Budget deal forces widespread cuts

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — Though keeping the government running, the stopgap budget bill cuts spending on many agencies, curbs environmental enforcement and raises the threat of layoffs.
Some departments and agencies, including Labor, Education and Interior, faced deeper cuts in the temporary spending measure than Congress previously approved.
More than two dozen government programs, including the AmeriCorps community service program to pension counseling, faced either 25 percent cuts or were

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — Just hours before a midnight deadline, President Clinton and a conflict-weary Congress on Friday averted a third federal shutdown since November by financing dozens of agencies for seven more weeks.
The Senate passed the bill 82-8 earlier Friday.
"There's no question now of the government shutting down," Clinton said before signing legislation warding off another round of furloughed workers and padlocked offices that both sides saw as a public relations nightmare.

The bill reinstates a Reagan-era ban on federally funded research on human embryos — but scientists say it won't affect the field because the government hasn't funded such work anyway.
The bill also imposes $1.2 billion in cuts for federal housing programs that had been part of a Department of Housing and Urban Development budget bill vetoed by President Clinton last month.

Dreaming green

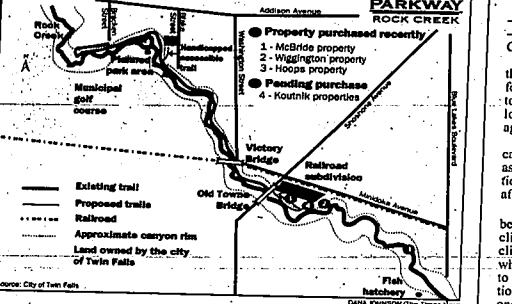

Howard Allen of the Twin Falls City Council envisions a 'trailhead' on Rock Creek Canyon rim property that the city is planning to purchase.

Old Towne parkway grows

By Virginia S. Garber, Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Ramshackle buildings near downtown will make way for serene parkland, picnic grounds, scenic overlooks and more trails if city planners have their way.
And they're making progress on plans to create a major attraction in an once-neglected area of town. With a series of recent purchases, the city's Urban Renewal Agency is connecting the dots to lengthen the Old Towne Parkway.
A canyon-bottom trail already stretches about 1.6 miles from beneath the Old Towne Bridge to its climb onto Bracken Street. The paved trail is on city-owned land along the northeast side of Rock Creek.
But the city's Rock Creek holdings have been snaking upstream and onto the canyon's north rim — about 23 more acres in recent weeks. City planners envision a "landscaped" "trailhead" above Rock Creek Canyon with parking for trail users.
Twin Falls paid the McBride family $340,000 earlier this month for 4.22 acres on the north rim of Rock Creek Canyon, just east of the Old Towne Bridge, said Dave McAlindin, the city's economic development director.
The city's Parks and Recreation Department last week relocated its maintenance headquarters to an old livestock sale building on the former McBride property. City Councilman Howard Allen said. Eventually, the parks administration will move from City Hall to the large metal building as well, he said.

Last weekend, the city agreed to buy "a kind of validates those of us who have experienced extraterrestrials," says Mary Taylor, a Sonora accountant who says he had the first of several ET encounters while playing in the Oakland hills as an 11-year-old in 1947.
"After that happened, my mother used to try to lock me in a closet when company came over," he says.
"Since then, Taylor has collected more than 2,000 news reports of sightings and encounters. Many of them are stored in the home of a Concord physician who prefers to remain anonymous because he doesn't want his patients and colleagues to know of his part-time avocation.
and $125,000, McAlindin said.
One parcel is southeast of the McBride property, also on the canyon rim. The other is across Maxwell Avenue, part of an old railroad subdivision that the Urban Renewal Agency is trying to buy up for a new park.

Grand jury testimony carries risk

Los Angeles Times
WASHINGTON — Before she testified Friday behind closed doors, first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton was told she was not a target of the federal grand jury — meaning she was not a potential defendant.
Yet the history of Washington scandals shows that testifying before a grand jury can be a tricky proposition. Many top government officials have survived the ordeal, but some notable ones who willingly testified did not, including former Attorney General John N. Mitchell in the Nixon administration and former White House aide Michael Deaver during the Reagan administration.
Although Mrs. Clinton — herself a lawyer — is not presently a target, former federal prosecutor E. Lawrence Barrett said there could be another risk involved in her testimony.
"There's always a risk your testimony will not be believed by prosecutors and will lead to further problems," he explained. "Something a witness says sometimes will lead you to develop information six months later which indicates that the witness had a more active role than they acknowledged."
As Plato Cacheris, another Washington attorney who specializes in white-collar crime cases, put it: "You can go in as a witness and wind up as a target."
Washington lawyers who were once government prosecutors stress that the decision to allow a client to make a grand jury appearance seldom is an easy one.
"If it's not clear that they're strictly a witness — if they could become a potential defendant — then I insist on first getting immunity," Cacheris said.
Conferral of immunity on a witness means the government cannot prosecute such a person for what he tells the grand jury. It is a favorite tool of prosecutors in conspiracy cases, where lower-level figures are persuaded to testify against higher-ups.
But as Cacheris explained, "in a celebrated case like that of the first lady, you would never ask for immunity because the political implications are too great. You'd be implying you're afraid to just go in and tell the truth."
In fact, some defense lawyers said they might be more willing to allow a high-profile political client to testify than they would an ordinary client. Given the reality that a political figure who is hiding something, "the political implications have to be considered along with the legal ones," one lawyer said.
Once before the grand jury, Barcella noted, "even immunity is no guarantee you won't be indicted for perjury. Your testimony must be truthful."
Former Attorney General Mitchell, who asked no special consideration, once answered grand jury questions about his Watergate conduct, only to be indicted and later convicted of perjury for lying in his testimony.

ET spotters contend new planets prove positive: We are not alone!

Knight-Ridder News Service
WALNUT CREEK, Calif. — A few folks are really happy to hear that there might be extraterrestrial life on two new planets discovered this week: the people who have been telling us about ETs for years.

Artist gets visit from Secret Service

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A computer artist who thinks it's a blast to make celebrities' heads "explode" got a little visit from the Secret Service.

Daniel Burford, 22, selects photographs of famous people he dislikes. Bob Dole, Rush Limbaugh, Boris Yeltsin, Bill Gates and Tom Hanks — and blows them up on his World Wide Web page in comic-book fashion.

"They cut out the parts of the head you want to explode, paint in some fake blood and there you go!" he said Friday.

Not everyone gets the joke. Two Secret Service agents showed up at Burford's workplace, Virtual Visions Inc., and asked him to come down to headquarters for a little chat.

"They asked me if I'd ever owned a gun, how I felt about Bob Dole, if I'd ever been in a mental hospital," Burford said. "I guess they decided I wasn't a security threat."

His exploding heads Head of Fame, indexed under both "tasteful humor" and "political humor," attracted 10,000 browsers a day when it first appeared in December and draws about 4,000 to 5,000 now, he said.

"I've gotten e-mail from some people saying it's too liberal, that I should be more of an equal opportunity offender," Burford said, who is thinking of offering Bill Clinton's head for detonation. "After that State of the Union address, yeah, I think I might."

New York beauty queen finds herself in midst of real-life opera

NEW YORK (AP) — Miss New York State Helen Goldsby began the week defending her crown and ended it defending her virtue.

Pageant officials recently moved to dethrone the Julliard-trained opera singer because she will be too busy working as a Broadway understudy.

Now she has been named as the home-wrecking "other woman" in a divorce case, giving the pageant people further grounds to remove her.

Helen Goldsby Fights for her crown

Her contract stipulates that she will not commit any acts of moral turpitude ... and that she be a role model for younger people," state pageant-spokeswoman Joan-Jones said. "How do you think it affects it?"

Think two words: Vanessa Williams.

The real-life operatic plot began when state pageant officials stripped Goldsby of her crown after she took a job as an understudy in the Broadway play "Master Class" and could not make public appearances.

The tall, 25-year-old beauty refused to go quietly.

The crown is still hers, she insisted at a news conference Tuesday where her lawyer, Dominic Barbara, said he would file a $2 million breach-of-contract lawsuit. As of Friday, he had not.

Goldsby said she didn't perform her duties as Miss New York because "there are no duties." She said she took the understudy role because she had no money and couldn't pay her rent.

Nonsense, said pageant officials, who have already arranged interest Audrey Adams-Maillan, who said in divorce papers that her husband, Wall Street financier W. Brian Maillan, has been having an affair with — and supporting — Goldsby for months.

Adams-Maillan said her husband — the 46-year-old head of an investment banking firm — spent their 14th wedding anniversary with Goldsby at a hotel in Los Angeles and rang in the new year with her in Jamaica.

Adams-Maillan also tracked them to hotels in New York, Washington and Florida, and to Goldsby's apartment in Brooklyn.

Ira Garr, Adams-Maillan's lawyer, said the affair began in July, two months before Goldsby sang a Puccini aria at the Miss America Pageant as a pageant finalist and one of the winners of the talent competition.

Adams-Maillan is asking for a divorce on grounds of adultery and cruelty, and wants custody of the couple's 10-year-old daughter.

Maillan had no comment.

Goldsby's lawyer said Friday he had not seen the divorce petition but insisted it would have no effect on Goldsby's breach-of-contract suit. "There is no doubt my client has both an innocent mind and innocent soul."

First lady testifies on billing records

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a historic appearance, first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton testified approximately four hours Friday before a grand jury that must decide whether criminal charges are warranted in the disappearance — and then rediscovery — of her long-sought law firm billing records.

Mrs. Clinton said she told the jurors assembled by Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr what she has said before publicly, "I do not know how the billing records came to be found where they were found" in the White House living quarters, she said.

The first wife of a president ever summoned before a grand jury, Mrs. Clinton emerged from the courtroom the same way she arrived — with a wave and a smile. "It's been a long day," she said.

"I, like everyone else, would like to know the answer about how those documents showed up after all those years," she said. "I tried to be as helpful as I could in their investigative efforts."

She said most of the questions dealt with the law firm records, but "there were other matters discussed."

Starr declined to answer reporters' questions as he left the courthouse. Mrs. Clinton's appearance at the same courthouse where grand jurors delved into Watergate and Iran-Contra was carried on live television.

But her testimony occurred in a third-floor courtroom sealed from public view. Her inquisitor was Starr, a Republican appointed to oversee the Whitewater probe.

The appearance occurred at an awkward time for President Clinton, at the start of the election year, just as his stock was rising.

At issue is the mystifying appearance of billing records that outline her work for the failed Arkansas savings and loan at the center of the Whitewater criminal investigation.

The documents were subpoenaed two years ago by prosecutors, and the White House said they were missing.

But this month they were suddenly turned over to the prosecutors after an aide, Carolyn Huber, found them on a table in a room in the White House living quarters. The aide said he found the records last August and put them in a box, and then realized this month that they were the records that had been subpoenaed.

The grand jury must decide whether someone tried to hide the records to obstruct the investigation.

Before she was taken by motorcycle to the courthouse, Mrs. Clinton spent some of the morning alone with her husband at the White House.

The president reassured her, told her that he loves her, that she would do a good job, press secretary Mike McCurry said.

She arrived wearing a long black coat with gold-banded sleeves. Across the street, a throng of observers gathered, many carrying signs. One supporter's sign declared: "We're with you, Hillary." But critics' signs read, "Liar, liar, pants on fire" and "shred no more."

Olympic wrestler killed in Philadelphia

NEWTOWN SQUARE, Pa. (AP) — An heir to the Du Pont chemical company fortune shot an Olympic wrestler to death Friday, then-holed up inside his mansion as SWAT team members converged on his estate, police said.

Police said John E. du Pont was heavily armed and refused to leave a room inside his mansion in suburban Philadelphia.

Dave Schultz, 36, was shot once in the arm and twice in the chest shortly before 3 p.m., and pronounced dead at Mercy Haverford Hospital, police said.

Officers from at least 10 departments and two SWAT teams converged on the estate Friday evening as negotiations continued, said John Boyd, a Delaware County 911 dispatcher.

Schultz was among the best-known amateur wrestlers in the country. He won the 163-pound freestyle gold medal at the 1984 Olympics and the 1983 world championship. He won seven world-level freestyle medals overall.

Suit threatened over conference

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Alabama's attorney general is threatening to sue the University of Alabama unless it cancels a homosexual conference on campus.

Attorney General Jeff Sessions on Thursday joined a chorus of state officials, including Gov. Fob James, who have condemned plans to hold the Southeastern Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Conference in Tuscaloosa on Feb. 16.

State law forbids the use of public facilities to promote lifestyles or activities prohibited by Alabama's sodomy law, but there is no penalty.

Culpeper Clark, a top aide to university President Roger Sayers, said: "As the attorney general knows and is clear and well-established in law, the university has a duty to try on the side of the First Amendment."

Symms named to chair board

WASHINGTON — An interest group representing conservative senior citizens named former Idaho Republican Sen. Steve Symms as chairman of its board of advisers in an attempt to beef up its presence on Capitol Hill, the group said Friday.

Symms, who has been operating his own lobbying firm since he retired from the U.S. Senate in 1992, said the Seniors Coalition's issues mesh well with his beliefs and he plans to contribute his advice and connections.

"The reason I told them I'd give them some advice and help them out is because, as a primary advocacy group for conservative seniors, they believe in what I call the mainstream ideals of a free market economy and responsible but limited government," Symms said from his firm's Alexandria, Va., office.

Don't count Gramm out of election race

Knight-Ridder News Service

MARSHALLTOWN, Iowa — Standing in the aisle of a bus whisking him across the Iowa countryside, Phil Gramm found himself in a strange, unexpected place.

By this point in his long quest for the presidency, the Texas senator thought he would be the only man capable of knocking down front-runner Sen. Bob Dole and winning the GOP nomination.

Then came magazine heir Steve Forbes. A year ago, Gramm raised a record $4 million in one night and cockily boasted that he had the best friend in politics, ready money. Now, he finds himself overtaken by Forbes, a mega-millionaire with ever ready money that keeps on coming and coming.

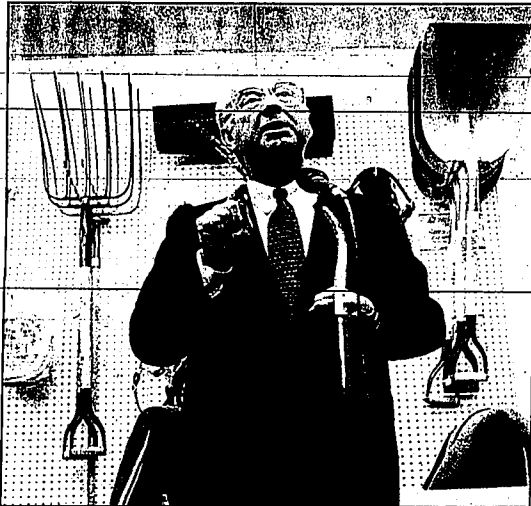

A year ago, Gramm was arguably the most conservative candidate in the campaign, a man who said he was "conservative before conservative was cool." Now, he has been outflanked on the right by Forbes and his flat tax. Gramm, who talked about making poor people get off the welfare wagon, now finds himself defending private homeless shelters against the Forbes flat tax.

Gramm finds himself in the second tier of the Republican campaign, down with television commentator Patrick Buchanan and former Gov. Lamar Alexander of Tennessee, bunched together far behind Dole and Forbes in public opinion polls.

But don't count Gramm out just yet. Dole and Forbes may dominate the public opinion polls. They also may dominate the airwaves with million-dollar TV blitzes. But neither will ever outthrust or outwork Gramm, whose marathon personal campaigning and steely resolve help explain why he still could win the nomination away from the front runners.

"We're starting to win this election," Gramm said, sipping a Diet Coke as the bus sped away from the Marshalltown American Legion hall.

"We're getting bigger and more enthusiastic crowds. We're coming on. We've got the ball, and I'm not going to fumble....When that buzzer goes off, our ball is going to go through the hoop and we're going to win."

GOP presidential candidate Phil Gramm delivers a campaign speech at Martin's Agway store in Lancaster, N.H., Friday.

Some of the state's political professionals agree that Gramm is stronger than the polls indicate.

In a survey of Iowa's 99 Republican county chairmen and chairwomen, ABC News found that the political operatives believe Gramm will vault past Forbes and win a strong second behind Dole in the Iowa caucuses on Feb. 12. They predicted that Dole would win 36 percent, Gramm 23 percent and Forbes 13 percent.

On a recent visit here in the middle of a two-day bus tour, Gramm demonstrated how he is building support here town by town, person by person if necessary.

"He is the most conservative, the most focused, the most consistent," said Rep. Joe Barton, R-Texas, in introducing his colleague to the 100 or so Iowans in the meeting room.

While Forbes talks at length how his flat income tax would cut taxes for all Americans, Gramm talks how it would cut taxes more for the rich than the working people in the American Legion hall.

"How can it make sense if you work with your hands, you pay taxes, but if you don't work with your hands, you don't," he said. "It's just not fair."

Gramm's plan would tax all earnings, including dividends, not just wages as Forbes would do. Moreover, Gramm would continue to allow people to deduct the interest on their mortgages and their donations to charities, unlike Forbes. It would be unfair, he said, to make it more difficult for charities like private homeless shelters to attract donations just as the government cuts back aid to the homeless.

Asked about trade, Gramm said it might be tempting to build a trade wall around the United States—but that would turn farm states like Texas and Iowa that rely on foreign sales into dust bowls. "Instead, he said, farmers should look to increasing exports.

"Half the world does not know the joys of wearing cotton underwear," he said to laughter. But it didn't take long for Gramm to return to the issue that drives him, and his campaign: the federal deficit. He casts himself as the one candidate who is totally devoted to balancing the budget, unwilling to bow to public worries about cuts in federal spending, unwilling to negotiate anything less with President Clinton.

"We said we were going to balance the budget. We did not say we were going to do it only if it were easy," he said to applause.

During the recent Iowa debate, the Des Moines Register newspaper asked 11 undecided Republicans to watch and then share their opinions. Only two said they were swayed to one of the candidates; both picked Gramm.

"These are tiny victories in a campaign being waged statewide here and simultaneously in such places as New Hampshire and Arizona. But Gramm is confident that he wins more support with every appearance.

And he makes plenty.

Admiral expresses regret over sexual harassment probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — A four-star admiral said Friday he meant no harm when he told the father of a female midshipman who was chained to a urinal by male classmates that a photo of the incident caught her smiling.

But Adm. Joseph Frucher, nominated by President Clinton to command U.S. forces in the Pacific, told the Senate Armed Services Committee he could have done a better job in the investigation of the matter.

As head of the Naval Academy in 1989, Frucher said he ordered a thorough investigation of the incident in which several male midshipmen chained a female classmate to a urinal and harassed her.

But he said he regrets telling the woman's father that the victim appeared to be smiling in one photo.

Both sides criticize Clinton court picks

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Liberal court-watchers were befuddled Tuesday night when Senate Majority Leader and presidential contender Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., twice blasted President Clinton for putting "liberal judges on the bench to war with our values," and later talked about "our liberal courts."

The Alliance for Justice has been sharply critical of Clinton as well—but for just the opposite reason. The Alliance, in its annual report, says Clinton has often shied away from putting bona fide liberals on the federal bench for fear of tangling with Senate Republicans. And this year, with Republicans running the Senate, there are signs he's moved even further right.

Meanwhile, the federal judiciary remains under the complete, top-to-bottom domination of Republican judges, who occupy two-thirds of the 837 seats. Presidents Ronald Reagan and George Bush named about 57 percent of the nation's federal judges and six of the nine justices on the Supreme Court.

Clinton so far has appointed 185 federal judges, or about 20 percent of the judiciary, surpassing Bush's 184 appointments. If Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, lets more vacancies this year, (There are 47 vacant seats).

New stroke cure can kill

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Ever so cautiously, hospitals across the United States are gearing up to give stroke victims a new breakthrough treatment that can kill patients as easily as it saves them.

Some experts fear catastrophe. The treatment is extraordinary, and not just because it is the first ever for strokes, the nation's No. 3 killer after heart disease and cancer. While many medical procedures carry a degree of risk, rarely do doctors so often use the words "breakthrough" and "disaster" in the same breath.

"We are all entering this field with a little trepidation," said Dr. Harold P. Adams Jr. of the University of Iowa.

Until now, strokes have been a hopeless condition, at least in the first hours after they happen. But that changed last month. A study in the New England Journal of Medicine showed that TPA, a widely-used heart attack medicine, can stop a stroke in its tracks.

The problem is figuring out which stroke victims should get TPA. When given to the right patients, it clears the obstruction in the brain and prevents permanent damage. Given to the wrong ones, though, it can be fatal.

The TPA discovery is the leading topic of discussion at this week's annual stroke conference sponsored by the American Heart Association.

Farrakhan tours Gadhafi's house

CAIRO, Egypt — Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan toured the ruins of Libyan leader Muammar Gadhafi's old home when he visited Libya this week, the house that was destroyed in a 1986 American air raid on Tripoli.
Gadhafi's 1-year-old adopted daughter was killed in that raid, which came in retaliation for Libya's alleged involvement in a bombing at a German night club frequented by U.S. marines.

Chechnya leader opponent kidnapped

GROZNY, Russia — A prominent opponent of Chechnya's separatist leader was kidnapped Friday on the way home from a rebel-held town.
Lecha Saligov was seized about 500 feet from a Russian roadblock as he traveled with his wife and children from the town of Achkhoy-Martan, 25 miles southwest of Grozny, the ITAR-Tass news agency said.
It said Saligov's family was left unharmed by the side of the road.

Philippine boat, foreign ships trade shots

MANILA, Philippines — The Philippines confirmed Friday that a naval patrol boat engaged in a heavy gun battle this week with two foreign ships that intruded into its waters.
Defense Secretary Renato de Villa described the vessels as pirate ships that target boats between China and Subic Bay, a former U.S. naval base in the Philippines.

Ministers abandon president's cabinet

BOGOTA, Colombia — Two members of President Ernesto Samper's Cabinet have joined the growing list of former allies to abandon him over allegations he knowingly took drug money for his 1994 campaign.
Transportation Minister Juan Gomez and Foreign Trade Minister Luis Alfredo Ramos resigned Thursday. The health minister stepped down earlier this week, saying it was clear the world's largest drug gang brought Samper to power.

Peres gains in public opinion poll

JERUSALEM — A public opinion poll published Friday showed growing support for Prime Minister Shimon Peres, far ahead of opposition leader Benjamin Netanyahu.
A survey by the Gallup organization for the daily newspaper Maariv found that 54.4 percent of Israelis would favor Peres if elections were held now, while 31.2 percent would elect Netanyahu.

Moldovans must choose: Fire or phone?

KISHINEV, Moldova — The high cost of firewood has forced some rural residents to make a tough choice this winter: Fires or phones?
The ITAR-Tass news agency said peasants in some villages have been chopping down telephone poles for firewood.

Man dies in search for Bigfoot in China

BEIJING — A Chinese investigator has died while searching for "Bigfoot" in a remote area of northern China, the official Xinhua News Agency said Friday.
Yu Gong's death in a traffic accident was the most recent in a series of setbacks for Chinese researchers hoping to prove that the legendary creature exists, Xinhua said.
A highly publicized hunt for Bigfoot last spring turned up no important findings, it said. A subsequent plan to launch big balloons carrying infrared cameras to search for the wild man failed, the agency quoted team leader Wang Fangchen as saying.

Leaders meet in Bosnia

PALE, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Leaders of the two halves of postwar Bosnia called Friday for the immediate release of prisoners of war and agreed to work together to ease Serb fears about a reunified Sarajevo.
The meeting itself was significant. It was the first time top rival leaders met on Serb turf since war broke out in April 1992, and it marked another step in efforts to translate a paper peace deal into reality.
A U.S. official, meanwhile, accused the Croatian government of tampering for favorable trial conditions before handing over seven indicted Bosnian Croats to the Yugoslav war crimes tribunal.
The official, speaking in Croatia on condition of anonymity, said Croatia insists that the suspects remain free before or during trial and that, if convicted, serve prison sentences in Croatia.

Mark Buus of Freepress, Ill., pauses during patrol Friday. Christian Charrier, a spokesman for the tribunal in The Hague, Netherlands, said the court "cannot bargain with anyone."

Sri Lanka cracks down on tourists seeking sex

Los Angeles Times
COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — At first the German tourist couldn't believe it. Arrested for wanting to have sex with a young boy in Sri Lanka?
Unheard of.
Not now, in an attempt to deter foreign visitors who fly to this Indian Ocean island seeking sex, sun and sex with children, the government has amended the penal code to punish anyone who has sex with a minor with a possible five to 20 years in prison — the same sentences given pimps.
"It's become fairly high on the government's agenda after years of being a lot lower down," said Peter Dixon, field director for the British charity Save The Children-U.K.
The crackdown makes Sri Lanka the latest Third World country to take steps against sexual tourism involving children, a trade that some countries have winked at, in part because of the income in dollars, yen and other foreign currencies it produces.
In fact, this easy-lying land formerly known as Ceylon has had a reputation as a pedophile's paradise. Social activists estimate that 5,000 children, mostly boys, fly beach resorts and other spots frequented by foreign visitors in search of clients.
In 1994-95, half a dozen foreigners, including the disbelieving German, as well as men from Britain, France, Sweden and Switzerland, were arrested on charges of having sex with minors or intending to do so. None has been sentenced to prison, officials said this week.
But the arrests and the law that was toughened last September, activists say, are sending the right signal.
"For Sri Lanka, it is an unprecedented number (of arrests), and the message has gone out that this country is taking action against this type of criminal activity," Maureen Senviratne, chairwoman of Protecting Environment and Children Everywhere, an advocacy group, told reporters this month.
At least a dozen countries from New Zealand to Iceland have passed laws meant to curb sexual tourism involving their nationals and minors in poorer countries. In a landmark case in June, a Swedish man in his late 60s was convicted by a court in his own country for sexual offenses committed with a 14-year-old boy in Thailand.
About the same time that Sri Lanka's amended penal code took effect, a new U.S. law made it a federal crime for a U.S. resident to travel abroad if the "primary purpose" is to have sex with boys or girls under 18.
In August, an international conference is to be held in Stockholm on how to stem the sexual exploitation of children worldwide. Sexual tourism is just one aspect of the problem.

Rupert hospital ready for overhaul

By John Thompson
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Minidoka Memorial Hospital officials are zeroing in on phase one of a construction project that may bring some major changes to the hospital.

Administrator Randy Holom said a site plan that was reviewed Thursday night by the hospital board remains preliminary and funding has not yet been secured.

But Holom hopes construction on phase one of the project can begin as early as May.

Phase one will include birthing suites with an upgrade to the hospital's obstetrics unit and some other remodeling and reconfiguring.

"This is not an approval, we are just talking an architect come down and talk to us about the general directions of where we should go with the expansion project," he said.

But Holom said the entire site plan includes "some big changes," which may not come to fruition for two or more years.

To finance the project the hospital has two options. Holom said it could use a bond levy, which he and the board opposed, or work with the Idaho Health Facility Authority to set up a financing project.

"How much it will all cost is yet to be determined."

In other hospital board business:

The board discussed an indent contract with Minidoka County. An agreement has not yet been reached over how much the county will reimburse the hospital for indigent costs during this fiscal year. The contract lapsed last October.

Oleen Seamons who was nominated as a new board member by the county commissioners was ratified by the group. Board member Bill Bryant left the hospital board and moved to Idaho Falls recently.

Holom advised the board members on legislation currently being discussed that could effect hospitals.

First snow to go

Plowing runways and taxiways at the airport is a priority for city of Burley road crews.

Burley defends snow-removal priority

By Jennifer Bunch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The city street department has been criticized for allowing snow to accumulate on streets since a series of snow storms buried roads more than a week ago.

But the priority for city street crews when it snows is not cleaning city streets, but the runways at the Burley Municipal Airport.

The department is following a list of priorities and policies set by the city, said Oleen Spurgeon, superintendent of the city's street department.

"If (critics) don't like our policies, they need to work to do something to change them," he said.

The city has two snow plows and one grader, Spurgeon said.

Mayor Frank Bauman said the same type of situation occurred Jan. 19. And today crews had to ready local cemetery roads to prepare for a funeral.

"When you have snow of this amount, it doesn't just impact roads. It impacts everything," Bauman said.

Bauman said he wished the city had enough equipment to tackle every part of town, but this type of heavy snow doesn't hit Burley often.

Considering what road crews have been up against, Bauman said he thought they were doing an excellent job.

Because the airport is federally funded, federal regulations require that it be kept as operational as possible, airport manager Glenn Hall said.

The airport was closed overnight when the snow first hit, Hall said. Since then it has closed temporarily while the runways have been plowed, he said.

A lot of blowing snow will shut the airport down, Hall said.

"If it's snowing to the point that it's a losing battle, then I'll just close the airport," he said.

Pilots who fly small planes stay at home during this kind of weather. A few corporate jets and occasional air ambulances are about the only planes using the airport in this type of weather, he said.

In 30 years of maintaining city roads, Spurgeon said he can just about count on one hand the number of times heavy snows have kept the streets buried. On the city streets, he has learned it is better to try and melt the snow with a mixture of salt and sand than to try and plow it, he said.

Plowing is expensive, can damage cars and can result in accidents, Spurgeon said. On Thursday, a snow plow backing around a corner hit a motorist, who, Spurgeon said, had been following the plow too closely. No one was injured. Drivers simply need to keep their distance from the plows, he said.

On residential streets the city moves softer snow off the top of the pack, Spurgeon said. On main residential routes it is better to let the snow pack once the top layer has been removed, and if the wind is not blowing, dump the salt and sand mixture, he said.

Twin Falls diabetic appeals dismissal of malpractice suit

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls diabetic is appealing a district court decision to dismiss a malpractice suit he filed against Twin Falls internist Dr. A.C. Emery.

Robert Lancaster filed a lawsuit against Emery in November 1994, saying the doctor did not diagnose and treat him for a joint disease called Charcot foot. The disease is a common side effect of diabetes.

In December, Fifth District Judge Dan McGowan dismissed the complaint against Emery.

Lancaster's appeal was filed with the Idaho Supreme Court.

Livestock groups seek to stop reintroduction of wolves temporarily

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — Two Montana livestock groups and a rancher have gone to federal court to halt further wolf reintroduction to Yellowstone National Park and central Idaho.

The groups requested a temporary restraining order on Thursday against the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service continuing the second phase of wolf reintroduction until the program is fully analyzed by the federal government.

U.S. District Judge Jack Shanstrom did not take any immediate action. He set a hearing for Feb. 2.

A federal judge in Wyoming has set hearings to begin a week later on a number of lawsuits filed over a year ago by both the agriculture and environmental interests against the plan to re-establish wolf populations in the Northern Rockies.

In the new suits, the Montana Stockgrowers Association contended that because wolves are naturally repopulating Montana, the Fish and Wildlife Service should evaluate the impact new wolves leaving the park has on naturally occurring wolf packs.

In addition, the wildlife agency's funding has been cut to levels that reduce its wolf monitoring program to levels inadequate to ensure farms and ranches are protected, the stock-growers said.

Another 11 Canadian wolves were put in pens in Yellowstone this week for eventual release this spring. Eight were released into the central Idaho wilderness.

Last year, 14 were released in Yellowstone and 15 in Idaho. One wolf in each group was killed.

Wolf recovery coordinator Ed Bangs, who called the latest lawsuit frustrating, said as many as 18 more are being flown in from Canada for release in both Idaho and Yellowstone in the next several days.

The Montana Stockgrowers Association, Beartooth Stock Association and Vern Keller, a rancher from the Fishtail area, filed the request to prevent further releases in the Yellowstone area until all factors have been considered.

"Losses of calves or lambs at this time of year can be devastating to a producer's herd as well as economically damaging to the rancher during these already tough times," Stockgrowers President George Hammond said. "Natural wolf populations are at a high enough level in Montana that further wolf introduction is not needed."

James and Ann Gold and their sons, Bradley, left, and Daniel, have endured three anti-Semitic attacks in the last week at their rural southern Oregon home.

Attacks worry family

WIMER, Ore. (AP) — The Gold family says dealing with the cougar that came into their yard two years ago was a lot easier than with the people sneering swastikas on their country home in the past week.

"All in all, I'd rather have the cougar," Anne Gold said.

On Jan. 19, someone spray-painted a hate message on the outside wall of their home. Saturday, the Golds discovered a crude swastika drawn on the living room window with tar. On Monday, someone broke into the house and drew a swastika on the bathroom mirror with shaving cream.

James Gold is a script writer. He moved his family to this rural community north of Medford three years ago from California.

"It won't ever be the same here again," said James Gold.

"We're just suspicious of every little thing," his wife said.

The attacks have been particularly hard on their sons, Daniel, 12, and Bradley, 11.

"The other night (Bradley) said, 'You guys be sure to stay up really late and turn the TV on really loud so I know you're awake,'" Anne Gold said.

James Gold said he didn't know what made his family a target. Although the family is Jewish, they have not been active in the Jewish community in southern Oregon, Gold said.

A few cases of anti-Semitism surfaced each year around the Rogue Valley, said Jolee Nelson, past president of Temple Emek Shalom in Ashland. There doesn't seem to be any increase in the number.

One Jewish man who lives a few miles from the Golds said he experienced only one anti-Semitic outburst in the four years he has lived in the area.

Prosecutors will question drug officers

TWIN FALLS — State prosecutors will ask two narcotics officers to explain some financial bookkeeping "discrepancies" that existed prior to an unsolved theft of money, guns and drugs from the Tri-County Drug Task Force a year ago.

Deputy Attorney General Kenneth Stringfield said he is about a month away from determining whether to press charges against anyone. He would not say whether the agents, John Nunez and Don Walden, were suspected of wrongdoing, and said they could decline to meet with him.

"If they can explain away all the problems, then I guess that is the end of that," Stringfield said.

The Tri-County Drug Task Force office in Twin Falls shut down after a Jan. 31 burglary of money, guns and drugs — which have never been recovered, Stringfield said.

Both agents have denied any wrongdoing, and have hired lawyers. Nunez and Walden were placed on administrative leave after the investigation began. Nunez was employed by the Cassia County Sheriff's Department and Walden worked for the Twin Falls Police Department.

The Idaho Criminal Investigation Bureau has spent nearly a year examining more than 300 drug cases filed at the office.

BLM closes roads to wheeled vehicles

BURLEY — In an effort to protect sodden roads, the U.S. Bureau of Land Management has closed a few in Twin Falls and Cassia counties until March 15.

Snowmobiles and other over-the-snow vehicles are allowed, but wheeled vehicles are prohibited on the following roads: Indian Springs, Cherry Springs, North Cottonwood, Curtis Spring, Squaw Joe, West Fork of Dry Creek and East Fork of Dry Creek.

Exceptions will be made for holders of valid BLM leases or permits, or their employees, in the course of duties associated with the lease or permit. The same holds true for employees of valid right-of-way holders.

For more information, call the BLM at 678-5514.

Ceremony marks judge's promotion

POCATELLO (AP) — Gov. Phil Batt, Attorney General Alan Lance and other Republican officials attended the ceremonial swearing in of new 6th District Judge Randy Smith.

Smith, 46, has been on the bench since Jan. 12. But 6th District Administrative Judge Peter McDermott administered the oath of office again on Friday before a crowd that filled a courtroom at the Bannock County Courthouse.

Closed-circuit televisions were set up for other guests in two adjacent courtrooms.

"The Democrats are watching this on closed circuit TVs at the Elks Club," McDermott joked.

Batt appointed Smith, former Idaho Republican Party chairman, to replace Lynn Winnill on the district bench after Winnill became a federal judge.

ers. Sponsors say that would protect those employers from liability for on-the-job injuries.

The child support measure was expected to save the state about $240,000 in welfare assistance payments each year. The workers compensation bill could cost over $600,000. Both must still be approved by the House.

"To successfully reform the welfare system in Idaho, it's going to take every Idahoan," said Sen. Gordon Crow, R-Coeur d'Alene.

Opposition to the child support measure was apparently due to concerns that requiring the parents of minor children to pay support for their grandchildren could encourage minors to engage in promiscuous sex.

Sen. Lin Whitworth, D-Pocatello, warned that without strict supervision the workers compensation measure bill could be taken advantage of by unscrupulous employers.

The governor's task force made 44 recommendations in all. Many of them can be implemented administratively, but Batt has said he wants legislative endorsement of the entire scheme.

While he hopes the package will eventually save the state money, Batt has said the primary goal is to create a system that will encourage people to move off of the welfare roles.

Eagles' Rhodes wins NFL Coach of the Year honor

PHOENIX — It takes something extraordinary to make Ray Rhodes similar. It may have happened Thursday when he was selected the NFL's Coach of the Year.

In his first season, Rhodes guided the rebuilding Philadelphia Eagles to a surprising 10-6 record and an opening-round playoff win over Detroit.

Although it was hard to tell if Rhodes, a no-nonsense type, was grinning or just grimacing from the glare of television lights, he said he was truly moved by "the magnitude of the award."

Rhodes also won Associated Press NFL Coach of the Year designation last month in a vote of a panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Magic Johnson checks out requirements for comeback

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Magic vs. Michael? Maybe. Magic Johnson, who has often hinted since retiring for the second time that he might suit up again for the Los Angeles Lakers, has spoken with both the team and the NBA about coming back.

The New York Post reported Friday that Johnson has "all but guaranteed" the Lakers that he will be in uniform next Friday at the Forum when Los Angeles meets the Chicago Bulls and Michael Jordan, who himself returned last season after a whirl at baseball.

CSI flies past Snow

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It kinda looked like the good old days when College of Southern Idaho jumped into a double-digit lead in the first six minutes and went on to beat the Snow Badgers 88-73 Friday night.

But Coach Steve Irons wasn't all that pleased because "we didn't sustain. At halftime we talked about sustaining."

So that becomes a buzzword for the Golden Eagles after a week of heavy emphasis on rebounding and inside punch. Irons was a little more pleased with those results, prompted by spotty work in those departments last weekend.

"We were a lot more active on the boards tonight," he confirmed. "We got some offensive rebounds and got our hands on a top of rebounds. Now we have to convert that effort into getting those into our hands."

The Eagles were out-rebounded 17-7 on the offensive glass in dropping a six-point decision to Utah Valley last week. This time the Eagles had 16 offensive boards in the second half and limited the Badgers to five for the night.

But there was little doubt that CSI, as Coach Irons said, "spurred as it times an offense. George (Brown) got us into our offense early in the game but it wasn't consistent. And sustaining on offense, defense and rebounding remains a must. We have to find a lot of answers."

But for the first seven minutes it was fun to be an Eagle. George Brown forced all the possessions up court, leading to

Steelers ready for game

The Associated Press

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — The Pittsburgh Steelers are ready for the Super Bowl — Greg Lloyd is throwing his helmet again.

Lloyd, whose helmet tosses are a practice field fixture, let loose with another fling Friday during the Steelers' 1-hour, 30-minute practice at Scottsdale Community College.

Lloyd was upset at being kicked in the shin and toe while tackling practice squad running back LaMonte Coleman. Lloyd briefly clutched at his left leg, but returned to practice a few minutes later with his pants leg pulled up.

"His helmet took a bigger beating than his shin or his toe," coach Bill Cowher said.

The practice was the Steelers' last full-scale workout before Sunday's game against the Cowboys. They will stage only a brief walkthrough Saturday at Sun Devil Stadium.

"They are ready to play," Cowher said.

Haley practices with Cowboys' 1st team

The Associated Press

TEMPE, Ariz. — Charles Haley practiced with the Cowboys' first team Friday and coach Barry Switzer said there's a chance the Dallas defensive end could be in for up to 35 plays in Sunday's Super Bowl.

Haley, who has been slowed by the flu since last week, hasn't played since undergoing back surgery for a herniated disc Dec. 6.

Sports writers pick Dallas to win big game

The Associated Press and The Times-News

TEMPE, Ariz. — Super Bowl picks by Times-News sports editor Brad Bowlin and AP sports writers covering Sunday's game between the Dallas Cowboys and Pittsburgh Steelers.

By Dave Goldberg
The Steelers will beat the Cowboys for two reasons. The first is that nobody expects them to, leaving Dallas a bit too cocky. The second is Yancey Thigpen, their Pro Bowl wide receiver.

Super Bowl picks

Had Thigpen held on to a last-second pass in the end zone at Green Bay, the Steelers would be coming in with an 11-game winning streak and the Cowboys would be favored by one touchdown instead of two.

All statistics regular season

The Pittsburgh Steelers should have no trouble extending the AFC's futility streak to a dirty dozen. They've displayed no convincing evidence in the postseason that they can beat the Cowboys.

Pittsburgh has played well in spurts during the playoffs, particularly in the first half against Buffalo. But a spotty effort against an Indianapolis team that, despite its surprising run, doesn't measure up to Dallas in any area, bodes poorly for the Steelers.

To win, the Steelers must shut down Emmitt Smith, Troy Aikman, Michael Irvin and the rest of the formidable Dallas attack. It could happen on the ground, where Pittsburgh allowed 88 yards a game in 1995. It could happen in the air if Greg Lloyd and Kevin Greene can produce some pressure.

It won't. The Cowboys broke out from their funk at the end of the season and have been impressive in the playoffs. Their line is big, strong and can handle what the Steelers try to do.

The Steelers will score some points; everybody does on Dallas. They

Hagerman eliminates Oakley in Southside

By Karen Baument
Times-News writer

MURTAUGH - Friday's Class A-4 Southside sub-district girls' basketball tournament matchup between Oakley and Hagerman turned into the kind of game you hate to see anybody lose.

"But somebody had to, and it was Oakley going home for the season.

The Pirates play Murtaugh at 7:30 p.m. tonight in another loser-out game. The winner advances to the championship, against Raft River Monday at 7:30 p.m.

The road through the loser's bracket has been long for second-seeded Hagerman, which lost in the opening round to No. 3 Oakley. But Hagerman coach Kim Lemmon said his girls did not have to revenge scribbled on their minds Friday.

"We're just here to play basketball," Lemmon said. "Oakley's a good team."

Both teams took the floor with a calculated, controlled offense. The two teams worked the ball around and dishied inside whenever possible.

By first quarter's end, Hagerman held a 14-10 lead and Oakley's horse, Catherine Hale, had yet to score.

Still her presence is always felt. By night's end, Hale accumulated 12 rebounds, two steals, four assists, three blocks and 24 points on 53 percent field goal shooting.

"And you can't defend her by just letting her have her points and focus on the others," Lemmon said. "We're always conscious of her," Lemmon said. "We did a lot of stuff to get her to run."

Girls' high school basketball

Trailing 20-12 with three minutes left in the second quarter, Hale fueled a Homer comeback.

She drove and scored, she passed to Kellyrae Severe and she scored, she stole the ball and dishied off to Tawny Archibald for the score and she knocked down a 3-pointer to pull Oakley within 21-22 with less than a minute to play.

A 3-pointer at the buzzer by Anna Martin gave Hagerman the 25-21 halftime lead.

Oakley hung around for awhile in the second half but timely field goals and solid free throw shooting by Lindsay Lemmon and the Pirates sealed Oakley's fate.

Just as the game seemed over, Hale performed a little more magic. Oakley fell behind 49-38 with 1:37 left in the game. Hale drove down the floor, pulled up and drained a 3-pointer. Within 16 seconds she had done it again, pulling the Hornets within five points.

But a worn out Hale managed only one more field goal as Hagerman coasted out from the free throw line.

In the last three minutes, Lemmon hit 5-of-6 from the free throw line for Hagerman.

In the junior varsity portion of the tournament, Raft River defeated Hagerman and Hagerman beat Murtaugh to advance. The two winners meet Monday at 6 p.m. in the championship.

Highland 3-pointers carry Rams over Burley

By Kevin Miller
Times-News writer

BURLEY - Highland took the game to new heights and depths, reaching above the rim and beyond the standard high school three-point arc to dominate the Bobcats Friday.

Burley (5-9 overall, 1-5 conference) was never closer than three points and trailed by as many as 25, suffering its fifth straight Region III loss 76-61.

The Rams battered the Bobcats with an offensive arsenal including a dunk, passes off the backboard, above the rim tip-ins, and three-pointers from the sidelines.

Looked at during the preseason as challengers for the conference title, the Bobcats will have to knock off Minico and Twin Falls to crawl out of the cellar.

"We're not a bad club," Burley coach Bill Cowell lamented after his team's worst loss of the season. "Right now, we just get ourselves into bad situations on the floor."

The Bobcats walked into a bad situation in the first quarter when the Rams (5-2 conference) came out hitting everything they put up. After missing its first two shots, Highland hit six straight field goals, starting with a Troy Bell 3-pointer, the first points of the game.

Post Ryker Kerbs did his best to keep Burley close. Kerbs scored six of his 10 points in the opening period when the Bobcats fell behind 16-9.

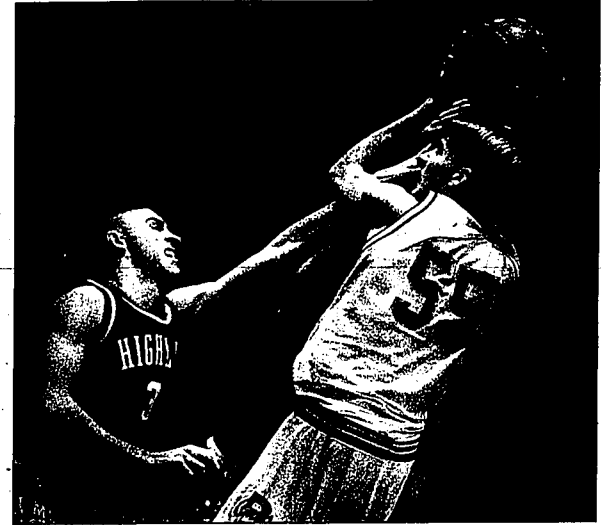

But Highland slowly distanced itself from Burley, going up by 10 points midway through the second quarter after consecutive Bobcat turnovers.

"I thought the kids played hard, but we just didn't execute anything tonight," Cowell said.

Burley never scored back-to-back baskets until the final seconds of the third quarter. Todd Page hit one of his five treys with 26 seconds left in the period.

By then Highland was up 17 points, and Ram coach Chris Frost was tinkering with combinations of reserves and starters on the floor.

Most of Burley's offensive production came off the bench. Page led the Bobcats with 15 points, all on treys. Tension Triple dropped in 26 for Highland.

Burley post Ryker Kerbs (55) is fouled by Highland's Brian Maw in the first half of the Bobcats' 76-61 loss Friday.

DIETRICH - The visiting Shoshone Indians managed to break away from a stubborn Dietrich squad Friday night, to take a 72-65 win in Division A-4 Northside boys' action.

Despite outstanding nights by junior Dietrich guard Bryce McCowan and teammate Andy Shaw, who scored 19 and 23 points, respectively, they were unable to contain Indian standout Brian Ross. Shoshone opened its lead to 17 points early in the fourth period, but six Red Bull three-point shots resolute.

In the earlier game, Shoshone also won the junior varsity contest.

RICHPFIELD - The Richfield Tigers combined deadly full-court defense and blistering inside-outside shooting from teammates Holland, Scott Perkes and Popper, to defeat the visiting Bliss Bears 80-63 Friday evening in A-4 Northside play.

Holland's 32 points led all scorers, as did his four three-point buckets. He had nine points in both the first and second periods. Dave Beardsline had 14 for the Bears, as did Wood.

In junior varsity play, Bliss won two games.

Leonard leads tourney by 2 after 3rd round

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) - Justin Leonard pulled away from a legist atop the leader board Friday with two birdies in the last four holes and took a two-shot lead after three rounds of the Phoenix Open.

Leonard, a non-winner his two previous years on the Tour, had an eagle during his 5-under-par round of 66 to finish 54 holes at 13-under 200.

Don Pooley, Tom Scherrer and Phil Mickelson were tied for second at 202, with second-round leader Woody Austin, Jesper Parnevik and Kenny Perry at 204.

Tom Watson, Blaine McCallister, Scott Hoch, John Luckie, Roberto Medina and Gary Van Dyke all were behind Parnevik, who parred the first five holes while the leaders pulled away.

Leonard made a big leap on No. 15, a 501-yard par-5 with an island green. He cleared the water with a 4-iron second shot that stopped 20 feet from the pin, then sank it with a 7-iron.

He began the round at 8-under, two shots behind Austin and one behind Parnevik, who also started on No. 10, bogged the seventh hole to leave Leonard alone in the lead.

After two pars, Leonard finished with a 7-foot putt for birdie on No. 9. He began the round at 8-under, two shots behind Austin and one behind Parnevik, who also started on No. 10, bogged the seventh hole to leave Leonard alone in the lead.

Pocatello delivers 71-55 loss to Twin Falls

The Times-News

POCATELLO - The Indians blistered the net from three-point range and handed Twin Falls a crucial Region III boys' basketball loss Friday night.

Pocatello avenged a 20-point defeat on the Bruins' home floor by hitting eight bombs and dropped Twin Falls into second place in the league at 3-2.

Twin Falls, which got 12 points from Kylan Peterson and 11 apiece from Ryan Hamilton and Scott Seaton, will try to get back on track at Minico Monday night.

Pocatello also won the junior varsity game.

Kimberly 49, Grants Perry 42
KIMBERLY - The Bulldogs overcame a sluggish performance to beat Grants Perry 42-31 Friday night in the final period.

Kimberly coach Roger Keller said, "The Dogs made it 11-4 overall, 6-2 in conference. Grants Perry is 4-10 and 0-2."

Castelford 75, Raft River 63

CASTLEFORD - A steadily improving Castelford team raised its Magic Valley Conference mark to 4-2 with a strong third-quarter surge.

HAZELTON - The Vikings outdressed Gooding in a physical, defensive struggle that dropped the Senators back into the Canyon Conference pack.

"Neither team scored the nets tonight," Valley coach Roger Canessa said, "but I was pleased with our defense. It really was a good game."

The Vikings (10-4 overall, 5-4 conference) played nine rebounds in addition to a game-high 15 points from Steve Slaton.

The Senators drop to 12-4, 5-2. Gooding won the junior varsity game and Valley took the first preliminary.

Oakley 68, Murtaugh 55
OAKLEY - The Hornets built a 20-point lead in the second half and hung on from the free-throw line to remain in the Magic Valley Conference lead.

Murtaugh led a barrage of three-pointers from Mike Puntik, climbed back to within nine points before Oakley pushed the lead again.

Matt Smith and Taylor Critchfield each pulled down 10 rebounds for Oakley (14-2, 5-1) and combined for 47 points.

Murtaugh won the junior varsity game, 55-43.

Valley, Kimberly survive in Canyon tourney

The Times-News

GOODING - The two teams who represented the Canyon Conference in last year's Class A-3 state basketball tournament survived the District 4 tourney Friday night, but at least one of them won't be going back.

That's because the Valley Vikings and Kimberly Bulldogs will meet Monday night in another loser-out contest for the right to keep playing.

The Vikings eliminated Filer, 51-33 at the Gooding gym Friday night, and Kimberly knocked out Declo, 51-48.

Christy Demter's 23 points included four crucial three-pointers, which propelled the Vikings out of a four-point halftime lead into comfortable control of the game, which broke open for the Vikings in the fourth quarter.

The Wildcats kept things close through the first half, and even halfway through the second half had a chance to hang an upset on Valley. But, when Cindy Sutherland and Kara Coon fouled out late, the Wildcats seemed to lose their poise and Demter and her teammates took charge.

Minico wrestlers defeat Highland

The Times-News

POCATELLO - The Spartans overcame problems in the lower weight classes to improve their dual meet record to 5-2, with a 38-27 decision over Highland.

"We lost some we really should've had lost," Minico coach Brad Cooper said, noting that two of his wrestlers were ahead on points before getting pinned in the final round. "We gave up four pins; that's way too many."

Minico's victory to the Magic Valley Classic treads to Wendell and will face Bonnevillene next week.

Nets tangle Hornets

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP)—Kennedy Gill stole the spotlight from Jerry Anderson in his return to New Jersey by scoring a season-high 30 to lead the Nets to a 115-107 victory over the Hornets on Friday night.

The game was the first between the clubs since last week's trade that sent Anderson and Gerald Glass to New Jersey and Khalid Reeves to Charlotte.

The New Jersey overcame an early 12-point deficit to build a 20-point lead heading into the fourth quarter, and then almost held it. Glen Rice, who scored 34 points, personally outscored New Jersey 14-2 in a fourth quarter that drew the Hornets to within a 106-104 with 4:02 to play.

Pro basketball

33-32 rebounding advantage in the game. Vernon Maxwell led 26 points and Clarence Westermann 23 for Philadelphia, whose record stands at 10-23. The Nets stand at 22-23.

Sutton had a season-high 13 points for Philadelphia, which has now lost nine straight home games.

Suns 107, Bucks 97

MILWAUKEE — Charles Barkley got outscored by Philadelphia's Clarence Westermann 23 for Philadelphia, whose record stands at 10-23. The Nets stand at 22-23.

Rookie Michael Finley, the University of Wisconsin's career scoring leader, had 16 points in his return, including two key free throws with 1:20 left. He had also mimmed a 20-point third-quarter effort to 98-94.

After Barkley rebounded an errant 3-pointer by Glenn Robinson, A.C. Green scored five straight points to seal Phoenix's 10th straight victory over the Bucks, their fifth consecutive in Milwaukee.

Bulls 102, Heat 80

CHICAGO — The Chicago Bulls tied a franchise record with their 14th straight victory Friday night, using a strong defense to protect Michael Jordan and Dennis Rodman's 25 points.

The Bulls forced 26 turnovers, held Miami to a nine first-half field goals in building a 48-29 lead and limited Heat center Alton Roundfower to 12 points, 13 under his average.

Chicago, now 37-3, also won 14 in a row from Nov. 6, 1991, to Dec. 7, 1991, en route to the second of three straight NBA titles.

Jordan, coming off a season-long 12-point performance against Vancouver, had 13 in the first half Friday night, and the game was over in a hurry.

Spurs 87, Trail Blazers 83

SAN ANTONIO — David Robinson had 20 points and 21 rebounds and Chuck Person made consecutive 3-pointers in the fourth quarter to put San Antonio ahead for good as the Spurs beat Portland 87-83 Friday night.

With the second of 68-68 with eight minutes left, Person connected twice from behind the arc to give San Antonio a 76-69 lead. The Spurs never rallied again.

Lakers 100, 76ers 88

PHILADELPHIA — Eddie Cedeallos scored 31 points and Nick Van Exel added 29 in the Los Angeles Lakers' deal Philadelphia its eighth straight loss.

Elden Campbell added 14 points and a career-high 18 rebounds for Los Angeles, who posted a

Pacers 107, Celtics 90

BOSTON — Derrick McKee scored 23 points and Reggie Miller contributed 22 points each as the Indiana Pacers beat the Boston Celtics.

The win extended Indiana's win streak to five games. They have won four of their last five on the road and have beaten Boston 13 of the last 15 times the two teams have met.

Dio Ripa led Boston with 26 points and seven rebounds. Drew Brown came off the Celtics' bench to get 13 points and four assists.

Hawks 96, Magic 84

ATLANTA — The Atlanta Hawks won their 10th straight game over the Orlando Magic in the second half as they pulled away for a victory over the Orlando Magic.

Scottie Pippen scored 22 points and Mookie Blaylock added 21 for Atlanta, but once again it was the Hawks defense which decided the game. O'Neal added 12 points in the first quarter and 16 in the opening half, managed only four points in the final two periods.

Finding salvation

Salvation Army captain finds Jesus, place in mission group

"Preach the Gospel at all times ... if necessary, use words."
— St. Francis of Assisi

By Julie M. McKinnon
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — When a drunk stumbles out of his mission's doors instead of staying for an Alcoholics Anonymous meeting, Salvation Army Capt. Roger Davis doesn't give up.

Davis keeps trying to help whomever he can, however he can, hoping the drunk — and others — will be saved from physical and spiritual peril.

That's what happened to Davis 17 years ago, when the newly married Twin Falls native was working in Las Vegas as a medical worker by day and a band member by night.

"You don't stop because God didn't stop with me," 45-year-old Davis said earlier this week at the Salvation Army's Fourth Avenue North mission.

For 12 years, Davis battled with alcohol. The husband and father of two also used whatever drugs were around while playing bass guitar.

"I had band-member friends, I had bartenders telling me I gotta take it easy — 'You're going to kill yourself,'" recalled Davis, who smoked four to five packs of cigarettes daily.

He figured he needed problems to be a really soulful musician. And substance abuse, Davis reasoned for three years, was helping him work two jobs.

"I claimed I was doing it all for my family," he said. "I never saw them. The only time I saw them was when I came home to sleep. My day off was only working one job."

He added, "Sin has results, not only for the individuals, but for those around them."

Davis' salvation

Davis' marriage was in trouble. He and his wife, Marilyn Davis, sold their Las Vegas home and moved to Buhl in 1978 in hopes of breaking his substance-abuse cycle.

The effort lasted just five months before they returned to Vegas. "It doesn't work — it's not change of location that's going to change your problems," Roger Davis said.

Soon one of Davis' uncles came to visit, saying the couple needed to have Jesus in their life.

Marilyn Davis reluctantly agreed to go to a small, independent Pentecostal church for Wednesday night services.

"I was pretty impressed," said Marilyn Davis, who was raised Protestant and converted to Catholicism to marry her first husband, an alcoholic she divorced after they moved to the United States from Scotland.

The Davises remember the following Sunday morning differently, but the outcome of both of their stories is the same: A hung-over Roger Davis, who came home at 6 a.m., was stone-cold sober a half hour into the 10:30 a.m. service.

"It was like it was just tailored for me and my life," Roger Davis said. "That Sunday morning, it's like everything fell into place. I knew all about Jesus, but I didn't know him."

Sobering up

That night at work, Roger Davis passed by the usual first drink a bartender slid down the bar once Davis walked into the room. As those in the bar laughed, he turned up and got an orange juice.

Davis started reading the Bible as much as possible, even pulling out the New Testament during band breaks. And he and Marilyn decided they had to get out of Vegas.

Eight months after the Davises were saved, they moved to Castletford and helped start a Pentecostal church. That continued until 1982, with Roger Davis at a Twin Falls Canal Company employee — serving as pastor for a year.

Then, in December of 1982, Marilyn Davis heard a Salvation Army plea for volunteer help on the radio. She helped out and started going to the mission's women's group meetings.

"But it was another year before Roger Davis was convinced that his quest for a place to serve was leading him to the Salvation Army."

Salvation Army

A year after Marilyn Davis first got involved, Roger Davis was delivering Christmas-food boxes in Castletford for the Salvation Army.

When Davis went to the door of a 15-foot travel trailer not heated for winter, Davis was hooked by a child's innocent reaction: "See Mom — I told you Jesus wouldn't let us down."

The Davises sold their house, gave all of their household goods to the Salvation Army Thrift Store and moved to Eugene, Ore., to help with a corps there. In 1985, they entered the Salvation Army's intensive 21-month

MIKE SALSURBY/Times-News

After leaving his substance-abuse problems, Roger Davis attended the Salvation Army training school with his wife, Marilyn, and both became Salvation Army captains.

training school in Los Angeles and both became Salvation Army captains.

They spent a year assisting the Salvation Army in Boise before heading their own mission in Baker City, Ore., for four years to keep that failing corps alive.

Then, even though officers aren't normally sent back to the place they started; the Davises were sent back to Twin Falls in 1992.

Twin Falls

When people of all religious backgrounds need help, they go to the Salvation Army — and to the Davises and their 12 devoted employees.

The group spends 60 to 80 hours a week fixing food boxes, serving free lunches, counseling people, working — and playing — with youngsters after school, coordinating volunteers, leading meetings, overseeing the thrift store, keeping the mission's budget in line and doing whatever else is needed.

"When you're dealing with people, your schedule has to fit their schedules," Roger Davis said. "Underlying all the stuff that we do is our faith. If our faith wasn't strong, I don't think we could handle the load."

"It really is a life of service."

Most people associate the Salvation Army just with social services. But the mission also has a chapel, where about 35 people of varied economic levels worship weekly, and Bible studies are held there.

Roger Davis preaches from an Orthodox Bible and incorporates other religious beliefs and traditions. At the start of every Sunday worship service, Marilyn Davis lights Sabbath candles.

"We try to learn from every group and still maintain our Salvationist traditions as well," said Roger Davis, adding that he strives to show the link between Judaism and Christianity.

And Roger Davis does not condemn others for their faults.

"We all have our demons that we struggle with, and I think that's there for a reason," said Roger Davis, who is overweight. "I still have to battle that (the weight). I just don't have to battle it with alcohol, drugs, smoking."

Ex-treasurer of Episcopal Church admits embezzling over $1.5 million

The Associated Press

NEWARK, N.J. — The former treasurer of the Episcopal Church admitted in court Wednesday that she embezzled more than $1.5 million, but claimed she is mentally ill and can't even remember some of what she did.

Ellen F. Cooke, 52, said she deposited church checks in her own account, misused her church credit card and used church checks to pay for private schools attended by her children.

Cooke, whose husband is a former Episcopal priest, worked at church headquarters in New York from 1986 to 1995. She pleaded guilty to federal charges of transferring stolen money and tax evasion during the last four years of her tenure.

Cooke faces about three years in prison and could be fined twice the amount stolen when sentenced April 29.

Mrs. Cooke was dismissed a year ago by the presiding bishop of the 2.5 million-member church after a pattern of "manipulative and autocratic" behavior, James H. Thrall, a church spokesman.

"There was no hint of embezzlement at that point," Thrall said. It was only after Mrs. Cooke submitted a request for $86,000 in back-vacation pay that "red flags went up," he said.

Cooke may seek a lesser term because she is being treated by a psychiatrist for what the defense describes as "bipolar mood disorder," which causes mood swings. Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert L. Ernst said the government wants its own psychiatrist to examine Cooke.

Her lawyer, Elaine Cooke, told U.S. District Judge Maryanne Trump Barry that Cooke cannot recall certain events because of the disorder but that she was still competent to enter a plea.

Ellen F. Cooke, center, the former treasurer of the Episcopal Church of United States, walks to the federal courthouse in Newark, N.J., on Wednesday with her attorney, Plato Cacheris, and the rest of her defense team.

Cacheris is Cooke's psychiatrist. "I just can't say for sure that I knew at the time that I knew what I was doing was wrong, and I accept responsibility," she said.

Cooke's husband, Nicholas, was rector of a church in Montclair until the couple moved to Virginia last year, where he served at a McLean church before resigning from the priesthood.

Florida school will let kids bring Bibles

Orlando Sentinel

ORLANDO, Fla. — Orange County schools will adopt presidential guidelines on religion in schools and pay legal fees to settle a lawsuit with a fifth grader who was ordered not to bring his Bible to school.

All of Orange County's principals will receive copies of President Clinton's guidelines and will be required to follow them, Superintendent Donald Shaw said Wednesday. The school district also will pay the boy's $10,000 legal fees.

"It clarifies that yes, children can bring the Bible to school," Shaw said of the guidelines.

Joshua Burton was a fourth grader at Columbia Elementary School when the controversy arose over his Bible last March. Now an 11-year-old fifth grader at Waterford Lakes Elementary in east Orange County, he has been waiting to bring his Bible to school until his case was resolved, said his mother, Kathy Burton. "I'm glad we've reached an agreement," Burton said. "And, I'm glad it's going to be easier for other children who wish to bring their religious literature to school without the fear of the teacher condemning them or ridiculing them openly."

The controversy began last March when Joshua's teacher at Columbia, Margaret Lang, said she caught him reading the Bible silently when the class was supposed to be doing schoolwork. The boy claimed he was reading the Bible during free time. Another time, Mrs. Lang said, she saw the boy reading the Bible aloud outside class. The teacher told Joshua he could no longer bring the Bible to school.

Orlando attorney Matthew D. Staver filed suit on Joshua's behalf last March in U.S. District Court against Lang, Columbia Principal Sylvia Boyd and the school system.

Staver contended Joshua's rights to free speech and to exercise his religion were violated.

Be prepared, then you won't have to worry

Where were you during the blizzard (or should we say "blizzards") of 1986?

Where I live, we were enjoying an unusually balmy January when the eastern United States was blasted by several feet of the cold, wet stuff. Too bad, we thought as we watched news footage of cars sliding off roads and commuters cross-country skiing through downtown Manhattan. Where's the bean dip?

ValueSpeak
Joseph Walker

Then Mother Nature blasted us. We got snow. We got wind. We got our backs from shoveling three or four times a day. We got cocky weathercasters.

"Yep, that was some blizzard out there," they all said, a veritable Greek chorus of meteorology. "We said it would snow! We are great and powerful weather wizards!"

Of course, we knew it would snow eventually — prognosticated or not. It was just a matter of when and how much, and whether or not it would come at a time when we happened to have food in the house so we wouldn't have to slide down to the store to get something for dinner. If you live some place that doesn't get snow, there's never stuff lurking in the "not if but when" category — hurricanes, tornadoes, earthquakes, income taxes. The question isn't whether we will experience the challenges imposed upon us by natural calamity. The question is, "Will we be prepared for those challenges when (and if) they occur?"

For many of us, the concept of preparedness hasn't entered our minds much since we first heard the story of the ant and the grasshopper. You remember that one, don't you? The grasshopper prefers to sing and dance and play away the summer while the ant works hard to store the food he will need to last through the winter. Of course, the grasshopper has a lot more fun than the ant; until the snow falls and he finds himself out in the cold, hungry and homeless.

Do the characters sound familiar? A lot of us can relate to the grasshopper since we're inclined to live life for today without giving much thought to preparing for tomorrow. And we probably know a few people who, like that ant, seem to be so busy preparing for tomorrow that they never really have time to enjoy today. But isn't there a happy medium somewhere, an approach to preparedness that stops short of boarding up the windows and trying to completely shut out the world and its natural — and unnatural — vicissitudes?

I think there is. We can prepare for any eventuality just as we prepare for anything else in life — one step at a time.

First, we can make sure everyone in the household knows what to do in the immediate aftermath of disaster. Escape plans should be practiced regularly, along with recitations of where to go, what to turn off, how to get help and how to handle critical first-aid problems until help arrives.

Then we can make sure we always have on hand enough food, fuel, clothing and money to see us through for a few snow-bound days — and store it in a way that we can pick it up and take it with us quickly and easily if we're forced to evacuate for any reason. Then we can expand our supplies to include provisions for a couple of weeks. Then a couple of months. Then — who knows? — maybe even six months or a year.

And then we can forget about it. Aside from an occasional update and rotation of food, clothes and batteries, you don't need to worry so much about snowstorms, earthquakes, floods or fires (or, for that matter, the ups and downs of the economy), because you're prepared.

Like a wise man once said, "If you're prepared, you don't need to fear."

Even if you're not, by nature, an ant.

Pope visits Central America to help church

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — When Pope John Paul II first visited Central America, Nicaragua was in the grips of a counterrevolutionary uprising and civil wars raged in Guatemala and El Salvador.

The Salvadoran war was 40 months old during that trip in March 1983.

The far-older Guatemalan conflict was nearing its bloody high point. U.S.-backed Contra guerrillas battled Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

The wars have ended in all but Guatemala, and the pontiff is returning in hopes of fortifying the tense peace and easing the widespread poverty that underlay a decade of conflict.

Those are daunting goals for his Feb. 5-12 trip to Guatemala, Nicaragua, El Salvador and, en route home, Venezuela.

In Guatemala, fighting sputters on despite peace talks. In El Salvador and Nicaragua, the rancor that produced wars in which tens of thousands died still prevails even though the shooting has stopped and democracy is the rule.

Crime is soaring. Human rights abuses continue. Unemployment tops 40 percent in the region.

"In Guatemala, we still do not have peace," said Monsignor Rios Montt, a church leader in Guatemala City. "We have poverty, lack of social justice. We have governments that do not act to remedy the situation."

Catholic leaders in Guatemala are looking to the pope's visit to shore up the church's standing and blunt the proliferation of evangelical groups backed by U.S. money and television technology.

Some estimates say as many as 25 percent of Guatemalans are now Protestants. Few rural villages in the region are without at least one small stucco evangelical church.

The Catholic Church faces threats of a different kind in Nicaragua.

Alarmed by a recent spate of bombings aimed at Catholic churches and organizations, Nicaragua is mobilizing thousands of police and security officers for the pope's Feb. 7 visit to Managua.

Missionaries

Bingham

Eight young people from the Magic Valley area have been called to serve missions for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

- Sister Lesale Bingham will serve for 18 months in the Arkansas Little Rock Mission. She will speak in sacrament meeting at 12:30 p.m. Sunday at the Jerome 3rd Ward chapel, 825 E. Ave. B, and will enter the Mission Training Center in Provo, Utah, Feb. 7.

Muslims enter holy month of prayer

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite fier baby face and dainty headscarf, 10-year-old Layla Elsayd's face looked fully adult, as she proudly told her classmates at an Arabic class in Manhattan that she had not had anything to eat or drink all day.

Elsayd was observing Ramadan, the ninth month of the Islamic calendar, which begins with the sighting of the new moon. It is a time of abstinence and purification for Muslims, who are forbidden to eat, drink, smoke or have sexual intercourse between sunrise and sunset for the entire month.

Ramadan celebrates the month in which God revealed the Koran, Islam's holy book, to the prophet Mohammed. Muslims believe God requires them to fast to learn patience and rise above their physical needs.

The United States contains about 1.5 million Muslims and 5 million Muslims, said Ibrahim Hooper, a spokesman for the Council on American-Islamic Relations in Washington, D.C.

Many American Muslims began the month Monday, while Egypt, Saudi Arabia and several major mosques in the United States have said that Sunday was the first day of the new moon, and therefore the start of Ramadan.

The mood at The Islamic Cultural Center, the biggest mosque in New York, was one of festivity — and chaos — on Sunday. The phone rang off the hook and dozens of Muslims pulled up to the huge domed building and rushed in to make inquiries.

Each day of the month, a section of the Koran is read, and the month culminates after about 30 days with a completion of the reading and a feast to celebrate the end of Ramadan.

Each day, people awake before dawn for a large breakfast, and they do not eat again until the day ends. At sunset, families and friends join together to break the fast, often with dates or apricots.

Then, they share a large meal, often accompanied by Middle Eastern delicacies and pastries.

The month has a special meaning for Muslim children, whose veils and fasting make them stand out in school, and who say they often have to contend with anti-Muslim slurs.

Presidential candidates seek saintly support

By Marilyn Schwartz
Dallas Morning News

Celebrity politics is taking on a whole new dimension. And aren't we lucky! It's happening just in time for the latest presidential elections.

By now we're used to all the glitzy movie-star endorsements, Barbara Streisand sings for the Democrats, Arnold Schwarzenegger flexes his muscles for the Republicans. Bruce Willis asks us to vote one way, Bruce Springsteen another.

Ho hum, who even listens anymore! Politics is becoming to sound like an evening at Planet Hollywood.

But now, a whole new celebrity is being brought in the political arena — Mother Teresa! You read this right — Mother Teresa!

Watching the Iowa Republican presidential debates last weekend, I almost fell off my chair.

Commentary

The candidates weren't trying to dazzle me with who was going to solve crime or the situation in Bosnia or giving me insights into the budget crunch.

Oh no.

These guys were killing themselves over dropping the name of Mother Teresa.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole pointed out he was so pro-life that he had recently talked to Mother Teresa on the telephone. Wow. Now who could beat that?

Even Elizabeth Taylor heading a fund-raising dinner couldn't top that.

But wait just a minute, Rep. Bob Dornan of California wasn't going to be outdone. He just looked smug and dropped his own bombshell.

Dornan said he was so pro-life he had actually met with Mother Teresa in person.

It was a real political moment. But frankly, I was a little confused. I couldn't decide if those guys were running for president or for sainthood.

And poor Mother Teresa, even a saintly figure like her is not safe from political backlash once she starts being talked about by politicians. ... and the Mother Teresa name-dropping was just the Republicans. You know how much one-upmanship there is in politics. How long before the Democrats are going to retaliate?

Is Bill Clinton going to have to play golf with Pope John Paul II if he has any prayer of saving Medicare?

The question really is, where will this all end? It could be a catastrophe. If this really catches on, I just don't believe there are enough saints to go around.

Book features art's role in LDS faith

The Times-News

SALT LAKE CITY — At the turn of the century, prominent Latter-day Saint artist John Hafin wrote, "The influence of art is so powerful in shaping our lives for a higher appreciation of the creations of our God that we cannot afford to neglect an acquaintance with it."

"Images of Faith: Art of the Latter-day Saints" (Deseret Book, 1995) leads the reader visually through the art tradition as it has developed since the organization of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in 1830.

"Images of Faith" features nearly 300 beautiful, full-color plates of artwork from the church's collection at the Museum of Church History and Art in Salt Lake City. Essays by Richard G. Oman and Robert O. Davis, senior curators at the museum, offer interpretive insights as well as historical background. Artists working in a variety of mediums and styles have depicted gospel principles, church leaders, scriptural and historical events and glimpses of everyday life among the Latter-day Saints.

"Images of Faith: Art of the Latter-day Saints" is published by Deseret Book Co. in Salt Lake City. The 202-page book is $49.95 and is available at LDS book stores and others locally.

Also once used as money on the Indonesian island of Aler - hard to make change, I imagine - were kettle drums.

Does evening coffee keep you awake? University of Chicago students were once divided into two test groups. Before bedtime, one drank coffee, the other milk. Next morning the coffee drinkers said they slept fitfully, the milk drinkers soundly. Then they were told the milk had been spiked with more caffeine than had been in the coffee.

Said the sage Michael Pritchard: "No matter how rich you become, how famous or powerful, when you die the state of your funeral will still pretty much depend on the weather."

Economists don't see recession in future

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The nation's economy will grow moderately this year, inflation will be restrained, and the unemployment rate will remain under 6 percent, top economists predict.

A survey of 47 economists by Blue Chip Economic Indicators, released Friday, was the latest assurance that the nation is not falling into recession despite signs of a slowing economy.

Consensus forecasts see 2.7 percent expansion both this year and next, compared to anticipated growth of just 1.6 percent in 1995.

Participants in the Blue Chip survey estimated the economy slowed to a 1.9 percent annual rate of growth during the final three months of 1995, down sharply from 3.2 percent of the previous three months. They forecast a 1.9 percent rate for the current January-March period.

Still, as measured by the gross domestic product, the 1.9 percent growth rate would be much stronger than the 0.5 percent rate in the second quarter and 0.6 percent in the first.

The GDP is the output of goods and services in the United States, which as the broadest measure of the nation's economic health. The figures are adjusted for inflation.

"Continued growth in capital spending and additional cuts in short-term interest rates by the Federal Reserve were noted by the panel members as the two factors most likely to help boost economic growth in 1996," the Sedona, Ariz., newsletter said. "High levels of consumer debt and fiscal spending drive were cited as the two factors most likely to curb growth."

Dow Jones up 54 to new record; bonds gain

Knight-Ridder News Service

NEW YORK — The Dow Jones Industrial Average surged 54.92 points Friday to close at a record 5271.75 as stocks gained on the board on the heels of a rally in the bond market.

Investors, encouraged by the bond market's resilience in the face of continued uncertainty surrounding the U.S. budget debate Washington, pushed the Dow to its third record high this week.

"By and large it was a very good day," said Trade Latimer, an investment strategist based in Charlottesville, Va.

Latimer attributed some of the gains to short-covering ahead of the weekend and "a minimum of bottom fishing."

Trading was relatively light Friday, reflecting similar thin conditions in other financial markets.

Broader indices were higher. The NASDAQ composite was up 5.01 at 1040.96. The New York Stock Exchange composite index closed ahead 2.29 at 332.84, and the S&P 500 index rose 4.59 to 621.62.

NYSE advancing issues decliners 1,255 to 1,014 on volume estimated at 384.4 million shares.

For the week, the Dow gained 87 points, or 1.6 percent.

The Federal Open Market Committee meets next week, and traders said general investor consensus is that the Federal Reserve Board's policy-making body will elect to lower short-term interest rates.

"There are signs that the economy needs a rate cut," he said.

Panel approves measure making initiatives tougher

BOISE (AP) — Despite a claim that it would hurt the democratic process, a House committee has approved a bill that would make it much tougher to get citizen initiatives on the Idaho ballot.

"This is a totally anti-America bill," said Rep. James Stoicech, D-Sandpoint. "I think this is crazy."

But the House State Affairs Committee voted Friday in favor of the bill's concept requiring initiative sponsors to get signatures in each of Idaho's 44 counties and limiting the number that could be collected from any county.

The measure was sent to the House floor for technical amendments. Stoicech's attempt to kill the bill on a 10-7 vote. Then the panel approved the measure without a recorded ballot.

Rural interests pushed the bill, which was prepared by the Idaho Farm Bureau and introduced by Rep. Mill Erhart, R-Boise.

Committee debate indicated legislators were concerned about the recent development of paid signature gatherers. A national organization pushing term limits funded the effort that got that issue on the 1994 ballot.

Tax activist Ron Rankin, who says he has enough signatures to put his property tax-limiting initiative on the ballot, also made heavy use of paid signature gatherers.

At present, proponents must get signatures equivalent to 10 percent of the votes cast in the last gubernatorial election, or 41,335, to put an initiative on the ballot. They petition signatures can be gathered anywhere in the state.

Election officials estimate that one-third of the term limit signatures were collected in the state's main population center, Ada and Canyon counties.

Legislators from rural areas said they were worried that the big counties would dominate them. They said they liked the idea of requiring signature-gathers to get some from every county.

The bill would require at least 2 percent of the people who voted in the last election to sign petitions. That would be 9 in Clark and 10 in Camas, the two smallest counties.

No more than 15 percent could be gathered in any county, which would limit Ada County to 14,550 names, 5,155 in Canyon, 4,337 in Bonneville, 4,111 in Bannock and 4,438 in Kootenai.

State AFL-CIO President Randy Ambuehl agreed gathering of signatures for initiatives has become big business in Idaho. "If you have enough money, you can get on the ballot," he said.

He suggested new laws requiring sponsors of initiatives to pay for wages to people who gather signatures.

"What we're concerned about is that statewide initiatives should go statewide," said Greg Nelson, Farm Bureau lobbyist. "If it's going to cover every county, then they should go to every county to get signatures."

Officials warn of phony charity

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Better Business Bureau officials are warning against responding to letters from the Childrens Make a Wish Foundation of Atlanta seeking help for a terminally ill 7-year-old named Craig Sherford.

"If you want to get one, test it up," bureau spokeswoman Kathryn Jones said. "Our files show this exact solicitation circulating in 1991, making the same claim for the same boy with the same name who at that time was age 7 and terminal."

So far, Jones said, her office has seen about four copies of the letter. It requests business cards on behalf of Craig Sherford to fulfill his wish to collect enough business cards to be registered in the Guinness Book of World Records before a brain tumor ends his life.

The same organization solicited greeting cards on behalf of Craig Sherford, a terminally ill British child, in 1990.

Jones said on Thursday that the Better Business Bureau had been getting reports of childrens Make a Wish Foundation telemarketers soliciting local residents for $35 donations "to fulfill the last wish of a terminally ill child."

"What concerns me is that people here are compassionate and want to help, but they will be giving their money to a bogus organization that doesn't meet BBB standards," Jones said. "I'd be surprised if a low number of them don't."

The Better Business Bureau requires that at least half the funds collected by a charitable organization be distributed.

In Atlanta, where the Childrens Make a Wish Foundation is located, the Better Business Bureau reports that the foundation declines to provide information regarding the use of collected funds.

The foundation was the target of a September lawsuit filed by the Pennsylvania attorney general's office alleging that the group "used complex paper transactions involving nearly worthless goods to conceal the fact that most of the money they raise is spent on perpetuating themselves and raising more money."

Grandmother will face murder charge

BOISE (AP) — A Boise woman accused of killing one grandnephew and trying to kill three other grandchildren last November has been bound over to 4th District Court.

Susan Kathleen Stovern, 42, remained in the Ada County Jail without bond on Friday after her preliminary hearing before Magistrate Richard Schmitt. He ordered her to be arraigned Feb. 5 on one first-degree murder charge and three counts of attempted murder before 4th District Judge Deborah Bail.

"Stovern is accused of drugging and suffocating 5-year-old Ashley Ann McQuillan, who died on Thanksgiving Day last year, in Boise."

She is also charged with giving drugs in an attempt to kill 3-year-old Alexandria McQuillan, 4-year-old Christopher Michael McQuillan and 1-year-old Matthew McQuillan.

The children were living with Stovern while their father lived in Kissimmee, Fla., and their mother, Stovern's daughter, lived separately in Boise.

During their split, the children's mother, now remarried as Jennifer Ann Cordingley, 24, had had her former husband, Phillip Eugene McQuillan, 23, for support. In the midst of that legal fight, the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare sued both for recovery of medical expenses for the children, and a court awarded custody of the youngsters to Stovern.

Batt backs fee on food retailers to aid inspection costs

BOISE (AP) — The Batt administration on Friday acknowledged its support for a $55 fee on food retailers statewide to pay for an inspection program.

The fee was recommended a year ago by a special legislative-industry task force.

Division of Financial Management analyst Gary Felt told the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee that the Health and Welfare Department will formally request spending authority for the fee revenue when it outlines its budget proposal on Monday.

But the fee was expected to be vigorously opposed by the industry, which has endorsed the food inspection program and its goals but has not agreed to a financing scheme.

The budget committee again rejected last year's task force request for nearly $1 million to fund the program. It includes not only annual inspections of each of the state's 10,000 food retailers but also calls for analytical inspections requiring more record keeping, more training for food handlers and distribution of educational materials.

The public health districts would agree to the inspections under an agreement with the state, and with just $50,000 from the state they have mustered over $500,000 of property tax receipts to at least have every establishment visited by an inspector in the last year.

But the more analytical checks and the educational aspects of the program have not been carried out for lack of cash.

With the state's general tax revenues even tighter this year than the last two, Gov. Phil Batt was left with one option — an industry user fee — in spite of stiff industry opposition. The fee would raise about $5.6 million, almost doubling the money being spent now.

Republican Sen. Rex Furness of Rigby, who has been critical of the inspection initiative since it began, predicted the extra cash would be approved this year. But he also predicted the industry will return to the Legislature to push the funding back on to property taxpayers, who finance a portion of the health distribut budgets.

"I suggest to you folks who go into these dirty restaurants to turn around and walk out," Furness said.

Health District Director Cheryl Junette called the fee the industry's share of the food safety program's cost. The fee would be created by administrative regulation, but under a new state law it cannot be collected until the Legislature approves.

Junette also said that the Health and Welfare Board is expected to be recommissioned soon that food workers be required to wear protective gloves in the continuing effort to check disease outbreaks that have drawn increasing attention to the safety program.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff

"The worse the passage the more welcome the port." - Thomas Fuller

Against a decent club break, today's slam is a claimer...

Unless South was extremely lucky in hearts, it was true he had to lose a club trick sooner or later...

When East discards on the first club lead from dummy, South should play his ace instead of sacrificing his queen...

After West ducks his club king and South takes the heart finesse, he cannot lose the slam...
