Local jury may hear Lewiston case

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A Nez Perce County judge is trying to find jurors in Twin Falls County who haven't formed opinions about the murders — or the depraved life histories — of a dead Lewiston couple.

But the man who is charged in the apparent revenge slayings of Luella and Ronald Bingham of Lewiston has supporters; over the weekend they bought an advertisement in The Times-News recounting the Bingham's past six crimes.

Nonetheless, jury selection in the first-degree murder trial of Kenneth Arrasmith is scheduled for 9 a.m. Thursday at the

Arrasmith
Ronald Bingham out of vengeance because he believed they had drugged and raped

Twin Falls County Courthouse. The trial will start Nov. 6 in Nez Perce County, where the judge has determined that pretrial publicity has provided too much information to jurors.

Prosecutors say Arrasmith murdered Luella and Ronald Bingham out of vengeance because he believed they had drugged and raped his 15-year-old daughter, Arrasmith, 44, contends they sexually tormented his daughter and other girls, but he has not admitted killing the Bingham's and has pleaded innocent to two counts of first-degree murder.

The case has attracted media attention from as far away as Germany.

Tuesday, Second District Judge Ida Leggett was reportedly angered by the advertisement that ran in The Times-News Sunday in support of Arrasmith, calling it a blatant attempt to influence the potential jury.

The ad stated that Nez Perce County Prosecutor Denise Rosen wants all of the Bingham's past history, including all of the evidence of "the horrible, degrading, violent acts on children."

Since Arrasmith's arrest, 17 women have reportedly come forward with stories of depravity involving the Bingham's, stretching over two decades, say his lawyers, Roy and Craig Mosman.

But Judge Leggett has ruled that evidence of the Bingham's past crimes are inadmissible at trial. The Bingham's were charged with rape in 1978; the accuser was their 13-year-old niece. The charges were dropped after her father sent her away.

Ironically, Arrasmith, then working as an Astoria County, Wash., sheriff's deputy, stood guard over the couple while their

Fish in diet can prevent sudden cardiac death

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — The latest study to explore the slippery question of whether eating fish reduces the risk of heart disease found that it does — in modest quantities and for a certain type of the illness.

The study found that people who ate the equivalent of three ounces of salmon a week were only half as likely to be stricken with cardiac arrest as those who ate no fish.

Results are published in today's issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association.

The findings may seem to conflict with a well-publicized study this spring by Harvard researchers, who found that men who ate fish seven times a week were just as likely to have heart trouble as those who ate fish once a month.

"(But) we view these results as complementary and not in conflict with earlier findings," said the lead author of the new study, Dr. David S. Siscovick of the University of Washington in Seattle.

The studies differed in two key ways.

Siscovick said. The Seattle study focused on cardiac arrest rather than overall heart disease — which was the chief concern of the Harvard study.

Also, the Seattle study explored the value of eating some fish compared to eating none, rather than the Harvard report's focus on eating more versus eating less.

In the new study, "modest" amounts of seafood containing two key omega-3 oils were sufficient, he said.

The oils are plentiful in salmon, herring, mackerel and anchovies. To a lesser degree, they are present in oysters, sardines, rainbow trout, albacore tuna and other fish and shellfish.

Two-three-ounce servings of albacore tuna provide as much of the oils as one three-ounce serving of salmon.

Governor to discuss agreement on waste

GOP legislators claim Craig should answer to area voters

By Karen Tolkkinn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Gov. Phil Batt will talk about nuclear waste in a Twin Falls visit today, but two local GOP lawmakers say Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, has more to answer for with Magic Valley voters than Batt does.

And Craig's Democratic challenger Walt Minnick may be a strong opponent, they say.

Batt will speak to the Twin Falls Rotary Club at noon at the Turf Club about the nuclear waste agreement he signed two weeks ago. He is likely to face a barrage of questions and perhaps some protests outside the restaurant.

But Rep. Mark Stubbs, R-Twin Falls, and Rep. Bruce Newcomb, R-Burley, said Tuesday that Craig didn't do enough to keep waste from coming into Idaho. They will watch closely, they said, to see whether Craig will lead a search for a permanent national nuclear waste repository.

Craig has "absolutely not" been vocal enough, Stubbs said.

Will the nuclear waste issue affect Craig's 1996 re-election campaign?

Batt

"Yeah, I think it might have an impact," Stubbs said. "Ninety percent of the impact it has will depend on whether he takes the lead in finding a repository for high-level nuclear waste."

Craig has been criticized by Minnick and by former Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus for not being active enough in opposing waste shipments into Idaho. Craig's inadequate response to the issue left Batt little choice but to sign a deal with the federal government, they allege.

A week ago, Craig's spokesman George Clarke said questions about the political impact of the nuclear waste agreement were "irrelevant." On Tuesday, he said the questions were relevant, but that Craig didn't want to politicize the issue.

"It's not new that people have disagreements," he said. "You're certainly going to see other Republicans disagree with the governor and with the Idaho congressional delegation."

Stennett wants Idahoans to have say on waste issue

By Karen Tolkkinn
Times-News writer

Stennett

KETCHUM — If the people don't want nuclear waste shipped to Idaho, the people should have a chance to say so, said Sen. Cliff Stennett, D-Ketchum, on Tuesday.

Stennett, who will speak at a nuclear waste rally on the Capitol steps in Boise today, said he submitted three legislative proposals on Tuesday for the attorney general's review.

"One proposal would let the Idaho Department of Transportation write stringent rules governing the transporting of nuclear waste," he said. Another would permit the state Division of Environmental Quality to develop strict air and water-quality regulations.

But the most important proposal, Stennett said, would ask the Legislature to let Idahoans vote on whether to keep or reject the nuclear-waste agreement signed by Gov. Phil Batt and the federal government two weeks ago.

"I think we are going to be the de facto permanent repository" if the agreement continues, he said. "Every time one of those trains go through, it's going to heighten the awareness and make people mad. I don't think (the issue) is going to go away."

In addition to bringing the three bills to the Legislature, pending the attorney general's approval, Stennett said he plans to ask people at today's rally to write an initiative, bringing the agreement to the voters.

"The most important thing I'd like to happen is the people of Idaho have a chance to speak," he said. "I think maybe the governor misread the people."

He said he has also asked the attorney general whether the governor's nuclear-waste agreement violates a 1995 legislative resolution against making Idaho a nuclear waste dump.

His bills should be well-received in the Legislature, he said, citing an Idaho Statesman poll earlier this year that found 85 percent of Idahoans didn't want nuclear waste coming into the state.

Stennett said he would prefer to see the waste staying where it's created instead of being shipped to low-populated states such as Idaho and Nevada.

But Republican Rep. Mark Stubbs, a Twin Falls lawyer, said a referendum would never pass because federal laws are supreme over state laws.

"I think Sen. Stennett should review the Constitution of the United States," he said.

Mercury drops to zero in Montana as snow swirls east

Temperatures fell almost to zero Tuesday in Montana and snow was scattered over the northern Plains, while heavy rain fell in the Southeast.

Arctic air pushed into Montana overnight, dropping Tuesday morning lows into the single digits and the teens.

Tuesday's low for the lower 48 states was 2 above zero at Browning and Great Falls, Mont.

Parts of the Northwest had record lows for the date, although not as cold as in Montana. They included 28 at Portland, Ore.; 24 at Salem, Ore.; 23 at Olympia, Wash., and 16 at Yakima, Wash.

As the cold air rolled out across the Plains, snow was scattered over parts of Wyoming, the Dakotas, Nebraska and Minnesota. On Monday, the cold air mass had dropped up to 10 inches in snow on some Montana mountains.

Rain, showers were likely through the Midwest and Great Lakes, changing to snow during the night over the northern Great Lakes.

In the West, showers were likely in parts of California, and areas of rain and thunderstorms were possible in parts of Arizona, New Mexico and Texas.

Elsewhere, rain was widespread across the extreme Southeast and also was scattered northward into the middle Atlantic Coast states.

Most areas reported light rain, but Augusta, Ga., got about a half-inch and Myrtle Beach, S.C., got 1.23 inches from midnight to noon.

Meanwhile, Hurricane Tanya was weakening far out in the Atlantic, about 900 miles west-southwest of the Azores, and was expected to be downgraded to a tropical storm on Wednesday. Its steady wind speed was down to about 85 mph.

Tuesday's lowest wind chill, the rating based on wind speed and temperature, was 13 below zero at Catic Bank, Mont.

Local politicians concede Craig's position was "an easy move. He was caught between state and national interests. Stubbs said.

And Newcomb, although he criticized Craig for not doing enough to oppose the shipyards, said Craig didn't have enough seniority to win on the issue.

"It would have been nice if we had been able to block any move in Congress, because the governor would have been in a better position" to bargain, Newcomb said.

Keeping the issue in Congress would have forced national lawmakers to address the lack of a permanent waste-storage site, he said.

Stubbs said Craig "should be concerned" about Minnick's candidacy, Minnick, he said, "is probably the best possible candidate that has come along in a long time. I think he has some credibility. He has some good business background."

Minnick's chances against the incumbent Republican are slim, but he could be aided by widening his campaign message to include other issues beside nuclear waste, Stubbs said.

Other local lawmakers interviewed, Tuesday, did not share Stubbs and Newcomb's critical view of Craig.

Craig is still a strong candidate, but the nuclear waste impact on his campaign will depend on how the issue unfolds, said Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly.

"Politics is full of surprises," Noh said.

"Batt is likely to have a keen audience during today's speech, Noh said.

"My guess is a lot of people are interested in more information," he said. "They want to know more about it and they deserve to know more about it."

Today's Rotary Club meeting is not open to the general public because of limited seating, according to club President Dick McMahon.

Outlaw's great-grandson flays college

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Jesse James may be back in his grave, but a dispute about a college's refusal to host the outlaw's funeral is still alive.

James' great-grandson, James R. Ross, accused two officials of William Jewell College of "discriminatory and bigoted acts" in withdrawing permission for the funeral to be held in the school's chapel.

Ross, a retired California judge, said in a letter to college president Christian Sizemore and chaplain James Cain that they went too far in applying a school policy against inflammatory racial symbols to the obscure Missouri Confederate battle flag.

He also noted that Jesse James' father, the Rev. Robert James, was a co-founder of the Baptist college at Liberty.

"He undoubtedly turned over in his grave with your discriminatory and bigoted acts," wrote Ross, who lives in Fullerton, Calif.

The William Jewell president's office said Tuesday Sizemore and Cain were unavailable for comment, but they were attending a Missouri Baptist Convention meeting in Kansas City. Neither returned messages left by The Associated Press at the college and at the convention hotel.

Cain had initially agreed to allow the Jittle-known Missouri battle flag — which is dark blue with red trim and a white cross — to be draped on James' casket in the chapel. During the Civil War, James rode with a band of Missouri Confederate guerrillas led by William Quantrill.

Funeral organizers said they agreed to the compromise in a hands-hawk deal with Cain, and would forego using the more familiar "Stars and Bars" flag as a concession to the college's policy.

But Sizemore later overruled Cain by extending a ban on the more noted flag to any symbols or mention of the Confederacy.

The school's policy equates Confederate symbols with those of Nazism and white supremacy, Cain said in a recent interview.

That decision angered Ross, who told Sizemore and Cain: "You define not only the many, many thousands of those who served in the Confederacy, especially those from Missouri, and their descendants, but the hundreds of thousands of y's who fought and died fighting Nazism in World War II."

The funeral was held Saturday at a Knights of Columbus hall in Kearney. It was sponsored by the Sons of Confederate Veterans, a group which opposes the use of Confederate symbols by hate groups.

Ross wrote: "For 50 years I have fought for civil rights and equality and will continue to fight all types of bigots and discrimination to my dying day."

He and five other great-grandchildren of James attended the funeral and reburial, the third for the outlaw.

Remains were exhumed from his grave in July for DNA and other tests aimed at debunking false claims of kinship to James. A court order said the remains had to be reburied by Tuesday.

Saturday's funeral included display of the better-known Confederate battle flag, along with an honor guard of Confederate re-enactors.

Non-nuclear explosions planned for Nevada site

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department said Tuesday its Nevada Test Site will conduct six subcritical explosions using nuclear materials over the next two years to help ensure the safety and reliability of its atomic weapons stockpile.

Department officials emphasized there will be elaborate safeguards to assure that the underground experiments are designed to prevent a self-sustaining nuclear chain reaction and a nuclear explosion.

The Clinton administration is committed to ending nuclear testing. Last August, President Clinton said he would seek a "zero" year comprehensive test ban treaty as part of ongoing negotiations in Geneva.

"To ensure these experiments cannot result in a nuclear explosion and are, thus, consistent with the president's 'zero' yield policy, each experimental design will undergo a technical compliance review," the Energy Department said in a statement.

"The analysis must conclude that, in the analysis, the experiment will not reach criticality in order to proceed with the experiment," it continued.

The department said it planned two subcriticality experiments next year and four additional experiments in 1997. They will be conducted 980 feet underground at the Nevada Test Site's Lyner facility.

Also, the department said it has awarded a five-year, $1.5 billion contract to Bechtel Nevada Corp. to manage the site, where scores of tests have been conducted.

One of the new tables gives statistics on mothers who smoked during pregnancy. Nearly 18 percent were white, 14 percent black.

The more public school education the mother had, the more likely she was to be a smoker.

A table on diseases reported by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta bears this notice, "Figures should be interpreted with caution," because some are incomplete.

Of reportable diseases, which include rabies, tetanus, tuberculosis and typhus, the largest number by far was for cases of AIDS, 103,691 in 1993. The second ranked was aseptic meningitis, 12,848.

On a less somber note:

In 1993, movies took in $48 billion, an increase of nearly $5 billion over the previous year. There were 2 billion books sold, 1.2 billion of them paperback. The 35-44 year-old age group bought more books than any other.

Amateur softball engaged 42 million Americans on 200,000 adult teams and 62,000 for kids. There were 24.6 million golfers, playing 498 million rounds; 23 million tennis players using 2,000,000 courts. Americans bought 13 million bicycles, 5 million of them imported.

Clarkson home was searched.

In 1986, the Bingham's were charged in the rape of their 16-year-old baby sister. Ronald Bingham pleaded guilty to second-degree rape, and charges against Mrs. Bingham were dismissed. He served 18 months.

Arasmith's teen-age daughter lived with the Bingham's earlier this year. She eventually told family members that the couple had dragged her, raped her and brainwashed her.

Prosecutors say that on May 17, Arasmith took a 10-9 semi-automatic pistol to the Bingham's garage and shot Ronald Bingham 23 times, and then shot Luella Bingham six times in the back as she tried to escape.

Sympathizers have donated money for Arasmith's defense, saying he merely administered frontier justice.

Tuesday, Times-News Publisher Stephen Hartgen disputed Leggett's charge that the ad could poison potential jurors being selected in Twin Falls County.

"I don't think that either the ad or the reporting on this case precludes the picking of the jury from a pool out of Twin Falls County," Hartgen told the Associated Press. "The law doesn't require us to keep people in ignorance. In fact, our responsibility as a press is to inform people about these cases."

The ad prompted Rosen to ask for another change of venue and a one-week continuance of the trial in Lewiston; But Leggett ordered jury selection to go on as planned.

Bankrupt governor details debt

PHOENIX (AP) — Gov. Fife Symington, a one-time millionaire who promised to run the state like his real estate empire, told creditors at a bankruptcy hearing Tuesday he has turned to his wife and mother to help pay his mounting debts.

The two-term Republican underwent a painstaking examination of his finances but offered little new in his first court appearance since filing for personal bankruptcy Sept. 29.

Though he comes from a family that traces its wealth to industrialist Henry Clay Frick, and is married to a wealthy heiress, Symington claimed assets of just $61,000. Other assets, including his townhouse in an exclusive gated community, are in the name of his wife, Ann.

Symington lost millions in Arizona's boom-to-bust real estate economy in the late 1980s and early 1990s.

He owes nearly $25 million, including more than $11 million to a consortium of union pension funds that financed a downtown shopping center that has attracted almost no shops or shoppers.

Attorney Michael Manning, representing the pension funds, questioned Symington for nearly two hours. He probed for details of family trusts that Symington said were established for him by his grandfather.

Manning also asked the governor to confirm figures included in a series of financial statements used to secure bank loans for some of his 13 real estate developments.

Creditors are expected to try to get money from a trust for Ann Symington, and to try to prove Symington fudged the statements to get loans.

Symington responded vaguely to most questions, saying he could not recall specific details of transactions that in some cases were several years old.

Gov. Fife Symington, R-Ariz., faces the media after his first court appearance since filing for personal bankruptcy.

Symington's temper flared briefly when Manning questioned him about a figure in a news release issued by the governor the day he filed for bankruptcy. "Perhaps you're trying to embarrass me," he said. The governor later called the question "pure politics."

Manning said that despite the sometimes vague answers, he was satisfied.

"It's the first round and it went like we expected it to," he said. "We gained a lot of information we needed. There's a lot of fodder to follow."

Symington said he has four family trusts which provide about $30,000 a year in interest. He said he also has received portions of the principal on a number of occasions in the past.

"I have the ability to request a distribution from the trustees. They are totally independent. Sometimes they say yes, sometimes they say no," Symington said. He provided no details other than to say that some of the money from the trusts went to pay legal and accounting fees.

He said he doesn't know the total value of the trusts, though he has previously said they are worth less than $1 million total.

Symington also said his wife and mother have helped pay off legal bills that have amounted to over $1 million.

He was sued in 1991 by the federal Resolution Trust Corp. over his actions as director of a failed savings and loan that invested in one of his projects. He and other defendants settled the $200 million lawsuit for $12 million in an agreement that didn't require Symington to pay any money or admit wrongdoing.

A parallel criminal investigation by a federal grand jury continues.

In addition to legal fees, Symington said he owed about $1 million to the accounting firm Coopers & Lybrand and has paid part of it.

"Those fees were paid out of various sources, some of which I paid some of which my wife paid," Symington said. He said his mother, Martha, also contributed $30,000 to $40,000.

Bankruptcy trustee Lou Movitz, who is in charge of selling off the governor's assets, conducted Tuesday's hearing.

"This is a meeting of creditors, not a court hearing," Movitz said. Anything not resolved in the hearing will have to be handled in a formal court hearing later.

An overflow crowd quickly packed the tiny courtroom, filling all 60 seats well before the hearing began.

Outside, a lone protester paced the sidewalk. He wore a sandwich board that read "Recall Fife: Politician borrow millions, pay thousands."

Symington filed under Chapter 7 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code, which means he could sell off any assets, determined to be included in the bankruptcy and distribute the proceeds among his creditors.

Senate bill makes cuts in transportation funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate approved and sent to President Clinton Tuesday a $37.5 billion transportation bill that would cut mass transit and Amtrak subsidies, streamline the Federal Aviation Administration and eliminate the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The House, meanwhile, approved deep cuts in spending on renewable energy and nuclear fusion research as part of a $19.3 billion bill for the Energy Department and federal water projects.

Clinton has indicated he will sign both bills, two of 13 appropriations bills that generally run the federal government.

The energy and water bill, approved by the House 402-24 and now awaiting Senate action, would cut the Energy Department's spending by $1.1 billion from what the administration had sought.

In other action involving government spending:

The House voted 314-106 to approve $2.2 billion for running Congress, a reduction of $200 million from last year. President Clinton vetoed an identical bill Oct. 3, saying he didn't "think Congress should take care of its own (spending) business before it takes care of the people's business," but he was expected to approve it this time.

The transportation spending bill, approved 87-14 by the Senate after being passed 393-29 by the House last week, is about $1 billion more than the administration requested. It would free the FAA from cumbersome personnel and purchasing rules that have prevented it from modernizing its air traffic control system in a timely fashion.

House and Senate conferees grappled over whether to lift a moratorium on issuing mining rights on federal land for as little as $2.50 an acre. The issue has delayed approval of a spending bill for the Interior Department.

The transportation spending bill includes $19.9 billion for highway spending, up $454 million from 1993.

Study says Weekly Reader takes tobacco's side

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Weekly Reader spread tobacco industry views and Joe Camel's image to millions of elementary schoolchildren and was far more likely than a competing newsletter to include health warnings, a University of California study shows.

At the time the articles appeared, from 1989 to 1994, the Weekly Reader's owner was the largest shareholder in R.J.R. Nicotiana, the creator of Joe Camel, the cartoon mascot for Camel cigarettes. It has since sold its interest.

In October 1994, health advocates attacked the Weekly Reader over an article for youngsters that discussed smokers' rights to sue the tobacco industry from smoking restrictions. The article said nothing about smoking as a cause of lung cancer and heart disease.

Following that uproar, researchers at the University of California, San Francisco analyzed 34 articles from the Weekly Reader dealing with smoking. For comparison, they analyzed 28 from

'Weekly Reader needs to change its editorial policy. They're certainly not helping kids not to smoke.'

— Edith Balbach, principal researcher in University of California study another school newsletter, Scholastic News, which is published by a family-owned company.

In the Weekly Reader, 68 percent of the articles included tobacco industry views and only 38 percent carried a clear message against smoking. In Scholastic News, only 32 percent of articles included industry views and 79 percent carried anti-smoking warnings.

"Weekly Reader's interest in presenting both sides of an argument can often lead to ambiguity, similar to the ambiguity promoted by the tobacco industry," said Stanton Glantz, one of the study's authors. "They're reinforcing the industry's message."

The principal researcher, Edith Balbach of the University of California, San Francisco, said: "Weekly Reader needs to change its editorial policy. They're certainly not helping kids not to smoke."

John Pierce, director of the cancer prevention center at the University of California, San Diego, said: "It's a serious concern that something with such widespread inroads into kids' lives is basically a marketing effort for the industry."

Sandra MacCarone, Weekly Reader's editor in chief, was traveling and could not be reached for comment and no one else could comment on the study, MacCarone's office said.

Balbach expressed particular concern over an article for sixth-graders on whether the notorious Joe Camel is encouraging kids to smoke.

The article appeared in an issue in which Joe Camel was included in the cover in full color handing out "Camel cash" promotional coupons. Inside, the article featured a reproduction of a Joe Camel billboard.

Next to the billboard was a reproduction of an R.J.R. Tobacco poster advising children not to smoke.

HANOI — Former Defense Secretary Robert McNamara and Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap, two of the chief architects of the Vietnam War, are scheduled to meet for the first time when McNamara visits Hanoi next week.

In an apparent attempt to limit media coverage, the itinerary for McNamara's historic three-day trip to Vietnam has been kept under wraps by both the Vietnamese government and the Council on Foreign Relations in New York, the trip's sponsor.

However, Giap is expected to meet McNamara on Nov. 8, a spokesman for the general said.

Nation If Powell runs, foes have plenty of attack material

WASHINGTON (AP) — If Colin Powell becomes candidate Powell, the knives come out.

Rivals are already looking over the retired general's vulnerabilities. Powell's military record, philosophy and legendary caution, his reliance on powerful friends to rise as a "political general," his inexperience with the problems that confront a president every day, and now word that his wife has been treated for depression — all become grist the moment he runs.

Three quarters of those who have pledged to back him "walk away" if he declares, predicted Marilyn Quayle, wife of the former vice president. "He is not used to taking criticism," she added, "and he is used to people doing what they are told."

Powell says in his autobiography that he knows that if he jumps in, "I would quickly alienate one-interest group or another and burn off much popular support."

So far, the attacks come from conservatives who don't want to hand the GOP to a moderate of the Nelson-Rockefeller mold — one who supports gun control, legalized abortion and affirmative action and who opposes school prayer and aspects of the Republican welfare reform plan.

Republicans rejected Rockefeller, why would they want a clone? asks Lynn Neffinger, a former adviser to Ronald Reagan who supports Bob Dole.

Political observers tick off these fault lines that opponents might exploit in a campaign:

• Powell's military record. He is no Dwight Eisenhower, who forged history's greatest battlefield victory. In the Persian Gulf War, Powell was reluctant to get in — he favored an extended economic embargo — and he acquiesced in ending the war before Iraq's Saddam Hussein was neutralized and the Republican Guard destroyed.

And in following a political route to the top, boosted by heavyweight mentors such as Caspar Weinberger and Frank Carlucci, Powell left detractors in the ranks.

His military philosophy, "The Powell Doctrine" opposes the use of troops unless clear conditions are met: a precise objective, public support, a will to throw everything at the enemy, an exit plan, the likelihood of low casualties. Apply those rules rigidly, retired Lt. Gen. Bernard Trainor said last week, and "you will never use military force for anything."

Worse, Trainor said, Powell's concept turns 200 years of civilian control of the military on its head: "The Powell Doctrine, rigidly applied as it has been, more or less tells the president when and when not to use military force. I would submit that that is not in the interest of the republic."

• Powell's business dealings: His silent-partner investment of $100,000 in a Buffalo, N.Y., television station, said to have brought a profit of $150,000 within 10 years, is already under scrutiny.

• Family matters. A Powell spokeswoman confirmed that Powell's wife, Alma — who does not hide her opposition to a Powell candidacy and fears for his life if he runs — has suffered from depression and takes medication to control a "chemical imbalance." The Powells might not relish seeing that hashed out in a campaign.

• Racial politics. They cut both ways. If he became the first black to run as a major party's nominee, Powell could get 30 to 50 percent of the black vote in November, eroding President Clinton's baseline support, Neffinger estimated.

On the other hand, "there will be people who will not vote for Colin Powell because he's black and who will lie to pollsters about it," said Alan Hertzke, a University of Oklahoma political scientist. Powell offers "racial abolition to white America" and would attract votes from whites, he said.

On balance, political observers say, race could be a plus, especially in states where Democrats and independents can vote in a Republican primary.

Report finds nation living healthier

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is making progress toward major health goals, with Americans living longer and smoking less and fewer dying in alcohol-related auto accidents.

The country is moving in the right direction on 33 of 47 key health indicators, and the wrong way on just nine, the Department of Health and Human Services said. There was no change on no data on the other five.

"We can celebrate many hopeful trends," Health Secretary Donna E. Shalala said. "Life expectancy continues to increase. Heart disease and stroke deaths continue to decline. Americans are changing their diets to consume less fat and more fruits and vegetables. More women are seeking prenatal care in their first trimesters." Her department released a 290-page "mid-course review" Tuesday on the "Healthy People 2000" goals it established at the start of this decade. Some of the goals have been raised higher because the country has already hit the target.

One example: Alcohol-related motor-vehicle fatalities have plunged from almost 10 deaths per 100,000 people in 1987 to fewer than seven in 1993. The old target was 8.5 deaths; the new goal is 3.5 deaths.

But Shalala said the poor, the disabled and minorities still "experience disproportionately worse health outcomes than other Americans. . . . We must close these gaps."

The country's lost ground on such measures as having fewer people overweight, fewer low-weight babies and fewer deaths from pneumonia and flu.

Man loses court fight to keep lights bright

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A businessman turned on 175,600 Christmas lights outside his home last year — down from more than 3 million in 1993 — but that's still too many for the state Supreme Court.

The court Monday ruled Jennings Osborne in contempt, finding that he had violated an order to tone down the display. The court said 175,000 lights was still "a massive commercial lighting display" inappropriate to a quiet neighborhood.

He was fined $15,000, sentenced to 10 days in jail, which was suspended, and ordered to pay fees and attorneys' costs totaling $7,000.

Court: Banks can freeze accounts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Banks may temporarily freeze checking or savings accounts held by people who default on loans and file for bankruptcy, the Supreme Court ruled Tuesday.

Issuing its first decisions of the 1995-96 term, the court also ruled for Mississippi in a boundary dispute with Louisiana over an area of land known as Stack Island.

In the banking case, the court said a Maryland bank had the right to freeze David Strumpf's checking account because he owed money on a separate loan and had filed for bankruptcy protection.

Forcing a bank to release such money "would divest the creditor (the bank) of the very thing that supports the right" to collect repayment of the loan, Justice Antonin Scalia wrote for the court.

That's what happened in the dispute between Strumpf, then of Greenbelt, Md., and Citizens Bank of Maryland.

Strumpf filed in January 1991 to reorganize his debts under Chapter 13 of the federal bankruptcy law. When a bankruptcy petition is filed, creditors are automatically barred from moving to collect what they are owed.

Citizens Bank sought a bankruptcy judge's permission to take about $3,250 from Strumpf's checking account to cover the unpaid part of a loan he received in 1989. While his request was pending, the bank put a hold on $3,500 in Strumpf's checking account.

Strumpf contended the hold on his money violated the automatic ban on efforts to collect payment on debts. A bankruptcy judge agreed and ordered Citizens Bank to pay Strumpf $900 in lawyers' fees and damages.

Nineteen days later, the judge decided the bank could take money from Strumpf's checking account to pay off the loan, but Strumpf had emptied his account by then.

The bank appealed, and a federal judge lifted the damage award. But the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reinstated it, saying the bank could not freeze Strumpf's money.

The Supreme Court reversed the appeals court's ruling. Scalia said the bankruptcy law lets creditors temporarily freeze someone's account while seeking authorization to use the money to offset a debt the bankrupt person owes to the creditor.

The Mississippi case involved a dispute over a 2,000-acre area that stretches seven miles along the Louisiana bank of the Mississippi River.

No-baby rule may evict 69-year-old dad
 WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — After living in his condominium for 24 years, Charles Herman may have worn out his welcome.
 The 69-year-old man and his 22-year-old wife have had a baby, and the condo rules say children aren't allowed.
 "Really, I think they're jealous that I married a young girl," Herman said.
 Herman said the condo president, Abe Krantz, wants to evict the couple and their 6-week-old baby. Krantz said no one has complained about the baby, but "if he is allowed to have small children, then others will want to have small children."
 "Really, I think most people in the '26-unit condo are on his side," and says he has been told by some board members that a vote today will go in his favor.

 CHICAGO — A "book bomb" addressed to a federal judge was discovered Tuesday at Chicago's federal courthouse and detonated by a police bomb squad, authorities said. No injuries were reported.
 The bomb, a book rigged to explode when the recipient opened it, could have caused significant damage, U.S. Marshal Joseph DiLeonardi said. DiLeonardi declined to identify the judge, saying only that he had received threats involving two cases before his court, one of them involving civil rights.
 The bomb was discovered when the package addressed to the judge was X-rayed.

Woman locates winning ticket in purse
 OAKLAND, Calif. — There between the gum wrappers, keys and broken-bristled brush, Beatrice Esquivel found a crumpled three-week old Lotto ticket she hadn't checked.
 Now the woman and her husband Antonio are $8 million richer. They were the only winners in the Oct. 7 drawing.
 "Their home is now worth $2 million," said Norman Minick, spokeswoman for the California Lottery. "I think what happens is people play for fun and entertainment, and when you play all the time, you don't always check your tickets."

Man draws jail stay for overdue books
 NORWOOD, N.Y. — A judge threw the book at a man who failed to return library books he checked out nearly four years ago.
 Christopher M. Ashley, 23, spent three days in the St. Lawrence County jail on petty larceny charges before being released Monday, the Watertown Daily Times reported.
 The books, an almanac, an atlas and two hard-cover novels, are worth $77.85, according to Marcia L. Murray, director of the Norwood Public Library.
 Ashley said he would have returned the books if he knew where they were, or paid the library if he had the money.

It won't return items to Simpson
 LOS ANGELES — Saying another court should decide, Judge Lance Ito Tuesday refused to return to O.J. Simpson credit cards, a fake beard, golf shoes and other items seized by police in their murder investigation.
 Ito ruled the judge hearing the civil suit filed by the families of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman should rule on what to do with hundreds of items of personal property.
 The judge would also forward the bulky criminal case file to Santa Monica Superior Court Judge Alan Haber.
 "I'm going to transfer further litigation in that matter to Judge Haber," Ito said.
 The ruling came in the first Simpson case proceeding in Ito's court since a jury acquitted Simpson on Oct. 3 in the June 12, 1994, knife slayings of Simpson's ex-wife and her friend.

Nunn: Japan cult sought nuke materials
 WASHINGTON — The Japanese cult accused in a nerve gas attack on a Tokyo subway tried to buy materials for nuclear and chemical weapons in the United States and Russia, Sen. Sam Nunn said Tuesday.
 With more than $4-billion in assets, the Aum Shinri Kyo cult was willing to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars on equipment to build up its weapons arsenal and even "considered the cost of buying a nuclear weapon," Nunn said at the opening of a two-day hearing on weapons proliferation.
 The Georgia Democrat said he feared the religious sect represents "a new era" in world terrorism that poses a complex problem for those who work to contain weapons of mass destruction.
 Nunn said that before the Aum's March 20 subway attack, which killed 12 people and sickened thousands more, U.S. and Japanese intelligence authorities had done little to track the group despite warnings of possible disasters.

Queen receives mixed reviews at airport
 LOS ANGELES — Queen Elizabeth II got a taste of the common life and airplane food — traveling for the first time on a commercial plane.
 Well, not that common: the first-class section was for her alone and the seats were ripped out and replaced with an elegant table, four armchairs and two beds.
 The food was regular airplane fare, though. She even had a layover — 1½ hours at Los Angeles International Airport on Monday — en route to New Zealand for a meeting of leaders of the Commonwealth.
 The queen agreed to fly Air New Zealand at the suggestion of the New Zealand government, which is hosting the meeting, Buckingham Palace said last week.

Ex-Chief Justice Burger's will may end up costing heirs plenty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Warren Burger, once the nation's highest-ranking judge, prepared a woefully inadequate will before he died, and it could cost his heirs plenty.
 The legal jangle is a cautionary tale for those Americans who have avoided proper estate planning.
 "This really is a sad example," said lawyer George W. Dodge in Arlington, Va. "Burger's estate of $1.8 million may face federal and state taxes of over $450,000. He possibly could have avoided all that."
 Burger, who served as the nation's chief justice longer than anyone in this century, retired in 1986. He died last June, at age 87.
 Just after his wife died in 1994, Burger used a computer to type a one-page will leaving one-third of his estate to his daughter, Margaret, and two-thirds to his son, Wade.
 It appears the ex-chief justice prepared the will hastily, not bothering to check his spelling.
 The document named Wade Burger and J. Michael Luttig, a federal appellate judge and a former law clerk and special assistant to Burger, as executors but this spelled the designation once as "Executors."

Burger

 More importantly, the document did not grant the executors any power to sell Burger's real estate. "That omission means they need a probate court's permission to dispose of the property. We're talking about unnecessary attorney fees and court costs," Dodgesaid.
 In an article published in the Arlington County Bar Association Journal, Dodge called the will woefully inadequate.
 The article noted that the will also failed to waive bond or surety, making it necessary to get a bonding company to insure the executors against any claims of negligence.
 The will also does not appear to be self-proving" under Virginia law, meaning that the two witnesses to Burger's signature could be required to testify in person, that they did, indeed, see him sign it.

 "All these wills, or could, add unnecessary costs," Dodge said.
 Burger did not protect his heirs from estate taxes, Dodge, assisted by the accounting firm of Murray, Jonson, White & Associates, estimated the federal estate taxes may be as high as $378,000 and Virginia's estate-tax bite as much as $78,000.
 "If proper estate planning measures had been taken, it's possible there would be no estate taxes due," Dodge said. "Through trusts and gifts, he possibly could have saved it all — and that's a huge chunk of money."
 How much would such estate planning have cost Burger? Dodge said a large Virginia law firm probably would have charged Burger $2,000.
 Most Americans might not need such help because the federal estate tax exempts up to $600,000 in assets and many state tax schemes mirror that exemption.
 "But virtually everyone needs a will," Dodge said. "It lets you control and direct where your assets go — to your spouse, children, charities."

Waiter gets royal slap from prince

NEW YORK (AP) — A waiter got a royal slap in the head — from an heir, Prince Rainier who didn't like the man's jokes about Monaco's monarchy, some witnesses say.
 But what did the prince expect at a restaurant named Pomp, Dieck and Circumstance?
 The prince hit waiter Tim Ward Sunday night at a gala honoring his late wife, Princess Grace, the Daily News said Tuesday. But the producer of the slapstick-style comedy show at the restaurant said the slap was in jest — not in anger.
 Ward performs as a loudmouth clown at the circus-like restaurant.
 "Hey! Look at the little piggy prince, eating with his fingers!" Ward shouted as he passed the royal family; the newspaper quoted witnesses as saying.
 Rainier appeared to become annoyed with the waiter after a projectile landed near his dinner partner, socialite Lynn Wyatt, the News said.

Thalidomide heals some AIDS ulcers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thalidomide, the tranquilizer banned worldwide for causing severe birth defects, heals the severe mouth ulcers that plague AIDS patients, the National Institutes of Health announced Tuesday.
 The NIH found; thalidomide worked so well that it has stopped giving a placebo to AIDS patients enrolled in a 30-hospital trial of the drug.
 Early trial results showed 14 of 23 patients who got thalidomide had their ulcers heal, compared with only one of 22 patients who took a placebo.
 The trial, which eventually will enroll 164 patients, will continue, however. Now, every patient will get thalidomide to heal the mouth ulcers. Once that happens, some will continue taking it and others will get a placebo to see if thalidomide also keeps the ulcers from recurring.
 Thalidomide caused birth defects in at least 12,000 babies in 48 countries before it was banned in 1962. It never was sold in the United States, because the Food and Drug Administration caught its risks early.

Trust in neighbors, not guns, effectively fights off crime

Believe it or not, there's a connection between the Million Man March and the Orofino City Council election.

It also involves you, cherished reader. So follow along for a few paragraphs, and we'll sort it all out.

It seems that three council candidates in Orofino want to require every local household to keep a gun. They are receiving encouragement from Rep. Helen Chenoweth, R-Idaho.

The average person's reaction is, "Those wacky north Idahoans are at it again!..." They are, at it, indeed. Imagine politicians who think voters want to be told what to do in their own homes. How odd that Chenoweth, a purported conservative, doesn't advise these eager beavers to mind their own business.

But even if the proposal is wacky, the sentiment behind it is serious and significant.

"There is a need to let the criminal world know if he steps into somebody's house, he could have his head blown off," explained Quentin Cook, one of the candidates.

Actually, the criminal world isn't especially active in Orofino. But facts aren't everything. The real issue is not crime, but fear of crime. Even though reputable studies do not show soaring crime rates in America these days, people are scared witless.

The media are partly to blame for this. We earn our bread by telling you that the world is going to hell in a handbasket, and we make sure you get the message regularly.

Another reason for fear is the rise of juvenile and minority crime in urban areas. It's bloody, it's highly publicized, and nobody seems to know how to stop it.

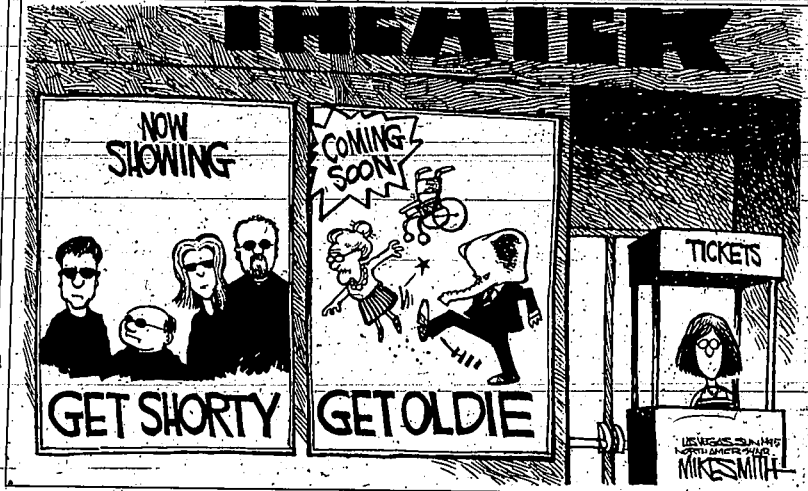

So Americans are nervous. And every few years, politicians somewhere try to capitalize on the fear by proposing to arm everybody.

Unfortunately, universal gun ownership is not the route to a secure society. If things have gotten so bad that you need a gun, it's too late. True security exists only when citizens know they can trust their neighbors.

Which leads us to the Million Man March. When those thousands of black men converged on the nation's capital, they were voicing a desire to restore civility and security to inner cities. They were expressing their intention to be the fathers, role models and leaders that their communities so desperately need.

If they succeed, they won't merely improve life in inner cities. They will go a long way toward making the whole country feel secure.

Those men have the right idea, and the council candidates in Orofino have the wrong one. To arm the citizenry is to surrender to the darkness. Far better to concentrate on maintaining communities where citizens can live confidently without weapons.

Hazelton man seeks write-in vote.

It has been reported in The Times-News that no candidates have filed for the two open City Council seats in the city of Hazelton and that those seats will have to be filled by write-in ballot. I would like to announce my write-in candidacy for one of those seats.

I considered filing for one of those seats earlier, but since I am already the (appointed) chair of the Hazelton Planning and Zoning Committee and the committee has not yet completed the comprehensive plan, subdivision ordinance and zoning ordinance or which it is working, I felt that I should first finish that work and perhaps run for City Council at the next election.

However, I have changed my mind for several reasons. First, the new council will not be seated until the first of the year, and I am confident that the planning and zoning committee can complete the comprehensive plan before then. If I am elected to the council, I can then still have helpful input into the subdivision and zoning ordinances as a council member.

Second, there are changes occurring in the city of Hazelton that require the attention of a City Council that is both progressive and aggressive. I would like to be a member of such a council. And third, I have been asked by members of the City Council and staff to run and to serve. The present council has done much to strengthen the position of the city in dealing with the changes mentioned above, and I would like to help continue with that work.

For the past year or so, I've been living on a job site in Kimberly. However, it is and has always been my intention to return to Hazelton when this job is complete. A short conversation with my attorney confirmed the general of the state of Idaho reveals that my status as a resident of the city of Hazelton is validated by my receiving first-class mail there, having my son enrolled in the Valley School District and by my maintenance of the office of a resident on which I have been paying utilities throughout my temporary absence.

harmonizing and trusting officers, not only in band but elsewhere. And in these times when discipline is lacking in the homes, it's particularly important children be exposed to it in their school. Playing in a band helps a child focus and makes him feel like he belongs. It keeps kids out of gangs and off the streets, like Harold Hill said.

Speaking of Harold Hill, "We've got trouble, my friends," in Twin Falls. Over the past two months, more than five hundred neighbors between Monte Vista and Sunrise have been robbed. Their often unlocked homes were entered (often during daylight hours) and the thieves grabbed jewelry and money - and, at least once - valuable guns, and got away.

A security officer from the police station came out and checked my locks and advised me to keep my yard lights on at night and never leave the doors unlocked and get dead-bolts installed. I have taken his advice, but it annoys me because I was raised in this town so much like River City, where we never locked doors and sat on our porches and chatted with our neighbors. In those days, a man's word was his bond. Is there no hope for a future free of fear?

Speaking of the future: Put these dates on calendars, folks - Nov. 5 at 3 p.m., CSI Jazz Band Concert, and Nov. 14, the Magic Valley Symphony Orchestra at 8 p.m.

Stolen bike reveals greater woes

The evening of Tuesday, Oct. 24, at approximately 6 p.m., my daughter's red Trek mountain-bike was stolen from Taco John's by a young man with chin-length, straight-blond hair and visible nose. This person was approximately 15 to 17 years old and 5'6", 4 inches tall. He was accompanied by another young man that had brown hair and a slight beard.

Parents, if your son or daughter suddenly appears with a new bike and gives you a story about where it came from, please do some investigating. This bike was expensive - more than the average kid could dole out himself without some long-term planning and saving. If he says it belongs to a friend, follow up by calling that friend's parents and continue following up until you feel assured of his innocence - possibly even to the police to see if one matching that description was stolen.

There is too much crime committed in this city and too often happening right under our noses. There are too many kids "hanging around" in Twin Falls and at home unsupervised for hours at a time, many times without even a phone call from parents. How many of us know exactly where our children were yesterday and know exactly what they were doing?

Batt made huge mistake with deal

Phil Batt has served Idaho well as a competent and capable governor with good intentions. If he were a self-serving politician, he could stand in the middle of the railroad tracks and face off the nuclear waste train (a Yelstin) and become an instant populist. That way, win or lose on the waste, he could at least ensure his own re-election. Instead he made a waste acceptance agreement he thought to be in the best interests of the state.

Whatever his reasons or intentions, it was a mistake - a hugely unpopular mistake - that has become larger than the office of a governor. Now his role is forfeit. Phil Batt's removal as our state leader is necessary as a symbol of the people's overwhelming dissatisfaction and distress.

The recall of a governor is a serious step, but it may well focus public attention on Idaho's plight and our reluctance to give up so easily. I believe most Americans are fair-minded enough that they aren't eager for the feds to bully our tiny state into submission. Maybe a recall won't help, but unless we are willing to accept the situation, we all have to do something. And most of us aren't willing to demonstrate and march when the trains sink through at 3 a.m.

Nothing personal, Phil, but when the petition comes my way, I'll sign it.

Public should still fight waste deal

The Times-News editorial of Oct. 29 says that all the people who are opposed to Gov. Batt's deal had six months to protest but didn't, so now they're out of luck, too bad. This editorial was combined with a more than 400-word letter from the governor himself.

"Did Lockheed just send you a subscription check for all the workers at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory?"

To refresh your memory, almost immediately after the election, Batt, after a brief chat with the Navy, said he was going to take eight new shipments of nuclear waste, thus opening the door to a deal that was closed. The public response was so great, he backed down. Repeat, he backed down. The public, in its infinite patience, then gave Batt the latitude to re-assess his position and the bargaining table. How can the public protest a secretly negotiated deal that was signed, sealed and delivered before we even knew what was in it? Duh! We gave Batt a break, and he gave us the shaft.

I will give you credit for the good ideas in the editorial; that is, Batt at the College of Southern Idaho explaining his sell-out. But go one step further, make it a debate between Batt and anyone who cares to get in front of the mike on stage, like you say, politically, so that as fellow citizens of Idaho, we can finally make our voices heard. If after this, Batt has changed his mind, we can carry him on our shoulders, but if not, we can recall him - or not, as he may change our minds.

Our Native American brothers stand to profit a lot more than we do. They figure as long as they're getting the shaft, they may as well get paid for it. Maybe we should have elected that Indian lawyer governor.

Set this debate up, Times-News, CSI, Kent Just, et al, but I think you're going to need to put chairs in the Expo Center because there's a lot of people out there whose temperaments are 102 because of this pasture potty.

Oh yeah, no congressmen or senators allowed; they take up too much time saying nothing, some other time. But do invite Gov. Andrus.

Tax hike funds waste in Hollister

To Hollisterites - a public protest against tax money usage:

I am appalled and disgusted that I live in an area of such quiet wonders as the citizens of the village of Hollister. Are you folks brainwashed? Do you enjoy paying through the nose for the village fathers' and mothers' vendetta against one of its citizens? You are, you know.

Did you ever think you might be next on their secret agendas? After this is published I'm sure I'll be. Do you really want to have to buy a permit every time you make repairs or try to improve your property? This is stupidity and so are we for allowing it: I went to the meeting to protest the tax raise only to be told, "It's too bad, it's already passed."

These people aren't gods, nor are they legal in their procedures. They passed another tax raise and we stippled to them. Our excessive tax dollars are being wasted on ordinances that no one but the chosen few want. They want to stop one party from making a living on the property that was bought with that purpose in mind. They use my property without easement or compensation and basically tell me so what, sue me if you don't like it - a great mentality that takes out. You three riders are going to get caught in the money trap. If you don't believe what I say, ask yourself this: One year it takes $100,005 to run the place, the next more than $100,000 and who knows the final tally for this year; they're broke you know, so had to raise taxes again.

The legal system in Idaho is no good because they all allow it to continue, shut your eyes, Governor, it's you I'm talking about. Don't rock the boat, anyone, there are sharks in the water. It's called the justice system.

Correction

Part of a sentence was accidentally omitted from Coral McAdams's letter on Tuesday.

The corrected paragraph should read:

"Unfortunately, Ms. Murray's statement that one-third of the citizens of Kimberly are unhappy is a misconception (Re: Times-News article, 'Kimberly write-in candidate says vote shows citizens are unhappy,' Thursday, Nov. 4, 1995). Forty-one percent of the 265 voters is not one-third of the citizens of Kimberly. The numbers, not Ms. Murray, also say that my husband received 196 votes, which is equal to 74 percent, and the other incumbent received 140 votes, which is equal to 53 percent. These figures are a result of each voter having the opportunity to vote for two of the candidates. Perhaps telling the whole story doesn't add credibility to the stance of being the 'people's choice.'"

The Times-News regrets the error.

Music can teach us all something

Sunday, I attended and thoroughly enjoyed the 1995 College of Southern Idaho Symphony Band Fall Concert conducted by Dr. George K. Halsell. I am very responsive to music of all kinds, and the varied program at times stirred my toes tapping and, my heart throbbing and, during the lifting part of "Toyland," tears came to my eyes as I recalled my mother singing that to me as a child.

I was happy to see that though Larry Curtis is gone, his legacy lives on at CSI Festival. They were followed by Bob Nora, whose low-down, real Basin Street blues numbers were well-received by jazz lovers from all over the country, and I was proud to say, "They're from my town."

There were bands from as far away as Germany, among the group of more than 25 jazz bands, and we heard some great music while we were there.

All this music I've been hearing has made me more aware than ever that not only is music the universal language but it has a way of bonding people, and I feel that's one of the reasons that we keep the arts and humanities program going. Children in a school band learn discipline and the art of

Quebec premier says he'll resign

MONTREAL (AP) — Stung by defeat in the secession referendum, Quebec Premier Jacques Parizeau said Tuesday he plans to resign.

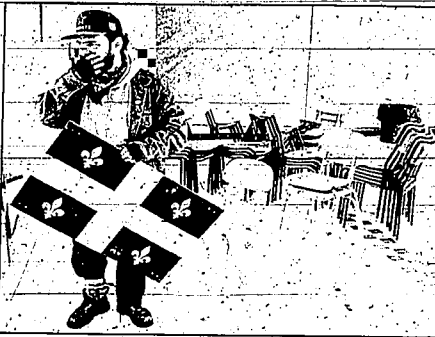

He also apologized for blaming the loss on non-French immigrants. Parizeau maintained staunch support, however, for the separatist cause that has been at the heart of his long political career. He said his Parti Quebecois would choose new leadership capable of achieving independence for the mostly French-speaking province.

Parizeau, 65, was elected premier last year after promising to hold a referendum on secession. His side lost Monday, but only narrowly — 50.6 percent to 49.4 percent.

But at a time when the separatists could have been taking heart at their strong showing, Parizeau shocked even his allies with a belittling speech at campaign headquarters, blaming the defeat on immigrants.

"It's true we have been defeated, but basically by what?" Parizeau said. "By money and the ethnic vote."

Parizeau's co-leader in the separatist camp, Lucien Bouchard, distanced himself from the ethnic remarks Tuesday, signaling that the premier's position had become untenable.

Quebec secessionist campaign volunteer Rami Gagne holds the Quebec flag at the group's office in Montreal Tuesday.

Parizeau expressed regret for his... had, in effect, been thwarted by non-francophones.

About 90 percent of English-speaking and immigrant Quebecers opposed secession, while French Quebeckers — who make up 82 percent of the population — voted for independence by a 60-40 margin.

Earlier Tuesday, Bouchard — possible replacement for Parizeau — scoffed at an offer from Prime Minister Jean Chretien to negotiate a new status for Quebec.

"Never again will sovereigntists be begging for anything from the rest of Canada," declared Bouchard. He said Quebec would sit down for talks with Canada only after winning a future independence referendum.

Chretien, chastened by the razor-thin federalist victory Monday, said he would try to get other provincial premiers to support changes that would decentralize the government and recognize Quebec as a distinct society.

Bouchard described his reaction to Chretien's offer as "boredom" and "big yawns."

"Nobody's going to get us sovereigntists involved in another 30 years of sterile discussions," he said.

Bouchard reiterated the separatists' promise to mount another independence drive. Current Quebec law bars a new secession referendum until after new legislative elections, but separatists control the legislature and could change the law.

U.S. might move troops off Okinawa

TOKYO (AP) — The United States will withdraw any troops from Japan but might move some off Okinawa to other Japanese islands if that would help quell a growing anti-military outcry there, Defense Secretary William Perry said Tuesday.

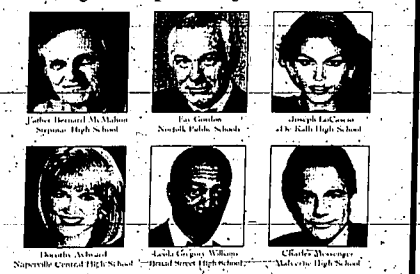

Perry said on route to Japan for talks with senior government officials that he is eager to overcome the backlash triggered by the rape in September of a 12-year-old girl on Okinawa.

Three U.S. servicemen accused of the crime go on trial next week. "We cannot let this poison our entire relationship," Perry said in an interview. The rape unleashed a torrent of public protests against the American military presence on Okinawa, the tropical Japanese island that until 1972 was administered by the United States and now hosts 26,000 American troops.

"I want to get it behind us," Perry said. "The U.S.-Japan relationship is an absolute key to the security and stability in Asia, and nobody benefits from that security and stability in Asia more than Japan."

Perry planned a quick trip Wednesday to Yokosuka, site of a major U.S. Navy base outside Tokyo, to reassure the sailors "we do no lump them with the few troops... who have been guilty of offenses. Perry, who himself served with American forces on Okinawa after World War II, said there was no room for negotiating a reduction in the overall level of U.S. forces in Japan. About 46,000 U.S. troops are based in Japan — the most anywhere in Asia.

Legislators question funding for Boise State engineering

LEWISTON (AP) — Overturning the decision to turn the cooperative Boise engineering program over to Boise State University will be extremely difficult, legislative budget leaders say.

But they caution it will be ticklish to find money for the project.

Boise State officials could help stymie legislation against the state private education money by raising private money before the Legislature's session begins.

Private money would ease questions about financing. Latah County's three Republican legislators Friday signaled they intend to fight the board's decision to transfer control of the University of Idaho to Boise.

Senate Finance Committee Chairman Atwell Parry, R-Melba, said Monday it will be hard to overturn the board's action because many legislators typically stand behind the regents' decisions.

How Idaho State University fits in the scenario is one of the key parts, said House Appropriations Committee Chairwoman Kathleen Gurnsey, R-Boise. If Boise State gets a full-blown engineering school, they win one, too.

"They are the ones with the votes on our committee," Orofino Sen. Marguerite McLaughlin said of eastern Idaho legislators. "I think we have a tough job ahead of us."

She said the real question is how the Boise program will be financed as well as Moscow's. Boise State is not delivering adequate quality and technical programs to the Boise valley, she contends.

Gurnsey said she does not question the need for a Boise engineering school.

"I guess they think they can do it with pork from private enterprise," she said. "If they go out and show they can raise all the dollars to build the building in the first place — if they get J.R. Simplot to fund the whole thing and name it after him."

J.R. Simplot Co. spokesman Fred Zerza said industrialist Simplot, a prime Micro Technology investor, does not intend to create an endowment to finance the Boise school.

Gov. Phil Butte does not intend to recommend spending any state money on a new engineering building in Boise, spokeswoman Amy Kleinet said.

Officials ask stations to air musical tribute to vets

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's radio and television stations have been asked to broadcast "Veterans of the USA," a 4½-minute musical tribute to veterans, as a special feature of Veterans Day this year.

City Services administrator, said members of the Idaho congressional delegation sent a letter to all broadcast stations asking for air time.

The letter was mailed by the Idaho Broadcasters Association to its members. Audio and video tapes were made by the Good Family, a singing group from Ohio. Boise's KTVB-TV donated video tape copies and KBOI-AM made the audio tape for all other stations.

Printed lyrics are being sent to newspapers.

The project was the idea of Beau Parent, who has worked for the national organization pushing term limit laws.

He said he saw the tape at a conference in Seattle in 1993 and liked it so much that he wanted everyone to hear it. His father was a Navy pilot.

Officials said Idaho has 113,000 veterans. Veterans Day is Saturday, Nov. 11.

Wife claims slain husband beat her

OROFINO (AP) — Shari Storholt wonders if anyone will believe her side of the story in the stabbing death of her husband.

On trial this week in Grangeville for the killing of Frank Storholt, she knows many people in the community see her as the chief abuser in their stormy, three-year marriage that ended in tragedy.

That is when Frank was stabbed 13 times outside Pierce after a night of heavy drinking. Witnesses said Shari Storholt, 35, walked back into Pierce, covered with blood, and admitted she killed her husband.

Jury selection began Monday in Grangeville. The trial was moved from Clearwater County, presumably because many neighbors knew about the Orofino couple's relationship.

Storholt is troubled by a report done by the investigator hired by her own lawyer.

In it, several people describe Frank as a mellow man who often walked around wounded from battles with Shari, portrayed as a bar brawler.

Based on the investigator, and because of a prior conviction for stabbing her husband, defense attorney Nick Chenoweth urged her to bargain in the second-degree murder charge, Storholt said.

She refused.

Storholt insisted she is the true victim in the tragedy; Frank constantly battered and threatened her life.

"I thought he really loves me, he just can't help it," she said. She left him at least 20 times in their brief marriage, but always returned.

Shari's friend, Paula Lougee of Orofino, earlier took her to the YWCA's shelter in Lewiston after Frank had allegedly attacked her.

"Frank Storholt was a dirty, lousy doper that nobody in Orofino would let in their house but who now is being idealized by the community at Shari's expense."

"Frank was total complete scum," Lougee said.

Chenoweth: Citizens should open homes to poor

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Reinforcing her call for reforming a welfare system that has failed, Republican Congresswoman Helen Chenoweth says limiting government support for the poor to five years is only part of the answer.

At one of her town hall meetings during a recent swing through the Panhandle, Chenoweth said a facet of reform will involve Americans opening their hearts and homes to those less fortunate.

She said she has sheltered people who were down on their luck and lived in some of America's inner cities, where she found the country's traditional work ethic denied to many residents.

"It's a mess," she said. "But the only way to clean it up is to empower the human spirit."

She called for a financial recovery program similar to one used in Chile where corporations help children begin investing early so they can build up a sum of cash for their retirement.

In America, she said, two companies are looking at that program, which she said should be under congressional control.

Hansen woman charged in bank embezzlement

TWIN FALLS—A Hansen woman was charged in federal court Tuesday with felony bank fraud, in connection with nearly $1.5 million reported missing from First Federal Savings Bank in Twin Falls.

Linda D. Johnson, who had worked for the bank since 1979, stole the money over a period of 10 years, U.S. Attorney Betty Richardson alleged in a news release.

Richard Allen, the bank's president, said Johnson admitted embezzling $1,468,205. She was fired in March.

Johnson had risen through the ranks to become head teller and assistant vice president before she was fired.

The FBI started investigating after bank employees noticed discrepancies in customer accounts just year. Allen said, "Unbeknownst to customers, Johnson had created fake loans to customers by forging their signatures, Allen said. She deposited the loans into accounts in the customers' names and then withdrew the money, he said.

The bonding company has reimbursed between 35 and 40 customers for all losses, Allen said.

Johnson could not be reached for comment. Maximum penalties for the charge are 30 years in prison and a $1 million fine.

Spanbauer returns to jail after violating terms of release

JEROME—A prominent Jerome farmer has gone back to jail after a judge ruled that he violated the conditions of his release by consuming drugs and alcohol.

John Spanbauer Jr., 42, was being held Tuesday in the Jerome County Jail, said Jerome County Prosecutor John Horgan. Bond was set at $100,000.

Spanbauer had posted a $50,000 bond in June after being charged with six crimes including drug possession, aggravated assault, injury to a child and "infamous crime against nature."

Spanbauer was returned to jail Oct. 26, after recovering from a Sept. 27 motorcycle accident that left him with a broken leg, according to medical reports. Blood tests at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center revealed he had consumed some drugs and alcohol before the accident, reports said.

Police arrested Spanbauer in June after a woman told police that Spanbauer had held her at gunpoint, forced her to have anal sex and held her captive overnight. Authorities contacted half pound of marijuana, two grams of cocaine and less than a gram of methamphetamine from his Jerome mobile home.

Prosecutors also say Spanbauer allowed a child to view inappropriate sexual materials, domestic violence and drugs.

Local virus outbreak closes hospital areas to young visitors

TWIN FALLS—An outbreak of a respiratory virus in the local area has prompted Magic Valley Regional Medical Center to close its obstetrics, nursery and neonatal intensive care units to visitors under age 16.

Parents are the only people under 16 allowed in the hospital's second floor Women & Infants Center, the hospital announced Tuesday.

The hospital also is limiting visitors to patients on the fourth floor's pediatrics unit. Only parents and grandparents can visit pediatric patients.

The hospital blamed the problem on a "respiratory syncytial virus." The restrictions will remain in effect until further notice.

Roll-over accident injures Gooding woman Tuesday

GOODING—A Gooding woman was injured Tuesday when her car rolled over about 11 miles north of Gooding on Highway 46.

Betty Shelton was driving south when she went off the highway, overcorrected, crossed the road and rolled off the opposite side about 4 p.m., said Gooding County Sheriff Jim Jax. Shannon suffered head injuries, he said.

Shannon was taken to Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise Tuesday from Gooding County Memorial Hospital. Her injuries were being evaluated Tuesday evening, a Saint Alphonsus spokesman said.

Rental market has new lease on life

By Julie M. McKinnon
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—More than 1,200 applicants were waiting for rental assistance from the Idaho Housing Agency in January. By July, the number had declined to between 500 and 600 applicants.

Now, there only are about 300 applicants, one indication that Twin Falls' rental-housing crunch is loosening up and more affordable housing is available, said Kay Riell, supervisor of the IHA office in Twin Falls.

"That's a pretty steady decline," Riell said. "We used to just have people pouring through the doors."

Two years ago, less than 1 percent of rentals in Twin Falls were vacant. The vacancy rate now is 3 percent to 5 percent; the IHA considers anything under 5 percent a crisis.

"It's certainly higher than it's been, and it seems to be getting higher," said Joan Brawley, a broker and property manager at Brawley Realty in Twin Falls.

Brawley said an influx of new construction has made rentals more available now than in the past two years.

Although not much construction has been in low-income housing—the segment which still has the lowest vacancy rate—construction of higher-priced housing allows some people to move into more expensive rentals, said Twin Falls Housing Authority Director Charles Capps.

"It frees up these other places," Capps added.

Yet, a rental-vacancy rate of more than 5 percent also could be harmful, Brawley said. Since investors may sell properties that are not renting quickly, some units could be taken off the rental market, leaving even less affordable housing available, she said.

The average rent for a two-bedroom unit with one bathroom in Twin Falls is $450 to $475 a month, with some as high as $525, Brawley said.

A unit of similar size renting for $350 or less is considered low-income housing, Riell said.

"Right now, the rent rates seem to be stabilizing, and in some places (outlying areas) we've seen them drop," she said.

Meanwhile, federal subsidies have continued to drop, Riell said. A person who once would get about $300 a month now will get about $200. It typically takes 90 days instead of 30 for people with federal subsidies to find rentals, she said.

Capps said the housing authority has waiting lists for family housing and one-bedroom apartments, but there sometimes are just one or two people waiting for studio apartments. That shows people are living somewhere and able to wait until larger apartments become available, he said.

"When people are picking and choosing what they take, you know they're not hurting too bad," Capps said.

County forms plans for reuse

By Virginia S. Garber
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—So far, Twin Falls County has lagged behind much of the nation in trash recycling. But public demands for a local recycling program can't be ignored any longer, commissioners say.

"We should have been here years ago," Commissioner Dennis Maughan said Tuesday, when county commissioners and officials of several cities met with local garbage haulers and recyclers to consider a countywide recycling effort.

But in small steps, the county will catch up with the rest of the nation, Maughan said.

Within the next 90 days, the Southern Idaho Regional Solid Waste District will develop a series of waste-diversion strategies for Twin Falls County's cities

'We should have been here years ago.'

— Commissioner Dennis Maughan, on countywide recycling to choose from, said Terry Schultz, the waste district's director. Some towns will likely adopt curb-side recycling, and others may opt for neighborhood containers, he said.

Before spring, residents will see a difference in how they dispose of rubbish, Commissioner Brent Reinke said. The county has already joined the waste district in offering subsidized composting units to keep some yard waste out of the dumps.

Three years ago, Twin Falls left the six-county solid-waste region and its plans for the Milner Bait landfill, in order to build its own dump. Now the two are tentatively back together.

In September, commissioners contracted with the regional garbage-dumping district to manage the county's landfill at Hub Butte and to implement recycling and composting programs in Twin Falls County.

The regional agency's own recycling bins haven't brought in much revenue, Schultz said. But if savings in handling at transfer stations and landfills are figured in, "we're still well in the black," he said.

Recycling isn't guaranteed to be always cost-effective, Schultz told local officials. But Twin Falls has unusual potential for a successful program

Burley man earns probation for battery

By Jennifer Bunch
Times-News writer

BURLEY—A Burley man, previously convicted of a felony in the 1993 bathtub drowning of his infant son, was sentenced Tuesday to two years probation on an unrelated charge of battery.

Two other sexual battery and child abuse charges were dropped in a plea agreement.

The charges brought against Troy Don Tinney, 27, in August amount to a probation violation, on a prior child abuse conviction. And Tinney, a Campbell citizen, now faces prison time and deportation to Canada.

Tinney was sentenced Tuesday by 5th District Magistrate Roy Holloway after entering an "Alford" plea to one count of "improper touching" of Tinney's baby sister. The Alford plea indicates that Tinney pleaded guilty, without admitting any guilt.

The recent charges mean Tinney must face probation violation proceedings in District Court. In February 1994 he pleaded guilty to felony injury to a child, Garcia said, who lived in Declo then, had left his 14-month-old son Ethan unattended in a bathtub full of water. Tinney has been on probation for about one year after serving 180 days at the North Idaho Correctional Institute in Cottonwood. Tinney's original sentence was 18 months to five years in prison was suspended, and he was given four years of probation.

But the prison sentence could be imposed should he be found guilty of the probation violation. The state probation and parole officer, which has been monitoring Tinney, recommends that he be sent to prison, according to the probation violation report.

According to the report, an investigator conducting Tinney's presentence report stated: "It is felt that until Troy takes responsibility for action with 'strict orders' not to let Garcia free. Garcia testified that Karkoszka had threatened to shoot him if he tried to leave.

But Garcia escaped from the apartment by making excuses to go to the bathroom, he said. He bolted for the door on his fourth trip to the bathroom and fled, pursued by Karkoszka, to a neighboring apartment complex and called police, Garcia said.

"I ran as fast as I could for the apartment," he said.

Fifth District Magistrate Nathan Higer said that holding Garcia at gun point may not have amounted to aggravated assault, with the intent to commit a serious crime, but holding him hostage coupled with the beating merited stiff charges.

Court says Gooding man to be resentenced

The Associated Press

BOISE—Because the judge misunderstood sentencing law, a Gooding County man must go back to court for resentencing, the Idaho Court of Appeals says.

The court on Monday ordered Johnny Lynn Brashier resentenced for a sex crime against a minor girl.

The Court of Appeals said the sentencing judge, Phillip Becker, since retired, misunderstood the law to allow a maximum of five years for committing an "infamous crime against nature," as sodomy is called in Idaho law.

The law actually requires a minimum sentence of five years, up to life imprisonment, the court said, granting the state's appeal for resentencing.

The appeals panel also rejected Brashier's claims that he didn't receive a speedy trial.

Court records said Brashier was serving a prison term for burglary, but was up for possible parole, when the Gooding County sheriff notified prison authorities he was under investigation for the sex crime. Based on that, parole was denied. Brashier wasn't formally charged with the sex crime until six months later.

Brashier argued that at the time parole was denied because of the pending charge, his right to a speedy trial should have started.

But the court, in a decision written by Judge Karen Lansing, said Brashier was in prison for burglary, not the pending charge, and his right to a speedy trial didn't start until he was formally charged in the sex crime.

The decision means Brashier could get longer than his original sentence, which was two to five years.

In an Ada County case, the court ordered evidence in a drug case suppressed because officers did not have legal grounds to search a vehicle.

Brenton Craig Foster was charged with drug violations after a search of his car turned up drugs and paraphernalia.

The court ruled the car search did not fall under any of the exemptions to the law requiring a search warrant first.

Glenns Ferry can shut off water

By Melanie Brown
Times-News correspondent

GLENN'S FERRY - The city water department once again has the authority to shut off water to customers who let unpaid water bills lapse.

The City Council has reinstated an ordinance, adopted earlier this summer but later rescinded, in order to get legal advice from city attorney Mitchell Eguazuga. The ordinance gives the city water department the authority to shut off a customer's water if their account balance is at least $50 and 60 days in arrears.

And apartment owners will see an increase in rates for water service to their complexes. The council agreed to charge apartment owners $15 per-month per-dwelling-unit. Each unit will be allocated 5,000 gallons of water each month. Anything over that will be assessed per the city's current water rates.

The action was in response to concerns of JoAnne Lanham about the way that the city has been charging for water at her mobile home park. Lanham said that she pays $15 per-dwelling-unit per-month even though there is only one water meter at the site. Lanham said she doesn't oppose the additional charges but everyone who owns multiple dwelling units should be treated the same.

Meeting scheduled
 The Glenns Ferry City Council will conduct a public hearing at 7 p.m. today to get public comment on a proposed $500,000 community development block grant application to upgrade the city's water system.

In other business, the council will begin negotiations with a local resident for the purchase of two river-view lots. The lots would be used to widen the road and adjust the angle of the curve to allow for safer passage of recreational vehicles heading for the Three Island Crossing State Park.

The property owner wants for 20 percent of the property for firewood storage.

The council approved a building permit for a home on property that will eventually be part of a 60-acre residential subdivision proposed by local businessman Jim Martell. Two local residents said the council might be setting a precedent by issuing the permit before any formal rezoning, or submittal of draft plans.

The permit was issued with the understanding that no further permits would be granted within the proposed subdivision until Martell has completed rezoning and subdivision-development procedures.

The city will require Martell to pave, sidewalk and gutter a cul-de-sac that will provide access to the parcel. He will also be required to install a six-inch water main and a new fireplug. If plans for the subdivision go through, the cul-de-sac will eventually provide access to up to 10 residential lots.

Sales, corporate tax receipts drive increase in the state's tax collection

BOISE (AP) - General tax collections, rebounded somewhat in September as stronger sales and corporate tax receipts more than offset the continuing decline in personal income tax revenues.

The Division of Financial Management, in its economic update for the September report, said that through the first three months of the budget year totaled $302.8 million, just $3 million short of the forecast for the summer period.

That was a significant recovery from the September report which under performance by all three left the treasury $6.5 million short of the amount expected after the fiscal year's first two months.

But administration chief economist Fred Ferguson said that the September information to predict that the economy was on the upswing again, but he said it at least appeared to have stabilized.

"I hesitate to read too much into one month's activity," he said.

But should the better-than-expected performance continue and the slide in personal income tax receipts, it could clear the way for Gov. Phil Batt and lawmakers to restore the more than $13 million cut from state aid to schools earlier this year in response to the slowing economy. The other $13 million cut from general state operations was not expected to be restored. Analysts expect over $1.34 billion in revenue this budget year.

September sales tax receipts, a key indicator of consumer confidence in the economy's future, exceeded expectations by $2.8 million for what Ferguson said was "easily the strongest showing so far this year."

September sales tax receipts, which that monthly sales tax receipts have not fallen below the benchmark.

Corporate tax collections, which have soared in the past year in what many speculate is a result of the record profits posted by Boise-based Micron Technology Inc., were $1.4 million more than analysts anticipated for September.

And the interest earnings on invested tax receipts, which had slipped in response to interest rate fluctuations, were over $1 million ahead of projections that analysts anticipated for September.

All three combined to not only offset the further deterioration of personal income tax receipts, which generally reflect the underlying strength of the economy, but also cut the cash deficit by more than half.

It was the fourth-month in the last five that personal income tax collections fell short of the monthly benchmark, although Ferguson said the September drop of another $2.5 million was entirely the result of large one-time refunds to taxpayers who had received extensions on filing their returns last April.

Lawmaker seeks to mend fences with Fox

MOSCOW (AP) - Republican Sen. Gary Schroeder of Moscow, who irks some GOP legislators with his sharp criticism of state Schools Superintendent Anne Fox earlier this year, plans to mend fences with her now that he is the chairman of the Senate Education Committee.

In the first week as head of the committee, the maverick Republican also is sending signals he's willing to compromise on the charter schools bill he helped kill during the last two legislative sessions.

Senate Majority Leader David Kerrioc, R-Caldwell, said Schroeder was controversial in the last sessions.

"After the discussions I have had with him I feel real positive he will make a positive contribution to the Republican caucus and the Senate in that position," he said Friday.

Sen. Black, R-Twin Falls, chairman of House Education, said Schroeder has to live with his previous criticism of Fox's decision not to work with state and have the responsibility to take a broader view of what's good for the state as a whole. Also, as chairman, he is probably more of a direct representative of the Republican Party."

Schroeder said he approached Rep. Fred Tilman, R-Boise, about legislation for charter schools as pilot programs. Tilman said he was surprised because Schroeder hasn't supported the idea in the past.

The Senate Education Committee killed Tilman's bill to allow parents and teachers to create their own innovative schools.

Dorothy Fritz, Lewiston, chairwoman of the Nez Perce County Christian Coalition, said she was surprised the GOP Senate leaders gave Schroeder the job.

"I don't know why he bothers calling himself a Republican," she said. "As far as I am concerned, Schroeder is a liberal in sheep's clothing. Quite frankly, I could think of people a lot more qualified if we are going to change the education system to work."

ederal school reform efforts, and her management of the Education Department.

"He is going to have to build his relationship with Dr. Fox over time," Black said.

Schroeder said he will call Fox and do everything he can to work with her.

"A lot of things have happened since the last session," he said.

For one thing, the state Board of Education disbanded the school reform committee.

"There are a lot of new players, including Dr. Fox, and you have got to have all the players at the table," he said. "As chairman, I

Ligertown bills for animal care still climbing

POCATELLO (AP) - Public agencies already have spent about $43,000 to deal with the escape of wild animals from a Lava Hot Springs facility, and the bills continue to mount.

The Bannock County Sheriff's office is spending about $100 per week to feed 45 Ligertown wolf hybrids being kept at a former zoo near Roberts, said Lt. Lew Lewis, in charge of administrative services for the department.

Police officers killed 19 lions starting Sept. 20 after they escaped from Ligertown, a ramshackle collection of pens and wire fences just outside Lava Hot Springs. After that, another 24 lions and three lion-tiger cross-breeds called ligers were taken to a California game refuge. The wolves remain in a Bonneville County facility near Roberts.

Evans said her agency has spent $33,000, money that wasn't in the budget. "It will put a crimp in the sheriff's budget. We didn't budget for anything like this. It means we'll have to find a way to make up the money, or else away from the budget," she said.

The animals' fate will be decided once criminal charges against Ligertown operators Robert Fieber and Dotti Martin are resolved. They're each charged with 107 misdemeanors and two felonies due to how they cared for the animals and illegal use of drugs.

Beet farmers find better harvest season

By Kevin Miller
Times-News writer

PAUL — Recovering from a late start on the season, Mini-Cassia area beet farmers exceeded expectations in this year's harvest.

With only about a week of the beet harvest left, Amalgamated Sugar Co. Mini-Cassia-area Agriculture Manager Delyle Bennett said the yield is 102 percent of projections with a better sugar content than expected.

"This is a better crop than we expected," Bennett said. "We didn't get in as early as we did a year ago, but we had a really good August and September to make up for it."

Farmers in the Mini-Cassia area have harvested an average of 22.75 tons of beets per acre this fall, Bennett said. Pre-harvest projections expected a yield of 22.50 tons per acre, he said.

Coming on the heels of consecutive record harvest years, though, the fall 1995 crop is a dip in overall beet production. Still, the harvest is "very close to normal," Bennett said.

The decrease in production is probably the result of a shorter growing season, Bennett said. Saturated by a wet spring, soil was too muddy to plant in until mid-June.

The weather turned in favor of farmers during the summer and early fall months, though, boosting the sugar content of the beets — the quality measure of the crop, Bennett said.

KEVIN MILLER/The Times-News

Despite a late start on the planting season, Mini-Cassia beet farmers have produced a better than expected harvest this fall. Because of a moderately high sugar content, Amalgamated Sugar Co. officials are considering the fall harvest a quality production.

Sugar content averaged around 17 percent, he said, an average mark for Mini-Cassia beets.

Warm days and cool night combine to boost sugar content. Beets produce sugar during the entire growing season, but during warm weather the plant uses the sugar for growth. Typically, beets don't start storing sugar until the weather cools, causing growth to slow.

"We just had the right kind of temperatures at the end to boost the sugar," Bennett said.

Amalgamated Sugar Co. expected to bring in a total of three million tons of sugar beets from the Magic Valley this fall. Early harvest crop yields came in about one ton per acre lower than what was expected.

Lawmaker wants power for waste sites

WASHINGTON (AP) — States and local managers of federal nuclear-waste sites should be given decision-making authority now held by the Energy Department, Rep. Doc Hastings, R-Wash., told Congress Tuesday.

But Assistant Energy Secretary Thomas Grubbs said the federal government must retain at least some of the control due to the possibility that more radioactive waste could be used to make nuclear weapons.

Hastings told a House subcommittee that more radioactive waste could be cleaned up for less money at places like the Hanford nuclear reservation — near Richland, Wash., in Hastings' home district — if the local Energy Department manager had the final say on how the work is done.

"We have to move the decision-making back to the states," he said. Hastings brought along an 18-inch stack of executive orders — 265 of the 1,200 he collected in Hanford — to make his point about excessive bureaucracy.

"Right now we have a formula for selling copier machines and Xerox paper," he told the House Commerce subcommittee on energy and power.

Hastings, chairman of a task force House Speaker Newt Gingrich appointed to review the Energy Department sites, has introduced legislation granting site managers authority to revoke administrative orders they consider unnecessary.

"While DOE headquarters should be able to recommend orders to site managers, the site manager should have greater authority to ensure that he imposes those orders necessary to protect health and safety, as well as to perform other critical functions in an efficient and cost-effective manner," he said.

Under our proposal, the DOE site manager becomes a presidential appointee, giving him stature and clout. He would have the flexibility to waive orders that he deems not appropriate," Hastings said.

The proposal also would require that department contractors be paid based on their performance and give the states, rather than the federal government, authority for enforcing Superfund laws at federal nuclear-waste sites.

Hastings said a good example of problems that arise under the existing setup came when the Energy Department delayed for months the sale of 100,000 gallons of nitric acid from a Hanford facility to British Nuclear Fuels.

Hastings, assistant secretary for environmental management, said officials "had to overcome a lot of ideological and philosophical objections" to selling the nitric acid.

"That was a decision that couldn't be made in Richland, Wash., because it had to be made in coordination with the Department of State because it had nuclear-proliferation considerations we had to think about," Grubbs told the subcommittee.

Maureen Eldredge, director of the Military Production Network, said her group — an alliance of 40 organizations working on DOE sites — opposes "legislative efforts that would return us to the dark days of DOE self-regulation."

"DOE must be subject to federal law, oversight and public scrutiny," she said. "Giving a large portion of control and power to the site manager, or any DOE official who is not accountable to the public, is unacceptable."

Rupert mortuary rebuilds facility right from the ashes

By Kevin Miller
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Out of the ashes of the fire charred Hansen Mortuary is rising an improved and expanded funeral service facility.

Funeral home owner Arvin Hansen is taking advantage of the damage caused by an electrical-caused fire that did more than $200,000 damage to the 36-year-old business near downtown Rupert to do some remodeling.

"We figured because of the fire we were going to have to gut it anyway, we may as well do what we wanted," Hansen said.

Construction of a new, 200-seat chapel and larger visitation rooms began in early September. The 3,000-square foot addition will be fully handicap-accessible.

"It's really going to be a neat facility," Hansen said.

Workers are nearly finished laying a foundation for the addition. Hansen said he expects the project will be completed after the first of the year. In the meantime, funeral services are being handled through the Hansen Mortuary Burley Chapel.

The Rupert Chapel was left in ruins following an early-morning fire on August 21. The blaze ravaged the balcony of the mortuary, gutted living quarters on the building's second floor and forced the evacuation of an adjacent apartment building.

Fueled by natural gas from a grill on the balcony, the fire spread quickly, reaching temperatures in "excess of" 2,200 degrees, fire officials said.

Two occupants in a second story apartment located in the mortuary were able to escape without injury. The building, however, suffered excessive fire damage on the second floor, and smoke and water damage on the first and third floors, Hansen said.

Fire officials initially suspected Christmas lights were the cause of the fire, but Hansen said wire inside conduit on the patio was the real culprit. Shortly after the disaster, Hansen saw the glow of opportunity.

"We were going to remodel, but we kept putting it off. This forced us to play our hand," he said.

Battery

Continued from B1 his son's death, he is a threat to the safety of his two remaining children and is not rehabilitable."

For nearly a year, the parole office has documented what it deems "highly" living conditions at Tinney's Burley home, including dirty clothes and trash scattered everywhere.

The recent battery charges stem from reports that Tinney's baby sitter in June saw the 298 pound Tinney grab his five-year-old daughter by the arm, pull her off the ground, take a couple of steps, and kick her in the buttocks causing her feet to fly out from under her, according to the baby sitter's statement in an affidavit.

The baby sitter told authorities in August that Tinney had rubbed her breast and squeezed her buttocks, the affidavit said.

The U.S. Border Patrol has placed a hold on Tinney, which means he faces deportation to Canada after local court proceedings. Tinney was nearly deported a year ago.

Recycle

because "you have the whole cycle" here — including industry that turns trash into new products, he told them.

One Twin Falls manufacturer is behind the push for countywide recycling in Twin Falls.

Tamara Harney, a partner in Hamilton Manufacturing, said she wants to secure a local supply of "mixed residential" paper, which her company turns into cellulose insulation and bales of "hydro-seeding" mulch for customers in five Western states. Hydro-seeding involves spraying a soupy mixture of lawn seed, paper, fiber and water, to plant new turf.

Hamilton is one of only 80 plants nationwide that manufacture cellulose insulation, and the company has plans to expand, Harney said. Currently, much of the plant's raw material for insulation and mulch is imported from other states, she said.

Both products use a jumble of newspapers, magazines, junk mail, cereal boxes and egg cartons — any paper a household is likely to toss out, Harney said. That recipe could make curb-side collection of mixed paper a cost-efficient way to reduce the waste stream in Twin Falls.

Commissioners say they are anxious to slow the flow of garbage into the county dump's rapidly filling fill-in process.

At the current rate of fill, the cell has only a 36- or 38-month life expectancy, Reinke said earlier. Commissioners would like to raise that to 50 months by slowing down the fill-in process.

Closing the first cell and opening a second will cost the county $1.8 million to 1.4 million, he said.

But it's the rising cost of handling solid waste that has made it possible for diversion programs to weather the ups and downs in the recyclables market, Schultz said.

In late October, recycling became a commodity on the Chicago Board of Trade as the market will likely have more stability now, according to Carrie Stauffer, the waste district's public education director.

And industry projections show that within five years two of every three newspapers and seven of 10 cardboard boxes will have to be recycled to keep the recently expanded industry functioning, Stauffer said.

Still, Schultz advised Twin Falls County and its member cities to steer clear for now of other recyclables that have a more uncertain future. Colored glass is hard to sell now, and the plastics market is "really volatile," he said.

Greyhound racing to end at track

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Years of financial losses and sagging attendance at the track will force the Coeur d'Alene Greyhound Park to end live racing, effective Jan. 1, track officials said Tuesday.

Officials at the track in Post Falls, just west of here, told a news conference that recent rise in complaints about alleged abuses of greyhounds and increased state scrutiny of track operations did not play a role in the decision.

"That's not the reason," operations manager Al May said. "The reason is economic."

The track has lost $21 million since it began operations in 1988; and attendance has declined 50 percent in the past three years. May said. The track's betting handle also has declined from $30 million in 1992 to $9 million last year, he said.

Competition from other forms of gambling, including lottery tickets, has curbed betting at the track, he said.

The track will continue to offer off-track betting on races broadcast via satellite from horse and dog tracks around the nation, he said.

The end of live greyhound racing will affect about 200 site employees. Some will remain at the track to oversee off-track betting, May said.

Kids caught in middle of divorce

DEAR ABBY: I must disagree with your flip answer to "Ticked Off in Texas." It is clear that neither you nor any of your staff has ever been in the position of being a second wife where there are children from a prior marriage.

I agree, it is very important for the divorced parents to be able to discuss matters pertaining to their child (or children), but that is as far as it should go.

Buying items from the drug (or grocery) store for his former wife should not be his responsibility. As an adult, she should assume responsibility for her own shopping.

If this couple is such good friends, why did they get divorced in the first place? He has remarried, and his main responsibility is to his present wife. For you to mock the second wife for having the courage to express her feelings shows an unusual lack of understanding on your part.

DEAR ALSO: I stand by my reply. In no way did I mock the second wife for expressing her feelings.

Hostility between former spouses hurts everyone — especially the children. It is much better when former spouses can be friendly and interact with their children.

Doing occasional favors and maintaining a reasonably friendly relationship does not mean that the second wife is loved less. In fact, a husband who does not have to contend with his former wife's anger is freer to pursue the good life with wife No. 2.

DEAR ABBY: When someone dies and the family requests that in-laws send flowers a donation be made to a fund established by the family, is it not unreasonable to expect an acknowledgment or a thank-you note?

In this particular case, only contributions in excess of $100 were acknowledged. Since when does the amount of the gift dictate whether or not someone's kindness is to be acknowledged?

We, and many others, feel slighted

Dear Abby

and bitter over the appalling behavior of the family of the deceased.

Nearly five months have passed since "Mr. X's" death, and hundreds of people who lovingly made their donations in his honor will never be thanked because the dollar amounts did not meet the family's criteria.

What do you think, Abby? We think the family could use a course in human decency and manners.

DEAR SLAPPED: The deceased's family should have thanked everyone who made a contribution in honor of their loved one. Their failure to do so is inexcusable.

DEAR ABBY: My teacher gave us an assignment that has me stumped. Here is the question: What is the inscription on the Statue of Liberty, and who wrote it?

A FIFTH-GRADE STUDENT IN LEXINGTON, KY.

DEAR STUDENT: The inscription on the base of the Statue of Liberty: "Give me your tired, your poor; Your huddled masses yearning to breathe free."

The wretched refuse of your teeming shores. "Send these, the homeless, tempest-tossed to me; I lift my lamp beside the golden door!"

The author, Emma Lazarus, was born in 1849 in New York City. She was a poet and philanthropist who organized relief for persecuted Jews immigrating to the United States from Russia. She died in 1887 at the age of 38.

By the way, next time you are "stumped" by a homework assignment, go to your local library and ask a librarian for help. You'll be surprised by all that you can find there.

Thai Spicy lives up to its name

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

Owner Mayuee Thongdee likes to cook her food spicy, she says. Red and green chilies, curry, basil and garlic are just some of the spices that go into her Thai dishes.

Thongdee came to the United States for the first time in 1969, at age 16, to go to school. At the time, she was so young that she didn't even realize there was a Vietnam War going on in Southeast Asia, Thailand, where she lived, was relatively uninvolved.

So Thongdee returned to Thailand after she finished school.

Later, she moved to the United States and lived for about eight years in Ogden, Utah, where she worked in Winslow's restaurant. She moved to Twin Falls in 1988 and worked at Wayne's Work in the Magic Valley Mall for several years.

Customers at Wayne's often asked Thongdee why she was cooking Chinese food when she was from Thailand. They said she should be cooking Thai food. After several years of encouragement and requests, Thongdee contacted a real estate agent and Thai Spicy was born.

The restaurant opened for business Sept. 15. The demand for Thongdee's particular variety of spicy food is great, she said. Her Thongdee likes hot spicy Thai food, hence the name. The menu cautions the customer to specify the degree of spiciness - chili pepper. Hot pepper sauce is available for those who like the food hotter yet.

Thongdee's husband often helps with the cooking at the restaurant.

For appetizers, Thongdee recommends the Sa-Tay, a choice of sliced and marinated beef, pork or chicken on skewers served with peanut or cucumber sauce. Or the Spring Roll, deep fried rolls stuffed with ground chicken and vegetables and served with plum sauce.

The recommended salads are Papaya Salad and shredded green papaya, mixed with carrots, tomatoes, dried shrimp, ground peanuts, lemon juice and chili (served with sticky rice or steamed rice) and Larb (Northeast Style), which is a choice of

Potatoes reap rewards for Idaho cooks

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Here are a couple of recipes from the Idaho Potato Commission's "Idaho Originals" Dinner-time Favorites" recipe contest, held recently in Shelley. Both of these recipes were awarded honorable mentions at the event.

Anyone who wants more information about the annual contest, may contact the Idaho Potato Commission, 1633 Broadway/27 floor, New York, N.Y. 10019. Or call 212-687-8000.

The recipe for Idaho Potato Harvest Salad was submitted by Margo Bunch of McCall.

- IDAHO POTATO HARVEST SALAD
3½ cups (3 large) Idaho Potatoes, peeled and diced into 1-inch chunks
2 cups apple juice
½ cup canned pineapple cubes, cut into smaller pieces and drained on paper towel
3 stalks celery, finely diced
½ cup walnuts, finely chopped
1 large delicious apple, unpeeled, cored and diced
3 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1 teaspoon Fruit Eresh or Everfresh
1 cup sour cream
3 tablespoons mayonnaise
Bib lettuce, torn in bite-size pieces
Garnish: Sprig of rosemary or 3-4 blueberries and 3 apple slices

1. On high heat, in a three-quart saucepan, bring potatoes, salt and apple juice to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer until potatoes are tender but not mushy (approximately 15 minutes). Drain potatoes and return to saucepan to evaporate moisture. Once potatoes are dry, set saucepan in a large bowl with cold water to cool.

2. Mix pineapple, celery, walnuts, apple, lemon juice and fresh fruit in large bowl. Let stand for five minutes. Add potatoes.

3. In a separate small bowl, mix sour cream and mayonnaise. Fold into potato mixture.

4. To serve, place lettuce on platter and spoon salad on top. Add garnish if desired.

Serves 6.

The second potato-contest recipe is for Idaho Potato Soup Supreme, from Betty Barrett of Boise.

- IDAHO POTATO SOUP SUPREME
4 cups Idaho Potatoes, coarsely diced
1 teaspoon salt
2½ cups water
6 slices bacon, diced
1 large onion, diced
1 cup carrots, grated
½ cup celery, diced
1 cup water
¼ teaspoon thyme
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
¼ teaspoon basil leaves
¼ teaspoon marjoram
2 cups milk
2 teaspoons butter
1 cup grated sharp cheddar cheese
1 cup tomato, peeled and diced
1 teaspoon parsley flakes
Coarsely ground pepper
Grated Parmesan cheese

1. Put potatoes, 2½ cups water and salt in three-quart kettle. Boil until tender. Do not drain.

2. While potatoes are boiling, cook bacon until crisp. Remove all but two tablespoons bacon grease. Add onion and sauce until transparent. Add carrots, celery, 1 cup water, thyme, garlic powder, basil and marjoram. Cover and steam until vegetables are tender.

3. Mash unpeeled potatoes. Add cooked vegetables, milk, cheese and butter to mashed potatoes. Simmer 10 minutes. Add tomatoes and parsley flakes. Let stand 5 minutes.

4. Ladle into soup bowls. Garnish with pepper and Parmesan cheese. Serve with assorted crackers and/or garlic bread.

Note: For a low fat version, drain all the bacon grease and steam onion with vegetables. Substitute skim milk and reduced fat or fat free margarine and cheese.

Can be made the day before and refrigerated. If soup thickens too much add milk to thin to desired consistency.

Serves 6-8.

Please see RECIPES/C8

After several years of encouragement from customers, owner Mayuee Thongdee and her husband, Suthap Thongdee, opened Thai Spicy.

Kwanzaa! African Americans celebrate rich cultural heritage

Pork, rice and peanuts link African peoples in many countries via common ingredients and preparation methods. Through food, creativity and mother wit, African-American cooks were able to survive in new lands, pairing cultural traditions with unfamiliar experiences, creating cultural observances.

Observance of Kwanzaa celebrates this cultural creativity.

Peanuts, popular in America, are known as ground-nuts in Africa. Originally transported to this country as victuals for slaves, the peanut was cultivated in the South as an alternative crop for cotton. Peanuts are a good source of protein, B vitamins and folic acid. Spicy Peanut-Rice Soup combines roasted nut flavor and rice for a spicy dish reminiscent of West African cuisine. Peanut Party Biscuits link both African and Southern heritage in a delicious biscuit bite.

Jerk Pork Bites and Barbados Pork Roast feature fresh pork and Caribbean flavors, enhanced by spices native to many of the tropical islands. Though pork has long been part of the African-American diet, the pork was most often smoked and cooked with vegetables to provide flavor and a small portion of meat when most African-American could not afford fresh pork cuts. Today, fresh pork is rich in nutrients and is 31 percent leaner than pork of just 10 years ago.

Hoppin' John and Red Rice are hearty and flavorful recipes that can serve as side dishes or entrees. Hoppin' John is traditionally served for the new year - according to the myth, eating this dish of rice and peas on New Year's day will bring good luck throughout the year. Red Rice is a step-saving version of Jollof Rice, a dish that is served in several African countries.

Round out the menu with greens - turnip, collard or mustard. Frozen or canned greens make preparation effortless: serve heated with vinegar and hot sauce to taste. And in the spirit of Kwanzaa, offer Spiced Peanuts or Dixie Peanut Brittle as a take-home gift to fellow celebrants.

- SPICY PEANUT-RICE SOUP
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 large onion, chopped and sautéed
1 medium sweet potato, peeled and diced
2 cloves garlic, minced
8 cups chicken broth
1 teaspoon dried thyme
¼ teaspoon ground cumin
1 pound pork tenderloin, cubed
3 cups thick and chunky salsa
3 cans (16-ounce) garbanzo beans, drained and rinsed
1 cup diced, unpeeled zucchini
2½ cup creamy peanut butter
1 bag Success Rice, cooked
¼ cup unsalted peanuts

In a large saucepan, heat the vegetable oil to medium-high heat and sauté the onion, sweet potato and garlic, stirring occasionally, until onion is flamed, about 5 minutes. Add chicken broth, thyme, cumin and pork. Bring to a boil, reduce heat, cover and simmer until pork is cooked and vegetables are tender, 18-20 minutes. Add the salsa, beans and zucchini and cook until zucchini is tender, about 10 minutes. Add the peanut butter, cooked rice and peanuts and stir until completely combined.

Serves 8-10.

A Kwanzaa feast helps celebrate African-American culture.

- PEANUT PARTY BISCUITS
2 cups all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon baking soda
¼ cup shortening
¼ cup milk
¼ cup finely chopped roasted peanuts

Heat oven to 475 degrees. In large bowl, combine all dry ingredients, cut in shortening until mixture is crumbly. Add milk and stir until dough is fairly free from the sides of the bowl. Turn out on lightly floured surface. Knead gently 6 to 8 times. Roll out to about ¼-inch thickness, cut with small biscuit cutter. Bake on ungreased cookie sheet for 7-10 minutes, until lightly browned. Serve filled with thinly sliced country ham, or deviled ham spread. These may be made ahead, wrapped well and frozen. Before serving, allow to thaw and reheat in a 450 degree oven for 4-5 minutes.

- JERK PORK BITES
1½ pounds boneless pork loin, cut into 1-inch cubes
2/3 cup vegetable oil
1/3 cup fresh lime juice
2 tablespoons cider vinegar
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1/8 teaspoon thyme
1 tablespoon ground allspice
1 teaspoon nutmeg
2 teaspoons black pepper
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon cayenne
1/4 teaspoon ground cloves
2/3 cup chopped onions
2 hot peppers, finely chopped
3 cloves garlic, minced

Place pork in 1-quart self-sealing plastic bag. Combine oil, lime juice and vinegar and sugar, seasonings, onion, peppers and garlic. Mix until blended. Pour over pork. Seal bag and marinate in refrigerator 8-12 hours or overnight. Drain pork; discard marinade, and place meat in a single layer, not touching, in a shallow baking pan and roast at 350 degrees for 25-30 minutes, until pork is tender. Remove to serving platter and serve hot as an appetizer or on a bed of cooked rice.

- BARBADOS PORK ROAST
3-pound boneless pork loin roast
1 tablespoon ground cumin
1 tablespoon chili powder
1½ teaspoons ground coriander
1 teaspoon ground red pepper
1½ teaspoons ground black pepper
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
¼ teaspoon brown sugar
½ teaspoon salt

Pat surfaces of pork roast with paper toweling. Blend well all seasonings and rub evenly over all surfaces of the pork roast. Place roast in a shallow pan and roast at 350 degrees for 45 minutes to 1 hour, until internal temperature (measures with a meat thermometer) registers 155 degrees Fahrenheit. Remove roast from oven, let rest 10 minutes before slicing (temperature will rise about 5 degrees upon resting). Slice to serve immediately or cool slightly, slice and wrap well to refrigerate.

- HOPPIN' JOHN
½ pound pork sausage
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 small onion, coarsely chopped
½ green pepper, coarsely chopped
½ red pepper, coarsely chopped
1 clove, finely chopped garlic
1/4 teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon chili powder
1 can (16 ounce) black-eyed peas
1 bag Success Rice, cooked
1 tablespoon lime juice

Heat oil in large, heavy skillet. Crumble sausage into skillet and cook briskly until browned. Add onion, peppers and garlic to

A users' guide to Kwanzaa

Kwanzaa - celebrated for seven days Dec. 26 through Jan. 1 - celebrates seven principles. The daily ritual begins with the lighting of one of the seven Kwanzaa candles by a family member, along with a discussion of the principle the candle represents.

Kwanzaa shares with other holidays the communal spirit and a cosmopia of food. Kwanzaa is derived from the Swahili word meaning "first" or "first fruits of the harvest." The holiday culminates with a feast of karamu (kah-RAH-moo) on Dec. 31. During the seven days preceding the feast, the menu may include foodstuffs native to Africa - peanuts, okra, yams, black-eyed peas and rice.

The feast can be planned as a potluck with each family member or guest bringing a favorite dish. The karamu menu can include favorite recipes and traditional foods from Africa, the Caribbean, the United States and South America, representing lands where African peoples have lived.

- The Seven Principles of Kwanzaa
Umoja (oo-MOH-AH) Unity
Kujichagulia (koo-jee-chah-goo-LEE-ah) Self-determination
Ujima (oo-JAH-MAH) Collective work and responsibility
Ujamaa (oo-JAH-MAH) Cooperative economics
Nia (NEE-ah) Purpose
Imani (koo-OO-mah) Creativity
Kuziba (ke-MAH-ee) Faith

Traditional Elements of the Kwanzaa Table
Mazao (mah-ZAH-ee), fruits and vegetables, which stand for the principles of unified effort.
Mkaka (mah-KEE-hah), a straw placemat, which represents the reverence for tradition.
Uzoma (oo-ZOH-mah), an ear of corn for each child in the family.
Zawadi (zah-WAH-dee), simple gifts, preferably related to education or to things African or African-influenced.
Kibana cha umma (kee-KOM-beh-cha oo-MOH-jah), a communal cup of traditional beverage.
Kibana (koo-NAH-nah) seven-branched candleholder, which symbolizes the continent and peoples of Africa.
Kwanzaa (KWAH-nah) is a relatively new addition to the holiday calendar and as holidays go, it's not religious, political or heroic. It is a celebration of culture, community and family, creating a link with African peoples and traditions.

Drying, storage of herbs is lost art Christmas cactus brightens holiday

By B.A. McKinley
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS—Growing and using your own fresh herbs is a popular pastime; but the drying, storage and use of herbs out of season is a lost art.

Every year, the highly-touted herb garden gains energetic devotees as "fresh" and "healthy" become the buzz words of '90s cooking. If you are a recent convert and have enjoyed the pleasures of your garden this summer, there is no reason to stop now.

Herbs you are not able to use in summer should be picked before they flower, then preserved for use during the winter. There are several exciting ways that herbs can help brighten up a gray day or a dreary dish.

It is not necessary to use just one herb in salt preservation. Combine your favorite herbs to create signature salts that can be found only in your kitchen.

Non-metal bowl: jar or crock with snug-fitting lid
Several pounds of regular, iodized table salt
Several bunches of herbs of your choice

To begin:
 Wash whole, freshly-picked grass sprigs gently in cold water. Let air dry. Cover bottom of dish with 1/2-inch layer of salt. Add 1/2-inch of herbs. Alternate salt and herbs in 1/2-inch layers, with top layer of salt being about 1/2 inches again.

In several weeks (3-4):
 Salt will take on flavor of herb(s) used. As a bonus, some of the herbs will have remained fresh and green and may be used as usual.
 It is not necessary to use just one herb in salt preservation. Combine your favorite herbs to create signature salts that can be found only in your kitchen.

Drying herbs is a time-honored and honey-tradition. What kitchen isn't warmed by herbs hanging randomly above the cook's head? The process is simple and well worth the effort. Pluck your sprigs from your garden and begin.

DRIED HERBS

Need: Ball of lightweight twine, small hooks that can screw into the ceiling or thumbtacks
 All the whole sprigs of herbs you wish to dry
 Containers with lids, preferably dark enough to keep out the light

To begin:
 Wash herbs gently in water and allow to air dry. Using twine, tie 3-4 sprigs together in small bunch. Do not create large bunches, as the air cannot circulate and the herbs could spoil. Attach 3-4 bunches together, along the length of your twine. The length of your twine depends on how far you want the bunches to dangle from your ceiling. Place each bunch about two inches apart, so that the bunches do not overlap.
 Make a slip knot at the end of the string and slide over end of hook or thumbtack and hang. Length of drying depends on the weather outside, as well as the climate within your own kitchen or drying area. Longer is fine if you are uncertain.

After dried:
 Pull leaves from stems, trying not to break or crush. The flavor will be crispier if the leaves are crushed just prior to use.
 Store leaves in tightly closed containers. Use 1/2 teaspoon crushed dried or 1/4 teaspoon powdered dried herbs for 1 tablespoon fresh chopped herbs.

Dried herbs can be very useful if you're looking for a flavorful alternative to sodium in your diet. As an additive in your cooking or as a sprinkle for your plate, try making a mixed herb powder from your dried herbs. This herb powder from a cook named Sina is a great mixture of familiar favorites that will add zest to any dish.

SINA'S HERB BLEND

Need:
 Kitchen scale
 Mortar and pestle or modern equivalent to pulverize ingredients.
 Tightly-sealed container
 2 ounces each of:
 Sweet marjoram
 Summer savory
 Parsley
 Thyme
 1 ounce Basil
 1/2 ounce each of:
 Sage
 Bay-leaves
 Dried celery tops
 Dried lemon peel

To begin:
 Crush sweet marjoram, then add summer savory to marjoram and crush. Continue through list of ingredients. Store in container and use at will.

Have yourself a merry little Schlumberger. You might remember a Christmas cactus at grandmother's house, so many years ago. Christmas cactuses are old favorites for their bright blossoms in the dead of winter. The ferny-flowered Christmas cactus isn't really a cactus at all, but another popular houseplant transplanted from a humid jungle, where it grows wild on trees.

Most people get the Christmas cactus (schlumbergera braysii) and its cousin crab cactus (zygocactus truncatus) mixed up. This is often erroneously labeled as a zygocactus. But you'll know the old favorite by its arching, drooping branches and flat, smooth, spineless joints. Three-inch rose-purple flowers explode at Christmas time, giving it the popular name.

Christmas cactus will bloom reliably during the holidays if it gets cool night temperatures, around 50-55 degrees, and 12-14 hours of darkness every day during November. Some experts say that buds will form no matter how many hours of darkness Christmas cactuses get each night, as long as their evenings are cool enough.

Cathy Walworth Green

scarlet flowers bloom from November through March. Modern varieties are available in white, pink, salmon and orange, too.

These tropical plants like to root around in rich, porous soil.

Beauty has its price: Like all blooming plants, Christmas cactus and crab cactus like to be fed with liquid fertilizer every 7-10 days and want more water than planter plants.

Growing Vocabulary: Conifer. It's a good time of year to learn about conifers, which are trees such as cedars, cypresses, junipers and pines. Though not all conifers are evergreen, all conifers do bear seeds in cones or modified cones. Leaves on most conifers are narrow and needlelike or small flat scales. Bring in some conifer cones this fall to fill a basket, just to be pretty. The birds will appreciate a snack of peanut butter smeared into the cones, then rolled in bird seed when it gets colder.

When buds have developed, bring the plant inside and enjoy the blossoms.

Crab cactus (schlumbergera truncatus, more upright) have one- or two-inch joints that are sharply toothed and end with two large teeth at the end of the last joint. Short

A wonderful idea for herbs that does not require drying, plucking or mashing is salt preservation of herbs. With this method, you reap two valuable products — "fresh" herbs and seasoned salts.

If you have termites, call professional

Q. How do I determine if my home has termites? Can I kill them myself, and what?

A. There are two types of termites. Subterranean termites, the most widespread, sometimes reveal their presence by flying in swarms in the spring and fall. After swarming, the termites drop their wings and go underground. Piles of dropped wings near a foundation or on window sills is one sign of termite infestation.

Do it yourself
Gene Austin

Subterranean termites often reach wood, which supplies the cellulose they eat, by building mud tubes or tunnels up a foundation. The tubes are another clue to their presence.

Drywood termites, found mostly in the South and Southwest, often leave piles of fecal pellets, resembling sawdust, on the outside of finished wood.

If termites are suspected in the wood of a specific part of a house, a good test is to jab the wood with an ice pick or awl. If the tool penetrates easily, termites could be present, or it could be a sign of wood rot.

At the best course, when there is any evidence or suspicion that termites are present, is to have the home examined by an exterminating service trained in termite work. Special chemicals and tools are needed to control termites. In my opinion, termite control is definitely not a do-it-yourself project.

Q. I bought an old house where the previous owner had painted the joists and floorboards in the basement ceiling with a lead-based paint. Is there any type of coating I could use to cover the lead paint? Would that kind of treatment be acceptable to a real-estate agency if I tried to sell the house?

A. Encapsulation, or covering lead paint with a protective, paintlike coating, has become an accepted and relatively inexpensive way of treating lead paint in some situations. An example of an encapsulant is Protecta Poxy, made by AGP-Surface Control Systems, Windham, N.Y.

However, properly preparing surfaces for an encapsulant requires some training, or the work should be done by a skilled contractor. Never sand or scrape paint that is suspected of containing lead without proper training and equipment. For more information on Protecta Poxy, write AGP at Box 388, Thunderbolt Terrace, Windham, N.Y. 12496, or call 518-734-2880 or 518-734-3614.

It's impossible to say how encapsulating the lead paint would affect the sale of the home. A federal law was scheduled to go into effect Oct. 28 that would require home sellers to disclose to prospective buyers the presence of any known lead paint on their property. Implementation of the law has been delayed until 1996, according to the National Association of Realtors. However, many real-estate brokers already require sellers to disclose in writing the presence of any known lead paint. Some municipalities, such as Philadelphia, also require lead-paint disclosure. Philadelphia's ordinance requires disclosure if a house built prior to 1978 is sold.

Thus, it would be up to the prospective buyer to decide if encapsulated lead paint is safely out of the way.

Q. Our driveway was built in sections with redwood 2-by-4s between the sections. The wood has rotted out and needs to be replaced. Is there a plastic material or some other product I can use instead of redwood?

A. Trex, a wood-alloy polymer composite that won't rot, should make a good substitute for the redwood. Trex, which is primarily used for decking and landscaping, is sold in 2-by-4 size, as well as several other building-lumber sizes. For more information on Trex and names of dealers, call 800-289-8739.

Q. When it rains, water seeps through the concrete-block walls of my basement. Is there something I can apply to the walls to stop the seepage?

A. Waterproofing paints, sold at many home centers and building-supply outlets, will often stop seepage through basement walls. Two of the most widely sold waterproofing paints are Drylok, made by United Gilsolite Laboratories of Scranton, Pa., and Thorsol, made by Thoro Systems Products of Miami. There are many other excellent waterproofing paints, however. Most of the paints contain Portland cement, which seals pores in concrete blocks and forms a barrier to seepage.

Waterproofing paints are generally applied to the interior of basement walls and work best if the walls are clean and free of other coatings, such as old paint and mineral deposits.

Readers' questions and comments are welcome and should be sent to Gene Austin, the Philadelphia Inquirer, Box 8263, Philadelphia, Pa. 19101. Questions cannot be answered personally.

Simplified Navarro attracts many 1st-time home buyers

The Navarro isn't a large home, but some people find that quite attractive. This Mediterranean-style plan is well suited to the needs and pocketbooks of first-time home buyers. Empty nesters looking to downsize their maintenance responsibilities may also find what they're looking for here.

Gathering space, full kitchen, bedrooms are on the outer edges and the kitchen is at the heart of everything. Standing in the kitchen, you can gaze through the dining room to the front yard, or through the glass door to the back yard. This feature is particularly useful for the parents of small children, but it also illustrates the essential openness of the floorplan.

To huge windows bathe the airy, vaulted great room in natural light. One of the windows is actually a sliding glass door that opens onto a wide screened porch at the rear. Sink and dishwasher are built into a long counter that doubles as an eating bar. Utilities are just a few steps away, tucked in a pass-through space that opens into the garage. A coat closet is just inside the front door.

The Navarro's master suite is more luxurious than you might expect to find in a home this size. It has a huge walk-in closet and a large tub and shower combination tucked into an alcove illuminated by an arched opening filled with glass blocks.

On the opposite side of the house, the two secondary bedrooms share a bathroom. A large linen closet is in the hall.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, sections and artist's conception, send $15 to Associated Designer, 1100 Jacobs Drive, Eugene, Ore. 97402. Please specify the Navarro #1-061 and include a return address when ordering. A catalog

By Rebecca Kolls Knight-Ridder News Service

As the garden season comes to a close, the harvest is just beginning. That's because the seeds you need for next year are hiding in this year's flowers and vegetables.

But you need to know that not all plants produce seeds that will grow the same exact plants. For example, seeds from hybrids, open-pollinated species and cultivars will not grow plants or flowers like the parent plant, and some will not produce at all.

It is best to select seeds from the best plants. Seeds come in a variety of ways. Seed crops can be those like beans and corn, in which the seed is the edible part. These seeds can be collected anytime after they have dried on the plant.

Some seeds are encased in a fleshy bulb, such as peppers, tomatoes and cucumbers. These seeds must be extracted, cleaned and dried.

Then there are plants with sacs that open and scatter the seed when they are ripe. This type includes many flowers as well as lettuce and onions.

You should gather seeds as soon as they are ripe and dry. Typically, they will start changing color or the casing will split, exposing the seed inside. Be careful, though, because if the seed is taken too early, the seed will not be viable.

Here are some tips on gathering seeds:

On flowers, look for seed sacs where the bloom was. Remove any of the plant material and collect it in a bag. Label it immediately. Indoors, scatter the seeds on newspapers or screens for drying. The drying process takes about two weeks.

After that time, store the seeds in the refrigerator in a clean, dry jar with a lid. Next spring, remove the seeds a couple days before planting to allow them to warm to room temperature.

Here are some rules to follow to ensure a successful seed extraction:

Seeds must be well-ripened before you pick them but should be gathered before they drop to the ground. Most seeds are not affected by the cold temperatures, but a light frost will add moisture, which can reduce the seed's quality. Stored seed must be kept away from moisture and heat. Adding silica gel in the jar will help absorb excess moisture. The lower the temperature, the better the storage. So even storage in the freezer is OK.

By following these easy steps, you should have viable seeds for next spring. But watch out! Collecting seed can be addictive.

Set a small pot aside for radishes

By Paul Wills Knight-Ridder News Service

Radishes are so low in nutrients that they hardly count as food, but they are colorful on the dining table and their peppery taste is welcome in raw salads.

For those reasons and also because they are so easy to grow, home gardeners should have a few radishes coming along during the cooler parts of the year.

Despite their low nutrition values—a tad of vitamins C and A and a bit of iron is about it—radishes were important in the diet of the earliest peoples, and still are in many parts of the world.

The Chinese and Japanese grow huge radishes that may weigh dozens of pounds, and have many recipes for cooking them or pickling them as we do cucumbers. These are usually called "winter radishes" in the United States and are sometimes grown by American backyard gardeners.

But with us the far more popular types are the red or white "short-season radishes" that are only slightly larger than marbles and mature in less than 30 days.

Radishes are in the mustard family with cabbages, turnips and horseradish. In the laboratory, they have been crossed with cabbages but the resulting plant had cabbage roots and radish leaves — the incredible opposite of what the scientists wanted.

The botanical name Raphanus sativus alone will tell you how easy it is to succeed with radishes. Raphanus comes from an ancient Greek word that in English translates roughly as "easily reared."

Certainly the little short-season radishes are easily reared, provided you plant them in cool weather, whether spring or fall. Hot weather makes them grow large leaves and stringy roots that are strong-flavored and hot to the taste.

Authorities differ on the probable home of the radish. Some place it in China; others say Western Asia. Both places may be right since many different forms of the radish were developed by ancient farmers in both areas.

They were pictured as food in tomb paintings by the Egyptians, offered on gold trays to gods of the Greeks and written about by the Romans. The references usually are to a large, black-skinned variety, not our little red and white types.

Radishes also have a long history in folk medicine. Over the centuries, they have been used to treat poisonous snake bites, alleviate the pains of childbirth, remove freckles and treat both baldness and deafness.

REAL ESTATE FACTS

BY: SID LEZAMIZ, ASSOCIATE BROKER, IRLWIN REALTY, INC.

Q: How can I increase the value of my house?

A: One of the things you can do to increase the value of your home is to finish unused space, i.e. an attic, basement, etc. Because the space is already enclosed, the finishing costs do not come close to the additional value added by the improvements.

Cosmetic improvements can also improve value. One of the most effective is landscaping. With careful planning, a home can be gracefully accented by new trees, shrubs, and other plantings, giving it a bigger-than-life appearance. Other improvements might include new carpet, painting inside and out, or a decorative fence around the front yard.

Water-heater timers will cut costs on your electricity bills

Q: I am considering installing an automatic timer for my electric water heater because my electric bills are killing my budget. Are timers worth the cost? How can I tune-up my electric water heater myself? - A. H.

Sensible home
James Dulley

A: Heating water uses more electricity than any other appliance in the home. A typical family of four will spend at least $400 per year to heat water with electricity.

Installing an electric water heater timer is about the best investment a homeowner can make. At a cost starting at about $25, a timer can pay back its cost in two to three months. Over the life of the typical electric water heater, the total savings can be more than $1,000.

Most efficient water heaters keep water hot for many hours with the heating elements switched off. After installing the water heater timer, you will quickly learn when to set it to come on to provide the hot water you need.

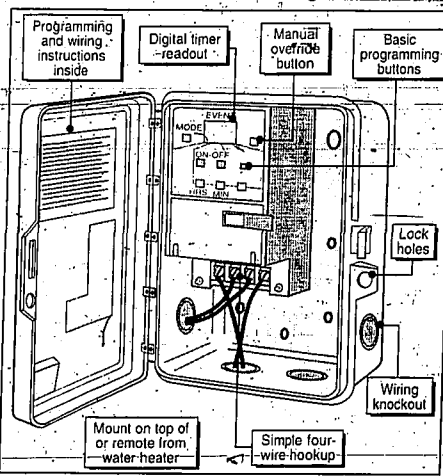

Most families need a lot of hot water for only two hours in the morning for showers and two hours at night for evening dishes or laundry. All timers have manual override buttons to switch it on at any time.

Some of the newest water heater timers provide from two to 24 on/off settings each day. This allows you to fine tune the on-time schedule to realize the maximum savings on your electric bills.

Digital timers are the most effective and provide the greatest flexibility. If your schedule varies on different days of the week, select a timer with seven-day programming. This provides a different on/off schedule each day.

If your schedule is the same every weekday, except for weekends, select a less expensive timer that provides a weekday and weekend schedule. The cycles are programmed in a similar way as most furnace thermostats.

All the digital timers have a built-in backup battery or integral battery to save the programmed schedule in case of a power outage. Since they are electronic with no moving parts, they require no maintenance.

The basic tune-up item for an electric water heater is draining the sediment out of the tank several times per year. Place your hand on the top of the tank. If it feels warm, install a tank insulation jacket.

Since electric water heaters are fairly simple devices, they are easy to troubleshoot yourself. For example, fluctuating water temperature can be caused by a faulty thermostat or thermal cutoff, loose wiring, etc.

Write for Update Bulletin No. 871 listing manufacturers of electric water heater timers, number of on/off times and days programming, prices, features and a troubleshooting guide of 22 common problems and causes. Please include $2 and a business-size SASE.

Write to James Dulley, 6906 Royalgreen Drive, Cincinnati, Ohio 45244.

Q: I leave a door to an unheated room open a little for my cat to get to his food and litter box. The door gradually swings open all the way and wastes energy. What can I do to keep it in position? - D. A.

A: Since you have to go in and out of the room often, you still want the door to operate smoothly. Try loosening up the hinge screws and readjusting them so the door is balanced and will stay in an opened position.

Another simple no-cost trick is to remove the middle hinge pin. Hit it with a big hammer to bow it slightly. Grease it and drive it back into the hinge. This provides just enough drag to keep the door from swinging open by itself, yet you can still open it easily.

James Dulley has written a new 328-page book, "Sensible Home," covering 81 of his most popular columns and Update Bulletins. Included are 400 manufacturers and 32 projects and house construction methods. The book is $15.95 (includes delivery and postage). ## Santa ornaments are fun, easy to make "Each year I love making new Christmas treasures for my tree. I also make an ornament for each of my children. I date each one. When the children move out, they will each have a complete set of ornaments for their own homes."

Valley crafts & stitches
Tracy Dalin

This year I'm making clay pot Santas. They are cute and fun and quite inexpensive to make.

Materials:
Small clay pot
Acrylic paints in Santa colors
White pom pom
Jingle bell
Christmas ribbon
Glue gun and glue sticks

Place your pot- upside down. Paint the top of the pot and the sides red. Let dry and then paint the bottom rim black. Allow this to dry completely.

Next, you will paint the Santas face. Using flesh color, paint an approximate 1-inch square. You will use white paint for the beard and hat band. Make this fun by adding texture with your brush. This gives the beard and hat band a bushy effect. Paint Santa's eyes, nose and mouth next.

jingle bell. Tie the bell at center and insert ribbon ends through the hole in the top of the pot. Tie ribbons ends in a bow and hang.

Sawtooth garden board of directors starts 2-month fund-raising drive

The Times-News

KETCHUM - The Sawtooth Community Garden Project Board of Directors is launching today a two-month fund-raising drive to raise $35,000 to support a "Planting Seeds: Children's Education in the Garden" program and other community education projects.

Programs include a series of children's summer gardening workshops, field research classes for local high school students, youth job training events and landscaping apprenticeships.

Three landscape architecture students will spend three months this summer working at the garden project as participants in a $20,000 internship program funded through the University of Idaho. The interns will help with the "Planting Seeds" program and the development of the botanical and research gardens. Stephen R.

Down, professor and chairman of the Department of Landscape Architecture at the U of I, announced the grant award.

Monies raised by Dec. 31 will be matched dollar-for-dollar by the Global Environmental Project Institute, a local foundation.

Fund-raising events include phone bank calls to the local community today, Thursday and Dec. 12, 13 and 14, holiday poinsettia sales and a benefit show, and a "Taste of the Valley" evening featuring organic and vegetarian food treats showcasing the talents of local restaurateurs.

Stylish living

The details help to make an apartment look more like a home.

Little things make an apartment home

Orange County Register

Argghhh. We don't want you to flip into decorating relapse, but remember your first apartment? All that freedom. All those parties. And, gosh, what a dog-ugly place it was.

First apartments, though, can have their decorating moments — and they don't all have to be bad. Yes, we know that there are traditions to be followed. Plastic crate-and-wood bed bookcases come to mind.

But there are steps that you first-apartment types can take to give the space a look that's firmly pulled together.

One of the big problems in decorating any apartment is that, in many cases, you can't touch the walls. Forget about painting unless your landlord is particularly understanding. A lifetime subscription to Metropolitan Home and thinks that browsing design centers is a fun way to kill an afternoon. We have not seen many landlords who qualify.

So what's a person to do? Color has to be added in furnishings and accessories.

Start with two basic colors for the furnishings; advises Deb Fritz, home decor consultant for Target stores. Then add splashy accent colors with accessories such as dinnerware, glassware, table linens, throw pillows and window treatments.

If the apartment is cramped, make the most of the space by thinking vertical instead of horizontal. Use tall floor plants, lamps or vertical furniture (tall bookcases come to mind) to raise the gaze upward.

Apartments, especially those in large, faceless complexes, tend to be boxy. To eliminate the feel that you live in a Cracker Jack container without the prize, think area and throw rugs.

Carefully placed throw rugs and layered area rugs can create a focal point and draw the eye away from the boxy configuration of a room.

Another fairly foxy game plan is to surprise the eye by placing furniture in unexpected arrangements, Fritz said. Instead of squaring against the wall, which is all too predictable, angle the pieces to change the room's focal point.

Window treatments often are total nothings in apartments. Simple drapes, and that is that.

Think valances. They're a great way of spicing a window's appearance, and they're relatively inexpensive if you're willing to invest a bit of time shopping fabric store closets.

Valances can be hung using tension rods that won't damage those to-be-not-walls and trims.

Secondhand furniture is a staple in most first apartments. For a small outlay, you can give those down-and-out pieces a fresh look and coordinate them with your decorating scheme at the same time.

The magic ingredient in this little recipe is fleckstone, textured spray paints and faux-finish paints. They come in lots of colors and textures and can make a knocked-out old coffee table look like it just got off the Neiman Marcus delivery van. Well ... OK. Almost.

Fall a flurry of cleaning, mulching soil

By Adrienne Cook
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — There is almost as much to be done by way of garden chores in the fall as there is in the spring.

Both seasons are periods of frenzy, each has its own deadline.

In the fall, the urgency arises with the advent of frost. Plant material must be cleaned up and the soil worked before it freezes hard. In the spring, the peering aprons that exhorts the gardener to feverish planting and sowing.

Garden preparation is the top priority for those who grow vegetables and cut flowers. All annuals soon must be cleared out, except those planted in the last weeks for winter harvest. Nature itself is the guide: As zucchini and cucumbers wither, beans stop producing pods, eggplants cease swelling from day to day and peppers fall to color up, they can be pulled out and their fruits eaten or preserved.

Chop debris that looks healthy — diseased foliage should be discarded — with a lawn mower or chipper, and add it to the soil when you get to that stage.

Sometimes, it's hard to tell the difference between plant stems and foliage that are diseased and those that have simply died back from natural causes, such as old age or drought stress. Foliage that is only brown and dry can be added to the compost.

If you see spots or powdery deposits on foliage, assume these are diseased. About the only foliage that you really don't want to take chances with are tomato vines. Diseased tomatoes are notorious for passing on their ailments.

Gardeners with rotitillers should use those machines on their beds now, not in the spring. Heavy soil turned now will break down with winter frosts in time for spring. Also, rotitilling for pest control should be done a couple of times between now and January. The best time is on a day that is warm enough so the soil is not frozen (tilling frozen soil is next to impossible anyway) but that precedes a killing frost. Grubs that are partially controlled this way — you'll never get them all — include Japanese beetles, borers, blister beetles and June bugs.

Even if a rotitiller is used as part of garden preparation in the fall, the most critical ingredient is organic matter — and the very best source of this is compost. Organic matter is a crucial soil component, and replenishing it now will give the fall-prepared garden a substantial edge in terms of providing what growing plants need.

Gardeners who won't be tilling can just toss the compost and other organic matter right on top of beds after they've been cleared out. There is no such thing as too much organic matter when it comes to soil preparation in the fall. Adding six or eight inches of material to the soil surface is not overdoing it, especially because this will compress throughout the winter, enriching the soil without significantly altering bed height by next spring.

Also, the gardener need not be as choosy about materials applied at this time of year because planting is months away. The organic matter doesn't have to be fully decomposed or chopped finely or made to form a perfectly smooth layer.

The ingredients might be rough wood chips, leaves — chopped or not — straw, shredded newspaper or sawdust. All of these are acceptable amendments for soil if they are added now. Winter's freezing and thawing will help incorporate these into the soil, and exposure to the elements will break them down.

In addition to the important task of soil preparation, the gardener should begin now to find sources of mulch for next spring.

The concept of "mulch" can seem almost intimidating — yet it simply is anything that is laid on top of the soil around plants or over beds. Its benefit, however, is far from limited: piled down now will give the garden a clean look going into winter and will protect overwintering plants. It should be augmented again next spring to retain soil moisture next summer, when water seems to get sucked out of the ground by the hot sun and the earth begins to crack.

Gardeners cultivating a winter garden of cabbage, broccoli, lettuce and onions should put a sprinkling of bonemeal and rock phosphate around their plants about now, topped with a layer of compost.

Also, that stockpiled mulch will come in handy, for winter-grown vegetables need a warm blanket to help fend off the chill nights. Use a lightweight mulch material, such as shredded newspaper or straw, so trapped air will help insulate plants.

Fruit-tree limbs and branches that are damaged by pests and disease should be marked now while in leaf with spray paint or plastic ribbon. These will need to come off, but that task should wait until the tree is dormant. December or January are good months for pruning.

Fruit trees that are planted now should be watered liberally each week, through December. Established trees won't need watering unless they have been severely stressed by something, such as the kind of grading work that was done around the base of your house.

Extreme insect damage on a young tree is another example of severe stress.

Dunaway lists Beverly Hills home

By Ruth Ryan
Los Angeles Times

Dunaway

Faye Dunaway, who co-stars with Jason Alexander in the upcoming film "Dunston Checked In" and co-starred with Marlon Brando and Johnny Depp in "Don Juan DeMarco," has put her Beverly Hills-area home on the market at just under $2 million.

"Dunston-Checked In" is to be released in December. "Albino Alligator," co-starring Dunaway, Gary Sinise and Matt Dillon, is expected to be out after the first of the year.

The Oscar-winning actress ("Network," 1976) also just completed her autobiography with Betsy Sharkey, titled, "Looking for Gatsby: My Life." It is due out next week.

Dunaway, 54, won an Emmy for her guest appearance on "Columbo" during the 1993-94 season. She co-starred with Warren Beatty in "Bonnie and Clyde" (1967) and with Jack Nicholson in "Chinatown" (1974). She originally listed her home at $2.2 million in the fall of 1993, saying then that she wanted to sell because her teen-age son was in boarding school in the New York City area and she wanted to become more bi-coastal. She is spending more time now on the East Coast and in Europe, a source said last week. Dunaway plans to keep a smaller residence in the Los Angeles area.

She leased her Beverly Hills-area home in the spring of '94, then re-listed it for sale in August 1994, at just under $2 million.

After re-listing it, she rented it to actor Val Kilmer, who moved elsewhere last April.

Dunaway, who was renting a smaller home nearby, recently moved back into the house, which she has owned since March 1990.

Having just returned from the International Home Furnishings Market held in High Point, North Carolina, it has become apparent to me that we must sell much of what we have in our present inventory to make room for our exciting new purchases. If you have even been remotely thinking about a new furniture purchase, I will personally guarantee this is THE best time to act. We have slashed prices on a large percentage of our most popular items—some to COST AND BELOW! If you don't think our price is fair, then make us an offer. We mean business. Our offer includes sofas, chairs, pictures, tables, area rugs...you name it! ALL FIRST QUALITY, just like you'd expect of The English Group. Of course due to the nature of this event, we can only make this kind of a deal on a first come, first served basis. So what are you waiting for? Put the paper down, and come down in TODAY for our SUPER 7-DAY SELL OFF!

Not just another pretty face: Pumpkin delicious source of nutrition

By Edwige Lee
Knight-Ridder News Service

Front porches across the country are lit with pumpkins or two. Most sit alone on concrete steps, but some are perched atop hay bales and corn stalk displays, accompanied by a goofy scarecrow or two.

A few have been carved into jack-o'-lanterns, though the toothless grins might be sagging by now.

While we most often associate these orange gourds with Halloween, their versatility in the kitchen and their high nutritional content make pumpkins too important to dismiss as simply a decoration.

The food value of the pumpkin is impressive. A half-cup serving of prepared pumpkin has nearly three times the U.S. recommended daily allowance of vitamin A, according to "The Great Food Almanac" by Trena Chalmers. The fruit can be used in soups, main dishes, side dishes, breads and desserts or canned and preserved for later use.

All pumpkins, even the giant hundred-pounders, are edible, says the International Pumpkin Association. But the best for cooking are the three- to four-pound ones, about the size of an average cantaloupe, writes Craig Claiborne in "The Food Encyclopedia."

When you're choosing fresh pumpkins at the market, look for bright-colored, blemish-free rinds and pick fruit heavy for its size. Some pumpkin varieties are grown especially for cooking, such as half-moon or sugar; ask your grocer what varieties are on display.

Store whole pumpkins at room temperature for about a month, displaying them in a wooden bowl. Or place in the refrigerator for up to three months, according to "The Food Lover's Tiptop" by Sharon Tyler Herbst.

Cooking a pumpkin is easy. Claiborne suggests cutting the pumpkin into eighths and scooping away the seeds and fiber. "Throw away the fibers, but save the seeds for roasting later. Peeling isn't necessary."

Methods vary, but you can pre-sure-cook, bake, boil or steam pumpkin. If you cook pieces with the peel intact, wait until the cooked pumpkin has cooled, then scrape flesh from outer pieces pulp in a food processor, blender, ricer or electric mixer. You can store cooked pumpkin in the refrigerator for four to five days.

Scooped-out pumpkins make an impressive soup (served for holiday gatherings). Choose a pumpkin with the stem still attached so the lid can be removed easily for serving. You can even bake desserts or side dishes in a hollowed pumpkin, scooping out cooked flesh with every serving.

Even the seeds are edible. Rinse well to clean off the pulp, then spread in a single layer on a baking sheet. Roast in a 300-degree oven for 20 to 30 minutes, turning several times. Cool completely and season if you wish.

BAKED PUMPKIN WITH APPLE-RAISIN FILLING
(10 servings)
1 4- to 5-pound pumpkin
1 tablespoon melted margarine or butter
2 tablespoons brown sugar
4 to 5 cups sliced, peeled apples
½ cup raisins
1/3 cup brown sugar
4 teaspoons all-purpose flour
¾ teaspoon cinnamon
¾ teaspoon nutmeg
Cut out the top of the pumpkin and reserve lid. Scrape out seeds and strings. Brush inside of pumpkin with melted margarine or butter and sprinkle with 2 tablespoons brown sugar. Replace lid and place pumpkin in a shallow roasting pan. Bake in a 375-degree oven for 20 minutes. Mix apples and remaining ingredients in medium bowl. Spoon into baked pumpkin and replace lid. Return to oven and bake for 1½ hours. Remove lid and bake for 15 minutes or until pumpkin and apples are tender. Serve hot, scooping out pumpkin. Flesh with apple filling.

Busy fall schedules call for fast meal deals

Busy moms need to make meals in a hurry most of the time. They want recipes that whip together quickly among the taxi trips to gymnastics, dancing and sports practices.

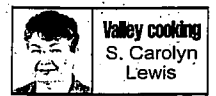

Such situations call for fast food, but not the kind that comes from a restaurant.

It is possible to make nutritious, fast meals with a little planning ahead.

I try to stock my pantry with items that help me throw together fast meals that satisfy. Included in my stock-on-hand are canned goods like beans, spaghetti sauce, vegetables; fruits, cream soups (mushroom, chicken, etc.); noodles, salsa, flour tortillas, frozen chicken breasts and low-fat cheeses.

Tortillas are versatile and quick to use. You can drop almost any left-over meat, a few beans, some salsa and cheese on a tortilla. Roll it up and pop it into the microwave for a couple of minutes. Add some raw veggies, a piece of fruit and a glass of milk. You've got a fast meal.

Try a few of these chicken dishes that you can make quickly on nights when your household is dashing from activity to activity.

guine noodles. Add a salad, garlic sauce and a piece of fruit and milk for a full meal.

CHICKEN DIVAN PRONTO
(Serves 4)
2 10-ounce packages broccoli
1 can cream of chicken soup
1 cup cream of mushroom soup
½ cup evaporated skim milk
½ cup grated low-fat cheddar cheese
Cook broccoli in microwave following package directions. Drain. Arrange in a microwave dish. Top with diced chicken, distributing evenly. Combine mushroom soup, milk and cheese. Pour over the top and spread evenly. Microwave on medium for four to five minutes. Serve at once. Add carrot sticks, bread, fruit and milk to complete the meal.

1 small onion, diced
1 teaspoon canola oil
2 boneless, skinless chicken breast halves, cut into ½-inch strips
1 tablespoon cornstarch
¼ teaspoon cumin
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
Salt and pepper to taste
1/3 cup water
1 cup low-fat or nonfat milk
1 tablespoon cornstarch
½ teaspoon butter flavoring
½ teaspoon chicken bouillon granules
1/3 cup grated low-fat cheddar cheese
1/2 cup chunky salsa (mild, medium or hot)
4 large flour tortillas
3 to 4 tablespoons grated low-fat cheddar cheese
Heat a non-stick skillet over medium heat. Add canola oil. Sauté onions until translucent. Remove onions from pan to a small dish and set aside. Combine cornstarch with cumin, garlic powder, salt and pepper. Toss with chicken strips. Sauté in the same skillet over medium heat until cooked through. Add 1/2 cup of water and stir well. Turn heat down to low and let simmer while preparing sauce.

B.Z. CHICKEN CACCIATORE
(Serves 4 to 6)
4 boneless, skinless chicken breast halves
1 tablespoon flour
1 teaspoon garlic powder
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 1/2-cup canola oil
1 26-ounce can chunky spaghetti sauce
1 4-ounce can sliced mushrooms
1 pound linguine noodles
Start linguine cooking in a large pot according to package directions. Cut chicken into ½-inch strips. Mix flour, garlic powder, salt and pepper. Toss chicken pieces in flour mixture. Heat a heavy skillet and put in oil. Turn skillet to distribute oil. Sauté chicken pieces, stirring frequently, until cooked through. Add spaghetti sauce and mushrooms. Bring to a boil. Turn heat down and simmer for five minutes. Serve over cooked lin-

CHINNOULES
(Serves 4 to 5)
1 pound noodles (your choice)
2 cups cooked chicken, diced
1 can of chicken soup
½ can white wine (or water)
½ cup evaporated skim milk
2 teaspoons cornstarch
1 1/2-cup minced onion
1 1/2-cup chopped parsley
In a large pot, cook spaghetti noodles according to package directions. In a saucepan, combine the soup, wine (or water), milk and onion. Dissolve cornstarch in one tablespoon water and add to saucepan. Add chicken. Stir. Bring to a boil and then turn down heat and simmer until noodles are done. Drain noodles and arrange on a platter. Ladle sauce over noodles. Garnish with parsley. To complete the meal, add a green vegetable and a piece of fruit and milk.

(Serves 4)
Serves 8
SPICED PEANUTS
1 cup granulated sugar
½ cup water
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
1 teaspoon ground cloves
3 cups roasted salted peanuts, skins on Boil sugar, water and spices until syrup reaches hard-crack stage (300 degrees). Drop peanuts into syrup. Stir until nuts look dry. Pour out on waxed paper and let stand until cool. Makes about 3½ cups.
DIXIE PEANUT BRITTLE
2 cups granulated sugar
1 cup light corn syrup
½ cup teaspoon-salt (optional)
4 cups raw peanuts, skins on
2 tablespoons butter
2 teaspoons baking soda
In a heavy saucepan heat sugar, syrup, water and salt to a rolling boil. Add peanuts. Reduce heat to medium and stir constantly. Cook until syrup spins a thread (290 degrees).

Use a separate pan to prepare sauce. Stir cornstarch into milk until well blended. Add butter flavoring and chicken bouillon granules. Cook over medium low heat stirring constantly until the sauce thickens. Add cheese and stir until melted. Stir in onion and cooked onion. Pour sauce over chicken and stir well to coat the pieces. Use a slotted spoon to transfer ¼ of the chicken to each flour tortilla. Roll each tortilla around the chicken and place in a microwave-safe casserole dish. Ladle sauce from skillet over the tortilla rolls. Sprinkle with grated cheese. Heat in the microwave on high two minutes. Let sit a minute or two to equalize heat. Adding a green salad, fruit and milk will turn this into a fast meal.

chicken, beef or pork mixed with toasted rice, onion, lemongrass and lettuce (served with sticky rice or steamed rice).

The customer can choose from soups like Tom Kha Gai, a chicken soup with coconut milk, mushrooms, lemongrass, onion and spicy seasonings or Fisherman Soup (Po-Tak) which is made of fish, prawns, calamari, mussel with fresh chili, lemongrass, citrus leaves, mushrooms, lime juice and hot/sour broth.

The chef also suggests Pad Gra Praow, a choice of ground chicken, beef or pork sautéed with Thai basil, garlic, chili, bell peppers and onions and Pad Prik King, a choice of chicken, beef or pork sautéed with bean and red chili paste. The Pad Prew-Wan is a choice of chicken, beef or pork sautéed with tomatoes, pineapples, onion, baby corn and bell peppers in a perfect blend of sweet and sour sauce.

Thongdee says the best in the house is the Him-Ma-Pan, a choice of chicken, beef, or pork sautéed with cashew nuts, onions, chili, and delicious sauce. (It's also available with shrimp or squid.)

Thongdee's personal favorite is the Black Mushroom Beef, a stir-fry beef with black mushrooms, bell pepper and tomato.

Noodle dishes include the all-time favorite Pad Thai, stir fried rice noodles with shrimp, chicken, egg, tofu, bean sprouts and ground peanuts and the Guey Tiew Nam, a Thai noodle soup with meatballs, choice of chicken, beef or pork (also available with shrimp or squid).

Chinese foods are served a la carte for those customers who are more comfortable with Chinese cooking.

Cronny Thaiiced tea, Thaiiced coffee and soft drinks are available. The beer and wine are both domestic and imported.

CSI volleyball team maintains top ranking

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho volleyball team remains the No. 1-ranked junior college team in the nation in this week's poll.

CSI, 55-0, is ahead of No. 2 Miami-Dade (23-0) and No. 3 Kankakee Community College (45-2). Ricks College (42-12) is No. 5, and Utah Valley (27-8) is No. 13.

The Golden Eagles, two-time defending national champions, end the regular season with matches at Ricks Friday and at Western Montana College in Dillon, Mont., Saturday.

The Region 18 tournament is Nov. 9-11 at Utah Valley, with the national tournament Nov. 19-23 in Miami, Fla.

Top Canyon Conference volleyball players named

Canyon Conference volleyball coaches named four Filer players to the 1995 all-conference, with Valley filling three spots and Gooding and Wendell two apiece.

Filer coach Ed Richards, who guided his team to a third-place finish at the state tournament, was named coach of the year.

CSI men's, women's basketball teams gear up

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team will hold its final two scrimmages this weekend in preparation for the regular season.

The first scrimmage will be at 7 p.m. Friday against Northwest Nazarene College at Capital High School. The Golden Eagles will then take on Albarron's College of Idaho at 11 a.m. Saturday in Caldwell.

CSI begins its regular season at 7 p.m. Tuesday, hosting the Albertson's junior varsity.

The CSI women begin their season with the Tip-Off Classic in Miles City, Mont.

The Eagles will play Western Wyoming, Miles City and Medicine Hat during the round-robin tournament.

Indiana squad edges Eagles in preseason coaches' poll

The Times-News

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — College of Southern Idaho's men's team has been ranked No. 2 in this year's coaches' preseason basketball poll.

The poll is a one-time shot offered to all NJCAA coaches in the country. The number participating was not reported.

This poll should not be confused with the official NJCAA poll which is compiled weekly among the nation's 22 regional commissions. Vincennes, Ind., was ranked No. 1, coming off a 29-8 year. CSI was 33-5 last season and Three Rivers, one of the best national programs over the past 15-20 years, is third. Defending national champion Okaloosa-Walton, Fla., was in eighth position.

Rounding out the top 10 are No. 4 Wabash Valley, Ill.; 5, Spartanburg Methodist, S.C.; 6, Connors State, Warner, Okla.; 7, Western Nebraska, Scottsbluff; 8, Okaloosa-Walton, Fla.; 9, Butler County, Kan., and New Mexico JC.

"It's nice to see our program and team so well respected nationally," said CSI Coach Steve Irons. "It's a good confidence builder for our players and a good rallying point for our fans. Now we have to go out and see if we can earn it."

The Eagles start their season Nov. 7 by hosting Albertson College jayvees and Western Wyoming Nov. 9. Both games begin at 7 p.m.

Heavyweight boxers Evan Ger Holyfield, left, and Riddick Bowe meet the media Tuesday at Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas in preparation for Saturday's bout. They said during the interview they are "the two best guys out there" in the heavyweight division.

'Real' heavyweight belt on line when Bowe, Holyfield match up

The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — When they first met three years ago, Riddick Bowe and Evan Ger Holyfield fought for the undisputed heavyweight title. In their rematch a year later, two pieces of the title were at stake.

When Bowe and Holyfield get together for a third time Saturday night, not even Bowe's lightly regarded WBO title will be on the line.

Many, though, believe the fight will crown the best heavyweight in the world; even while Mike Tyson is fighting the same night just down the street.

"This fight will validate who the heavyweight champion of the world is," claims Bowe's manager, Rock Newman. "There may not be a title here but this is for the real heavyweight championship."

Just how quick the championship fortunes of both fighters have plummeted is remarkable, considering that both have held all three major titles and between them have only three losses.

But in a division increasingly controlled by promoter Don King, independent contractors like Holyfield and Bowe have

Tyson injury cancels fight

The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Mike Tyson fractured his right thumb and postponed Saturday night's fight with Buster Mathis Jr., an injury that will sideline the former heavyweight champion four to six weeks.

"This is a really serious setback," Tyson said Tuesday night at a news conference at the MGM Grand, where the fight was to have been held. "I was really anticipating this fight."

Tyson initially injured his thumb

while fighting and Holyfield find themselves fighting each other for little more than money and some recognition.

"Myself and Bowe don't plan to stay in boxing a long time and I see it as just a waiting game to wait two tough guys out," Holyfield said.

"Nobody wants to face us for any amount of money."

Holyfield and Bowe will both make a lot of money, Saturday night in the scheduled 12-round fight at Caesar's Palace. Holyfield is guaranteed $9 million, while Bowe figures to make about as much depending on how the fight does at the gate and on pay-per-view.

But they are fighting a third time because there are few other name fighters available as opponents to make the same kind of money. With the titles locked up by King, the winner of Saturday night's fight can only hope to eventually lure Tyson into a fight.

"I can't speak for Mike, but I'm sure Mike will fight anybody Don King asks him to fight," Holyfield said. "I'm sure if Don King asked Mike to fight me or Bowe he would."

Sandberg, back with Cubs, on retirement: Done that

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — The Hall of Fame will have to wait. Ryne Sandberg is ready to lace up his spikes, pull on his golden glove, range behind second base and make another great play for the Chicago Cubs. "I was a baseball player. I'm still a baseball player. And I'll always be that," Sandberg, 36, said Tuesday after ending his 16½-month retirement by signing a one-year contract.

"I did the retirement thing. I did the summer activities and all that. It just got to the point where now it was time to go back and play baseball."

"This is something that I wanted to do and I needed to do. It was very important to me. I don't think it really left me."

But Sandberg — statistically the best fielding second baseman in major league history, a 10-time NL All-Star and the 1984 league MVP — left it.

In so doing, he walked away from the approximately $17 million he had left on his contract.

Montana schools vie for top spot

The Associated Press

OGDEN, Utah — The Big Sky Conference basketball coaches and the media that cover the sport agree on one thing: the favorite heading into the 1995-96 season is in Montana.

But the coaches give the preseason nod to Montana State, while the media point to Montana. Bozeman or Missoula, both see it as a close race.

In the coaches' poll released by the league Tuesday, the two are separated by just two points, 47 for Montana State and 45 for Montana. MSU received five first-place votes, while the Grizzlies, who finished with the same record as 1995 conference champion Weber State, got three.

Weber State was picked to finish third by the coaches with 35 points. The exact spot the Wildcats were picked to finish last season.

Close behind Weber State is Idaho with 33 points. The final four spots are filled by Boise State (21), Idaho State (18), Eastern Washington (13) and Northern Arizona (12).

The media not only disagreed with the coaches on the top team, selecting Montana with 113 total points and seven first-place votes, but also picked Weber State to finish ahead of Montana State.

Weber State received 108 total points, five for first place, to barely outdistance Montana State, which had 100 total points and three first-place votes.

The media agreed with the coaches on the fourth-place team, giving their spot to Idaho with 71 points and a single first-place vote. Boise State and Idaho State tied for the next spot, while Northern Arizona was picked seventh ahead of Eastern Washington.

Fox owner links with cable TV for sports station

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — In a challenge to ESPN, the owner of the Fox television network and the nation's biggest cable TV system operator have formed an alliance to obtain sports programming and televise it worldwide.

Rupert Murdoch's News Corp. Ltd., which owns the programming unit, and the cable company Tele-Communications Inc. said Tuesday they will each own 50 percent of the venture.

The alliance is expected to become a formidable force in bidding for sports rights around the world, competing with the likes of ESPN, the U.S. cable sports channel operator controlled by Capital Cities/ABC Inc.

"This is a commencement of a new era in televised sports," said Peter Barton, the president and chief executive of Liberty Media Corp., the programming arm of TCI, which is based in Englewood, Colo.

He said the alliance "will create a dream team in sports with a unique combination of strengths, assets and entrepreneurial will."

Both companies own a combination of TV channels and sports programming rights that they will contribute to the venture. The partners said the assets are valued at more than $2 billion in all.

News Corp. will contribute its 2-year-old Fox cable network that currently has about 25 million subscribers. The TV network currently airs entertainment programming but will add sports to the mix.

McDowell, Benes, others ready to test free-agency market

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Star pitchers Jack McDowell, Jim Abbott, Andy Benes, Tim Lincecum and Kenny Rogers were among 10 players who filed for free agency Tuesday, raising the total to 30.

Other stars filing were second baseman Craig Biggio and shortstop Shawn Dunston.

Meanwhile, the Boston Red Sox declined to exercise a $4 million option for 1996 on reliever Rick Aguilera and decided instead to pay a $300,000 buyout. Aguilera then decided to file for free agency.

The Seattle Mariners exercised their $3.5 million option on AL batting champion.

Intrusion

Shoplifting teen-agers rampage in Atlanta, prompting protest

ATLANTA (AP) — While Atlantans cheered the World Series champion Atlanta Braves in a parade, as many as 200 teen-agers stomped Underground Atlanta for orchestral shopping.

Merchants at the downtown shopping and entertainment complex, still smarting the day after the stampede, said Tuesday they're fed up with being a magnet for unruly crowds during big celebrations. They wonder how authorities will handle the huge crush of Olympics visitors next summer.

They started running toward where I was," said city vendor Pam Hecht. "So I ducked up under the cart I was in during Freaknik."

Shoplifters stole several bottles of seafood oil from a cart owned by Pete Harrison, whose wife called him in a panic while she was sending the cart.

"I am so livid about what's going on down here," Harrison said.

"The security was lax, the policing was lax. We've mentioned time and time again that they need to do something about this."

'The ones that stole stuff would rush out, and all the rest of them would just stand there blocking the way.'

—Al Warren, Atlanta merchant

Merchants described whooping mobs that shouted out the names of stores, followed by a charge to the targeted shop.

"They got some chant going, like 'Hee Yie, Hee Yie!'" Then one of them would holler out "Foot Locker" and they'd all run in there knocking everybody down," said Al Warren, who sells sports memorabilia from one of 40 push carts in the shopping and entertainment complex.

"The ones that stole stuff would rush out, and all the rest of them would just stand there blocking the way," Warren said.

The manager at Foot Locker, who would not give his name, said he didn't know how much had been stolen.

Although some vendors said Monday's crowd wasn't as unruly as some in past disturbances, they questioned whether Underground will be able to contain the masses next summer during an even bigger

Monday was the second time in six months that uncontrollable crowds and shoplifters plagued Underground. During the Freaknik college student-street party in April, looters smashed store windows and stole thousands of dollars worth of merchandise.

And in 1992, after four police officers were acquitted in the beating of Rodney King in Los Angeles, a riot broke out at the downtown Atlanta complex.

Underground vendors say they've learned from past experience how to react to the crowds, close their shops as quickly as possible and get out of the way.

"It looked like a couple of hundred kids gathered in a big group.

Grant Raeside, sales and marketing manager for Underground Atlanta, would not say how many security officers were on duty when the mob rushed through. But he did say police officers who normally would have helped patrol the mall had been dispatched to the parade route.

During other big events, such as last year's Super Bowl and the annual New Year's Eve celebrations, guards at each door limit the number of people who enter the mall, Raeside said.

"Maybe we should've done that during the parade," he said. "But I don't think the Atlanta police or our forces expected anything like that. We're getting better and better at controlling the crowds."

Officers will most likely resort to limiting the number of visitors who can enter Underground during the Olympics, Raeside said.

Hornets maintain star center won't sting them for $91 million

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Three days before they begin what they hope will be a season that elevates them to the NBA's elite, the Charlotte Hornets are considering trading Alonzo Mourning because of a contract dispute.

"We're trying to work out something where Alonzo will still be with the Hornets," said Bob Bass, the team's vice president of basketball operations.

Several broadcast and newspaper reports said Mourning, whose contract expires after this season, has been offered a seven-year, $70 million deal by the Hornets. He reportedly wants $91 million for seven seasons with an escape clause after four seasons.

Charlotte Hornets center Alonzo Mourning says he wants $13 million a year.

The Hornets, who open the season Friday against the Chicago Bulls, do not deny they are mulling a trade of one of the game's best players. They have called his demands unreasonable and are said to be talking with up to eight teams about a trade.

Mourning is to earn $4.25 million this season, his fourth in the NBA.

"All I can say is right now he's under contract to the Charlotte Hornets," Bass said, "and we're going to prepare to play the game Friday night with him as part of our team."

Bass said the team was continuing to negotiate with Mourning's agent, David Falk. Messages left by The Associated Press at Falk's office were not returned.

On Tuesday, the 6-foot-10 center avoided reporters who staged a 36-hour vigil outside the Hornets' practice complex. Team employees used elaborate car-switches with Mourning's sport utility vehicle to aid his getaway.

Mourning's teammates are not happy about the prospects of trying to improve on last year's club-record 50 victories without their top scorer, rebounder and shot blocker.

He has averaged at least 21 points a game each season since joining the Hornets in the second pick in the 1992 draft. "You don't get a quality center like Alonzo very often," said 42-year-old Robert Parish, one of Mourning's backups, said outside the practice complex. "You just don't replace Alonzo's Mourning."

"We really hate to see him go," forward Scott Burrell said, shaking his head. "If they're going to trade him, I hope they get some great players for him."

Charlotte, already saddled with Larry Johnson's $8 million contract, has been talking with teams for several weeks about trading Mourning.

One possibility has Mourning going to the Los Angeles Lakers for 7-1 center Vlade Divac, another player and a first-round draft pick. Also said to be under serious consideration is a deal with Boston 7-0 center Eric Montross, another player and two first-round draft picks, or sending Mourning to Portland for point guard Rod Strickland and possibly forward Cliff Robinson.

Talk of a deal dominated the airwaves and sports pages Tuesday in Charlotte, where fans want more from a 7-year-old franchise that has yet to advance past the second round of the playoffs.

Bass was noncommittal when asked how optimistic the team was about retaining Mourning.

"We're trying to get things worked out," said Bass, who spoke at the team's practice facility in neighboring Fort Mill, S.C.

Reporters were allowed into the main gym to meet with Bass only after the players and coach Allan Bristow had already left for the locker room, which was closed to the media.

Faltering Bucs return to reality

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The bye week couldn't have come at a better time for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, who cite injuries as one of the reasons they've been unable to maintain the pace of the club's best start in 16 years.

Coach Sam Wyche produced a long injury report Monday, listing 11 players and every bump, bruise, break and sprain that might have contributed to a two-game losing streak that's taken some of the luster off the team's surprising rise to contention in the NFC Central.

"A sputtering offense is just as responsible for the descent, although Wyche tried his best to put a positive spin on problems that hurt the Bucs in losses to Atlanta and Houston."

He said Trent Dilfer, despite not throwing a touchdown pass in six weeks and having the lowest quarterback rating among the NFL's 30 starters, is making more progress than the average fan can see.

The offense, he added, is not nearly as predictable as its No. 28 ranking and steady decline in production — including Sunday's season-low 155 yards in a 19-7 loss to the Oilers — might suggest.

The coach vowed the Bucs (5-4) will bounce back with help from this week's open date, which will give a banged-up offensive line and an overworked defense some much-needed rest.

Two weeks ago, the Bucs were three games over .500 for the first time since 1979 and sitting atop the NFC Central. They've fallen behind Chicago and Green Bay, but Wyche stressed the race is far from over because no one has been able to dominate the division.

"We can't let this fact escape: We are in the thick of it. We're not a longshot. We're right in the thick of this thing. It's a tough, hard, long season and this division is going to go just exactly as we talked about it. And the fact that we lost the last two ball games can't depress us to the point, or talk us out of realizing how good we are to be where we are."

Fans, however, are growing restless. Callers to radio talk shows complain about Dilfer, Wyche's play-calling and the overall performance of the offense, which has scored just 13 touchdowns in nine games.

Dilfer, who was blitzed relentlessly by Houston, has thrown only three TD passes — one in the last eight games. The offense's production, meanwhile, has declined each of the past five weeks, dropping from 310 yards against Carolina on Oct. 1 to Sunday's meager performance.

Testimony backs case against King

NEW YORK (AP) — A handwriting expert testified Tuesday that a boxer's signature on two copies of a contract with promoter Don King were identical, supporting a government theory that King faked a contract to collect insurance.

The testimony came as prosecutors in Federal court in Manhattan considered whether to re-arrest King for a month of testimony meant to prove King collected $350,000 illegally from Lloyd's of London. The trial will resume Thursday.

King is charged with nine counts of mail fraud in an indictment that says he faked a contract with Julio Cesar Chavez in 1991 so he could collect training fees that he had never paid to the boxer. If convicted, King could face up to five

The bout between Chavez and Harold Brazier was canceled after Chavez cut his nose.

On Tuesday, handwriting expert Gus Lesnevich testified that the signature of Chavez on one copy of the fight contract was identical to that on a copy that prosecutors allege King faked.

"A person never signs their name exactly the same more than once," he said.

"Actually, if a person sat down and wrote their name five times in a row on a sheet of paper, each one would have a little variation from the one above it."

"We are not machines. We cannot reproduce things exactly, the same way," he added.

Earlier Tuesday, Internal Revenue Service Agent John Ryan testified that a review of King's finances in 1991 showed there was no $350,000 check written to Chavez for training expenses.

But during his cross-examination of Ryan, King lawyer Peter Fleming appeared to introduce a theory that someone other than King — perhaps his accounting department — might be responsible for the identical signatures.

He noted to Ryan that it appeared that a front page raising the amount to be paid Chavez from $1.5 million to $2 million had been added. And he said a phrase — "except as provided above" — had been added to the $2 million version to make it meet the requirements of the insurance policy that would reimburse King after the bout was canceled.

Golf courses seek lock on noted holes

HOUSTON (AP) — It's a question more likely to be overheard at the clubhouse or the pro shop: Is a golf course hole a trademark?

The debate is hardly theoretical as three of the nation's most famous golf courses — Pinchurst, Pebble Beach and Harbour Town — went to federal court in a high-stakes gamble over whether the courses' holes are sacred, legally speaking.

The non-jury trial began Tuesday. At issue is whether Tour 18 of Humble, just north of Houston, has violated trademark law by duplicating and repackaging some of the nation's most famous golf course holes.

"They are taking a free ride on what we have done over the years," plaintiffs' attorney Jim Gambrell said during his opening statement before U.S. District Judge David Hittner.

"The only value they had was in copying famous holes."

For between $55 and $70, a golfer can go to Tour 18 and play a replica, say, of the "lighthouse hole" at Harbour Town (No. 18), or the "Amateur's Green" from Georgia's Augusta National (Nos. 11, 12, 13).

But plaintiffs' attorneys say Tour 18 is making money on the other courses' reputations and designs and is confusing the golfer into believing permission was given by the venerable highways.

"It is about copying our unique trademark, using our marks and names," Gambrell said.

Not so, says Tour 18's attorney William Durkee, who pointed the finger at "The Big Bear" and labeled their attempt to shut down Tour 18 as squelching the little guy's "American Dream."

"We're not saying our hole is Pebble Beach," Durkee said. "We're saying our hole is a replica of the hole that others are posted on the course. Durkee said, Pinchurst is located in North Carolina, Harbour Town is in South Carolina and Pebble Beach is in California."

In his opening statement, Durkee explained how Tour 18 emerged as the site of the "Big Bear" and Dennis Wilkerson, who thought amateur golfers might want to test their mettle against holes similar to the ones played by the pros.

U.S. inflation worries wane

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Fresh signs of economic vitality without inflation appeared Tuesday as the government reported the second-highest new home sales of the year and the smallest employment cost increase on record.

Two private reports appeared to confirm a vigorous economy, with one reporting an expanding manufacturing sector and the other strong consumer confidence.

"Without inflation, the economy is encountering no real impediments and can continue on its present growth path indefinitely," contended economist Eugene Sherman of M.A. Schapiro & Co. in New York.

"It shows solid growth without inflation, and that consumers are feeling pretty good about it," economist David F. Seiders of the National Association of Home Builders said of the reports.

The government reported last Friday the economy grew at a 4.2 percent annual rate during July, August and September, nearly three times the pace of the previous three months.

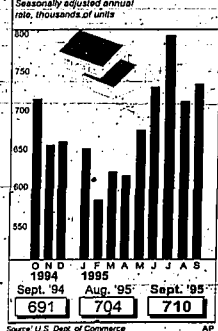

The latest reports sparked a rally on Wall Street, although Treasury bond prices were mixed in a narrow trading range.

The Commerce Department said Tuesday sales of new homes rose 3.3 percent in September, to 727,000 at a seasonally adjusted annual rate, from 704,000 in August.

The total was second in 1995 only to the 792,000 rate in July. It marked the first time in nearly two years that sales had topped 700,000 for four straight months.

The housing industry went into a slump after this year's all-time mortgage rates topped 9 percent. But it has rebounded recently, with rates dropping to 7.5 percent last week. That would mean a savings of more than $100 a month on a $100,000 mortgage.

Stockholders OK US West stock split

DENVER — U.S. West Communications shareholders by an overwhelming margin approved plans to split the company's stock into two trading classes so media ventures can be tracked separately, U.S. West said Tuesday.

The split, approved by 93 percent of the shareholders, makes the Baby Bell the first telecommunications firm to keep the same corporate structure, but split its stock into separately traded communications and media shares.

U.S. West Communications Group will track the performance of the company's 14-state telecommunications business, while U.S. West Media Group will track the performance of U.S. West's multimedia, wireless, directory and international businesses.

Under the split, U.S. West Communications stockholders receive one share of U.S. West Media stock for every share of U.S. West stock they now hold in a one-time, tax-free stock distribution.

Boise station sold to California firm

Northwest Television Inc. of Eugene, Ore., has reached agreement to sell its television station in Eugene, Coos Bay and Roseburg and in Boise to Reg-law Enterprises Inc. of California for an undisclosed price. KBCI-TV is the Boise station.

In a statement issued late Monday, the two companies said the deal had already been approved by shareholders but still required government approval. That was expected early next year.

KBCI-TV is the Boise station.

Jolkid to head Boise-based firm

SALT LAKE CITY — G. Frank Jolkid, chairman of the Salt Lake Olympic Organizing Committee, has been elected president and chief executive officer of Boise, Idaho-based MK Gold Co.

Jolkid, 67, retired president of chief executive officer of Kennecott Corp., will retain his position as chairman of Utah's 2002 Olympic effort. He will start his job with MK Gold Co. on Wednesday.

MK Gold Co. is a former Morrison Knudsen mining operation now controlled by Inn Cummins' New York City-based Leucadia National Corp. In August, the gold-mining company announced plans to merge with Leucadia, which has interest in property and casualty insurance, banking and real-estate development.
