U.S. loses F-16 to Serb missile

An American F-16 fighter aircraft similar to this one taking off from the NATO base at Aviano, Italy, was shot down over Bosnia Friday.

The Associated Press
—PALE, Bosnia-Herzegovina — A U.S. F-16 fighter jet was shot down Friday over Serb-held northern Bosnia.
It was a dramatic escalation of the Bosnian Serbs' conflict with the world on a day of ceasefire developments.
Hours after the jet was downed, at least 120 of 377 U.N. peacekeeper hostages were freed. They were taken early today to the town of Mali Zvornik in Serbia and were headed to Novi Sad, 30 miles north of Belgrade, said Serbia's chief of state security, Jovica Stanisic.
The former hostages were to be handed over to their respective governments in Belgrade today, Stanisic said. Serbia said 120 were released; Bosnia's Serbs said 126 were freed.

Earlier, sources had said the U.N. personnel would be taken to Zagreb, Croatia, the regional center of peacekeeping operations. It was not clear why the plan had changed.
A search-and-rescue operation was under way for the American pilot, who the Italian foreign minister said survived. A Bosnian Serb military source said a parachute was seen moments before the crash.

But a NATO spokesman said the pilot of an accompanying plane did not see the pilot eject from the single-seat jet before it crashed. The spokesman, Capt. Jim Mitchell, said there also was an unconfirmed report the pilot had been captured by Serb rebels.
The report, received through the United Nations, said the Serbs would guarantee the pilot's safety. Mitchell said if the report is true and the pilot is alive, "We demand his unconditional release."
The downing of the Fighting Falcon came as the West was hardening its stance against the Serbs.

Clap, podner

Nine-year-old Graham Stanley falls to beat stuntman Jim Dunham to the draw during a gunslinging exhibition at the intersection of Shoshone Street and Main Avenue Friday. Graham is the son of Graydon and Tammi Stanley, of Filer.

Western Days starts with a bang

Parade route - B1

TWIN FALLS — Nine-year-old Graham Stanley tried to clap before "quick and fancy" gun handler Jim Dunham could draw a gun from his holster and put it back.
Graham didn't get a chance before Dunham did his stunt, yet the Main Street crowd enjoyed Friday the Old West gun-handling exhibition by Dunham and two stuntmen from "Tombs" and other movies.
"I thought they were really good at it," the admittedly nervous Filer boy said after the performance.
During the first day of Western Days, the three men showed the crowd dozens of gun turns and spins — the clapping number of shoppers. There should be better weather and turnouts, they said, for today and Sunday.

Knife maker Reed Critchfield of King Hill said the craft show is a good one — rain or not — because people keep coming to the park for various events.
Today's City Park events start with a 10 a.m. Three-on-Three Basketball Tournament; queen contestants will be at the park at 2 p.m. before the 6 p.m. crowning at the fairgrounds; and musicians, dancers and martial artists are scheduled to perform throughout the day. An 11 a.m. bicycle race, noon parade and noon downtown shoot-out also are planned for today.
"There's nothing tougher than doing a show where there's nothing going on," Critchfield said.

move was done by Yul Brynner in "The Magnificent Seven" — and different types of blanks used in Westerns. Dunham said he has been working as an adviser for Western movies since 1967.
"I was fascinated from the time I was a little boy with cowboys and Indians," Dunham said. "For 30 years, I've made my living with a handgun."
Earlier Friday, rain prevented the stuntmen — who were promoting the Western National Open starting today at Filer's Twin Falls County Fairgrounds — from showing their moves. But it didn't halt everything down at the arts-and-crafts show at City Park.
When the rain finally stopped, crafters uncovered their wares for the increasing

Deadly, quiet 'fingers' pull fighter down

Knight-Ridder News Service
WASHINGTON — It is a deadly contest: a compact U.S. fighter and a small, silent Soviet-designed missile so lethal it once was nicknamed the "three fingers of death."
Ordinarily, the fighter has a chance, with cockpit warnings of a missile's approach. But in this missile, which got its nickname from its three-pronged launch system, provides scant tip-off.
And its sudden arrival near a small, fuel-laden fighter spells the end of the game and likely disaster.
It was apparently such a duel — with a U.S. F-16C on the prey, and a Serbian SA-6 the predator — that led to the downing Friday of the first U.S. plane lost in the Bosnian civil war.
The encounter came Friday afternoon in Bosnia when the single seat F-16 Fighting Falcon was flying near the city of Banja Luka, a rebel Serbian stronghold in northwestern Bosnia.
The fate of the pilot was unknown. There were reports that the jet exploded in midair and that the pilot had bailed out. But the Pentagon would say only that an intense search and rescue operation was under way. "The entire focus ... is on the rescue of the pilot and the protection" of the searchers, a top Pentagon official said Friday.
As the search continued, observers, including an aviator who has patrolled the Bosnian no-fly zone, reflected Friday on the incident that fits the classic description of aerial combat: hours of boredom punctuated by seconds of stark terror.
The F-16C was one of 12 such Air Force jets stationed at Aviano Air Base in Italy. They are among 89 U.S. aircraft and scores of planes from other NATO countries that have been enforcing the no-fly zone over Bosnia since April 1993.
Of the more than 20,000 sorties flown, it was only the second NATO plane downed in the operation. A British Sea Harrier "jump jet" from the carrier HMS Ark Royal was shot down near Gorzade on April 16, 1994, but the pilot ejected and was rescued by Muslim forces.
Often, said Air National Guard Maj. Michael J. Theisen, who last summer strafed a Serbian antitank gun near Sarajevo, the only threat is the distant winking of small-arms fire far below.
But the operation regularly has seen periods of classic, if harrowing, jousts between NATO fighters and Serbian anti-air-

Faith kept snowbound man from hike to safety

The Associated Press
—AGNESS, Ore. — When DeWitt Finley got stuck in the snow last fall trying to drive the back roads over the Klamath Mountains, he put his faith in God and waited with the patience of Job for someone to rescue him.
For nine weeks, he sat in the cab of the pickup, checked the days off the calendar in his salesman's day planner and wrote a stack of letters in a neat hand on a legal pad to his two sons, his fiancée and his boss.
If only he had stepped out of the truck and followed the road back around a corner, he soon would have found clear pavement leading him down the mountain to safety.
Last month, after some teen-agers who got stuck themselves discovered Finley starved to death in his pickup, the people who live in this rugged country couldn't believe he had just sat there for so long.

The snow "never stays on that road but right there," said Glenn Carpenter of Gold Beach, who dug Finley's pickup out of 5 feet of snow with a front-end loader May 22 before going on to open the road for the season.
Depending on the weather, Finley could have had a few hundred yards or a few miles of snow to walk through before reaching pavement, Carpenter said.
"But there was no sign he had ever left his truck."
"I have no control over my life its all in His hands. 'His will be done,'" Finley wrote his boss in one of the letters found with his body.
"Death here in another month or so, or he sends someone to save me. Yet knowing His will I'm at peace and His grace will prevail. If I'm able to finish my life here, please know I'll always be thankful to you and remain your servant. If not — I'll see you in Glory."

Elmer Stelzer placed this poster seeking information about the missing DeWitt Finley in his business in Kallspell, Mont., after Finley disappeared in November, 1994.

June brings rain, rain, rain to much of nation

A cold front extended from northern Maine to Lake Superior and northeastern Minnesota. Showers and thunderstorms were forecast from Nebraska to the Great Lakes and the Mississippi River Valley, and from there to the East Coast. Local rainfall of up to 2 inches and a few severe thunderstorms were possible, particularly from Florida to the Great Lakes and the Mid-Atlantic region. Showers and thunderstorms were also likely from interior southern Oregon and the Sierra Nevada to the Rockies, with a few severe thunderstorms and locally heavy rain possible from the Texas Panhandle into Colorado and Kansas. Low clouds were expected to hang over the West Coast, while the Northern Plains from Nebraska to Minnesota were expected to see partly cloudy skies and mild temperatures.

Missile

craft missiles mingled with hours of quiet patrols over picturesque Balkan countryside. The NATO fighters, with their sophisticated cockpit warning system, are well protected against the more lethal threat of Soviet-designed radar-guided missiles. "All modern fighters have it," said Robert W. Gaskin, a former fighter pilot and a senior military analyst with Business Executives for National Security, a Washington defense studies group. "Most sophisticated Soviet-designed missiles, like those the Serbs have, use radar beams to detect and 'acquire' targets and to guide missiles to the target. The warning system, however, alerts pilots when they are being tracked, when enemy radar has 'locked' onto them, and when a missile has been fired. Gaskin said the system even can tell a pilot what kind of missile is coming, and from which direction, and automatically can throw off flares or chaff to lure the missile astray. But the SA-6 provides no such warnings. Gaskin said because it does not follow a radar beam to its target. It's a "very small, surface-to-air missile," he said. "It's very fast, very maneuverable and very deadly. It's hard to find and hard to counter. It doesn't guide to its target by radar energy, so you... (warning) gear will be totally silent." Gaskin said the missile's approach probably would be undetected. And its detonation near the F-16, which he said is like a "flying gas tank," could be disastrous. Cattle rounded up COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Most of about 60 surviving cattle that were freed when their tractor-trailer rig overturned had been rounded up by late Friday. Local ranchers volunteered to help capture the cattle, which wandered among the forested hillsides along U.S. 95 after the rig crashed Thursday about 10 miles south of town. Seven cattle were killed in the accident, and three were hurt so badly that a veterinarian euthanized them.

where he was found — probably a couple different times when he was still alive," Kelley said. After Finley vanished, his boss, Mic Stielor, owner of S & S Campers, sent out another man to search for him. Deputies in Coos Bay, his last stop, sent up a helicopter. Meanwhile, Finley accepted his fate, writing calmly to Stielor. "Typical Oregon weather clear for his calendar until Jan. 10. It was a senseless death," Kelley said. "That's what's so sad about it. The Good Lord didn't take care of him."

Plane

Continued from A1— its stance toward the Bosnian Serbs, adding Allied forces within striking distance of the rebels. The jet, on a routine NATO mission to monitor a no-fly zone over Bosnia, was downed by an SAM-6 surface-to-air missile, said NATO Maj. Takis Theodorakidis in Naples. The plane was flying at 20,800 feet when it was hit, he said. Bosnian Serb military sources said the plane exploded in mid-air, but refused to confirm that they shot it down. "But there appeared to be little doubt that the Serbs were responsible for hitting the plane. It was shot down deep inside airspace over territory they control, and the Serbs have SAM missile batteries in the area." Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic said Friday night the F-16 had no business over Serbian territory. "We are the masters of our skies," Karadzic said on Bosnian Serb television. Missiles were fired at two other NATO jets, a Dutch plane and a French plane, on Wednesday and Thursday, but missed. The U.S. F-16 was the second NATO jet lost over Bosnia. A British Sea Harrier was downed over the eastern town of Gorzade in April 1994 while attempting an airstrike on Bosnian Serb positions. The pilot was rescued by Bosnian government soldiers. NATO launched a search-and-rescue operation for the American pilot, but refused to release other details. In Washington, a senior Pentagon official would give no details but said helicopters were involved, with jet fighters providing cover. In Naples, Italian Foreign Minister Susanna Agnelli said the United States informed European leaders the pilot was alive. The U.S. jet was shot down just hours after signals emerged in Pale, the Bosnian Serb headquarters near Sarajevo, of a breakthrough in the Serbs' conflict with the United Nations. Red Cross officials said they had received promises from senior Bosnian Serb leaders that the 377 U.N. hostages would be released soon. Hours later, nothing had happened, and the Bosnian Serbs retracted the report before apparently giving in to strong pressure from Belgrade to make a concession to the world. In a statement, the office of Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, the region's power broker, said the freed hostages had been turned over to Serbian police after appeals by Milosevic. Friday's events suggested an intense power struggle among Bosnian Serbs over whether to seek a compromise or continue to defy the United Nations. Earlier Friday, U.N. officials said that Serbs had seized three Ukrainian peacekeepers around Gorzade. In Belgrade, U.S. envoy Robert Frasure and Russian diplomat Alexander Zotov were holding talks with Milosevic. In addition to trying to get Milosevic to ease his influence and the hostage crisis, Frasure is trying to convince him to extend diplomatic recognition to the Bosnian government. Recognition would undercut hard-liners like Karadzic and could help end the three-year-old war.

Faith

Sheriff's Detective Allen Boice figures that Finley, having spent most of his life in Southern California, was in unfamiliar circumstances. "Finley, 56, had been a fund-raiser in the San Diego area for the Christian charity World Vision before moving last summer to Montana, where he loved fishing on Flathead Lake. In Kalispell, Mont., he got a job as sales for S & S Campers, began building a house on a golf course and made plans to marry. He was on a sales trip through Oregon, hauling a brand new demo camper on the back of a four-wheel-drive diesel pickup, when he decided Nov. 14 to leave the main highway along the coast to take the back roads through the Siskiyou National Forest to Grants Pass. "People always ask about that road," said Frank Sandin, owner of the Cougar Lane Store in this back-country community. "It's there and closed, but they go up there anyway. Two or three times a winter somebody goes up there and thinks they can do it. At the summit you hit (the snow) like a wall." The Bear Camp Road has lots of traffic in the summer, when whitewater rafters on the Rogue River take their rigs from Galice to Agness. But when the snow comes, the U.S. Forest Service doesn't plow it. One north-facing stretch at the 4,800-foot summit is generally blocked by snow all winter. The day after Finley drove up, rangers posted a sign at the bottom reading: "Road may be blocked by snowdrifts six miles ahead." Tow truck driver Everett Amos gets calls to haul people out three or four times each winter. Sometimes they call on a cellular phone or CB radio. Finley had neither. Otherwise they walk out, like the teen-agers who found Finley on May 20. It's 16 miles down the mountain, and one more mile to the Cougar Lane Store. Jim Kelley and his Forest Service crew were called out to search for Finley around the Bear Camp Road throughout the winter. "Once we turned around and was working around the corner from

Judge denies Nichols bail, cites potential threat

EL RENO, Okla. (AP) — A federal judge refused to free bombing suspect Terry Nichols Friday. U.S. District Judge David Russell said he denied bail because Nichols could be a danger to others and might flee. "I find that there is clear and convincing evidence that no condition of combination of conditions could reasonably assure the safety of the community," Russell said. He also ordered officials not to keep the lights in his cell on all night or subject him to unwanted visits from a prison psychologist. He ruled after an 80-minute hearing at the federal prison where Nichols and Timothy McVeigh are held in the bombing of the Oklahoma City federal building.

White House calls Serbs 'international pariahs'

U.S. Marines from Camp Lejeune, N.C., train with their weapons aboard the amphibious vessel USS Kearsarge sailing in the Adriatic Sea Friday. The Kearsarge carries part of the 24th Marine Expeditionary Unit, which would help ball out U.N. peacekeepers from Bosnia if President Clinton gives the order.

Analysis

WASHINGTON — With no stomach for asserting its military strength on the ground, the United States has little to offer at the West struggles — once again — to pressure the Serbs.

The downing of a U.S. fighter jet over Bosnia Friday was the latest bad news from a war that has defied the peacemaking efforts of several of the world's most powerful nations.

NATO's strains are in clear view as France talks about a rapid deployment force while the White House steers clear of any suggestion it's ready to commit U.S. troops for anything more than a limited mission. President Clinton's domestic critics are contending his intentions are unclear and could lead to a "slippery slope" of deeper U.S. involvement.

"I want to reiterate and make absolutely clear that our policy on Bosnia remains firm," President Clinton said.

From Congress and beyond comes a drumbeat of demands that the president make clear just what is U.S. policy. Earlier in the week, he indicated a willingness to use U.S. troops to help besieged U.N. peacekeepers redeploy to more defensible positions.

But by week's end, the White House position as described by spokesman Mike McCurry was that "the president is determined not to commit U.S. ground forces to the conflict in Bosnia to participate in the U.N. peacekeeping mission."

Pressed on the issue, McCurry referred to Clinton's speech at the Air Force Academy and said the president was willing to consider "temporary use of ground forces for redeployment and reconfiguration" of the U.N. forces.

Even that limited U.S. role on the ground in Bosnia prompted appeals for caution.

Putting American servicemen and women in harm's way demands at a minimum both a clear articulation of goals and strategy as well as a willingness to act decisively," said former Secretary of State James A. Baker III. "On Bosnia, I do not think the administration has demonstrated either."

Said House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga. "We don't want to end up looking foolish or looking helpless."

One exception to the general reluctance to commit U.S. ground forces is Sen. Dick Lugar of Indiana, a senior member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and a candidate for 1996 GOP presidential nomination. Lugar advocates a powerful NATO force that would include thousands of Americans.

He said the president has been "in denial on this issue for several weeks, hoping for good luck, hoping it was a bad dream that would go away."

For three years, the West has looked largely helpless in its efforts to bring about through force or persuasion an end to the killing in the former Yugoslavia.

Most recently, NATO warplanes attacked Serb positions in an effort to halt shelling of civilians. The strikes were the most intense of the war. But the Serbs retaliated by taking U.N. troops hostage and chaining them to likely targets. The air strikes stopped.

Once again, the Serbs proved tougher and more determined than their Western adversaries.

The French and British, which have large contingents on the ground in Bosnia, do not hide their impatience with the United States and its refusal to contribute troops.

French Foreign Minister Herve de Charette said at a European Union meeting in Sicily that France would welcome the presence of American troops to help out the U.N. force in Bosnia.

De Charette said the current U.N. mission of protecting humanitarian aid and acting as a buffer between the warring parties had to end. "It is impossible today for them to carry out this dual mission," de Charette said at a news conference. "We are going to have to change the mission."

At the same meeting, British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd said the U.N. peace force should remain in Bosnia in support of the U.N.'s humanitarian mission, but not get directly involved in the fighting.

Baker expressed a widespread American view when he warned that U.S. participation in an operation to reposition the U.N. forces "could have potentially tragic consequences."

"I think this is a slippery slope," said Baker, who conceded the Bush administration wasn't likely to get any awards for its handling of the situation.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House denounced Bosnian Serbs as "outrages and international pariahs" for shooting down an American warplane Friday.

President Clinton vowed the attack would not weaken U.S. resolve in Bosnia.

"I want to reiterate and make absolutely clear that our policy on Bosnia remains firm," Clinton said in a brief appearance in the Rose Garden.

Clinton expressed concern about the loss of the F-16 fighter jet and the fate of its pilot. A search-and-rescue mission was ordered.

The downing of the plane risks more criticism for Clinton, already under fire from Republicans and Democrats alike for offering American troops to help relocate U.N. peacekeeping forces in Bosnia to safer locations.

Some members of Congress worried that the United States was being drawn into a dangerous new commitment. Others have criticized Clinton for not taking a tougher stand in Bosnia.

"I would hope they'd very thoroughly consult with Congress before doing anything that would risk American lives," House Speaker Newt Gingrich said. "We don't want to end up looking foolish or looking helpless."

The F-16, flying as part of a NATO air patrol enforcing a "no-fly zone" over Bosnia, was downed by a surface-to-air missile in an area controlled by Serb rebels.

Clinton was meeting late in the day with Defense Secretary William Perry and Gen. John Shalikshvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. The meeting, scheduled before the plane was shot down, was part of last-minute consultations before Perry and Shalikshvili fly to Paris to discuss the next steps in Bosnia with officials of nations who have volunteered peacekeeping troops.

Clinton spoke by telephone with French President Jacques Chirac, whose country has proposed creating a rapid-reaction force to deal with the crisis in Bosnia. U.S. troops are not expected to take part in any such operation.

White House press secretary Mike McCurry said Clinton remains adamantly opposed to sending U.S. ground troops to Bosnia to participate in the U.N. peacekeeping mission.

However, he said the president — despite stiff criticism that will not back away from offering troops to help British, French — and other troops in the U.N. force inside Bosnia.

McCurry said Clinton "is willing to take that criticism" because of the "moral obligation we have to those who do have troops on the ground in Bosnia who might come under peril."

"Blaming Serb rebels for the incident, McCurry called it "one more piece of evidence that, in a wanton and irresponsible way, they continue to violate the behavior that would be expected of any member of the international community."

"In other words," McCurry said, "it's further evidence that by their behavior, the Bosnian Serbs are making them outcasts and international pariahs."

Mitchell's 2nd book published 60 years later

ATLANTA (AP) — Long before Scarlett O'Hara and Rhett Butler, there was a petite missionary and a rough ship hand in the South Pacific.

"Lost Laysen," a newly rediscovered novella that Margaret Mitchell wrote when she was 16, will be released next spring — just in time for the 60th anniversary of her only published book, "Gone With the Wind."

The 13,000-word novella, written in 1916, is the story of the ship hand's secret love for the missionary.

Scribner bought the publication rights from the Road to Tara Museum in Atlanta, which is dedicated to "Gone With the Wind" memorabilia and owns the manuscript. The purchase price was not announced, but the museum's agent said Thursday it was more than $1 million.

Fans of "Gone With the Wind" will recognize the author's style, said museum curator Debra Freer, who will write a foreword and epilogue for "Lost Laysen."

The manuscript, written in pencil on two composition notebooks, was rediscovered last year by Henry Angel Jr., of suburban Snellville, whose father was a lifelong friend of Miss Mitchell. Angel, 70, sold it to the museum along with photos and letters from Miss Mitchell, which will be published with the novella.

Doctor: Reeve's spinal cord was not severed

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Christopher Reeve has sensation in his chest, meaning his spinal cord was not severed and he could regain some body movement, his doctor said Friday.

"I'm encouraged," Dr. John Jane said. "If it were totally severed, we could say with certainty there would be no chance of recovery."

The star of the "Superman" movies has pneumonia, but the infection is subsiding and Jane plans to go ahead with surgery Monday to fuse two upper vertebrae that were fractured when Reeve was thrown from a horse last weekend. He said Reeve's pneumonia was typical in such cases.

Ex-legislator's wife fined in bank scandal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The wife of former New York Rep. Stephen Solarz, Nina Solarz, was fined $5,300 Friday and sentenced to a year's probation for her role in the House banking scandal.

"I am very sorry for what I've done," Mrs. Solarz, 63, tearfully told U.S. District Judge Stanley Harris. "I've been ashamed. I've been embarrassed. I will never do anything like that again."

Parents blast FTC over 'Hooked on Phonics' probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once again, parents who school their kids at home are telling the government in no uncertain terms, they won't tolerate any interference. This time, the thousands of angry phone calls, letters and Internet messages poured in because of a Federal Trade Commission action accusing a reading program, Hooked on Phonics, of misleading ads. A befuddled FTC insisted Friday the whole thing was a misunderstanding, and that it had nothing against either home schooling or phonics. "We are not trying to prohibit sales of this program. We are not against home schooling in any way," said FTC spokeswoman Bonnie Jansen. The action against Hooked on Phonics' maker, Gateway Educational Products of Orange, Calif., was merely a "routine, bread-and-butter type of case" alleging that advertising claims were too broad, Jansen said. "All we are saying is that they need to have substantiation to back up any educational claims," Jansen said. But parents who believe that public schools controlled by liberals who are hostile to the basics insisted the FTC had targeted the small company for ideological reasons. "The bottom line is that thousands of parents are deeply unhappy with the prevailing 'education industry' way of teaching reading in this country, that of 'whole language learning,'" said Bob Sweet, president of the National Right to Read Foundation. Michael Farris, who heads the Home School Legal Defense Fund, said he had feared the FTC was planning "a broad attack on the materials that parents use to home school their children." If the FTC plans to routinely check the claims of private educational products, it also should check whether publishers can prove their school textbooks effectively teach, Sweet said. Whole language learning is currently popular in many universities that train teachers, and many researchers insist it works. In phonics, children sound out letters and combinations of letters. In the whole language instruction, they tackle a whole word at a time. Conservative groups contend whole language instruction teaches children bad habits, including that correct spelling isn't important. "I'd just love to have people quit spouting this nonsense, and just teach kids how to read," said Linda Page, a former reading teacher in California public schools who now works for the Christian group Focus on the Family in Colorado Springs, Colo. Hooked on Phonics officials, meanwhile, insist their product is not political and that their agreement with the FTC reached "mutually amicable." "We feel confident we can substantiate our claims," said spokeswoman Dorothy Taguchi. Nevertheless, the firm was not surprised by the outpouring of support. "We know people like us because they also send us thousands of letters," Taguchi said. "Seen as a threat to Congress, when the consent agreement was proposed in February, several members of the House, including Majority Leader-Dick Armey, R-Texas, and Rep. Bob Dornan, R-Calif., wrote the FTC to complain that the success of products like Hooked on Phonics is a vested interest in perpetuating the status quo." Home schoolers have flexed their political muscle before. In February 1994, they flooded House switchboards over a proposal to require teachers to be certified in subjects they teach. His sponsor, Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., insisted it would apply to public schools only, not home schools. Nevertheless, the House rejected it quickly. "Normally, the FTC does not go out of its way to publicize the number of public comments it receives on a pending case. But in this instance," we felt we had to," Jansen said. "The misunderstanding was just so broad." Under the agreement, Gateway acknowledged no violation of law but agreed to have "competent and reliable evidence to back up any future educational benefit claims." The FTC will refer the issue with claims that Hooked on Phonics could "quickly and easily" help those with reading problems or disabilities. It also took issue with a claim that Hooked on Phonics could "teach reading in a home setting without additional assistance."

Gingrich thinks again about run for the White House in 1996

WASHINGTON (AP) — On second thought, Three months after ruling out a 1996 presidential run, House Speaker Newt Gingrich is mulling the idea again — consulting advisers and preparing for a jam-packed state-to-state tour of the great state of New Hampshire. "There are people dying for him to do it. But I don't know whether he will be in or not — and I don't think he knows either," said party activist William Bennett, who spent Memorial Day weekend with Gingrich and GOP confidants in Florida. "The subject came up," Bennett said dryly. How could it not? There is persistent grumbling in Republican ranks that the current field of nine contenders is somehow lacking — in stature, or vision, or excitement. "People are looking for someone to make their heart beat faster," says Gary Bauer, a social conservative activist. Gingrich told Business Week recently, "I don't have the compulsive urge to run for president." But he does appear to have an urge to make it clear he hasn't ruled anything out, his February statement notwithstanding. "Does he really want to be the second most important Republican in Washington?" said Times Mirror Center polling director Andrew Kohut. "Is he going to risk that? I think he runs."

Newt Gingrich Reconsidering 1996 run

Next Friday, Gingrich begins a four-day visit to New Hampshire, the state's most important Republican in Washington," said Times Mirror Center polling director Andrew Kohut. "Is he going to risk that? I think he runs." Initially described as a vacation for moose watching, Gingrich's trip will include events in every corner of the state, so many that he is using helicopters to get around. For added intrigue, President Clinton will be in New Hampshire the same weekend. Bennett told The Associated Press he thinks it is too early for Gingrich to make more of a move. "To step into it now would be a bad idea," said Bennett. "I have told him that he needs to see if the field is weak, if there is not enthusiasm for the field, if people want him in, if there is a calling out there. The best way for him to be ready for this call should it come is to lead." So intrigued is Bennett by a potential Gingrich candidacy that he brushed aside an effort this week to promote him as an early vice presidential pick for GOP contender Phil Gramm. When the subject was broached with Bennett, according to associates, he said he wanted to wait to see what Gingrich did. The upcoming Gingrich visit is the talk of New Hampshire — and a challenge to Gramm and other candidates who have spent months trying to build support. Former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander, for example, will be campaigning in the state at the same time but probably won't get much attention. "Gingrich is like a force of nature and there is no sense denying it," said Tom Rath, a prominent New Hampshire activist supporting Alexander. "I don't think he is going to run. But he clearly is the driving intellect and energy of the campaign right now in a way I really admire." Business Week asked Gingrich what it would take to get him into the race, and he said, "Seven million people show up Tuesday morning with a draft petition and beg me." "Even Eisenhower came back from Paris," he said, referring to Dwight D. Eisenhower's return from Europe to seek the 1952 nomination. On Friday, back home in Georgia, Gingrich said he was joking. "I gave them what I consider a fairly outrageous answer that they took seriously," he said. Even so, an Atlanta talk radio host quickly said he would begin collecting signatures, and the remarks recalled those used by Ross Perot to create momentum for his 1992 independent candidacy. In the end, many Republicans believe Gingrich will stay put as speaker, instead of pursuing legislative agenda, or perhaps because of ethics questions that would get enormous scrutiny in a presidential campaign. "I would be quite surprised if he did" run, said Republican National Committee Chairman Haley-Barbour.

As Devils Lake continues to rise, flooding becomes major concern

DEVILS LAKE, N.D. (AP) — Dangerously low just three days ago, Devils Lake has risen to its highest level this century, reclaiming land inch by inch in a slow-motion flood that has marooned farms and encircled homes built along the shore. People who live in the small town of Minnewaukan, once about eight miles from the water, now have land-front property. Entire tracts of land normally seeded with barley and wheat are under water. The chances of the lake reaching its historical high — 1,438.4 feet above sea level, recorded in 1867 by the U.S. Geological Survey shows. Water that high would flood the city of Devils Lake, population 7,800. "We're one big thunderstorm away from a total disaster," said Joe Belford, a Ramsey County Commissioner. North Dakota's Water Commission has estimated at least $23 million in damage. More than 1 million acres of cropland in the Devils Lake basin, which includes all or part of eight counties, are flooded. Wilton Weber is usually finished planting his 4,000-acre farm near Churches Ferry by May 25. But this year, he said, "We've done more work this spring than it takes to put in a crop — pumping for six weeks, night and day, three pumps going most of the time." He also built a two-mile dike to hold off the water. "We keep getting in deeper and deeper," he said. In Lawton, a town of about 60 people, the water came within 6 inches of going over the city's dike. To the southwest in Minnewaukan, a town of about 400, the lake has crept right to the banks of the sewer lagoon. The Army Corps of Engineers has been shoveling up the lagoon to keep waste water from flowing into the lake. Roads on the Devils Lake Indian Reservation are closed or washed out. Tribal chairman Elmer White said some tribal members who require kidney dialysis or other major medical treatment now have to be flown to larger cities because the roads are unsafe for travel. At least five families have been evacuated. The lake and the city of Devils Lake are popular as a fishing and resort area. The lake has no outlet. It nearly dried up in the 1930s, and in 1992, it was so low that officials worried the fish would die. But three years of above-normal precipitation and unusually cool weather raised the lake to just over 1,435 feet — its highest point this century. "A lake that started two years ago at 44,900 acres and is now at 72,000 acres — that's a lot of water in two years," said James Lee Witt, director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, who toured the basin Thursday. "Our concern is where you're going to be two years from now." The state would like to build both an inlet on the lake, to raise the level during droughts with water from the Missouri River, and an outlet to drain excess water into the nearby Shyvening River. The Army Corps of Engineers earlier looked into building an outlet, but decided it would be too expensive — at least $20 million. But Marshall Moore, the state transportation commissioner, said that if the lake hits 1,440 feet, the cost of road repairs would exceed the cost of building an outlet. Witt promised to brief White House officials next week on the situation. "If I was a farmer or I lived on the edge of the lake," he said, "I'd want solutions, too."

Verbal attack on judge earns fine for driver

ROLLING MEADOWS, Ill. (AP) — A corrections officer mouthed off to the wrong guy during a traffic tieup and landed himself in a legal jam. What Michael Moreci didn't know was that the other driver was Associate Circuit Court Judge Sam Amiranite. "I beat up guys like you for a living," Moreci yelled to Amiranite, who was driving with his wife and a friend. "Get out of the car and I'll leave you bloody in the street." Moreci pleaded guilty Wednesday to assault — the statute covers verbal threats — and faces a maximum $500 fine. The cars were stuck in traffic after a May 2 concert in suburban Chicago. Amiranite said after Moreci began revving his engine, he calmly asked Moreci to stop. "I said, 'I have a pregnant woman in the car, I have my wife in the car,'" Amiranite said. "Have a little respect for people." Moreci admitted that he responded with the threat. Moreci will keep his job at the Cook County Sheriff's Department while the incident is being investigated.

Panel asks military to open access to its satellite navigation system

WASHINGTON (AP) — The military should stop limiting access to its highly accurate satellite navigation system, a panel headed by former Defense Secretary James Schlesinger said Wednesday. The military's Global Positioning System is already widely used by such people as aircraft pilots and rural hikers, and even some new cars are being equipped to receive signals from the array of 24 satellites. "The system also has a feature known as 'selective availability,'" which distorts the signal available to civilians and makes the system accurate to only within 100 yards or so. Without this distortion, GPS could be accurate to within a few yards. "It's like the difference between guiding someone to the block where you live and directly to the front of your house," said Arnold Donahue of the National Academy of Public Administration, which released the joint report with the National Research Council. Military equipment can read the more accurate, coded signal, and Schlesinger acknowledged that Pentagon officials have been less than enthusiastic about changing that. The Defense Department built the system to provide accurate worldwide navigation to benefit, hence, potential enemies to benefit. Hence, the slightly inaccurate signal available to non-military users. Schlesinger pointed out, however, that during both the Persian Gulf War and the arrival of U.S. forces in Haiti the signal distorters were turned off because the armed forces didn't have enough decoders and had to use civilian equipment. Besides, new technology, called differential GPS, is making the selective availability feature useless, said Laurence J. Adams of the National Research Council. Differential receivers use a ground station with an accurately known location to receive the satellite signal. The location of the station and the reading from the signal can be compared electronically, revealing the amount of distortion in the satellite reading. The corrected signal is then rebroadcast for civilian users. A differential system is now under development for civilian aircraft navigation in the United States and the Coast Guard is preparing a system for maritime use. Eliminating the distortion would eliminate the need for those correction programs, Adams said. In the event of war, Schlesinger said, the signal could simply be jammed in any area necessary.

We all climb our mountains step by step

They were just going to the top of the hill. At least that's what they told me. But before you could say, "Do a good turn daily," the Boy Scouts I was supposed to be supervising were halfway up the mountain on the other side of the hill. I waved and shouted at them to come back to camp. They waved back and then turned and proceeded on up the mountain.

Joseph Walker
ValueSpeak

Oh, well. I thought. As long as I can see them. Then I took note of the sharp terrain they were climbing and, yes, I'll admit it - I was kind of glad they'd gone on ahead without me.

When they got to the mountain peak, they stopped and waved (either that or they moaned me - from that distance, it was hard to tell).

Then they went over the top of the mountain and onto the next peak. And the next. And the next. That's when I lost sight of them.

By the time I could finally see them again, working their way back down the first mountain an hour or so later, I was frantic - and impressed. When they got back to camp, I lectured them about taking off without a plan: Then I asked them how they had managed to cover so much difficult ground in such a short period of time.

"It's easy," said Kevin, unofficial spokesman for the group. "You just do this." Then he stepped off a few exaggerated paces, one after the other.

Kevin's intent may have been facetious, but his point was absolutely valid.

You don't climb a mountain all at once. You do it step by step by step by step.

Sort of like what my sister, Jean, is doing. Jean, the oldest of my seven brothers and sisters, was 17 when I was born, so she has always been like a second mother to me.

She was the one I always went to for comfort and love when my parents disciplined me. When a seventh-grader named Gayle broke my pre-adolescent heart, she was the only person who could console me. And when our mother died about 12 years ago, I drew strength and courage from Jean's powerful love and faith.

These days, however, Jean needs all the strength and courage she can muster for herself. Diagnosed with an unusual form of cancer, she is battling the disease with all her heart and soul. She's been through years of radiation chemotherapy and yet the cancer persists.

Now she's trying other kinds of chemotherapy, some of them extremely unpleasant, in hopes that something - anything - will prompt her oncologist to use the magic of living cells to fight the cancer. I was talking to her on the telephone, and I told her how proud I am - how proud all of us who know her are - of the brave battle she is waging against her illness.

"But I'm not fighting cancer," she said quietly. "What do you mean?"

I asked, "Has the doctor found something else?"

"No," she said. "It's just that I don't know how to fight cancer. I don't know how I got it, and I'm sure as heck don't know how to get rid of it. All I know how to do is go through each day, one day at a time. Sometimes one hour at a time."

And that's just what she's doing. Come to think of it, that's all any of us ever do.

Sure, there are times when our days and hours of living seem to fly by without any struggle or effort on our part. It's like an easy walk, slightly downhill, on a balmy spring morning.

But there are other times when life's trail leads uphill. Steep. And it's raining. And we're carrying an 80-pound pack. It's tough. Sometimes we wonder if we can make it.

That's when we have to remember what Kevin said, how nobody climbs a mountain all at once. No matter how rugged the trail or how steep the climb, we can get where we want to go only when we start putting one foot in front of the other.

Step by step by step by step by step.

Minister says 'yes'

Twin Falls man refuses to bow to tough South Park ministry

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Jim Mace wants to minister to the "down and out."

He wants to minister to alcoholics and drug addicts and gangs. Last year, he moved to a house in South Park and started a church.

Mace's fledgling flock was a year old May 29. He and his 10 parishioners celebrated with a little party.

For a year now, Mace has been pounding the ecclesiastical pavement, often to no avail.

"South Park is tough," said Mace, who was vice-president of Youth-for-Christ in his California high school. "But, since 1980, I've felt a definite decision to be in full-time ministry, and I feel South Park is where God has called me to work with the people."

Mace is 31 now, and his own personal Christian walk has been plagued with bumpy trails.

"I ran from the Lord for 10 years," said Mace, a divorced and remarried father of four. "I've got some experience in some of the same areas as the people I'm ministering to."

At Mace's church, Everlasting Covenant Ministries, everyone is accepted "even if they smoke or drink or do drugs," Mace believes that's the way it should be.

"I've been in church many years and haven't seen them reaching out to those who smell or who need milk for their babies, even if they didn't take care of their money well," said Mace, who moved to Twin Falls seven years ago. "I hope to reach the down and out."

Mace's interdenominational/Full Gospel/charismatic congregation began as an outreach ministry of Overcomer's Christian Fellowship, where Mace was attending church.

"The Lord told us to start a church in South Park, so I started with two people who wanted to support this ministry," Mace said.

Mace has had no formal training in the ministry, but he served a stint as associate pastor under Overcomer's pastor, the Rev. Fred Barton.

Everlasting Covenant Ministries is in the process of becoming affiliated with a group called Storehouse Ministries, which Mace described as an accredited Bible school in the Midwest.

But Mace's church will receive no funding from Storehouse.

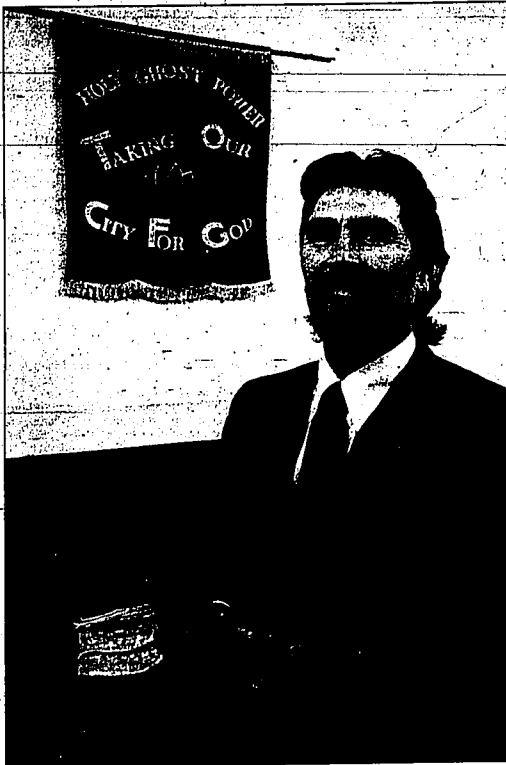

"I've been doing this for almost nothing for a year, but that's all right," said Mace, who owns A to J Repair & Finstrip. "It's neat to see people change."

Currently, Mace is working out of the former Heritage Alliance Church building on Blue Lakes, though his dream is to buy a piece of land and build his own church in South Park. He leads a Sunday praise and worship service and a Thursday evening home Bible study.

One day, Mace said, he hopes to organize a Sunday school for children. Farther down the road, he envisions founding a charismatic training center or Bible school in the Magic Valley. He also wants to write a book to help people apply scripture to everyday life.

Mace's wife, Angela, a homemaker with an Assembly of God background, has become enthusiastically involved in Mace's ministry.

"She always wanted to be a minister's

George Foreman fights for souls in Houston

By David Richards
The Washington Post

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. — George Foreman, the heavyweight champion of the world, is on the road promoting his autobiography, "By George," and here at CBN, the television network founded by evangelist Pat Robertson, they've constructed a special ring for him.

It's decked out with red, white and blue bunting and miniature American flags. In one corner there's even a golden spit pile emblazoned with his name.

Someone, it appears, has had a bright idea.

Instead of the usual, run-of-the-mill chat in a cozy living room set, CBN broadcaster and talk show host Ben Kinchlow will "take on" the boxer on his own turf. They'll sit on stools in the center of the ring. A Bell will be in the commercial breaks. Maybe the champ will even be coaxed into throwing a few shadow punches.

CBN, for its part, is in the business of providing Christian programming to 70 nations worldwide. All things considered, the half-hour special that the network will bill "George Foreman and Ben Kinchlow: The Main Event," is a match made in promotional heaven.

Suddenly, a door opens and the champ appears, all 256 pounds of him. The TV lights reflect off his gleaming pate as he lumbers into the hall, throws a leg over the ropes and bounces up and down on the canvas.

George Foreman in the Christian ring

The fans leap to their feet, roaring and clapping, eager for the interview to begin.

Foreman, you see, is not just a beloved sports figure with a book to flog. For more than a decade and a half, he has also been a practicing evangelist minister with his own 60-member congregation in Houston. As such, he is given to saying things like "I preach." And "I believe in an afterlife, but the important thing is to do good in this life."

"The first thing you notice is his size. At 46, Foreman is big, Paul Bunyan big, with paddles for hands, size 14 feet, arms like hammer hocks bursting at the seams of his powder-blue dress shirt, acres of forehead, and bulging over his belt, a generous belly.

The second thing is the serenity. The man who says his boxing motto is "never a shot in anger" makes no public utterance in anger, either. He laid down two rules for Joel Engel, the writer who collaborated with him on his autobiography: no referring to race and no profanity.

Turbulent as Foreman's life has been, when he looks back over it these days, he does so with near-Olympian detachment. The effect is startling, eerie even: Away from the sports arena, America's most popular practicing pugilist comes across as some kind of Christian Buddha.

"I've got total peace now," he admits. "I don't have any goals, except to be the same guy tomorrow that I am today. I had a big ego once, a huge chip on my shoulder, because I thought you were supposed to 'I didn't care who hated me. In fact, I was going to help people hate me. It got to the point where being the champ of the world wasn't enough. I intended to kill somebody. That way, I thought, they would really know who I was."

Now I'm more sensitive to the feelings of others than anybody on this planet. I mean, I put myself last on the totem pole. It's probably my main weakness. When I fought Axel Schulz in Las Vegas last month, he was bouncing around the ring, glaring at me. And I thought, "Son, I'm not gonna do that back to you." So I looked away. I didn't care if the audience thought I was scared. I'm not trying to get tougher and tougher. All I want to do is have some fun, earn some money and go about my business."

Earn some money he did — $10 million — while retaining his heavyweight title in a split decision against the German challenger 20 years his junior. It matters not that some sportswriters felt that Schulz was gypped. Or that Foreman looked worn and lanky by the night's end. A win is a win, and the king-size purse has allowed him finally to purchase (for $700,000) a converted Greyhound bus with full living quarters aboard. The big ambition — dwarfing all his youthful dreams of athletic glory — has always been to take to the open road and preach to the multitudes.

"A week or two before that fight, I realized that the only reason I was going to travel 20 years his junior, it matters not that some sportswriters felt that Schulz was gypped. Or that Foreman looked worn and lanky by the night's end. A win is a win, and the king-size purse has allowed him finally to purchase (for $700,000) a converted Greyhound bus with full living quarters aboard. The big ambition — dwarfing all his youthful dreams of athletic glory — has always been to take to the open road and preach to the multitudes."

"A week or two before that fight, I realized that the only reason I was going through with it was because I signed a contract," Foreman says. "It wasn't because I needed the win. I'm champ of the world, on top of the hill. So why should I chase him and knock him out? I've already knocked out people. It was, like, fulfilling an obligation. Well, that's a weird feeling to get into the ring with. So now I'm certainly at a crossroads. I will not fight beyond this year. If there's not a real attractive offer, I may not ever fight again."

The ministry is another matter, though. "To get up on a Sunday morning and find

United Methodists roll up sleeves for God

Editor's note: In response to a number of reader requests, we are using the space normally allotted to our "Clergy Column" for a new series of columns titled "What We Believe." Readers want to know the beliefs of the different religious faiths in the Magic Valley area. This week, in the first installment, we take a behind-the-scenes look at United Methodists. The series will continue weekly, in the Saturday religion section, for an indefinite period of time.

About a quarter before nine, while he was describing the change which God works in the heart through faith in Christ, I felt my heart strangely warmed. I felt I trusted in Christ alone... and an assurance was given me that he had taken away my sins, even mine and saved me from the law of sin and death.

With this entry into his personal journal, John Wesley, the 18th century founder of the Methodist societies, began a spiritual movement that would transform England

What We Believe
The Rev. Jim Frisbie

and spread to more than 60 million people throughout the world.

Wesley discovered a long-neglected emphasis on the grace of God that challenged the rigid and gave hope to the poor. He preached throughout England, forming people into small groups called "classes" and larger groups called "societies." He is credited with creating such a change in England during his lifetime that, by the end of the century, England was saved from the bloody revolution that ravaged neighboring France.

What was so remarkable about the approach of these "Methodists"? At the heart of who we are is a simple, biblical faith that brings God from the realm of "belief" into the gritty experience of daily life. Here is a quick look at the basics.

First, Wesley believed we all share a basic need for God's forgiveness. Yet we are all loved by God in spite of our tendency to sin. This acknowledgement of our universal need for salvation got Wesley into a great deal of trouble in his day.

Second, Wesley discovered that God's love for us is at work in each of our lives long before we accept or acknowledge that fact. Wesley called this "prevenient" grace.

Third, Wesley believed and taught that we can personally know the love and forgiveness of God as Wesley, himself, had felt it. Wesley called this "the assurance of our salvation."

Fourth, Wesley believed the power of the Holy Spirit works within us throughout our entire lives to bring us to a mature faith. This became known as "going on to perfection."

These four basic biblical truths led the Methodist Societies in America to grow rapidly. At the close of the Revolutionary War, they organized a religious body modeled on the democratic principles of the new nation. It was the first Christian denomination founded in the United States.

Throughout the church's 200-year history, United Methodists have been people who think for themselves. We have a long record of "getting into trouble" for taking strong stands on issues related to human need, human rights and political justice. In every community across the country, United Methodists are disproportionately active in community projects, local government and biblical faith, drawing on the four-fold sources of scripture, experience, reason and tradition that guide our belief and actions.

United Methodists are faithful Christians with their sleeves rolled up!

Church news

Calvary dedicates new wing

HAILEY — The Calvary Bible Church has completed its new Sunday School wing. A dedication service is planned for 10 a.m. Sunday, followed by lunch and fellowship. The first big event in the new wing will be Vacation Bible School, set for 9 a.m. to noon June 26-30, with Calvary Bible Blast (for teens) planned for 7 p.m. the same days. Calvary Bible Church, located one mile north of Hailey on Highway 75. For more information, call 788-9174 or 726-5124.

Eden church plans services

EDEN — The Trinity Lutheran Church has planned a contemporary service to help set the tone for its Pentecost celebration Sunday. The seventh Sunday after Easter is recognized as Pentecost. To celebrate, a special committee has developed a worship liturgy of singing, praying and hearing God's word. Todd Schwarz will lead the liturgy and play the guitar. Ellen Huettig will play the keyboard, and vocal backup will be provided by Fran Kohrt, Nancy Husting, Myron Huettig, Nancy Brun, Chande Brun, Calvin Jones, Larry Gold, Debbie Gold and the Rev. Ron Anderson. Sunday school children and the youth group will provide musical selections. Gina Lohnes will sign for the hearing impaired.

Sunday school and adult Bible class begins at 9:15 a.m., with worship hour following at 10:30 a.m. Andrews will speak on "I Send You Like Sheep," based in Matthew 10:16. At the end of worship, high school and college graduates will be recognized, and new church board of education members and Sunday school staff will be inducted.

Pentecost also will be celebrated on this week's Lutheran Hour message, which can be heard at 8:30 a.m. on KTFI 1270 AM and 12:30 p.m. on KBAR 1230 AM or 99.9 FM. Wallace Schulz's message, "God Pours Out

His Blessing," is based on Acts 2:14-21.

Pentecost is significant church event

On June 4, many will celebrate the single most significant event in church history. For more than 1,960 years, people have been receiving the same great spiritual experience that gave birth to the beginnings of the church. This experience, often referred to as the "Pentecost Experience," first took place on the Day of Pentecost, following the Passover season when Jesus had been crucified.

Pentecost, which in the Greek simply means "50th," was the second of three major feasts that the Jews always celebrated. Also called the Feast of Weeks, Feast of Harvest and Day of First Fruits, it always fell on the 50th day after the Feast of the Passover. It was at this time that the giving of the law to Moses on Mount Sinai took place. Today, it is celebrated seven Sundays after Easter.

On that great Day of Pentecost, as recorded in Acts 2:1-4, there were

Reader Comment
The Rev. N. Wayne Nigh

those (120) who obeyed the instructions that Jesus gave before his ascension. They were to wait at Jerusalem for "the promise of the Father which they should receive." Many times, Jesus had spoken concerning what was to happen this day.

He said, you will be "endued with power from on high." "I will not leave you comfortless; I will come to you." In Mark 16:17, Jesus said, "These signs shall follow them that believe; in my name . . . they shall speak with new tongues."

As the 120 received this baptism of the Holy Ghost, it was noted about Jerusalem and soon thousands were gathered to see what was going on. Some mocked, saying the people were all drunk. Peter stood and declared by the word of God that this was what God had promised to do, quoting the Prophet Joel (Joel 2:28-29). Peter preached to the crowd that had gathered. Many became convicted and asked Peter and the other apostles a most important question: "What shall we do?"

Peter declared, "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost" (Acts 2:38).

Many today are receiving the same personal experience as the first believers did as recorded in the Book of Acts.

The Rev. N. Wayne Nigh is the pastor at the Calvary Pentecostal Church, 450 Third Ave. W. in Twin Falls.

Hailey church backs decision

By Diana Drusell
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Although he's pleased with the planning and zoning commission's decision to amend the ordinance that would allow churches in the business district of Hailey with a conditional-use permit, the pastor of Hailey Valley Christian Fellowship says the issue isn't settled yet.

The commission's present decision was a "turn of the road for the community," the Rev. Don Kremer said, adding, "The issue struck at the hearts of a lot of people."

P&Z commissioners are advisers who make recommendations to the City Council. Then the council must vote on the conditional-use permits. Each application is dealt with on a case-by-case basis.

All four churches presently located on Main Street in Hailey are actively searching for permanent building sites for their worship services.

The cost of 2.5 acres of land needed for a church prohibits most churches from finding suitable land anywhere around Hailey to build churches.

Kremer's congregation has set aside two weeks at a time for praise and prayer services, with fasting on Mondays.

The idea is that leaving the premises where they are now would be harmful to new Christians and could sever them from the church, even though the stronger followers would regroup and manage to handle the change.

The members of Valley Christian Fellowship have thought of alternatives like setting up a tent, but they would be fighting against severe weather conditions. They have also thought about holding services in the high school gymnasium or at the rodeo grounds.

Foreman

the church is full, or to be preaching in an auditorium, and everybody's quiet and listening to you — there's nothing like it," he says, his face lighting up.

This is not your usual cauliflower-cared boxer talking. But then, Foreman's career has been unorthodox, to say the least. One of five children raised in poverty in Houston's rough and tumble Fifth Ward, he seemed destined for a life of petty crime until he signed up for President Johnson's Job Corps and discovered that his fists were good for something other than mugging people.

At 19, he earned a gold medal at the 1968 Olympics in Mexico, a triumph that was compromised, in the minds of some, when he waved a small American flag after the bout, instead of raising a clenched fist in the black power salute. No hero's welcome greeted his return home. Even after Foreman won the heavyweight championship against Joe Frazier early in 1973, he was celebrated more for his meanness than his skill.

His reign was brief. Muhammad

Ali stripped him of the title not quite 22 months later in the now-legendary "Rumble in the Jungle" in Zaire. To this day, Foreman thinks that he was doped with "medicinetasting water" while training for the fight. Whatever the cause, he took the loss badly. A brute beforehand, he turned into a self-confessed ogre afterward — "so nasty" he once boasted, "that my mother had to have an appointment to see me."

But it wasn't until 1977, after his losing fight against Jimmy Young in Puerto Rico, that Foreman really came apart. Raving deliriously in the locker room, he saw the blood of Christ on his hands and smelled the stench of Death itself, come to take him away to what he describes in his autobiography as "an enormous void . . . the bottom of the bottom."

Doctors later said he was suffering from acute dehydration. Foreman believes the visions were sent by God, who granted him a last-minute reprieve to mend his vicious ways. The man America loves, he claimed, was born that sweltering tropical night.

U.S. seeks European trade link

MADRID, Spain (AP) - The Clinton administration Friday unveiled a proposal for stronger trading links between the United States and Europe.

"It will make us an even more powerful engine of the global economy," Secretary of State Warren Christopher said. "The goal is a trans-Atlantic trade zone bridging the United States and Europe in a prosperous economic alliance of 770 million people and more than half the world's wealth. Trade restrictions would be eased with the hope of providing more jobs and investment opportunities on both sides of the ocean."

"The United States and Europe have shared a common destiny," he said. "But we must not take this relationship for granted. It cannot be sustained by inertia." At the same time, Christopher presented the proposal as part of the administration's campaign against an isolation promoted by some conservative political circles. "The United States and Europe must remain engaged in the world, on our own and as partners," he said. "Our nations have a unique capacity to provide global leadership. We must resist the siren songs of isolation and withdrawal." The proposal immediately raised questions of differing standards on surgical and pharmaceutical products. The United States traditionally has imposed high standards and prohibited entry of various European-made products. "The United States official said there would be a "harmonizing of standards" for consumer and environmental safety. "We want an adequate level of safety," he said, in a briefing for reporters under rules that shielded his identity.

Iraqi province reports riots against Saddam rule

The Washington Post

AMMAN, Jordan — Tribal unrest directed against the government of President Saddam Hussein has shaken the Iraqi province of Anbar for the last two weeks, leaving about 30 people dead, 100 wounded and many arrested, according to travelers coming from the area. The violence, which visitors returning here said broke out May 17, constituted an unusual open defiance of Saddam's authoritarian and often brutal government in Baghdad, particularly in a Sunni Muslim region just west of the capital that is known for its loyalty to the Iraqi leader and his Sunni-led Arab Baath Socialist Party. "According to the travelers, interviewed here, rioting broke out after delivery of the corpse of an Iraqi military pilot, Mohammed Mazloum Doulymi, a regional tribal leader's son who had been imprisoned for alleged participation in a coup plot. The body — with signs of torture and with its head shaved off — was brought by Iraqi officials to the family house in Ramadi, a town 40 miles west of Baghdad along the highway linking the Iraqi capital to the Jordanian border, the travelers said, quoting residents of Ramadi. The anger of the Doulymi family and other Ramadi residents quickly exploded into rioting, according to Arab diplomats and Iraqi travelers Iraqi businessmen reaching Amman this week said they saw tanks on the highway in the Ramadi area.

Russia's top general resigns; many expect presidential bid

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia's defense minister on Thursday accepted the resignation of a popular tough-talking general many expect to run for president in 1996. If he runs, Lt. Gen. Alexander Lebed, a no-nonsense nationalist with a fierce scowl and deep, rumbling voice, could appeal to the many Russians longing for a forceful leader to restore order to their troubled country.

ignation. His spokesman said the president has not even read Lebed's letter yet. Lebed's current standing with Yeltsin is fuzzy. The president sided with him last year in a spat with Defense Minister Pavel Grachev. But Lebed's relentless criticism of the bungled military campaign in Chechnya may have exhausted the president's patience. Lebed's bold attacks on incompetence and corruption among the army brass have won him wide popularity among ordinary soldiers, and his tart comments about both Grachev and Yeltsin have made him a media star.

The attempt to cut the 14th Army was widely seen as a bid to get rid of Lebed, who is far more popular in the ranks than Grachev himself. The defense minister couldn't resist a parting shot Thursday at the old army buddy who had turned against him. Lebed's resignation "is no big tragedy," Grachev told the ITAR-Tass news agency. Grachev gave Lebed his command in 1992 as a reward for coming to Yeltsin's defense with a parachute battalion during the abortive hard-line coup in the final days of the Soviet Union. General Lebed is an ordinary general who has served 23 years but has now decided to become some kind of politician," Grachev said while inspecting troops in southern Russia. Lebed recently joined the ruling body of the moderate nationalist Congress of Russian Communities. He has not said he will run for president, but political observers expect him to and his alliance with the party is seen as a step in that direction. The general returned from Moscow to his troops in Timsoel on Thursday and refused to discuss his plans. "I am returning to command my army," Lebed told journalists. He described his resignation as a last bid to draw attention to the danger of reducing the army. He said he fears its arsenal might fall into the wrong hands if the cuts are made.

"He has one feature that no one else has: People trust him," commentator Mikhail Leontyev wrote on the front page of Thursday's Segodnya newspaper. "No one among Russian politicians can openly compete with him... He might win." Lebed, 44, resigned rather than obey Grachev's orders to reduce sharply the 14th Army, which ended a 1992 war in the Trans-Dniester region of Moldova and made Lebed a national hero. Russia and Moldova agreed last year that the troops would be withdrawn over a three-year period. President Boris Yeltsin, whom Lebed has called a "minus" for Russia, still has to sign off on the res-

Salmon plan may take water from aquifer

By William Brock
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Efforts to add water to the Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer may collide head-on with Uncle Sam's need for Idaho water to help migrating salmon, the Idaho Water Resource Board learned earlier this week.

The board wants to buy water from the Upper Snake River water bank for aquifer recharge. But there's a good chance not all of the water it pays for will make it into the ground this year. If that happens, the board wants to reserve the unused water for delivery next year.

That's contrary to the water bank's "use it or lose it" policy, which doesn't allow customers keep water in the bank from one year to the next.

"Suddenly, the rules under which the bank operates get pretty shaky," Ron Carlson, Idaho Falls-based watermaster for Please see WATER/B3

Cool weather eases concerns of flooding

HAILEY — Cooler weather has allayed immediate flooding concerns for the Wood River Valley.

But fears of flooding have shifted to eastern Idaho — where the Henrys Fork of the Snake River is forecast to reach flood stage by Sunday.

"The Big Wood River is becoming less of a concern this weekend," said National Weather Service Hydrologist Brian Avery in Boise. On Friday afternoon, the river measured 5.1 feet at Hailey.

It was forecast to rise to only 5.2 feet by today "and then level out for a while," Avery said. The forecast for Sunday and Monday is 5.1 feet, "and, then it may drop below 5 feet on Tuesday."

Lower than normal temperatures are expected to prevail in southern Idaho next week, so the Big Wood is expected to stay between 4½ and 5 feet from Tuesday through Thursday, Avery said.

Flood stage on the Big Wood River is 6 feet, but a flood watch has been in effect since Tuesday.

Nighttime temperatures in the Big Wood drainage above 7,000 feet are forecast to stay below freezing, while daytime temperatures are expected to be in the upper 30s to low 40s, Avery said.

"It looks like cooler temperatures are going to save the day," he said. "Things will be OK if we can milk the snowmelt out in this fashion, rather than all at once."

Most of the other rivers in Idaho are expected to reach peak flows this weekend, Avery said.

TWIN FALLS — A full-fledged Shoshone Falls not only attracted a slew of visitors over Memorial Day Weekend — it also brought $11,196 into the city's coffers.

The city collected $3,344 Saturday as it charged $2 a vehicle to see the shrouding site. On Sunday, $3,990 was collected, and $3,862 was collected on Memorial Day.

But these three girls are sticking with their nags. They're launching a summer-long-horse-show circuit at Filer's Western National Open, which starts today and is expected to draw 40,000 spectators.

Show riding isn't dangerous, insist Mindy King, an Oakley High School junior, Twin Falls High School graduate Becky Sommer and Nevada sophomore Dominique Draper. Sure, things happen. But they don't take extreme risks. And they know their horses.

"I have enough trust in my horse and my ability to get along with my horse," King said. "And these riders love their horses, named Miner's Ebony, Hard Time Weed and Unmistiquable. They feed them Gatorade and sugar-coated ani-

Along with their trainer, Curt Fuller, and his other students, they have 16 Appaloosas to show during the week-long event. Then they'll head to other shows around the state and county. Even up to "Cannaday" Summers, they live on the road or in their trainer's backyard trailer.

King has been riding the longest, since she was 18 months old bouncing along in a back-hack as a 1925 mother rode. Sommer got her horse when she was 14.

Job market tightens in Boise, Panhandle; jobless rate rises

By Frank E. Lockwood
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate climbed slightly in May, as the job market tightened in Boise and the state's Panhandle.

In Twin Falls, Jerome and Gooding counties, unemployment remained constant at 4.4 percent. But in the Mini-Cassia region, 7.8 percent of the population was jobless. Blaine, Lincoln, and Camas counties all enjoyed unemployment rates below four percent.

Lon McDonald, a Twin Falls labor market analyst, says the local economy looks solid, noting that "4.4 percent is an excellent rate anywhere in the country."

"Construction's going good, service and retail are going very good, and those are large components of our labor force," he said. But with young people leaving school and entering the work force, those numbers could change as the number of job hunters rises.

Statewide, unemployment increased from 5.5 percent in April to 5.1 percent last month. Nationwide, unemployment stands at 5.7 percent.

Officials with the Idaho Department of Employment blamed wet weather for the increase in unemployment, noting that above average rainfall in early May lessened the need for irrigation and made work conditions more difficult for loggers.

"The inclement weather caused many job opportunities to be placed on hold until the weather improved later in the month," an IDE news release noted.

In May, the number of Gem State workers with jobs dropped from 575,400 to 575,300 — a loss of 2,000 jobs. But there were 606,000 work force also dropped, from nearly 606,000 to 604,200. Overall, unemployment claims climbed by just 300 — from 30,500 to 30,800.

While economic analysts warn that a national recession could be coming, Idaho's economy looks robust. For three straight months, the Idaho jobless figures have been lower than the national figures. Additionally, unemployment in Idaho hasn't climbed above 6 percent in six months.

And Idaho's unemployment rate for 1995 is less than 5.3 percent compared to the 1994 rate of 5.6 percent.

Idaho's regional unemployment percentages for May 1995, April 1995, and May 1994 are: Twin Falls area: 4.4; 4.4; 4.9; Panhandle: 7.1; 7.4; 7.4; Lewiston area: 4.4; 4.3; 6.6; Boise metropolitan area: 4.1; 4.1; 4.1; Pocatello area: 5.4; 5.6; 6.4; Idaho Falls area: 5.1; 5.1; 5.2.

Parade rolls at noon

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Bands, Hollywood stuntmen and more than 100 floats are expected to be marching through town today as part of the 13th annual Western Days parade.

The parade might not be rolling down Main Avenue this year, but roll it will, beginning at noon at the main entrance for the College of Southern Idaho. The parade's theme is "Memories of Yesterday; Visions of Tomorrow."

Parade entries are to arrive by 10 a.m. through the North College Road entrance to CSI to get their spots in line.

Judging begins at 11 a.m. At noon, floats will go counter-clockwise around the campus and out onto Falls Avenue, head east to Blue Lakes Boulevard and roll on down to downtown.

The four-mile trek continues on Shoshone Street to its end at Fifth Avenue, about a block short of the railroad tracks. Sgt. Ed Dodge with the Idaho National Guard advises Boise to keep on rolling past Fifth Avenue, if they can, to relieve congestion at the parade's end. Running concurrent with the parade are a bicycle race, from 11 a.m. to noon, and a High Noon shootout at the corner of Shoshone and Main. Today's weather forecast calls for a slight chance of showers and temperatures in the 70s.

Dreher: Water interests ready for solutions

By Alice Sherman Hansen
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The new Idaho Department of Water Resources director has high regards for the historic "first in time" concept of water law.

The admission is welcome news to some Magic Valley irrigators who have been arguing groundwater pumps with later water rights have affected their senior rights.

But Karl Dreher, like his predecessor R. Keith Higginson, is not ready to admit groundwater supplies in the Snake River Plain are overallocated. Some pumpers may be abusing the water rights and causing problems for downstream irrigators, but the resource is troubled more by a string of drought years than too much demand, he said.

Dreher, 46, was in Twin Falls this week attending the Idaho Water Resources Board workshop and meeting. A former state employee from Colorado, Dreher was "tapped by Gov. Phil Batt to replace the retiring Higginson, who stepped down on May 15.

Senior water rights holders say that Snake Plain Aquifer levels have dropped since the 1950s as groundwater pumping became more common. Studies support the idea that aquifer levels have gradually declined.

In the arid West where demand for water is high, "there's always going to be times and places where it appears the resource is overappropriated," Dreher said. It is wrong to project water availability based on what happens in the middle of a drought, he said. If irrigators can fill water rights when precipitation levels are average or better, it can be reasoned that water is not over-appropriated, he added.

But if too much water has been promised to too many people, Dreher said the "first in time" law is designed to sort out those situations. As for "conjunctive" management of surface and groundwater in the Snake River Plain Aquifer, the plan needs fine tuning to fit with the prior appropriations doctrine, Dreher said.

The department could design those regulations, but Dreher wants water users to draft them instead.

"If it comes from a level of consensus from the water users then it will meet with support in the Legislature," Dreher said. His skills as a facilitator — someone who can bring opposing sides together to seek solutions to differences — is the reason Dreher said he accepted a job that promises its share of pressure and conflict. No matter what the water director does, chances are somebody will be unhappy.

"I see the water users who have been fighting amongst each other wanting to resolve it," he said. "What needs to happen is Please see DREHER/B3

New Jersey company files suit against Coeur d'Alene lottery

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A New Jersey company has filed a lawsuit seeking more than $200 million in damages from the Coeur d'Alene Indian Tribe, claiming that the tribe's planned national lottery was developed with protected trade secrets.

Tribal leaders called it a "nuisance" and said it won't stop the national Indian lottery, expected to start later this year.

"It's a frivolous lawsuit without any merit," said Dave Matheson, general manager for the Indian lottery.

The lawsuit was filed for Samuel Valenza, owner of Native American Services, Inc., Moorestown, N.J.

Valenza said he learned of the lottery concept with the Coeur d'Alenes in 1991, but tribal leaders later dumped his company and hired a Denver-based business to manage the lottery.

Valenza said he spent hundreds of thousands of dollars developing the plan.

Tribal attorney Ray Givens, Coeur d'Alene, said a 1993 contract between Native American Services and the tribe was not binding because it was not approved by the National Indian Gaming Commission.

The contract was signed two years ago by tribal leaders and Valenza. It stipulated that NASI would be paid 40 percent of gaming profits, or up to $367.5 million over seven years, to manage the lottery.

Valenza said he expects the Coeur d'Alene lottery eventually will gross up to $700 million per year.

The claim alleged the Coeur d'Alenes used "valuable, original and confidential trade secrets" from the New Jersey company to develop the game.

But Matheson said "there was nothing innovative about Valenza's proposal."

"I don't think he brought any new technology or ideas to the concept," Matheson said. NASI was let go, he said, because the company had trouble getting money for start-up costs.

The National Indian Gaming Commission in January approved a gaming contract between the tribe and Unistar Entertainment, Inc., Denver.

The Coeur d'Alenes plan to start selling tickets in 36 states and the District of Columbia by the end of the year, using a telephone hookup and credit card sales.

Legal officers of several states where the lottery is planned have challenged the concept.

Symposium

calls on states, private sector to save trout

BOISE (AP) — The bull trout stands the best chance of surviving if northwestern states, government agencies and the private sector act to work quickly without the Endangered Species Act's paralysis, a symposium has concluded.

Michael Spear, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service regional director, on Thursday announced he recommended the bull trout receive an endangered species listing for the coming year.

Participants at former Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus' "Solving the Bull Trout Puzzle" gathering at Boise State University on Friday agreed that gave them a year to take action on the ground to protect the clear streams the fish need to survive.

"I think this will be the forerunner of the way we handle the Endangered Species Act," Idaho Gov. Phil Batt said. "We want to take some responsibilities away from the federal government."

"The decision process has eroded away from those most closely associated with the land," he said. "It's a good thing. It affords too much of a 'one size fits all' mentality."

Spear said the bull trout — actually a char with spots — still warranted a listing, but many other species needed more immediate attention. He lowered the fish's priority from a high "3" to a "4," saying the public's newfound attention indicates a recovery is possible.

Andrus recalled that when he was interior secretary, he learned allowing the federal government to oversee species recovery tended to freeze any action.

"It almost becomes an impossibility in a timely fashion to come up with a plan," he said.

County eyes firing workers who run for political office

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Bonneville County is contemplating becoming the first in Idaho to clearly prohibit county employees from running for the elective office under which they work.

But the three county commissioners are asking a dim possibility and the private-sector president of the county's employee association fears could deny voters good candidates.

"I don't like to limit anybody," Commissioner Bill Shurtleff said.

Fellow Commissioners Roger Christensen and Cliff Long agreed they could think of no situation in which they would fire an employee for running against them.

"I just don't think it's good policy," Long said.

A decision on whether to adopt the proposal will be made June 14 by all elected county officials meeting as the county's executive committee.

The county has long has a policy that employees could be fired for "inappropriate political activity" but that was never really defined.

So Sheriff Byron Stommel proposed changing the policy manual to specify that employees can be suspended without pay or terminated when they become a candidate for the office of an elected official under whose authority they are employed.

Stommel said it was an attempt to assure politics is removed from his office's day-to-day operations.

His lieutenant, Morgan Hendricks, said that since all deputies now work at the pleasure of the sheriff and can be fired for any reason, the proposed policy only formalizes what the practice is.

And Stommel stressed that he knows of no one in his department who is contemplating challenging him in the next election.

Dan Chadwick, executive director of the Idaho Association of Counties, could not name any other Idaho counties with similar policies.

And while he said the association has no formal stand on the issue, "The only thing I would say about it is that you need to be cautious concerning the exercise of political rights by employees."

Committee reviews pond plans

By Jennifer Bunch
Times-News writer

RUPERT - Plans for an animal pound in Minidoka County, an issue running nearly two years in city and county politics, are up for review Monday.

The Animal Control Facility Committee will meet at 7 p.m. Monday at Rupert City Hall to review shelter plans drawn up by a contractor. The cities of Rupert, Heyburn, Paul, Minidoka and Acoquia and the county must decide how to use the plans.

The county has been without an animal shelter since September 1993 after the part-time pound, located at the Minidoka County landfill, was shut down when the landfill was closed. The pound didn't measure up to state standards.

Since then the county has been sending stray animals to the Burley pound at $5 per animal.

But what started out as a temporary arrangement has turned into a two-year situation.

"We've stressed them a quite a bit a time or two," said Heyburn dog catcher Gary Draper about the Burley pound.

Draper estimates that the Minidoka County pound housed an average of 1,200 animals a year. With an increasing human population, the animal population rises and the number of stray and vicious animals on the loose most likely will increase, he said.

The controversies over cost, necessity and location for a new pound have made it a long task for planners. Paul City Councilman Darrell Runyon, a committee member, said it is time to get things moving.

"We've been fighting this thing for a long time, and everybody's getting tired of it. We need to get something done and get it out of our hair," Runyon said.

In February Minidoka County agreed to pay 52 percent of construction costs and $150 a month to keep the pound running. Commissioner John Rensberg had questioned the need for a pound when animals were being sent to Burley. Other plans had the cost in the $75,000 range, which the county would not agree to.

careful with who gets the water.

"The board is very sensitive to the possibility of farmers using water paid for by the state," Parr told Wayment.

Later, Wayment told The Times-News that "we ought to be doing everything we can to manage this aquifer."

"There's a lot of different ways to do it," he said. "We feel we were dealt-out for no good reason."

system," added Grant Wyatt, another county commissioner.

The rate at which water tables have fallen varies from one area to the next, but it has been a major problem for pumpers in the Southwest Irrigation District.

Water Board Chairman Clarence Pate says he didn't disagree with Wayment and Wyatt - but he said the aquifer recharge program is under scrutiny, so the board must be

Show organizer Lovie Van Dieën of Murtaugh said all contestants have to sign release forms in case of injury. And the show carries an ace in the hole - a $1 million insurance policy.

For these three equestrians, show in the Snake River Basin Adjudication.

The mammoth lawsuit has moved a glacial speed since conflicts between the Judicial branch and Idaho Legislature raised questions about the separation of powers.

Water Resources has been blamed for not taking enough action in the years. The declines have fueled disputes between water users and, last summer, the Rupert-based A&B Irrigation District made a formal "call" for water.

A&B said its 1948 groundwater right wasn't being filled - and maintained that other, more recently arrived, groundwater pumpers were to blame.

To quell that, and other squabbles over groundwater, the 1995 Idaho Legislature authorized the Water Board to "spend about $955,000 on aquifer recharge."

There's a catch because the money must be spent by June 30. If the money hasn't been spent by the next Legislative session, its status could be re-examined, said Jeff Youtz, of the Legislative Budget Office.

"There's a difference between money that's been encumbered and actually spent," Youtz told the Water Board. "If there's not a way it can be spent on recharge, it should be returned."

"The Legislature appropriated a process.

Draper hopes his appointment will offer an opportunity for the adjudication players to move beyond finger-pointing to solve problems.

"Here is an opportunity for a new start on all sides," he said. "Not all the issues can be settled, but some of them can be."

million bucks for recharge and that's what should be done," Youtz said.

The board wants to commit $881,171 for up to 295,312 acre-feet of water; one acre-foot is enough to cover an acre with one foot of water, or 325,850 gallons. Another $73,828 has been pledged for about a dozen canal companies and irrigation districts to deliver the water to aquifer recharge sites.

Aquifer recharge sites are simply areas where stinging water swiftly soaks into the ground.

But canal companies and irrigation districts typically can't deliver water for aquifer recharge when the farming season is in full swing. When that happens, the aquifer recharge program takes a back seat to delivery of irrigation water.

Aquifer recharge can resume in the fall, when irrigation deliveries taper off. Trouble is, that's when the overall tempo of water delivery begins to wane - and there might not be enough time to deliver all the water earmarked for aquifer recharge.

Pilot Richard Gilbert was forced to land a single-engine Arrow Avid Amphibian airplane in the Snake River near the Burley Municipal Golf Course after having engine problems following takeoff Friday morning. The plane never rose more than 100 feet and had to duck under power lines while in flight.

BURLEY - After buzzing over semi trucks and under power lines, a small experimental amphibian airplane made an emergency landing in the Snake River.

Engine problems forced down the Arrow Avid Amphibian flown by Richard Gilbert of Renton, Wash., shortly after taking off from the Burley Municipal Airport Friday morning.

"The airplane never got more than 100 feet off the ground," Gilbert said, leaving him dodging semi trucks on the interstate, he chuckled.

"I kept thinking we're going to get some altitude, but we never did," Gilbert said after landing the plane in the Snake River and maneuvering it up a boat launch near the Burley

Municipal Golf Course. Gilbert had to do some low-level maneuvering to land the plane, flying under power lines and between light poles on the Burley-Heyburn bridge.

"That bridge was starting to look awfully high," he said.

Gilbert said he had plenty of flying space and never came close to crashing, but couldn't get any lift from the 100-horsepower engine. The Cassia County Sheriff's Department responded to the report of a downed plane in the Snake River at 9:30 a.m. Deputies stood by while Gilbert tried to power the plane up while floating on the river.

Gilbert flew into Burley Thursday night on route to northern Washington.

Airplane owner Dave Perdue was forced to take a bus from east of the Rocky Mountains to Burley because the plane could not handle the additional weight at extreme altitudes.

Their journey began on Sunday in Wichita, Kan., said Perdue, where he bought the B&S-built plane.

High altitude could have played a part in the plane's inability to take off, Perdue said.

The plane flew fine into Burley, Gilbert said.

With a range of 400 miles and maximum speed of 80 mph, Perdue said the 25-foot, single-engine rear-prop plane is good for fishing trips to isolated waters. He plans to take a fishing expedition to Alaska next summer in the plane.

Perdue said he will tow the plane on a trailer to Boise and try to fix it there.

The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, which is a big customer of the Snake River water bank, says the board shouldn't be allowed to pay for aquifer recharge water in one year and take delivery the next.

"You have put yourselves on a first priority basis and the bureau, at least, at number two," the bureau's Deputy Regional Director Kevin Pedde, told Water Board members Thursday.

"We do not want to be an impediment (to aquifer recharge), but we do want to be on an equal footing" when dealing with the Snake River water bank, Pedde said.

Carlson said he doesn't think there is any competition between the recharge program and the bureau's quest to find water for salmon migration.

Aquifer recharge is a priority in southern Idaho because water tables in some areas have fallen in recent

Range conditions right for wildfires this year

McCALL (AP) — Weather has always dictated Idaho's fire season, and 1995 will be no different.

But conditions that are causing concern in the high country are raising them in the lower elevations.

Last winter's normal conditions mean the state may avoid the kind of colossal forest fires that vaporized hundreds of thousands of acres in the central mountains a year ago.

But on the range, verdant green cheatgrass is up to a firefighter's belt buckle and starting to cure. Dry lightning that vaporizes could ignite tens of thousands of acres under control of the U.S. Bureau of Land Management this summer.

"My crystal ball tells me we probably won't have a severe forest fire season, but the lower elevations are a coin toss," said Bob Clark, Idaho's BLM fire management officer. "If we have lots of lightning, we'll have lots of fires."

Clark said, and it could take two or three years of average winters to reach that mark.

"We still have a lot of snow in the higher mountains," he said. "What that is going to do is delay fire season in the mountains, probably until August. So what you've done is shortened the time the forest will be susceptible to wildfire."

The snowpack is still above average on the Payette National Forest, where 270,000 acres burned last year. But in other parts of the state, that snow has only begun to offset the effects of a decade of drought.

"I think it might surprise folks that we could have some of the larger prosect fires," Payette fire staff officer Gene Benedict said. "With average precipitation and average lightning, August and early September could be interesting."

Clark said, and it could take two or three years of average winters to reach that mark.

The snowpack is still above average on the Payette National Forest, where 270,000 acres burned last year. But in other parts of the state, that snow has only begun to offset the effects of a decade of drought.

And while southern Idaho had good winter precipitation, the normally wetter forests north of the Salmon River got only about 75 percent of their average snowpack so the stage could be set for extensive wildfires there.

The wet spring also caused a rich growth of grass on the range, and if a parade of thunderstorms this summer replaces the lack of lightning activity of last year, the potential is there for a fiery summer across southern Idaho and northern Nevada.

"We have cheatgrass where I didn't know cheatgrass would grow," Clark said. "If you drive east along the Snake River, the grass is starting to turn purple on south-facing slopes, which means it's drying out."

Facing charges

Cindy Bosserman, wife of Stephen Bosserman, a Florida escapee who shot and killed Idaho State Police trooper and then took his own life, appears in a Fremont County courtroom in Ashton Tuesday on a charge of felony eluding. A preliminary hearing is set for Friday.

Crash kills Post Falls runner

POST FALLS (AP) — A two-vehicle collision killed a standout runner from Post Falls High School and sent four other teenagers to the hospital, the Idaho State Police said.

Christina Rose Finney, 18, died in the accident at a street intersection when her pickup truck and a station wagon collided Thursday afternoon, the state police said.

The driver, Mrs. the station wagon, Danielle Muncey, 16, and her three passengers were taken to Kootenai Medical Center for treatment.

Finney, a senior due to graduate next week, was well known in Post Falls.

Finney won the A-1 Region I cross-country race last fall, the first Post Falls girl to win in the program's 14-year history, and she was voted top female runner on the all-North Idaho cross-country team.

Last year, she was chosen Post Falls Junior Miss. She passed on her crown May 20 at the Lilac Festival Armed Forces Torchlight Parade in Spokane.

Nuclear energy company will reopen uranium mill in Utah

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — Energy Fuels Nuclear Corp., Denver plans to reopen its uranium mill this fall in Utah's poorest county.

"It's by no means a return to the uranium frenzy days of the 1950 and early '60s, or late '70s, when prospectors were camped all over the Colorado Plateau scouring its slick rock for the yellow tell-tale traces of carnotite during the Cold War."

But the mill's reopening is still good news for Blending. The mill will employ 92 workers at wages of $12-13 an hour.

"The mill is vital to our community. We're delighted," said City Manager Norman Johnson. "Ninety jobs go a long way in a little town of 3,500."

Ex-teacher sentenced to month in jail

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — A former Cedar Ridge Middle School teacher sentenced to 30 days in jail for her sexual encounters with a 17-year-old high school student says she takes full responsibility.

"Many people who know of this situation have tried to put the blame on the victim, saying that he knew what he was doing, (that) he seduced me at a vulnerable time in my life," Lana Winn said in a written statement presented to 1st District Judge Gordon J. Low at her sentencing Thursday.

"Some have said that I was indeed the victim."

But, Winn wrote, "I did it of my own choice ... I put full blame on myself, for I could have and should have not allowed this to happen."

And, she wrote, "I can honestly say it was not worth it."

Winn, 27, who now lives in Salt Lake City, could have faced 30 years in prison and a $37,000 fine after pleading guilty in April to two charges of forcible sexual abuse, both second-degree felonies.

But Thursday, after meeting in chambers with her attorney and the prosecutor for more than an hour, Low granted her probation and ordered her to serve 30 days in jail. The sentence will be reviewed in September to determine whether more jail time is appropriate.

With uranium supplies dwindling, Swiss utilities who need uranium for their power plants have lent the company $16 million to resume production.

Harold Roberts, president of Energy Fuels, said the mill has maintained a skeleton staff since shutting down production in 1991. Most of those hired to reopen production will be former employees, he added, and many will be rehired in the next couple of weeks.

Robert said the mill will process ore stockpiled there from mines in Colorado and Arizona. He said uranium prices are still depressed but have risen from $9.30 to $11.80 per pound of U3O8. It had dropped as low as $6.

Roberts said if the demand for uranium continues to increase it's possible one or more mines could reopen in Colorado or Arizona. For the time being, the mill is scheduled to operate for five months.

The mill had been scheduled to reopen in April but got tangled up in the bankruptcy of Denver businessman Oren Benton.

San Juan County, which includes territory of the White Mesa reservation of the Ute Mountain Ute tribe and a portion of the Navajo reservation, has the lowest per capita income in Utah in 1993.

Mill salaries would work out to $25,000, compared with the 1993 per capita income of $10,900, according to the Utah department of planning and budget.

Bliss girl sets new state discus record-at meet

BOISE — Bliss senior Carma Wilkins set a new record in the Class A-4 girls' discus competition at last week's state track meet. Wilkins' toss of 119 feet, 8 inches was inadvertently omitted from the results printed in The Times-News Sunday. Shelley Warr of Hagerman finished third in the discus, with a throw of 105-10.

On the boys' side, Hansen senior Ryan Gunnell's second consecutive state championship in the shot put established a new state Class A-4 mark at 47 feet, 1 1/4 inches.

BSU back Adams is declared academically ineligible for '95

BOISE — Running back K.C. Adams, a first-team Big Sky Conference tailback last season, has been declared academically ineligible for the 1995 season. Head coach Peley Allen made the announcement Friday afternoon. Allen also wouldn't let Adams take part in spring practices, saying he wanted Adams to concentrate on his studies.

Twin Falls golfer Schwarz records 1st hole-in-one

TWIN FALLS — Doug Schwarz of Twin Falls scored his first career hole-in-one Thursday night at the Canyon Springs Golf Course.

Schwarz used a 9-iron to ace the 160-yard, par three 15th hole. Fellow golfers in the two-man best ball tournament, Chuck Koepflin, Troy Nelson and Rick Calvert, witnessed the feat. The shot knocked off an eventful several hours for Schwarz, as his wife, Kay, gave birth to a healthy baby girl (six pounds, five ounces) early Friday.

No Magic in Indy

Pacers swamp Orlando in the Hoosier State, 123-96

The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — No clutch comeback this time for the Indiana Pacers. None was needed. Reggie Miller's 28 first-half points overwhelmed the bewildered Orlando Magic early and they never recovered as the Pacers forced Game 7 in the Eastern Conference finals with a 123-96 victory Friday night.

Miller finished with 36 points in 35 minutes and Rik Smits had 22 points and 10 rebounds in a game that was over by the third quarter. The Pacers led by 25 at halftime and by 35 late in the third period as the Magic's losing streak at Market Square Arena stretched to nine games.

"I wanted to be more aggressive, not necessarily by taking shots, but getting it in my hands and try to create something," Miller said.

The blame for the latest loss couldn't be pinned on Shaquille O'Neal, whose foul trouble contributed to Orlando's two previous defeats. He had 26 points and stayed in the game until his presence didn't matter anymore.

The Magic's problem was cold outside shooting and a lack of rebounding. After shooting above 50 percent in each of the first five games of the series, Orlando hit 46 percent of its field goals. Even more damaging was the Pacers 54-32 rebounding edge. The Magic will be Sunday night in Orlando with the winner advancing to the NBA Finals against the Houston Rockets.

"We were down 3-2 and if we lose, they're going on to the finals; but we wanted to make a statement to them, let them know we wanted to take it back to Disney World and let it go to seven games," Miller said.

Playing the Magic's up-tempo style, the Pacers sprinted to a 27-point lead in the first half. The closest the Magic got in the second half was 18 points following a flurry of 3-pointers. The Magic had 12 3s in the game, but not enough of their other shots fell.

After Orlando closed to 100-82 with 7:25 to play, the Pacers produced a 16-5 spurt. By then, though, the Magic had long since given up.

Miller hit 13 of 19 shots and Smits was 9-of-14 as the Pacers shot 56 percent, their best performance of the playoffs.

The Pacers have staged magnificent comebacks throughout the playoffs: Miller's eight points in the last 16 seconds of the conference semifinals' Game 1 against New York, Smits' buzzer-beater in Game 4 of this series and Game 5's rally that fell just short.

"This time, the Pacers decided not to wait until the final minute."

Miller time came early. Right after the tipoff, in fact. In the first quarter, Miller hit seven of eight shots, including three 3-pointers. Fouled on another 3-point attempt, he made all three fouls shots for a 31-18 lead and finished the period with 20 points, the same total the Magic managed as Indiana led 31-20.

When Miller went to the bench at the start of the second quarter, Indiana had its second unit plus Spriggs on the floor. There was no dropoff, and the Pacers put together a 15-6 run and built a 46-26 lead by dominating the boards.

The Magic looked more and more disorganized and fell further and further behind, Miller's back-to-back 3-pointers at the end of the half made it 65-38.

After the second one, his fifth of the game, he trotted back down the court, shaking his head in wonder.

Even he couldn't believe it. When the game ended, Orlando's Anfernee Hardaway called his teammates together in a huddle on the court and had them all look up at the scoreboard.

All-stars start weekend series

By Larry Hovey Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho's all-stars were clinging to a 6-5 lead in the bottom of the fifth inning in the opener of their three-game series with Utah Friday night.

The teams will wind up the series today with a doubleheader starting at 11 a.m. at Frontier Field.

Idaho's bats earned a 6-2 lead in the first four innings but some faulty defense and a mental error let Utah score three times in the top of the fifth.

Idaho took the lead early when Scott Wickham, Centennial, drew a walk and rode in on a double by Boise's Ben Florence. Florence scored on an error.

An inning later, Ryan Novak, Post Falls, lived on a dropped fly and moved around ahead of Hillcrest's Nate Garn, who tripled. Wickham's sacrifice fly plated Garn for a 4-0 lead.

But Utah broke the shutout bid in the third inning when Shawn Peterson drew a walk and Jeff Duffy singled. Zach Hinkley plated one run with a hit and an infield error let Duffy carry a second run across.

Idaho re-established the four-run lead when Jordan Waddell, Capital, was hit by a pitch and Centennial's Eric Booth and Novak followed with doubles.

The miscues hit in the fifth inning after pitcher Joey Cleaves, Pocatello, had fanned the first batter, Zach Sorenson lived on an error and Zach Hinkley drew a walk. Designated hitter Brian Smalling singled to load the bases.

An infield error provided the first run and Travis Searle singled in the second.

With the bases still loaded, Cleaves forgot the out-count. He had a tailor-made 1-2-3 comeback-off the bat of Curtis Jacobson but simply turned and threw to first base. He was trotting off the field when he learned that was only the second out. He then retired the side with a strikeout.

002 03-553 229 0-13
Utah: Hahn, Jappson (3) and Rice, Huff (15).
Idaho: Cleaves (4) and Florence.

In Paris, women set up big tennis showdowns

Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel

PARIS — They're lined up, the four of them, as tightly packed as taxicabs on the Champs Elysees.

Arantxa Sanchez Vicario, Steffi Graf, Mary Pierce and Conchita Martinez are easily dusting off everything in their way this first week at the French Open.

Soon enough they'll be in one another's way — Thursday, if everything continues on form. They are on course to meet in the semifinals with No. 1 Graf facing No. 4 Martinez in the bottom of the draw and No. 1 Sanchez Vicario and No. 3 Pierce in the top half.

Friday, with the "warming weather forcing the fans to pull off sweaters and jackets, Graf played her best tennis of the week in racing through Nathalie Baussene of France 6-2, 6-1 to reach the round of 16.

Martinez dropped veteran Julie Halard of France 6-1, 6-2 in shockingly short order, solidifying her position as the favorite among the four. She has won 26 consecutive matches on clay dating to 1994.

But Graf's long-dormant game — she hadn't played since April 16 — is coming back together quickly.

"I was more patient today," she said. "I was waiting a little more for the right shot and, altogether, I put a little bit more variety into my game. I played more consistent, a lot more consistent."

She'll need that against Martinez, who combines backcourt accuracy with a variety of spins and slices that test her opponent's patience.

Today, Sanchez-Vicario will play Beate Reinastadler and Pierce will face Florencia Labat for places in the round of 16.

Two other seeded women won Friday. No. 8 Gabriela Sabatini defeated Irina Spirita of Romania 6-

Andre Agassi won 6-1, 6-2, 6-0

3, 6-4 and No. 11 Anke Huber also defeated Sabine Appelmans of Belgium 6-0, 6-3.

Two more seeds exited the men's tournament. Eighth-seeded Wayne Ferreira of South Africa lost to Alex Corretja of Spain 6-4, 7-5, 6-2, and No. 11 Alberto Costa, who lost in the final last year, was defeated in a tense five-setter by Andrei Medvedev 3-6, 6-3, 4-6, 7-5, 6-3.

Meanwhile, top-seeded Andre Agassi reached the round of 16 by crushing Francisco Cluset of Spain 6-1, 6-2, 6-0. No. 5 Thomas Muster cruised over Carlos Costa of Spain 6-3, 7-5, 6-2. No. 9 Yevgeny Kafelnikov whipped David Wheaton 6-2, 6-1, 4-6, 6-3 and No. 13 Jim Courier handled Christian Rud of Norway 6-4, 6-3, 6-6.

What the French Open has lacked in showdoffs it is making up for with suspense.

As with the women, the men's side will have to wait until next week for its big matches as pre-tournament favorite Muster on a 31-match clay winning streak, heads toward first Courier in the quarterfinals, then Agassi in the semifinals.

BOSTON — John Valentin hit three homers and started the winning rally in the 10th inning with a double as the Boston Red Sox salvaged Roger Clemens' shaky debut with a 6-5 win Friday night over the Seattle Mariners.

American League

Mariners

Valentin led off the 10th with a shot inside the left-field line, giving him 15 total bases. The American League record of 16 in a game was set by Boston's Fred Lynn in 1975.

Mo Vaughn was walked intentionally. Steve Rodriguez tried a sacrifice bunt but catcher Chad Kreuter threw Valentin out at third. Mike Greenwell then singled into the left-field corner, driving Vaughn home with the winning run.

Stan Belinda (4-0) was the winner. Solomon Torres (0-1) took the loss. Please see AL/B6

Roger Clemens returns to Boston, striking out Seattle's Jory Coza Friday.

The Associated Press

MIAMI — One-batter Jaime Navarro allowed three hits in 6 1/3 innings for his fifth victory Friday night, leading the Chicago Cubs past the Florida Marlins 5-1.

National League

Navarro, the first Cubs starter with a 5-0 record since Steve Stone in 1975, gave up one run, walked one and struck out four. He departed following a rain delay of 52 minutes in the bottom of the seventh inning. Mike Perez pitched 2 2/3 scoreless innings to complete the four-hitter for his second save.

Chicago's Mark Grace hit his seventh homer in the eighth inning, extending his hitting streak to 14 games. Sammy Sosa's two-run triple broke a 1-1 tie in the sixth against John Burkett (3-5).

Manager Lamont is casualty of ChiSox slow start NL

Chicago Tribune

CHICAGO — Citing the lackluster play of the team 31 games into the season, the White Sox Friday fired manager Gene Lamont and replaced him with third base coach Terry Bevington.

Lamont, who earned American League Manager of the Year honors in '93 and had the Sox in first place the last two seasons, compiled a winning percentage of .551 in three years here, the best record in club history of any manager with three or more years here.

Lamont said he was surprised and hurt by General Manager Ron Schuler's move, which came with the Sox in fourth place with an 11-20 record, 11 games behind Cleveland in the American League Central.

"I thought I should have had longer," Lamont said in a telephone interview. "We've had two real good years, so I'm surprised that 30 games into the season it happened. Ron did what he thought he had to do. I'm not going to argue with that. I'm happy I got to be a manager."

Schuler claimed he had to pull the trigger now before it's too late.

"I don't think we were playing up to our capabilities," Schuler said. "I'm not blaming it all on Gene. A lot of the blame lies over there in the clubhouse with the players. I just thought that I had a lot more players than I normally would. I thought the series with Cleveland would give us an opportunity to get back in it. It didn't happen."

Schuler believed the team was lacking fire, particularly during the four losses in Cleveland this week.

"I gave them the benefit of the doubt," Schuler said. "But if the team can't get up for a series like the Cleveland series, obviously I thought I'd have to do something to change the atmosphere."

Lamont and several players, including Thomas, disputed Schuler's assertion that the team wasn't "up" to play the Indians.

"I don't share that opinion," Lamont said. "I don't think you can tell that from TV. We were ahead 6-0 (on Monday) and the other games were real good games. But there's no reason to argue."

Sacked along with Lamont were pitching coach Jackie Brown and bullpen coach

Rick Peterson. They will be replaced with Nashville pitching coach Don Cooper and bullpen catcher Royce Armas.

Bevington, 38, has spent the last seven seasons as Sox third base coach. He had been a candidate for other managerial openings but never got the call.

"This is something I've wanted to do for a long time," Bevington said. "Not under these circumstances, of course. Gene gave me 100 percent of his backing and he understands completely."

Whether Bevington will last beyond 1995 remains to be seen, whether smaller as he was "my manager today." Sox Chairman Jerry Reinsdorf would love to get former Sox coach Jim Leyland back. The Pittsburgh manager expressed dissatisfaction during spring training with the way the financially conservative Pirates organization was headed.

Bevington says he doesn't mind the uncertainty of his position.

"If I do good, I'll have the job," he said. "If I don't do good, I won't have the job. That's the way it is... Every job is interim. That's the way I look at it, whether it's for one week, one month or 10 years."

The first thing Bevington must do is shake the club from the malaise that has settled over the locker room. Frank Thomas, a Lamont backer, addressed the press before Friday night's game against Detroit.

"We have our own style," he said. "But there's a lot of going about things that was slipping a little bit in the clubhouse. A lot of complacency. Guys were getting accustomed to losing. It was like, 'Hey, let's go out and get 'em again tomorrow' without coming in and making that change."

Rumors of Lamont's dismissal had been heard for a while, and the firing was greeted with differing reactions by the players.

"It's not really a shock," Thomas said. "This team has been a bunch of under-achievers all year long."

"Obviously, we're very shocked," countered pitcher Alex Fernandez. "We heard rumors about it. It's really unfair to the manager and pitching coaches. It's just that we were playing so bad that someone has to get blamed for it. It's really more us than anybody else."

Drabek just for the first time since opening day at the Houston Astros beat the Atlanta Braves 7-2.

Drabek (7-2) was for the first time since beating San Diego 10-2 on April 26. He allowed five hits, walked one and struck out seven in his 50th career complete game.

Cardinals 10, Reds 7

CINCINNATI — Bernard Gilkey's two-run homer, the third by St. Louis, led the Cardinals over another poor performance by Danny Jackson and beat the Cincinnati Reds 10-7.

Gilkey's clutch-inning home off Pete Smith (1-2) snapped a 6-6 tie and sent the Reds to a second consecutive loss following their nine-game winning streak. Gilkey added an RBI single in the eighth.

Drabek (2-1) and Brian Jordan also homered for St. Louis.

Jeff Parrett (2-0) got the win with 2-3 innings in relief of Jackson, who blew a three-run lead and left with the score tied at 6 in the fifth. Rene Arocha gave up a solo home run to the eighth to Jeff Branson, his third, and Tom Henke pitched the ninth for his 11th save in as many chances.

Gamez, Crenshaw survive the muck

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Masters champion Ben Crenshaw and Robert Gamez shared the 36-hole lead Friday as the rain-plagued Memorial tournament dodged two weather systems and got back on schedule.

Crenshaw slogged and sloshed over the rain-soaked Murrifield Village Golf Club course to a 4-under-par 68 and completed two rounds in 135, nine under par.

He was tied with Gamez, who was among the 55 players stranded on the course by darkness Thursday.

Gamez finished off a first-round 68 Friday morning, benefiting from "my best break of the year," then turned around almost immediately for a second-round 67.

"I'm glad to be out of the muck," said Gamez, mud-spattered and wet to the knees. "Look at these things. These pants are ruined. Maybe the shoes, too."

Peter Jacobsen, who had a second-round 67, was tied at 136 with Greg Norman, Vijay Singh, Bruce Lietzke and one-handed putter Mike Hulbert. Singh and Lietzke each had a 67, Hulbert a 68 and Norman a 70.

They were followed at 137 by Fuzzy Zoeller, Steve Elkington and Mark O'Meara. Zoeller and Elkington each shot a 67 and O'Meara had a 71.

The course, subjected to a 3-hour, 25-minute rain delay Thursday, received more showers Friday.

None were so severe, however, that play had to be stopped as two heavy weather systems skirted the course in the northern suburbs of Memorial Tournament co-leader Robert Gamez lines a putt Friday at the fifth hole of the water-logged event.

Columbus, Ohio. But they left the course a quagmire and, for the second day in a row, players were allowed to lift, clean and place balls in the fairway. At least partially as a result, 10 players were within two shots of the lead. "That's usually the case," Crenshaw said. "You're always going to have bunching under these conditions."

"The conditions are about as damp as they have ever been in a tournament that has a long history of weather disruptions."

"I've never seen it so wet," Crenshaw said, "and we've played a lot of wet golf here."

Jacobsen agreed. "It's like walking on a beach," he said. "Every shot is from a half-inch of water."

Jim McGovern, who had an eagle-3 on 15 Friday to wrest the first-round lead from overnight pacemakers Norman and O'Meara, went to a 73 in the second round and was at 138.

Tournament host and founder Jack Nicklaus, 55, struggled to a 75-153 and failed to qualify for the final two rounds.

Both Crenshaw and Gamez started second-round play from the 10th tee, and Crenshaw got his share of the lead with birdies on two of his last three holes. The big one was a 30-footer on the soft, slow green at No. 8.

Gamez had eight birdies and one-putted 11 times, but the key to his share of the lead came with a lucky save of par on the final hole.

Only a hazard-stake kept his approach from rolling into the water on No. 9. When it stayed dry, however, Gamez was able to pitch within 26 feet to save par.

"My best break of the year," he said.

Stockton shoots past the crowd at Senior event

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Dave Stockton shot a 6-under-par 66 Friday for a one-shot lead after the first round of the Bruno's Memorial Classic.

Stockton, seeking his second consecutive Senior PGA Tour victory, had four of his six birdies on the back nine. In a three-way tie for second were two rookies — Bud Allen and Bruce Summerhays — and veteran Bob Rawlins.

Gradham Marsh, Mike Hill and Tom Waskopf were two shots off the lead. Raymond Floyd was at 69 and defending champion Jim Dent was another stroke back in the $1.05 million event on the 7,012-yard Greystone Country Club course.

Stockton struggled with his putter on the front nine. He missed a chance for eagle on No. 2, a 53-yard par-5, and didn't capitalize on birdie chances at Nos. 6 and 9.

"I think all of us have been fighting our putter," said Stockton, who won the Quicksilver Classic last weekend. "My game is in good shape. I expect the putter will come around. These greens are perfect. I'm looking forward to the next two days."

Stockton, who won the GTE Suncoast Classic earlier this year, has 11 victories as a senior.

"This is turning out to be an interesting year," he said. "I'm going to be a handful to handle this summer. I've got good vibes about the stretch we're heading into."

Allen had good vibes about the first round right from the first hole, a 400-yard par-4. His second shot landed three feet from the pin and set up the first of his six birdies.

Egging finds the right stroke to take Oldsmobile Classic lead

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Dale Egging had been putting so poorly she was making herself sick. Precise iron play and a new putter provided the cure at the Oldsmobile LPGA Classic.

Egging matched Beth Daniel's tournament record with a 9-under-par 63 in the first round Thursday, and her nine birdies also tied the single-round record Daniel set last year. Daniel, who matched the LPGA's 72-hole record with a 20-under 268 total in 1994, was 11 back after a 74.

Egging, 41, who has won only once since joining the LPGA tour in 1976, had five birdies in seven holes on the back nine. She leads Sweden's Helen Alfredsson by two strokes.

Nanci Bowen, Joan Pitcock and 1993 champion Jane Geddes are tied for third after shooting 66s on the Walnut Hills Country Club course.

"I've been hitting the ball well the past month, but making no putts," Egging said. "I just said 'I've got to do something about it.'"

But Egging was hitting the ball so well she didn't need any long birdie putts. Her longest was 13 feet. "My iron play was pretty darn good," she said.

"My iron play was pretty darn good," she said. "I switched from an old-style putter to a new Odyssey model, which her husband, Mike, promotes."

"This is the first week I've really used it," Egging said. "I love it."

Dale Egging waves to the gallery on the first hole of the Oldsmobile LPGA Classic in East Lansing, Mich., Friday.

"I didn't realize that until I added them up at the end of the round," Pitcock said of the 10 birdies. Twenty-eight players shot rounds in the 60s, and 66 were under par. The field of 144 will be cut to the low 70 and ties following today's second round.

Florida St. drops defending champs in opener, 3-2

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — J.D. Drew hit a two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth Friday as Florida State turned the tables on defending national champion Oklahoma with a 3-2 victory in the first game of the College World Series.

The dramatic finish snapped Oklahoma's NCAA postseason win streak at 12 games and ended left-hander Mark Redman's personal winning streak at six.

Florida State (53-14) moves to Sunday's 2:36 p.m. CDT winner's bracket game against the winner of Friday night's Miami-Southern Cal contest. Oklahoma (42-15) will face the loser in an elimination game at 6:36 p.m. Sunday.

The promised pitching showdown between Redman and Florida State's Jonathan Johnson, both first-round draft picks, lived up to its billing. However, long-ball mistakes proved costly to the two All-Americans.

Solo homers by Ryan Minor and Brian Shackelford spotted Redman (15-3) to a 2-1 lead heading into the ninth. But Scott Zech led off with a walk and Drew, a freshman, lined an opposite-field homer, his 14th of the year, to left-center with one out to win it.

That saved it for Johnson (12-3), who threw a six-hitter. Minor homered off the Seminoles right-hander leading off the fifth and Shackelford smashed his seventh homer of the year with one out in the eighth. Damon Minor also had three singles off Johnson, the No. 7 pick by the Texas Rangers in the major league draft.

Redman had one shaky inning early when he gave up consecutive singles to Adam Faurot, Zech and Mike Martin Jr. with one out in the second. Drew worked a bases-loaded walk to force in a run before Redman struck out the next two hitters.

Florida State stranded runners at second and third in the eighth with a walk and a pop fly double by Jeremy Morris that Oklahoma's outfielders Florida State's Brooks Badaux dives back to first Friday on a pickoff play, avoiding the tag of Sooner Ryan Minor.

Aric Thomas and Shackelford lost in the sun. Oklahoma, aside from its two homers, failed to advance another runner past second against Johnson, who struck out five and walked one.

Woods down by 7 in NCAA tourney

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Tiger Woods needs a phenomenal round to win the NCAA Individual Golf Championship, his Stanford squad, however, is in good position to keep the team title-it won last year.

Woods, the freshman sensation, shot a 2-under-par 70 on Friday at Ohio State's Scarlet Course and his 54-hole total of 1-under-par 215 trilled Auburn's Chip Spratlin by seven strokes going into Saturday's final round.

In addition to Spratlin, who shot a 70 after rounds of 67 and 71 to be 2-under-par 208, Woods must leap over seven other golfers to take the lead, an unlikely scenario on a difficult course that has yielded only one score as low as 66.

"I was kind of bummed out I didn't shoot a 'little better,'" Woods said. "It hit a lot of good shots, but I didn't hit any putts for birdie."

The outlook was much better for the Stanford team.

The Cardinal, leader by two strokes going into Friday's play, still had a shot at the team title after Harrison Frazier's 5-under-par 67 pushed Texas into a tie with Stanford heading into the final round.

Frazier, the lone senior on Texas' five-man team, improved by 12 shots over his second round 79 to guide the Longhorns to a 6-under 282 for the day and a 3-over-par 867 for the tournament. Stanford totaled 286 strokes for its 867 total through 54 holes.

So much is made of Tiger Woods', Frazier said: "He's a great player and he deserves all the attention he gets. It's the same at Oklahoma State — there's a lot of All-Americans there."

Trailing Spratlin and Tidland in the medal race was Southern Cal's Wright, whose 67 left him three shots back of Spratlin with a 5-under 211.

ers is Spratlin, a former walk-on who has never won a college tournament. He grabbed a two-stroke lead over Oklahoma State's Chris Tidland for individual medalist honors. Tidland had a 72 after back-to-back 69s and was at 6-under 210.

Spratlin said he wanted to go all out in the final round.

"Since this is my last collegiate tournament, I might as well play as hard as I can," he said.

Texas battled Stanford for the team title a year ago, but the Longhorns also had medalist Justin Leonard. This year's team features Frazier, junior Robby Skinner, sophomore Marcus Jones and freshmen Jeff Fahrenbruch and Brad Elder.

Skinner shot a 71, Fahrenbruch and Jones had 72s and Elder's 76 did not count in Texas' total.

Casey Martin of Stanford matched the 70 by Woods, while Notah Begay III and Jerry Chang each shot 73s and William Yagnisawa added a 76.

Texas coach Jimmy Clayton said the Longhorns even drew a break-in when the scoreboard operator had the wrong all day for the top teams.

"In a way, I think that was good because I told our kids not to pay any attention to them," he said. "They had Stanford even most of the day and they had us at 0-over all day."

Southern Cal, which made the cut by two strokes, moved into contention with the day's low team round, a 281. That left them two strokes behind Texas and Stanford. The Trojans were led by Chad Wright at 67 and a 69 by Chris Johnson at 69.

Top-ranked Oklahoma State was another shot back at 870, followed by Florida State at 874 and Arizona and California, both at 875.

UCLA led with 24 points, followed by Illinois with 20, Southern Methodist with 18 and LSU with 17.

Arkansas, favored to win its fourth consecutive men's title, hiked its point total to 43½ after 13 events as Brandon Rock won the 800 in 1:46.37 and Jerome Romain finished second in the triple jump.

"Two guys challenged me, (Shawn) Benefield (of Georgia) passed me," Rock said. "As soon as I saw who passed me, it was time to go, because he ... has a good kick. I knew if I didn't go get him then, I was going to have problems with him over the obstacles."

Tennessee was second in the men's team race with 31 points and Southern Cal third with 26.

LSU just missed a sweep of the relays as Texas Christian edged the Tigers by .01 seconds in winning their 13th event.

TCU's team of Donovan Powell, Brañhart Carter, Lloyd Edwards and Hoshia Abdallah opened an early lead, before LSU's Rohsaan Griffin ran a brilliant anchor leg and just missed winning.

TCU's time of 38.65 was fastest by a college team this year and second in the world, behind the 38.43 by the Santa Monica Track Club. It also was a track record, breaking the mark of 39.12 by Mississippi State in 1986.

LSU women speed way to top of the track pack

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — LSU's women speedsters put on a dazzling show in the NCAA outdoor track and field championships Friday night, winning the 400-meter relay in 43.10 seconds, the fastest time in the world this year.

The Tigers, favored to win a record ninth consecutive team title thanks to a brilliant roster of sprinters, showed their awesome strength, beating runner-up Tennessee by about 6 meters.

Freshmen Marita Hunt and Kwajalein Butler ran the first two legs followed by senior Zundra Feagin and junior Andre Hill. The handoff on the final leg was perfect, with Feagin putting LSU in control.

The time also broke the Tom Black Track record of 43.45 set by a national team in 1982, but was short of the collegiate record of 42.50 by LSU in the 1989 NCAA meet at Provo, Utah.

"Our best race of the year," Butler said. "We ran for the goal and achieved it."

"We knew we could run this fast if not faster," Hill said. "We've had problems with our exchanges in the past, but we ran a good race today."

Lateder, Butler, Feagin and Hill qualified for Saturday's 100-meter final, and Feagin and Hill advanced to Saturday's 200 final.

After eight women's events,

Reports heighten concern over extent of slowdown

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In ominous economic developments, the nation last month suffered its biggest job loss in four years and the government's chief forecasting gauge fell a third straight time.

The Labor Department's report on unemployment Friday showed that 101,000 jobs were lost in May, the biggest setback since the nation was pulling out of the last recession in April 1991.

The layoffs were centered in manufacturing and construction and caught analysts totally off guard.

They had been forecasting an increase in payroll employment of around 175,000 jobs following a loss of 7,000 jobs in April.

The overall unemployment rate, which is obtained from a separate survey of households, had edged down slightly to 5.7 percent in May, but the slight improvement followed a huge jump of 0.3 percentage point the previous month.

The May unemployment report showed that factories shed 56,000 jobs last month, the biggest setback in manufacturing in more than three years, while construction employment was down by 57,000.

Heavy rains and flooding in the Southeast and Midwest were blamed for part of the construction weakness but analysts noted that the service sector, normally a standout performer, posted a subdued gain of just 60,000 jobs, half the March increase.

The overall unemployment rate of 5.7 percent followed an April level of 5.8 percent but was still higher than the 5.5 percent of March.

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department reported that its Index of Leading Economic Indicators fell for a third straight month, declining 0.6 percent in April as eight of the 11 forward-pointing business barometers turned down.

Traditionally, three consecutive declines in the leading index is a signal of a recession.

While it has accurately predicted all nine of the country's postwar recessions, it posted three or more consecutive declines on five other occasions when no recession followed.

But economists noted that, on most of the false readings, the economy slowed significantly if it avoided an outright recession.

Down down 28 on worries over outlook

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Surprisingly weak economic data sent blue-chip stocks lower on Friday, but financial and technology issues strengthened.

The Dow Jones industrial average ended 28.36 lower at 4,444.39.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines on the New York Stock Exchange, with 1,472 up, 919 down and 628 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 365.96 million shares as of 4 p.m., up from 345.91 million Thursday.

Broader indexes were mostly lower. The NYSE's composite index fell 0.20 to 286.53. The Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 0.98 to 532.51. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 3.06 to 487.84.

But the Nasdaq composite index rose 4.15 to 872.99, pushed higher by technology issues.

The average plunged 42 points at the open, but bucked up to positive 17 but retraced a second time, spending the rest of the day in negative territory.

The sharp market moves were sparked by a Labor Department report that business payrolls shrank by 101,000 jobs in May. The report surprised economists, who had predicted a rise of about 175,000, and got investors nervous about the health of the economy, going forward.

Lack of savings at heart of U.S. economic woes

Knights-Ridder News Service

Spend, spend, spend. Here in the world's consumer paradise, that's one of the things Americans do best — and it's a habit that could land us in hot water, if it hasn't already done so.

With our habit for everything from camcorders to four-wheel-drive vehicles, Americans are the black sheep of the industrialized world when it comes to saving money.

For the nation, this failure to save carries a high price.

That's because household savings helps to fuel the economy. It's not just money stacked in bank accounts, but also purchases of stocks and bonds and mutual funds. Such savings feed economic growth by making money available to businesses and governments to invest in such building blocks of economic prosperity as roads and airports, machinery and computer systems, research on new products, and education to produce smart, skilled workers.

But last year, American households saved, on average, only 4.1 percent of their after-tax incomes. Japanese citizens, meanwhile, stacked away 16 percent and Germans 11.4 percent.

Americans, for example, have loved to buy cars on time rather than saving up for them, and the growth of auto leasing takes pay-as-you-go to new heights.

To someone like 49-year-old Northeasterner Ray Blum, of Philadelphia, leasing makes all kinds of sense. Blum's three-year lease on a Pontiac Grand Am costs him less per month than he would pay on a car loan. And the lease will expire before expensive parts start to wear out, qualified replacing.

Of course, when the lease runs out, Blum will probably lease another car, spending more than $200 a month he might otherwise save.

But that doesn't faze him, because leasing allows him to live the ultimate American dream: It is driving a car he couldn't afford to buy.

"Why should I buy something I don't really want, when I can lease for less and drive something I really like?" he asks.

For now, for the nation's Ray Blums, this lifestyle looks like a winner.

But our inability to "just say no" to spending has been offered, for example, as one reason the rest of the world has snubbed the dollar so rudely this year.

Although the dollar rose slightly last week against both the Japanese yen and the German mark, it was still down 13 percent against the yen and 7 percent against the mark since the beginning of the year.

But the weak dollar only reflects the more ominous problems that foreigners see lurking in the wings if we don't get our spending habits under control.

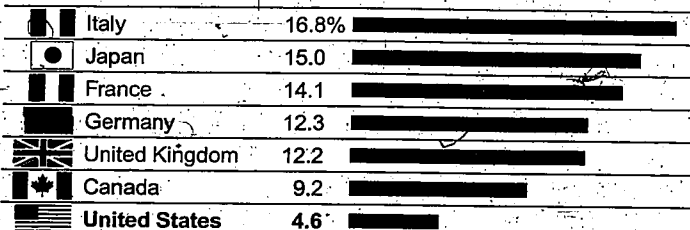

Take our mounting debt load. We used to be the world's bankers; everybody owed us money. In the last 25 years, we've become the world's borrowers. We're in a hole around the globe for all those consumer goodies we can't do without, and we rely on foreign purchases of U.S. government bonds to feed our habit of federal overspending.

Still, these debts would be manageable if we could count on strong economic growth to create the wealth we need to pay them off. But our free-spending ways make that difficult: The worst consequence of our passion for buying now and paying later is that it stunts economic growth. And that means our children and grandchildren are likely to have a harder time making ends meet than we do.

"We are eating our seed corn," says Gary Robbins, an economist whose work underpins the tax theories of congressional Republicans. "The reason economists are predicting we will have only 2 or 2.5 percent growth in the long run is we aren't accumulating enough capital. That's why I'm concerned about savings."

For some Americans, the less-fresh future is already here. The failure of lower-wage earners to get ahead financially in the last 20 years is a direct consequence of the nation's failure to save enough, many economists believe.

"One reason our economy is growing so slowly, and why real household incomes have not risen over the past 20 years, is that we have had a very low household saving rate," says Mark Zandi of Regional Financial Associates in West Chester.

Economists are a fractious bunch who disagree on most economic issues. And true to that tradition, they don't agree on why Americans are such spendthrifts or how they could be persuaded to change their ways.

But when it comes to the danger posed by Americans' failure to save, they are virtually unanimous.

The federal government has been roundly criticized for its chronic overspending, and the attempt to rein in that spending is at the heart of the budget proposals now being debated in Congress.

But the American public shares the blame. "There's an important link between household savings and the government deficit," says economist James Poterba of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The combination means that economic growth gets squeezed from two sides at the same time, he explains. "Since 1977, our household savings rate has been in the bottom third among the 19 industrial nations tracked by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD). In 1993, the most recent year reported by OECD, the U.S. savings rate of 4.1 percent was next to last, with only the Netherlands saving less.

What accounts for our profligate ways? Economic research has produced dead ends and contested results, but no answers that economists can agree on. Some theories include:

- High U.S. taxes on interest, dividends and capital gains discourage people from saving. This is the core argument behind Republican proposals for lower taxes on capital gains. But many economists say studies of tax effects are flawed and prove, at most, that changing tax laws encourages people to shift their money around. Some economists suggest that higher taxes, by reducing an individual's return from a given investment, might even encourage more saving.

- The United States is the world capital of easy credit. It may be that savings seems unnecessary in a country where unsolicited offers of loans and credit cards flood mailboxes, retailers offer up to nine months to begin payment, and government subsidies make it possible to buy a house with as little as 5 percent down.

- The U.S., more than any other country, makes it easy for households to borrow," says Barry Bosworth of the Brookings Institution in Washington. He notes that after World War II, European governments rationed consumer credit so that money could be funneled into rebuilding. And those restrictions were not soon lifted: In Sweden, for example consumer credit was not freely available until the late 1980s.

- The powerful images of television seduce us. Commercial television is far more pervasive in the United States than in most other industrial countries, which rely more on government sponsorship. And the message of both programs and advertising on commercial television is clear, says Cynthia Schiebe, director of the Center for Research on the Effects of Television, at Ithaca College, in Ithaca, N.Y.: "Commercial TV teaches that you should own everything you want, right now."

- Some researchers think demographics play a role. Many baby boomers are still at the age when people buy houses, furniture, cars and college education for their children. But as their child-rearing years end and they approach retirement, they are likely to save more, the theory goes.

- On the other hand, a recent study found that people between 55 and 64 saved a much smaller share of their income in the late 1980s than those of the same age did in 1963. "I'd guess a big part of it is that they feel more protected. They have Social Security and Medicare, and private pension coverage has gone up dramatically," says researcher John Sabelhaus of the Urban Institute.

Personal savings rates in many other industrial countries have also dropped over the last two decades, so what's happening in the United States looks like part of a broader phenomenon. But because citizens of other countries were saving more to begin with, their savings rates still outstrip ours.

That pattern of higher savings elsewhere, which Bosworth says dates back far as the turn of the century, suggests another explanation: That experience plays a role in shaping spending habits.

Hans-Juergen Meltzer, senior economist at Deutsche Bank in Frankfurt, sees evidence of this in the high German savings rate. The painful currency devaluations after both world wars left many people virtually penniless — and sufficiently fearful of the future to want to save.

Contrasts mark life of top working woman

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Ellen Bravo's life has been one of contrasts:

She grew up on the edge of one of Cleveland's toughest neighborhoods, but her family had little money. She has degrees in Greek and Latin from Cornell and Cambridge universities but for years held clerical and secretarial jobs.

Yet there have been two constants in Bravo's life: a commitment to women and work, and an immense dislike of injustice. As executive director of 9to5, National Association of Working Women, where she has worked since 1982, she is able to use both passions to change other people's lives.

Based in Milwaukee, 9to5 has become a powerful and respected national voice for clerical and office workers. It inspired the 1981 film of the same name, starring Jane Fonda, Lily Tomlin and Dolly Parton, about office workers who rebel against an abusive boss.

"Ellen is so effective at speaking directly from the heart and with information," feminist Gloria Steinem said. "She expresses the facts about women's work lives as they experience them."

Bravo, a slight woman of modest demeanor, has intellectual capabilities that are anything but modest, according to people who know her.

"Ellen is not with the justice of her cause and helping other people get involved," said Karen Nussbaum, founder and longtime director of 9to5, and now director of the Labor Department's Women's Bureau.

"I've never met anyone more energetic, sincere, smarter, more strategic, more dedicated than Ellen," Nussbaum said.

Funded by foundations, churches and individual donors, the group has chapters in 25 states from California to Maine and operates a national hotline to give legal advice to women. It also helps women in specific companies or industries organize to push for change.

"Our goal is to empower women to change," Bravo said.

Nussbaum founded 9to5 in 1973 as a union of sorts for women in traditionally female occupations. The idea was to help clerical workers and secretaries organize to change their working conditions, which often include low pay, shaky or no benefits, and few rights.

Bravo has continued that tradition. She tells of a bank employee earning $4.65 an hour whose employer announced it would no longer pay for dependent health insurance. Workers were given the option of paying $165 a month to continue the benefits.

Bravo got publicity for the workers' plight. The employees ended up with a 90-cent-per-hour raise that paid for the insurance.

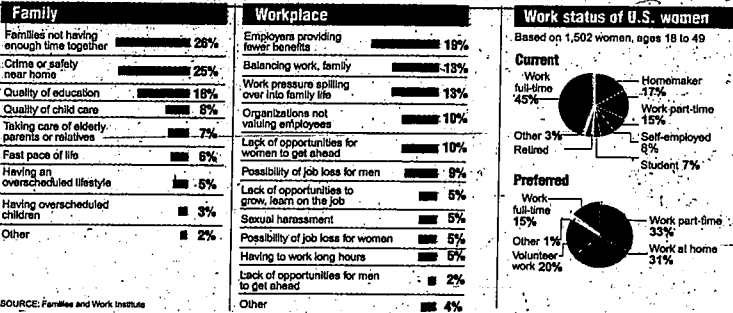

"The bottom line is that we want to change conditions in individual occupations or change public policy," Bravo said. "You don't always win if you stand up for yourself, but you won't if you don't."

Born in Cleveland in 1944, Bravo grew up on the edge of the upscale Shaker Heights community, then a neighborhood of large homes and swimming pools.

But while her school classmates had money, her family didn't. She was well aware their house was on the wrong side of the rapid transit tracks — the parents of some of her wealthy friends wouldn't allow their children to visit her house.

The desire for balance

Many women seem to be voicing the same concerns for balancing work and family. Results of 1994 survey of nearly 1,500 women, showing percent of women who said these issues were their greatest worries:

SOURCE: Families and Work Institute

Contributing to her sense of injustice was her knowledge, as a young Jewish girl, of the Holocaust.

"I remember as a child finding it hard to understand how people could have known that was happening and let it happen," Bravo said.

"It helped me understand that in the face of injustice you can't be silent."

Bravo also learned about working women's problems at a young age. When an accident put her father, an aluminum siding salesman, out of work for two years, her mother, a social worker, became the family's sole source of support.

"It made a big impact on me, realizing that if your mother was the only earner, it meant your family was in economic trouble," Bravo said. Bravo won a scholarship to Cornell University in 1962, where she studied classics — and found an escape of sorts from the world's ills.

"One of the reasons I wanted to study Greek and Latin was to have this life that was completely apart from reality," Bravo said. "It would be a world that was isolated from greed and ambition."

While at Cornell, Bravo met a graduate student in economics who would later become her husband — a Greek man who had spoken out against the rightist dictatorship in Greece and had been forced to leave.

"More and more I began to realize things people took for granted didn't have to work that way," Bravo said.

After continuing her studies at Cambridge for two years — while the civil rights movement and Vietnam War protests were under way — Bravo said she began to feel tormented about focusing her efforts on "an elite field while the world was blowing up around me."

Still, after the couple moved to Montreal, she completed the coursework for a doctorate in classics at McGill University. But in 1968 she became involved in a women's group — and discovered feminism.

"As soon as I heard the ideas, I thought, 'This is why my mother, this is why women are faced with the dilemma of children or job,'" Bravo said. "Men don't ask themselves that question they do both and have full lives."
