Arizona loses bid to run park

The Associated Press

GRAND CANYON NATIONAL PARK, Ariz. — Gov. Fife Symington brought a force of National Guard troops and state park rangers to the Grand Canyon Friday in a futile attempt to persuade the president to let him reopen the state's top tourist draw.

The Republican governor was greeted at a tiny airport outside the park entrance by the park superintendent, who carried a letter rejecting his proposal to run the park with state workers.

But Symington saw hope in a part of the letter suggesting the state might offer to pay the full cost of running the park. He won an Interior Department agreement to start negotiations Monday.

"It's a fairly complex legal matter, but they left the door open," Symington said.

He also proposed a partial solution: Reopen Mather Point, an overlook with 1,200 parking spaces on the canyon's south rim that offers most park visitors their first view of the chasm. Mather point, he said, "is really the most spectacular view and why so many people come from all over the world to see the canyon."

All it would take to reopen the overlook, he said, would be to move a roadblock on the main park road back a quarter mile.

Accord sought to end shutdown

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Determined to shrink government and cut taxes, congressional Republicans muscled their historic balanced-budget bill to the brink of passage Friday and reacted tepidly to a White House proposal to end a four-day partial federal shutdown.

With GOP lawmakers clearing the vote, the House ratified the seven-year balanced budget, 237-189, almost exclusively along party lines. A few hours later, the Senate concurred, 52-47, but with one minor change that requires another vote in the House today.

Even Republicans celebrated. Rep. Newt Gingrich, the first GOP speaker in four decades.

Video system links lecturers, classes in area high schools

By Julie M. McKinnon
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In the 10 minutes before Dr. Howard Schaff lectured to a Twin Falls High School class, the radiologist looked at cross-section X-rays and gave a barium enema.

But by the time Schaff was standing before the high school's health-occupations class, he was relaxed and focused. Instead of leaving his patients at Twin Falls Clinic & Hospital and driving more than a mile to the high school Friday — or making the class come to him — an interactive video link allowed Schaff to see, hear, lecture to and answer questions from the class.

"It's nice for me to be here because I still have patients I need to monitor," Schaff said shortly before talking to the class for select juniors and seniors with an interest in health-care occupations.

Soon, the same technology will allow Schaff and other visiting speakers in health-care fields to lecture to students in Jerome, Valley, Gooding, Burley and Minico high schools.

That way, students at those schools will be able to take Twin Falls teacher Allyn Reynolds' vocational education class, which shows potential workers what is involved in various health-care fields — including surgery — while they are still in high school.

"What we're really trying to get students to do is make decisions," Reynolds said.

And the easiest way for both the lecturers and the students in the spread-out Magic Valley to lead and take the class is through telecommunications. "I think that's really neat in the rural setting we're in," Reynolds said.

In the next 18 months, those other five high schools, the hospitals in those communities and some offices of the South Central District Health Department should have operating telecommunications systems, said Bon Mauldin, a College of Southern Idaho employee who designed and built the telecommunications system. The system is controlled at CSI, which already uses telecommunications for its own classes.

Where's Waldholtz? Under lawyer's eye

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A Utah congresswoman's estranged husband, after vanishing for six days, surrendered Friday for questioning in what the FBI calls a $1.7 million check-kiting scheme.

Joe Waldholtz, 32, walked into the U.S. attorney's office here with his lawyer in response to a federal warrant seeking his arrest as a material witness in a grand jury's bank fraud investigation.

His wife, first-term Republican Rep. Enid Greene Waldholtz, filed for divorce Tuesday, saying her husband of two years was guilty of "an incredible level of deception" and saying she wanted her maiden name back.

"I have every confidence that the Department of Justice will get to the bottom of the fraud and deception he has perpetrated on me, my family, his family, friends and others," Rep. Waldholtz, 37, who is an attorney.

In an affidavit, the FBI alleged that Waldholtz was involved in the check-kiting scheme and that he manipulated accounts at First Security Bank in Salt Lake City and the Congressional Federal Credit Union at the Capitol.

Waldholtz disappeared last Saturday afternoon, leaving behind his brother-in-law and his car at Washington's National Airport, along with a storm of suspicion about bounced checks, a mysterious trust fund he claimed to have and possible misuse of campaign and personal funds.

Last Sunday, District of Columbia police had declared him a missing person.

"At the time of his disappearance, he was aware that his finances and those of his wife were under investigation," according to FBI agent Kevin Lewis' affidavit.

The congresswoman told authorities her husband may have had access to about $2 million when he disappeared. "Rep. Waldholtz now claims to have no idea where the funds are held," the affidavit says.

Waldholtz was under "very intense and very acute personal pressures," his attorney, Harvey Semovitz, told U.S. District Judge Emmet Sullivan at a hearing several hours after Waldholtz turned himself in.

Senate votes to end speed limits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation eliminating federal speed limits and providing $6.5 billion for construction and maintenance of the nation's most important highways won Senate approval Friday.

The bill, a compromise between the House and Senate, also would repeal some other federal mandates, including requirements for motorcycle helmet laws and metric signs.

The Senate passed the measure 80-16 over the objections of Northeastern lawmakers who expressed anxiety over the loss of federal money for highway money put into passenger rail service.

The bill still needed House approval before going to President Clinton for his signature.

Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., called the bill a "giant step forward in promoting the rights of states" to set their own transportation policies.

The federal speed limits — 65 mph on rural interstates and 55 mph on other highways — were credited with reducing highway fatalities but have always been unpopular in Western states.

The original Senate bill would have kept the limits for trucks and buses. House negotiators insisted on eliminating the limits for all vehicles.

Many states are expected to raise their top limits to 70 mph or even 75 mph.

"We think the repeal of the (federal) speed limit is going to lead many more deaths and injuries on the highways," said June Roemer, director of public policy for the National Safety Council.

New road funding would be earmarked for 160,000 miles of interstates and other important highways that are designated in a new National Highway System. Those roads carry 40 percent of the nation's traffic.

Northeastern lawmakers wanted to allow states to use some of the money for Amtrak, but the House would not agree to that.

5 million visitors a year, was nearly done after being closed Thursday for the first time in its 76-year history. Tourists could only sneak a look from state highway pullouts or by flying over.

"I'm so depressed," said The-Soo Lee, a student at the University of Houston who somehow got through the barricades and into the nearly deserted tourist center at Grand Canyon Village. "This is my first chance in my life to see the Grand Canyon and now I can't go down it."

The governor at first intended to keep 50 unarmed Guard troops and the state workers on the scene as long as there was a chance they might be used to help open the park, which he calls the "crown jewel" of the state and the national park system. But after learning that negotiations wouldn't begin until Monday, he said there was no reason to keep them on hand and dismissed them.

Symington said he believed having the Guard and park workers show up "showed them that we were ready and serious."

Interior Department officials at first characterized the government's position as outright rejection of Symington's offer. But after a one-hour closed-door meeting between Symington and park Superintendent Rob Amberger at Grand Canyon Airport in Tusayan, both sides said they had agreed to further talks.

"We're under pressure from several areas to work out some special consideration," Interior spokesman Mike Gaudin said from Washington. "Everybody has a pet project, but this is probably the premier situation because it is the Grand Canyon."

Symington and Amberger consulted with Interior Department officials by phone during their meeting, then drove together to Mather Point to discuss the governor's proposal.

It was the most significant vote since 1933, when the New Deal was launched. Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole called it "the most important" vote of a 34-year career in Congress.

The measure would squeeze hundreds of billions of dollars from Medicare, Medicaid, welfare and other social programs, while leaving room for tax breaks for families and businesses. Democrats said it was tilted unconsciously toward the rich, and President Clinton threatened a veto.

The Senate voted in mid-evening, at the same time key GOP lawmakers were politely turning aside a White House proposal to end a four-day impasse that has idled hundreds of thousands of federal workers. Democrats offered to agree to talks with a goal of balancing the budget in seven years, but that fell short of GOP demands for a firm commitment, and Republicans said it wasn't good enough.

"We've not reached any agreement here. We're just insisting that we have an honest budget in seven years," Ohio Rep. John Kasich, chairman of the House Budget Committee, said.

White House chief of staff Leon Panetta, who spent hours in the Capitol, expressed disappointment.

"Both sides have to give a little if in fact we're going to end this crisis," he said, flanked by leading Democratic lawmakers.

Officials involved in the discussions said the White House, backed by congressional Democrats, had proposed to reopen government and continue comprehensive talks on a balanced budget.

The proposal said "the goal of the negotiations" would be to balance the budget in seven years — short of the Republican demand for a firm commitment to balancing the budget.

"They're talking about goals, timeframes and a lot of ambiguous language," Dole said. "We'll just have to look at it. It's going to take awhile."

Officials also said the White House was proposing the talks all at balancing the budget in seven years under Congressional Budget Office economic assumptions, or in a timeframe and under economic assumptions agreed to by negotiators.

That, too, was short of a GOP demand for a firm commitment for a seven-year plan.

Tony Blankley, spokesman for Gingrich, said Republicans "want to continue the conversation," and suggested Democrats tell them how much additional money they want.

Pentagon fires Pacific commander after remark

WASHINGTON (AP) — The commander of U.S. forces in the Pacific agreed to quit his post and retire after telling reporters Friday the U.S. servicemen accused of raping a 12-year-old Okinawan girl should have sought sex for hire instead.

Defense Secretary William Perry said Friday night he had discussed the matter with Adm. Richard C. Macke and decided there was "no other choice" than to fire Macke.

Macke, with 35 years of service, is one of the most senior American commanders, overseeing all U.S. operations in the Pacific.

"We decided that his lapse of judgment was so serious that he would be unable to perform effectively his duties..." Perry said in a written statement.

"The obstacles he faces in working effectively with the government and the people of Japan in the future left no other choice," he continued.

Using a light table on his lecture, Schaff showed the class various X-rays, CT scans and MRIs, and he explained the differences among them and the best uses for each. A radiologic technician explained the use of nuclear medicine in the class on Thursday.

"If you want to see a fracture, Schaff gave as an example, you could use a $20 X-ray. But if you want to see detail of a patient's brain, then it will take a $1,000 MRI, he told the class.

"Most people don't know what we do back here, what goes on, how we can help people out," he said. "I like to show them how different things bring out different issues."

linked into the system, probably in four to six weeks, Mauldin said. "Once this catches on, it will just run us ragged doing this," he said.

Reynolds said students at rural high schools also could take other classes through the video link that teachers at their high schools may not have the expertise to do.

It also will allow people in various fields to lecture to different high-school classes, Mauldin said.

Surgeon Dr. David A. McCluskey of Twin Falls Clinic & Hospital — who leads the health-occupations class at least once a week — first used the video link from the clinic to the high school last week. There were some problems with the system then, but Friday's class mostly went without a hitch.

Junior Anna Leiva said she is looking forward to watching McCluskey operate, which the class couldn't watch in an operating room for space and sanitary reasons.

Leiva and fellow juniors Sara Barron and Robert Thurston also said they don't realize how many different health-related occupations there are until taking the class.

"You get kind of a taste in a lot of fields," Sara said. "I came in here just interested in one, and now there's a whole bunch."

The Lexington Hotel stands empty and awaiting demolition on Friday in Chicago. The 102-year-old hotel, honeycombed with secret passages and hidden stairways, was the lair of the Prohibition Era's biggest mob boss, Al Capone, from 1928-1932.

CHICAGO (AP) — Thugs in double-breasted suits and pearl-gray spats with pistols hanging from each shoulder quietly thumbed through the racing news and puffed on cigars as heavily rouged showgirls milled in the lobby.

Upstairs, an indulgent Al Capone ruled an empire of speakeasies, bookies and luck politicians from his lavender bathub.

The 102-year-old Lexington Hotel, honeycombed with secret passages and hidden stairways, was the lair of the Prohibition era's biggest mob boss from 1928 to 1932. Now its faded opulence is crumbling under the wrecking ball, but its legacy still fascinates historians and fans of crime literature.

Sneakface made the Lexington famous. The hotel made Geraldo Rivera somewhat infamous.

In 1986, Rivera and a demolition crew attracted a worldwide television audience when they blasted away a 7,000-pound concrete wall of a basement chamber-billed as Capone's vault. Even the Internal Revenue Service was on hand to lay

Officials: Ames reports didn't sway decisions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Officials privy to tainted secrets provided by spy Aldrich Ames' double agents say the exaggerated reports of Soviet capabilities had no impact on their decisions about U.S. weapons systems.

The comments by officials in a position to examine reports from spies during the late 1980s challenge the conclusion of an internal CIA report that the Pentagon may have wasted billions responding to bad intelligence.

"I will tell you that the intelligence that we had was a factor, but not the factor," said Gen. Joseph Ralston, now chief of the U.S. Air Command. During the 1980s, Ralston worked on development of the F-22 fighter, one of the weapons systems alleged to have been overbuilt in response to distorted intelligence reports about Soviet capabilities.

Pentagon officials developed the F-22 in the early 1980s — before Ames began operating as a spy at the CIA — and based their decisions on specific, unchallenged knowledge of Soviet fighter capability, according to a defense official who worked on the program.

These and other assessments contradict statements by lawmakers briefed by CIA Director John Deutch. Sens. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, and Bob Kerrey, D-Neb., the vice chairman, said that double agents orchestrated by Ames, a since-convicted CIA turncoat, fed exaggerated reports of Soviet capability to U.S. intelligence gatherers.

Although the CIA knew the information might be tainted, it passed on these reports — 35 in all — to decision-makers without any warning about the source.

Substitute for fat gets panel OK

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — The government's top food advisers recommended Friday the FDA approve the long-awaited artificial fat olestra, despite their concerns about its potentially unpleasant side effects.

The advisers, voting 17-5, said they approved olestra because it meets the legal definition of a safe food ingredient. The Food and Drug Administration later said it would decide within two months whether to allow fat-free potato chips made with olestra on the market.

The advisers were concerned about olestra's potential to act as a laxative and its long-term impact on people's diets.

"The consumer will vote at the cash register," on how acceptable these side effects are, said Donna Richardson of Howard University.

"These are complex and difficult decisions," said FDA Commissioner David Kessler, who sat through a 10-hour debate on olestra Thursday. "Whenever you add something to the food supply of healthy people ... you've got to get it right."

Also Thursday, another FDA panel approved the first new anti-obesity drug in two decades, Dexfenfluramine, made by Interneuron Pharmaceuticals Inc. fools the brain into thinking the stomach is full. Studies showed it helped 40 percent of patients lose up to 10 percent of their body weight, twice the amount lost with diet alone.

The panel narrowly approved the drug on a 6-5 vote, with some doctors concerned that nobody has studied its long-term effects on blood pressure and the brain. If the FDA follows the advice, dexfenfluramine would become the first obesity drug Americans could take for more than several months at a time.

Procter & Gamble's olestra is a synthetic chemical made of sugar and vegetables oil. It looks like regular fat but its molecules are too large and tightly packed for the body to digest. So it passes through the body without stopping to clog arteries or fatten hips.

Unreachable Tours, who says the building should have been saved for its architectural significance alone. But the Capone connection "put the kiss of death" on it.

Capone's quarters included a fifth-floor office with a bay window that gave him a view of Michigan Avenue and his fleet of beer trucks. Secret passageways, including access to 150 miles of underground tunnels that still wind beneath the city, helped him elude police and rival gangsters.

Patricia Porter, who headed a women's group that unsuccessfully tried to turn the hotel into a women's center in the 1980s, said at the time that the group found 10 underground tunnels and

"a dozen secret staircases" — one behind Capone's medicine chest. "We found another room where Capone's bodyguards had shooting galleries," she said.

In those days, a low-level gunman who later headed the Chicago mob, Tony "Big Tuna" Accardo, would hide in a lobby closet with a Thompson machine gun in case anyone gunning for Capone got past other henchmen, said John Binder, president of the Merry Gangsters Literary Society.

Clinton, governor disagree on drilling

WASHINGTON — Alaska's governor tried in vain Friday to convince President Clinton that oil drilling in the state's Arctic wildlife refuge could be accomplished without long-term harm.

"We agreed to disagree on that," Democratic Gov. Tony Knowles told reporters after a 15-minute conversation with Clinton in the Oval Office. The White House said in September that including oil drilling in the Alaska refuge in the Republican deficit-cutting budget plan would be reason enough to veto it.

In a letter to Congress then, Alice Rivlin, director of the Office of Management and Budget, said development of the refuge's 1.5-million-acre coastal plain "would bring physical disturbances ... and long-term damage that would impair wildlife for decades or centuries."

Soldier on trial for not serving U.N.

WUERZBURG, Germany — A U.S. Army medic from Texas Friday became the first American soldier to face a court-martial trial for refusing to wear U.N. blue with his American uniform or to accept U.N. command.

The case of Spc. Michael G. New, 22, would give those in Congress who oppose greater U.S. involvement in U.N. operations more ammunition. It has already prompted several bills that would prevent U.S. military personnel from serving under U.N. command or wearing U.N. insignia.

New, of Conroe, Texas, was arrested in U.S. military court on one charge of disobeying a lawful order. He stood up and listened impassively as the charge was read. He did not enter a plea.

The next court-martial sessions were scheduled for Dec. 20-21. Testimony is expected being by mid-January. It was not clear when the trial might end.

Space farewell: 'Those Were the Days'

SPACE CENTER, Houston — In an emotional farewell, astronauts and cosmonauts embraced and sang "Those Were the Days" Friday before closing the hatches between their linked American and Russian spaceships.

"It's most difficult to say goodbye, and the Russians have a much better expression, which is 'do svidaniye' — until we see each other again," said Kenneth Cameron, commander of NASA's space shuttle Atlantis. Atlantis was due to undock and fly away from the Russian Mir station early today, three days after the two spaceships docked together for the second time. Five more shuttle-Mir linkups are planned as the two nations, once enemies, gear up to build an international space station.

Doctors' salaries decline, survey says

CHICAGO — With managed health care increasing, doctors' salaries declined last year for the first time in the 14-year history of the American Medical Association's annual survey of physicians' pay, the organization said Friday.

The AMA's preliminary survey indicates that the median earnings of all physicians dropped 3.8 percent last year to $150,000, said AMA economist James W. Mosser. It had risen 4 percent in 1993.

Incomes have been driven down largely by employers seeking lower insurance premiums and insurers pressuring health care providers to cut costs.

O'Leary: No 'enemies list' created by DOE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary told Congress Friday she's embarrassed by the controversy over a $46,500 contract to evaluate journalists.

But she said she neither created an "enemies list" nor gave special treatment to favored reporters.

She acknowledged that some staff members discussed occasionally whether to "adopt" — or give greater attention to — certain reporters. No such plans, ever, were carried out, she said.

"Interviews and internal documents have revealed no evidence of any retaliatory action toward any reporter," O'Leary told House subcommittees looking into the story.

O'Leary

"We did not produce an enemies list," O'Leary was sharply rebuked last week by the White House after public disclosure that the department had hired Carma International, a company that specializes in analyzing media coverage, to develop monthly reviews of news stories about the department and to rank individual journalists on the basis of their articles' favorability.

The $46,500 expenditure "an unnecessary, wasteful, reckless effort of self-promotion." It was made worse, he said, by the fact that the department has 136 fulltime public affairs employees nationwide.

A number of lawmakers, mostly Democrats, came to O'Leary's defense, praising her campaign to make the once-secretive Energy Department more open.

While voicing disapproval of the Carma contract, Rep. Frank Pallone, D-N.J., said some of the sharpest accusations "are politically motivated by people who want to abolish the department."

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., criticized the department for hiring "a gloriest clipping service" but said he understood Carma has done work for the Internal Revenue Service during the Reagan administration and has been engaged by the Republican National Committee to analyze media coverage.

O'Leary acknowledged that beginning in early 1994 the department had begun a major effort to develop a system to track news coverage — and that she had been briefed on several occasions. But she said, "I knew little about the details of the system that was planned."

She said that at one time she had suggested an effort be made to see how private industry approaches such tasks.

Attorneys debate appeal in bomb case

DENVER (AP) — A material witness warrant used to detain Terry Nichols in the Oklahoma City bombing should be quashed because it was based on insufficient evidence and false allegations, his attorney argued before a federal appeals court Friday.

A three-judge panel took the arguments under advisement and plan to issue a ruling later.

"The government misrepresented the facts to the court. The government said lies to the court. The court said things that are worthy of judicial review," said Nichols' attorney Michael Tigar.

Actor Tony Randall marries understudy

NEW YORK (AP) — With Mayor Rudolph Giuliani presiding, 75-year-old actor Tony Randall married a 25-year-old understudy, Heather Harlan.

The happy widower, his eyes brimming with tears, tied the knot Friday at a gathering of about 20 friends and family members at City Hall. Both are appearing in "School for Scandal," which opens Sunday on Broadway.

"It was so simple and so touching," Randall said afterward. "He spoke of two people becoming one. I'm afraid I'm a sucker for that sort of thing."

Dow defies drop in bonds, sets another record high

NEW YORK — The Dow Jones industrials closed just shy of 5,000 Friday, but still rose to a record high for the seventh time in eight sessions.

The Dow average climbed 20.59 to 4,989.95, easily topping Thursday's record and pushing past a 30 percent gain for 1995. It's the 60th record close in the Dow average's history for the year, the first time that's happened in the 20th century.

The closely watched blue-chip average got as high as the 4,996 level in intraday trading as investors brushed aside the continued budget fight in Washington and bet instead that interest rates would soon be lowered.

Advancing issues edged out declines by 6 to 5 on the New York Stock Exchange. Volume was heavy at 430.6 million shares up of 1 p.m.

The Dow Jones industrials closed just shy of 5,000 Friday, but still rose to a record high for the seventh time in eight sessions.

up from 418.43 million on Thursday. Broad-market indexes also rose. The NYSE composite and the Standard & Poor's 500 composite logged record highs for the third consecutive session. The NYSE composite rose 1.64 to 320.12. The Standard & Poor's 500 rose 2.73 to 600.07, its first close above 600.

The Nasdaq composite index rose 0.55 to 1,045.03. The American Stock Exchange's market value index rose 2.50 to 531.96. Stocks began climbing early in the session and steadily added to their gains as the market made a dip in bonds and a mixed dollar. Some stock traders and analysts had expected a more volatile session, given the double expiration Friday of options and futures contracts. But the "double whammy" factor did not seem to influence trading much.

The real test of the market's strength, traders said, will come next week, when the technical bias of the expiration is not an issue.

In overseas trading, the Nikkei index in Tokyo rose 1.18 percent, but the DAX index in Frankfurt and the FT-SE 100 in London both eased.

There was a powerful upward bias to the trading all day, fueled by the market's strong momentum and the continued flow of cash into stock mutual funds, which has dipped a little but is still positive, said Eric Miller, Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette's market strategist.

Uncertain how the budget fight would shake out, investors sold the more speculative issues in their portfolio. Technology issues, for example, were sold aggressively, with IBM losing 1/4 to 95¢; Micron Technology down 55¢; Intel off 4¢ to 62 3/4; and Microsoft down 2 1/2 to 87 3/4.

Hewlett-Packard slid 4 1/2 to 88¢ after the computer maker said that while its fourth-quarter profit had jumped 42 percent, higher expenses are squeezing profit margins.

But investors quickly replaced technology shares with blue-chip stocks, which were perceived as better able to weather an economic or political storm.

"Money is going into defensive issues, but I do not necessarily react," said Don Hays, director of investment strategy at First Butcher Singer, Inc. in Richmond, Va.

HP profit jumps 42%

NEW YORK (AP) — Hewlett-Packard Co. profits jumped 42 percent in its fourth fiscal quarter as the company remained one of the fastest-growing in the computer industry.

Chief Executive Officer Lewis Platt this morning expressed satisfaction with the performance but he also warned of continuing pressure on expenses.

The company's stock was down $3.75 to $89.50 Friday morning on the New York Stock Exchange after trading was delayed for nearly 30 minutes.

Hewlett-Packard earned $678 million, or $1.29 per share, in the three months that ended Oct. 31, compared to $476 million, or 92 cents per share, in the same period a year ago.

Revenue was $9.05 billion, up 29 percent from $7.0 billion a year ago.

Hewlett-Packard recorded $8.8 billion in orders during the period, up 27 percent from the year-ago figure.

For all of fiscal 1995, Hewlett-

Packard earned $2.4 billion, or $4.63 per share. That's 52 percent above the $1.6 billion, or $3.07 per share, earned in the previous fiscal year.

Annual revenue was $31.5 billion, up 26 percent from $25.0 billion in fiscal 1994.

"This quarter's results were a very good finish to an excellent year," Platt said in a statement.

The profit slightly exceeded a mean estimate of Wall Street analysts compiled by Zack's Investment Research of $1.26 per share.

But the company said its cost of goods sold in the fourth fiscal quarter amounted to 65.3 percent of revenue, compared with 62.2 percent a year ago.

Platt said the increase in expenses was partly due to the higher percentage of PCs in the overall sales mix and costs associated with phasing out old products for new ones.

While noting there were some unique cost factors in the latest period, Platt said, "We believe the longer-term trend is for upward pressure on these costs to persist."

The company's computer systems business, including workstations, PCs as a printer, accounted for $7 billion in revenue, up from $5.4 billion a year ago.

"We saw signs that the component supply situation we've talked about is improving," Platt said. "In addition, we expanded our presence in developing markets, and we outpaced overall market growth in many businesses."

Hewlett-Packard has nearly caught up International Business Machines Corp., the largest computer company, in sales of computer systems, or hardware. IBM had $7.75 billion in hardware sales during the three months that ended Sept. 30.

Hewlett-Packard's electronic testing and measurement business, on which the company was founded before World War II, brought $1 billion in sales during its fourth quarter. Medical equipment, analytical instrumentation and components accounted for the rest.

Class-action status granted to US West suit

DENVER (AP) — A federal judge has granted class-action status to more than 100,000 current and retired US West employees who are suing over what they claim is improper use of pension funds to pay expenses.

U.S. District Judge Lewis Babcock also granted US West a protective order that will block all court filings and discovery from public view.

The 100 pensioners at Thursday's hearing in Denver had mixed reactions to the ruling. Some were relieved by the granting of class-action status to the lawsuit, while others questioned the decision on the protective order.

US West spokesman Jeff Garrett said the company got everything it wanted. The Englewood-based phone company maintains that expenses paid from the $8.4 billion pension fund were proper and permissible under federal law.

But US West did fail to have attorney Curtis Kennedy removed from the case.

Kennedy, who has prevailed in 45 previous cases brought by employees of US West, is representing the retirees. He wants to open all of the company's pension books for the last 11 years.

"I'm in a situation where I don't know what the evidence is, so I don't know what the claims will be," Kennedy said in court Thursday.

He filed the lawsuit a year ago on behalf of retiree Clayton Unger and since has sought class-action status for the case.

Citing filings with the federal government, Kennedy claims the company paid more than $30 billion in expenses from the pension plan in 1993 even though the pension plan's language does not allow doing so.

US West disagrees that the practice isn't allowed. And Raymond Martin, a US West attorney, questioned Kennedy's motives for pursuing the case. He claimed Kennedy's underlying motive is to get $200 million more in payouts for retirees from the pension fund.

Lehi looks for Micron payoff in franchise fees

LEHI, Utah (AP) — Micron Technology won't buy electricity from Lehi Power, but the Utah County city still expects a bountiful payoff from a proposed franchise fee on the computer chip maker.

Micron recently awarded its power contract to PacifiCorp, even though the offer by the Portland, Ore.-based parent of Utah Power reportedly was higher than Lehi's.

Micron is building a 2 million-square-foot plant in the Traverse Mountains in northwest Lehi. The city is providing electricity during construction.

Micron spokeswoman Julie Nash said the company chose what it believes is the more reliable source of power at a competitive price.

"That was strictly a business decision," she said.

Power spokesman Dave Eskelsen declined to reveal terms of

MK expects $105 million loss in 3rd quarter

BOISE (AP) — Morrison Knudsen Corp. expects to lose $105 million in its third quarter, which would wipe out the company's net worth for the first time.

While experts insist the company is not in danger of collapse, they say a negative net worth poses some big problems.

It will be much harder for MK to borrow more money and its stock will be less attractive.

MK is counting on selling $150 million in stock next year, a step that is crucial to completing its financial restructuring.

"It's not the final nail in the coffin, but it's a red flag," said James Van Home, a finance professor at Stanford University's School of Business.

Company spokesman Brent Brandon conceded the estimated loss was disappointing. But he insisted MK's problems have not grown worse.

"Despite the loss, our core businesses have stabilized and are tracking close to plan," Brandon said.

MK booked $1.4 billion in new business through Sept. 30, up from $1.25 billion in the same period last year, he said.

The loss figures are not official. MK expects to release precise numbers next week.

It has now lost $529 million since the second quarter of 1994, when then-Chairman William Agee's plan to make the company a local power began to unravel.

The losses included $37 million from continuing operations, taking in a $10 million increase in administrative expenses such as legal and consulting fees associated with the restructuring. The company also spent $7 million on higher interest payments.

Discontinued operations cost $68 million.

the contract, which was reached under a confidentiality agreement with Micron.

Micron plans to spend an estimated $36.6 million to upgrade and build two power substations for its plant.

City Councilman Knollin Haws said he believes Micron basically chose PacifiCorp because it's larger than Lehi Power. The Utah

Association of Municipal Power Systems is Lehi's wholesale supplier.

However, Haws noted that Lehi plans to impose a 6 percent franchise fee on Micron that will amount to "tens of thousands of dollars every month."

The fee would be based on the gross revenues from power sales and service PacifiCorp provides Micron.

U.S. official: Talks with China resume

BEIJING — The United States and China have resumed a dialogue on military issues derided by a row over Taiwan, a U.S. Defense Department official said Friday.

Assistant Secretary of Defense Joseph Nye ended three days of talks with senior Chinese defense officials intended to step up military contacts and assure China that the United States was not trying to check its emergence as a regional power.

As part of that effort, China's defense minister, Chi Haotian, will visit the United States next year, Nye told reporters, and General John Shalikashvili, chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, will visit China.

NATO, Russia seek common ground

VIENNA, Austria — Western powers sought a compromise with Russia Friday on reducing its military might after Moscow violated a NATO-Warsaw Pact treaty to cut troops and weapons.

A treaty deadline set at midnight Thursday with Russia failing to meet its commitments to reduce its military presence in two regions: the northern Caucasus and around St. Petersburg, diplomats said.

Without mentioning the war in Chechnya, Moscow argues that tensions in the Caucasus mean it must maintain more military muscle in the south than the 1990 treaty permitted. It also cites NATO's plans to expand eastward as a reason to maintain more arms and men in the northwest.

Diplomats expect a compromise will eventually be reached.

U.S. Navy sentences rapist to 8 years

TOKYO — A U.S. military court sentenced a sailor to eight years in prison on Friday for raping a girl under 16 and assaulting a female sailor, a report said.

The sailor raped the girl, a U.S. military dependent, in a park on Sasebo Naval Base in southern Japan, the Pacific Stars and Stripes reported.

He was one of four sailors who assaulted a woman in a barracks room Aug. 7, one day after he committed the rape, the report said.

Seaman Apprentice Samuel J. Southworth, 19, of Murray, Utah, was found guilty on Nov. 3 of rape, indecent acts, drunk and disorderly conduct and destruction of military property, the daily reported. He was sentenced Friday to eight years in jail, dishonorable discharge and forfeiture of all pay.

Report: Syria ready for negotiations

JERUSALEM — In an apparent turnaround, Syria is ready to hold negotiations with Israel in an attempt to reach a preliminary peace agreement by July, an Israeli daily said Friday.

The report in Yedioth Ahronot was a first indication that Israeli-Syrian peace talks, stalled for months, may proceed after the assassination of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

The U.S. envoy to the Mideast, Dennis Ross, was to arrive in Jerusalem today to discuss ways to renew negotiations.

Syrian President Hafez Assad is ready to resume talks between Israeli and Syrian ambassadors in Washington, with military officials as consultants, Yedioth said, quoting an unnamed Arab diplomat and officials close to the negotiations.

The palace said the 95-year-old mother of Queen Elizabeth II would be spending a quiet day and not having any visitors.

"We understand that she took a couple of steps this morning," a palace spokesman said. The queen mother is the widow of King George VI, who reigned from 1936 to 1952.

Russia slouches toward election day

MOSCOW (AP) — Where are the balloons? The bunting? The banners? The billboards? The bands? What kind of election is this anyway?

Russians appear to be doing their best to ignore the parliamentary race that kicked off this week. If Campaign '95 has generated any grassroots excitement, it's invisible to the naked eye.

The Russia now slouching toward election day is not a happy place. People are tired, they're poor, they're fed up with politics and politicians. Most tell pollsters they may not even vote on Dec. 17.

Even the media is pretty testy about the whole thing.

"Talking Heads Will Flood the Airwaves," lamented the daily Izvestia as the campaign for the Duma, Russia's lower house of parliament, got under way this week.

Politicians are, of course, all awit'er. With more than 40 parties, blocs and movements participating, and more than 5,000 candidates in the race, they are straining to generate some excitement. But it's uphill all the way.

Attempts to woo voters — especially the disaffected young ones — are already verging on the improbable.

Our Home is Russia, the party headed by Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin, a middle-aged bureaucrat's bureaucrat, tried to bring in Svieta Wonder for a concert. When Wonder declined, the stodgy pro-government party instead invited American rapper Hammer.

"Do you suppose Chernomyrdin actually UNDERSTANDS any of the lyrics?" one Kremlin insider wondered after the Hammer concert.

A couple walks beneath a campaign poster for Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin's party, Our Home is Russia. Many parties have put celebrities on their tickets, no political experience — or even positions — required.

"Are you going to look at the brochure, read the program?" popular crooner Iosif Kobzon, a candidate on the My Fatherland slate, asked reporters. "No. You're going to vote based on name recognition."

Voters seem to share his cynicism.

"In a poll this week in the daily Segodnya, only a quarter of the respondents said they would vote. The disgruntled majority who said they wouldn't, or didn't know yet, was split between those calling all politicians liars and those saying it doesn't matter who wins.

"I won't bother to vote," said Mikhail Vorobyov, a young Moscow businessman on his way to work. "I don't think these elections are of any importance whatsoever."

It's tough to strike an upbeat note in such a downbeat nation. Some candidates aren't even trying. Reformer Yegor Gaidar used his first free TV time this week to drone dutifully on about economics.

"I'm sick of politics. When I see it on the TV screen, I just switch to another channel," Olga Vorotynskaya, a young housewife, said Friday as she trudged down a slushy Moscow street.

The people who do manage to drag themselves to the polls are expected to vote responsibly for the opposition. The only question is WHICH one. Almost every party and candidate in the race is the opposition these days.

"Even Chernomyrdin's Our Home is Russia, the presidential party in all but name, is toying with the idea of opposing its own policies come Dec. 17," former Pravda editor Viktor Linnik wrote this week in The Moscow Times.

Woman has baby in ambulance during blizzard

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The worst November blizzard in memory cloberbed Scandinavia Friday, shutting factories, grounding airplanes and stalling an ambulance while a woman gave birth inside.

At least one person, a 60-year-old man, was found dead under a snow-drift.

Three people were killed in an auto accident in southern Sweden, but it was not known whether snow was the cause, the national news agency TT reported.

Skies were white with blowing snow most of the day in Denmark and southwestern Sweden, where the storm was concentrated. Mountainous waves halted passenger ship traffic in the Baltic Sea.

Scandinavian Airlines said it canceled two-thirds of its European flights and more than half its Scandinavian routes.

"Not only do we have snow but thunder also," said Stig Andersson at the closed Goteborg airport in western Sweden. "It causes important technical instruments to be knocked out or distorted."

Judge rejects release request from suspect in Rabin shooting

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A Tel Aviv judge turned down a request Friday to release a 20-year-old woman law student accused by police of being a key conspirator in Yitzhak Rabin's assassination.

Israeli and American Jewish leaders, meanwhile, urged Jews to denounce extremists and prevent them from immigrating to Israel.

Assassination suspect Margalit Harshefi, long ponytail swung over her brown sweater, smiled to her parents as police removed her handcuffs when she entered the Tel Aviv District Court.

Harshefi's lawyer, Yair Golan, asked Judge Drom Pipel to release his client into house arrest or reduce her court-ordered 12-day detention to two or three days.

Pipel denied the request after reviewing a cardboard police file, the contents of which were not made public.

"The secret material contains accusations of what could be seen as a threat to national security," the police investigator, Zion Sasson, told the court.

Two teens were less seriously wounded when an injured Flores fired at their car with a rifle, police said.

Judge shields juvenile suspects from cameras

The Associated Press

RUPERT — The administrative judge for Idaho's 5th District on Friday modified local rules governing cameras in the courtroom to preclude filming juveniles not only in the courthouse but on the way to and from the courthouse.

Judge J. William Hart said his order, prompted by an incident a day earlier involving staffers for The Times-News of Twin Falls, was issued to assure the protection of juveniles who have not been charged as adults. Hart said it was an attempt to clarify the status of juveniles, which had not been mentioned in the district's original rules.

But media attorney Ron Bush of Pocatello questioned whether Hart's authority to regulate cameras extended as far as the amended rules would suggest.

Hart's amended order not only specifically prohibits the filming or photographing of juveniles inside the courthouse but also "as the juvenile is being transported to and from the courthouse."

Twin Falls County Trial Court Administrator Linda Wright said the order followed an incident on Thursday when a juvenile and his adult brother were brought into the courtroom of Magistrate Charles Brumbach in connection with a nonfatal shooting earlier in the week.

Times-News Managing Editor Clark Walworth said a reporter tried to take a picture of the juvenile in the hallway outside the courtroom but was unable to after a man escorting the boy blocked the shot.

Brumbach was informed of the attempt, Walworth said, and the film was confiscated.

A second staffer, he said, was preparing to take the boy's picture outside the courtroom as he was being taken away when a court bailiff stopped him.

Walworth said the paper was still reviewing the new order and wanted to meet with Hart before making any assessment.

"I would characterize this whole chain of events as people trying to figure out what they can and can't do. It really wasn't confrontational," Walworth said. "We don't consider ourselves to be in an adversarial position with the court."

Bush, however, said he believed Hart was "not real strict" in trying to prohibit filming or photographing juveniles outside the courthouse.

"I don't know that he can prohibit you from taking a photograph from across the street," he said.

Hart said his intention was only to prohibit film or photographs of juveniles shot on courthouse property, not on public sidewalks or the street, although he said he includes the sidewalk between a courthouse and the jail in the order.

Nuke foes find leader

By William Brock Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Brian Goller has amazing timing.

He has been in the nuclear watchdog business for less than a month but, on his first day on the job, state and federal officials announced a deal to haul 1,133 shipments of nuclear waste to Idaho.

As executive director of the Snake River Alliance, Goller is concerned about nuclear waste storage — particularly at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

"It's one of the really tough issues of our times, because it's both an environmental and social issue," he said in an interview Wednesday. "Nuclear waste is going to be part of the future of our country, for thousands of years."

Goller is hoping to steer a moderate course in his quest to "wake up the people of Idaho to what's at stake here."

His vehicle is the alliance, which has about 200 members — but the past month has been its busiest ever in terms of new memberships and inquiries. Overall, the organization has five full-time staffers, two part-timers and an annual budget of around $215,000.

"We don't want to be complainers, but we are critics," he said of the alliance. "We want a much more serious, measured debate about the issue of nuclear waste storage."

A thoughtful, well-spoken man, Goller looks like someone who can bridge the gap between sandal-shod environmentalists, local service clubs and bureaucrats with the U.S. Department of Energy.

Goller, 46, was raised in Boise and earned an education degree at the University of Idaho in 1977. He taught school in North Idaho for years and served on the Wallace City Council before returning to run a family publishing business in Boise.

Activism runs in his blood. His father, Jim Goller, is a Magic Valley native who spent years working for former U.S. Sen. Jim McClure. After that, the senior Goller was appointed to the Northwest Power Planning Council by former Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus — and now works for the Gallatin Group consulting firm.

Brian Goller has been a member of the Snake River Alliance since 1987, but his commitment to Idaho grew during decades of hiking, boating and watching wild animals.

He's been a steadfast opponent of a proposed Air Force bomb training range in Owyhee County and was a founding member of the Greater Owyhee Legal Defense and the Canyonlands Coalition.

The last position to hold the top job at the Snake River Alliance was Kerry Cooke, but she left earlier this year to study international relations at Wellesley College in Massachusetts.

Goller has inherited a smooth-running organization with a national reputation, so he's not planning any drastic changes. The alliance is not involved in the petition drive to recall Idaho Gov. Phil Batt, but it is eager to strengthen the agreement that Batt made with the U.S. Department of Energy.

"He was negotiating for the people of Idaho, and if he'd included the public more, he would have gotten more guidance," Goller said of Batt. "Personally, I don't know of anybody who likes this agreement to accept nuclear waste shipments for another 40 years."

Goller recognizes the INEL will play a key role in the storage of America's nuclear waste for years to come.

"The Snake River Alliance does not advocate the immediate shut-down of the INEL, by any means," he said. "That would create a whole new set of problems."

But he and other alliance members would like to see some changes in the way radioactive waste is handled. At the top of his agenda is creation of an independent commission to develop a coherent national policy on nuclear waste storage.

Beyond that, he wants to stop the shipments of nuclear waste and store it at its point of origin.

Shipping casks, like those used for truck and train transport of spent nuclear fuel, could accommodate such short-term storage, he said.

In a broader vein, Goller wants hard verification that Uncle Sam is living up to his promises in Idaho.

"Government that operates without scrutiny doesn't operate as well as government with scrutiny," he said.

"We're providing a public service by waking people up and seeking fair and just solutions" to the problem of nuclear waste storage.

Waste request dies before Glens Ferry City Council

By Melanie Brown Times-News correspondent

GLENS FERRY — A resolution opposing the transportation of nuclear waste into Idaho died when no one on the City Council would second the motion by council member John Morris.

Morris's motion was in response to resident Laurie Black's request that city leaders send a letter to state officials protesting the importation of hazardous material.

Trains carrying spent fuel from U.S. Navy nuclear reactors pass through Glens Ferry en route from the naval shipyards in Bremerton, Wash., to the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

Black, a local activist, presented the council with petitions opposing the transportation of nuclear waste to the INEL. The petitions contained the signatures of 242 area residents.

Black urged the council to issue a letter of protest on behalf of Glens Ferry residents.

Black said she knows that such a letter will not stop the transportation of nuclear waste, but it would send a message to state and federal officials that the residents of Glens Ferry, at least, do not support the practice.

Expressing concern that city residents would be at risk in case of a nuclear accident occur in the Glens Ferry area, Black asked the council whether the city had any type of emergency response plan.

Mayor Leo McGhee said he thought there was a plan in place.

But Fire Chief Dick Anderson said the city had no such plan.

Though the mayor and council thanked Black for bringing the matter before the city, they did not take any action.

In other business, several council members expressed their concern that a recent increase in applications for the installation of single-wide mobile homes within the city's boundaries might downgrade the community's aesthetic quality and decrease property values.

City Planning and Zoning Department head Bob Janousek expressed concern about possible fire hazard posed by single-wide mobile homes.

According to Janousek, who is a member of the city's volunteer fire department, the structures lack fire safety because straw is often used as insulation under the trailers.

Janousek said that the city is working on new building and zoning guidelines for all construction within the city.

McGhee will discuss the moratorium with the city's legal council and report his findings at the Nov. 23 council meeting.

Hailey council wants to sell LID bond, curb snowmobiles

By Charlotte Giles Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The City Council wants to sell a Local Improvement District bond, passed new prohibitions on snowmobiles in the city and is considering a new proposed airport landing system.

Hailey's extensive downtown improvements this summer were paid for with a $345,000 LID bond. The city wants to sell the bond to Seattle Northwest Securities, which will charge an underwriter's fee of $5,200 and an interest rate just under 6 percent over a 10-year period.

The council also passed an ordinance that prohibits the operation of a snowmobile between the hours of 10 p.m. and 8 a.m.

Snowmobiles may drive on the public streets — but not the alleys — of Hailey but only for access to and from a snowmobile recreation area.

The vehicles are prohibited from many residential areas, Main Street and most of Highway 75, as well as the bike path, which is to be used for cross country skiing in winter.

The ordinance makes helmets, mufflers, registration and drivers' licenses mandatory.

The council made it illegal to drive a snowmobile under the influence of drugs or alcohol or more than 15 mph.

On Dec. 4, the council will hold a public meeting with Bellevue and south county residents to discuss the Transponder Landing System made by T.L. West. West representatives will attend and explain the new system proposed for Fredman Airport.

Both Horizon and Sky West have shown an interest in the landing system, which is purported to make landings possible when visibility is limited by bad weather.

The council approved the general election results which made official the election of Rick Davis for the two-year council seat and Brad Seimer and Mary Ann Mix for the four-year council seats.

The next Hailey City Council meeting will be at 6 p.m. Nov. 27 in the Town Meeting Room in order to consider preliminary plat subdivision plans for Bartonwood Townhomes and Cedar Bend Subdivision.

Eden man faces one less charge

By Liz Wright Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An Eden man charged with trying to kill his common-law wife no longer is charged with having sex with a 15-year-old girl.

Julian Garcia Hernandez, 27, had been charged with lewd conduct, but the girl insists she never told police she had sex with him, and a prosecutor dropped the charge Friday in Twin Falls County.

Friday during a telephone interview with The Times-News, the girl characterized Hernandez as "a sweet, caring man." He is charged with attempted first-degree murder in Jerome County in connection with the Sept. 11 beating and attempted drowning of Virginia Marie Torrez in the Snake River.

"He's not a monster," the girl said. She started dating Hernandez shortly after she turned 15.

She said her mother forbids them to have sex because of their age difference and that she plans to marry Hernandez someday.

Detective Dan Claperton of the Jerome County Sheriff's Department, who filed documents in court alleging that Hernandez had sex with her, could not be reached for comment Friday evening.

Health, welfare approves rules to implement environmental law

BOISE (AP) — After raising some of the same questions critics did last winter when lawmakers approved the bill, the state Health and Welfare Board has unanimously approved the regulations to implement Idaho's new environmental audit law immediately.

Despite past criticism, no one appeared on Friday to question the rules for the program that permits business and industry to avoid criminal or civil sanctions for environmental violations as long as they disclose the problems to state regulators and correct them within 60 days.

Pushed by the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry, the environmental auditing scheme was modified to some extent before final approval last year in response to some complaints.

And-board members were apparently mollified by staff and industry explanations of why businesses conducting audits and acting on them would be immune from punishment and their findings and actions kept secret and what precluded industry from simply hiding behind the audit loophole to escape punishment for environmental destruction. If a source has a problem, voluntarily fix it, you can clean it up. There is little to be gained in prosecution," said Tim Teater, permit support supervisor for the Division of Environmental Quality.

Furt Fransen assured board members that anyone who voluntarily would be denied to any persistent, serious violators or businesses acting fraudulently.

Under the law, however, information about violations voluntarily reported by a business remains confidential, meaning no one would know a violation — or series of violations — occurred other than state officials bound to secrecy.

But Teater does reject claims of some conservationists that the new law also precludes the Environmental Protection Agency from moving against flagrant polluters. EPA is not bound by any state laws, he said.

"We can't grant immunity from federal prosecution," Teater said. Hugh O'Riordan, the Boise attorney who pushed for legislative adoption of the proposition for IACI, said 14 other states have similar laws intended to provide some incentive to industry to voluntarily comply with increasingly complex environmental laws.

The first immunity-and confidentiality provisions came after the Coors brewing operation in Colorado conducted its own environmental assessment and moved to correct problems, O'Riordan said, only to have the information used against it to secure a $1-million fine.

The Idaho regulations set up requirements, intended to prevent businesses from being able to use the environmental audit as a shield against impending criminal or civil action and define just what kind of information provided the state by business qualifies for confidentiality.

Teater said the standards in the regulations are similar to those used by the EPA in the same situations.

The regulations adopted on Friday are only temporary. The board will move toward adoption of permanent regulations next year.

Elk hunting to continue at Grand Teton

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — Officials at Grand Teton National Park got their wish Friday.

As a result, the elk hunting program will continue even with the partial governmental shutdown.

The National Park Service lifted the shutdown on elk hunting as government officials deemed the Grand Teton program "essential," according to Superintendent Jack Neckels.

But-halt-on-hunting on the National Elk Refuge near Jackson remained in place Friday, further upsetting hunters who come to the refuge from miles around every year to help thin the herd on the refuge.

"We save all year to come up here and get our winter meat," said Cheryl Tricketts, a 47-year-old hunter from Mills. "That's what gets us through the year."

The suspension of some government services meant the hunting programs to control elk populations in the park and the elk-refuge were put on hold earlier this week, frustrating hunters and hurting local business.

But Neckels argued the hunt on Grand Teton National Park was essential to protect the health of both the park and the elk.

The elk season in Grand Teton lasts only a few weeks until the elk finish migrating to wintering areas in early December.

Grand Teton officials said the elk herd is exceptionally large this year and the control measure was needed.

The goal of the program was to reduce the population by 1,400 elk.

He and Letia Haigh were married on Jan. 9, 1939, settling on a farm which he farmed until 1971, when they retired in Gooding.

Judge refuses to dismiss bull trout lawsuit

WASHINGTON (AP) — A judge has kept alive a lawsuit accusing the Forest Service of allowing logging that is pushing the bull trout toward extinction in four Western states.

U.S. District Judge Robert E. Jones of Portland, Ore., turned down the government's request to dismiss the lawsuit. He ordered the Forest Service to report back Dec. 18 on its progress in protecting the fish on national forests in Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana.

The Forest Service has known since 1993 that the bull trout is significantly threatened by logging and other activities on the forests, Jones said in a ruling issued last week and made public Friday.

The judge did agree to dismiss part of the lawsuit, saying he lacked jurisdiction to review whether the Forest Service had considered new data on the status of the fish.

But he said he would allow the lawsuit to continue on claims the agency failed to protect the future viability of bull trout populations and allowed logging that degraded water conditions near bull trout habitat in violation of the National Forest Management Act.

Heyburn canine sniffs out busy 1st week on job

By Jennifer Bunch
Times-News writer

HEYBURN — Falko, an 18-month-old German shepherd, has been imported from Czechoslovakia to help sniff out hidden drugs, criminals on the run and missing persons.

Police Officer George Warrell is Heyburn's canine handler. He and Falko reported for duty last week after three weeks of intense training in North Carolina. German shepherds, originally bred in Germany to herd sheep, are said to be a purer breed in Europe, Warrell said.

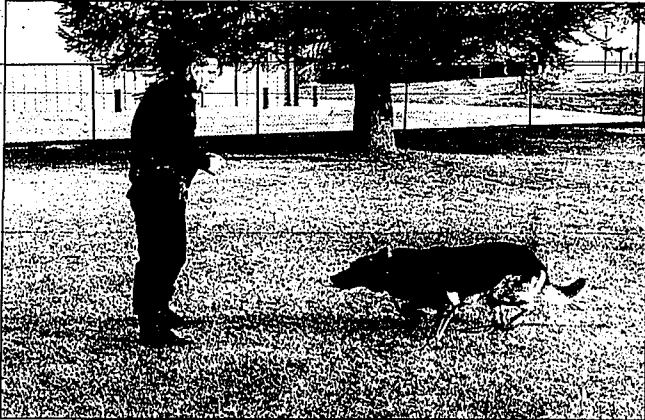

So far, Falko has sniffed out drug paraphernalia and a car burglar to his front doorstep, Warrell said.

"I circle (Falko) into the wind, and whatever direction the scent is coming from he'll head that way," he said.

Warrell commands Falko in Dutch, a language not commonly spoken in the United States, so the pooch doesn't get confused by other people's voices.

Falko, an $8,000 investment for Heyburn, has been trained to follow the scent of fleeing criminals, locate missing persons, find articles such as a gun thrown out a car window by a suspect, and sniff out narcotics.

He has been trained to detect marijuana, cocaine, heroine, methamphetamine and hashish or hash, Warrell said.

Heyburn Police Officer George Warrell and slough hound Falko are now on duty.

But Falko has yet to come across drugs, he said. "Once he locates it, he'll dig, he won't touch it," Warrell said.

The only patrol dog in Minidoka and Cassia counties, Falko has kept a busy schedule in the one week he has been on duty.

He has been called upon nearly every day for service not only by Heyburn but the other local law enforcement agencies as well.

Boise man arrested at grandmother's house in Burley

The Times-News and The Associated Press

BURLEY — A Boise man charged with first degree murder in Valley County was arrested in Burley at 2 a.m. Friday morning while he was staying at his grandmother's home.

Ryan David Robertson, 19, of Boise, was arrested without incident after the Cassia County Sheriff's Department obtained a search warrant to enter the grandmother's house, according to a sheriff's report.

Officials had been notified by the Valley County Sheriff's Office that Robertson and his father had traveled to Burley to see the grandmother, who lives on the 1700 block of Hanson Avenue, the report said.

Robertson has been sent back to Valley County. Robertson and another Boise man were charged with first-degree murder in connection with the discovery of charred remains believed to be those of a northern California man in a shallow Valley County grave.

Michael Olivera, 18, was arrested late Thursday night at his Boise home, said Glenn Ford, chief of the Idaho Department of Law Enforcement's Criminal Investigations Bureau.

Ford said an investigation was continuing and more arrests were expected, but he would not elaborate.

Robertson and Olivera are accused of killing a man authorities have tentatively identified as Jeffrey David Towers, 18. He is believed to have last lived somewhere in northern California and apparently was visiting the Boise area when he was murdered in Valley County during the Memorial Day weekend, Ford said.

"We believe Mr. Towers was shot and then they dug a shallow grave and burned his body, virtually cremated it, and then they buried it," Ford said. "It was under about eight inches of soil."

The grave site was found Nov. 11 in a forest area about eight miles northeast of Cascade, based on information that a source Ford declined to identify provided to the Valley County Sheriff's Department.

The Criminal Investigations Bureau's Special Investigations Unit was called in to excavate the grave site because of its expertise in forensics, but Ford said his agency was working closely with Valley County authorities.

He said the remains had not been positively identified as Towers' by forensic means, but officials identified them "circumstantially, from the people involved."

Ford said it remained unclear how Towers, Olivera and Robertson were connected. "The only connection I know is that they were just associates," he said. "They just ran together."

Arrasmith takes stand in own defense

LEWISTON (AP) — Kenneth Arrasmith took the stand in his double-murder trial Friday, telling a jury Twin Falls County residents that he was sickened to learn that his teenage daughter was being sexually abused by the couple he's accused of killing.

"I wouldn't wish this on my worst enemy," Arrasmith said under questioning by defense lawyers. "To have your own child violated by these two animals. There is no way to say how I feel.

"It's a nightmare. But you wake up from nightmares. I haven't woken up yet."

Arrasmith said he should have thought twice when he learned his daughter Cynthia, now 16, had moved with her boyfriend last February into a trailer next to the Clarkston, Wash., home of Ronald and Luella Bingham.

"Arrasmith said he hadn't recalled the Bingham's past brushes with the law and didn't try to interfere with his daughter's new living arrangements.

The Bingham were charged with raping their 13-year-old niece in 1978, but the charges were dropped. Arrasmith, then working as an Assin County, Wash., sheriff's deputy, stood guard over the couple while their home was searched.

In 1986, the Bingham were charged in the rape of their 16-year-old baby-sister. In a plea agreement, Ronald Bingham pleaded guilty to second-degree rape and the charge against Mrs. Bingham was dismissed.

"I hand-fed my daughter to a predator," Arrasmith told jurors in the eighth day of the 2nd District Court trial.

Ronald Bingham pleaded guilty to second-degree rape and the charge against Mrs. Bingham was dismissed. "I hand-fed my daughter to a predator," Arrasmith told jurors in the eighth day of the 2nd District Court trial.

Authorities investigated the Bingham's alleged abuse of Cynthia Arrasmith, but no arrests were made.

Arrasmith is charged with two counts of first-degree murder and could face the death penalty if convicted.

The 44-year-old former Sunnyside, Wash., truck driver has not admitted killing the couple. The Bingham were shot multiple times at their east Lewiston auto repair shop on May 17.

When asked if he intended to kill the Bingham that day, Arrasmith replied, "Never."

In the defense's opening statement Thursday, lawyer Roy Mosman said Arrasmith armed himself with two guns only to intimidate the Bingham into making a confession about the alleged abuse of his daughter.

When Arrasmith arrived at the auto shop, Ronald Bingham "made a quick motion, as if to grab for something, and Ken thought it was a weapon," Mosman said. The lawyer stopped short of saying his client shot the Bingham.

Authorities say Ronald Bingham was shot more than 20 times with a Tec-9 mini-machine gun. Another gun, a 9 mm Ruger with a laser sight, was used to kill Luella Bingham. She was shot six times in the back as she tried to run away.

Arrasmith was scheduled to return to the witness stand when the trial resumes Monday. He is expected to testify about the days leading up to the Bingham's slayings.

The jury was selected in Twin Falls County in the 5th Judicial District because of pretrial publicity over the sensational killings.

Methamphetamine probe drains police resources

SPOKANE (AP) — An investigation into a thriving methamphetamine distribution and sales ring had to be discontinued because it cost too much and strained police resources, Spokane County sheriff's officials say.

The ring's participants knew it was the Circle, and by the time the six-month investigation ended last month, 61 people faced charges for 1,200 separate crimes in Eastern Washington and northern Idaho ranging from bicycle theft to murder.

"We were still developing leads and information right up until the last day," said Capt. Don Manning. "But we had to close it down. We don't have the resources to sustain it."

More than $150,000 in recovered stolen items were hauled into the sheriff's evidence processing room.

Sheriff's officials believe those arrested represent only 15 percent of The Circle's total membership.

The group's networking system was so efficient that it had experts in cashing stolen checks, others who supplied guns, and still others who "cooked" the methamphetamine, sold it and made sure customers paid their debts.

A team of four detectives, including two from the Spokane Police Department, piled up significant amounts of overtime, Manning said. Other officers and deputies also worked overtime to take up the slack.

New leads on new cases were uncovered daily, worked by detectives in the theft, burglary, drug and forgery units. County prosecutors who gave Operation Circle cases top priority also felt the strain.

"What it revealed to us was the scope of the problems that cluster around the methamphetamine epidemic," Manning said. "It's growing faster than we are. We're not keeping up with it."

And Manning worries that The Circle will recover, now that the pressure is off.

The investigation was launched shortly after the body of Richard Morley, 30, was found in a shallow grave near Elaka Lake north of Spokane earlier this year.

Morley had been hit on the head with a hammer, stabbed and strangled because he owed money to a Circle member who decided to kill him, police said.

Soon after, detectives realized that methamphetamine fueled the group and was responsible for the increase in other crimes.

"This circle, this subculture, it affects everyone," Sheriff's Lt. David Wyrick said. "If you're not a member, you're a victim."

Washington judge refuses to step down in child rape case

WATERVILLE, Wash. (AP) — A judge refused Friday to remove himself from the child-rape trial of a preacher and his wife, saying he showed no bias when he wrote of the need to protect child sex-abuse victims.

The trial began with the prosecutor's opening statement after Douglas Superior Court Judge T.W. "Chip" Small denied several other defense motions and seated a jury.

Small denied a motion to declare a mistrial and another to move the trial to another county.

"This court has no personal bias or prejudice on this matter," Small said. "Thus far all the actions in this case have been to provide a fair and unbiased trial."

Defense lawyers said they would appeal.

In his half-hour opening statement, deputy prosecutor Eric Biggar told jurors the charges against Roby and Connie Roberson were the result of a thorough, independent investigation by county authorities.

"They (the Robersons) used their position of authority and trust over the children to perpetuate these crimes," Biggar said.

Biggar said the prosecution will call six child witnesses, including five of the Roberson's alleged victims. All the children attended the couple's Pentecostal House of God Church, Biggar said.

Prosecutors will present medical evidence to show the victims were abused, he said.

Some legislators distrust Education Board bill

LEWISTON (AP) — Some legislators near the University of Idaho question a bill allowing the state Board of Education to delegate more authority to its executive director and university presidents.

The Legislative Committee on Higher Education Governance endorsed the bill after the board voted to transfer control of the University of Idaho's undergraduate Boise engineering programs to Boise State University.

Senate Education Committee Chairman Gary Schroeder, R-Moscow, said he wonders whether the bill will go before his panel in the upcoming session.

Sen. Marguerite McLaughlin, D-Orfino, said she voted against it as a member of the interim legislative committee because the timing is bad.

"I think we ought to sit back and look at what the state board staff is doing," she said. "If they are lobbying and doing the things that I heard they were doing, I think their horns ought to be pulled back."

Rayburn Barton, the board's executive director, pointed out the board's staffers routinely make recommendations to the state regents.

"If that is what the senator calls lobbying, I guess I lobbied," he said Thursday. "I don't call making a recommendation lobbying."

Barton said the staffers recommended transferring control of the Boise engineering programs to Boise State last January, but the board rejected that suggestion.

The staff had the same advice a month ago and the board heeded that, he said.

"I personally believe that is the right thing to do," he said.

Senate State Affairs Committee Chairman John Hansen, R-Idaho Falls, said the bill will be a little more controversial with the board's engineering decision.

"There are some people with strong feelings on this issue who would be inclined to limit the board's authority," he said. "I don't think it would manifest itself in legislation."

Hansen said he does not believe the bill grants any more power to the board to delegate its authority to Barton and the presidents.

"I thought it was no more than codification of existing authority," he said.

The bill stems from an August meeting at which education board members indicated they are bogged down in administrative details instead of grappling with broader policy issues, Hansen said.

"It seemed like a lot of detail that board members shouldn't have to fiddle with, that they would like to delegate," he said.

If the measure becomes law next year, Barton said he and the school

Survey shows Westerners want rangelands, wilderness protected

MOSCOW (AP) — A new survey by faculty members at the University of Idaho Department of Geography found Columbia River Basin residents overwhelmingly want their forests, rangelands and wilderness protected.

When asked to list the three most important ways federal lands should be managed, those surveyed put water and watershed protection at the top of the list, Harley Johansen and Gundars Rudzitis said Thursday.

The second most important use of federal lands cited was ecosystem protection, and third was recreation. Timber harvesting was the fourth most important public land use among those surveyed, followed by protecting wilderness values and grazing and ranching.

Overall, 76 percent of respondents said they favored a protective strategy for public lands. Only 23 percent favored commodity-based strategies like logging, grazing, ranching and mining.

"The survey results should be useful to Congress and federal land managers. They show that when it comes to managing public lands, most people in the region want as their first priority protection and good stewardship of these lands," Rudzitis said.

"Timber harvesting and other types of commodity production should not be the primary management objects of public lands management."

A total of 571 randomly selected people participated in the mail survey that covered 100 counties from eastern Oregon and Washington through Idaho and into western Montana.

The results are accurate to within plus or minus 4 percentage points.

The sample was selected to represent the views of people living in the area covered by the Forest Service's Upper Columbia River Basin Environmental Impact Statement. The so-called Eastside Ecosystem Management Project is managed by former Boise National Forest supervisor Steve Mealey.

Rudzitis said the survey found that people listed protection of public lands as their top priority regardless of how long they lived in the region.

"The notion that there are big differences between newcomers and old-timers when it comes to protecting the public lands simply is not true," he said.

People were asked why they moved to or continue to live in the Columbia River Basin. Although job opportunity was the single most frequently cited response, it was given by only 34 percent of respondents.

The other 64 percent gave as reasons for moving and living in the region access to family and friends, pace of lifestyle, access to outdoor recreation; the landscape; scenery; general environment, climate and other factors related to living costs and low crime rates.

Rising tensions blamed for increased hate crimes

BOISE (AP) — Even as reports of hate crimes plummeted last year, their incidence continues to rise in Idaho in the face of persistent efforts by state leaders to quash the belief that Idaho is a haven for bigots.

"I don't have any evidence that Idaho is any more racist than any other place in the country," Human Rights Commission Director Marilyn Shuler said. "We just have some small pockets of some very embarrassing folks that call Idaho home."

Nationally, fewer than 5,000 hate crimes were reported in 1994, down 15 percent from the more than 6,700 reported the year before. Blacks were the victims of 2,100 of the incidents that include vandalism, assault and intimidation.

Jewish people were the second most targeted group at just over 900.

But in Idaho, reports of hate crimes rose nearly 13 percent to 79 last year from 69 the year before, continuing a trend that saw reports more than double since 1991 when only 33 hate crimes were reported. And it will continue this year.

Through September, Shuler said 81 hate crimes were already reported, including an incident this spring when racist leaflets were placed on cars outside an Idaho Falls meeting of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

There have also been a number of confrontations between whites and members of minorities.

"I'm aware of an increase of tension," Shuler said. "There are groups misunderstanding each other, groups feeling angry with each other, in that sense, I'm not surprised that these statistics have gone up."

Ammon residents asked to boil water

AMMON (AP) — For the second time in a month, health officials want Ammon residents to boil their water after sampling showed intestinal bacteria in the city's water supply.

The presence of the bacteria is a sign the water could be contaminated. No water-related illness has been reported, but Blaine Drewes, state water quality specialist, said he is watching the situation closely.

"We do get concerned when problems recur like this," he said. "The symptoms are so similar to the cold and flu going around that you couldn't tell if it's the flu or the water."

Raft River rises to top

KEVIN MILLER/The Times-News

Georgia coach canned after 2 years in doghouse

ATLANTA — Georgia football coach Ray Goff, under fire from alumni the last year, was fired a week before the Bulldogs' season finale against archrival Georgia Tech, a source close to the athletic department told The Associated Press Friday.

The source, demanding anonymity, said Goff was fired after practice on Wednesday in Athens following a long meeting with athletic director Vince Dooley. Goff wanted to know his status before the Thanksgiving Day game against Georgia Tech so he could inform his team.

The university scheduled a news conference for today to address the future of the football program.

Goff (45-33-1 overall, 24-27-1 Southeastern Conference) was nearly fired last year after the Bulldogs ended the season at 6-11, including a 48-10 victory over Tech. Georgia was 3-4-1 in the SEC.

Grieffy Sr. trades Mariners job for spot with Rockies

DENVER — Ken Griffey Sr., who spent the last four seasons in the Seattle organization with his two sons, was hired Friday as the Colorado Rockies' batting coach.

Griffey left the system where one son, Ken Jr., is an All-Star outfielder, and his other son, Craig, is a minor league outfielder. With the Rockies, he'll take the place of Art Howe, hired this week as Oakland's manager.

Griffey and Rockies manager Don Baylor played together on the New York Yankees from 1983-85.

Griffey, 45, was a coach for the Mariners' Triple-A Tacoma team last season. He served as Seattle's minor league roving hitting and outfield instructor in 1994 and was the Mariners' batting coach in 1993. In 1992, he was a special assistant for player development and a part-time television color analyst for the Mariners.

Judge refuses to order Browns' ticket refunds

CLEVELAND — A county judge on Friday refused to order the Cleveland Browns to make immediate refunds for people who have tickets to the team's three remaining home games.

Also Friday, Mayor Michael R. White urged fans to support the team despite their dislike of owner Art Modell, while lawyers for the state and a Cleveland bank filed court documents in support of the city's lawsuit against the Browns. And an unhappy fan moved to expand the city's case to include the NFL and Maryland officials.

Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Judge Kenneth Callahan did not rule on the idea of refunds, which were sought in one of several class action lawsuits filed after Modell announced plans to move the team to Baltimore.

Trojans hold off Mackay for state championship

By Kevin Miller
Times-News writer

POCATELLO — With its offense stuck in reverse, Raft River placed its A-4 state football championship hopes in the rough hands of its defense.

The Trojan defense delivered the championship trophy like it was a newborn baby, holding off Mackay in a 13-6 win.

The Trojans (9-1) managed only 41 yards of offense in the second half against the Miners, but Raft River's defense gave up even less.

"I was just going, 'Please defense, do what you've been doing all year,'" said exhausted Coach Art Roper.

Raft River's defense answered their rookie coach's plea, allowing the Miners (5-4) only 29 second-half yards.

For both teams, the offense was limited to the first quarter. Mackay took the opening kick and drove 69 yards for the score. Nick Whitworth danced into the end zone from eight yards out to give the Miners a 6-0 lead.

Raft River answered immediately. On the Trojans' third play, quarterback Scott Warr scrambled right, bought some time, then hit a wide open Jocko Hutchinson on a screen pass. With nothing but green Holt Arena turf in front of him, Hutchinson ran 65 yards untouched for the touchdown. Cody Laumb's kick made it 7-6 in favor of Raft River.

Mackay fumbled its next possession into the hands of Raft River defensive lineman Danny Crippen at the Miners' 15-yard line.

Eight plays later, Jeff Rigby found a hole from one yard out for a four-and-goal to give the Trojans all the offense they would need.

It was also all the offense they would get. Raft River's offense seemed to be working against itself the rest of the game.

In the third quarter, Mackay took over on the Trojan nine-yard line after Raft River flubbed a punt attempt.

Miner running back Nick Whitworth tried three times to punch in for the potential game-winning score, but was repelled each time.

On a final try on fourth down from the one-yard line, Mackay quarterback Brad Kausch was stopped short by Drew Williams.

"We knew the defense had to pull it through," said senior Dustin Ward who sacked Kausch at a key point in the late in the game.

Farris' pickoff preserves Glenns Ferry's 2nd state crown

By Kevin Miller
Times-News writer

POCATELLO — Ross Farris' second interception of the game was more important than any of the five touchdowns he scored Friday night in Glenns Ferry's Class A-3 state championship effort over previously undefeated Lapwai.

Farris intercepted Lapwai quarterback Rafe Hewett in the Pilot end zone with 2:05 left in the fourth quarter to preserve the Pilots' 41-34 win.

It was the second consecutive state title for the Pilots who haven't lost since the finals three years ago. The Pilots were 12-0 this season, while Lapwai absorbed its first loss in 12 tries.

Farris tied a state finals record for the classification with his five touchdowns — three in the first quarter. The senior running back carried 10 times for 126 yards.

The Pilots took a 27-6 halftime lead but Hewett and the Wildcats came back strong in the second half. Hewett threw four touchdown passes and had the Wildcats regain again when Farris made his final contribution to Glenns Ferry football.

The Wildcats closed to 27-20 late in the third quarter when Hewitt hit Jim Alfrey for the second time after interception for a score.

Farris answered three plays later with a 49-yard run over the left side, tip-toeing the sideline the last 30 yards.

Lapwai scored again with 9:25 showing in the final quarter to again pull within reach. The Wildcat defense contained Glenns Ferry, forcing a punt that carried to the Lapwai eight-yard line.

Hewett threw into the arms of Farris who returned it to the goal line before being pushed out of bounds at the one. He got his fifth and final touchdown three plays after that to tie the scoring record.

Lapwai refused to die, driving 66 yards in seven plays and scoring on a Hewett-to-Josh Marshall pass that covered just two yards. That established the final score and left it up to the closing heroes.

Lapwai started those by recovering an on-sides kick with 3:13 to play and appeared capable of dethroning the Pilots.

Hewett drove Lapwai to the 18-yard line before Farris' interception put an end to his passing fancies. The Pilots were able to waste the final 2:05 by getting one first down on the ground.

CSI men blow by Pasadena

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho put itself in position to win the K&T Steel tournament title Friday night by overpowering Pasadena, Calif., 104-56.

It leaves CSI the only undefeated team after two rounds and the Eagles can look it up against Eastern Arizona at 8 p.m. today. With the other three teams having at least one loss, the Eagles can do no worse than tie.

Earlier, Ellsworth, Iowa, swooped from behind in the closing 11 minutes to beat Eastern Arizona 86-76. That leaves Ellsworth at 1-1 going against 1-1 Pasadena at 6 p.m. today.

Marcus Wallace provided the early scoring that kept the Eagles ahead of Pasadena as the Californians hung within four eight minutes into the game, largely on the shooting of Gerard Gamboa.

But the breakaway started at the 10:08 mark when Abdul Brown and Rich Brown hit five points to make it 26-17. The lead hung around there until Wallace hit a follow shot and freshman Andre Pleasant picked up two quick layins.

By halftime, CSI was rolling along at 51-29 and Wallace had 20 of his 24 points.

The separation rate grew more quickly in the second half as the Eagles pushed ahead by 30 within five minutes and hit 40 points at 85-45.

Cameron Evans of CSI powers a shot past Pasadena Community College's Shapan Roberts.

"I think it simply was our depth and strength," said CSI coach Steve Irons. "California played well early and shot the ball well, particularly that No. 12 (Gamboa). He really came out ready."

"Overall I felt we did a lot better on defense and rebounding than last night. We allowed just two offensive rebounds in the first half tonight and that's much better," he said.

Irons said he doesn't consider Eastern Arizona a double-beaten foe. "They have a solid team and they give us a couple of challenges at center and at the wing. (Chris) Wilson (6-10 center) is the biggest

Deary dumps Carey, 54-14

By Lynn Solomon
Special to The Times-News

MOSCOW — The final act of Aaron Workman's high school football career was a doozy.

The Deary senior did a little of everything Friday night to power the Mustangs over the Carey Panthers, 54-14, in the Idaho A-4 eight-man state title game at the Kibbie Dome.

Final totals for the Deary senior: four rushing touchdowns, two TD receptions, one TD pass and 319 total yards.

And all this from a guy who supposedly has a bum knee.

Workman had rushes of 21, 36, 44 and 42 yards for touchdowns, he caught TD strikes of 34 and 4 yards from Ryan Holken, and, with no time remaining in the first half, Workman completed a 38-yard pass to Randy Wood that gave Deary a 40-8 halftime lead.

Deary ends the season 11-0. Carey, ranked No. 1 all season, finished 11-1. Friday's game was a rematch of the last two eight-man finals. Deary won in 1993, also in the Kibbie Dome, while Carey beat the Mustangs 58-26 last year in Pocatello.

"It reminds me of a year ago when we played Deary," said Carey coach Heber Kirkland. "That was just the reverse."

"I told the kids all year that success in football is controlling the

Bruin girls nip Buhl in OT

By Karen Baumert
Times-News writer

BUHL — Twin Falls overcame a controversial call, horrid free throw shooting and foul trouble to hand Buhl its first girls' basketball loss of the season.

The Bruins (2-1) slipped by the Indians (2-1) 64-61 in an overtime foul fest Friday after losing the lead and control at the end of the fourth quarter.

With one minute to go, Twin Falls held a 57-52 lead. Two free throws by Indian Jana Watson and one by Marci Jensen pulled Buhl within one at the 37-second mark.

Then the free throw line tripped the Bruins for the second time in a week. Bruin Tina Fonseca missed the front of a bonus. Watson countered on the Buhl end hitting 1-of-2. Then Emily Pooecock missed the front of a bonus for Twin Falls.

Buhl brought down the rebound, but a quick Fonseca intercepted the outlet pass. She went up for two on the baseline but couldn't get the shot to drop.

Cavaliers, Hokies play for better bowl game

The Associated Press

State bragging rights won't be the only thing on the line when No. 13 Virginia plays No. 20 Virginia Tech. Although both teams already have clinched ties for their conference championships, the outcome of Saturday's game at Charlottesville will have a major impact on their bowl prospects.

Despite their conference titles, there's a chance the Cavaliers (8-3) and Hokies (8-2) will be shut out of the lucrative Fiesta-Orange-Sugar bowl alliance. Saturday's winner could go to the Jan. 1 Gator Bowl, while the loser probably will be relegated to a non-New Year's game.

"I'm not sure exactly what we're playing for from a bowl standpoint," Virginia Tech coach Frank Beamer said. "But what we're really playing for is state pride. For most successful people, when you start messing with their pride, that's when it gets serious."

If Virginia doesn't go to the Orange or Sugar bowls, coach George Welsh doesn't care where they spend the holidays.

"Once you get by the alliance bowls, it doesn't matter that much," he said.

In Top 10 games Saturday, it's Indiana at No. 2 Ohio State, Vanderbilt at No. 3 Florida, No. 4 Tennessee at Kentucky, No. 5 Northwestern at Purdue, Maryland at No. 6 Florida State, No. 9 Colorado at No. 7 Kansas State, No. 8 Notre Dame at Air Force, and TCU at No. 10 Texas.

Elsewhere in the Top 25: UCLA is at No. 11 Southern Cal; No. 12 Michigan at No. 19 Penn State; No. 14 Arkansas at LSU; No. 15 Kansas at Oklahoma State; Oregon State at No. 16 Oregon; No. 17 Alabama at No. 21 Auburn; Middle Tennessee

State at No. 18 Texas A&M; Washington State at No. 22 Washington; Boston College at No. 23 Syracuse; No. 24 Clemson at South Carolina, and West Virginia at No. 25 Miami.

Three teams enter the weekend with perfect records, and all should remain that way.

No. 1 Nebraska (10-0) is idle, Ohio State (10-0) is a 32½-point favorite over Indiana, and Florida (9-0) is a 42-point favorite over Vanderbilt.

Notre Dame (8-2) needs a victory over Air Force to secure a spot in an $8 million bowl alliance game. To guarantee an alliance berth, the Irish must finish the regular season in the Top 10.

"We've lost to the No. 2 team and the No. 5 team," coach Lou Holtz said. "We've beaten two teams who would be undefeated had they not played us. But it's my understanding that if we don't win nine games, then we don't go to a bowl."

The Colorado-Kansas State winner is headed to the Cotton Bowl.

"It's a huge game," Kansas State receiver Kevin Lokcett said. "We could finish 10-1, but people are still saying we haven't beaten a powerhouse like Nebraska or Colorado."

Kansas State (9-1) will be seeking its first 10-win season in 85 years and its best Big Eight finish since 1970.

"I think we're playing consistent football," coach Bill Snyder said. "We've also been a little less error-prone the last three weeks."

Alabama's bowl outlook is uncertain heading into the Auburn game. The Crimson Tide has appealed the NCAA's postseason ban and is awaiting a decision. Alabama has requested a ruling by Nov. 27, before bowl bids go out.

If the NCAA doesn't rule by then, Alabama (8-2) could go to a bowl in the meantime.

Michigan defense may be too much for Penn State to overcome

By Chris Dufresne
Los Angeles Times

Saturday's Top Games in College Football

East
No. 12 Michigan (8-2) at No. 19 Penn State (6-3)

Surprise, there's no Rose Bowl or national title implications in this game, but both teams are still vying for Jan. 1 bowl games. It was nice of Michigan to name Lloyd Carr the team's permanent coach before season-ending games against the mighty states, Penn and Ohio. Carr's hopes in this game will rest on his ninth-ranked defense, which recorded its first shutout since 1983 last week with a 5-0 victory against Purdue. This is not one of Joe Paterno's better teams. The Nittany Lions have been hurt by opposing tight ends, and Michigan has a good one in Jay Riemersma. Look for Carr to best Paterno.

Midwest
No. 9 Colorado (8-2) at No. 7 Kansas State (9-1)

After being thrashed by Nebraska, this is Kansas State's chance to prove it really belongs with the big boys. The Wildcats haven't defeated the Buffaloes since 1984, but this year they have the better team and home-field advantage. Kansas State is 32-1 at home in the '90s and has one of the country's hottest quarterbacks in Matt Miller, who has completed 34 of 42 passes for six touchdowns (two interceptions) in his last two games. With a Cotton Bowl berth riding for the winner, this game comes down to Kansas State's talented defense's ability to contain Colorado's speedy receivers, Ray Caruth and Phil Savoy. The Wildcats, who can't stop their first 10-victory season in 85 years and their first Jan. 1 bowl appearance, have too much to gain to blow this one. Kansas State wins.

Indiana (2-7) at No. 2 Ohio State (10-0)
This is a mere tuneup for Ohio State

Students shovel snow from the stands at Beaver Stadium in State College, Pa., Friday in preparation for Saturday's game against Michigan. The area had 18 inches of snow this week. Before next week's showdown with Michigan, but it should provide tailback Eddie George a chance to pile on points in his Heisman Trophy race with Nebraska's Tommie Frazier, who rests a sore foot during a Cornhusker bye week.

Rockies
No. 8 Notre Dame (8-2) at Air Force (7-3)

There's nothing on the line here, except $8 million and a place in the bowl alliance. It's this simple: If Notre Dame wins, it guarantees a spot in the Sugar or Orange bowls, maybe the Fiesta. A loss knocks the Irish out of the alliance and possibly the bowl picture. For once, Lou Holtz has a reason to be worried: The Irish's fate is in the hands of quarterback Tom Krug, who makes his first start in place of the injured Ron Fowlkes. Krug has fewer than 50 minutes of game experience.

South
No. 20 Virginia Tech (8-2) at No. 13 Virginia (8-3)

Call this the "no respect" bowl. While the Hokies and Cavaliers have clinched a share of the titles in their respective conferences, the Big East and Atlantic Coast both can be expected to be bypassed by the alliance for more attractive teams. Regardless, this is a battle of Virginia that finally means something. The Hokies have won eight in a row since an 0-2 start while Virginia handed Florida State its first ACC loss and lost two other games at the final gun. Both are in the running for the Orange, Sugar, Gator, Peach and Caquest bowls. In what looks like a tossup game, the pick is Virginia at home.

No. 17 Alabama (8-2) at No. 21 Auburn (7-3)

"Whoo Nellie!" and "Pin your ears back," here comes one of college football's greatest rivalries. Unfortunately, the Crimson Tide spent much of its pregame energy pleading with the NCAA to reconsider sanctions against the school to prohibit participation in a bowl this season. The real race for Alabama is to get a ruling before bowl invitations go out on Nov. 27, but it doesn't look good for the Tide. Back to the game, look for Auburn's ninth-ranked offense to squeeze enough points out of Bama's stingy defense to win a close one.

Oregon State University head coach Jerry Tiblone has a few words with offensive tackle Phil Laffer before their game against USC last week. The Beavers are playing a game of pride against Oregon today.

Cotton Bowl on line for Ducks; OSU plays for pride

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Oregon will be invited to play in the Cotton Bowl if the Ducks beat Oregon State Saturday, the university announced late Friday afternoon.

"The Cotton Bowl Athletic Association wanted to avoid any speculation and has invited us contingent on beating Oregon State," Oregon athletic director Bill Moos said. "It's a well-deserved honor for this group of football players and coaches."

The issue ignited controversy earlier this week when Washington coach Jim Lambright dismissed Oregon as a lucky and overrated team and said his Huskies deserved the Cotton Bowl bid.

But Cotton Bowl officials preferred Oregon because of its higher ranking, better overall record and the fact that the Ducks had beaten Washington. If Oregon loses to Oregon State, Washington presumably would get the bid, if the Huskies beat Washington State.

Oregon coach Mike Bellotti told his players of the conditional invitation Friday.

"This changes very little for us," Bellotti said. "We have been operating on this assumption all week, but it is nice to know that we control our own destiny, much like last season. I don't think this will change the outlook of our players who seem to be very focused on beating Oregon State regardless of the circumstances."

Last year, Oregon went into its "Civil War" matchup with Oregon State knowing it needed to win to clinch its first Rose Bowl berth in 37 years. The Ducks won that game 17-13 at Corvallis to clinch their first outright Pac-10 title.

If Oregon wins, it would be the first time the Ducks have gone to New Year's bowl games in consecutive seasons.

Oregon and Oregon State are 42 miles and football worlds apart.

Oregon is 8-2 and ranked 16th nationally. Oregon State is 1-9, has lost nine in a row and hasn't had a winning season in a quarter century.

When the teams meet Saturday, envy will be part of the emotional mix.

"I won't lie about it. I'm envious," said Beavers middle linebacker Kane Rogers, the top tackler in the Pac-10. "I'd love to be in their situation. I'd love to have played in the Rose Bowl and have a chance to go to the Cotton Bowl."

Oregon is a 17-point favorite, but given the recent history of this rivalry, a blowout seems improbable.

Utah finally has respect entering BYU matchup

The Associated Press

After two decades of getting consistently kicked around by rival Brigham Young, Utah finally has regained the Cougar respectability.

The Utes (6-4 overall, 5-2 WAC) have beaten BYU each of the past two seasons and a third straight victory Saturday would keep Utah in the crowded race for the Western Athletic Conference title.

"I think it gives you the credibility," Utah coach Ron McBride said of the back-to-back 34-31 wins. "At least now they take us seriously. They look at us as being somebody that they're going to have to line up and play."

The Cougars (6-3, 5-1) had won 19 of the 21 games before 1993, but snapping the losing streak would mean more than reclaiming bragging rights. A win in Provo, coupled with San Diego State victory at Hawaii would give BYU its 16th league title in 20 years.

"It's always a big game because of the rivalry, but of course right now the biggest thing is the fact that it has championship ramifications," said BYU coach LaVell Edwards. "So that's what makes it so big for us because we're in a position to control our destiny."

Air Force (7-3, 5-2), Colorado State (7-3, 5-2) and San Diego State (7-3, 4-2) also remain in contention for the Holiday Bowl. But while Air Force and Utah are on the outside looking in, SDSU and Colorado State would benefit greatly from a Utah victory Saturday.

The Aztecs and Rams play Nov. 25 and the winner would go to the Holiday Bowl if four teams finish 6-2. Sounds simple, but there are 16 different scenarios that could determine the WAC champion in the next two weeks.

In other games Saturday, Wyoming hosts Fresno State; New Mexico travels to Texas-El Paso; San Diego State visits Hawaii; and Air Force is home against Notre Dame in the only nonconference game. Colorado State is idle.

The quarterbacks could be the key in Provo. Utah's Mike Fouts has thrown for 2,306 yards and 16 touchdowns while BYU's Steve Sarkisian leads the conference with 2,770 yards and 15 TDs.

The receivers are the main story in Laramie. Wyoming's Marcus Harris is No. 3 in the nation in receiving yards, averaging 128.1 per game. Fresno State counters with Charlie Jones, who averages 101.3 receiving yards a game and is coming off a four-TD game last week against UTEP.

Speaking of UTEP, the Miners (1-9, 0-6) are just looking for the season to finally end. They have lost seven straight games while New Mexico (4-6, 2-5) takes a three-game losing streak into El Paso.

After a crucial home loss last week, San Diego State makes the long flight to Hawaii. The Aztecs have won six straight against the Rainbows, including the last two games in Honolulu.

At the Air Force Academy, several employees are on furlough, but the Falcons cannot afford to take a day off against Notre Dame. The Fighting Irish have won the last seven meetings and an eighth straight victory would greatly diminish Air Force's bowl chances.

NOTES: Air Force quarterback Beau Morgan needs a yard passing to become the eighth NCAA Division I player to run and throw for 1,000 yards in a single season. Two other Air Force quarterbacks have accomplished the feat, ... San Diego State running back George Jones is 40 yards short of breaking the WAC's single-season rushing record. Marshall Faulk ran for 1,630 yards in 1993. ... The Utah-BYU game will be on national TV for the first time since 1953. ... Air Force had just one penalty last week against Army and is tops in the league with an average of 27.2 penalty yards a game. ... Fresno State has lost four straight road games and has never won on the Front Range with one loss each to Air Force, Colorado State and Wyoming.

No rest for weary Cowboys; KC goes for 7 straight

The Associated Press

The Dallas Cowboys get no help, certainly not from the NFL scheduling.

Still shaken by the 38-20 beating they absorbed from San Francisco last Sunday, the Cowboys get to play two games in five days against a couple of the toughest teams in the AFC, both with Super Bowl aspirations — just like Dallas.

On Sunday, the Cowboys must deal with the Oakland Raiders, whose 2-2 record matches Dallas for second best in the league and has them one game behind Kansas City in the AFC West.

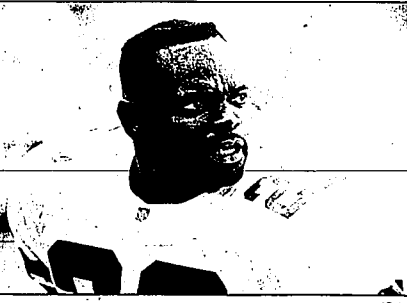

AFC West. Then, on Thursday, the Cowboys are at home for their annual Thanksgiving Day game, this time against Kansas City (9-1).

First thing first.

The Cowboys still have a two-game lead on the rest of the NFC but the loss to San Francisco may have left some psychological scars.

"We're trying to put it behind us," said Emmitt Smith, the NFL's rushing leader with 1,237 yards. "We hope this week we can erase that bad memory. We're getting ready to play a tough opponent, and if we don't put it behind us we'll be hurting again."

Oakland coach Mike White sees

"Throw the tape in the garbage and keep on moving," says Emmitt Smith about the Cowboy's 38-20 loss to San Francisco. The Dallas game as a way to measure the progress of the Raiders.

moved the 49ers into a three-way tie at the top of the NFC West with St. Louis and Atlanta. While the Niners wait for the Monday night matchup with Miami, the Rams and Falcons go head to head at Atlanta.

Isaac Bruce of the Rams sees an NFL record-tying seventh consecutive 100-yard receiving game against the Falcons. In the first game between the teams this season, Bruce caught 10 passes for a career-high 151 yards and two touchdowns.

And this time, the Falcons secondary will not be at full strength. Missing is cornerback Anthony Phillips, out for the season with a broken leg. Strong safety Kevin Ross, who left the team after being fined $1,000 for running onto the field late in last week's 23-17 loss at Buffalo, returned Friday and will play.

Bruce, who had only 21 catches for 272 yards and three touchdowns last year, leads the NFL with 71 receptions for 1,183 yards and nine TDs.

Isaac Bruce has been the one constant for us," Rams coach Rich Brooks said. "He's been an unbelievably consistent performer for us. Without him, we would be struggling."

If Bruce gains 100 yards against the Falcons, he would share the record of seven straight set by Houston teammates Charlie Hennigan and Bill Groman in 1961 and tied by Michael Irvin of the Cowboys this year.

Mistrial called off; King cleared again

NEW YORK — Don King emerged unscathed from his insurance fraud trial Friday by using the same strategy that foiled a 1984 tax evasion indictment: blaming his employees.

Prosecutors withdrew their appeal of Thursday's mistrial ruling by U.S. District Judge Lawrence McKenna. The appeal would have been futile because some members of the jury, which proclaimed itself hopelessly deadlocked, may have discussed the case with a dismissed alternate, assistant U.S. attorney Paul Gardpehe said.

The wily boxing promoter will be retried on charges of faking a contract to collect $350,000 in non-existent training expenses for a canceled bout, said U.S. Attorney Mary Jo White. The 64-year-old showman had faced up to 45 years in federal prison and a $2,250,000 fine if convicted of nine counts of wire fraud.

"He has fought this battle and if he has another, he will fight that too," said King's lawyer, Peter Fleming Jr.

Swiss ski racer takes 2nd World Cup win

VAIL, Colo. — Michael-von-Gruenigen of Switzerland overcame nearly a full-second deficit on the second run Friday to win his second straight men's World Cup giant slalom race.

First-run leader Lasse Kjus of Norway finished second, and Urs Kaelin of Switzerland was third, duplicating the top-three finish of last week's season-opening race in France.

Italy's Alberto Tomba, the defending World Cup overall, giant slalom and slalom champion, wound up seventh. Tomba ranked fourth after the first run, 1.77 seconds off Kjus' pace.

A controversial reverse-30 rule was used for the second run. The top 30 finishers in the first run were in reverse order in the second, meaning the leader went 30th, thus exposing him to a potentially rutted, deteriorating course.

Tomba has been critical of the new regulation, even hinting at organizing a boycott of the top skiers. But no such boycott occurred.

No Americans qualified among the top 30 for the second run. The leading American in the first run was Daron Rahivles of Truckee, Calif., 37th at 1:16.59.

6 chosen as finalists for coach award

HOUSTON — John Cooper of Ohio State, Steve Spurrier of Florida, Gary Bamatt of Northwestern and three others were chosen as finalists Friday for the Ben Bryant college football coach of the year award.

The other finalists were Frank Beamer of Virginia Tech, Glen Mason of Kansas and Bill Snyder of Kansas State.

The award is given by the Football Writers Association of America. The winner will be announced Dec. 14.

Louisville center ruled ineligible

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Louisville center-forward Samaki Walker will be ineligible for three games and three coaches will receive official letters of reprimand for violations of NCAA rules, the school announced Friday.

Walker, a 6-9 sophomore who averaged nearly 14 points per game last season, will miss an exhibition game Sunday, as well as the next two games of the San Juan Shootout that begins Nov. 24 in Puerto Rico.

Louisville, ranked No. 12 in the preseason, announced that another condition of Walker regaining his eligibility is that he repay the cost of the use of a vehicle he was provided as part of his summer job as a customer service representative at North American Trucking Association.

The most serious sanctions announced Friday were against assistant coach Larry Gay. An internal probe into alleged violations found that Gay had made improper contacts with prospective recruits and had given improper benefits to a coach of a prospective recruit, Mark Blount, who eventually signed with Pittsburgh.

Boris Becker returns the ball during his match against Yevgeny Kafelnikov at the ATP World Championship in Frankfurt, Germany, Friday.

Risky strategy works for Becker at ATP

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — Taking risks is Boris Becker's style. Firing aces with second serves on break points, Becker's daring performance paid off Friday.

Becker needed to beat Yevgeny Kafelnikov in two sets to edge Wayne Ferreira out of the ATP Championships semifinals, and the German did exactly that, winning 6-4, 7-5.

"It's part of my character. I cannot change that," Becker said of his risky game that thrilled the boisterous, capacity crowd of 10,000.

Pete Sampras, Becker and Ferreira, who was idle Friday, all finished round-robin play in the White Group with 2-1 records, but Sampras and Becker advanced because of better set averages.

In the Red Group, no mathematics were involved.

Chang beat Jim Courier 6-2, 7-5 to reach the semifinals for the first time and will face Sampras Saturday, while Becker plays Thomas Enqvist.

Enqvist beat Thomas Muster 6-4, 6-7 (3-7), 6-4 and was the only player who finished the round-robin portion of the event with a 3-0 record.

Sampras, who is assured of finishing the year as No. 1 and is seeking his third title in the season-ending tournament of the top eight players in the world, also was idle Friday.

Golf's big names fire away at Shark Shootout

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — The teams of Tom Kite and Jay Haas and Steve Elkington and Mark Calcavecchia shot 8-under-par 64s Friday to share the first-round lead in the $1.1 million Shark Shootout.

Greg Norman, the tournament host, and partner Ray Floyd were in a second-place tie with Lee Janzen and Chip Beck at 65.

Ten teams make up the 20-man Shark Shootout field. The three-day, 54-hole tournament has a different format of play each day.

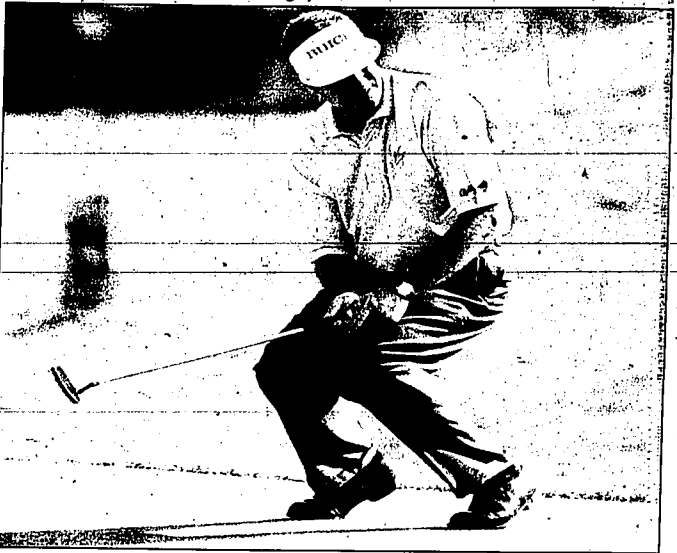

"We started a little slowly," Kite said. "We had not played together in a practice round, so we didn't have a chance to discuss strategy until we had played four or five holes. But our comfort level with each other is very good."

Friday's format was alternate shot. On every hole, each player drives and the best drive is selected. The player whose drive was not chosen hits the second shot and the partners alternate shots after the third hole is holed.

"We're off to a good start in the toughest format of the tournament," Calcavecchia said. "And I love this format, the quality of the field and a great group of guys."

Elkington and Calcavecchia had seven birdies and an eagle along with one bogey in their round while Kite and Haas had eight birdies.

"Winning the PGA Championship this year has given me the most confident feeling in the world," Elkington said. "Yet Mark and I apologized to each other before we started about any bad shots to get that out of the way. We're not worried at all about anything negative."

Sorenstam leads Australian Ladies by 3 strokes

GOLD COAST, Australia (AP) — Annika Sorenstam of Sweden fired a 5-under-par 68 Friday and took a three-shot lead halfway through the Alpine Australian Ladies Masters golf championship.

Sorenstam's round was the best on a wet and windy day.

Sorenstam, who topped the prize money lists on both the United States and European tours this year and won the U.S. Open, is seeking her sixth title of the year at Royal Pines. She had a 36-hole total of 134.

Australian amateur Simone Williams, who had a 4-under 69, was second at 137. Sweden's Liselotte Neumann, with a 72, and Alison Nicholas of England, with a 70, were another stroke back at 138.

Sorenstam and Neumann each shot 7-under-par 66s Thursday to share the first-round lead, but Sorenstam surged clear with four birdies and an eagle over the opening nine holes Friday.

She had two bogeys and one birdie on the back nine in difficult wet conditions over the par-73, 6,125-yard resort course.

Williams, who grew up in nearby Brisbane, missed the cut in last week's Australian Open after being penalized for playing the wrong ball.

First-round leader Barry Lane of England, defending champion Masashi "Jumbo" Ozaki of Japan and Tom Watson all struggled during the second round but wound up tied with five others for third at 136. Two-time champion Larry Mize bogeyed the final hole for a 71 and was tied at 137 with Australia's Graham Marsh and three others.

"She can still be dangerous," Sorenstam said. "It is too early to write her off."

Aussie leads Japanese golf tourney

MIYAZAKI, Japan — Australia's Peter Senior shot a 7-under-par 64 Friday for a two-shot lead over American Robert Gomez after two rounds of the $2 million Dunlop Phoenix Golf Tournament.

Senior, winner of the Dunlop Open in April, had an eagle, six birdies and only one bogey over the 6,798-yard, par-71 Phoenix Country Club course. His 36-hole total was 133, 9-under-par.

"I got off to a good start by going 2-under after three holes, then I eagled the seventh to keep that momentum going," Senior said. "I played well on the back nine to keep it together."

Senior eagled the 510-yard, par-5 seventh after hitting a three-wood approach shot within 15 feet.

Games struggled for most of the round with his driver, but he moved into second place at 135 after finishing with birdies at the final two holes for a 69.

Feisty amateur takes lead at Victorian

MELBOURNE, Australia — Geoff Ogilvy, an 18-year-old amateur with a self-confessed hot temper, upstaged his professional rivals today to take the second-round lead in the Victorian Open.

Ogilvy, a member of the Victoria Golf Club, shot his second straight 2-under-par 70 on the 6,801-yard layout. Gavin Vearing, another amateur who also is a Victoria member, was a stroke back at 141 along with first-round leaders Jamie Taylor and John Clifford.

"I've always had a bit of a temper, but I'm working hard on controlling it," said Ogilvy, last year's Australian Schoolboys champion. "It seems to be a bit better."

Vearing shot a 70 and Taylor and Clifford had 72s.

Germany's Alexander Cojka, a three-time winner this year on the PGA European Tour, was seven back after a 75.

Former British Open champion Ian Baker-Finch of Australia missed the cut with rounds of 78 and 79. Englishman Steve Bottomley, third in this year's British Open, also was eliminated after rounds of 75 or 76.

Extreme fights: Bloodsport or crime?

NEW YORK (AP) — A Brooklyn appeals court has agreed with critics of a brutal no-holds-barred fighting event: It's closer to a crime than to a sport. But the show will go on anyway, its organizers promised once again Friday.

Brooklyn District Attorney Charles J. Hynes kept the "Extreme Fighting" pay-per-view show out of a Brooklyn armory by arguing successfully that the competition constitute assault or reckless endangerment if held outside a ring.

But the event will move to a new, undisclosed location and air Saturday night at its promised time of 9 p.m. said Lt. Schram, spokesman for Battlegale Inc. State Sen. Roy Goodman, one of the first critics of the show, said Friday afternoon that the brawl was moving to North Carolina. He planned to contact officials there about banning the fights using Hynes' tactics.

Hynes spokesman Pat Clark said their argument was simple: "We argued that you can't use the premises for an illegal activity. The DA's position is that this is a brutal, repugnant, offensive, illegal activity."

Count reasons to be thankful

It doesn't seem like such a long time since last we basted a Thanksgiving turkey. But turn the clock back, and today it does feel like it's been a while since:

- O.J. Simpson was just another likable ex-jock announcing football games;
- Saddam Hussein was ancient history.

Joseph Walker
ValueSpeak

Rush Limbaugh had a Democratic majority to kick around. The world changes, even in just a year's time.

Some would say it's scarier, or at least less promising. For others, life just keeps getting better.

Often the only difference between the two perspectives is the ability to focus on positives while negatives continue swirling about.

How long has it been since you counted your blessings? If it's been a while, the Thanksgiving weekend is the perfect time to run a quick tally of what's right with your life. You might be surprised how much there is for which to be thankful.

For example, I'm thankful ...

for home. Not necessarily the place, mind you, but the concept. Anita and I purchased our first house this year, but we've always had a home. The way we see it, "home" doesn't have much to do with bricks and mortar. It has to do with belonging. Add togetherness. And security. And mostly, love. As Mark Twain's Adam said of his Eve, "Whosoever Eve was, there was Eden."

for teen-agers. Yeah, I know — there are some creepy kids out there, just as there are some creepy adults.

For the most part, however, today's young people are bright, enthusiastic and very much aware of the challenges facing them. And still they say "Bring it on!" Their energy and confidence are contagious, and I always feel a little livelier when I'm with them — and not just because they usually give me the honor of throwing the first water balloon.

for reality. I'm thankful that my reality isn't the same as Hollywood's view of reality. Sure, the real world can be tough. But it can be wonderful, too. Hollywood can never seem to get the handle on that balance, probably because when it comes right down to it, reality isn't very dramatic. The best times and the worst times tend to be simple, personal and profound.

But in Hollywood, a quiet evening at home isn't complete without a prowling robotic assassin from the 21st century.

for peace. OK, so maybe peace is somewhat relative these days. Maybe there will always be a war somewhere, and maybe even a small war is intolerable. As long as the world's superpowers are able to peacefully co-exist and keep their hoses carefully trained on the hot spots with the most incendiary potential, there's hope.

for example. There is nothing quite so inspiring as watching someone face adversity and overcome it — in one way or another. Look around you and you'll see neighborhoods full of powerful positive examples. Citizens who refuse to allow gangs to terrorize their streets. Young people who buck the trend of self-indulgence and say "no" to drugs, alcohol and sex. Volunteers who staff shelters and soup kitchens for the poor and the homeless. Parents who work hard to teach their children lifetime values like honesty, integrity, tolerance and compassion.

There are plenty of good examples to follow. All we have to do is look for them.

Just like the rest of our blessings.

Not peace, but a sword

Reorganized LDS-sponsored seminar seeks keys to conflict resolution

"The present chaotic stage of humanity is not, as some wishfully maintain, caused by a lack of faith, but by too much faith."
— George Simpson

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

BUHL — Churches may be houses of the Lord, but that doesn't mean they're necessarily houses of peace.

"There are conflicts in any congregation, but especially in congregations that are undergoing change," said the Rev. John Vanderwalker, pastor of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints church here. "I think it's important that congregations learn how to confront those conflicts."

That's the genesis of a conflict-skills resolution seminar that Vanderwalker's church is sponsoring here today and Sunday. Conducted by Galen Worthington, a Reorganized LDS minister from Missouri, it's designed to give pastors and laymen the skills to recognize and sort out conflicts before they become schisms.

"It's happening in so many denominations these days," Vanderwalker said. "People who are traditionalists sometimes feel threatened by new members with new ideas. It can cause a real crisis of faith."

Change has buffeted his own church recently, Vanderwalker said. The 135-year-old denomination — which traces its origins from a disagreement over who should succeed Joseph Smith, the Mormons' founder — opened the Reorganized church's priesthood to women 11 years ago.

And recently, the church opened communion to non-Reorganized LDS Christians, Vanderwalker said.

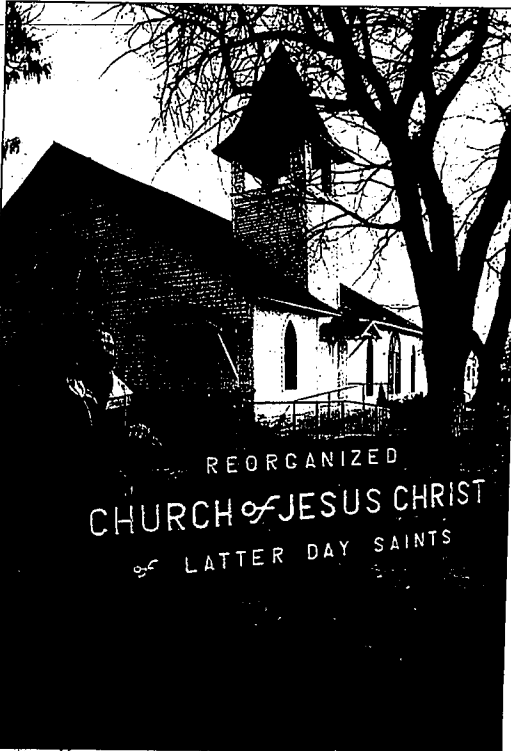

Those were defining moments for many older members who had grown up with a very traditional, structured system of belief and a church presided over by a male-dominated leadership, he said.

"It caused a lot of soul-searching in our church," Vanderwalker said. "And I think it made a lot of us more conscious of the need for conflict resolution."

That's particularly true because the Reorganized LDS church places great emphasis on the search for peace, he said. The quarter-million-member, Missouri-based denomination says its mission is "to proclaim Jesus Christ and to promote community of joy, hope, love and peace."

"It's more than just a statement of principle," Vanderwalker said. "The church devotes a lot of time and resources to it."

This weekend's seminar will discuss the nature of conflict, the scriptural principles of conflict, honest and direct communication, and inviting disagreement.

The Rev. John Vanderwalker says resolving conflict within congregations is vital work for Christians.

It starts at 9 this morning and will continue through about 5 p.m., with lunch provided. Sunday's session also starts at 9. Registration fee is $10 per person, or $15 per couple, and participants can register before the first session.

The subject of Sunday morning's preaching service, conducted by Worthington, will be "Nose to Nose Yet Heart to Heart: When Jesus Confronted Others."

Scholars gather to share new theories, discoveries

By David O'Reilly
Knight-Ridder News Service

PHILADELPHIA — For many Americans, religion means unquestioned faith.

But this weekend, religion is a mystery to be challenged, explored, questioned and celebrated.

During a four-day run at the Pennsylvania Convention Center, no less than 500 workshop and seminar sessions will be held, avatars, bodhisattvas, prophets, scribes and high priestesses who populate the world's religions.

Are they real? And if not, do their holy books and laws and sacred rituals have meaning for us today?

Starting today and continuing through Tuesday, members of the American Academy of Religion and the Society of Biblical Literature will share their latest discoveries and newest theories.

"This is the major event of each year," said Barbara DeConcini, executive director of the American Academy of Religion. "This is the centerpiece that draws together a great many of our members to share the results of their interests and research."

The variety of the workshops is staggering, and provides some measure of how vast and various is this tango we humans dance with the divine. For example, one double-page spread in the magazine-size program book for Saturday afternoon lists simultaneous discussions on:

- Ethics.
- The history of Christianity and mysticism.

- The idea of person in Buddhism.
- God's arguments in the Koinon.
- Divine mediator figures in antiquity.
- Epitaphology and ancient Israel.
- Feminist theological hermeneutics of the Bible.

The complete listing for that 90-minute time slot runs for eight more pages. The entire program book (with advertising) is a hefty 348 pages.

Boy arms his memory with chapters of Bible

By H. R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — "A kid nowadays needs to have something in his brain that he can use quick when he has to decide what to do or when he's in trouble." That's the philosophy of a Jerome boy who has been memorizing long sections of Scripture.

"I might have a photographic memory," but I memorize the Bible because I like to and because I might need them any day now," said Erik Lundgren, the 12-year-old son of Rob and Kathy Lundgren.

He doesn't know how many verses and chapters he has committed to memory.

"All I know is I remember lots of them," he said. "When I need to use what the Bible says, that's when a verse or chapter pops into my head."

Erik understands what the verses mean, too. Or, as he put it, "Anybody who is reading the Bible should know what it's talking about before he memorizes it."

Daniel's prayer, found in the ninth chapter of the book of Daniel, is one of Erik's memorization projects.

"I started learning Daniel 9:3 through 24 as part of a Sunday School class project," he said. "Then I found out I was good at memorizing, so I just kept doing it."

The Jerome Middle School student said, "Sometimes at school a lot of kids who don't attend church tense kids who do go to church. That's because they don't know what the Bible says and how it helps a person to trust God."

Erik said he once sat in a church worship service for about one hour looking at the Bible's table of contents, listing its 66 books.

"I just decided to memorize them so I wouldn't be embarrassed if somebody told me to look up something in a book like Habakkuk," he said.

Erik Lundgren can say the books of the Old Testament — backward and forward — alphabetically.

At a recent community singspiration at the Jerome First Church of God, Erik thrilled the audience with his rendition of the books of the Bible. He began by saying the Old and New Testament books in order. Then he repeated them in reverse order and then alphabetically, A to Z. He concluded by saying the books in reverse alphabetical order.

"It was just something I decided to do," he said simply. Erik also plays football, baseball and basketball.

"But what I like best is going hunting with my dad," he said.

He added, "I might be a preacher some day, because I'm not scared when I have to talk in front of people — God just helps me."

Following in his big brother's footsteps, Jordan Lundgren who is 8, is also memorizing portions of Scripture. His favorite is Psalm 23.

And these are not the only two kids in the Magic Valley memorizing scripture.

Memorization is a part of the curriculum at the Jerome First Baptist Church Sunday School.

"It's important you have Scripture committed to memory, because you're not always going to have the Bible handy," said the Rev. Thomas Thompson, who pastors the church.

But most churches agree that rote memorization is not a magic key to spiritual success.

"Knowledge precedes memorization" is the word from the Rev. Bob Stebe, pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Jerome.

"We have husbands in our church who have been brought up on memorization," he said. "Bible memorization was beat into their heads, but never moved into their hearts, so today they never come to church."

Jesus is the key to beliefs

What we believe
Bob Adams

A look at the Magic Valley's various religious faiths

Jesus of Nazareth, conceived by the Holy Spirit, born of the most high, in the womb of the Virgin Mary, is the only begotten son of God. He was God who became flesh. He voluntarily left equality with God to become man, even a servant, and died an innocent and irreparable death of a criminal on a cross. He has experienced all the issues and temptations of humanity—and is able to protect us during those times so long as we are living in Him.

The purpose of Jesus Christ coming to earth was to make it possible for people to be at peace with God. Adam, our humankind representative, chose to disobey God, thus making himself his own god. Because of his disobedience (sin), we died. The result of sin is death. We became separated from God. God demanded a perfect sacrifice to pay for that sin. Jesus, the perfect innocent son of God, was that sacrifice. He willingly died in our place to satisfy our debt to God that we could never repay. Jesus, the second Adam, came to earth to make it possible for us to be "reborn." Through his perfect life in us, we are in right relationship with God.

We get "reborn" by entering into a "peace treaty" (covenant) with Jesus. We do that by (1) believing your views and purpose to accept the will of God in your inner selves instead of rejecting it; (2) confessing that Jesus is the Christ, the son of the living God; (3) being immersed—baptized—in the name of Jesus Christ for the forgiveness of and release from your sins; and (4) continuing to live "in him," obeying him in every aspect of your lives. This means allowing Jesus complete possession of your entire person. Sell out to him.

The purpose of the weekly assembly

(church) is for believers to meet together for the Lord's Supper. This involves the celebration of the death of Jesus (he paid our debt to the father). It also includes the apostles' teaching (Bible-study-instruction), fellowship and prayer. Our charge is to take the good news of Christ Jesus to all the world, making disciples of all ethnic groups, immersing them in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all that Jesus commanded.

Bob Adams is the minister at the Community Christian Church, 303 Grandview Drive, in Twin Falls. Sunday services include Bible classes for all ages at 9:30 a.m. and worship at 10:30 a.m. A low-cost meal, $1.50 suggested donation, is followed by Bible study for all ages at 7 p.m.

WSU professors claim LDS magazine portrays unrealistic image of women

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Two Weber State University professors have found that the Mormon Church's main magazine portrays most women as young, white mothers.

Becky Johns and Sherree Josephson, who studied last year's Ensign magazine, the SBL, is devoted exclusively to Jewish and Christian Bibles, whereas AAR scholars roam the globe. Both organizations are based on the campus of Emory University in Atlanta, albeit in separate buildings.

West Harold Richards, an Old Testament scholar and executive director of the Society for Biblical Literature, concedes that some of the presentations at these workshops can be "very nitpicky" and of little interest to the layperson.

What he means is that Sunday morning's lecture on "The Intersection of Syntax, Verb Form and Discourse Structure in the Karatepe Inscription" experience," Johns said. "The visual images make us feel like outsiders. They make us feel marginal. And I feel like I am a pretty mainstream LDS woman."

The professors, both of whom are Mormons and teach communication classes, said the image most often featured in the magazine is of a young, happy, white woman in a dress, who is holding a baby and dishing up a meal for an under-the-weather neighbor.

of Biblical Literature, which was founded in 1880. As its name implies, the SBL is devoted exclusively to Jewish and Christian Bibles, whereas AAR scholars roam the globe. Both organizations are based on the campus of Emory University in Atlanta, albeit in separate buildings.

West Harold Richards, an Old Testament scholar and executive director of the Society for Biblical Literature, concedes that some of the presentations at these workshops can be "very nitpicky" and of little interest to the layperson.

What he means is that Sunday morning's lecture on "The Intersection of Syntax, Verb Form and Discourse Structure in the Karatepe Inscription" could be a snooze for anyone unversed in Ugartite Studies and Northwest Semitic Epigraphy.

But in other seminars, scholars are tossing out ideas that would set some church ladies' teeth on edge.

Typical of the radical Biblical scholars is Burton Mack, professor of theology at the University of California at Claremont and author of numerous books on the origins of Christianity.

Mack has concluded, for example, that Jesus was an altogether humane sage whose pithy maxims about living in the "kingdom of God" were adopted by many different sects in the Middle East. Some of these sects actually distorted Jesus' sayings — and the story of his life — to match their own world views.

Four of these sects' biographical narratives of Jesus survive as the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, according to Mack, whose latest book is "Who Wrote the New Testament?" (Harper San Francisco).

He speaks Saturday afternoon.

Much contemporary Biblical scholarship enhances rather than challenges traditional understanding of faith, however.

Mormon leaders endorse National Family Week

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, the Mormon Church leaders have endorsed designation of the Thanksgiving holiday period as National Family Week.

In a statement issued by the ruling First Presidency of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, the family was praised as a healthy society's foundation, and a "mighty fortress against the evils of our day."

The statement was issued by church President Gordon B. Hinckley and his counselors, Thomas S. Monson and James E. Faust.

"We join in support of the designation of the week of Thanksgiving as National Family Week. We view the family as the fundamental unit of society, and it is fitting that it be recognized," the church leaders said.

'Times-News' has early submission deadlines for Thanksgiving week

  3. Coolant shouldn't be rusty and no green stains on the radiator
  4. No oil spots around the engine.
  5. Look for rust, especially in the trunk, wheel wells and rocker panels under the doors.
  6. Look for new welds, ripply body work, panels that don't match.
  7. Uneven tire wear may mean an alignment problem.
  8. Make sure the car comes with a useable jack and lugwrench
  9. To check shocks and suspension push down and quickly release each corner of the car. It should not bounce more than 2 times.
  10. Seats shouldn't be saggy or ripped. Make sure belts and controls work.

ANSWER: Two clubs. Shows no extra strength; merely introduces a second suit.

"I took my best shot at beating him," announced East. "If I catch you with a singleton club, your second-round ruff nets one down." By invitation, the Friendly Kibitzer offered a different view. "Your play had a remote chance," he observed. "However, you had a better chance at a trump-promotion play." East took his two high hearts and wondered where he might find a trick from West. The obvious strength in dummy eliminated the hope of a high-card winner, so East switched to a club. His plan was to lead a second club after winning his trump ace, hoping that West could score a club ruff. East's hopes were not realized. South took his club queen and passed his trump jack to East's ace. Dummy won the next club and South crossed to his diamond queen to repeat the trump finesse. This limited East to his three top winners and South had his 10 tricks. It was a stretch for East to visualize a possible club ruff. After South's bidding suggested a six-card spade suit and South was known to have at least three hearts, his possession of four clubs was very unlikely. To beat the game, East must lead a third heart at trick three. When his trump ace takes South's jack, East leads a fourth heart and South is finished. If South trumps high, West discards. And if he trumps low, West overruffs with his eight. Either way, West gets a trump trick sooner or later and the game goes one down.
