part-time residents.

Voters of small town try to oust 'bully' mayor

TENSED (AP) — Some people in Tensed, a Benewah County community of 90, want to recall Mayor Ed Dohman.

They say he rails at the city clerk and curses constituents in public meetings. "It's caused a lot of tension, a lot of wondering what our local government has come to," said City Council member Carl Zarate.

Dohman has no intention of stepping down. He said he's tired of being attacked by a group of "almost diabolical" people.

"It's a vicious little town," he said. "I'd say I'm madder than hell about the way things are going."

Zarate and others say they're equally appalled by the mayor's behavior. "It's bullying — there's no other way to say it," said Council member Gary Seaton. "He who screams the loudest gets his way."

About one-third of the community's residents have signed a petition calling for Dohman's recall. The mayor, the petition says, "doesn't preserve the dignity and quality of council meetings by allowing personal agendas to come before the planned agenda."

Nampa man pleads guilty to shooting death

CALDWELL (AP) — Jonathan Gerald Trujillo, 25, could be sentenced to life in prison after pleading guilty to shooting another man to death last November.

Trujillo pleaded guilty to second-degree murder Tuesday before 3rd District Judge Gerald Weston and is to be sentenced July 31 at a hearing starting at 9:30 a.m. He faces a minimum of 10 years in prison.

Trujillo, of Nampa, originally was charged with first-degree murder, assault on a police officer and using a firearm to commit crimes after Jaime Schuller, 22, was shot seven times.

Drivers license offices will close part of June 2

TWIN FALLS — Two Twin Falls County drivers license offices will close part of the day on June 2, so county employees can learn new changes in state laws from the Idaho Department of Transportation.

The Twin Falls drivers license office will shut down the morning of June 2, and reopen at noon, according to a news release from the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department.

Meanwhile, the Bluff office will remain open the morning of June 2 from 8 a.m. to noon, and close at 1 p.m. for the rest of the day, the release said.

Sheriff's department hopes to take bite out of rural crime

TWIN FALLS — Gone are the days when farmers and ranchers could leave their keys in the pickup truck and their barns unlocked — and the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department is starting a campaign to teach them how to prevent theft in rural areas.

The department is setting up 11 boxes containing pamphlets on rural crime prevention around the county, especially wherever farmers and ranchers hang out and drink coffee, said Sgt. Todd Peterson.

Peterson, who recently returned from a seminar in California on rural crime, said he hopes the information will decrease some problems such as theft of cattle and equipment, dogs at large, trespassers, and dead animals.

Farmers and ranchers should immediately report missing livestock, and brand calves early, Peterson said. Theft can be prevented by taking the keys out of the ignition of farm vehicles, and disconnecting the batteries, he said.

For more information, call the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department at 736-4040.

Workshop on addictions, AIDS to be rescheduled

TWIN FALLS — An AIDS and addictions workshop scheduled by the Walker Center and the South Central District Health Department for Thursday afternoon has been canceled.

The workshop, which was supposed to take place in the KMYT Community Room, will be rescheduled at a future date.

Presentation on stepfamilies will take place on June 3

TWIN FALLS — The presentation "I Didn't Grow Up to be a Wicked Stepmother" by the Stepfamilies Association of Idaho founder has been rescheduled for June 3.

Association founder Marion Summers, who also is a Stepfamily Association of America board member, is a stepmother, an author and a Meridian Middle School counselor. The workshop will be held at the College of Southern Idaho from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., and the workshop costs $10 to include lunch.

Summers will discuss the role of a stepmother, communication with stepchildren, and the power of communication with biological parents and managing stepfamily stress. To register or for more information, call Diana Pauls at CSI's Center for New Directions, 736-0070.

AAA: gas prices up heading into Memorial Day weekend

BOISE — Gasoline prices are at their highest level of 1995 heading into the Memorial Day holiday weekend, but the American Automobile Association does not expect the higher prices at the pump to last.

AAA's survey of 84 Idaho stations found the average price for self-service unleaded was up a nickel a gallon since Easter and six cents a gallon since last year. But the AAA said holiday travel will be the heaviest on record.

The average pump price throughout the state was $1.18 a gallon for unleaded fuel, about 16 cents below the average price nationwide and at the lower end of the price range for the region. The statewide average over the past five Memorial Day weekends has been $1.16 a gallon. The national average posted the largest one-month increase at the pump in the Iraq attack on Kuwait in August 1990 to put the holiday weekend price at its highest in a decade.

Regionally in Idaho, the northern part of the state reported the highest average price at nearly $1.22 a gallon while the southwestern part of the state had the lowest average at just over $1.14.

Chutist scrapes Seattle skyscraper

Twin Falls doctor on the mend after ill-advised jump from 76-story building

The Times-News and The Associated Press

SEATTLE — A doctor about to begin a medical residency was told by his skydiving instructors not to try a parachute jump from a building, but he didn't listen.

As a result, Jeff Summers, 31, of Twin Falls, was listed in satisfactory condition with a fractured skull and cuts Tuesday at Harborview Medical Center after a near-freakful 12-story leap from the Columbia Seafirst Center, second-highest building on the West Coast.

Summers and two companions, a man and a woman whose names were withheld by police, were under investigation for trespassing and property damage, Officer Sean O'Donnell said.

It was the second parachute jump from the 76-story skyscraper. The first was by a pair of jumpers who landed unscathed on Aug. 22, 1984, shortly before construction was completed. The owner of the building at the time did not press charges.

Summers, a 1990 graduate of the University of Washington Medical School, was set to leave Wednesday for a residency in Honolulu, "and apparently he had always wanted to jump off the building," O'Donnell said.

Twin Falls school officials remember Summers as a bright, adventurous student who sometimes got bored and restless. Summers graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1982. The Times-News was unable Tuesday to reach his mother, Sue Summers-Carver of Twin Falls.

"He was a little bit offbeat, not terribly out of line, but now and then you had to put your finger on him and say, 'whoa,'" said Jerry Kleinkopf, a retired former track coach. "Like a lot of bright kids, he'd get bored and ruck the boat," Kleinkopf said.

O'Donnell and Gordon Mosley, a building management spokesman, gave the following account:

The trio apparently entered the building about 2:30 a.m., climbed stairways to the top and triggered an alarm when they circumvented a lock to reach the roof, 954 feet over the street.

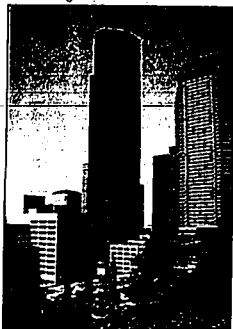

A security guard reached the roof and summoned the group back inside shortly after 4 a.m. "Two of them started to turn and go with him, and the other just bolted" over the eastern side, Mosley said.

The chutist maneuvered himself around to the north side, then was caught by a gust of wind and blown into the side of the building, breaking a window on the 17th floor.

"At that point, the chute collapsed, and he fell down to (the atrium roof on) the fifth-floor level," O'Donnell said.

The only building west of Chicago and Houston taller than Columbia Seafirst Center is the 1,017-foot First Interstate World Center in Los Angeles.

Summers went through a 25-jump student training program at the Snohomish Parachute Center, about 25 miles northeast

Jeff Summers, Twin Falls, jumped from Seattle's Columbia Seafirst Center, early Tuesday. Summers was injured when he smashed into some windows on the 17th floor. His parachute then collapsed and he fell another 12 stories. He had jumped from planes about 100 times in the past two years, owner Jamey Woodward said. This is the classic case of just enough knowledge to hurt yourself," Woodward said. "You become just enough convinced of your own invincibility that you think nothing can hurt you."

Many skydivers go 300 to 400 times in their first year, he said.

The Columbia Center jumpers in 1984, Steve King and Brad Dunken, had a combined 3,500 jumps in 20 years of skydiving, and made two air trips over the building and spent 40 hours to map the location of ledges, wires and other potential obstacles.

About two weeks ago, out of the blue, Summers mentioned his interest in "BASE jumping," an acronym for parachuting off high buildings, antennas, structures and earth formations like cliffs and ledges.

Instructors at Snohomish Parachute, which operates only for people who jump out of airplanes, couldn't get him to drop the idea, Woodward said, so he put Summers in touch with Anne Helliwell, co-owner of Basic Research in Perris, Calif. Helliwell said Summers called about a week ago to ask about parachute jumping offices were planning to use. "I told him he was my worst nightmare," Helliwell said. "He sat down and he listened. He asked me a lot of questions. At the end of the conversation he said, 'You talked me out of it.'"

That was the last she heard until reporters began calling Tuesday.

"What an idiot. Man, oh man. It sounds like an ego trip to me," she said, asking for the hospital's telephone number. "I'm going to give him a call. He's going to get a piece of my mind."

Injured woman files kidnapping complaint

By Liz Wright Times-News writer

CASTLEFORD — A woman told police she was kidnapped at gunpoint by her former boyfriend on the weekend, but prosecutors hadn't yet obtained a warrant for the man's arrest Tuesday.

Marilyn Fournier, 38, of Castleford, was hospitalized at the Twin Falls Clinic Saturday for numerous bruises to her head and upper body, and a possible broken hand, said Lt. Bob Gauthier of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department.

Fournie had been arguing Friday about the home and barn that she rents from him. Later, the Castleford man returned to the house, lifted his shirt to expose a handgun tucked in the waist of his pants, and told her they were going to take a little ride, Gauthier said.

The man drove her in his small white pickup to a Twin Falls motel, where they spent

Friday night, and he repeatedly threatened to kill her, Gauthier said.

Saturday, the man drove her to his Castleford home and beat her, Gauthier said. Fournier managed to escape and was helped to safety by other residents, he said. Sheriff's deputies were notified Sunday.

Gauthier said his deputies filed their crime report Monday with the Twin Falls County prosecutor's office so that prosecutors could request a judge to issue an arrest warrant against the man.

These days in the court system, it typically takes four to five days after a crime to issue an arrest warrant against a perpetrator, Gauthier said.

Tuesday evening between 5 p.m. and deputy prosecutors were aware of the kidnapping complaint, but apparently hadn't assembled all the paperwork for a warrant. They plan to refer the case as soon as possible, said Twin Falls County Deputy Prosecutor Jonathan Hruby.

DEQ: State can comply

By William Brock Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A recent court order forcing government water-quality experts to pick up the pace of cleaning up 962 Idaho waterways is a daunting task, but not impossible, a state Division of Environmental Quality official said Tuesday.

"The reality is that once you start to get into the mechanics of the solution, you get into economics of scale that will help you solve the problem," said Walt Poole, assistant administrator of community programs for the DEQ.

On Friday, Federal District Judge William Dwyer, in Seattle, ruled that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has one year to produce a schedule to guide development of pollution-limit plans known as "Total Maximum Daily Loads."

In simple terms, a TMDL determines how much pollution a particular waterway can stand then sets a "budget" for how much pollution each polluter can contribute.

They were required by the federal Clean Water Act of 1979, but the state of Idaho has only produced two TMDLs in the intervening 16 years. At that pace, it could take more than a thousand years for Idaho's other threatened waterways to get TMDLs, Judge Dwyer said.

The judge's decision came in the wake of a lawsuit brought against the EPA by the Idaho Conservation League and the Idaho Sporting Congress. The two groups main-

Cassia County to continue its sex education program

By Kevin Miller Times-News writer

BURLEY — Three years after it was introduced, the abstinence-based sex education program in the Cassia County School District has not been widely adopted by the conservative community, officials say.

A community committee reviewed the Teen Aide curriculum earlier this month and recommended to continue the program with only minor updates in materials, Assistant Superintendent Jerry Doggett said.

Controversial at its inception, sex education has become a tame topic in Cassia County schools since the program was adopted in the fall of 1992.

"Overall, we've had very few people have a concern with it," Doggett said. The curriculum, offered in grades eight and ten, does not deal with contraception, teen pregnancy, or homosexuality and only mentions abortion and sexually-transmitted diseases.

"It emphasizes abstinence until marriage. The only true safe sex is abstinence," Doggett said.

Self-esteem and assertiveness skills are the focus of the curriculum, much like drug education courses in the district. Eighth-grade students learn lessons such as "Friendship and Dating," while high school sophomores study from a binder labeled "Sexuality, Community and Family."

The curriculum steers clear of explicit sexual discussion. It is designed to prepare students for making decisions about sexual activity, Doggett said.

"We're not going to eradicate those hormones, so you've got to learn to deal with them," Doggett said.

The district defers more explicit sexual discussions to parents.

"We encourage parents to discuss their philosophy about sex at home," School Board Member Karla Robinson said.

"Robinson said she has heard no complaints about the program. A few people have asked that the curriculum be expanded, she said. But Robinson doubts that will happen.

"I think the community trusts the way it is being handled," Robinson said. "I don't see it changing."

The program is based on parental involvement, Doggett said. "Parent grams" are sent home with each lesson taught as a way to open up discussion with parents, he said.

All classroom materials are made available to parents, Doggett added.

Measuring the curriculum's effectiveness has been difficult. Other than an unscientific survey of students that showed kids thought the class was helpful, there are no means to quantify the effect of the sex education curriculum.

"If the students and parents work together, I think it will make a difference," Doggett said. "Surely, somewhere along the line, we're picking up one of the kids."

Minidoka County buys land for anglers

By Jennifer Bunch Times-News writer

PAUL — Minidoka County Commissioners are buying land south of Paul with a local performing arts center and a fishing spot for anglers in mind.

The county is buying a 55-acre abandoned gravel storage site west of Connor's Cave, and north of the Burley-Paul exit on Interstate-84 from the Department of Transportation. The price is $78,630, and Idaho Department of Fish and Game plans to pay $23,000 of the cost.

"Though a fine arts center is still only a possibility," Commissioner John Remberg said, the county wants to decide the land to recreation whether the center is built or not.

"We have had several offers to put development in," Remberg said, noting that service and recreational companies recently have approached the county.

Meanwhile, the county has until June 30 to work out financing on the purchase and sell an easement to Fish and Game.

Fish and Game fisherman Jerome Fred Partridge in Jerome said the agency has about 30 acres of water surface to work with. It plans to provide a variety of fish, crabs and stock the waters with fish, he said.

Water temperature will determine whether the lake is stocked with trout, bass or bluegill, Partridge said.

A residents' group called the Min. Arts Heritage Foundation wants the fine arts center. The group has considered building an art gallery, concert hall and convention center. It has been said that any fine arts stage would need to be big enough to draw a tractor on it in order to fly in the Mini-Cassia area.

Panel asks Board of Education to yank ex-deputy's certificate

BQISE (AP) — A state panel has asked the Board of Education to revoke the Idaho teaching certificate of Terry L. Haws, formerly chief deputy to state Schools Superintendent Anne Fox, based on the fact he pleaded no contest to a misdemeanor sex charge, involving a minor and failed to disclose the fact.
Haws' attorney said Tuesday Haws is contesting the administrative action, and he expected to file a reply to a complaint from the Professional Standards Commission this week. Haws is expected to ask for a hearing before the Board of Education.
Haws was campaign manager for Fox as she won a four-year term as the state's top education official in November. In January, he was appointed Haws as her chief deputy.

James A. Smith, chief certification officer for the Board of Education, filed a complaint with the Board asking that Haws' teaching certificate be revoked, based on violation of the Code of Ethics of the Idaho Teaching Profession.
The complaint said Haws applied for an Idaho teaching certificate in 1987, he answered "no" to a question asking if he had ever been convicted of a crime other than a minor traffic offense.

When Haws in 1992 applied for a job with the Nampa School District he also replied "no" to the question asking if he had a criminal violation. Haws worked at the Nampa Alternative High School but his contract was not renewed for 1993-94, the complaint said.
The complaint said on Jan. 13, 1984, Haws was charged in Alaska with one count of contributing to the delinquency of a minor, two counts of misconduct involving controlled substances and one count of attempted misconduct involving drugs.

The complaint said the indictment was handed down by a grand jury after reviewing allegations that Haws had offered marijuana to two minor boys and asked one of the minors to perform sexual acts upon him in return for the drugs.

On April 13 of that year, the complaint said, Haws pleaded no contest to the misdemeanor charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor, was found guilty and fined $750, with $400 suspended, given a suspended 60-day jail term and placed on probation for three years.

On Nov. 29, 1984, the felony counts of misconduct involving a controlled substance and attempted misconduct involving drugs were dismissed.
On April 27 of this year, the Executive Committee of the Professional Standards Commission found probable cause that Haws committed acts for which the penalty is revocation or suspension of his Idaho license.

They include a requirement to present "proof" of professional qualifications accurately and completely. "Another section forbids conduct which is offensive to the ordinary dignity, decency and morality of others."
Haws' attorney, David Manweiler, said his answer would contend in part that the relevant law requires such a disciplinary request be signed by at least two people who are equal to Haws in rank, although Smith contends that any certified teacher could sign the recommendation.

High court rejects probation in abuse case

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Supreme Court has rejected a bid for probation for a man sentenced to at least 20 years in prison for sexually abusing two young girls, one as young as four months.

An opinion written by Justice Cathy Sitak, the Supreme court on Tuesday unanimously rejected the sentence ordered by 4th District Judge Robert Newhouse after Henry Clyde McWay was convicted of lewd conduct with minor children.
The judge ordered McWay held in prison at least 20 years for life.

The defense argued that McWay was seriously mentally ill and should be placed on probation for the rest of his life.

Sitak's opinion said the sentencing judge felt that McWay should be held in prison at least 20 years because the two small girls became adults, "so that they could develop throughout their childhood without the fear that they would jeopardize them once more."

The court called the effects of McWay's acts "horrifying and repulsive," particularly for a girl who was between the ages of 2 and 4 when the acts occurred.
"She displayed suicidal and self-destructive behavior," the court noted.

The exact nature of the effect that McWay's actions will have on the victims in the years to come cannot be determined, but they undoubtedly will experience serious consequences for the rest of their lives."

The appeal tried to attack Newhouse's decision to allow a videotape of an interview with one victim to be used at trial.

The videotape was made when the girl was 4, but the case did not come to trial until she was 7. When the defense tried to claim that the victim's mother coached her into testifying against McWay, the prosecution used the videotape to show her statements during the present "hock" and last both legal proceedings accurately and completely.

The defense also claimed use of the 3-year-old videotape violated McWay's right to confront the witness and cross-examine. But the Supreme Court said since the young witness testified at trial, that argument had no merit.

In other Supreme Court decisions released Tuesday: The court upheld a directed verdict against a sexual harassment claim filed by Yolanda De Los Santos against the J.R. Simplot Co. District Judge Duff McKee ruled the woman failed to prove her case. She alleged several adverse evidentiary rulings but the Supreme Court upheld them.

The Supreme Court revived a lawsuit filed by Russell and Nancy Orthman against Idaho Power Co. Orthman suffered electrical shock when he was electrocuted and the use of his hands when he tried to reconnect electrical service to his farm after the utility turned it off. The couple claimed Idaho Power was negligent because it knew or should have known he would attempt to reconnect the power line.

The district judge ruled that the act of attempting to reconnect was an intervening cause that would intercept any negligence on the part of Idaho Power. But the Supreme Court ordered the case sent back to district court for further proceedings.

Utah town set to protest taking acres for Micron

PROVO, Utah (AP) — The city of Highland isn't happy with Lehi's plan to annex 25 acres for a new Micron semiconductor plant, a parcel of Highland valued for its own tax base.

Highland Mayor Ed Scott says that if Lehi isn't willing to relinquish the 25 acres, his city is prepared to take legal action.
"We really don't want to play that card," Scott said, since it is politically unpopular to show any opposition to Micron's plans to build the $1.5-billion plant in northern Utah County.

If Highland protests, the complaint will be heard by the Utah County Boundary Commission. If that fails, Scott said, Highland may pursue the matter in civil court.

The 25-acre parcel of land, just a portion of Lehi's overall Micron-related annexation, is identified in Highland's policy declaration as a future industrial park that would widen the city's tax base. A policy declaration is a city's statement of its development plans.
Scott believes Highland will bear the brunt of Micron's impact and he doesn't want to be left without revenue to deal with required improvements to roads, water and sewer systems.

If Highland protests the annexation, Micron's construction plans could be delayed by at least the 45 days it would take for the boundary commission to arbitrate the case.
Lehi Mayor Bill Gibbs said Highland's request comes a little too late. The matter was taken a month ago to the Utah County Commission, which ruled in Lehi's favor.

"When Micron comes along, they smell a little money," Gibbs said. He called Highland's threat to protest the annexation "ridiculous." The same piece of land has been a part of Lehi's policy declaration for several years longer than Highland's. Highland County Supervisor Clyde Naylor, however, he acknowledged a policy declaration is not legally binding.

Autopsy says Deary woman likely drowned in river

SALMON (AP) — An autopsy on the body of a 19-year-old Deary woman found in the Salmon River showed she probably drowned.

"I didn't find any other cause of death," said Thomas Mitchell, a pathologist at Eastern Idaho Regional Medical Center.

Rosemarie Broncheau, 19, was reported missing April 23 near North Fork by her mother. Her body was found by a passerby Sunday in an eddy about 25 miles west of the community.

Lehi County Sheriff's Chief Deputy Sam Slavin on Monday said he was checking into Broncheau's disappearance for any sign of foul play.

Broncheau vanished late April 23 while walking to get help after her car ran out of gas two miles west of North Fork on Salmon River four miles north.

Rosetta Powell, Broncheau's mother, Monday said she believed her daughter's death was not intentional.

"I think she just fell off the bank by accident," she said. "It was pitch black outside."

And she said she had mixed feelings about the discovery of her daughter. "I don't know if it's a relief or not," she said.
The win said he heard different versions of what happened that night.

The two women and Powell's boyfriend, Mike Carlson, arrived in the North Fork area on April 23. Carlson intended to start work on a logging crew the next day.

When they couldn't find a hotel room, they drove out of town along the river, searching for a place to stay. After an apparent quarrel, Carlson was left on the roadside.

The women's car ran out of gas two miles later. Broncheau left her mother and went to get help.

Service wants to sell damaged timber

MCCALL (AP) — The Forest Service has tentatively decided that the best way to deal with fire-damaged timber in a Payette Lake drainage is to sell the heavily damaged 602 acres of fire-killed and damaged trees and 78 acres of unburned trees ready for thinning.

That would produce 6.6 million board-feet of timber, says Dave Alexander, Payette National Forest supervisor. "The action is designed to recover the economic value of the burned timber and improve timber quality," the draft environmental impact study says.

The state forest will accept public comment until July 10.

The draft environmental study looks at four alternatives for salvaging fire-killed and damaged trees, and improving the condition of timber stands, in the Fall Creek drainage near McCall.

Paramedics legally bound to finish work

DEAR ABBY: I must respond to the letter from the woman who wrote you saying she was angry because the paramedics refused to stop trying to revive her husband, who ultimately died from his heart attack. (She had called 911 when she discovered him.)

I am an emergency medical technician and CPR instructor, and I can sympathize with her feelings. But she should know that once a call is made to 911, the responding team of emergency medical technicians (EMTs or paramedics) is legally bound to follow a certain set of procedures called "protocol." This protocol dictates that cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR), once started, cannot be terminated unless one of the following occurs:

1. A physician authorizes the cessation of CPR.
2. A valid form stating that the patient is not to be resuscitated is presented. It is called a DNR ("Do Not Resuscitate") order.
3. The response team is too ex-

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

hausted to continue and without means to transport the patient to the hospital.

4. The patient recovers.

This is set forth in both emergency medical technician training manuals and the American Heart Association Instructor's Handbook. If this protocol is not followed, all responders can be held liable for "abandonment" (having begun and then having stopped treatment).

In a home emergency situation, a living will is not enough. My advice to those in similar situations is to obtain a legally valid "Do Not Resuscitate" order from their physician.

This form must be presented to the 911 response team if the family of the patient does not wish the team to carry out its professional duties and obligations.

—PROTOCOL-BOUND, READING, OHIO

DEAR ABBY: Another wedding question. My brother-in-law is getting married in six weeks. On the response card I wrote, "Three guests will attend; my husband-and-our-9-month-old daughter."

My brother-in-law called my wife and in a roundabout way told us that he didn't want to offend anyone, but children were not allowed.

Well, that started a big family feud, and now my mother-in-law refuses to attend the wedding. Abby, I regard our daughter as part of the family — not just another child.

I understand my brother-in-law's desire to avoid offending friends by making his niece an exception, but isn't blood thicker than water? — OFFENDED IN FLORIDA

DEAR OFFENDED: Yes, blood is thicker than water, but I hope none must be asked in order to prove the point.

The bridal couple has the right to exclude children — especially one who is 9 months old and could become restless, cry and disrupt the ceremony.

DEAR ABBY: Who said, "If you want your children to turn out well, spend twice as much time with them, and half as much money?"

DEAR CURIOUS: I did, about 25 years ago — and it's still true.

For everything you need to know about wedding planning, order "How to Have a Lovely Wedding: Send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61051-0447. (Postage is included.)

What's for brunch?

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Jerry Dudley of Burley, who was featured in a cook's profile story in The Times-News food section on May 3, has sent in a favorite recipe for brunch bread.

NUTTY COCONUT BRUNCH BREAD

In large mixing bowl, beat 4 eggs. Add and blend well: 2 cups sugar, 1 cup oil, 2 teaspoons coconut flavoring.

Sift together: 3 cups flour, 1/2 teaspoon soda, 1/2 teaspoon baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon salt. Beating well after each addition, add sifted dry ingredients to creamed mixture alternately with 1 cup buttermilk.

Egg in: 1 cup flaked coconut and 1 cup chopped walnuts. Spoon into greased and floured 10-inch tube pan. (Use three foil pans — 8-by-3/4-by-2 1/2) Bake at 325 degrees for 50 to 60 minutes.

Meanwhile, combine in a saucepan and bring to a boil and boil 5 minutes: 1 cup sugar, 1/2 cup water and 2 tablespoons butter. Remove from heat and add 1 teaspoon coconut flavoring.

Four hot syrup over the top of the warm bread and allow to stand for 4 hours before removing from pan. (If you use the foil pans, let it cool, wrap and eat or whatever). Freezes good!

Marie Hamilton of Filer sent in a mustard pickle recipe, just in time for summer.

MUSTARD PICKLES

2 quarts tiny cucumbers 2 inches or less in length

2 quarts tiny white onions

2 quarts string beans, cut in halves

2 quarts green tomatoes, chopped

2 heads cauliflower, broken in pieces

1 small head white cabbage, chopped

6 green peppers, coarsely chopped

1 pound salt

1 ounce turmeric

1/2 cup brown sugar

2 tablespoons celery seeds

2 tablespoons mustard seeds

1/2 tablespoon whole cloves

1/2 tablespoon whole allspice

2/3 cup dry mustard

Cider vinegar to cover ingredients

1/2 cup flour

1/2 cup water

Wash and prepare the vegetables; slice the cucumbers; peel and chop onions coarsely; remove ends and strings, then break beans; discard cauliflower leaves. Place all but the peppers in a 3-gallon crock or heavy enamel kettle; sprinkle the vegetables with salt. Cover and let stand 24 hours.

After 24 hours, drain off the accumulated brine. Remove stems, seeds and fibers of green peppers and chop the peppers. Put the vegetables back into the large kettle with the turmeric, sugar, celery seeds, green peppers, mustard seeds, whole cloves, allspice, mustard and vinegar. Bring to boiling and cook 15 minutes. Mix the flour and water to a paste and stir this into the hot mixture.

Have 12 to 16 quart jars sterile and hot. Pack the pickles into the jars; fill to the top with syrup. Seal.

Juno James of Malta is sharing some favorite bean recipes.

"Don't be afraid of this bean pie," she wrote, "especially if you like pecan pie."

PINTO BEAN PIE

1/2 cup sugar

1 cup brown sugar

1/2 cup butter

1 heaping cup mashed pinto beans

2 eggs, beaten

Unbaked pie shell

Blend sugars, eggs, and butter until creamy. Add pinto beans and blend well. Pour into 9-inch unbaked shell. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes, then at 350 degrees for an additional 25 minutes or until a sharp knife comes out clean.

This tastes like pecan pie. It can be served with whipped cream, non-dairy whipped topping or a scoop of ice cream.

Bistro adds international flavor to downtown

By Dixie Thomas Roske
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — The chefs at Uptown Bistro cook New Orleans French and European continental in downtown Twin Falls.

Sister and brother Lindsay and Robert Myrland may live in southern Idaho, but they have created an American/European/continental restaurant reminiscent of a New Orleans French restaurant or New York Village cafe.

Linda Myrland, head chef and co-owner, trained at the Louisiana Culinary Institute in New Orleans. Her assistant, Ross Miller, is trained in the Louis XVI style. Assistant Lorie Demaret trained in southern California.

Uptown Bistro cooks a little differently than many other restaurants. The food is sautéed, grilled, baked or roasted, but nothing is deep fried. There is no deep fryer in the house. The produce, fish, and meat are all purchased fresh daily. Nothing is frozen.

According to Robert Myrland, the salads include six varieties of lettuce but no iceberg. The favorites on the menu are Greek salad for lunch and fresh garden greens, avocado, feta cheese and a vegetable all topped with Cressian seasoned chicken and served with a croutant.

A chicken choice for lunch might be a spicy Cajun-blackened chicken sandwich. The Louisiana chef has checked this one. The chicken breast is cooked in Cajun seasonings, with melted cheddar cheese and lettuce on a croutant.

Linda Myrland, owner and chef at The Uptown Bistro, prepares one of her signature dishes, Chicken Grand Marnier, a meal she once cooked for President George Bush.

Do it yourself
Gene Austin

Modern entry and interior doors are often made of steel, fiberglass or hardy, but many homeowners still want the appearance of wood.

Achieving a wood-like finish on a non-wood door is possible by using special finishing techniques and a heavy-bodied wood stain such as ZAR, made by Unid Chemical Laboratories of Scranton, Pa. Both the stain and the tools mentioned in this column are available at some home centers and paint stores.

Staining any door is best done with the door laid horizontally on a pair of sawhorses or similar supports. Pad the sawhorses to prevent scratching or damage to the door. All hardware should be removed and the door cleaned of any grease and dirt by wiping with a cloth moistened with mineral spirits (paint thinner). To get a more natural wood look, previously painted doors should be given a buff or tan base coat before stain is applied.

The sequence for finishing a paneled door is to do the panels first and follow by finishing, in order, the vertical boards between the panels, the horizontal boards, and the long vertical boards at the outside of the door.

Smooth-skinned steel doors are the most difficult to finish if a wood appearance is wanted. Getting a wood-grain look requires using a small graining tool with a swirled rubber face. When the tool is drawn through wet stain and wiped up and down, it creates a realistic grain appearance.

I recommend some practice when using a graining tool for the first time. Try graining on a smooth piece of plywood, hardboard or cardboard. Start work on the door only when it becomes easy to achieve a realistic and attractive grain appearance.

Steel doors with an embossed finish are easier to give a wood appearance. Since the grain pattern is already stamped into the wood. With these doors, stain is wiped into the surface with a soft cloth and circular motion that the makers of ZAR describe as "like applying shoe polish." A soft cloth is then used to smooth the stain in the direction of the grain. Streaks and lap marks are smoothed with a dry, soft paint brush. If a darker appearance is wanted, let the first coat of stain dry for 48 hours and apply a second coat in the same manner as the first.

Fiberglass doors, which have a wood-grain pattern embossed in their surface, are stained with the circular-motion technique used for embossed steel doors.

Hardboard or Masonite doors, which are intended for interior use, also have a wood-grain pattern embossed in their surface and are also stained with the circular-motion technique used for fiberglass doors and embossed steel doors.

Painted wood doors can also be restored to a wood-grain appearance. Sand them with 150-grit or 220-grit sandpaper and apply a buff-colored base coat over the old paint, then stain with the same technique used for smooth steel doors and use the graining tool.

New, unpainted wood doors can also be stained, of course, but should be thoroughly sanded first to smooth the surface. Before staining, remove all sanding dust with a sticky tack cloth or by vacuuming. Apply the stain with a brush and wipe off excess stain to get a smooth tone.

Stained wood should always be given a protective topcoat. Exterior doors require a sun-resistant finish such as spar varnish or exterior-grade polyurethane. Several coats of protective finish are usually needed to help prevent peeling and deterioration of the finish from the sun's ultraviolet rays and exposure to weather.

ishing, obtain a free copy of ZAR's "Guide to Graining and Staining Doors" by calling 800-272-3235 or writing ZAR Staining & Graining Brochure—UGL—Box 70—Scranton, Pa. 18501.

Here today, gone tomorrow - not Dandelions have a thing about immortality. Maybe you've noticed. Sprout a dandelion or two in a pot and it immediately forms a seed ball, ready to sow the western hemisphere with its progeny.

Dig up or pull a dandelion without the roots and you'll see your spouse whine, "Oh, you dullard! It'll only come right back!"

This is war. Plan attack strategies from all fronts. Eliminate the small, weak ones first. Eliminate the weed's reproduction. Eliminate the weed with starvation, chemical control or overwatering.

The smaller the weed, the easier it is to kill. Small weeds don't have much of a root system, yet. Hopefully, small ones plan to get big, and suck up chemicals readily. Small ones don't reproduce as quickly.

Before spraying dandelions, eliminate a bazillion new seedlings. Pick off all flowers and buds. Dig down a little and pull off all the green buds hiding underneath the showy flowers. Throw them away.

Spray dandelions with 2,4-D preparations to shrivel them up without burning grass. Exercise care to keep the overspray off desirable ornamentals. Those are the prize peonies two feet away. Drifting spray kills.

Spraying weeds around other plants scares the hebbajobs out of me, so I generally don't. When digging isn't practical anymore, though, using a spray shield buys a lot of protection.

Cut a large piece of cardboard or halve a plastic milk carton and attach to a stick so you can hold it in place behind the weed. Squeeze the weed. The overspray is blocked by your shield.

Don't let it drip on the roses after all your care.

Cathy Walworth Green thumbsprints

Plants need leaves to survive. Leaves make their food. Pick off the leaves from a weed and it'll probably come back — a little smaller next time.

Do it again and you'll likely starve the plant.

Fertilize the lawn and water it deeply. Most weeds have shallow root systems. Grass roots should penetrate the soil at least 6 to 12 inches.

Water to that depth and let the surface dry out between waterings. You get healthier grass and most weeds can't tolerate the lack of water available to them.

The fertilizer helps make the lawn thicker and healthier, crowding out visiting weed seeds.

Leave grass about 2½ inches high, maybe three. The longer grass leaves help shade its crown and soil surface, eliminating sunburn and excessive drying. Weed seeds need to see the light to germinate. Keep spray.

Solar water heater: A cool project

Q: I want to do an inexpensive weekend project with my children to show them how to save money by conserving resources.

A: The simplest and cheapest solar water heater is a "breadbox" design.

Using common materials, lumber, insulation and an old discarded water heater tank from a plumber, it should not cost more than $80 to build.

A simple do-it-yourself breadbox solar water heater can reduce annual water heating costs by 20 percent. For a typical family with an electric water heater, this can pay back the material costs in the first year. Thereafter, the solar hot water is free.

A breadbox water heater is called a high-type solar heater. It is basically a black water tank inside a box with a clear top and front. As the sun shines on the tank inside the box, it heats the "batch" of water inside it.

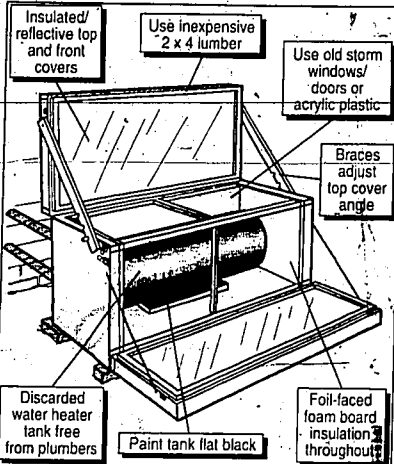

This heated tank of water is used as a preheater for your regular water heater. Cold incoming water first flows through the breadbox heater before it goes to your existing gas or electric water heater.

On a sunny day, water in the breadbox heater can get hot enough so that your existing water heater won't have to come on at all. On cloudy or very chilly days, close hinged insulated covers so it does not lose heat.

The total cost can be greatly reduced by getting a discarded water heater tank from a plumber. Electric water heaters are the easiest to strip and use because there is no flue up the center.

Pull off the outside shell and remove the insulation.

Clean the tank and inspect it for leaks. If you suspect a leak, car radiator shops can pressure test it for you. Paint the cleaned tank flat black.

Solar water heater is an inexpensive weekend project.

Make a simple wooden box leaving the top and front open. Line the inside with foil-faced rigid insulation. Mount the water tank inside and cover the top and front with old storm doors or windows or clear acrylic plastic.

On the top and front, attach hinged insulated covers with reflective foil facing the inside. When open, these covers reflect more of the sun's rays through the clear top and front to the water tank.

There are new low-cost solar kits available.

These are designed for do-it-yourself installation. Some use a simple three-way fitting to attach the solar system to your existing water heater through the tank drain valve.

Q: I have a seven-year-old refrigerator that works great, but I want to change the color from white to brown.

Does it cost much to have one painted or should I just get a new efficient one? - H. D.

A: There are companies that will repaint refrigerators. You can expect to pay up to $200 for a good quality refinishing job. One of three finishes are used - acrylic enamel, baked-in enamel and electrostatically-sprayed enamel.

New refrigerators are somewhat more efficient than even one that is only seven years old.

If you use your refrigerator efficiently, the savings with a new one will be small and probably will not justify buying a new one now.

Keep 'til full, the coils clean and open the door as little as possible.

Q: We have just found the perfect home. Unfortunately, so have two other people. What should we do?
A: First, understand the "offer and acceptance" process. The seller's agent is obligated to present any and all written offers. In this case there are offers from three different buyers. Second, the sellers are not obligated to accept any of them, nor are they required to make a counter-offer. They may simply accept the one they deem most valuable to them, choose one and make a counter offer, or reject all of them. When several offers are presented at the same time, the sellers are not required to consider them in any particular order. If they are all for an identical price and on the same terms, the sellers are not required to take the first offer made. If you really want the home, get the sellers' attention. Offer a price that is above the asking price. Also, offer a substantial earnest money deposit. This lets the sellers know you are very serious.

Book shows how to cultivate culinary classics

By JeanMarie Brownson
Chicago Tribune

Herbman vegetables, fruits and herbs remain one of life's true pleasures. Nothing tastes better than a vine-ripe tomato still warm from the sun, or an ear of corn so fresh its milky juice nearly bursts from the kernels.

Sasha Thompson, a California-based garden writer, has spent more than seven years working on "The Kitchen Garden Cookbook" and its companion book, "The Kitchen Garden" (Bantam, $27.95 each).

Although both books are valuable in their own right, used together one could cultivate, harvest and cook an incredible feast.

Thompson, who lives on a mountain in Idaho, in southern California, cooks with more than just the obvious products of a gardener's labors. She uses everything edible, from the wrapper leaves of large cabbages, cauliflower and brussels sprouts to the bolted flowers of broccoli and the tender shoots of peas.

Thompson's passion for all things homegrown is mirrored in her text and recipes. Even those readers without much space for a garden easily can get caught up in her enthusiasm.

Her writing (and there's lots of it in the thick, 350-plus-page cookbook) also is full of expertise and common sense.

The book's more than 300 recipes reflect her no-nonsense approach to cooking. She offers dishes with lots of flavor and little added fat.

In addition to standard garden-cookbook recipes such as watermelon pickles, Thompson also satiates purple pod beans with garlic and simmers Jerusalem artichokes in merlot. Bruschetta-crusty bread topped with chopped tomatoes gets an addition of pepper, kale greens under Thompson's direction.

Recipes also include a garden pizza topped with mixed squash, fresh herbs, tomatoes, and a bounty of onions and cheese. Then there are the baby beets cooked with their tender leaves, stalks, a little cream and lots of fresh dill.

Within each entry, Thompson discusses the plant in order of ripening. Bean recipes, for example, are given first for the snap stage, then the shell stage and the dried.

Here's one recipe from the book.

LINGUINE WITH FLOWERING BROCCOLI

- Yield: 3 to 4 servings
- Last minute, easy
- 3 to 4 cups tender broccoli blossoms and flower tips cut in 1-inch lengths, or very slender broccoli florets; include some thin ribbons of tender leaves
- Soft to taste
- 1 pound linguine
- About 2 tablespoons olive, walnut or hazelnut oil
- 3 walnut-size shallots, finely chopped
- 2 medium large ripe tomatoes, cut into 1/2-inch dice
- Juice of 1 lemon
- Freshly ground black pepper to taste
- 1/2 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese
- A handful of toasted pine nuts

1. Bring a big pot of salted water to the boil. Drop in the blossoms and ribbons of leaves and boil uncovered until tender-crisp, about 2 minutes. Keep the water boiling while you scoop out the broccoli with a strainer and turn it into a heated serving bowl. Cover loosely and keep warm. Add the linguine to the boiling pot. Stir, cover the pot until the water returns to a boil, then uncover and boil until tender but slightly chewy-start testing after about 7 minutes.

2. Meanwhile, heat 1/2 tablespoon of the oil in a large heavy skillet. Sauté the shallots over medium-high heat until softened, stirring frequently — about 3 minutes. Add the tomatoes and lemon juice and stir until the tomatoes are warmed through. Stir in the broccoli and, when it's warm, remove the skillet from the heat-by which time the pasta should be ready. Add pepper, then taste for seasoning.

3. Drain the linguine through a colander into your serving bowl so the water heats the bowl. Dump out the water, shake the bowl dry, turn in the pasta, then top with the sauce. Drizzle with oil to moisten, sprinkle with cheese and finish with pine nuts. Drink a golden Italian wine, such as an Orvieto Classic and pass Katamata olives.

Mushroom buyer Cary Jenick, left, wears a holstered gun while talking to James Vance Monday in LaGrande, Ore. Jenick and Vance are from Libby, Mont. and come to LaGrande to buy wild morel mushrooms picked by people in eastern Oregon.

The morel, the merrier: Spring mushroom harvest hits peak

LA GRANDE, Ore. (AP) — The mushroom buyers quietly have set up shop in the mountain towns of north-east Oregon, waiting for the hunters to bring in the wild morels — an increasingly popular culinary delicacy.

"It's just beginning," said Carl Houk, 37, of Coos Bay as he glanced down main street in La Grande. "I'm seeing more buyers than I've ever seen before."

Roughly 50 buyers of morels have set up shop in La Grande, Elgin and Ukiah. Houk was paying $4 per pound for top-quality morels.

Across the street, Lisa Liber, 26, of Brookings offered $4.25. "This year, with all the burns they've got, they're expecting a huge crop."

In the parlance of mushroom buyers, "burns" are the blackened remains of forest fires, and are said to produce the choicest mushrooms.

Last summer, the most intense wildfire season in years charred 207,982 acres in Oregon, with most of the fires in Eastern Oregon.

The Wallows-Whitman National Forest had sold 1,000 commercial picking permits through Friday, spokeswoman Annie Hanson said. A season permit costs $50, or pickers can pay $2 per day for a minimum five days.

Mushrooms from Oregon are distributed far and wide, even freeze-dried for shipment to Europe.

In 1993, buyers paid an estimated $7 million to pickers in the Deschutes National Forest alone. Some offered upward of $500 per pound for prized matsutake mushrooms, an autumn variety that grows in central Oregon.

"There were times I was transporting $100,000 in cash, two years ago when the prices were so high," said Houk, who dealt exclusively in matsutake that time.

The morels being gathered in Eastern Oregon traditionally bring less, but some pickers reportedly earned $250 per day in 1993.

Phay Eng, 24, of Raymond, Wash., was picking morels when he was slain in June 1993. Authorities believe he was killed for his $400 bankroll. Union County District Attorney Russell B. West of La Grande has vowed to seek the death penalty for whomever is convicted of Eng's death. "It's still an open file, but we have never been able to put together enough information for a grand jury investigation," West said.

Home news you can use

Avoid housework? You make the beds, you do the dishes and six months later you have to start all over again? That quote from Juan Rivers appears on page 1 of "How to Avoid Housework," by interior designer Paula Jueng (Freewide, paperback), and sets the tone for what the Dallas Morning News says is a compilation of helpfully humorous housecleaning advice. It reflects a no-clutter, soil-resistant philosophy of home decor from collections under glass in the hard-houseplants.

How long should your home appliances last? Consumers expect to get an average of 13 to 20 years' use from them, according to research conducted in conjunction with development of the Frigidaire Gallery Professional Series, which seeks to tap the growing popularity of commercial-style appliances by offering a commercial residential hybrid.

Some household hints, from the Baltimore Sun: Seal small holes in window screens with clear cement glue. The repair will be almost invisible. Store children's outdoor toys in 30-gallon garbage containers.

Plant tomatoes, eggplants, peppers, cucumbers, squash, pumpkins, melons and basil now that the soil is warming and the nights are not so cold. The threat of frost is past for most of the Washington Post reports, but in rural areas gardeners should continue to cover tender plants at night until month's end.

Corbin

CORBIN 10-020
Living Area 2063 sq ft
Outside Dimensions 31'-8"

Porch adds cozy touch to family home

A generous wrap-around porch greets visitors to the country style Corbin, a medium size home that features plenty of family living space, both formal and informal.

Owners of the home could confine their living to the ground floor, since the master suite is on this level. That leaves the second-floor for children, visiting grandchildren or other guests.

A long custom-shaped eating bar provides partial separation between the kitchen and the family room. Otherwise, the area is wide open. Vaulted to the second floor (as is the dining room), the family room, nook and kitchen are bathed in natural light from a wealth of windows. The second-floor landing forms a unique bridge that overlooks the family room to the back and the dining room and entryway to the front.

The Corbin's master suite features access to the deck and has a private bathroom with a walk-in closet, a raised spa and a compartmentalized toilet.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $15 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Drive, Eugene, Ore. 97402. Please specify the Corbin 10-020 and include a return address when ordering.

Girls were taught to sew

L.M. Boyd What?

So said the French sage La Rochefoucauld. One of the pioneer public relations campaigns, promoted by the harness and carriage industries a century ago, tried to convince everybody that automobiles were dangerous, and that operating them could drive people crazy. How silly thought most. Before's o'clock fireworks, this O. Who, first came up with the "In God We Trust" motto on our money? A. Same man who decided it all ought to be printed on paper: Salmon P. Chase, treasury secretary, 1851 to 1854. In the single time the dollars were issued, one common phrase was "a dose of bull-dog." Eventually, it was turned into the "all dog." And later turned into "the bulldog." All of this, before anyone put the words into the name of an earth-trembling machine. Such is the imaginative claim of the word tracers. Maybe so.

Between 1725 and 1845, more than half of an American girl's formal education, if any, focused on needlework. Numerous young ladies in affluent families attended specialty schools renowned for the craft.

Back around 1933, according to the historical-doozers, several Madam students at Cambridge University tried to figure out what they could call a country smocked out of the combined areas known then as the Dutch, Kazimir, Sied and Bakelistan. They came up with "Pakistan," and it took.

Angels were depicted as male until the Renaissance. Female afterbirths. Somewhere along there, it has been said, the artists learned little about men and forgot much about women.

In the days prior to the people have gray hair by age 50?

A. About half. If you mean gray hair, it's never so selective, late or early. It's never so ridiculous through when we see it through what we need to be.

Food

Start the day out right with muffins

School's out or will be soon. The kids are lining up to mow my lawn now that the weather has cleared up. Where were two weeks ago when it was raining every day and the grass grew knee deep? I certainly didn't want to get out there and mow in the rain. I guess it didn't want to either.

Summer mornings I like nothing better than muffins and coffee for breakfast. Muffins are fun little lumps of bread that aren't always sweet, but are surprisingly easy to make. I like them best when they are still warm from the oven.

The first time I ever remember making muffins was in high school home economics class. When I was in school, this was a required class for girls. My son, the cook, sought out and took a home economics class. My daughter, the dancer, refused. Times have changed.

Muffins were our very first cooking project in my class. We made plain old fashioned white muffins. I've liked muffins ever since.

The variety of muffins I make has expanded considerably, to include ordinary as well as exotic kinds.

Here are some muffin recipes for you to try.

BLUEBERRY CORNBREAD MUFFINS

1/2 cup white flour

1/2 cup cornmeal

2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder

1/2 teaspoon salt

3 tablespoons sugar

1 large egg, beaten

1/2 tablespoons oil

1 cup milk

Valley Cooking
Dixie Thomas Reale

1/3 cup unswartened frozen apple juice concentrate, thawed

1 cup fresh or frozen blueberries

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Spray 12-cup muffin pan with pan spray, set aside.

In mixing bowl, combine dry ingredients. Combine wet ingredients in another bowl. Mix all ingredients together except the blueberries. Stir until well combined.

Don't leave any dry spots but don't overmix either. Muffins should be a little lumpy. Carefully fold in the blueberries. Fill muffin cups 2/3 full.

Bake until golden brown, about 20 to 25 minutes. Let them cool about five minutes in pan before removing. Makes about 12 muffins.

MULTI-GRAIN MUFFINS

2/3 cup oatmeal

2/3 cup rye flour

2/3 cup whole wheat flour

1/2 teaspoon salt

2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder

1/2 cup milk

1/3 cup oil

1/2 cup molasses

2 eggs (beaten)

2/3 cup raisins (optional)

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Spray 12-cup muffin pan with pan spray.

Combine dry ingredients. Combine wet ingredients. Mix all ingredients together except the raisins. Mix until well combined. Add raisins if desired. Fill muffin cups 2/3 full.

Bake until golden brown or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean, about 20 to 25 minutes. Cool in muffin tin about five minutes before turning out onto cooling rack. Makes about 12 muffins.

CORNBREAD CHILI MUFFINS

1/2 cup cornmeal

1 cup white flour

1 teaspoon baking powder

1/2 teaspoon salt

1/2 cup plain yogurt

1/3 cup milk

1 egg, beaten

4-ounce can chopped green chilies, drained

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Spray 12-cup muffin pan with pan spray. Combine dry ingredients. Combine wet ingredients. Mix all ingredients together except the chilies. Mix well. Lightly fold in the chilies.

Fill muffin cups about 2/3 full. Bake until golden brown, about 25 minutes. Cool in pan five minutes before turning out onto rack. Makes about 12 muffins.

Tasty green bean dishes a snap Pie

By Karla Cook
Knight-Ridder News Service

They're in markets now, those vaguely crisp, flat-tail-thin green beans that call to mind early mornings in the garden years ago, picking green handfuls, dropping them in the bag, then hugging it down what seemed like endless rows.

It was hard to pick because we knew that was just the beginning. After the beans were picked, we carried them into the house and snapped each one — first the ends and then the bean into two or three pieces, moving to the next one.

And doing that again. And again. And again, until our fingers were sore and the day had moved to night and my mother's hair had curled around her face from the steam of the canner.

Now, because I don't have to, I grow beans. Snap beans, green beans, string beans, they're the same in the pot; a good source of vitamin A, riboflavin, potassium and iron.

They're tasty steamed or microwaved until tender, even stir-fried in a bit of oil to which a shot of sesame oil and a clove of garlic has been added.

Try combining them, lightly cooked with this recipe, with onion, freshly shredded basil, a 1-2 ratio of red wine vinegar to olive oil, and salt with freshly ground pepper to season, writes Dolores Riccio in "Superfoods: 300 Recipes For Foods That Heal Body and Mind" (Warner, $27).

At the market, choose crisp beans with even color and regular shape. Avoid buying overly limp beans, but remember that some quality is sacrificed for the convenience of buying them at a supermarket near you.

At home, snap off both ends of each bean, then snap the bean into two or three pieces. Rinse and use as soon as possible, recommends Jennifer Lang in the cooking encyclopedia, "Larousse Gastronomique" (Crown, $50).

SUPER TOMATOY GREEN BEANS

(4 servings)

12 sun-dried tomatoes, soaked in boiling water to cover for 5-15 minutes, or until tender (reserve cooking liquid)

1 1/2 tablespoons olive oil

3 large whole garlic cloves, halved lengthwise

1 cup thinly sliced onion

3 to 4 large garlic cloves, forced through a garlic press

1/2 pound Roma (plum) tomatoes, peeled, seeded and coarsely chopped

1 teaspoon seeded, minced jalapeno or other fresh chili, or to taste (use a red one, if available)

1/2 teaspoon hot Hungarian paprika, or to taste

1/2 teaspoon salt

Freshly ground black pepper to taste

1 pound green beans, cut into 2-inch strips

Raw sweet onion rings for garnish

Process softened sun-dried tomatoes in blender or food processor with enough soaking water to produce a smooth puree. Reserve the rest of the soaking water.

In hot oil in large skillet, saute garlic cloves until they are browned.

Using a slotted spoon, remove the garlic cloves and discard. Add onion and pressed garlic and saute until onion is softened, 2-3 minutes.

Add sun-dried tomato puree, Roma tomatoes and any accumulated juices, jalapeno, paprika, salt and pepper.

When mixture comes to a boil, lower heat slightly. Add beans. Simmer, covered, for 8-10 minutes or just until beans are fork-tender.

During this period, uncover and add a little tomato soaking water if mixture sticks to the bottom. Don't overcook.

Serve garnished with onion rings.

—From "The Bold Vegetarian," by Bharti Kirchner (Harper, Perennial, $16).

Crust

1/2 cup sugar, divided

1/2 cup corn starch

1/2 cup butter or margarine, melted

1/2 cup Karo light or dark corn syrup

1/2 teaspoon almond extract

2 cups (about 2 large) peeled, chopped apples

1 cup sliced or slivered almonds, toasted

Garnish

1 small apple, peeled and thinly sliced (optional)

2 tablespoons sliced or slivered almonds, toasted (optional)

Prepare pie crust according to package directions for filled one-crust pie using 9-inch pie pan. (Refrigerate remaining pie crust for later use.)

Flute edge using herringbone design or as desired.

Heat oven to 375 degrees.

Reserve 2 tablespoons sugar.

In medium bowl, combine remaining sugar and corn syrup and almond extract. Mix in apples and almonds. Pour into pie crust-lined pan.

If desired, garnish with apple slices overlapped in a circle around edge of pie. Sprinkle reserved sugar over top. Bake at 375 degrees for 50 minutes or until center of pie is set. Cool completely on wire rack. Store in refrigerator.

8 servings.

and other gourmet coffee, beer and wine.
The Myrlands are both graduates of Twin Falls High School. Robert in 1979, Linda in 1980. They both went East to school and work after high school.

Linda became a chef and cooked for diplomats and heads of state, from the President of the United States on down. Robert became a lawyer.

About three years ago, they came home for a visit and decided they wanted to move back. They opened the Café on the Green at Kimberly Nurseries. It was so successful they decided to move downtown.

The Myrlands bought one of the original buildings (1906) in downtown Twin Falls and started major renovations.

When they bought the building the walls were falling down, Robert Myrland recalled, and the entire wiring system had to be replaced. After nearly nine months of renovations, the Uptown Bistro opened for business, in May 1994.

The Idaho Capitol Building is the subject of one of the watercolor paintings decorating the walls of the restaurant.

Artists include Del Rosco, Marcel Mouty and Larry Curtis. Some of the artwork is abstract, some is realistic, but all fit the atmosphere of the restaurant.

Gold, black and white are the colors of the Uptown Bistro decor. "Bistro" is a French word, which means middle-priced restaurant.

With the overhead lights off and the candles lit, Thursday and Friday night dinners at the Uptown Bistro have a romantic feel about them.

On Saturday nights, when live bands play classical, jazz or country music from the stage in the window, the restaurant is transformed into a true French Bistro.

There is outdoor seating in the summer. A conference room is available free of charge.

Linda Myrland shares her chef skills once a month in a two-hour cooking class that she teaches at the restaurant.

Orlando center scores 32 after slow start as Magic down Pacers

The Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — Shaquille O'Neal finally had a playoff game as big as most of his regular-season games. He hit a career playoff high with 32 points Tuesday night to help the Magic open the Eastern Conference finals with a 105-101 victory over the Indiana Pacers. O'Neal didn't score a point in the first quarter, but immediately made up lost ground, scoring 12 in each of the next two periods. He hit 11-of-16 shots, had 11 rebounds and went 10-of-12 from the foul line. Indiana center Rik Smits, who averaged more than 22 points against New York in the conference semifinals, was no match for O'Neal and got into foul trouble early in the third quarter. Smits finished with 17 points, including a 3-pointer — the first of his career — with 46.1 seconds left that cut Orlando's lead to 103-98. Indiana had a chance to pull closer, but Derrick McKey turned the ball over with about 14 seconds left, and Indiana was forced to foul down the stretch. "The Magic were playing on five days' rest while the Pacers were coming off a demanding seven-game series with the Knicks that ended Sunday. In the first quarter, with Indiana bolting to an 18-point lead, it looked like the extra time off didn't do the Magic much good. "We had a little too much rest," O'Neal said. O'Neal led the league in scoring this season.

MVP Robinson eyes Rockets

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — David Robinson wasn't ready to celebrate after winning the NBA's most valuable player award Tuesday. The San Antonio center said he's too busy focusing on the Spurs' playoff series against Houston and last year's MVP Hakeem Olajuwon in the Western Conference final. "We're in the middle of this battle and it's going to be hard to celebrate anything right now," Robinson said. "This is an incredible honor and I don't think it's going to sink into my head for some time."

Robinson

Have won it, that would have been a big surprise," Sean Elliott said. "The NBA would have had the legitimacy of Don King Productions."

Robinson, who averaged 27.6 points, 10.8 rebounds and 3.2 blocks per game, best runner-up Shaquille O'Neal of Orlando by a wide margin. Robinson received 73 first-place votes and 901 points, while O'Neal got 12 firsts and 603 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Utah's Karl Malone was third, followed by New York's Patrick Ewing, Houston's Hakeem Olajuwon, Charles Barkley of Phoenix, Chicago's Scottie Pippen and Utah's John Stockton.

Rodman talks about gay bars, suicide, Madonna

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Get a load of the latest fashion statement from Dennis Rodman: Shiny tank top, metallic hot pants and rhinestone dog collar. "Why not be a little risque?" said Rodman, who posed in the outfit for the cover of this week's Sports Illustrated. "Push the envelope." The orange-haired San Antonio Spurs rebel also delved into his personal life in an interview with the magazine, speaking of ex-girlfriend Madonna. "She wanted to get married," Rodman said. "She wanted to have my baby. She said, 'Be in a hotel room in Las Vegas on this specific day so you can get me pregnant.'" Sports Illustrated also said that Rodman frequents gay bars and kissing male friends. He said that's as far as it has gone, "but I visualize being with another man. Everybody visualizes being gay — they think, 'Should I do it or not?' The reason they can't is because they think it's unethical. They think it's a sin," he said. "Hell, you're not bad if you're gay, and it doesn't make you any less of a person," he told the magazine. Rodman also said he dreams about suicide. "Sometimes I dream about just taking a gun and blowing my head off," he said. "I'll never know it's time to die. I'll head for a waterfall and camp out for a day, knowing I only have 24 hours to live (and) fly off the waterfall."

Rodman's dyed hair, tattoos and body piercings drew as much attention this year as his rebounding. He was suspended for three games at the start of the season because of disruptive conduct during preseason. There was given a 34-week paid leave of absence.

Beck blows another save as Phillies defeat Giants, 6-5

The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Rod Beck blew a chance to get his 100th career save as the San Francisco Giants wasted Matt Williams' league-leading 11th homer and lost to the Philadelphia Phillies 6-5 Tuesday night. Beck (3-2), who walked three in 1-3 innings, had a 5-4 lead in the ninth but blew his third straight save chance. Darren Daulton tied the game with an RBI single and Kevin Stocker won it with a sacrifice fly that scored Dave Hollins, giving the Phillies their 15th win in 18 games. Hollins walked four times, increasing his major league-leading total to 32. Gene Harris (2-0) pitched a perfect ninth for the victory. Williams, who leads the NL with 31 RBIs, hit a two-run homer in the sixth that gave the Giants a 5-2 lead. San Francisco had broken a 2-2 tie earlier in the inning on Barry Bonds' RBI double.

Baseball's best meet in series

Area ballplayers make Idaho's all-star roster; team set to play Utah

By Kevin Miller Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Five Magic Valley baseball players cracked the roster for the Idaho high school all-star team that will take on Utah's best in a three-game series June 2-3.

The players will be battling for more than state pride. College and professional scouts and coaches will be on hand to watch batting practice, skill drills and three games at Frontier Field on the College of Southern Idaho campus. "We've got a pretty good selection of kids who will go play at the next level," said Minico High School baseball coach Russ Wright, coordinator of the Utah-Idaho All-Star series.

The 24 best high school graduating seniors from both states will compete. Players were nominated by their coaches and chosen by a panel of Idaho baseball coaches.

Region III tournament champ Minico places three players on the Idaho team: pitcher Cury Thain, infielder Eric Stroschein and outfielder Chad Schow. Twin Falls center fielder Giree Schellhaus appears on the roster as an infielder, and Wendell pitcher Dale Dunn also made the field.

A combine-style format has been designed for athletes to display their skills and talents under the close supervision of scouts and coaches.

Batting practice on Friday starts at 5 p.m., three hours before game time. College coaches and professional scouts will be on the field during batting practice and tool evaluation exercises.

"I think it's a way to get our kids on the map. We really need to do a good job of that," Wright said.

After batting practice, outfielders will show their arm strength, making throws from the field to third base. Infielders will be tested on making the throw from deep in the hole between second and third base, to first.

Catchers will be timed on their throw to first. The new all-star series replaces the traditional East-West game.

"We wanted something that was more of a showcase and had some competition involved," Wright said. "Obviously, when you're playing for your state, it adds to the importance."

Wright hopes the baseball rivalry between the two states develops into a big event. Utah baseball has a solid tradition, he said.

"This lets us know where we are, baseball-wise, relative to other states," Wright said.

Series victors will take home a trophy cup which will be passed year-to-year to the champions. The series will alternate appearances in each state.

Navy's high school coach Leon Long and from Meridian High School Mike Brooks get the call to lead the Idaho contingent in the series' inaugural year.

For Utah, longtime baseball figure and Cincinnati Reds scout Dan Gust and son Rod will be in the dugout.

A doubleheader Saturday beginning at 11:30 a.m. will follow Friday's single-meeting contest.

United Team members of Idaho is sponsoring a tournament MVP award and will present each player with a mounted, commemorative autographed baseball.

Other sponsors include the College of Southern Idaho, Boise City Sports, Burger King, Volvo's, Canyon Springs Inn, the Times-News, Bonanza Motors, Idaho-Tri-States Restaurant, McDonald's, and Gem State Trophy.

Ticket prices at the gate are $4 per game for adults, $2 for children. A family tournament pass is available for $15. Individual series passes are $10.

Police: Phippen accused of abuse

Chicago Tribune

Scottie Phippen's off-court troubles continued Tuesday. Three days after the Bulls' star was charged with domestic battery against his fiancée, Northbrook police released records indicating that he was accused of domestic violence twice before. He was not arrested or charged in either case after the allegations, but those not to file complaints.

Separately Tuesday, a Cook County judge approved an agreement that orders Phippen to pay $10,000 to a former girlfriend who has filed a paternity suit alleging that Phippen is the father of his 10-month-old daughter. Phippen was charged with one count of domestic battery Friday against his fiancée, Northbrook police. Phippen grabbed her by the arm and pushed her. Phippen was released on a $100 bond.

But that was not the first time Delone, 27, has leveled a battery allegation at Phippen. Northbrook police records indicate that Phippen was allegedly involved in a more serious altercation with Delone in January 1993 after Delone said she accidentally broke Phippen's jaw. According to the police report, Phippen allegedly forced Delone to the floor, climbed on top of her and said "I swear to God, I'm going to kick your ass."

The fight escalated and Phippen allegedly physically threw Delone out of the house. The report says Delone was thrown 100 feet in the air, falling on her arm and fracturing her wrist and hand. Phippen told police that after Delone left the house, she slipped and fell on the ice, breaking her hand. He claimed that she was embarrassed and angry that she blamed him for the injury.

No charges were lodged against Phippen because Delone refused to file a complaint, according to police. The other incident of alleged domestic battery involved Phippen and his ex-wife, Karen, in 1989. That complaint alleged that Phippen "started to hit and choke" his ex-wife, but she declined to press charges.

Phippen faces a June 5 court date on the misdemeanor domestic battery charge against Delone. His attorney, Sheldon Zerner, said he hopes to resolve the case prior to then. "We're hopeful we will be able to resolve this amicably," Zerner said. "Until it is resolved, I cannot comment on anything else."

Phippen has known Delone since 1991. They have a 24-month-old daughter. Meanwhile, in a Chicago court room, Circuit Judge David Delaney approved the $10,000 payment to Sonya Roby to cover birth expenses.

Arizona State women eye golf title

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Arizona State led by its Women's Amateur champion Wendy Miller, will try to make golf history this year by winning a third straight NCAA women's title. Arizona State and Florida (1985-86) are the only schools to win two straight women's championships. "I think we look at it as an opportunity to do something that no one else has ever done before," Sun Devils coach Linda Volz said. "Sure there is pressure, but every elite athlete has pressure — they thrive on it."

Validated said her team, which has won eight tournaments this year by an average of 25 strokes, is relaxed. "They have a good time, they are laughing, they are joking and that's the way we've been throughout the year," she said. "Now it's not the time for us to all of the sudden get serious and for me to change the strategy of the team."

A field of 102 players will compete in the four-round tournament, which begins Wednesday on Lundfall's 6,061-yard course. "You can blame finger-rolls being missed, you can blame free throws, a lack of rebounding, losing close games in overtime. But we should have been on the upswing this year as a team that was totally together. For the majority of the season, we were playing apart. And you can't put that behind you."

Riley: Knicks lack harmony, not talent

PURCHASE, N.Y. (AP) — New York Knicks coach Pat Riley says lack of harmony, not lack of talent, caused his team's second-round playoff stumacher.

"It makes my stomach turn," Riley said Tuesday after a second-round meeting with his players. "It's the end-of-year, divide up playoff shares, exchange phone numbers, all that stuff you don't want to do until June 23, we did today. We had a team that was a good enough to win. It was built to win."

But we should have been on the upswing this year as a team that was totally together. For the majority of the season, we were playing apart. And you can't put that behind you."

Riley, as he did Sunday when the Knicks lost 97-95 in Game 7 of the Eastern Conference semifinals against Indiana, refused to comment on whether he will return as coach for a fifth year. He has one season left on his contract, and the Knicks have offered a

Robinson said learning to deal with high expectations has helped him get to the top of his profession. "Carrying the team is a whole lot different than coming out and just being good every night," Robinson said. "Being able to withstand that kind of pressure night in and night out, and not only withstand it, but excel under it, I think that's what I've been able to do."

Robinson ranked third in the NBA in scoring, fourth in blocks and seventh in rebounding. He was 15th in steals (1.65 per game) and field goal percentage (50.7%). Robinson earned his nickname "The Admiral" from his days at the Naval Academy, but he said he didn't know how tough it would be to lead a team in the NBA when he joined the Spurs after his tour of duty with the Navy ended in 1989. "When I first came into the league, I really didn't know how to play the way I play now," he said. "Like I said, it's a big credit to the coaches who have taught me how to push myself harder and go out and do more things on the floor every night."

year with a 29.3 average. On Tuesday night, he delivered impressively after averaging just 23.6 in 10 games entered the opener with Indiana. Overcoming a fast start by the team that swept them in the first round of last year's playoffs, the Magic led by as many as 12 points over the Pacers with Indiana trailing five midway through the quarter, but a flagrant foul by Dale Davis on O'Neal produced four Magic points.

After scoring 20 points in the first half, Reggie Miller had just six in the second half. "Coach (Brian) Hill said there's no way we can win if we don't keep both Davises off the boards," Scott said. "We even let Mark Jackson get four in the second quarter."

But as was the case during the conference semifinals with the Knicks, the Pacers struggled in the third quarter. The Magic outscored the Pacers 17-5 to start the third period, taking a 65-58 lead on Anderson's 3-pointer with 7:17 left in the quarter. "Scott sat out the final eight minutes of the period after picking up his fourth foul, and Indiana trailed 83-74 entering the final quarter."

U.S. women seek Olympic gold

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP)—The bet is going down—$3 million on the United States to win the gold medal in women's basketball at the 1996 Olympics.

That's the amount USA Basketball has budgeted for the first full-time women's national team, which will form the core of the Olympic team next summer. Team members will be chosen Thursday and they'll train and play together for a year prior to the '96 Games in Atlanta.

The reason for all the money and effort is to win the gold medal. And if that doesn't happen?

Then it would be perceived as a failure, certainly, USA Basketball president C.M. Newton said.

But not necessarily in Newton's eyes. A secondary aim of the team is to make women's basketball, and Newton, stopping by the U.S. Olympic Training Center to watch the national team trials, sees vast potential there because it never has been done before. "Obviously, the winning of the gold is the primary reason we're doing this, but there are a lot of other benefits and a lot of other spinoffs for women's basketball," he said. "I think this gives us a tremendous opportunity."

"I think historians are going to look back and say this really gave a tremendous boost to women's basketball at all levels."

Through promotional efforts and by playing exhibition games in this country, USA Basketball hopes the national team can showcase the sport to a new generation of young fans and players. Instead of hanging posters of Michael Jordan or Shaquille O'Neal in their rooms, maybe these youngsters will put up pictures of Lisa Leslie or Sherry Swoopes.

"I look forward to the challenge of being a role model and getting a chance to visit and talk to the kids," said Leslie, a former Southern Cal star who's one of 18 finalists for the team. "And just to have young

Houston Rockets' Clyde Drexler talks with the press before practice Tuesday in San Antonio.

Drexler, Rockets jump out on Spurs

SAN ANTONIO (AP)—Has the trade for Clyde Drexler been good for the Houston Rockets?

To borrow a favorite phrase of Drexler's, "No doubt about it."

One game into the Western Conference finals, it's clear Drexler is a big matchup problem for the San Antonio Spurs. He scored 25 points and grabbed 12 rebounds in Houston's 94-93 road victory Monday night.

The Spurs are promising a better defensive effort against Drexler tonight. If not, this Texas show-down could be shortened.

"I don't think any one guy stops him," San Antonio coach Bob Hill said. "The team has to guard him. He's like Hakeem. He's like David. That's what this league is about. The Spurs didn't guard Clyde enough."

The Feb. 14 trade that sent Drexler back to his hometown and Otis Thorpe to Portland was viewed with some skepticism because it removed a top rebounder from a Rocket team already deficient in that area.

As the team continued to struggle in the regular season, the skepticism grew, but the playoffs have shown the importance of Houston having two experienced scorers in Drexler and Hakeem Olajuwon.

"Before Clyde they had one guy who could score and other guys who were capable of scoring but they were streaky," the Spurs' Sean Elliott said. "Now they have two guys who are going to score every night."

Drexler, free of injuries and obviously happy to be out of Portland, showed his old quickness and jumping ability Monday night. One scoring slam-over rebound was reminiscent of the Clyde of three or four years ago.

"He's home," Olajuwon explained, "and he's playing on a winning team."

Drexler, as usual, deflected all comments about himself or any comparisons about the way he's playing with before the trade. "I was working hard. We've got a great team here," he said.

"It's going to be a great series." San Antonio's Doc Rivers said the mistake was playing defense too loose against Drexler at the start. Drexler hit his first seven shots Monday night.

"Clyde Drexler is a good player all of the time, but when you let his confidence go, he's a great player," Rivers said. "We've got to be defensive and some figures into them. 'I'm going to go after him,'" Rivers said. "I don't like my chances."

Drexler is just one of the problems facing the Spurs, who felt they failed to match the intensity of the defending NBA champion Rockets down the stretch Monday night.

"We didn't have the urgency they needed in a game like this," Avery Johnson said. "We've got to realize who we're playing and what time of year it is."

Hill said a look at the statistics shows how the Spurs let a game they should have won slip away. "You hold a team to 94 points and 42 percent shooting, get to the foul line 18 more times than your opponent and lose by one point," he said. "I'd say we beat ourselves."

And the Rockets, filled with confidence after comeback playoff victories over Utah and Phoenix, seized the opportunity. "Houston is like a shark that smells blood," Hill said. "They see the chance to go and then they go."

The Spurs don't figure to get two straight off-games from David Robinson, who was named the NBA's most valuable player on Tuesday. But Rivers said Robinson can't do it alone against the Rockets.

"David is being carrying us all year long," Reid said. "But in the playoffs, other players have to step up and make plays and that's what we didn't do."

Now that the Rockets have won four in a row, Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich warned against any letdown. "We can't ease up because we know they're a great team and they're going to come back and we're probably going to see a big, aggressive team out there," Tomjanovich said.

Games to bring Atlanta traffic to halt

ATLANTA (AP)—Car-lousing Atlanta was challenged Tuesday to make the ultimate Olympic sacrifice: Give up driving during the 17 days of the Summer Games.

The traffic plan for the 1996 Olympics will close much of downtown to private vehicles. Access to Olympic venues will be primarily through mass transit, including rapid rail and a fleet of buses.

Expecting 2 million visitors, the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games proposed that most major streets in the city be fully or partly closed to incoming traffic from 7:30 a.m. to midnight from July 19 to Aug. 4, 1996. ACOG urged employees time off or juggle hours so workers could arrive before the driving deadline.

Though traffic into the city would be severely restricted, cars that come in during the off hours will be allowed to leave downtown Atlanta at any time. Olympic officials and VIPs will be allowed to drive unimpeded.

"This plan does not close down our city," said Joel Stone, traffic director for ACOG.

But commuters said they would have to pay a big price for Olympic transport tranquility. "For me, it's going to be a pain," said Arthur Stevens, a Georgia-Pacific Corp. employee who commutes to Atlanta from suburban Rockmart. "I don't think, when they started talking about the Olympics, they really thought about what kind of impact it was going to have."

Guard: Sanders abusive during August '94 run-in CINCINNATI (AP)—A stadium guard who arrested Deion Sanders testified Tuesday he didn't like the way the Cincinnati Reds center fielder talked to him during their run-in.

Herb Kohus said when he stopped Sanders from driving his motor scooter through a pedestrian-only gate, Sanders told him, "Don't you know who I am?" and "You can't arrest me."

Kohus testified he did not know Sanders' identity during their confrontation after an Aug. 6 game. Kohus, an off-duty police officer, was working a security detail at Riverfront Stadium.

Sanders also used an expletive when asked to show his license. Kohus said at Sanders' trial in Hamilton County Municipal Court.

Georgia county says Somalis must train elsewhere

The Associated Press

A Georgia county threw cold water on the Olympic flame when it barred the Somali team from training there for the 1996 Games, a top IOC official said Tuesday.

"It strikes me as not being in the spirit of the Olympics," said Dick Pound, an International Olympic Committee vice president. "It's a little disappointing. In a telephone interview from his Montreal office, he stressed that neither he nor the IOC were taking an official position on the Barrow County move."

"On a scale of problems from one to 1,000, it's not that high on the list," he said.

between rival warlords.

A 45-minute chamber meeting discussed the protests, including repeated use of news photos showing the body of a U.S. serviceman being dragged through the streets of Mogadishu, the Somali capital.

In addition to his vice presidency, Pound heads the IOC's oversight panel for the Atlanta Games and is one of the committee's most powerful members. In a telephone interview from his Montreal office, he stressed that neither he nor the IOC were taking an official position on the Barrow County move.

"On a scale of problems from one to 1,000, it's not that high on the list," he said.

have hoped it would have landed on the Olympic Games."

The Somalis were directed to Barrow County by the Georgia Olympic Training Alliance, a division of the state Department of Industry, Trade and Tourism.

The agency matches foreign Olympians with proper facilities in communities that volunteer to host them; since Somalia will send only a track-and-field team to Atlanta, the all-weather tracks in Barrow County seemed an ideal location, said Kim Adler, a project consultant with the alliance.

She said the question of whether it made sense to send a team of black athletes from an African nation with a history of animosity toward Americans to a predominantly white section of the rural South never came up in planning sessions.

against American soldiers, only some of the warlords, not all people in Barrow County are against this," Adler said. "Everyone in Georgia has southern hospitality. But any group will have people with hostility. It could have happened anywhere."

Pound, a Canadian, said the Barrow County shuffle was another sign that holding the Games in the United States can be different from voting the location. He has urged an earlier decision to change the volleyball venue from Cobb County, which that Atlanta suburb passed an anti-gay measure.

"It's one of the great things about the United States, that freedom of expression," Pound said. "It's also one of the unnering things."

The Somali team is looking for another training site for its 25-member team and might wind up in Gordon County, about 50 miles from Atlanta.

Olympic boss finalists before panel

The hunt for a new boss for the U.S. Olympic Committee takes a major step today when the blue-ribbon panel conducting the search interviews a handful of finalists.

USOC president LeRoy Walker and other members of the panel will interview between four and six candidates in Chicago, according to sources familiar with the process.

Among those at the top of the list are Dick Schultz, former executive director of the NCAA; John Krimsky, the USOC's top fund-raiser and interim executive director since last summer; and Mike Jacki, former executive director of U.S. Skiing and USA Gymnastics.

Other candidates on the short list included Terrence Lissery, former commissioner of the Continental Basketball Association; Kenneth Burnley, superintendent of schools in the USOC's hometown of Colorado Springs, Colo.; and Merrily Dean Baker, former athletic director at Michigan State.

Langer leads group in European golf

MADRID, Spain — Top-seeded Bernhard Langer led a group of four players into this summer's semifinals of the European leg of the World Championship of Golf on Tuesday.

Moving up with him were Seve Ballesteros of Spain, Barry Lane of Britain and Jesper Parnevik of Sweden.

Langer beat Sam Leslie of Scotland 3 and 2 and Parnevik defeated David Gilford of England 2 and 1.

No. 2-seeded Ballesteros defeated fellow countryman Miguel Angel Jimenez 3 and 2, and Lane defeated Scotland's Sam Torrance 2 and 1.

The four winners move on to the European regional semifinals July 24-25 at the Oxfordshire Golf Club in Oxfordshire, England, with the eventual winner qualifying for one of four spots in the finals Dec. 30-31 at the Grayhawk Golf Club in Scottsdale, Arizona.

Davenport paces U.S. in Strasbourg

STRASBOURG, France — Top-seeded Lindsay Davenport led a parade of Americans into the second round of the Strasbourg Open with a 7-5, 6-2 victory Tuesday over Mercedes Paz of Argentina.

Mary Joe Fernandez, the No. 3 seed, defeated Ai Sugiyama of Japan, 6-2, 6-3; fifth seeded Lori McNeil routed Anne-Sophie Pitignoff of France 6-0, 6-1 and Marianne Werdel-Wiemeyer, No. 7, eliminated Alexia Dechaume-Balleret of France 6-4, 5-7, 6-0.

Wartiez settles with topless dancer

MARTINEZ, Calif. — Chris Gattling of the Golden State Warriors has agreed to a $90,000 settlement with a woman who sued him after she broke her tailbone in a bar fight.

Dianne Sheehan sued Gattling last year, saying the 6-foot-10 forward tripped her to the floor of a San Ramon bar in April 1993. Gattling had been assigned to guard Mercedes Paz of Argentina, who was having, Sheehan said in her lawsuit. He dumped her over his head and when she tried to kick him in response, threw her down, she alleged.

A topless dancer, Sheehan, said she lost $15,000 in wages during her recuperation for a broken coccyx.

Gattling's lawyer told the court that Sheehan had started a tussle when he rejected the business card she was offering. When Gattling accidentally spilled some beer on the woman's back, she kicked him over the groin and was struck in the back when he grabbed her foot and pushed her back, he said.

Gattling said he acted in self-defense.

NBA may keep ref away from Rockets

HOUSTON — NBA referee Jake O'Donnell, who had a run-in with the Houston Rockets' Clyde Drexler two weeks ago, may not work any more playoff games this season, according to a newspaper report. O'Donnell has been assigned to a game since ejecting Drexler from a playoff contest against Phoenix on May 9. Following an investigation, the NBA rescinded all fines against Drexler, including the automatic $1,000 that comes with an ejection.

O'Donnell's absence, quoting unidentified sources, reported Tuesday that O'Donnell's absence is a clear sign the NBA didn't condone his conduct in the Houston-Phoenix game.

Suns' coach may cut Barkley's time

PHOENIX — Charles Barkley says he can't take the tedium of another regular season just to get back to the playoffs, so Phoenix coach Paul Westphal intends to do something about it.

If Barkley changes his mind and returns for a 12th season, Westphal said Tuesday he will play the star forward only about 30 minutes a game to reduce the wear and tear on his body.

"That was our plan this year but because of injuries we've seldom had everybody that we planned to have, and he had to carry the load more than he wanted to," Westphal said. "If we had (Denny) Manning; A.C. Green and Wayman Tisdale, I'm sure we could cut Charles' burden."

Barkley, who turned 30 during his MVP season in 1992-93, has been preoccupied with his health since he collapsed at training camp in October 1993.

Racing team fires ex-champ Mansell

WOKING, England — The career of former Formula One champion Nigel Mansell, which took a drastic downturn last year, reached an even lower point Tuesday when he was fired by McLaren.

Less than four months after signing him, the team ran out of patience after a series of misadventures and disappointing performances by Mansell. The 41-year-old driver ran just two races in a McLaren Mercedes.

The announcement followed speculation that Mansell would quit the team after parking his car on the 18th lap of the Spanish Grand Prix nine days ago. Speculation will now center on whether Mansell will quit the sport for good.

Idaho native grabs heptathlon title

COEUR D'ALENE — Coeur d'Alene's Corissa Yassen already is a track All-American, but she has her sights on bigger goals — next year's Olympic Games.

Yassen, a senior at Purdue, won the Big 10 Conference heptathlon with 5,518 points, the best she's ever done.

On Saturday, she repeated as high jump champion and will concentrate on that event in the NCAA championships opening Sunday at Tennessee. She also qualified for the national championships in the heptathlon but the high jump will be held on one of the two days of the heptathlon, so she will skip that event.

"I want to put it all into the jump," Yassen said. She set a personal record in the high jump, clearing 6-2 1/2.

Wings take 2-0 lead on Sharks

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Red Wings were nearly perfect in a 6-2 triumph over the San Jose Sharks Tuesday night. "Nearly" wasn't quite good enough.

"We're going to have to play better," said forward Shawn Burr said. "In two games we only played four good periods. We need 60-minute games. We can play better, but we can't be perfect."

Detroit has a 2-0 lead in the Western Conference semifinal series, which shifts to San Jose for Games 3 and 4 on Thursday and Saturday.

"They are twice as good a team," Detroit goalie Arturs Irbe said. "They've added to it, they've added goaltending. I can tell that they believe in one another. They have the chemistry. That's the difference."

The Red Wings, still smarting about being swept by the Sharks in the first round last season, came out with their big guns firing. Paul Coffey, Sergei Fedorov, Steve Yzerman and Dino Ciccarelli — four of the best shooters in the game — all scored first-period goals.

Fedorov and Doug Brown scored in the second period for a 6-0 lead.

Coffey also had an assist, giving him 164 playoff points and tying him with Denis Potvin for most points by a defenseman in NHL history.

Roenicke helps lift Hawks past Canucks

CHICAGO (AP) — Jeremy Roenicke came back from a knee injury to provide an emotional lift and Ed Belfour made 17 saves as the Chicago Blackhawks defeated the Vancouver Canucks 2-0 Tuesday night to go to Game 2 of the first round of the Western Conference semifinals.

Jim Cummins scored his first career playoff goal and Patrick Poulin added the third-period clincher for the Blackhawks, who have won 14 of 16 games in team history after winning the first two games. Chicago is 6-0 against the Canucks this season.

Vancouver, which plays host to Games 3 and 4 on Thursday and Saturday, has lost all seven times in club history after dropping the first two games of a series. The only best-of-7 series in which the Canucks trailed 2-0 was the 1982 Stanley Cup finals, and they ended up getting swept by the New York Islanders.

Mike Rathje and Ulf Dahlen in the third period. Rathje's goal 6:01 into the period ended a stretch of 232 minutes, 36 seconds without a goal in a

Louis Arena. The last goal scored by the Sharks in Detroit was Jamie Baker's game-winner at 13:25 of the third period in Game 7 of the first round last season.

Detroit put tremendous pressure on Irbe in the first two periods. Irbe was the architect of San Jose's seven-game upset in the 1994 series, and the Red Wings looked like they couldn't wait to get back into the series.

"They came out like they were the team trying to get back into the series," Sharks forward Chris Tancill said. "They were good and we were bad. They're too good of a team to fall behind like that. They'll test you up alive."

Coffey's goal came just 1:37 into the game and the Red Wings never let up.

Detroit had the first nine shots on goal, outshot the Sharks 21-8 in the first period, 20-5 in the second and 46-17 in the game. When the Sharks did manage a quality shot, Mike Vernon would turn it away. "Our guys really worked hard," Vernon said. "Our confidence level is up. It's a treat to sit there and watch the guys attack like that. It's great to see the guys working so hard and having success from their hard work."

The Red Wings, who last won a Stanley Cup championship 40 years ago, have dominated San Jose in 1995.

During the abbreviated season, the Red Wings were 4-0 against the Sharks, outscoring them 19-4 and outshooting them 145-67.

Vizquel powers Indians past Brewers, 5-3

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Cleveland Indians list Omar Vizquel at 5-feet-9, 165 pounds, and that might be stretching it. For two straight games, though, Vizquel has held his own in a lineup laden with power hitters.

American League

"He's been hitting the weights and eating his Wheaties," manager Mike Hargrove said Tuesday night after Vizquel homered for the second time in two games — matching his career high for a season — as the Indians beat the Milwaukee Brewers 5-3.

Vizquel had gone 333 at-bats and more than a year between home runs before hitting one Monday night. Five at-bats later, he sent a two-run homer to right Tuesday night that expanded Cleveland's lead to 5-1.

"Omar is not a home run hitter, but for a small man, he is strong," Hargrove said, noting that Vizquel won a home run derby with his teammate prior to an exhibition game in Buffalo last month. "If he stays back and gets a pitch he can handle, he can drive the ball."

Vizquel, who has nine career home runs in 827 at-bats, has hit safely in seven straight games.

"That Vizquel, I'm going to go flatten his tires tonight," Milwaukee manager Phil Garner quipped. "How dare he does that to us? You know, we got the big guys all right, but we couldn't get the little guys."

Edgar Serrano had three hits, including two doubles and a home run homered for Cleveland, which has won 11 of 14 games. Milwaukee has dropped eight of 10.

Dennis Martinez (4-0) lasted six innings, giving up three runs and six hits, walking one and striking out four.

"He yielded the first-inning home run to Turner Ward, his second of the season and the first by the Brewers in 10 games, then blanked them until they scored two runs on four singles in the sixth. Kevin Seitzer and Joe Oliver singled home the runs."

"Dennis is such a competitor and has such command of his stuff — even working behind hitters, he took a two-striker into the sixth inning," Hargrove said. "He worked hard tonight." Eric Plunk pitched two scoreless innings, striking out three, and Jose Mesa got the last three outs for his sixth save, striking out two.

Knuckelbatter Steve Sparks (-1-1), coming off 7 1-3 shutout innings at Texas, allowed five runs and 10 hits in six innings.

Blue Jays 10, Royals 6

TORONTO — Rookie Alex Gonzalez hit his first two major league homers and drove in four runs as the Blue Jays snapped a three-game losing streak.

Carlos Delgado of the Blue Jays led off the seventh with a pinch-hit homer off Hipolito Pichardo (0-3) to make it 6-6.

John Olerud, Roberto Alomar and Shawn Green followed with run-scoring singles with two out.

Gonzalez, who also drove in a run with an eighth-inning double, hit a two-run homer in the first and a solo shot in the third.

Tigers 6, Twins 4, 7 Innings

DETROIT — Alan Trammell's two-run single keyed a five-run fifth inning as the Tigers took a rain-shortened victory, their season-best fourth straight.

The game was called in the bottom of the seventh following a 90-minute delay.

Trammell, Todd Steverson and John Flaherty singled with one out to lead the bases in the fifth for Tigers. Eddie Guardado (0-2) walked Chad Curtis to force in a run.

Xavier Hernandez (3-0) got the win with two innings of relief. He pitched 2-3 innings for his second save.

Cubs 7, Rockies 6

DENVER — Kevin Foster (3-2) struck out nine in 6 2-3 innings and helped his own cause with a homer.

Colorado drew 43,226 despite a game-time temperature of 38 degrees and a persistent drizzle.

Foster allowed five runs, six hits and four walks. He gave up homers to Andres Galarraga, Marvin Freeman (0-2) and Larry Walker, accounting for Colorado's first five runs.

Randy Myers pitched the ninth for his ninth save.

Braves' Maddux regains form to lock up Cardinals; Marlins halt 6-game skid

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Greg Maddux, rebounding from his worst performance of the season with a veer perfect inning and a win finished with his fifth-straight Tuesday night, leading the Atlanta Braves over the St. Louis Cardinals 7-1.

Maddux and Mike Kelly homered for the Braves, who won their fifth straight game in their previous start. Maddux (3-1) allowed six runs in a 6-3 loss to Colorado.

Against St. Louis, he struck out eight, walked none and allowed only three hits. Denny Jackson (0-5) allowed five runs and four hits in 5 1-3 innings and struck out six. His ERA rose from 6.23 to 6.61.

pitched two-hit ball over eight innings in his only second start and Tommy Gregg homered as Florida stopped a six-game losing streak.

Gregg, a former Pirate called up from Triple-A Charlotte on Sunday, was 3-for-3 with three RBIs to support Hammond, who fractured his left leg last August and was activated only 10 days ago. Florida, which allowed two doubles and a triple to Pittsburgh, did damage against Estaban Loaiza (1-2), who allowed five runs and seven hits in six innings.

Expos 6, Padres 4

MONTREAL — Mike Lansing hit first ca-

rect grand slam and Jeff Fassero (5-1) became the NL's first five-game winner as Montreal beat San Diego for the 14th straight time since July 24, 1993.

Fassero worked out of a bases-loaded jam in the first and wound up allowing two runs and five hits in 6 1-3 innings. Mel Rojas got three outs for his eighth save.

Andy Ashby (2-3) allowed five runs and three hits in four innings.

Dodgers 6, Mets 4

NEW YORK — Tim Lincecum went 3-for-4 and tripled in the go-ahead run in the eighth. Hideo Nomo got his fifth straight no-decision. He allowed eight hits and four runs in six innings and struck out seven, leaving his NL-leading total to 40, with two walks.

Omar Daal (3-0) pitched one perfect inning of relief and Todd Worrell got his third save.

Reds 10, Astros 5

CINCINNATI — Darryl Kile (1-3) walked seven batters, hit two more and threw a pair of wild pitches.

He let in one run with a wild pitch, walked home another, and left with the bases loaded in the fourth after walking two and hitting Reggie Sanders.

Pedro Martinez relieved and walked Eddie Taubensee, forcing in a run that made it 5-3. Slumping Bert Boone then cleared the bases with a double, sending the Reds to their 12th victory in 15 games.

Fed won't fiddle with rates

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Confronted with mounting evidence of an economic slowdown, the Federal Reserve did the expected Tuesday and left interest rates unchanged.

Analysts said the central bank may keep interest rates on hold for months to come until there are clear signs that the economy is headed.

The Federal Open Market Committee, the central bank's policy-making body, met for three hours behind closed doors without taking any action on interest rates.

Afterward, Federal Reserve spokesman Joseph Coyne said there would be no further announcement. Under rules the central bank adopted this year, it can only announce a change in monetary policy.

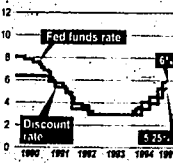

During a 12-month period that ended Feb. 1, the Fed acted in seven out of 10 months — to 6 percent — the rate that banks charge each other for overnight loans. That in turn pushed the bank prime lending rate up to 7 percent, and both rates have remained at those levels now for nearly four months.

Many analysts anticipate the economy will regain momentum this year, forcing the Fed to step in again and raise rates. But they said that is not likely to occur at the Open Market Committee meeting July 5-6 and may not take place until the fall.

"I'm not bullish," said economist Samuel Kahlan of First Securities Inc. in Chicago. "I think this is a pause that refreshes and the next step will be a pickup in the economy that leads to a tightening."

But he said it could be August or September before there is enough hard data "to convince people there is some direction" to the economy.

Other analysts say the growth is much weaker than it appears and that the previous interest rate increases by the Fed have yet to show up fully. The momentum has slowed. No one is disputing that," said economist Sung Won Sohn of Norwest Corp., a Minneapolis bank.

"But what the Fed does not know is how much of the previous credit tightening will come out of the pipeline in the future."

Predicting the Fed will cut interest rates in the first quarter this year, Sohn said Chairman Alan Greenspan and his colleagues "have to be sensitive to economic indicators and they also must have pretty good political assurance."

Financial markets ended the day slowly after the FOMC announcement. The Dow Jones industrial average, which has climbed more than 700 points since Thanksgiving, gained 40.81 points and closed at 4,436.44, just shy of its all-time high. A bond rally pushed the yield on the Treasury's 30-year bond down to 6.86 percent.

While economic growth has slowed, the expansion has been an unusually long-lasting one and is now in its fifth year.

The economy expanded at a booming 5.1-percent annual rate in the last three months of 1994 but slowed to a moderate 2.8 percent pace in the first quarter this year. Many analysts expect the second quarter to be even slower.

Still, earlier increases in commodity prices are generating inflation pressure. Inflation, which was up 2.7 percent last year, could jump to around 4 percent this year, forecasters say.

Those who expect an economic resurgence this year point to easing in mortgage rates that will help spur home buying and growing consumer confidence that will chip away at high business inventories.

"My guess is the economy will snap back sharply," said Eugene Sherman of the Wall Street Institute firm, M.A. Shapiro & Co. Inc.

"The Fed will be inclined to tighten, but I think the earliest would be in August."

Failed Microsoft-Intuit merger gives banks time to get on-line

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The failed Microsoft-Intuit merger gives banks more time to woo customers to the rapidly developing arena of home banking, which up to now has been a little-used service littered with hatched efforts.

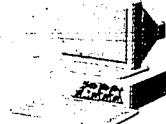

Some banks are even working on ways to let consumers take money out of their bank accounts through PCs or screen telephones, almost akin to an automatic teller machine at home.

"Something like that could be introduced within the next six months," said William Randall, executive vice president at Huntington Bancshares, a Columbus, Ohio bank that will announce Wednesday a home banking system on the Internet.

Randall and other bankers say Microsoft's decision to scrap the Intuit acquisition gives banks a window of opportunity to quickly jump ahead to the race to give consumers the ability to get at their money, pay bills and shop from home using personal computers.

"My guess is the economy will snap back sharply," said Eugene Sherman of the Wall Street Institute firm, M.A. Shapiro & Co. Inc.

"The Fed will be inclined to tighten, but I think the earliest would be in August."

Getting money from home

Americans can pay off, see their checking account balance and do other routine banking tasks from home using a personal computer, but the most common use of banking transactions getting cash — 43 percent — is to the bank of their machine.

Banks and credit card companies are working to change that by creating ways to let consumers take money from their accounts using a PC. You need a PC, a telephone and a credit card.

Step 1: Get on-line with your bank

Step 2: Request a money transfer out to a debit or "smart" card

Step 3: Put your card in a slot on the side of your PC

Step 4: Bank downloads data onto a computer chip on the card and subtracts the amount from your bank account

Step 5: Use the card for purchases from participating merchants tomers called asking when the bank would do home banking with QuickNet.

Burchfield likens the project to the development of ATM networks in the 1970s, where banks formed consortiums to build and maintain networks of teller machines across wide geographic areas.

Some banks involved in the Quicknet project already offer a home-banking service through rival Microsoft Money. Microsoft officials say they see no conflicts in the arrangement.

Bankers say they want to pursue both projects to get the best shot at signing up consumers.

"This doesn't change our plans at Alltel and Richard C. Mandel, senior vice president at U.S. Bancorp, a Microsoft and Intuit partner."

Banks have been offering screen versions of PC banking for at least 10 years but have failed to attract many customers, partly because of bad programs and partly because few consumers had PCs equipped with telephone modems.

Last year home banking accounted for just 1 percent of all routine customer transactions, according to a survey by First A.M. Young. The accounting firm estimates that by 1997, the share will rise to 10 percent.

That's because of consumers using PCs daily. Giving people the ability to get at their cash could make the services more attractive.

To that end, a number of banks and credit card companies are testing ways to let consumers download credit from their bank accounts onto a special plastic card. Some companies called "smartcard" containing a computer chip and memory. The card could then be used to make small cash purchases at convenience stores, gas stations, and mass transit systems.

Master and International Inc. will launch a smartcard test later this year in Australia with five large Australian banks. Customers will load up the card at an ATM. So they'll still have to make a trip to the bank. But bankers say the technology could eventually work at a PC or a screen phone.

Interest rate news sends Dow soaring

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stocks bounded higher Tuesday with the Dow Jones industrial average closing just shy of its all-time high.

Two other popular Wall Street indicators achieved record finishes.

The market's advance impressed analysts because it came despite a mid-afternoon sell-off that temporarily knocked stock gauges back near their starting points of the day.

The market easily coped with the sell-off, according to S.C. Moore, senior investment strategist at Dunvegan Associates Inc. in Santa Barbara, Calif. "That attests to the resilience of this market."

The Dow industrials ended at 4,436.44, up 40.81 points and only a shade below the prior peak of 4,437.47 hit May 15.

Among the record setters was Standard & Poor's 500 stock index, which climbed 4.93 to 528.54. That narrowly beat the old mark of 528.19 reached on May 16.

Strength in technology stocks made the Nasdaq Stock Market a star performer. Its composite climbed 4.46 to a new high of 879.64, which surpassed its previous best of 871.93 reached May 17.

Heavy volume on the New York Stock Exchange also was registered as a healthy omen for stocks. Volume on the Big Board's floor swelled to 362.67 million shares as of 4 p.m. Eastern time from 285.59 million on Monday.

Advancing NYSE stocks outnumbered declines by about 7 to 4. The NYSE composite index rose 2.28 to 283.80.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index advanced 2.53 to 403.66.

Helping Wall Street regain its composure in afternoon trading was news that an interest rate policy meeting in Washington concluded without any surprises.

The Federal Reserve's policy arm, the Federal Open Market Committee, met for about three hours in private and adjourned until July 5.

Humdrum sessions overseas didn't offer much to stir U.S. trading. Stocks drifted in Frankfurt, moved marginally higher in London and weakened in Paris. Tokyo had a positive session.
