Taxpayers clean up after miners

By William Brock
Times-News writer

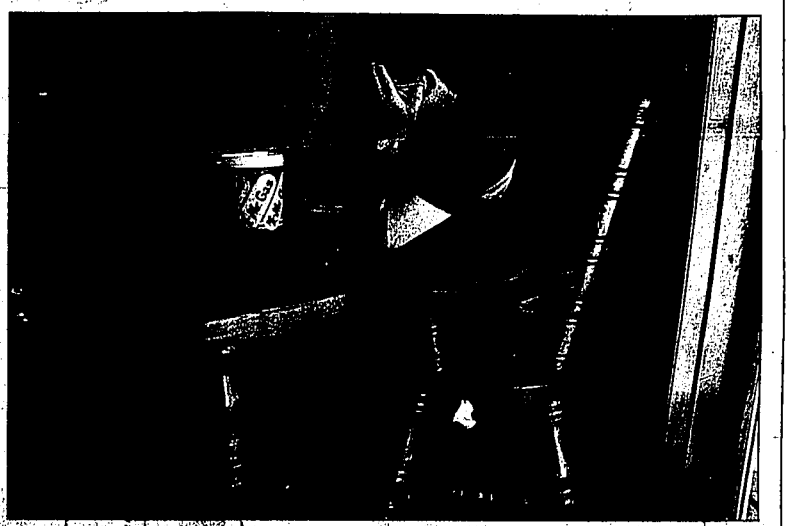

Mess left on hands of public

FAIRFIELD - American taxpayers soon will be paying the bills to clean up the mess left by operators of a private gold and silver mine on federal land in Camas County.

The mine's operators posted a $9,000 clean-up bond, but that won't be nearly enough to complete the job.

Estimated reclamation costs are in the neighborhood of $500,000, "and that's on the conservative side," said Rick Vander Voet, in the BLM's Shoshone office.

The snow flies again," Vander Voet said in an interview Friday. The most pressing problems involve soil stabilization - not toxic chemicals, he said.

John Parker has been working six a shifts in an effort to escape homelessness. The hard work is taking its toll on the former Gooding resident.

Hundreds make use of shelter

Valley House offers them refuge

By Julie M. McKinnon
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - After falling behind on bills and getting evicted from a Gooding house they rented for $400 a month, John Parker and his family headed to Twin Falls.

"Everything just fell apart - we couldn't afford the rent," said Parker, who has two stepchildren. Ten-year-old Jeff Myers has cerebral palsy and uses a wheelchair. 11-year-old Kristi Myers has attention-deficit disorder and needs $50 in medication every month.

Gaps at the foundations of some of the cottages will have to be filled before winter so water pipes don't freeze, said Valley House Manager Roger Wyatt. Using straw bales or carpeting to block gaps as was done before isn't acceptable to Valley House's insurance company, he said.

With the main house and the cottages filled, there's room for up to 69 people, Wyatt said. Only one cottage, which was once a tack room for horses, may not be ready for winter, he said.

By moving to Twin Falls, at least Parker - a full-time certified nurse's aide who wants to go back to school next spring - is closer to West Magic Care Center, where he has worked for 13 months. But the family hasn't been able to find a rental they can afford.

Some part of the shelter also needs to be accessible to disabled people, Wyatt said. Jeff is the second person at Valley House who has used a wheelchair, he said.

And the six cottages that are occupied now will need repairs in the future, he added. Valley House also plans to renovate the main house's basement.

"We were in a motel for a while, but then our money ran out," said Parker's wife of about two years, Deanna Parker.

Just before the Pentagon announced the White House described the U.S. military moves as precautionary.

"It's purely circumstantial that we happened to be coming through the Red Sea when all the information about Iraq and the defectors occurred," Portman said.

Luckily, the Parkers heard about Valley House, a homeless shelter that opened earlier this year in two houses and a former motel off Addison Avenue West.

"We want to do what's prudent," said White House spokeswoman Ginny Terzano. She added, however, that U.S. officials had no indication of any direct threats from Iraq.

QATRANA, Jordan - American and Jordanian troops fanned out across the desert Friday for three weeks of exercises as the Pentagon announced it was bumping up maneuvers in Kuwait following reports of unusual military activity in Iraq.

Meanwhile, a senior military official in Washington, speaking on condition of anonymity, said exercises in Kuwait, previously scheduled for the fall, will begin in a few days and last up to six weeks. They will involve about 1,400 soldiers from Fort Hood, Texas.

In Jordan, Sgt. Nathan Portman, a spokesman for the 11th Marine Expeditionary Unit, told The Associated Press that U.S. forces participating in the exercises will "work on small units and move up to battalion-sized operation" by Tuesday.

Churning up dust that swirled under a broiling sun, tanks, helicopters, mobile radar units and thousands of troops clogged the desert around the Qatran military camp, 75 miles south of the capital, Amman.

The Pentagon announced Thursday it was moving warships and military supplies toward the Persian Gulf to deter possible action by Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein's military, and some U.S.-based troops were in line for possible deployment.

Reporters were not allowed to speak with Jordanian soldiers.

Idaho weather summary

Some cloudiness covered portions of Idaho Friday as an upper level low pressure system continued to move eastward as a ridge of high pressure built in over the Great Basin.

Afternoon temperatures ranged from the lower 60s to lower 70s across the southeast highlands and the panhandle. Otherwise, temperatures were in the lower to mid 70s in the southwest part of the state.

Temperatures will warm as high pressure continues to build in over the region. The dry weather pattern should persist into the weekend.

There were a few scattered reports of rain Friday, mostly in the northern and eastern sections of the state.

Precipitation amounts included Grangeville .08 inch; Mullan .03 and Rexburg .01.

Rain continues to soak central states; Dixie stays hot Clear blue skies shone over much of the East Coast as Hurricane Felix, weakening and slow, trundled further out to sea Friday.

Inland, rain pelted the central states and Southwest.

The hurricane, its winds barely strong enough to let it keep that designation, inched further off the North Carolina coast, though forecasters warned it could turn back west again.

Showers and thunderstorms drenched the northern Plains in the morning as a frontal system made its way out of the northern Rockies and into Canada, depositing hail as it went.

Another area of showers and thunderstorms soaked the southern Great Lakes and upper Ohio Valley for still another day, bringing flood warnings in parts of Ohio.

Rain slackened off a bit in the Southwest after several days of monsoon-like storms.

A cold front brought unseasonably chilly temperatures to the North West. Again, triple digit temperatures were common in the South, and in Jacksonville, Fla., it felt like 124 thanks to the humidity.

Today's weather fact

In most parts of the country pea-sized hailstones are rare; the exception is the Great Plains where larger hailstones are common during severe weather season.

Unfortunately, it is in these areas where farm fields stretch for miles. What takes months to grow can be wiped out in minutes by a hail storm.

That's what happened in northwest Minnesota in 1899, when 25,000 acres of wheat was flattened in minutes as a severe storm blew over Norman, Polk and Clay counties.

Now most farmers buy hail insurance to protect against such sudden calamities.

Ito stays on Simpson trial; police chief demands Fuhrman tapes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Judge Lance Ito's wife has nothing relevant to add to the Simpson trial, another judge ruled Friday.

That keeps Ito on the case and resolves an emotional conflict-of-interest dispute set off by the inflammatory Mark Fuhrman tapes.

The ruling by Superior Court Judge John Stein came as the tape-recorded Fuhrman interviews continued to rock the Simpson trial, with jurors presumably totally unaware. No testimony was heard Friday, and the jury was sent to the beach, among the developments.

The police chief joined the police citizen oversight board in demanding immediate access to the tapes, in which Fuhrman reportedly spouts racial epithets, speaks of Ito asked police officials to wait until the trial ended before pursuing an investigation.

A 1978 police brutality case in Los Angeles appears to match elements of Fuhrman's reported description of officers taking bloody revenge on gang members suspected of shooting two policemen.

Civil rights attorneys called for a federal investigation into the incidents Fuhrman describes on the tapes.

At the center of the storm are a dozen hours of interviews with Fuhrman recorded sporadically from 1985 through 1994 by North Carolina screenwriting professor Laura Hart McKinny for a project on the Los Angeles police.

The defense wants to use the tapes to discredit Fuhrman and bolster its contention Fuhrman is a racist cop who planted evidence.

Fuhrman, now retired, testified in March about finding a bloody glove behind Simpson's house the morning after the June 12, 1994, knife murders of Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman. Simpson had denied innocent.

After it was disclosed Fuhrman had disparaging comments about Ito's wife, Reid was appointed to review the tapes and determine whether Ito's wife had anything relevant to offer at trial. Prosecutors had suggested they might need to call York to rebut some of Fuhrman's claims on the tapes, forcing Ito to step down for conflict of interest.

After listening to the tapes, Reid said he heard nothing that would warrant a retrial.

"There is no reasonable expectation that Capt. Margaret York ... could give relevant evidence in regards to any issue before the court," Reid wrote in a two-page ruling.

As Reid ruled, police officials held news conferences to comment on the tapes and reveal that at least one of Fuhrman's most brutal tales could be partially corroborated. Police Chief Willie Williams said the tapes must be handed over to police officials immediately and not disseminated in the form of news leaks and attorney comments.

"We don't need this type of hammer, this type of rock coming over the wall at us," Williams said.

The Police Commission, in a letter to the city attorney requesting "all formal assistance" to get the tapes, said police officials need to review the recordings for the good of the city.

"The disclosures this past week of excerpts from tape recordings made by former Los Angeles Detective Mark Fuhrman reveal descriptions of alleged behavior that cannot and will not be condoned by this board," the letter said.

Ron Regwan, Mark McKinny's lawyer, said McKinny didn't want to make copies of the tapes for police officials.

"We don't want copies circulating," Regwan said. "We would be happy to do the same thing that we offered to Fuhrman's attorney, that is, McKinny come to our offices and review at their leisure the transcripts and audiotapes."

Only bits of the tapes have been revealed, based solely on media leaks and attorneys' recollections of what Fuhrman says on the tapes.

Craig sees more waste being dumped at INEL

BOISE (AP) — Despite overwhelming public opposition, Republican Sen. Larry Craig said Friday more nuclear waste will be dumped at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

The only question is what the state will get in return.

"I don't know that there's any way to stop it," Craig said following the taping of KTVB-TV's "Viewpoint" program.

Congress will not turn its back on the Navy's claim that national security is jeopardized if waste from its nuclear warships is not dumped at the INEL, Craig said during the half-hour public affairs show.

Popular drug damages brain

BALTIMORE (AP) — Ecstasy, a drug popular with teen-agers who write through all-night dance parties known as "raves," may cause irreversible brain damage and depression.

Users of the drug claim it heightens their sex drive while giving them a sense of tranquility.

But according to a Johns Hopkins University study, the drug causes lasting damage to the parts of the brain that produce the chemical serotonin, which controls mood, appetite and sexual functions.

miles northeast of Fairfield, the Princess Blue Ribbon mine began operation in 1915.

It was dormant for years until improvements in cyanide heap-leach technology made the mine, and its ore-processing mill, profitable again.

Cyanide heap leaching is nothing more than sprinkling a weak cyanide solution over exposed piles of raw ore. Precious metals are carried away by the solution, then captured by chemical and electrical processes inside the mill.

The Princess Blue Ribbon mill processed ore from its own mine and other mines in the area, Vander Voet said.

The mine's prosperity took a turn for the worse in March 1990, when a 30-foot-tall dam holding back the cyanide solution sprang a leak — unleashing a muddy torrent into Beaver Creek, then into Magic Reservoir.

"It ran like chocolate milk for two or three days," Vander Voet recalled. The sheer erosive force of the cyanide solution was far more destructive than the cyanide itself, he added.

The mine shut down after the flood, workers lost their jobs and a flurry of lawsuits ensued. Some reclamation work was done immediately after the spill, but more is needed, Vander Voet said.

"We're worried about everything sliding downhill," he said, so stabilization is the top priority.

Because it decays fairly quickly, there isn't much danger from the cyanide — but other, unidentified chemicals and solvents at the mine are still a concern.

Hurricane Felix: In like a lion, out on little cat feet

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — There was something feline about Hurricane Felix, and it wasn't just the name.
Like a housecat, it went its own way, dawdled when it felt like it and toyed with those it cornered. What it never did was pounce.

AP Photo

Beachgoers in Ocean City, N.J., on Thursday inspect a cliff carved away by surf generated by Hurricane Felix. The beach, which just underwent a $4.6 million replenishment project, renewed the debate about the wisdom of such efforts.

Surfers rejoice — B6

Felix stalked the Outer Banks of North Carolina for the better part of the week, hovering menacingly offshore and spinning off vicious waves and sultry winds. Forecasters, Friday gave it only a 6 percent chance of hitting Cape Hatteras through the weekend.

Felix earned respect, not for what it did but for what it could have been.
What everyone on these fragile barrier islands knows is that the next storm could be the Big One, the one that washes across these spits of sand like a flash flood through a flowerbed, taking everything in its path.

Felix wasn't the Big One, or even the Pretty Big One. But it was, as one man put it, "a good drill" for when the real thing comes along.

An estimated 200,000 tourists were evacuated from the Outer Banks on Tuesday, most inching along for hours on one road. It wasn't pretty but it worked, and nearly everyone had praise for local officials who ordered the evacuation, even when it eventually turned out to be unnecessary.

You know, you can always do Monday-morning quarterbacking on these things, but you never know what these storms are going to do," said John Bone, executive vice president of the Outer Banks Chamber of Commerce. He said businesses on the islands lost $4.5 million to $5 million a day.

Heavy television coverage of such recent hurricanes as Hugo, Emily and Andrew has driven home a frightening lesson about the power of the storms, Bone said.

"People know what they can do now," he said.

There is, of course, the possibility that storms such as Felix, which threaten but ultimately bluff, could lull people into a false sense of security. Tim Lehman, who manages a pool, pinball and skee-ball arcade on a pier in Nags Head, said he saw that happening already.

He estimated that during Hurricane Emily, in 1993, only a few hundred people stayed on the islands to ride out the storm.

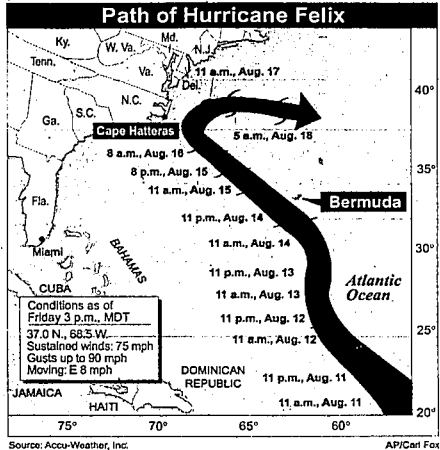

"This time," he said, "it was thousands."

But Lehman didn't blame anyone, nor did he resent the loss of revenue during what might have been his busiest week of the year.

Like most people here, he accepted it — as a cost not only of doing business, but of living in a place that most people see only on vacations, if at all.

To the extent that there were critics of the local authorities, they focused on the logistics of the evacuation and the manner in which it was lifted.

State Sen. Marc Basnight used the storm to argue for a larger highway leading out of the Outer Banks. And some Outer Banks residents were furious when the evacuation order was lifted Thursday while the main north-south highway on the island remained covered in one spot with more than a foot of seawater.

"They made the right decision to evacuate," said Russell Warren of Rodanthe, an Outer Banks town that was cut off by the isolated flooding. "But they made a bad decision to let people in before they're ready."

Warren's family spent several hours by the side of the road waiting for the water to drain.

Tourists, meanwhile, drove through the water, oblivious to the corrosive effects of saltwater on automobiles.

Warren and a dozen or so other local residents stood by watching in disgust.

Felix they could handle. The tourists were too much.

19 years later, past catches up with fugitive

NEW YORK (AP) — For nearly two decades, Luis Gonzalez cloaked himself in the trappings of an ordinary life.

Family man, hard worker, upstanding citizen: All were apt descriptions. Murder suspect was not — until this week.

Gonzalez, whose real name is David Galletti, was arrested Wednesday in South Carolina in a 1976 slaying in Brooklyn. A routine fingerprint check revealed his true identity, unknown even to his wife and two children, police said.

Galletti, 42, was extradited Thursday to New York City. He was to be arraigned on a murder charge in state Supreme Court in Brooklyn.

Authorities said the fugitive evaded the law for 19 years by skillfully reinventing himself and ending up in Hemingway, S.C., a town of 800 people about 30 miles west of Myrtle Beach.

New York homicide investigators knew Galletti as a drug-using street tough whose yellowing mug shot — taken in 1975 after he allegedly assaulted a police officer — was taped to their office wall, said Detective Bobby Alongi. They were astonished by what they discovered when they flew south to make the arrest.

"He turned his whole life around," Alongi said. "We expected the guy in the picture. We found this clean-cut executive. He looked great."

Galletti is accused of being one of two masked men who, in October 1976, sprayed a group of people with gunfire on a Brooklyn street, killing Leutisha Johnson, 52, and injuring three others. Police believe an argument between Johnson and Galletti's sister sparked the shooting.

After witnesses identified Galletti as one of the shooters, police obtained warrants for his arrest.

But Galletti fled to Puerto Rico, leaving behind a wife and children, authorities said. He returned to the United States in the early 1980s.

Using the Gonzalez alias, he remarried and started a second family. He also landed a job with Aramark Food Services, a catering company, eventually becoming a manager in a Miami office, police said.

Time passed. Investigators gave up. "Someone like him usually gets collared up for another crime at some point," Alongi said. "We thought he was dead."

Then, early this year, Galletti made a crucial mistake. Aramark gave him access to a company account at a Citibank in Miami, for which the bank required fingerprints.

Galletti complied, and the prints were sent to FBI headquarters. A routine check matched the prints to Galletti's, which New York police had from the 1975 assault arrest. "It really was a fluke," said FBI Special Agent Joe Younginer.

FDA OKs way to fight E. coli

WASHINGTON (AP) — Poultry farmers are about to get the first antibiotic aimed at saving millions of chickens sickened by deadly E. coli bacteria.

The Food and Drug Administration approved sarafloxacin Friday for farmers to add to the drinking water of chickens to stem E. coli outbreaks in poultry houses.

Although E. coli is fairly rare in poultry — and their strain is different from that associated with recent human food poisonings — farmers have had no treatment for chickens that do get ill, said Dr. Stephen Sundlof, FDA's director of veterinary medicine. Sick chickens cannot be sold for food, so farmers often had to destroy entire houses at a huge cost, he said.

Interior secretary lends support to beleaguered land managers

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt has again condemned threats against federal land managers, promising stepped up efforts to protect natural resources despite anti-environmental sentiment in Congress.

Babbitt

"There's an awful lot of dedicated people trying to do their jobs on our public lands, and the notion that they should be threatened and intimidated strikes at the very core of what we are as Americans," Babbitt told a gathering of outdoor retailers in Reno Thursday.

He said he also is alarmed by what he called the "carefully orchestrated" assault on the nation's public lands.

Babbitt thanked leaders of the Outdoor Recreation Coalition of America for a resolution they passed supporting employees of federal agencies.

The measure said the coalition resolved to "condemn violent actions against employees of federal land management agencies that create a climate of fear and intimidation."

Babbitt's brief stop here follows the Aug. 4 bombing of a van belonging to U.S. Forest Service Ranger Guy Pence in Carson City.

Pence was not home at the time but his wife and children were. No one was hurt.

It was the second attack seemingly against Pence in four months. On March 30, a pipe bomb left outside his office along Carson City's main street shattered a window and damaged walls. The explosion occurred after hours when the building was unoccupied.

David Secunda, the coalition's executive director, said the resolution reflects a new political direction for the organization.

"We're convinced that we can make a difference because we really represent both sides of the issue," Secunda said.

He said the group's members support strong public land management but also come from a pro-business viewpoint.

Babbitt added that he is alarmed by attempts in Congress to change environmental laws, citing moves to undercut the Clean Water Act, reduce funding for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and allow states to take control of public lands.

"They even hauled me before a committee and asked where my list was for parks that could be closed," Babbitt said. "I told them I would never have such a list."

Model Smith owes ex-baby sitter money

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Anna Nicole Smith is expected to follow through on a lawsuit against a former baby sitter, and must therefore pay the woman who claimed the Guess? model sexually assaulted her, a judge ruled.

Maria Antonia Cerrato sued Ms. Smith in May 1994, alleging sexual harassment, sexual assault and false imprisonment. Ms. Cerrato worked for Ms. Smith from 1992 until last year as a housekeeper and baby sitter.

Ms. Smith, 27, countersued, alleging Ms. Cerrato slandered her and tried to kidnap her son. Ms. Smith's lawsuit was effectively dismissed because she failed to comply with an evidence procedure, said her lawyer, Kelly Moore. "There is no admission of guilt in this," she said.

When Aviva K. Bobb said she would decide next week or later how much Ms. Smith should pay Ms. Cerrato.

Diaries show Packwood a man who pays attention to details

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Had an elegantly catered dinner. Gazpacho, delicious gazpacho. Rice. Prawns, unfortunately, although they weren't bad. Good asparagus, and a great salad. We headed home about 9:30 p.m."

A handful of excerpts from Sen. Bob Packwood's diaries reveal a man who cares a lot about detail, from culinary moments to critiques of his political speeches.

The Oregon Republican fought all the way to the Supreme Court to try to keep his diaries from becoming public, of sexual misconduct under investigation by the Senate Ethics Committee. But the diary entries give an indication of the kinds of things he was recording during his 27-year Senate career.

Packwood

The dinner menu with the prawns and gazpacho was from an entry on Tuesday, April 8, 1980.

On Aug. 12 of that year, he wrote of watching "Ted Kennedy's eloquent, marvelous speech to the Democratic Convention."

"That is the Ted Kennedy I have known and seen before. George (Packwood's then-wife) got to watch it with me. We then headed off to a volunteer party at Alton Baker Park that Gene and Brad Stocks had put together. It was a whole of a success," Packwood wrote.

On other occasions, he wrote about drinking beer with labor leaders, drinking wine in his campaign van, speeches he felt he gave poorly and the appearances of his campaign workers, including one woman he said "looks a little shaggy."

The excerpts include a few general references to one of Packwood's accusers — Gena Hutton — in an effort to show she gave no indication of having been offended after a February 1980 incident in which she says he kissed her and invited her to his motel room.

From Wednesday, Feb. 13, 1980: "Closed off the afternoon some miscellaneous radio stations and between them singing in the van to our song sheets and the sing-a-long music. Gene, just laughing and thumping on the table, keeping time to the music. As she left us about 3:30 p.m. or 4 p.m., it would be madridin to say we all had a tear in our eye, but she gave us each a kiss and there was almost a tear in her eye.

"She and Mimi hugged and you could just tell that we had found somebody and met somebody who fit. She's a very loving woman, a giving woman and a smart woman. She owns six houses and a couple of apartments and she's put it all together since she got divorced three years ago. She is sufficiently independent that she really doesn't have to work too hard for a living and absolutely loves the campaign."

Brother: Nichols wrongly accused

Dallas Morning News

OKLAHOMA CITY — For the first time since Easter, James Nichols got to see his brother this week — once in the courtroom during the arraignment for bombing suspects Terry Nichols and Timothy McVeigh, and then again in prison.

It was a reunion of brothers who have been in the spotlight for months, investigated for their possible roles in the bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building that killed 168 people and injured hundreds more.

Last week that inquiry led to the federal indictment of one brother and the dismissal of charges against the other with prosecutors saying they could not link James Nichols to the case.

James Nichols said Thursday that his own exoneration should show that his brother, too, has been falsely accused.

Though so much has gone on since the two last saw each other, they mostly "chitchatted" and joked around during the three-hour visit at the prison in El Reno, Okla., James Nichols said.

"He's like me. He's telling them, 'Hey, give it your best shot, buddies, because I'm innocent. You can't pin this on me,'" said James Nichols, a 41-year-old organic farmer from Decker, Mich. "He knows he's innocent. If he had any doubts about the truth, then he might have something to be scared of."

He said his younger brother is a bit nervous, "as we all are," about being charged with the worst terrorist attack on U.S. soil.

A spokesman for the U.S. attorney's office could not be reached for comment late Thursday.

James Nichols said he would never believe Terry Nichols had anything to do with the bombing. "I want to see the evidence," he said. "The only way I'd believe it is if it came out of his own mouth."

"He just says he's not involved in it, just like me," James Nichols said.

Terry Nichols is a buddy of McVeigh, whom he met in the Army, later accompanied to gun shows and, friends said, whose vehement anti-government beliefs he shared.

James Nichols said it was a matter of guilt by association, and that the

T. Nichols

How'd they have enough evidence to put me in prison to start with and then not enough evidence to charge me?"

James Nichols was taken into custody as a material witness and his farm was searched on April 21, after authorities said they linked McVeigh to the bombing. McVeigh's Michigan driver's license gave the Nichols farm as his address.

The search of the farm uncovered some compounds that can be used in creating bombs. Informants told the FBI that the Nichols brothers and McVeigh had experimented with various types of explosives on the farm, activities James Nichols and his supporters have depicted as harmless pranks — nothing more than homemade firecrackers.

He points to stories he says aren't true, such as allegations that he had ammonium nitrate on his farm. His fertilizer was made of calcium nitrate, he said. Another said he took $5,000 out of the bank to finance the bombing. "I didn't even have a bank account," he said.

James Nichols said his only crime was to let McVeigh, a drifter, stay at his home from time to time.

He has said he suspects that his brother and McVeigh were set up by the real bombers — "bad apples" within the government.

His government conspiracy views have made him the darling of the conspiracy theorists. And while he was in Oklahoma, he went on a radio show on the For the People Network and was interviewed for a documentary "along the lines of 'Waco: The Big Lie.'"

"All we ask is for the truth to come out," James Nichols said, noting that the slogan on T-shirts that raise money for the defense fund reads: "The rights you save may be your own."

Taxpayers pitch in on costs for speaker's tour security

WASHINGTON (AP) — Taxpayers are helping to foot the bill for protecting House Speaker Newt Gingrich on his national book tour this month.

Plainclothes officers from the U.S. Capitol Police are guarding Gingrich during his 25-city tour. Sgt. Dan Nichols, a spokesman for the Capitol Police, confirmed Friday.

The security for Gingrich while he promotes his best-selling book, "To Renew America," continues the protection normally provided for the House speaker, in Washington and elsewhere, Nichols said.

"We provide that at all times it's necessary ... anywhere in the United States, no matter what activity," Nichols said.

Nichols declined to specify the number of officers provided or the cost, citing security reasons. He would not confirm a report in today's New York Daily News that the bill for meals, air fare and lodging could reach $100,000, or about $10,000 per officer, according to estimates by House Democrats.

A private New York security detail hired by Gingrich's publisher, HarperCollins, also is guarding him during the tour, publicity director Steven Sorrentino confirmed. He declined further comment on the matter.

Sorrentino said the tour, which ends Thursday, "has certainly met all our expectations," drawing large crowds seeking Gingrich's autograph. The book has been No. 1 on the New York Times' best-seller list for six straight weeks, he said.

Gingrich spokesmen didn't immediately return a telephone call seeking comment.

Killer executed despite protests

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — "Jesus, your baby is coming home," a killer said Friday before his voice trailed away in a hysterical cry as he was executed for strangling a 16-year-old neighbor.

"I am the happiest man in the world," Sylvester Adams, 39, said as he lay strapped to a prison gurney, lethal injection needles in his arms. "I'm not afraid to die ... I'm not crazy."

Passengers pulled driver's leg

What's what?

In the typical New York City horse-drawn omnibus of 1835, the driver sat high overhead, and to get his attention, the passengers below pulled on a rope attached to his leg.

Stronger dollar anxieties in market overblown

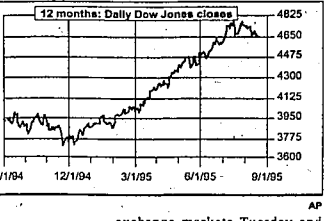

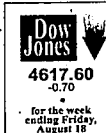

NEW YORK (AP) — While money traders gobbled dollars this past week, stock investors got a case of currency indigestion.

The strengthening dollar caused many Wall Streeters to dump chip stocks on fears that multinational profits will suffer if American export prices rise.

But analysts believe the concerns are overblown and say that the stock market could actually benefit from the surging currency if it brings a flow of foreign capital.

"There's a tradeoff," said Anthony O'Bryan, a market analyst at A.G. Edwards & Sons in St. Louis.

"Multinationals could suffer from a strong dollar, but it can also bring foreign money into U.S. investments. That's a positive for the broad market because the dollar had not been falling precipitously in recent weeks. Interventions that are unexpected usually guarantee a lift-off for the currency as foreign exchange traders speculate on their own government holdings before the dollar rises more.

The dollar reached its highest levels against the Japanese yen and German mark in nearly six months. The currency eased back as the week progressed, falling after the week's first day as America's trade deficit unexpectedly widened in July to its second worst level.

Still, the dollar finished on a strong note. On Friday, the dollar fetched 97.40 Japanese and 1.4760 German marks. A week ago, the dollar bought 93.85 yen and 1.4382 marks.

Bond fund woes: Buy high, sell low

NEW YORK (AP) — Over the past couple of years, many investors in bond mutual funds have gotten caught in a classic financial trap.

They stampeded into bond funds in 1993, when the market was strong, just in time to get clobbered in the great bond sell-off of 1994.

And in '94, with the market going into the tank, they scurried to sell their bond funds just in time to miss the great bond rally of 1995.

In that story, financial advisers say, lies a message about the difficulty of trying to succeed at investing by buying when a market looks attractive and selling when it looks bad.

All through 1993, investors poured money into bond funds at the rate of $9 billion to $12 billion a month, notes Badie Perry at the investment management firm of David L. Babson & Co. in Cambridge, Mass.

This wave of enthusiasm continued into January 1994, when they made net purchases of $11.1 billion. By then, however, a long decline in interest rates, and accompanying rise in bond prices and bond fund net asset values, had begun to reverse itself.

Bond rates, which had turned upward in late '93, took off as the Federal Reserve began a year-long campaign of tightening credit conditions.

From March 1994 through January of this year, bond funds had 11 straight months of net outflows. The red ink crested at $10.9 billion last November, the very month when the bond market was hitting bottom.

It was likely, Perry observes, "a number of those who sold at the lows said to themselves 'never again — I don't ever want to own another bond.'"

Unfortunately, just when that attitude became pervasive, bonds were at the most attractive valuation levels in years.

"Now that the bond market has staged a strong recovery," Perry adds, "individuals have stopped retreating from bond funds, again reacting to events much too late."

In cautionary tales like this, many observers have traditionally seen evidence that the small investor just isn't very smart. But a lack of intelligence may not be the problem at all. Last year, there were many thoughtful reasons to dislike bonds — among them the fact that they had just completed a multiyear rally that had taken interest rates, and thus bond yields, to their lowest levels in a generation.

Many of the most sophisticated professional investors were shunning bonds too. Indeed, a little recklessness in buying bonds at this year ago.

The trouble is, what a reasonable, intelligent investor can conclude by thinking about the markets is usually already reflected in the market.

So if you want to succeed at timing an investment like bonds, you have to have an approach that allows you to buy when they look truly undesirable, and sell when they seem the ideal thing to own.

One way to get around this difficulty is a "buy-and-hold" approach to investing that ignores economic and market fluctuations.

"Long-term holders of bonds purchased before 1993 have done well with them," Perry observes. "Even buying bonds near their 1993 highs was not a bad mistake for patient investors who hung on and rode through the big decline."

"However, selling at 1994's low prices was a big mistake for those who panicked."

As the experience of last year shows, buy-and-hold investing can take a lot of discipline. Alternatively, you can try to time the markets using some system or philosophy that you hope will override the pull of emotion and conventional thinking, and thus enable you to buy low and sell high.

Many people attempt to do this, whether they think of themselves as market timers or not. Some claim success, or at least believe that the risks of market-timing endeavors are justified by the rewards that can be gained.

But the evidence of data like the 1993-94 flows of money into and out of bond funds certainly is chastening. It strongly suggests that when they try to time the markets, the majority of investors don't succeed.

Post office to test new business mail delivery

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service plans to test a new local bulk mail service for small businesses starting next month.

The three-city test will provide low-cost advertising mail service to businesses sending as few as 200 items in a neighborhood, post office spokesman Frank Brennan said.

Currently larger volumes are needed to get the low third-class rates and small companies often cannot afford the cost of mass mailing, he explained.

In the so-called Neighborhood Mail system, companies will be allowed to bring mail ads to a local post office for delivery at every stop on a letter carrier's route. The cost is expected to average 11.7 cents per item, he explained.

The Postal Service saves the cost of sorting the mail and doesn't have to transport it except to take it to homes. Brennan said the one-year test will start Sept. 11 in Rochester, N.Y., New Orleans, La., and Sacramento, Calif.

As part of the test, Brennan said, the Postal Service would provide small neighborhood businesses with a brochure giving hints on preparing advertising mail and could provide census-type data about various neighborhoods for a fee ranging from $30 to $50.

Simplified addresses would be used on the Neighborhood Mail, omitting the names of people and simply using addresses, which can be obtained from the Postal Service.

Newspapers and large mailing companies have indicated a concern about the program, which they fear could eat into their business.

Micron plant worries farmer

LEHI, Utah (AP) — A Utah County, Utah farmer is worried around-the-clock construction of Micron Technology Inc.'s new plant near Lehi could harm his animals.

Dane Dixon said the powerful lights used for nighttime construction of the $1.5 billion computer chip plant could inhibit the growth of the mink's winter coats and alter their reproductive cycles.

"I know they'd have some lights, but not like the lights they were using," said Dixon, who owns an eight-acre mink farm on the other side of State Route 92 from Micron's property. "Some nights, it's just like dusk down here."

Dixon, who has raised mink for 10 years on his unincorporated Utah County property, said that of six mink ranches in the area, his farm is nearest the huge banks of lights.

Dixon averages about $50 per mink-pelt, but said his 10,000 mink won't be worth a penny if they don't

1st female cadet quits military academy; other cadets cheer

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — The first female cadet at The Citadel quit the state military college Friday after missing the crucial, grueling "hell week" indoctrination.

"I will tell you right now, today has been the hardest day of my life," Shannon Faulkner said. "The past 2½ years came crashing down on me in an instant."

Just one week after two U.S. Supreme Court justices paved the way for her to enter the school's all-male cadet corps, her attorney Suzanne Coe said Ms. Faulkner was overcome by nerves. "It's very hard for her," Ms. Coe said. "She's a 20-year-old girl and it's hard to anticipate what happens next."

Ms. Faulkner said she had "no idea" what she would do next.

"I know my life is going to be miserable for a while," she said.

"I'll just have to deal with it the best I can."

"It's not going to do my attorneys any good if I just get in there and have a mental breakdown or anything like that," she said.

When Ms. Faulkner's decision filtered out around campus, other cadets cheered and horns sounded.

The choice ended a week of speculation about Ms. Faulkner's fitness that began Monday when she was taken to the infirmary with a heat-related illness.

She spent most of her first week under a doctor's treatment and was taken to a hospital for tests Thursday morning.

"I don't think there's any dishonor in leaving," Ms. Faulkner said. "I think there's injustice in my staying and killing myself just for the political point."

On Thursday, Ms. Faulkner was examined at a hospital and deemed fit to return to duty today. But she again missed activities this morning after infirmary staff said she was not ready.

Ms. Faulkner battled in court for 2½ years to join the all-male corps. A week ago today, the day before new cadets were to arrive at the school, two Supreme Court justices turned down without comment a bid by college officials to keep her out.

Heat illnesses are not uncommon at the college. College officials said one cadet was taken on a stretcher from a physical fitness test Wednesday for treatment of heat stress. Two others were taken to the hospital Thursday for treatment.

Ms. Faulkner "couldn't keep anything down until last evening and I am told she was able to keep some toast down last night," said Citadel spokeswoman Judith Fluck.

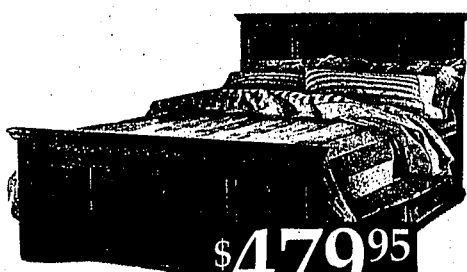

Ms. Faulkner has been under continual stress since early 1993, when she launched her court fight after The Citadel withdrew its acceptance of her college application when officials realized she was a woman. References to her gender had been deleted from her high school transcripts.

Nuke protester ordered back to court

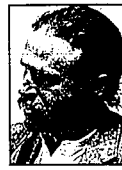

By William Brock
Times-News writer

POCATELLO — The long-running legal saga of Bill Chisholm, an anti-nuclear activist from Buhl, took another turn Friday when he was ordered to appear in court to explain why he hasn't paid restitution for throwing red paint on a train carrying radioactive waste into Idaho.

Chisholm said he has paid — with a check made out to himself, Idaho Gov. Phil Batt and Bannock County, where the incident took place. Chisholm said he'll endorse the check only if five anti-nuke conditions are met.

That doesn't qualify as restitution, said Cara Lewis, of the Pocatello city attorney's office.

'I'm not a threat to society and I don't deserve to be in jail. But if no one will protect the state of Idaho from this stuff coming in, then I've got to do something.'

— Bill Chisholm

"The check is not payable to the victim," Lewis said Friday. "He hasn't paid restitution, which is why we issued the notice to show cause. It's a standard procedure that we take with all people who don't pay."

Chisholm must appear in Magistrate Court on Sept. 5. If he fails to convince the judge, he could be jailed, fined, or found in contempt of court.

"I'm not a threat to society and I don't deserve to be in jail," Chisholm said in a letter to the court Friday. "but if no one will protect the state of Idaho from this stuff coming in, then I've got to do something."

At issue is Chisholm's atonement for hurling paint to "mark" a radioactive waste train bound for the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, west of Idaho Falls. The train stops the Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer, which provides drinking water for tens of thousands of southern Idaho residents; the U.S. Navy has been storing its nuclear wastes there since the 1950s.

The paint-hurling incident occurred on Oct. 23, 1992 at a railroad overpass in Pocatello.

Chisholm later was convicted of mail-

Private religious school adds grades; another cuts offerings until next year

By Karen Tolkinen
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Private education has taken one step forward and one step back in the Magic Valley.

St. Edward's Catholic School has announced that it will add grades seven and eight when school starts up Aug. 28.

After two years of planning, the school will open the year with at least 14 students in those grades, said principal Margaret Peck. Students can still register.

But Immanuel Lutheran School has notified parents that it has temporarily suspended its seventh and eighth grades because the eighth-grade teacher retired and the seventh-grade teacher quit.

"We plan to open it next year," said principal Diana Westermann. "We just need to find the right person to teach (those) grades."

Private education has burgeoned in the Magic Valley this year. A new Christian junior and senior high will open this fall as well as a Ben Franklin Academy. Parents who enroll their children in these schools hesitate to criticize public education but say they want the opportunity to have a stronger voice in their children's schooling.

"When I came to Twin Falls four years ago, it concerned me that there wasn't enough private education," said Kate Schmid, whose 13-year-old daughter, Emily, will be an eighth-grader at St. Edward's Catholic School. She said she was excited to see more choices.

The growth in private education may have resulted in higher-quality public education, she said.

"It's really healthy for the schools and for the public education, like business competition," she said. "Maybe the status quo isn't so great, maybe we have to investigate things a little."

In a small school, her daughter will have a greater chance to grow academically, she said.

"I want to see private education thrive in Twin Falls," she said. "I think that whole idea of developing the individual potential is really important, and it's more likely to happen in a small-school environment. There are always kids who rise to the top, but I think all kids should be given the chance to rise to the top."

It's possible that parents are especially drawn to private schools now that they have the opportunity to enroll their children in selected public schools activities simultaneously.

Schmid said her daughter may take band or orchestra classes from the junior high schools or take advantage of a broader course curriculum at the high school.

Parents at St. Edward's will pay $168 a month for nine months. The school is accredited with the state, Peck said, and offers all state-required courses.

Business people and those in the medical profession will also spend some time teaching the students.

"Kids won't have access to some of the labs in the local junior highs," she said. "However, we have people who have offered to come in as resources for us."

Perot fan finds inspiration at Dallas gabfest

By Frank E. Lockwood
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Retired Twin Falls travel agent Joe Salisbury is back from Ross Perot's political mega-rally in Dallas, and he says he's impressed with the diminutive Texas billionaire.

"He's a real nice guy. He's smaller in stature than we thought, but he was a gracious host to everybody there," Salisbury said Thursday. Salisbury's wife, Mary, even got to shake hands with Perot — the man who captured 19 percent of the vote in the 1992 presidential election.

Sitting on the front row, the Salisbury's were just a few feet away from some of the nation's most powerful figures: House Speaker Newt Gingrich, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole among them. The Salisbury's heard dozens of speeches on topics such as lobbyists, economics,

'(Dole) was a good statesman, but I just kind of got the impression of politics as usual with Dole.'

— Joe Salisbury, Twin Falls and political reform.

Salisbury liked most of what he heard — even Jesse Jackson's speech entitled "The Ladder of Opportunity."

"I was impressed. He wasn't radical at all," Salisbury says. But he liked GOP presidential contender Pat Buchanan's speech better.

As for Dole: "(He) was a good statesman, but I just kind of got the impression of politics as usual with Dole. He's been in office a long time."

About 4,000 Americans, including 10 presidential hopefuls, flocked to the Dallas Convention Center for Perot's three-day conference. An Oregon contingent drove to Dallas, passing through the Magic Valley as they crisscrossed halfway across the country.

Perot called the gathering "the most important political event of the year." United We Stand America's 1995 National Conference was "an historic opportunity," Perot said.

Salisbury, a devout Republican, suggests it was an inspiring three days. "We became aware of problems in our government and that there's hope for correcting almost all of them," he said.

"I am very glad we went," he added. But Salisbury isn't chanting "Run, Ross, Run." And he opposes forming a third party to take on the GOP and the Democrats. "I'm among those who think (Perot's) running before split the vote and enabled Clinton to get in and I regret that," Salisbury said. At one Dallas session, Salisbury told the audience "we'd be foolish to try and have a third party."

While speeches ran from 10 in the morning until 10 at night, there were a few distractions. Souvenir hawkers converged on the convention center, and salesmen set up shop in an exhibit hall nearby, peddling books by Perot, Gingrich, and a host of other politicians.

Salisbury said he enjoyed hearing that candidates stress the importance of civility, decency, honesty, and acknowledging God. And he's already ordered a book that will include transcripts of all 36 speeches.

"Boy, they were masterful talks," Salisbury added.

Killer seeks release from prison

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls killer is seeking parole after spending 12 years in prison for strangling a woman to death.

Jon LeRoy Sjogren, 43, pleaded guilty to choking 61-year-old Donna Hartley Smith with a telephone cord inside her Twin Falls home on the night of May 26, 1981.

His parole hearing will be held at 1 p.m. Monday before a three-member state Commission of Pardons and Parole at the Idaho Correctional Institution in Orofino, according to a department news release.

Before Sjogren killed Hartley, the pair had been fighting over a bottle of her whiskey; Sjogren had gone on a drug-and-alcohol binge earlier that evening, he told a judge. He had pleaded guilty to second-degree murder.

Meanwhile, state commissioners denied parole last month for Danny Egelston of Twin Falls, sentenced in January as an accessory to murder in the April 1993 stabbing death of 42-year-old Thomas Pont in Twin Falls.

Egelston's tentative discharge date has been set for July 1, 1996, according to a clerk at the Commission of Pardons and Parole.

Former Mountain Home resident Shirley Werland is scheduled to have a parole hearing sometime in late October in the Boise state prison for vehicular manslaughter. Werland was sentenced to three years in prison in 1992 for killing 15-year-old Angela Jackson during a drunk-driving accident in Gooding County.

Last spring, the Idaho Supreme Court upheld an appeal of her sentence, which Werland said was unfair because the other parolees in Jackson's car were allowed to testify during her sentencing hearing, and because her husband has serious heart trouble.

Gooding fights more problems with sewer lines

GOODING — A ground collapse in an alley off Third East in late spring required city crews to repair yet another consequence of a deteriorating sewer system.

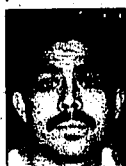

Concrete sewer pipes installed in the 1950s have crumbled with time, resulting in an uncontained sewage flow in the worst areas. A wet spring made the problem worse.

City Superintendent Todd Bunn reports there are "at least a dozen areas" of concern. Greg Misbach of the state Division of Environmental Quality in Twin Falls says that Gooding is on a priority list for revolv-

Graphic mauling video barred from Western Idaho Fair

BOISE (AP) — Sponsors of a proposed ballot measure to ban the use of bait and hounds in black bear hunting said their free speech rights were violated Friday when Western Idaho Fair officials barred them from showing fairgoers a graphic video of a bear being mauled by hounds.

Said fair manager Don Bich said he was only trying to protect the public on TV.

"I'm not trying to take sides in this," he said. "This is not a political issue to me."

The Idaho Coalition United for Bears leased a booth at the fair, which started Friday, to gather signatures from registered voters in an effort to put its initiative on Idaho's November 1996 ballot.

Coalition members planned to show a video at the booth of a bear hunt using hounds "to portray the ghastly cruelty to both bears and hounds that takes place during such hunts," the group said in a statement.

"I-CUB believes that this is a clear infringement of our right of free speech and unwarrantedly denies us the opportunity to present our message to the public," the coalition said, adding that an attorney was being consulted to determine the group's legal options.

... I felt that (the video) was very graphic and that material such as that video probably should not be viewed by family oriented fairgoers.'

season when black bears are nursing their cubs.

The Sportsmen's Heritage Defense Fund said it represents a number of state and national groups, including the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation, the Foundation for North American Wild Sheep, Safari Club International, the Wildlife Legislative Fund of America and the Archery Manufacturers of America.

Fund officials said in a statement that the initiative poses a threat to Idaho's hunting industry, which they said provides $400 million a year to the state's economy.

"The animal rights movement if successful will irreparably harm a proven management system," the fund's statement said. "We are asking Idahoans who dearly appreciate wildlife, farm animals, and animals in general as part of our heritage not to sign on to this issue. The hunting industry would prefer to place their funds into conservation rather than to defend a system which has a proven track record."

Idaho and Alaska are the only states that allow both hunting and hound hunting of black bears.

Mother says she was unaware dead child had been abused

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The mother of a 22-month-old girl who was fatally beaten by the woman's boyfriend says she had no idea her child was being abused until after the toddler died.

Evelyn Hoover said she had been noticing increasing numbers of bruises on her daughter Nicole's body but believed they were the result of a blood disease that the child's doctor diagnosed two weeks ago.

"He just kept telling me that it was a mild case, and there was nothing they could do," Hoover said. "How did I not know?"

Hoover's boyfriend, Douglas Carlson, 26, of Rigby, was charged with first-degree murder Thursday.

Police said the child's injuries — cerebral hemorrhaging, several broken ribs, multiple bruises and a fractured leg — likely resulted from multiple beatings over a two-week period.

Hoover, 22, took the toddler to the hospital Wednesday afternoon when she was unable to wake the child after she returned from a preschool meeting with her 3-year-old daughter. Carlson was baby-sitting Nicole while Hoover was gone.

Carlson drove them to the hospital and while doctors tried to save Nicole, Hoover said.

"He sat there and cried with me, and consoled me," Hoover said.

But as the hours passed and she answered the questions of social workers, Hoover said she began to realize that her daughter had been the victim of abuse.

"I knew that he was the only person who could have done it," she said.

Carlson, who was awaiting sentencing on a drug conviction, was taken into custody late Wednesday on a charge of injuring a child and after Nicole was pronounced dead early Thursday morning, he was charged with first-degree murder. He remained jailed in lieu of $350,000 bond pending an Aug. 31 preliminary hearing.

Hoover was confused and angry in the aftermath.

"He was good to us," she said at one point, then paused, choked with emotion and said, "He killed my baby."

Hoover said she has known Carlson since they were teenagers and began seeing him this spring when she returned to Idaho Falls after separating from her husband.

It was Aug. 6 when she first noticed a bruise on Nicole, this one on her back. She said she dismissed that as the result of children playing. Then she noticed four small bruises on the child's side and the limp.

That prompted a trip to the doctor, she said, but the doctor attributed the bruising and limp to a blood disease that makes the victim subject to bruising and sore joints.

A day after, Hoover said she noticed 15 to 20 small bruises all along Nicole's side, but repeated trips to the doctor never yielded any change in the original blood disease diagnosis.

"I love her dearly. She was mommy's girl," Hoover said as she recalled the child. "She was really outgoing, and determined... I can't believe she's gone."

But spokesman Lynn Fritchman of Boise said Bich, after previewing the approximately six-minute video before the fair opened, determined it was too graphic, displayed too much cruelty and violence and was not suitable for family viewing.

"My intent is not to violate anybody's rights to free speech," Bich said. "I viewed the video and requested that they not show it at the Western Idaho Fair because I felt that it was very graphic and that material such as that video probably should not be viewed by family oriented fairgoers."

Meanwhile, hunting and fishing organizations announced plans to fight the proposed initiative, and also would ban a spring hunting season when black bears are nursing their cubs.

The Sportsmen's Heritage Defense Fund said it represents a number of state and national groups, including the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation, the Foundation for North American Wild Sheep, Safari Club International, the Wildlife Legislative Fund of America and the Archery Manufacturers of America.

Fund officials said in a statement that the initiative poses a threat to Idaho's hunting industry, which they said provides $400 million a year to the state's economy.

"We are asking Idahoans who dearly appreciate wildlife, farm animals, and animals in general as part of our heritage not to sign on to this issue. Judge releases 1 brother, binds other over on charge he planned killing

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A federal judge Friday released one of two brothers jailed earlier this month for allegedly plotting to murder an Idaho state trooper, but bound the other over for trial.

U.S. District Court Judge Ronald Boyce determined at a preliminary hearing Friday that there was insufficient evidence to continue holding Michael Wicklund, 37, of Downey, Idaho.

Eric Wicklund, 33, of Ogden was bound over on charges of conspiracy and plotting "to commit murder-for-hire for pecuniary value" in a complaint filed by the U.S. attorney's office.

The two were arrested in Downey Aug. 4 by the FBI and state agents after allegedly buying a gun from an undercover officer.

Prosecutors contend that Eric Wicklund plotted to kill Idaho State Police Trooper Robert Laumann. Eric Wicklund is married to Laumann's ex-wife, and allegedly wanted the trooper dead so she could gain custody of the children, who live with their father, and proceeds from his life insurance.

Eric Wicklund will remain in the Salt Lake County Jail, awaiting trial by a federal grand jury. Assistant U.S. Attorney Brooke Wells said she would seek an indictment from the grand jury on Thursday, but U.S. Attorney spokesman Dave Schwendimier declined to say Friday whether that happened.

According to the criminal complaint, Eric Wicklund allegedly asked his older brother to help him kill the trooper.

A confidential informant notified authorities of Eric Wicklund's plans on July 26, and he allegedly told an undercover officer that the trooper would be the first of several hits.

He allegedly offered to do hired hits for $5,000 a murder, unless the victims were "somebodies," in which case the price jumped to $50,000.

Wicklund intended to murder seven to nine people per month, earning vast sums of money," the indictment said.

In the criminal complaint against Michael Wicklund thrown out Friday, prosecutors said his compensation was to the $2,000 worth of Herbal Life products that his younger brother would buy from him each month.

Michael Wicklund is an unemployed mechanic and water-softer repairman. Neighbors of Eric Wicklund said he and his wife recently moved into the duplex in Ogden and no one knew much about them.

If convicted, Eric Wicklund could face 10 or more years in prison. His parents, who live in Kayville, said he served time for murder in Minnesota while a juvenile.

Forester meets Cove-Mallard Coalition

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — New Regional Forester Harold Salwasser had a first-hand look at the volatile situation in the Cove-Mallard area of Idaho's Nez Perce Forest.

The head of the Forest Service in northern Idaho, Montana and North Dakota was attending an open house at the forest supervisor's office in Grangeville Thursday when activists demonstrated outside and demanded to meet him.

Salwasser talked with them outside for several minutes.

"This is not, in our opinion, an open house," activist Jake Krellick said. The Cove-Mallard Coalition said they were trying to give Salwasser a letter detailing the illegalities in the timber projects there.

The environmentalists object to the road building and logging in the roadless area, warning 81 million board feet of timber will be cut, leaving behind 200 clearcuts and 145 miles of road.

Christopher Baldwin, Leslie Hematze and Todd Shuman were taken into custody after climbing atop the office and displaying a sign that read: "Rescue Cove-Mallard, the Greater Salmon Sella-way."

The three were charged with misdemeanor trespassing.

"Citizens have a right to state their opinion, and exercise their First Amendment rights to free speech," Salwasser said. "But I am concerned that this group chooses to follow orders that block people's legal rights to access the forest."

"I think it's unfair some of them choose to put themselves in harm's way and stimulate other people to talk about violent reactions."

Twelve other people were arrested earlier Thursday at the entrance to the Jack Creek road, the newest of the first three timber sales in the Cove-Mallard.

Authorities said two activists suspended themselves in tripods blocking the road. Some chained themselves to the tripod poles and others laid down on the road in an effort to block traffic.

"They refused to move and were taken into custody. The 12 refused to reveal their names and were charged with federal misdemeanors."

Krellick called it the fourth annual International Wild Rockies Wilderness Day.

Jerome to upgrade treatment plant

By H. R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME - The City Council decided to spend money to save money.

By unanimous vote, council members approved spending $14,976 for a chlorination system for the city wastewater treatment plant. By installing the new system, about 360,000 gallons of water would be saved each month, resulting in a savings of $3,300 per year.

"That's enough water to service a small subdivision south of town," Councilman Dennis Moore said.

Eight tons of chlorine, now being used at the plant, would no longer be needed. The city would save $2,880 per year in chlorine costs, according to a report from city Administrator Larry Paine.

Another $9,000 would be saved, because the efficiency of the new system would eliminate the need to move water pumps used for land application of waste water.

The requirement for the chlorination system occurred when a new flow meter was put in service about six months ago.

"Loss of flow proportion capability has resulted in increased chlorine usage - about 1 1/2 tons per month - exceptions to the EPA permit and yellowing of the grass when the wastewater was applied to the lawns at the plant," according to Paine's report.

West One Bank would handle the financing of the system.

In other business, the council:

• Heard a report from Chief of Police James Dahl that 50 items had been sent to the crime lab as part of the ongoing investigation of the murder of an elderly woman last week.

• Were following up on several leads. The investigation is going as well as can be expected, but not as well as I'd like," Dahl said.

• Discussed the problem of graffiti that had been spray painted on sidewalks in several areas of Jerome. "The language painted with the blue paint is not acceptable for a city like Jerome. I'd like to set up a reward system," Moore said. Use of the Crime Stoppers system was suggested as a means of getting help from citizens who might witness a crime.

• Unanimously approved paying $3,000 for the quarterly analysis of sludge at the wastewater treatment plant.

• Denied a request made by Joe Ortiz to connect his business on So. Lincoln to city water services. "I don't see how we can justify hooking up anybody outside city limits - we have to take care of our city people first," Moore said.

• Unanimously approved a request by William Beamish to start selling ice cream as he drove through residential streets during the summer and early fall months.

• Held a public hearing and heard the first reading of a proposal to create a local improvement district for people first. It was approved along Alder Street.

Minidoka parents strain at decision to drop tutor program

By Eric Goodell
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT - The removal of Title I services from Minidoka County junior high schools, some parents say, is comparable to throwing someone out of a boat without a life jacket.

"My daughter will be sunk," Kim Thueson told the School Board Wednesday night at its monthly meeting. Thueson has a ninth-grader - who will be attending West Minico this year.

The school district's recent decision dominated the meeting. Title I, formerly called Chapter 1, is a program that provides academically struggling math and reading students with extra help, including teachers and aides.

The school district is following newly released federal guidelines in focusing the money where it is needed most - at the elementary level, particularly students in kindergarten through third grade. Assistant Superintendent Robert Pavlock said.

The matter has been an emotional one, and even some School Board members worry that some junior high students may not be able to succeed without extra help. Board member Norma Claridge wondered if the program could be phased out, instead of being dropped all at once. If not, she hopes a volunteer effort can be organized to help the students.

Phasing out the program wouldn't be feasible, Superintendent Mike Bishop said. Research shows that the district will see more positive results by using Title I money for younger children, he said.

Because of the upcoming policy of including special education students and their aides in regular classrooms, Bishop said these aides will also be able to help former Title I students.

"I can't tell you that every classroom will have an aide," Bishop said.

He said he thought most of the students would be able to do well in the classroom and that West Minico Junior High has the lowest student-teacher ratio in the district, at 21.5 students per teacher.

District resident Rod Thueson said he hoped the district could find a way to get more funding to help junior high students.

District officials say that numbers of junior high school students filling out free and reduced lunch eligibility forms have declined, making the junior highs ineligible for more Title I funds.

Bishop suspects that there are a number of eligible students who don't fill out the forms. He pointed out that some younger brothers and sisters of junior high students have filled out the forms, but the junior high student neglects to.

He said it might be possible to find funds in the budget in order to hire teachers or aides for the junior high students.

The School Board would have to make that decision.

Pavlock said the new federal guidelines are making other school districts evaluate where their Title I money is spent.

Dale Thornberry, director of operations for the Twin Falls School District, said the district will wait for classes to start before deciding on whether to make changes.

In other matters, the board heard from Mary Gonzales, whose daughter, Evette, uses a wheelchair. Evette will be attending Minico High School this year.

Gonzales told board members she was concerned that the handicapped accessible bathroom at the school wasn't completed yet.

In addition, she learned that a wheelchair lift at the school might not be available to the district for six months, despite her daughter having classes scheduled for the school's second semester.

Pavlock said he hoped Evette's schedule could be changed to accommodate the inaccessibility of that floor.

Gonzales said she was dismayed that the school district has taken so long to make plans for the handicapped. She told the district more than two years ago about her daughter's impending attendance at the school.

Officials won't pull steelhead season

SUN VALLEY (AP) - The Idaho Fish and Game Commission has decided against scrapping the steelhead fishing season scheduled to begin Sept. 1 on the Snake and Salmon rivers, despite one of the worst runs in years.

Commissioners, who wrapped up a two-day meeting Friday in Sun Valley, put off a decision on delaying or canceling the steelhead fishing season on the Clearwater River, which is scheduled to begin Oct. 15.

Idaho Department of Fish and Game spokesman Jack Trueblood said biologists would continue collecting data on the size of the run, and the Fish and Game Commission may decide at its early October meeting on the fate of the season for so-called B-run steelhead. Those outgoing trout return to the Clearwater after two years in the Pacific Ocean.

The season for the generally smaller A-run steelhead returning to the Snake and Salmon rivers after one year at sea, will go on as planned, with limits of two steelhead per day, four in possession and 10 for the season.

From July 1 through July 15, the number of returning steelhead passing Bonneville Dam on the Columbia River was 73 percent below the same period last year and 35 percent of the average for the seven largest steelhead runs years from 1980 through 1994.

Gooding

ing loan funds through the DEQ. These are 20-year loans at 4.5 percent interest. He said that the problems might be solved by spending $200,000 to $250,000 every other year over a 10-year period.

The City Council also is investigating available grants for the repair work.

Bunn suspects that many small towns in the Magic Valley are experencing similar problems with their aging sewer systems. This means there will be even more competition for grant dollars.

According to Misbach, there are two main concerns with the old system. If a lot of storm water or ground water gets into the system, the waste treatment plant costs will rise for treating the increase. In a very dry season, the uncontained sewage could find its way through the ground into the aquifer, contaminating drinking water.

In the meantime, Bunn and his crew are replacing the crumpled pipes with PVC pipe as problems arise.

Gooding's 12-year-old waste water treatment plant was updated to federal Environmental Protection Agency requirements a year ago with a DEQ revolving-fund loan of $750,000.

Chisholm

cious injury to property. In March, he was ordered by a magistrate judge to pay a $300 fine and $1,782 restitution for cleaning, then repainting, the paint-spattered railcar.

Chisholm said he paid the $300 fine and sent a fraction of the restitution to the proper address.

"I paid $200 restitution because I felt that was the justifiable cost for removing $4, worth of paint," Chisholm said. The balance of the restitution money was converted into a cashier's check - with five conditions for cashing it.

The conditions call for:

• A moratorium on all nuclear waste shipments.

• A comprehensive national nuclear waste policy that "protects and respects the sovereignty of states, counties, tribes and individuals in order that waste does not get forced on the weakest political entity."

• A national energy policy that emphasizes alternative technology, energy efficiency, and a gradual phase-out of nuclear power.

• A national nuclear waste commission to wrest radioactive waste disposal away from the Department of Energy and the Department of Defense.

• A reduction of nuclear arms production as part of an "aggressive campaign for global nuclear disarmament."

Chisholm's restitution check has been cashed "and I haven't heard from anybody, either," he said.

Justices grant new drug trial for Lewiston man

BOISE (AP) - The Idaho Supreme Court has ordered a trial for the president of a Lewiston motorcycle club who was convicted of drug charges after a judge admitted bags of an unidentified white powder into evidence.

The high court ruled unanimously on Friday that 2nd District Judge Ron Schilling should have barred the evidence against Charles W. Scitler, who was convicted of possession of methamphetamine with intent to deliver and failure to affix a drug tax stamp. But only a 3-2 majority of the court agreed that Schilling's decision was not a "harmless error" and that Scitler should get a new trial.

Justices Cathy Silak and Linda Copple Trout dissented.

Scitler was president of the Hiwaymen Motorcycle Club when officers who searched the group's Lewiston clubhouse found a bag of methamphetamine and two bags of an unidentified white powder that was not a controlled substance.

Schilling allowed admission of the unidentified white powder after the prosecutor argued that the bags contained a cutting agent used by drug dealers to dilute methamphetamine.

Justice Byron Johnson wrote for the Supreme Court's majority that since there was no proof the white powder was a cutting agent, it was irrelevant to whether Scitler had possession of the methamphetamine with intent to deliver.

U.N. inspector: Iraq provides new info on weapons program

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq has revealed new details about its clandestine weapons program, the top U.N. inspector said Friday, cooperation that appears linked to the defection of the country's leading weapons official.

Rolf Ekeus, a Swedish disarmament expert, said Iraqi officials blamed the defecting U.N. inspector Kamel al-Majid, for concealing the data.

The Iraqis provided Ekeus with new documents shortly after he arrived Thursday on his latest visit to Baghdad.

"Iraq has started to hand over new information," Ekeus said. "We expect more information during my stay."

He declined to divulge specifics, saying that would come when he reports to the U.N. Security Council. But he acknowledged his team is looking for more documentation on Iraq's biological weapons program.

"Before leaving New York, Ekeus said Iraq had not provided proof that it destroyed vast quantities of anthrax and botulinus.

Iraq acknowledged last month it had produced the toxins between 1985 and 1990. It claims to have destroyed the material in October 1990, but U.N. inspectors have been unable to verify that.

"Iraq had been denying some very obvious things," Ekeus said. "I think we could go forward quickly now. It's a golden opportunity for Iraq."

Ekeus met with Iraq's deputy prime minister, Tariq Aziz, and other top officials in President Saddam Hussein's government. He plans to stay in Iraq until Sunday.

He is expected to travel to Jordan, possibly to meet with al-Majid, Saddam's son-in-law and the architect of the clandestine weapons programs Iraq developed during the 1980s.

Asked if Iraq's cooperation was spurred by al-Majid's defection, Ekeus said, "I don't want to look a gift horse in the mouth. I don't want to debate their motives."

Iraqi officials have not commented on Ekeus' visit, which comes at a time of heightened tension in the region.

In Washington, the Pentagon announced it was moving shiploads of troop supplies closer to the Persian Gulf and making other preparations for a potential U.S. military response to Iraqi troop movements south of Baghdad.

Iraq has been suffering under heavy U.N. sanctions imposed after its 1990 invasion of Kuwait.

The Security Council has said it will not consider lifting the punitive measures until Iraq proves it has destroyed its nuclear, chemical and biological weapons programs.

The sanctions are reviewed every two months and will be debated again next month.

Atrocities noted in occupied zones

ZAGREB, Croatia (AP) — Bulldozed earth, hastily dumped bodies, chopped-off fingers.

That sort of new evidence of Croatian atrocities emerged Friday in U.N. reports from regions that Croat fighters retook last week.

The U.N. disclosures came a day after the United Nations said numerous homes abandoned by Serbs in southern Croatia were being looted and burned.

Violence against civilians has been one of the hallmarks of the years of war in the Balkans, but tales of horror have grown more intense in the last month as sharp battlefield shifts have sent Muslim, Croat and Serbs alike fleeing for safety.

Muslims were expelled from eastern enclaves in Bosnia by conquering Serbs last month. Two weeks ago, Croatia retook Serb-held lands starting another exodus. Bosnian Serbs, dealing with a crush of refugees from Croatia, are forcing out Croats and Muslims from lands they control.

With each expulsion, come new accounts of terror.

Tales of alleged Serb atrocities in Bosnia also were strengthened Friday with a report that supports U.S. accusations that hundreds, or even thousands, of Muslims were killed in the takeover of the Muslim enclaves of Srebrenica and Zepa.

A reporter for The Christian Science Monitor reported seeing what appeared to be the remains of a human leg protruding from an area that Central Intelligence Agency photos had tentatively identified as one of the mass grave sites.

The reporter, traveling without Bosnian Serb permission, also saw diplomats, photos and other personal effects scattered near the freshly dug earth. And he said he saw blood at a soccer stadium in a nearby town, indicating people there were confined and perhaps shot.

Atrocities surface as war expands

- 1 Croats are near to taking the Serb-held town of Drvar and have pushed toward Bosanski Protocak.
- 2 Croats are reported to be looting and burning areas taken from the Serbs.
- 3 Evidence of killing, mutilation and other atrocities committed by Croatian soldiers has been discovered in area villages.
- 4 The discovery of mass graves confirms accusations that Bosnian Serbs killed hundreds or even thousands of Muslims after overrunning Srebrenica and Zepa.
- 5 Some 10,000 Croatian troops were massed near Dubrovnik, which is a likely staging ground for another offensive against Serbs across the border.

Yeltsin urges democrats to unite in races

MOSCOW (AP) — Four years after an unsuccessful hard-line coup began, President Boris Yeltsin said Friday Russian resistance at the time prevented a large-scale war.

He also used the anniversary to urge democrats to unite in the runup to December parliamentary elections. And he tried to dispel fears raised recently in the media that the KGB, a key player in organizing the failed coup, is regaining strength.

"I realize how dangerous the monopoly of ... the secret services can be, and I will not allow that," Yeltsin said.

The president's comments came in an interview to be published Saturday in the popular newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda. His office and Russian news agencies released excerpts Friday.

On Aug. 18, 1991, several top Soviet leaders put Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev under house arrest and set up an emergency committee to govern Russia and stop reforms.

The next day, Yeltsin led resistance to the coup, climbing on a tank in front of the parliament building and rallying tens of thousands of supporters to defend democracy.

The coup collapsed three days later, hastening the Soviet Union's breakup and making Yeltsin the country's most powerful and popular politician. It remains his finest hour; his popularity has since plummeted.

Taxi violence hurts 23

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Hundreds of rival taxi drivers attacked each other with rocks, fire-bombs and clubs over a traffic dispute in the Taiwanese capital.

At least 23 people were injured and 110 cabs were damaged, police said. State radio said seven of the injured were in serious condition.

The rioting began Wednesday night when drivers of two fiercely competitive taxi associations got into a fight. The drivers summoned help over their radios, and the fighting flared all day.

The cab companies reached a truce Friday.

Brother: Missing aid expert was killed

MOSCOW — The family of an American aid expert who has been missing for months in Chechnya is giving up the search and going home, convinced he was set up by the Russian secret service and killed by Chechen fighters.

"I do not have anything more to do here. I just want to get out of this country," an emotional Christopher Cuny said Friday from his hotel in Moscow.

His brother, Frederick Cuny, disappeared with a Russian translator and two Russian doctors in April while on a relief mission in Chechnya for the New York-based Soros Foundation.

French police seek clues in bombing

PARIS — Stealing the French capital against a "terrorist enterprise," police sealed or removed hundreds of trash cans Friday in a high-profile security sweep after the city's second bombing in three weeks.

The government said it was too soon to know whether Thursday's blast was linked to the July 25 subway bombing that killed seven people and injured 84. This week's attack, near the Arc de Triomphe, wounded 17 people.

No one has claimed responsibility for either attack, but suspicion has fallen on Muslim extremists in Algeria's 3 1/2-year-old civil war. The insurgents are angry that France has supported the military-backed regime in its former colony.

Militants warn against rescuing hostages

SRINAGAR, India — A Kashmiri separatist group threatened Friday evening to kill its four Western hostages if India carries out a plan to rescue them.

The Al-Faran militants, who decapitated a fifth hostage last weekend, repeated their demand that India free 15 jailed Kashmiri militants. The government has refused to do so.

India flew anti-terrorist commandos from its elite "Black Cats" unit and their commander, Ashok Tandon, to the Himalayan state of Jammu-Kashmir this week, police sources said on condition of anonymity.

Earlier Friday, Krishna Rao, the state's federally appointed governor, said India was considering a military operation only as "a last resort."

China claims success in growth control

BEIJING — China claimed success in its efforts to control population growth during the past five years, saying the number of unapproved births dropped to under 10 percent for the first time.

China's population is aging rapidly, with a peak expected in 2040 of 400 million people age 60 or above, the Economic Daily said Friday. The figures came in a report on China's population from 1991 to 1995 and predictions for the future.

It said new births totaled 20 million annually. If this year's birth rate is the same level, the total population by the end of 1995 will be 1.212 billion, below the planned 1.227 billion.

Red tape, legal questions keep nuclear technology idle

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Red tape and legal questions are keeping scientists at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory from using a new technology to process high-level radioactive waste for eventual permanent storage.

"This is not a critical delay, but it's a disappointment," said Dick Lindsay, spokesman for the Argonne National Laboratory-West. "We believe it's time to do something and that the people in the nation are ready to see some movement."

Argonne scientists have developed what they call an electro-refiner that they believe can make highly radioactive waste cheaper and easier to dispose of. Initial use of the technology to process some of the waste already stored at INEL would have been a counterpoint to the running battle between the state and federal governments over efforts to dump even more waste in Idaho.

But Energy Department Nuclear Energy Director Terry Lash told Argonne officials on Thursday that further review could take another month although he acknowledged the device seems ready to go.

And both the anti-nuclear Snake River Alliance and Nuclear Control Institute maintain that the electro-refiner cannot be operated until it is subjected to a full-scale environmental analysis.

The alliance, in fact, has put that argument forth in its petition asking the federal court to void the Energy Department's assessment that 165 more tons of radioactive waste can be safely disposed of at INEL over the next 40 years and conduct a new one, known as the Environmental Impact Statement. That petition greatly mirrors the state's challenge to the department's conclusion.

"Frankly, it needed an EIS when it was proposed, which is when you're supposed to do an EIS, not when you're about to fire it up,"

Alliance spokeswoman Kerry Cooke said.

The alliance and other critics contend the technology is a nuclear weapons proliferation threat and would create more waste problems than it solves. Argonne officials reject the claims.

A review by independent scientists earlier this year found the technology worth pursuing on a limited scale because of its potential to solve some nuclear waste disposal problems.

The electro-refiner would separate highly radioactive spent nuclear fuel into three forms, reducing disposal costs by simplifying expensive safety certifications otherwise required prior to permanent storage.

Utah teen killed in car crash

DAYTON (AP) — A Trumpton, Utah, teen-ager was killed Thursday night when her car rolled over on Idaho Highway 36, three miles north of Dayton in Franklin County.

Christy Hulce, 19, over-corrected the car she was driving about 10 p.m. and it rolled after crossing the highway's center line.

Hulce, who was not wearing a safety belt, was partially ejected and pinned under the car. She died at the scene, an Idaho State Police dispatcher said.

Simplot co-workers find man slain

BOISE — A 45-year-old loner was found slain in his home near Caldwell, Canyon County authorities say.

The body of Juan Batista Uranga Carlzanda, a Simplot Co. employee, was discovered in the kitchen of his home Thursday evening by co-workers who were checking to see why he had failed to report to work for two days.

Uranga had 12 stab wounds in his back and neck, Sheriff George Nourse said. The weapon was a long kitchen knife found at the scene, Nourse said.

Uranga was last seen at his home shortly before midnight Tuesday by a Simplot security officer, the sheriff said.

Nezperce girl dies in collision with truck

GENESEE — A girl from Nezperce died when her car collided head-on with a Mack truck on U.S. Highway 95 three miles north of Geneese, the Idaho State Police reported.

Rosela Marien Sondahl, 15, was killed instantly Thursday, a police dispatcher said. The Saab she was driving was destroyed.

Her parents were accompanying her in a separate car. Sondahl's car drifted into the northbound lane. Truck driver John Taylor of Kamiah attempted to avoid the car, but the two collided head-on.

A passenger in the truck, David Leduc of Lewiston, was thrown through the windshield. He suffered a broken arm. Taylor and another passenger were treated for bruises.

Boise annexation irks county residents

BOISE — The city of Boise is about to gobble up 950 more acres, although the 7,000 county residents there would rather be in Meridian or left alone.

It is the second largest annexation in the city's history, bringing Boise within a half-mile of Meridian. Gradually, the two cities are closing in on each other.

"Boise preaches about all the benefits they bring, but I don't see it," said Emory Christensen, whose home is within the annexation. "I moved into the county because I didn't want to be part of Boise City. I would rather be in Meridian."

For one thing, it is a hefty tax hike living in Boise. The owner of a $100,000 home outside city limits would pay $168 more a year.

Boise's biggest annexation was 1,741 acres in 1962. Most annexations are less than 100 acres.

Job Corps workers revamp penitentiary

BOISE — Carrie Bradley is building her future atop a cellblock at the Old Idaho Penitentiary in Boise.

The decaying, 96-year-old roof on Cellblock No. 3 is being fixed at no cost to the state. But a bill now before the U.S. Senate would dismantle the $1 billion Job Corps program. It would give all the responsibility, but fewer federal dollars, to the states.

Bradley had no plans until she joined the Marsing Job Corps. The federal program has put the Mountain Home girl and dozens of other young people to work on renovations at the Old Pen. Bradley was applying new cement to the roof on Thursday.

Last used in 1973, some parts of the prison need repair because of water damage. The Job Corps labor comes at no cost to the state.

Hayden Lake man faces criminal charges

COEUR D'ALENE — A Hayden Lake logger faces criminal charges of destroying a stream during logging in what officials say is the first case of its kind in Idaho.

Jiri Kozak, 39, faces nine-misdemeanor counts of violating the state's Forest Practices Act. Each count carries up to six months in jail and a $300 fine.

Kootenai County Deputy Prosecutor Joel Hazel said the prosecutor's office expects Kozak to plead guilty to some of the counts. A trial scheduled for earlier this week was canceled because of the pending plea agreement.

Hazel said it is the first time a logger has faced criminal charges under Idaho's 20-year-old Forest Practices Act.

NRC downplays chain reaction theory

LAS VEGAS — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission says the possibility of a spontaneous nuclear chain reaction in a proposed nuclear waste dump at Yucca Mountain is not realistic.

The stand comes in a letter from the NRC's director of nuclear material safety and safeguards. It sides with a team of scientists from the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory in California.

The NRC stand discredits the explosion theory posed last year by nuclear scientists from the national laboratory in Los Alamos, N.M.

The commission said it does not consider the scenarios and conditions suggested by the Los Alamos scientists to be "credible for any realistic repository situation."

Stiles heads FBI Ruby Ridge probe

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — U.S. Attorney Eric H. Holder Jr. has disqualified himself from the criminal investigation of an alleged FBI coverup in the Ruby Ridge case because of a long-time working relationship here with former FBI deputy director Larry Potts, officials said Thursday.

Attorney General Janet Reno announced the inquiry would be turned over to U.S. Attorney Michael R. Stiles of Philadelphia, chairman of the Attorney General's Advisory Committee.

Potts and four other senior FBI officials have been suspended indefinitely in connection with the Justice Department's efforts to determine whether anyone obstructed justice in the course of internal inquiries following the 1992 shooting deaths on Idaho's Ruby Ridge. The wife of a white separatist, their 14-year-old son and a deputy U.S. marshal were killed in an 11-day standoff.

Holder recused himself "for appearances' sake," a spokesman, Kevin Ohlson, said. "He felt strongly that he could be impartial, but discretion is the better part of valor."

Holder had worked with Potts when Holder was in the Justice Department's Office of Public Integrity from 1976 to 1978 and again when he became U.S. Attorney, Ohlson said.

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., said he will open a Senate investigation of the Ruby Ridge controversy Sept. 6 despite a request from the Justice Department that he postpone the hearings until the department's probes and an investigation by a state prosecutor in Idaho are complete.

Specter said he felt he could avoid any conflicts by beginning hearings with events leading to Ruby Ridge and the 1992 siege itself, and leaving allegations of a coverup until later.

A former prosecutor, Specter said he was "familiar with issues such as immunized witnesses and 'taint'" and was confident he could avoid missteps.

Although the Justice Department said it wanted to protect the Idaho investigation as well as its own, the Boundary County prosecutor in charge of the state inquiry, Randall Day, said Thursday the "federal government" has been impeding his progress since May. He recently told state officials in Idaho he was running into "a stone wall" in efforts to interview some 20 FBI witnesses and determine whether any state charges should be brought.

Day said the FBI and Justice Department had made witnesses available to him in February, but did "an about face" in early May and told him it was up to individual agents whether they wanted to be interviewed.

Justice Department spokesman Carl Stern expressed exasperation on being told of Day's remarks and said some of the witnesses Day wants are no longer with the Bureau and others have lawyers who have instructed them not to give interviews. "We have tried to work with Mr. Day to the maximum extent possible," Stern said.

Onlookers watch surfers ride the waves at Horseneck Beach this week in Westport, Mass. Even though Hurricane Felix is hundreds of miles away, rough surf from the storm has closed many beaches along the New England coast.

Wave-hungry Easterners defy warnings, ride storm

REVERE, Mass. (AP) — Thrill-seeking surfers eager to ride the Big Ones rarely seen in the Northeast risked the wrath of Hurricane Felix and swarmed to closed beaches for a board-snapping ride on the storm. "I heard the waves were good, and I itched all day to get out," said 23-year-old Steve Goozey, one of about a dozen surfers at a beach in Scarborough, Maine.

Felix's rough surf has been blamed for at least four deaths since the weekend and closed beaches up and down the East Coast. But that only made it more appealing to those in search of the big waves commonplace in California.

"I'm praying on bended knee every hour that Felix comes up to Long Island," said Ted Shepherd, 34, surfing at Long Beach, N.Y. "I will chase it up the coast — all the way up through Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Maine."

Most beaches from Maine to North Carolina remained closed to swimming Thursday, and violators risked fines. But in many places surfers weren't turned away.

Swimmers on the beach in Salisbury, N.H., generally disregarded lifeguard George Nigro's admonitions to stay at the edge of the water.

"People come down here and think that because they had three swim lessons at the YMCA, they can ride the waves," Nigro said. "People underestimate the surf. On days like this, it humbles us."

The body of a drowned teenager was found off a beach in Deal, N.J., on Monday, still strapped to his surfboard. In Ocean City, Md., a swimmer disappeared in rough surf during a post-midnight dip. Two fishermen drowned Monday off Rhode Island when their boats tipped over in large swells.

No matter. Surfers felt compelled to hit the water.

A surfer takes advantage of the big waves Thursday in Daytona Beach, Fla.

"You could die easily," acknowledged Bill Lewis, bodyboarding off Ruggles Beach in Newport, R.I., adding, "I love the water, getting a free ride."

Body-surfer Steve Anderson pronounced the waves at Revere Beach, the nation's oldest public beach, "the best I've seen in a long time" in the normally flat waters north of Boston.

Joe Farrar, 21, a college student from Stony Brook, N.Y., quit his summer job as a landscaper two weeks ago to take advantage of hurricane season and its promise of higher waves at Long Beach, where the rough surf snapped four boards Thursday.

"To me, it's spiritual," he said. "All you see is sky and water. It keeps you in your place."

In Old Orchard Beach, Maine, 20 people have been pulled out of the surf in the past few days, said lifeguard Jim Bergeron. Most were young surfers who drifted out too far.

"When you rescue them, their eyes are as big as softballs," he said. "They know they made a mistake."

In Nags Head, N.C., the closest coastal point to the heart of the storm, Dennis Doyle and Mike Hoffer stood on the beach squinting at the violent white chop served up by Felix.

Latest piece of Western culture to hit Russia: The bodice-ripper

MOSCOW (AP) — On Moscow's crowded subway, a woman sits reading intently, locked in "The Never-Ending Embrace."

Nearly stands a teen-age girl, swept away in "A Hurricane of Temptation."

These absorbed readers have caught on to Russia's latest, if less than greatest, literary trend: the romance novel. "We all need something sexy after hearing about Yeltsin or Grachev all day," said Natalya Volchikova, referring to the president and his defense minister. She sells dozens of the steamy sagas daily from her makeshift bookstall inside the Kievskaya metro station.

Wearied by recent years of economic hardship, Russian readers are snubbing weightier classics and happily abandoning themselves to a world of breathless beauties and cunning Casanovas.

"He grabbed her, his lips caressing her face," reads a passage from "Enchanted Sunset" by Jo Colloway, the story of a handsome stranger who sweeps into an Oregon town and cures a heart-broken anthropologist.

The popularity of these novels, mostly Russian translations of Western titles, extends far beyond Volchikova's stall.

On a recent bestseller list compiled weekly, six of the capital's top 10 fiction paperbacks were romance novels. "Danielle Steele is becoming our new hero," says Gennady Kuzminov, who compiles the lists for the Moscow weekly Knizhnoye Obozreniye.

But enterprising Russian writers have tuned in to the widespread popularity of these formulaic, quickly written novels too, and are diving into the realm of unbridled passions themselves.

Afficionados of these amorous adventures are quick to emphasize that the books' appeal is romance, not sex.

the subway reflect the shifts in Russia's literary marketplace.

Under the cold care of Soviet censors, readers were protected from such dangerous literature as Western thrillers, pornography and detective novels. Subway passengers clutched Russian classics, the Communist Party daily Pravda or one of the many thick Soviet literary journals. Glasnost and the collapse of Soviet Union freed authors from political censorship, but they brought an economic freedom many writers might now prefer to surrender.

The prose sections of Moscow's Dom Knight, which means House of Books, once the capital's main bookstore, are dominated by translations of Western romance and detective novels. Its philosophy department boasts rows of self-help books, and only two works by Karl Marx.

The popularity of the passion-filled pot boilers may have as much to do with the mood of the readers as the market. Too burned out by everyday concerns arising from inflation and instability to tackle "War and Peace," many are turning to escapist romances.

Such publications are the tumor of our society," said Timur Pulatov, chairman of the International Association of Writers' Unions, one of the successors to the prestigious Soviet Writers' Union.

Pulatov's biggest worry is that the Western romance novel "disease" has infected Russia's literary tradition.

"It makes me feel good. That's why I read it."

— Vera Krylatova, romance novel reader

"If we were sex-crazed, we would buy those magazines," said romance reader Vera Krylatova, referring to the pornographic publications that line kiosks across the country.

The primly dressed Krylatova waited for a subway train immersed in "Echoes of a Past Love," in which she said the heroes spend the majority of the novel thousands of miles apart, instead of in each others' arms — or beds. "It makes me feel good. That's why I read it," the 55-year-old client said.

She's not alone. Six other people stood nearby on the subway platform nearby absorbed by romance novels — including one middle-aged man.

"It's something easy to read," said the bearded man, slightly embarrassed as he quickly shifted the love story in his pocket. Titles lining passengers' laps in

Some see latest Klein campaign as teen porn

NEW YORK (AP) — Child welfare advocates are criticizing the latest Calvin Klein ad campaign as kiddie porn for depicting models who appear to be in their teens showing off their underwear in sometimes suggestive poses.

The ads for a line of jeans aimed at teen-agers began appearing Tuesday on city buses. The teen-oriented magazine Seventeen rejected the ads, which will appear in other fashion magazines, the Daily News reported today. There will also be television ads.

"I've never seen anything as disgusting as this — it's unbelievable," said Iona Siegel, director of Mount Sinai Medical Center's Rape Crisis Intervention program. "Something must be done about this use of children in pornographic poses."

A Klein spokesman said in a statement the "inspiration" of the campaign is the "strength of personality and self-knowledge of young people today." The company wouldn't reveal the ages of the models but said they were "regular people" rather than professionals.

Frank Russo, state director of the American Family Association, said the campaign "verges on kiddie porn" and "will, quite possibly, appeal to pedophiles."

Nearly all of the ads feature male and female models in a variety of poses. One boy or young man wears only an unbuttoned vest and underpants; several others are bare-chested.

Ex-O.J. lawyer takes top job at MCA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Howard Weitzman, attorney to celebrities including Michael Jackson, Kim Basinger and O.J. Simpson, was named a top executive at entertainment giant MCA Inc. Weitzman, 55, will become MCA's new executive vice president in charge of corporate operations, the company said Thursday. It did not describe his specific duties.

Weitzman has handled some of the biggest cases in Hollywood, representing Michael Jackson in a child molestation claim that eventually was settled. Weitzman also represented Kim Basinger when she lost an $8 million lawsuit for backing out of a film, and was Simpson's lawyer immediately after he was charged with murdering his ex-wife and her friend.

Man confesses; lawyer faints

STOCKTON, Calif. (AP) — In a Perry Mason-like moment, a public defender fainted in a courtroom when her client took the stand and admitted killing a prostitute because she wanted to "ruin someone else's day."

Superior Court Judge Michael Garrigan called a recess after Kristine Eagle collapsed Thursday. Eagle represents David Huffman, on trial for the March 1994 stabbing death of Katrina Mansera, 26.

Huffman, 20, told jurors he and a friend had sex with Mansera and then refused to pay her. He said he became sexually aroused when she appeared afraid of him, and he lost control and stabbed her repeatedly. The woman's body was found near railroad tracks the next day.

Favorite leads state match play

By Larry Hovey
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A couple of big fairway drivers helped pre-tourney favorite Scott Masingill win his opening match and lead seven others into the Idaho Golf Association’s state match play quarterfinals.

Masingill cut a driver off the fairway to get home on the par-5 16th hole for a lead on Jason Schuman and then landed another on the par-5 18th green for an easy closing birdie to win 2 up.

In the first round, the mid-veterans — if that’s what they’re called — took care of challenges from the up and coming and the veterans. Former senior state titlists Bruce Cadwell, Boise, and Twin Falls’ Bobby Adamson, second in the state sophomore category two weeks ago, were beaten by former state champion Rick Spaeth, Boise, and Paul Weyland, respectively.

Also moving into the quarterfinals are brothers Jim and Joe Malay, Christopher James of Challis; Terry Spackman of Burley, and Bret Rupert of Boise.

Only the Masingill-Schuman match lasted to the 18th hole and the other seven ended on the 17th.

The close matches weren’t indicated in the morning medal play qualifying round, used to establish first-round pairings. There were several scores 78 to 88.

It appeared a mismatch when Masingill, medalist at two-over 74, was pitted against Schuman, who couldn’t believe the 88 he had to turn in. But all that changed.

“Jason came out focused and determined and he played a heck of a game,” said Masingill.

Schuman was two up after the eighth hole but Masingill then pulled into a tie over the next two holes. After a lead exchange, the 16th became pivotal.

Both kept their drive on the short grass of the narrow fairway but perhaps a little too left. Masingill then drilled his first fairway driver with a late fade within 25 feet of the cup. Schuman also tried to cut his iron shot but it strayed into the lava rock and wasn’t seen again.

After halving the 17th, Masingill got the edge he needed with the second driver on the 18th.

“You’ve got to see this driver,” he enthused. “It’s not a Big Bertha, it’s a Big, Big Bertha. And it doesn’t have a titanium head, it has a Ruger titanium head,” he laughed. “$500 and worth every penny.”

“I was impressed with the way Jason got it together from morning to afternoon. I was three-under for the afternoon so he had to be one or two under or even. I know he feels a lot better now than he did after qualifying,” Masingill said.

Although Spaeth finally ousted Cadwell on the 17th he didn’t know for a long time if the match was going to end.

“I had him dommie two holes ago and couldn’t put him away and he’s going to win this hole,” Spaeth said as he walked toward the 16th green.

His confidence was waning because he had Cadwell down six with six to play.

Gooding golfer J.T. Jones blasts from the sand on the 13th hole during his match against Terry Spackman of Burley on Friday at Blue Lakes Country Club.

Finally on the par-3 17th, Cadwell, after a great chip shot, missed his par putt, giving Spaeth the luxury of winning with a three-putt.

“I was definitely lagging,” he joked after tapping in a six-iron. “I admit it.”

“This match play really gets to me,” said Rupert after closing out Brian Elcox, Boise, on 17. “It’s a tough way to play golf.”

The quarter and semifinals are slated for 7:30 and 11:40 a.m. today at Blue Lakes Country Club. The champion will be crowned on Sunday.

First-Round Results
 Scott Masingill, Payette, 2 up over Jason Schuman, Boise; Jim Malay, Wilder, 2-1, over John Christman, Boise; Paul Weyland, Boise, 2-1, over Bobby Adamson, Twin Falls; Christopher James, Challis, 2-1, over Jason Stephens, Twin Falls; Rick Spaeth, Boise, 2 and 1 over Bruce Cadwell, Boise; Joe Malay, Boise, 2-1, over J.J. Gomez, Boise; Terry Spackman, Burley, 2-1 over J.T. Jones, Gooding; and Bret Rupert, Boise, 2-1, over Brian Elcox, Boise.
 Saturday’s morning pairings (played in twosomes):
 7:30 a.m. Masingill vs. Jim Malay, 7:30 a.m. Weyland vs. Christopher James, 7:40 a.m. Rick Spaeth vs. Joe Malay, and 7:50 a.m. Terry Spackman vs. Bret Rupert.
 (Seminals will begin at 11:40 and 11:50 a.m. However, pending course traffic, the semifinals may be played as a four-some.)

Tyson looks back at last fight

The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — The punch was a left that landed below the belt line.

It came with 1:18 seconds left and was the last punch Mike Tyson landed in a fight — his 12-round decision victory over Donovan “Razor” Ruddock.

Saturday night, four years and 52 days after that low left, Tyson will fit his fists into a pair of 10-ounce boxing gloves and again throw a punch-in-a-fight, a 10-round bout against Peter McNealey.

“It was a tough fight,” Tyson had said after beating Ruddock.

Mismatch, rip-off are some of the things that have been said and written about Tyson’s comeback fight in the MGM Grand Garden.

“I think this is terrible match-making,” said Rock Newman, Riddick Bowe’s manager. “Tyson will get nothing out of this fight. McNealey is a joke.”

The 26-year-old McNealey has a 36-1 record with 30 knockouts, but his opposition has been extremely short of quality.

McNealey bristles at suggestions that he just a fall guy for Tyson, but he described how many people view the fight when he said, “I’m just a small guy in this thing. It’s Mike Tyson’s coming-out party.”

“He’s back,” shouted a fan at Thursday’s official weigh-in. And that’s what all the fuss seems to be about.

Jay Larkin of Showtime thinks the pay-per-view sales will be at least 1 million transactions at prices between $35 and $50 and that the match will be seen by 1 billion people worldwide.

A full-house crowd of 16,736, liberally studded with celebrities, is being predicted for the MGM Grand Garden. There will be three world title fights on the pay-per-view card, including one for the WBA heavyweight championship between champion Bruce Seldon and Joe Hipp. The Tyson-McNealey match is scheduled to start no later than 8:15 p.m. PDT.

Tyson is getting $25 million, according to his contract on file with the Nevada State Athletic Commission. He got $5 million for his decision over Ruddock June 28, 1991, at Please see FIGHT/BS

Highland, Pocatello top state poll

The Associated Press

Idaho sportswriters and broadcasters picked teams from the eastern side of the state to dominate the upper divisions of Idaho high school football this year in the Associated Press preseason poll.

The prep football season kicks off Aug. 25-26, although many schools do not open their seasons until the following week.

Voters who cast ballots in the AP preseason poll ranked Highland of Pocatello atop A-1 Division I, which includes Idaho’s largest schools.

Cross-town rival Pocatello, which won the 1994 state championship despite a 4-4 regular-season record, was picked to finish second in 1995. Pocatello has won four football titles, more than any other A-1 Division I school.

Capital of Boise and Centennial of Meridian, both teams that lost playoff openers last year, are picked third and fifth, respectively, while Borah of Boise is fifth.

In A-1 Division II, Madison of Rexburg is expected to defend its 1994 state title. Like Pocatello, the Bobcats stepped out of a mediocre regular season to win their first football championship ever.

Post Falls and Burley, two teams that battled to a 28-25 Burley victory in last season’s playoffs of Idaho Falls and Blackfoot round out the top five.

Snake River of Blackfoot picked up seven first-place votes and the No. 1 ranking among A-2 teams. The Panthers were 10-1 last season before falling to Bishop Kelly of Boise in the state championship game.

No. 2 Weiser is another team whose 1994 season ended in the playoffs at the hands of the Knights, who were undefeated and won the state title. Bishop Kelly is picked third entering this season, while Preston and Jerome start the season ranked fourth and fifth, respectively.

Among the state’s smaller schools, southern Idaho took home three championship trophies in 1994, and each of last year’s winners is expected to return strong in 1995.

Top-ranked Glens Ferry rolled through an undefeated season to the A-3 crown last year. The Pilots were never challenged until the 12-7 state game with Homedale, which is picked No. 2 to start the season.

No. 3 Teton won its first playoff game before running into Glens Ferry last season. Fruiland enters the season at fourth, followed by Grangeville and Clearwater Valley.

Among A-4 teams, Murtugah dominated the field in 1994, going 11-0 and winning the school’s first football championship. Several key players are gone, but the Red Devils are picked to repeat. Their title game opponent, Wilder, is picked second, followed by Oakley, Nampa Christian and Mackay.

The most dominant team in any division may have been Carey, which went undefeated and rolled over Deary for the state eight-man championship in a rematch of the 1993 title game.

The Panthers are picked No. 1 again, followed by Notus and Deary. Mullan, which was undefeated before falling to Deary in the 1994 playoffs, comes in at fourth, with Highland of Craigmont and Rockland in a fifth-place tie.

Newcomer takes gymnast title

The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Dominique Moceanu had the crowd — and the senior women’s all-around title — in her pocket by the time she finished her floor exercise Friday night at the National Gymnastics Championships.

Moceanu, at 13 the youngest woman ever to win the title, was appearing in her first seniors event. She scored 78.450 points.

“I wasn’t nervous,” Moceanu said. “I was ready for this and it was fun.”

Moceanu’s championship was all but assured when Shannon Miller, the leader after the compulsorys, fell from the balance beam during the first rotation of the optional.

Miller wobbled early in her beam routine. Then, after a backflip followed by three layouts, she could not right herself at the end of the beam and stepped at the back of the beam. She remained to the beam instantly and finished strong, drawing a huge cheer from the crowd but a 9.375 from the judges.

The fall dropped her into third place behind Moceanu, who opened the optionals with a 9.9 on vault, and Jaycie Phelps.

Miller moved back into second place when Phelps fell on her beam dismount, but despite solid performances after that, could not catch Moceanu. Miller finished at 78.250; Phelps was third at 77.730.

Moceanu’s floor exercise was the final performance of the evening. As her coach, Bela Karolyi, paced the sideline smiling and the crowd cheered, the 4-foot-5, 70-pound Moceanu bounced through a fast-paced routine to “Twist Again.”

She received a standing ovation when she finished and waved and smiled at the crowd before jumping into Karolyi’s arms.

Dominique Moceanu goes through her optional routine on the balance beam at the U.S. Gymnastics Championships Friday.

When her 9.8 score for the floor exercise was put up, the crowd boomed.

Dominique Dawes, last year’s champion who was in sixth place after the compulsorys, finished fourth at 77.520. Miller finished with a 9.850 from the uneven bars, a huge cheer from the crowd and a bear-hug from coach Steve Niuno.

“I wasn’t peaking at this competition,” Miller said. “I’ve put a lot of new stuff in my routines that I wanted to work on and then I had trouble on the beam. I hope I can peak at the Worlds.”

Basketball standout fatally stabbed

BOSTON (AP) — Cleveland State basketball standout Jamal Jackson was fatally stabbed Friday morning, hours before he was due back on campus.

Jackson's body was found face down outside a Tremont Street clothing store about 4:25 a.m., Boston police Lt. Robert O'Toole said. The 22-year-old was taken to Boston City Hospital, where he was pronounced dead about 20 minutes later.

Police obtained an arrest warrant for an unidentified suspect but had made no arrests by Friday evening.

Jackson, a 6-foot-6 forward from Mattapan, Mass., had been taking summer classes at Cleveland State and was on a visit home when he was killed.

"His biggest goal was to play in the NBA, that's all he talked about," Cleveland State coach Mike Boyd said. "Him and I had many, many conversations concerning how to achieve that."

Boyd had been away from campus and returned Friday to find a message from Jackson, saying he would return to campus Friday, Cleveland State sports information director Pauline Weston said.

Jackson was actually supposed to return last Saturday, but something happened with his plane ticket," Welch said.

Jackson averaged 16.1 points and 8.1 rebounds to lead the Vikings last year. He was the fourth sophomore in the school's 64-year-old basketball history to have more than 400 points and 200 rebounds in a season.

He sat out his freshman year while completing NCAA academic requirements.

"This is an unquestionable tragedy for a person of that age," CSU athletic director John Konstantinos said. "It is also a devastating blow to a basketball family and the whole CSU community."

Jackson was a two-time state player of the year at East Boston High School. He was chosen best player in New England as a senior and was recruited by Boston College, Massachusetts, Providence, Loyola and Miami as well as Cleveland State.

"Jamal was a very likable young man who showed great promise," Konstantinos said.

Labonte takes pole position in Goodwrench 400

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Bobby Labonte, looking for his second straight victory at Michigan International Speedway, will be on the pole for Sunday's running of the GM Goodwrench 400.

Labonte, who edged Jeff Gordon for the victory in the Miller Genuine Draft 400 on June 18, got a break when Gordon wrecked his car in a sudden rain shower during his qualifying lap. Gordon, who had won the NASCAR Sprint race at Michigan, will try to qualify in a backup car on Saturday.

It was his third career pole, second this season and first on a superspeedway for Labonte.

"That was a good lap," Labonte said. "The biggest thing was I didn't screw up like I did the last time in qualifying. The last time, I didn't have my mind right. I kind of had it in my mind I had to be a little conservative on it."

There was nothing conservative about this run deep in the heart of the Irish Hills region in southern Michigan.

Labonte and Jimmy Kimmery, who took the pole with a qualifying lap of 184.403 mph in a Chevrolet Monte Carlo. Rudd pushed his Ford Thunderbird around the high-banked, 2-mile oval at 184.663 mph.

Mark Martin and John Andretti drove fastest to start in the second row. Brett Bodine, Bill Elliott, Dick Trickle, Dale Earnhardt, Jeremy Mayfield and Kenny Wallace rounded out the top 10.

It was 15th pole in 21 races for Chevrolet. After Labonte, however, the next six drivers were Ford Thunderbirds: Ford won both Winston Cup poles at MIS in 1994. The only other Chevy among the first 10 this time was driven by Earnhardt, who was third at 182.463 mph.

Italy sweeps U.S. in Centennial Cup volleyball

ATLANTA (AP) — World champion Italy swept the United States 15-10, 15-11, 15-7 on Friday night in the USA Volleyball Centennial Cup to advance to the championship match against Olympic champion Brazil.

The United States, which won an Olympic gold medal in 1988 and a bronze in 1992, lost its momentum in the second game against Italy (2-1) after an out call was made on a shot by Dexter Rogers that gave Italy a 1-11 lead.

When U.S. captain Bob Ctvrtlik argued the call, then slammed the net, Brazilian referee Dalmir Medeiros red-carded him for a one-point penalty and the set 15-11.

Cardinals nip Braves, 4-3

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Tom Henke became the seventh pitcher to reach 300 career saves, surviving a rally by the Atlanta Braves in the ninth inning of the St. Louis Cardinals' 4-3 victory Friday night.

After walking in a run in the eighth, Henke allowed a double and two walks and threw a wild pitch that reduced the lead to 4-3 in the ninth. But he struck out Chipper Jones looking and got Fred McGriff to fly out to end St. Louis' six-game winning streak.

It was Henke's 25th save in 26 opportunities. He joined Lee Smith, Bruce Sutter, Jeff Reardon, Rollie Fingers, Goose Gosage and Dennis Eckersley among relievers with 300 saves.

Scott Hemond and Bernard Gilley homered and Allen Watson raised his career record against Atlanta to 4-0. The Cardinals, in their first game after a 1-8 road trip, have dropped 16 of their last 20 games, scoring just 41 runs.

Watson (5-4) allowed seven hits in 7 2/3 innings, struck out two and walked two.

Phillies 16, Giants 8

PHILADELPHIA — Bury Bonds and Robby Thompson each homered twice for San Francisco, but the Philadelphia Phillies still routed the Giants 16-8 Friday night in a game featuring a Veterans Stadium record nine home runs.

Kevin Elster, who entered in the fifth inning as a pinch-hitter, went 3-for-3 with a homer, scored four runs and drove in three for the Phillies.

Elster hit his first major league home run since Aug. 21, 1991. Mark Whiten, Charlie Hayes and Kevin Flannery, acquired in the trade that sent Dave Gallagher to California, added two-run shots for Philadelphia.

Giants starting pitcher Terry Mulholland hit his first homer in the majors. His previous high for home runs at Veterans Stadium was eight, accomplished three times.

The Phillies set a season high for runs and stopped the Giants' four-game winning streak.

Mets 3, Dodgers 2

NEW YORK — Brett Butler, three hours after being traded from the Mets to the Los Angeles Dodgers, tied it with a two-run triple in the seventh inning Friday night in a 3-2 victory over the Dodgers. Bill Spiers' suicide squeeze.

Butler, who left the Dodgers as a free agent after last season, was sent back to Los Angeles for two minor leaguers. He went 2-for-4 with a double as the leadoff hitter.

Tommy Thompson, activated from the disabled list earlier in the day, opened the New York ninth with a double off John Cummings (1-1). Pedro Astacio relieved and Butch Huskey, recalled from Triple-A Norfolk before the game, sacrificed.

Mark Guthrie relieved and Spiers bunted in front of the plate, scoring Thompson. The single made Spiers 6-for-30 as a pinch-hitter.

Butch Henry (3-5), the fourth Mets pitcher of the game, worked a perfect ninth and struck out two.

Reds 8, Astros 3

CINCINNATI — Ron Gant hit his 25th homer and drove in three runs Friday night to lead the Cincinnati Reds to a 8-3 victory over Houston, making them undefeated in eight games against the Astros this season.

The Reds lead the National League by eight games over second-place Houston. Cincinnati has won just five of its last 11 games, but the Astros have won only three of 11.

David Wells (2-1) pitched six innings for his second win since being acquired from Detroit on July 31. He gave up seven hits, walked two and struck out four.

Expos 7, Padres 3

MONTREAL — Sean Berry, Mike Lansing and David Segui each drove in two runs Friday night and the Montreal Expos beat the San Diego Padres 7-3.

The Expos are 15-1 against San Diego at Olympic Stadium since July 1992.

Jeff Fassero (12-9) pitched the Expos to their eighth win in 10 games. He gave up six hits in 7 2/3 innings and improved to 6-1 lifetime against the Padres.

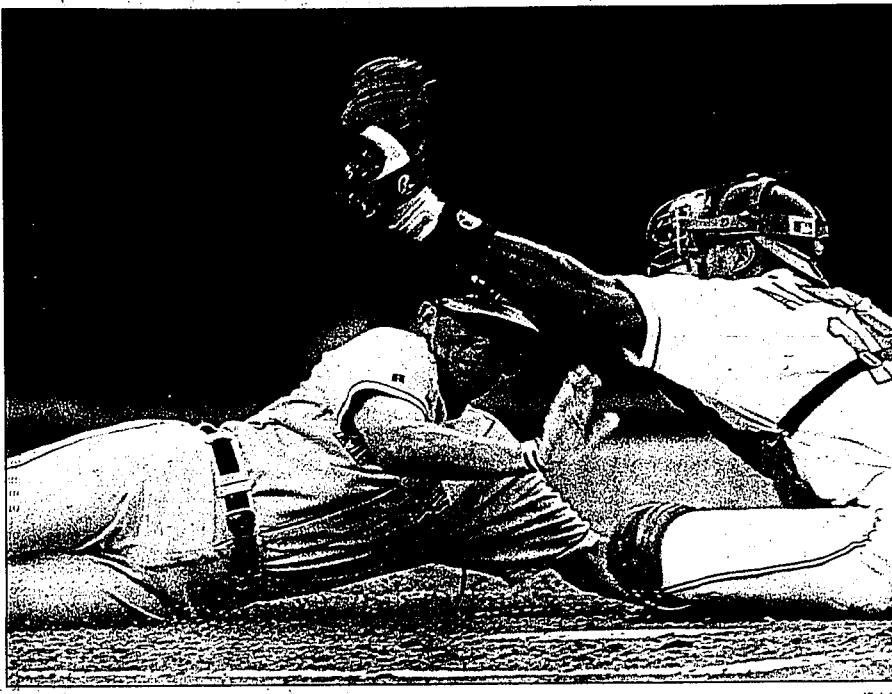

Fassero limited San Diego to one run on two hits through seven innings, but tired in the eighth. He struck out six and walked three before RBI singles by Jody Reed and Eddie Williams chased him.

Pirates 13, Marlins 7

PITTSBURGH — Nelson Liriano hit the first grand slam of his career, highlighting a six-run eighth inning Friday that finished off the Pittsburgh Pirates' 13-7 win over the Florida Marlins in the first game of a doubleheader.

Jeff King had three hits, including an RBI single in the seventh that put Pittsburgh ahead for good. The Pirates put it away in the eighth with their biggest inning of the season, helped by two errors.

Bob Wages (2-1) earned his first victory since May 26, pitching five innings in relief and allowing one run. He had lost six straight decisions.

Cleveland catcher Sandy Alomar tags out Milwaukee runner Jeff Cirillo at the plate Friday in Cleveland. Cleveland won, 7-5.

Indians chalk up another win

CLEVELAND (AP) — Jose Mesa tied a record with his 36th save in 36 tries and the Cleveland Indians came back from a five-run deficit to beat the Milwaukee Brewers 7-5 Friday night.

Albert Belle homered and doubled as the Indians improved baseball's best record to 69-34 and widened their AL Central lead over the Brewers to 17 games.

Mesa, with a scoreless ninth, matched Dennis Ekersley's major league record for consecutive saves without a blown opportunity in one season, established in 1992. San Francisco's Rod Beck converted a record 41 straight opportunities over a span of three seasons.

Belle led off the Indians' two-run second with a double off Ricky Bones (7-9), then started the three-run fourth with his 27th home run. It was his sixth consecutive hit over two games.

Mark Clark (7-5) won despite falling behind 5-0 in the second inning.

Tigers 3, Twins 1

DETROIT — Sean Bergman outduelled Jose Parra to give Detroit its eighth victory in 34 games since the All-Star break.

Bergman (5-8) ended his two-game losing streak, allowing seven hits in seven innings with four strikeouts and two walks. John Doherty pitched the final two innings for his third save of the season, allowing just one hit.

Parra (1-1), a 22-year-old right-hander acquired by the Twins from the Dodgers in the Kevin Tapani trade, took his first big-league loss in his fourth start. He went 6 1-3 innings and scattered six hits, three of them coming in the first inning when the Tigers scored twice.

Royals 10, Blue Jays 3

TORONTO — Wally Joyner had a grand slam and five RBIs and Greg Gagne had a homer and two RBIs as Kansas City beat Toronto.

The Royals started the game with six straight hits and batted around in the first inning to take a 5-0 lead. Gagne's homer in the third and Joyner's grand slam in the sixth — the fifth of his career — made it 10-0.

Tom Gordon (8-8) went eight innings, allowing three runs on seven hits. He struck out two and didn't walk anybody.

Toronto rookie Giovanni Carrara (1-2) lasted 5 1-3 innings, allowing 10 runs on nine hits. He walked five and struck out four in his worst outing since replacing the traded David Cone in the Blue Jays' rotation.

White Sox 3, Rangers 1

CHICAGO — Tim Lincecum and Lance Johnson each had three hits, scored a run and drove in a run to lead Chicago over Texas.

The loss was just the third in the last 10 games for the Rangers, who currently hold the wild card spot.

Wilson Alvarez (5-7) pitched 5 2-3 innings, allowing one run on six hits and two walks with four strikeouts. Jose DeLeon pitched 2 1-3 innings of hitless relief and Roberto Hernandez got his 21st save.

Bobby Witt (1-1) went 7 2-3 innings for Texas in his second start since being acquired from Florida on Aug. 8. He allowed three runs on nine hits, walked five and struck out three.

Commissioner: Gooden's return will have to wait

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — Dwight Gooden will have to wait until next year to return to baseball.

Bud Selig, baseball's acting commissioner, has rejected Gooden's request to shorten his one-year suspension from baseball for violating his drug aftercare program, the Cy Young Award winner said Friday in the Record.

"He (Selig) said that with only six weeks left in the season, it was better for me to keep working on my aftercare program," Gooden said in an interview from his home in St. Petersburg, Fla. "I know it was a tough decision for him, but that means I'll just keep working even harder to make it back next year."

Last week, Gooden wrote to Selig and asked him to come to Florida to look at his rehabilitation program. The former Mets starter also was considering filing a grievance, but decided against it when team owners fired arbitrator George Nicolaou.

Gooden, a free agent, was not expected to return to the majors this season, especially after missing four drug tests.

Selig consulted other members of the executive council, as well as psychiatrists from Major League Baseball and the players' association, who all have examined Gooden in the past month.

Gooden's fastball was clocked at 95 mph Thursday, the newspaper said, and quoted him as saying, "If I was allowed back this year, the Yankees would have won."

The pitcher had talked of joining his former Mets teammate, Darryl Strawberry, on the New York Yankees.

"Our hope was realistic, because Dwight really does have his life together at this point," Gooden's agent, Ray Negro, told the newspaper.

Negro and spokesmen for Major League Baseball were unavailable for comment Friday.

Gooden said he plans to play winter ball in the Dominican Republic.

Top draft pick out for season

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Ki-Jana Carter era last night just carried on. The pick of the NFL draft tore a knee ligament in his debut with the Cincinnati Bengals and probably will need reconstructive surgery.

The running back from Penn State completely tore the anterior cruciate ligament in his left knee as he cut to avoid a tackle in the backfield Thursday night in a 20-13 exhibition loss to Detroit.

A magnetic resonance imaging test Friday found the tear. Carter will miss this season, then have to try to come back from one of the most serious knee injuries for a running back.

(The doctor said, "You've torn the ACL. I was like, 'You've got to be kidding me.'" Carter told reporters Friday after returning from the hospital. "That's like the worst thing you ever think of happening to somebody's leg, tearing the ACL. You just see so many stories about it.")

The Bengals also lost backup quarterback David Klingler for eight to 10 weeks with a broken jaw. Klingler was hit by a helmet while trying to pass in the fourth quarter, and X-rays Friday discovered the fracture.

The loss of Carter was a particularly bitter blow to the Bengals, who paid Carter a rookie-reef of $7.1 million signing bonus as part of a seven-year contract that could top out at $19.2 million.

"I'd rank it up there high on a scale of 1-10, maybe close to the 10 number," general manager Mike Brown said. "But you've got to keep going. You can't make something like this make you cry in your beer."

Brown was hoping Carter would resurrect Cincinnati's horrid running game and win back fans and voters. The Bengals are lobbying for a tax increase to build a new stadium.

In the end, Brown's decision to protect Carter and his quarterbacks with a weak offensive line cost him dearly. The line was inadequate last year, and was weakened when starting guard Dave Cadigan retired.

Instead of drafting to build the line, Brown went for a running back.

Ki-Jana Carter will sit out this season after he tore a ligament in his knee Thursday.

Carter was hit in the backfield in two of his carries Thursday, including the play that ended his season.

"We put our money down and we made the bet," Brown said. "Sometimes you win and sometimes you don't. At least for this year, this one we won't win. It doesn't mean it won't come around in the future."

Carter is trying to avoid the fate of Ickey Woods, a running back who led the Bengals to the Super Bowl as a rookie in 1988, but was never a premier runner after tearing his anterior cruciate ligament.

"Even though they say that I might hamper you a little bit, I don't think it's going to do that to me," Carter said.

Vikings edge Raiders, 20-17

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The defenses made the big plays and backup quarterback Brad Johnson made the difference Friday night in the Minnesota Vikings' 20-17 exhibition win over the Oakland Raiders.

With the Vikings trailing 17-14 with 1:49 left to play, Johnson relieved third-stringer Chad May and led a 47-yard touchdown drive with no timeouts. He finished the drive with an 18-yard scoring pass to Chris Walsh, who broke free from Dan Land at the 2 and scored with six seconds to play.

Johnson, who also threw a TD pass in the second quarter, finished 11-for-17 for 99 yards.

Backup Minnesota linebacker Richard Brown answered with a 13-yard interception return of Billy Joe Hobert's pass for a 14-7 lead in the third quarter.

The Vikings (2-1) intercepted Jeff Hostetter and Hobert twice each, but Oakland (2-1) rallied with 10 fourth-quarter points. Second-year running back Calvin Jones tied it with a 6-yard run on the first play of the quarter, and Jeff Jaeger's 23-yard field goal provided the go-ahead points with 7:52 to play.

Rams 27, Jaguars 10

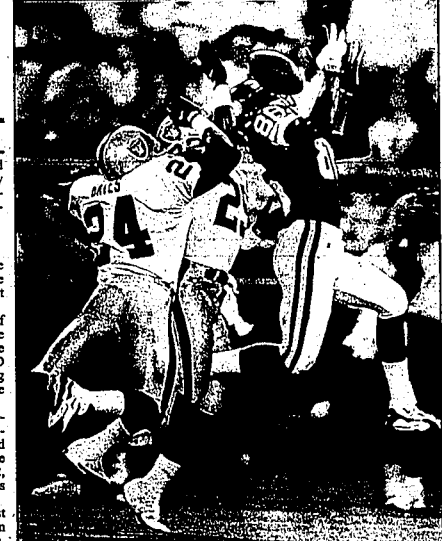

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — The first home game for the Jacksonville Jaguars wound up being the first victory for the St. Louis Rams.

Chris Miller threw a pair of touchdown passes to Isaac Bruce and Tommy Maddox sealed the victory with a fourth-quarter TD pass to Turbon O'Bannon, giving the Rams a 27-10 victory over the expansion Jaguars on Friday night.

St. Louis (1-2) snapped an 11-game losing streak in the preseason, although only the last two had been in the Rams new city. The previous nine, dating back to 1992, came when the team still made its home in Los Angeles.

The Jaguars, playing their first game at the new $140 million Jacksonville Municipal Stadium, got strong performances from quarterback Steve Buelein and their defense, which limited the Rams to only 22 yards and sacked Miller five times in the first half.

Oakland Raiders Patrick Bates, left, and Dan Land break up a Warren Moon pass to Minnesota Viking Jake Reed in the first quarter Friday in Minneapolis.

Hometown hero: Wilander advances

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Mats Wilander delighted his new hometown crowd Friday, upsetting Rosset in the quarterfinals of the Volvo International.

Wilander, a native of Sweden who now resides in Greenwich, overcame sixth-seeded Rosset 6-7 (10-8), 7-5, 7-5 in a late afternoon match that featured numerous extended rallies.

"It's the kind of match that has a lot of twists and turns, like the one yesterday," said Wilander, who will face top-seeded Andre Agassi on Saturday in a rematch of their battle in the semifinals of the Canadian Open.

Agassi, playing in a night match, advanced to the semifinals by beating seventh-seeded Sergi Bruguera 6-4, 6-1, improving his record on hard courts this year to 44-2 and winning his 18th straight match.

Wilander, 30, once a No. 1 player in the world, had endured a grueling match of nearly 3 hours against Kenneth Carlsen on Thursday.

With the crowd behind him Friday, Wilander outlasted Rosset by saving nine of the 11 break points he faced. Rosset had 49 unforced errors.

Richard Krajcevik celebrates his upset victory over Boris Becker Friday in the Volvo International tennis tournament quarterfinals. "I think today I was stronger mentally. And I was better on the big points," Wilander said. "I think he got tired on his serve."

Wilander, the oldest player in the tournament and the highest-ranked player without a seed (No. 63), had missed a chance to take the first set when he couldn't hold his serve in the last game, forcing the tiebreaker.

He avoided playing another tiebreaker in the third set by breaking Rosset in the last game, which sent the fans at Stadium Court on their feet for a standing ovation.

"It pumps me up for sure," Wilander said of the rousing rounds of applause he received from the estimated crowd of about 9,000 at the Connecticut Tennis Center.

chances to put the match away when he couldn't hold service after breaking Krajcevik.

"I broke him four times in a match," said Becker, who was broken three times. "I should have broken easily. Whenever I was up a break my concentration seemed to go away. He took the opportunity to break me back."

Chang was no match for Kafelnikov.

"All I can say is that I was more solid than Albert today," Kafelnikov said. "Maybe he's tired from playing the qualifying matches."

Chang played three matches to qualify and later overcame No. 5 Michael Stich and No. 11 Arnaud Boetsch to reach the quarterfinals for the second time in his young career.

The Canadian native and Harvard graduate was the lowest ranked player in the Volvo field at No. 20. His string of three ATP victories were the first of his career, and should boost him into the top 150.

"Today I came out flat. I can't take this with too much negativity. It's been a good week," he said. "I think a run like this just helps me believe in myself a little more."

Gabriela Sabatini puts all her effort into a serve during her match against Helena Sukova in the quarterfinals of the Canadian Open in Toronto Friday.

Sampras nets 400th victory over Medvedev

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Top-seeded Pete Sampras reached the 400-victory mark on the ATP Tour, beating Andrei Medvedev of Ukraine 6-2, 6-2 on Friday in the quarterfinals of the USA Championships.

"I'm really on, in every aspect of my game," said Sampras, who has not lost his serve in the tournament and has won 90 percent of his first-serve points. "My serve is definitely there. I wish every match would go this smoothly. Beating Alex two, two is a pretty good effort."

Medvedev, who upset Sampras in the German Open semifinals in May, was never a factor in the rematch at the Indianapolis

Tennis Center. "He played great," Medvedev said. "I couldn't get a lot of first serves in, and he was serving great. He played definitely better than me today."

Sampras will face No. 12 Bernd Karbacher of Germany on Saturday and No. 2 Goran Ivanisevic of Croatia will play No. 4 Thomas Enqvist of Sweden.

Ivanisevic beat No. 7 Alberto Berasategui of Spain 6-4, 6-4 in Friday night's final quarterfinal.

"My serve was very good today, but my return was not so great," said Ivanisevic, who had 14 aces. "I will have to play better tomorrow."

Enqvist beat Jerome Golmard of France 6-3, 6-1.

"I started serving very well," Enqvist said. "I hit some good shots there in the last two games."

Karbacher defeated Richey Reneberg 7-6 (7-3), 7-5 in a match delayed nearly 2 1/2 hours by rain.

"I said, 'OK, you go for every shot; if you lose, you lose,' Karbacher said. "Then I played few great points, and then suddenly I saw that (is the you have to go."

Cain holds 1-shot lead in Seniors Tour

JERICHO, N.Y. (AP) — John Pierce said a 90-foot eagle putt on the opening hole on the way to a 7-under-par 65 and a one-shot lead over Tony Jacklin after Friday's first round of the Northville Long Island Classic.

Jacklin, in his second year on the over-50 tour, was a shot better than Lee Trevino and Bud Allen and two ahead of Mike Joyce, Jim Albus, Jay Sigel, Larry Gilbert and Ben Smith. At 69 were Bob Murphy, Larry Laoretii, Dave Eichelberger and Bruce Summerhays.

Cain, a stockbroker for 33 years, had been splitting time between golf and his business since joining the Senior PGA Tour four years ago.

"I just got to the point where I felt I wasn't doing justice to my customers and to my golf game," Cain said. "Finally, I made the decision to try and become like Lee."

"My biggest problem has been in the opening rounds," he added. "I've been sitting anywhere from 73 to 76 and then came back with 66, 67 or 68 in the next two rounds. You can't win that way."

He turned the tables on himself with Friday's round, which got off to a rousing start with the long putt for eagle. He added a 15-foot putt for birdie on No. 2 and sank an 80-footer for birdie on No. 11.

He had eight one-putt greens during his round, which included the eagle and seven birdies against two bogeys.

"The putt at the first hole was an absolute surprise," Cain said. "I had to go over a hill and it found the hole."

"I'm pleased to have a good opening round. When I get to the ninth hole, I got a bit conservative and I would have to say that the back nine was a mixed review."

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. (AP) — On the verge of losing his PGA Tour title, Greg Norman used nothing but local knowledge. Or a couple of 45-foot eagle putts.

Wiebe, who lives in the nearby Cherry Hills area in suburban Denver, had two eagles and four birdies at Castle Pines Golf Club to charge into the second-round lead Friday after a 7-under-par 65.

"If there's such a thing as home-course advantage, then yes, I have one here," Wiebe said. "I've spent some time here, and the people have been really gracious about letting me play. I practiced here for four days last week."

Wiebe had the day's best round — 15 points based on the modified Stableford scoring system used in this tournament — for a 36-hole total of 23 points and a 4-point lead over Lee Janzen and rookie David Duval.

First-round runner-up Eric Els, Greg Norman and Davis Love III were tied at 17 points. Brett Ogil had 16, and Tom Watson was in a group at 15. Defending champion Steve Lowery missed the cut at minus-3.

Because exactly 72 players advance to Saturday's third round, 11 players competed for the final seven spots in a playoff.

Wiebe caught Els at the 12th hole and moved in front with his second eagle — worth 5 points — at No. 14.

He added birdies at the 15th and 17th holes worth 2 points each under a scoring system that gives zero points for par, minus-1 for bogey and minus-3 for double bogey or worse.

"Ironically, it was with the putter — his year-long nemesis — that Wiebe scored his two eagles, sinking 45-foot putts from just off the green at both the eighth and 14th holes."

"I've been fighting the putting devil," he said. "Maybe that's my range," he went to tell you, 5 points definitely a springboard in this form."

Wiebe, a two-time winner on tour, slumped to 233rd on the money list last year and stands just 194th this year, having won only $42,847 in 16 events. He had reconstructive shoulder surgery, but his medical exemption runs out this year.

"I have to make about $100,000 in the next four weeks," he said.

Els, who compiled 17 points Thursday, birdied his first two holes Friday to get to 21, but his threatened runaway came unraveled. He stumbled at the prize 3 fourth hole and took double bogey, costing him 3 points, and had another double bogey at No. 9.

"I had a good start, but then I came back down to earth," Els said. "I'm happy to still be at 17 points, even though I had 3 today. I've got to play a couple of good rounds now."

Norman, who started the day with 14 points, added 3 points in what he called a "very average round" to become the early leader in the club under a scoring system that gives zero points for par, minus-1 for

Seles keeps winning, meets Sabatini today

TORONTO (AP) — Looking vulnerable for the first time, Monica Seles continued her comeback to tournament tennis after nearly 2 1/2 years Friday night, reaching the semifinals of the Canadian Open with a 6-3, 6-2 victory over No. 7 Anke Huber.

After two easy victories against Kimberly Po and Nathalie Tauziat, Seles ran into some problems with Huber, her first Top 10 opponent.

"I had to work for every point," Seles said.

She was broken twice at the start of the match, her first service break of the tournament. She lost the first game, trailing in a match for the first time. And for the first time, she had spells of ordinary tennis.

"When she broke me I said to myself, 'You can't let this happen, losing your serve,'" Seles said. "As soon as I lost the first game, I knew this would be a tough match. From the first point, she went for every shot. She wasn't missing too many balls."

Some of her shots were badly off the mark, and sometimes she seemed to move in slow motion.

But she was still good enough to get by Huber.

"She's hitting the ball very hard," Huber said. "We all know if she was coming back, she was ready for it."

After losing her first two service games, Seles bounced back each time to break Huber. That kept the first game even, although Seles seemed challenged for the first time in three matches. Huber mixed her shots and ran Seles, who is favoring a cranky left knee.

Seles said the knee was very sore on Thursday but that it felt better after treatments.

"I hope it holds up," she said. "The real test will be tomorrow. If I can't hold up here, how will it hold up at the U.S."

Open, where it's two weeks?"

Typical of Seles' problems was a sequence when she had Huber at mercy only to hit the ball into the net. Still, she overcame the error to break Huber for the third time. That gave her a 5-3 lead and serving for the set. Seles made no more mistakes.

The second set was all Seles. She broke Huber in the first game and sailed to a 5-0 lead. Then, serving for the match, she was broken again.

After Huber held her own serve, Seles finished off the match.

"She made all the important points and she played them well," Huber said. "Nobody expected this."

"It was good for me to have a hard match," Seles said. "I'm very happy with this match."

The Seles comeback celebration continues Saturday against Gabriela Sabatini, an easy 6-2, 6-1 winner over No. 13 Helena Sukova.

Sabatini is looking forward to the match, much as she did last November, when she beat Martina Navratilova at the Virginia Slims championships at New York. That was the last tournament of Navratilova's career. This is the first tournament of Seles' return.

"I like the opportunity to play in this situation," Sabatini said. "For me, the opportunity to play her will be special, just like the Slims against Martina."

With Seles fever consuming the tournament, Sabatini said she was just as happy to stay out of the spotlight.

"It helps that all the attention is still here," she said. "It takes the pressure off the others."

Young pro leads British Open

WOBURN, England (AP) — Karrie Webb, a 20-year-old Australian who turned pro only 10 months ago, shot a 3-under-par 70 Friday and took a one-stroke lead over compatriot Marlene Stange of England's Caroline Pierce after two rounds of the British Women's Open.

Webb had a total of 7 under 139. Pierce also had a 70, while Lynn Gardner a 67, putting them at 140.

Webb had five birdies — three with long putts — then saved par on the final three holes with clutch putting to put her ahead in the chase to win Europe's richest tournament for women with a purse of $576,000.

Defending champion and first-round leader Liselotte Neumann of Sweden shot a 1-over 74 and fell two strokes back at 141. Tournament favorite Laura Davies had a 74 and dropped nine strokes behind at 148.

Nancy Lopez, playing her first tournament in Britain, was one stroke over five strokes back at 144 after a par 73 over the 6,257-yard Woburn Country Club course.

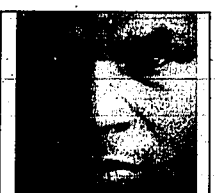

Webb finished second in last year's Australian Masters and has finished in the top 10 five times this season in her first year on the European tour. Her best finish was fourth in the Costa Azul Open in Portugal.

Webb kept the ball on the fairways and off the rock hard fringe that sent errant shots bounding wildly.

"I've gone far beyond my expectations for the tournament and the year," Webb said.

"I'm hitting lots of greens. Here, you miss the greens and you're in trouble. I'm hitting the ball straight and making the putts."

"This is the biggest field I've ever played in, it's the biggest tournament I've ever played in. Playing with the likes of Laura Davies and Nancy Lopez is a dream come true."

Religion needs to think of future

I'm just back from a week of vacation, a time of deep reflection about important things, such as what to have for lunch.

During this time of relaxation and fun, I stayed close to home with my wife, and we did things together that we enjoy. The only work I accomplished was on a little book I'm writing about my great-grandfather, Eli Hutchinson, and his part in the Civil War.

So, I wrote Chapter Seven, which is about the Battle of Nashville, which was fought in the last days of 1864. But the more remarkable story, I think, is about Eli Hutchinson and his sense of loyalty to the United States.

Faith today
Clark Morpew.

Hutchinson was a bouncy soldier — that is, the government paid him $300 to sign up for three years of service. The 30,000 troops headed for Shreveport to take that city for the Union. But when the huge army was just 30 miles from its goal, the soldiers hit a Confederate wall of fury, and the commander of the Union troops, Nathaniel Banks, made the decision to retreat.

Just as the Federals were boarding boats to escape up the Mississippi River, Confederate Gen. Richard Taylor hit them as hard as he could at Yellow Bayou, just north of Simmesport, La. During that battle, which was fought on a beastly hot day, my great-grandfather fell ill and was not able to rise from his grassy bed the next morning.

Medics took Hutchinson to the deck of a steamer where he lay without medical attention for 17 days. Doctors finally decided he might live and sent him to a hospital in Memphis. Miraculously, during several weeks of care, he recovered, was given a furlough and returned home the next morning.

But this is the part that always puzzled me when I read his sketchy memoirs. After spending three months on the Iowa frontier, Hutchinson set out sometime in October to walk back to Memphis, where his outfit was headquartered. It took him almost three months to make that return journey, traveling close to the ground, using a bushwhacker and Confederate soldiers.

Once was puzzled by his return, because I wasn't sure I would have gone back. Hutchinson could have hidden on the frontier, back in the woods somewhere where military authorities wouldn't find him. But he didn't. He made it home, and he kept it. Certainly a man of character.

But a wise college professor pointed out something else about the way people thought in those days. Hutchinson went back because he believed in the future, and he believed our country could not move into the future if it was divided.

With the country divided, they reasoned, there would be no progress, and the Union would founder in its own hatred. But united, there was no end to the miracles that could be wrought in the future.

The problem today is we have no frontier and, therefore, we don't think much about the future. We thought our new frontier would be space travel, but we've even become bored with that, probably because everything in space seems to move so slowly.

But when Eli Hutchinson was alive, he lived on the frontier. When he got bored with Iowa, he packed up and moved to California, where he planted a five-acre orchard of orange trees. Into his 90s he traveled all over the place in a Model T Ford and even went to the World's Fair in Seattle in 1905. He lived to be 101.

The institution that gets hurt the most by the lack of a frontier is the church. Few leaders in the church are thinking about the future, and even fewer doing anything to ensure the church's progress.

Someday, organized religion — especially the mainline churches and the Catholic Church — is going to come up against a wall. And someone will ask, "What happened to our future?" By then, it will be too late.

Since 1950, nearly every major mainline denomination has declined, even though the U.S. population has increased by nearly 100 million people. Has anyone in the church noticed this decline? Pilgrims, the frontier for the churches is survival.

GRANTS Pass, Ore. — Jim and Virginia Holt celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary last month. They also celebrated 50 years of serving God together.

Jim Holt, 72, and Virginia Holt, 70, spend six months of the year at their home in Grants Pass, Ore., and the other six months of the year serving God with Wycliff Bible Translators in Catalina, Ariz.

Jim Holt was pastor of the Hagerman and Shoshone Baptist churches in the 1960s and 1970s. Both Holts also worked for the Hagerman School District and for Tupperware in Jerome during those years.

In 1988, while attending the Reformed Church of Twin Falls, the Holts heard about Wycliff from a group of couples who came to Twin Falls from Washington to help finish constructing the new Reformed Church building.

"They said, 'Why don't you go down to Wycliff?'" Virginia Holt recalled, in a phone interview from Oregon. "I said, 'Where's Wycliff?'"

Both Holts know very well where Wycliff is now. They have been spending every winter doing volunteer work for the organization since 1989.

Wycliff is an interdenominational ministry, with head offices in Huntington Beach, Calif. The group sends missionaries into Mexico to work with the Indian tribes there. Volunteers learn the languages of the tribes, translate the scriptures into those languages and provide Bibles for the people. They also teach many of the natives how to read.

"There are now 80 translations, and we are working on another 40," said Virginia Holt, who, with her husband, does mission work at Wycliff's Arizona offices.

nance work in Catalina, and he helps build homes for the Wycliff missionaries on furlough there.

Virginia Holt serves as secretary to the group's volunteer coordinator.

"The couple live in a home that belongs to missionaries who are in Mexico at the time.

"We haven't worked directly with any of the tribes, but we have heard the other missionaries talk about their work," Virginia Holt said.

"The conditions are very poor, and many of the people are illiterate."

The Holts spent their 50th anniversary in the Magic Valley, at a big party with family and friends.

They have five children: Sheryl Scruggs of Hagerman, Janet Garrett of Salt Lake City, Dave Holt of Newport, Ore., and Marilyn Preston and Pam Van Engelen, both of Twin Falls. There are 13 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

"Everyone is all together at our party," said Virginia Holt. "That's the first time ever."

Then it was time for the Holts to return to Oregon, and to get ready for another "working vacation" in Arizona.

Interfaith Alliance seeks to counter Christian Coalition

By Cary Tamamachi
Dallas Morning News

WASHINGTON — As a child of the '50s, the Rev. Herbert Valentine said, he learned about intolerance watching the McCarthy hearings unfold on his living room television.

With the emergence of the Christian Coalition as a political force among religious conservatives, Valentine said he experienced an eerie feeling of déjà vu.

"Similar kinds of actions, activities and absolutes during the McCarthy era were coming forth again, but this time in religious garb," said Valentine, the executive presbyter for the Baltimore Presbytery. "The moderate Christian voices were not being heard in the press."

In response, Valentine formed a religious coalition called the Interfaith Alliance last year. The group — made up of Protestants, Catholics and several Jewish organizations — is one of several organizations created recently to provide a forum for voices other than those of the Christian Coalition.

Interfaith Alliance is growing throughout the country, representing more than 14,000 members and increasing its membership by 2,000 per month, Valentine said. The group, which reports that it has netted more than $1 million in donations, boasts chapters in 11 states.

The group's mission, Valentine said, is to counter what he calls the "divisive and intimidating" political agenda of the Christian Coalition. For example, his group opposes a constitutional amendment regarding school prayer and other aspects of the coalition's 10-point congressional agenda, called the "Contract With the American Family."

Christian Coalition members are quick to defend their group, saying the organization is neither divisive nor intolerant.

"We're a body of religious conservative voters involved in a political process, sponsoring legislation that would be more friendly to the family," said Christian Coalition spokesman Mike Russell. "The Interfaith Alliance is trying to impose a cruel double standard: that it's OK for Christian liberals to be involved in politics, but not Christian conservatives."

'The moderate Christian voices were not being heard in the press.'

— Rev. Herbert Valentine

They are basically saying religious conservatives are a threat to democracy, and I think that's a ludicrous argument."

Members of the Interfaith Alliance, which have been dubbed by some as the "religious left," say they want to express more diverse opinions.

The alliance claims a wide range of religious, political and racial diversity among members and one of its strengths is not endorsing a particular political party, said Albert Pennybacker, an alliance board member.

From the group's national headquarters, a sparse five-room office in Washington, D.C., members work to educate voters on political issues and help people organize local chapters.

Some religious leaders, although alarmed by the influence of the Christian Coalition, disagree with the means the Interfaith Alliance is using to counter it.

For example, disturbed by what they saw as a polarized debate between the religious right and religious left, Jim Wallis, founder of Sojourner magazine, and the Rev. Tony Compolo formed the Progressive Evangelical Network in June. Made up of more than 80 Christian leaders, the organization seeks to reconcile the two political parties, using religion as a bridge.

"The old divisions between left and right; Democrats and Republicans — those politics are bankrupt," said Compolo, an evangelist based at Eastern College in St. Davids, Pa. "We want to help communities find pragmatic solutions to problems, not political ones."

Compolo said the group plans to form a Progressive Evangelical Caucus, which will ensure that evangelical conferences and gatherings are not entirely dominated by speakers representing the religious right.

Portland's Levada to lead San Francisco archdiocese

By Dara Adkiko Tom
The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Archbishop William Levada on Thursday gave few hints on how he will manage the San Francisco archdiocese, which has been wracked by financial and sexual misconduct accusations, but reiterated his dedication to preserving the traditions of the church.

Pope John Paul II named Levada, who has led the Portland, Ore., archdiocese for nine years, to eventually replace Archbishop John Quinn as head of the San Francisco archdiocese. Levada will serve as archbishop coadjutor until Quinn retires next spring.

"I am very pleased to be coming here to San Francisco, with its rich tradition of civic and church life," Levada said. "I don't come here with any preconceived ideas that I'm going to impose on the archdiocese of San Francisco."

He has a reputation as one of Catholic America's leading conservatives.

"I don't consider the word 'conservative' a bad word," he said. "Nor do I consider the word 'liberal' a bad word. It comes from the word 'liber,' to be free. And we are a free people, God made us free and expects us to use our freedoms for the good."

Levada is scheduled to return Oct. 24 for an official welcome.

Quinn had garnered support from liberals for appointing women to high positions and for publicly opposing nuclear weapons and welfare cuts.

But the San Francisco archdiocese has been under much scrutiny since 1992 for alleged sexual misconduct by some of its priests.

The archdiocese, recently agreed to a $500,000 settlement in a lawsuit against two priests.

Many parishioners also have complained of financial misconduct and were angry that nine churches have closed in recent years.

Levada, 59, born in Long Beach, Calif., is no stranger to the San Francisco area, where he has attended family reunions with relatives from both the Irish and Portuguese sides of his family.

Quinn, 66, who has been granted a fellowship at Oxford University for spring 1996, will live at a seminary when he returns from Oxford.

The archdiocese includes 340,000 Catholics in San Francisco, San Mateo and Marin counties.

A real vacation

CONCEPTION, Mo. (AP) — Vacations in the '90s can be exhausting.

People leave the office bound for a tropical cruise, but they tote along their cell phones, beepers and beepers. Families pull children out of school and head to the mountains, only to plop the kids in day camps with classes on how to recognize edible mushrooms.

The result: Folks come home from vacation needing a nap.

There are alternatives.

If you REALLY want a vacation that offers serious down time, a chance to reflect on life's promise and the opportunity to stretch your brain toward contemplation, consider a weekend at Conception Abbey.

The abbey, a century-old Roman Catholic monastery that is home to about 80 Benedictine monks, is open year-round to groups and individuals looking for a chance to relax without having to worry which souvenir stalls sell the cheapest T-shirts.

Leave the electronic devices at home and stash a good book in the suitcase. Prayer is optional. "People don't just slow down when they come here — they come to a complete halt," said Karen Ceckowski, administrator of the Conception Abbey Center.

There just isn't a whole lot to do here, except recuperate and think things through. We have a lot of single-parent families that come here so they can spend some real time together.

We had one single dad who gets to see his daughter once a month.

They came up here, fished, watched movies and had a great time. It was their time.

The monastery, which also includes the four-year Conception Seminary College, is located in northwest Missouri about 100 miles north of Kansas City. It has 96 dormitory-style guest rooms. Many have twin beds with baths down the hall. Rooms with queen-size beds are available, and there are some suites, which consist of a bedroom, sitting room and half-bath. Rooms are inexpensive: $20 a night for a single and $17 for each person in a double.

The monastery has its own kitchen staff, which bakes fresh bread daily. Meals are $3.50 and are served a short walk across campus in the dining hall.

"We try not to be used as a hotel — that would go against our status as a nonprofit organization," Ceckowski said. "But we are here for travelers looking for a monastery experience."

While Conception Abbey's strong points for travelers are prayer, solitude and tranquility, there are other ways to spend time at the 1,000-acre spread.

The abbey has a few miles of hiking trails, where walkers likely will come across rabbits, groundhogs, deer, fox, cranes and hawks. Coyotes can be heard at night howling in the nearby hills. The abbey also has two small lakes stocked with crappie, bass and bluegill. Anglers need a Missouri fishing license.

If the workout — the physical one — gets tough, there is a nearby nun who gives massages.

Sister Cathleen Marie Timberlake, a member of the Benedictine Convent at Clyde, just down the road from the Abbey, is a certified massage therapist and will do a 90-minute massage at the convent for $40.

Conception Abbey is also home to the Printery House, a greeting card ministry, a for-profit source for Christian cards and gifts. The Printery House is open for tours.

While the monastery is Roman Catholic, it is open to people of any denomination, Ceckowski said. Guests are encouraged to pray with 'People don't just slow down when they come here — they come to a complete halt.'

— Karen Ceckowski, administrator of the Conception Abbey Center

A statue of Saint Benedict stands at the entry to the Basilica of the Immaculate Conception at the Conception Abbey in Conception, Mo. Travelers heading east on Missouri Highway 136 will find the abbey among farm fields. The retreat provides refuge for those weary from the stress of daily life.

Stanley debacle tears at Atlanta church

By Jennifer Graham Knight-Ridder News Service

Commentary

I do not know Charles and Anna Stanley and therefore am not qualified to comment on the state of their marriage. I do not attend First Baptist Church of Atlanta and therefore am not entitled to vote on whether the Rev. Charles Stanley should remain in his pulpit. But I suppose I can guess about it, since everyone else is.

Stanley is one of the nation's most popular preachers, a Southern Baptist who heads a 14,000-member church and ministers to thousands more with his "In Touch" TV show. He was president of the Southern Baptist Convention, the nation's largest Protestant denomination, in 1984 and 1985.

And all along, it appears, his marriage was falling apart.

The Stanleys, who have been married for 40 years, separated in 1992. The next year, Anna Stanley filed for divorce. She later sought a legal separation but then refilled for divorce in March, saying attempts to reconcile had failed.

As dirty laundry does, this pile does not compare to the sink that emanated from the Susan Smith trial and its attendant familial woes. This is apparently a failed marriage, nothing more. Anna Stanley has not publicly accused her husband of anything worse than neglect.

What makes this messy marriage news is that it is taking place among conservative people in a conservative church in a conservative denomination — that is for the most part, believers saying people are not qualified to be spiritual leaders.

First Baptist of Atlanta is torn, with supporters of Charles Stanley arguing that the Bible does not prohibit the pastor from remaining, while supporters of Anna Stanley insist that she step down.

In a voice saying Stanley should resign is his son, Andy, who resigned Aug. 2 as pastor of a satellite congregation of his father's church.

Over the weekend, a temporary resolution emerged. According to the Associate Blue Press, Stanley will relinquish administrative duties Sept. 1, replaced by a seven-man team appointed by deacons. He will continue to preach for now. But he told the church Sunday that he will resign completely if the divorce becomes final.

In addition, the deacons will appoint a committee to study the biblical qualifications for pastors and deacons and recommend a church policy within 90 days. (It's incredible that such a policy does not already exist at such a large church.)

There's no doubt the dilemma posed by the Stanleys' shaky union is painful to everyone involved. Charles Stanley insists that he loves his wife and wants to stay married.

Anna Stanley, in her first public statement since filing for divorce in 1993, said Monday that her husband's lack of progress in their relationship are a "charade" and reconciliation is no longer possible.

"Long ago ... Charles in effect abandoned our marriage," she wrote. "He chose his priorities and I have not been one of them."

Already, that means that I want to know. It's not my business. It's not anyone's besides Charles and Anna Stanley's. Except for the little problem of religious beliefs that keep divorced persons from even being deacons — let alone pastors — in many churches.

To their credit, many churches are beginning to reach out to divorced people, offering support groups, counseling and forgiveness. But pastors will always be held to a higher standard, and why shouldn't they be? Churches bless marriages; churches should do everything they can to sustain those marriages.

To say that it's OK, that Charles Stanley's pastoral life should be unaffected by this critical blowup in his private life, is unfair to those who remain in not-so-great unions because they believe in marriage, in its intrinsic value to society.

If Bill and Hillary Clinton can stay married, why can't Charles and Anna Stanley?

Tragic as the situation may be, Stanley is going to have to practice what he no doubt has been preaching for so long: believe in marriage. He made his bed. Let him lie in it.

Alone, it appears.

Reformed Church built on Bible, covenants

"We are often asked the questions: 'Reformed, what does that mean?' and 'Reformed from what?'" The answers to those questions help define our roots as well as our beliefs.

The Twin Falls Reformed Church is one of approximately 1,000 churches in a denomination whose full title reads "The Church of Jesus Christ Reformed According to the Word of God," but it is commonly known as the Reformed Church in America.

The roots of the Reformed Church are found in the 16th century Protestant Reformation, a movement which began in Germany and spread to Switzerland, France, Scotland, Hungary and the Netherlands, among others. The Reformed Church came to this country as part of the Dutch migration early in the 17th century, and the first Reformed Church was established in 1628 in New Amsterdam.

What we believe
Brian Vriesman

A look at the Magic Valley's various religious faiths

"Reformed according to the word of God" means the Bible is more than a textbook. We believe the Bible to be the living word of God, inspired by the Holy Spirit. The Reformed faith has historically adhered to three statements of faith — the Heidelberg Catechism, the Belgic Confession and the Canons of Dort — and has accepted the historic creeds (The Apostles Creed, Nicene Creed and Athanasian Creed) as descriptive of our faith. Our doctrinal roots are based on "Calvinism," the theological outgrowth of the reformation, which emphasizes the sovereignty of God. The Reformed Church emphasizes the biblical theme of "covenant."

The covenants between God and his people are found throughout the Bible and influence how we are called to relate to one another. The Reformed perspective recognizes that God calls us to "covenant" together, sharing joys and sorrows, assisting in needs wherever possible and spending time in small groups, studying, praying and fellowshiping. Another trademark of the Reformers was the belief in the "priesthood of believers," a belief that each person is called by God, not only to service within the church but also to serve him in whatever role or vocation he or she pursues. The business person, farmer, student, etc., is called by God to a lifestyle of holiness and service in the same way the preacher at the pulpit is called.

Finally, the Reformed faith confesses what Peter, Jesus' disciple, confessed when he said, "You are the Christ, the Son of the Living God."

The Reformed faith is centered in Christ. Jesus Christ is its starting point, and Christ is the goal toward which it moves.

Everything that the Reformed Church attempts to accomplish through the power of the Holy Spirit is designed to bring glory and honor to Jesus, who we believe is the only way to salvation and eternal life.

The Rev. Brian Vriesman is senior pastor at the Twin Falls Reformed Church, 1631 Grandview Drive N. Regular worship services are held at 8:45, 10 and 11:15 a.m. Sundays.

Miracle in the Tacoma Dome

Televangelist Benny Hinn packs the stadium with thousands who believe in miracle cures

Seattle Times

TACOMA, Wash. — If Joshua could blow down the walls of Jericho with the blast of a trumpet, televangelist Benny Hinn nearly blew the top off the Tacoma Dome with a 1,000-voice choir, praise-to-God music cranked up, deafening roar and more than 20,000 people clapping, praying, cheering and raising their hands to the heavens.

And that was just the warmup. By the end of Hinn's four-hour Miracle Crusade Thursday night, many spectators had dissolved into tears of joy and expectation as Hinn, the controversial faith healer from Orlando, Fla., ordered Satan out of the bodies of the sick and infirm, many of whom had entered the Dome in wheelchairs or with canes.

"Devil of infirmity," cried Hinn, "I command you in Jesus' name to let the people go!" "Someone is being healed of cancer," he told the huge audience as they prayed aloud for miracles. "A skin condition is being healed. A tumor is disappearing. Someone's legs are being healed. Someone with AIDS is being set free by the power of Almighty God!"

One man climbed onto the stage to testify he had been cured on the spot of life-threatening cancer. He strut his cane away because he said he no longer needed it. A teenage boy broke down in tears and told Hinn he had been hobbled by a painful knee injury, but now the hurt was gone. To prove it, he ran back and forth across the stage.

An older woman said she was now strong enough to get out of her wheelchair. She, too, ran around the stage. Hinn noticed she was wearing a hearing aid. He told her to take it off. "I can hear!" she exclaimed as Hinn snapped his fingers by the side of her head. "Yes, each test- fied, Hinn touched their foreheads and they fell backward into the arms of a waiting attendant, "slain in the Spirit," or overcome by the power of the Holy Spirit.

"The people were identified only by first names or no names. It was not possible to determine from the audience area whether their claims were true, but no one at the Tacoma Dome seemed to greet their testimonies with disbelief."

Ron Smiddy, a 47-year-old used-automobile-parts dealer from Wenatchee, Wash., could be seen trying to lift himself from his wheelchair, but to no avail.

Still, said Smiddy, who lost the use of his legs in a motorcycle accident 24 years ago, "My heart has been touched because I have seen people who have been healed. Why I don't receive my healing, I don't know. I don't understand. But I still rejoice in the Lord."

— Ron Smiddy, 47, Wenatchee, Wash.

years ago, "My heart has been touched because I have seen people who have been healed. Why I don't receive my healing, I don't know. I don't understand. But I still rejoice in the Lord."

This was the second large evangelical Christian event in the Puget Sound region in a little more than a month. The Promise Keepers Christian men's gathering in July jammed the Kingdome in Seattle with nearly 65,000 men seeking to be better husbands, fathers and citizens.

"God Almighty is moving in the Northwest," said Hinn in trying to explain why 22,000 to 24,000 people would flood into the Tacoma Dome on a Thursday night.

On stage were guest clergy, including the Rev. Fulton Buntin, pastor of the Tacoma Life Center and local host of the Miracle Crusade. Actress Dyan Cannon was in the audience and rose, pointing a finger to heaven, when she was introduced.

"We prayed that God would send a revival to this country," said Hinn. "Get ready, get ready. Don't be shocked if you hear one-day that Bill Clinton is speaking in tongues, a belief by Pentecostals and some other Christian groups that speaking in an unknown language is a sign one has been filled with the Holy Spirit."

Hinn, 42, began preaching in 1974 and started his television ministry in 1990.

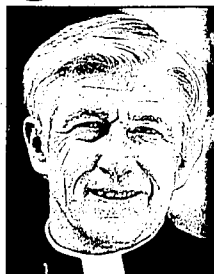

His flamboyant style reportedly was the basis for Steve Martin's portrayal of a faith healer in the movie "Leap of Faith." His media ministries, according to one magazine report, pulled in approximately $20 million last year — from the Miracle Crusades around the country and his internationally televised program, "This Is Your Day."

Admission is free to the Miracle Crusades, but Hinn was asking for donations of $10 to $1,000 last night to support his ministries.

In addition to the crusades, TV program and book writing, Hinn is the pastor of the interdenominational World Outreach Center in Orlando, which serves 10,000 people a week. After years as an unaffiliated minister, Hinn was ordained last year as an Assemblies of God pastor.

Religion

After scandals, U.S. clergy face background checks

Former Bishop David Johnson

BOSTON (AP) — Background checks, once reserved for lawmen or lawbreakers, now are being done on a whole new class of people: priests.

Following stories about sexual abuse and other transgressions among clergymen, the Episcopal dioceses in New England are requiring priests to fill out background questionnaires. Two Roman diocese dioceses in Ohio are using the police to investigate clergy and lay leaders.

Some religious leaders say the checks are needed to restore confidence in the church. And some insurance companies are requiring them before giving churches coverage for sexual misconduct.

But some priests believe the policy violates their right to privacy, and 40 of the 600 members of the clergy in the Massachusetts Episcopal Diocese who received the form in May have refused to fill it out. The diocese plans to meet in September with those priests.

Among the questions they are being asked:

• "Have you ever been charged or adjudicated with sexual misconduct?"

Allegations spark checks

• "Do you have a history of drug abuse?"

• "Have you ever been charged with misappropriating funds?"

The responses are being forwarded to a Minnesota records company, which then verifies them with the references the ministers also are asked to provide.

"I'm in favor of accountability and background checks, but my concern is we're running off with a sort of McCarthyism, let's cover ourselves, let's cover ourselves," said the Rev. Ian Douglas, a professor at the Episcopal Divinity School in Cambridge.

The Massachusetts diocese — with 95,000 members, the largest in the country — joined with the four other New England dioceses in requiring the background questionnaire after its former bishop was involved in a sexual scandal.

Former Bishop David Johnson committed suicide in January, and shortly afterward three women stepped forward to say Johnson had sex with them. The church labeled the situation "sexual exploitation."

Insurance is a driving factor. The Church Insurance Co., the diocese's primary insurer, announced two years ago that it would separate sexual abuse and liability from other coverage. To qualify for that coverage, churches must have sexual misconduct policies, prevention workshops for clergy and lay members, plus background checks.

Leonid Petlakh, a Russian immigrant and junior at Hunter College majoring in Judaic studies, was honored at the annual meeting of the American Jewish Committee for winning a national essay contest on "What Being Jewish Means to Me."

Move from Minsk to Brooklyn becomes journey for the heart

NEW YORK (AP) — Leonid Petlakh found out he was Jewish in the first grade. Some classmates in Minsk had seen a list of students' nationalities, and amid the taunts of peers he ran home crying to ask his parents if it was true.

A decade and a half later, after emigrating to the United States from the former Soviet Union, Petlakh is a junior at Hunter College majoring in Judaic studies, with plans to enter the rabbinate. Recently, he was honored at the annual meeting of the American Jewish Committee for winning a national essay contest on "What Being Jewish Means to Me."

His poignant account of his own spiritual journey from secular to religious Judaism is one he compares to an encounter with God with roots going back to the Book of Exodus, when the Jewish people standing at Sinai entered into a covenant with God.

Today, whether it is for Russian emigrants raised in a secular state or American youths who tend to look back at their bar or bat mitzvahs as exit visas from religious observance, the challenge remains the same, Petlakh said.

"God is revealed in every generation. We stand at Sinai for every generation for the last thousands of years," he said in an interview. "For every generation, it's a must to find God."

In the former Soviet Union, there was neither Jew nor Christian in the religious sense. "There was no religion at all, not for the Jews, not for the Christians, not for anyone," he recalled.

But Jewish people were still identified as Jewish on their internal passports, and faced a lifetime of discrimination and harassment. Petlakh said his first reaction upon learning he was Jewish was typical of most Soviet Jews at the time: self-hate.

"It was a huge stigma being Jewish. Everyone knew that you'd be a third-class citizen the rest of your life," he said. "I felt an incredible shame. It was a curse."

It was at age 16, when a cousin led him in on a "secret" about the existence of a synagogue in Minsk, that Petlakh said he began to have some positive experiences about being Jewish. The old man praying in Hebrew did not seem relevant, but being able to meet socially with other Jewish youth restored a sense of dignity in being Jewish, he said. He left the Soviet Union in 1989, and after time in Austria and Italy, he and his parents came to New York in 1990. He began reading books on the Holocaust, Jewish history and Israel, and in Brooklyn College became active in the Hillel center.

Gradually, Petlakh said, his purely intellectual interest was transformed into religious feelings.

Now active in his faith, Petlakh has already made plans to study for the rabbinate after graduation at Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion.

In the former Soviet Union, many youths were never exposed to Judaism. In the United States, he finds many young people had disappointing experiences at "boring" Hebrew schools and after their bar or bat mitzvahs their attitude was "Thank God it's over."

Parents are largely responsible for this lack of interest, Petlakh said. If they display minimal commitments to Jewish life when their children are growing up, they come across as "racist" when they turn around and criticize their children for marrying someone who is not Jewish, Petlakh said.

Book lists religious houses with rooms, cabins

By Jennifer Graham Knight-Ridder News Service

Self-published books are not known for their beauty, and this one is no exception. It has a plain white cover with an awkward title printed in black, and nothing apparent to assure the reader that it's worth even half of the price — which is itself a problem. Twenty bucks for this?

But yeah, if you do any traveling, the ugly little book, "Overnight or Short Stay at Religious Houses Around the World," may be well worth your $20.

Compiled by retired Army Col. James Hughes and his wife, Victoria, the paperback is a warm invitation to anyone who has ever returned from a "vacation" more tired than when you left.

Peace pastored New York's famed Marble Collegiate Church for 53 years. But it was his 46 books, touting simple solutions to life's complicated problems, that made him a multimillionaire, counselor to conservative presidents and cultural icon. "Positive Thinking," published in 1952, topped the New York Times best seller list for 98 weeks. By Peale's death in 1993, it had sold 18 million copies.

Such places are listed in the Hughes' book, and, incredibly, they generally cost $25 to $55 per day and often include meals.

These travel deals come courtesy of people of faith, religious communities that see overnight hospitality as one of their God-given missions. There are thousands of monasteries, abbeys and the like that welcome people to their guest rooms and retreat cabins. And Jim Hughes has found both a ministry and business in telling people about them.

The book that crossed my desk is the fourth edition, and Hughes has sold about 3,000 copies of his simple guides. He has filled orders from Germany, Guam, France, Switzerland and even Vatican City (by an archbishop, not the pope). The venture began in 1988, when the Hugheses and three other authors, including about 100,000, and Jim and Victoria Hughes shared their experiences staying overnight at several religious houses.

Taking his time (he's retired and in no hurry), he mailed a letter to 300 bishops around the world, inquiring about their guest-friendly facilities. Then he bought a computer and began compiling the information that trickled in. Within 15 months, he had enough addresses to publish two editions — one of European facilities, another for North and Central America.

The most recent book contains addresses and telephone numbers of 2,202 houses, with 23 denominations in 63 countries.

Hughes lists addresses, telephone numbers, the sponsoring denomination and whether it's a guest or retreat house. (The difference: guest rooms allow visitors to come and go, as if they were staying at a hotel. Retreat houses are for people who want to stay on the grounds for a spiritual break, either as a private retreat, or one conducted by retreat leaders.)

The guests' personal beliefs do not matter. While most of the facilities are run by Roman Catholics or Anglicans, many are for people who want to be in the business longer," Hughes said, you don't have to be one to stay there.

Hughes thinks church libraries are the ideal place for his book, so the information is accessible to anyone. But any individual who would like to buy a copy should contact the publisher at $19.95 to Hugh Press, P.O. Box 2286, Bloomfield, N.J., 07003.

Ministers accuse Rev. Peale of plagiarism

Knight-Ridder News Service

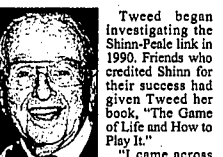

Was the Rev. Norman Vincent Peale, father of the "believe and succeed" theology sweeping American Protestantism, a plagiarist inspired by the occult?

A former Peale protege and a Unitarian minister think so.

In the current issue of the Journal Lutheran Quarterly, the Rev. John Gregory Tweed of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and the Rev. George D. Exoo of Pittsburgh write that many of Peale's uplifting affirmations originated with an "obscurer teacher of Occult science" named Florence Scovel Shinn.

Lutheran Quarterly is a juried academic journal of theology and history, with a national circulation of 1,000.

After comparing his books to hers, the authors cite scores of specific instances in which Peale and Shinn not only think alike, but use similar or identical phrases.

Peale

Tweed began investigating the alleged Peale link in 1990. Friends who credited Shinn for their success had given Tweed her book, "The Game of Life and How to Play It."

"I came across the phrase, 'When one door shuts, another door opens,' one of the great Peale battle cries," said Tweed.

Shinn, who died in 1940, drew on mystical sources dating to the ancient Egyptian philosopher Hermetus Trismegistus and the secrets of Freemasonry, as delineated in "The Kybalion," published in 1908 at a Masonic lodge.

Such sources are progenitors of New Age, a movement considered ungodly hocus-pocus by conservative and fundamentalist Christians.

The conclusions that Tweed and Exoo reached clearly dismay the stewards of Peale's legacy. Peale died in 1993, at 95.

The article is "built pretty much on ... coincidence," said John Allen, Peale's son-in-law and president of the board of the Peale Center for Christian Living in Pawling, N.Y.

He said neither he nor Peale's widow, Ruth, knew of Florence Scovel Shinn.

Peale, author of "The Power of Positive Thinking," is one of the 20th century's most influential religious figures, though some theologians accuse him of evangelizing a "cult of reassurance" and "vulgarizing" religion.

He also was a Mason, which didn't sit well with some of his followers. In 1988, he wrote to a concerned follower: "You ask if the vows taken by Masons are what may be described as Satanic ... I have never seen the slightest word or expression that is anything a Christian could not endorse."

Peale pastored New York's famed Marble Collegiate Church for 53 years. But it was his 46 books, touting simple solutions to life's complicated problems, that made him a multimillionaire, counselor to conservative presidents and cultural icon. "Positive Thinking," published in 1952, topped the New York Times best seller list for 98 weeks. By Peale's death in 1993, it had sold 18 million copies.

His chief disciple is California minister Dr. Robert Schuller, pastor of Garden Grove's Crystal Cathedral and host of the "Hour of Power" TV ministry.

Tweed and Exoo predict "discontinuity" among the "millions of mainline Christians, purporting to stand on orthodoxy and Scripture alone," who, through Peale, have "unwittingly embraced the Occult."

Missionaries

Four young people from the Magic Valley area have returned from serving or been called to serve missions for the Church of Jesus of Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Author Ware groups people into spiritual types

Dallas Morning News

Corinne Ware's elegantly written new book, "Discover Your Spiritual Type" (Alban Institute, $14.95), posits the notion that just as people fall into various psychological temperament types, they also can be grouped into various spiritual types.

Ware, a clinical therapist and pastoral counselor at the Samaritan Counseling Center in St. Joseph, Mo., has developed a 10-point test to help readers understand their own spiritual inclinations and those practiced at their place of worship. The test is directed primarily at Christians, but can be used by Jews.

The book came out of Ware's reading of the late Urban T. Holmes' work regarding different spiritual types and her own experiences in counseling people who felt that they did not "fit" within their worship groups.

Following Holmes' work in "A History of Christian Spirituality," she gives four categories: a head spirituality, a heart spirituality, a mystic spirituality and a kingdom spirituality.

A head spirituality, often seen in mainline denominations, is an intellectual "thinking" spirituality that favors what it can see, touch and vividly imagine. Ware writes. To enhance spiritual life, they may seek more study groups, better sermons and some sort of theological renewal, she writes.

A heart spirituality, often seen in fundamentalist and charismatic congregations, emphasizes the anthropomorphic representation of God and the centrality of scripture.

To explain the difference: While devotees of head spirituality might say their doctrine is purer than others, advocates of heart spirituality would say their walk with the Lord is closer. Mystic spirituality is contemplative, introspective, intuitive and focused on the inner world. It focuses on "being" rather than "doing," says Ware.

The fourth type is kingdom spirituality, which is the smallest group. "There is a courageous and sturdy idealism that takes responsibility for change. They have a passion for transforming society," Ware writes.

Ware, who will teach her theories to the staff of Dallas' Pastoral Counselor and Education Center during August, says she has been giving the test to unchurched people, clergy and members of all denominations for three years.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"Flattery is all right — if you don't inhale."

—Adlai Stevenson

"Great lead," exclaimed an exultant East. "You reasoned I would have doubted for a diamond lead if my diamonds were good enough to beat the game."

West led his fourth-best spade to East's king and South won his ace, guaranteeing two stoppers in the suit. South started to play his long to East's ace and East returned the spade six. Suddenly, two spade stoppers were not enough. Instead of winning his queen (a hopeless move), West played his deuce. Still needing two heart tricks to make his game, South led a heart to East's ace and East led a third spade to West's queen. This gave West three spades and East two aces for one down.

West's lead was a well-reasoned choice. His single diamond coupled with no lead-directing double made a diamond lead unattractive. However, criticism for South's play was more appropriate than flattery for the defense.

Instead of ensuring two spade stoppers, South should have played to isolate West's suit. He can accomplish this by ducking twice. After that, he can safely knock out both aces and the defender's win only four tricks.

And what if spades were 4-4? Then the isolation play would yield three spades and two aces for one down. Was this likely? Not very. Lead-directing double or not, why would West lead a broken four-card suit, instead of partner's suit?
