Dole, Buchanan reap Iowa votes

Seeking voter support in Iowa, Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, attracted the media in Des Moines Monday.

The Associated Press
DES MOINES, Iowa — Sen. Bob Dole scored a shaky victory in Iowa's Republican presidential caucuses Monday night as Pat Buchanan emerged from the GOP field to ready a conservative challenge in next week's pivotal New Hampshire primary.

Former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander ran a solid third and hoped that would be enough to give his cash-poor campaign a fresh start for the five-week blitz of primaries likely to settle the nomination fight.

All the candidates yowled to press on, but Iowa's results were sobering to publishing heir Steve Forbes, who was a distant fourth, and may have dealt a fatal blow to Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, who ran fifth.

President Clinton was unopposed in the state's Democratic caucuses, and the bruising nature of the Republican race was a vivid reminder of Clinton's luxury.

weak showing, telling a victory rally. "We withstood a barrage of millions and millions, and millions of dollars of negative advertising and came out on top."

With 97 percent of the vote counted, Dole had 26 percent, to 23 percent for Buchanan. Alexander had 18 percent, Forbes 10 percent and Gramm 9 percent.

Buchanan closed the Iowa campaign, imploring supporters of anti-abortion longshot Alan Keyes to rally to his side and will head to New Hampshire wishing he had been more successful; Keyes got 7 percent, a remarkable showing given his shoestring budget.

Indiana Sen. Dick Lugar had 4 percent and plain-spoken businessman Mory Taylor 1 percent. Buchanan called his showing "a victory for a new idea in the Republican Party and national politics, a new spirited conservatism of the heart" — he said would attract not only social conservatives but blue-collar workers worried about trade deals that send their jobs overseas.

New Hampshire is a Buchanan stronghold, the state where he got 37 percent to spark his 1992 primary run against President Bush. But Dole vowed not to stumble there this time as he did in 1988.

Steppin' lightly But neighbors of proposed dance club sing different tune

By Virginia S. Garber
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Neighbors of a proposed dance club and bar on the city's north end say the establishment will threaten their quality of life and the safety of their children.

But Twin Falls needs a clean, high-tech, well-lighted place to dance to country music, say Kevin and Sarah Alire, who will ask city planners tonight for permission to open "Boot Scooters" in an area that includes apartments and offices. "I think that it's a terrible idea," Candy Byrd said. "People just don't want a nightclub near their home."

Byrd lives in Fawnbrook Apartments, approximately 500 feet from the bare commercial parcel at 1539 Fillmore St. where Boot Scooters may open.

The apartments provide affordable housing, and young families with children occupy many of the 160 units, Manager Dawn King said. With a bar nearby, she said, that's a recipe for disaster.

Fawnbrook resident Candice Byrd, gesturing, is leading a group of neighbors that is against a bar proposed for near the Twin Falls apartment complex. Byrd says that a bar would have a negative impact on children living nearby.

"It would be a real detriment for this particular area," King said. "Kids and cars and alcohol simply don't mix." About one-fourth of Fawnbrook's residents — worried about potential noise. Please see STEPPIN/A2

Survey: Valley parents aren't buckling up kids

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Child car seats save lives, but lots of moms, dads and grandparents in the Magic Valley don't buckle their kids in.

That's the word from the Idaho Transportation Department's Office of Highway Safety. To kick off National Child Passenger Safety Awareness Week, the office released a survey, Monday showing that south-central Idaho is last in the state in compliance with Idaho's child-safety seat law.

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Heyburn, the four communities in the Magic Valley surveyed, averaged 46 percent use. The statewide average was 60 percent.

Blossom Mathews of the Magic Valley Safe Kids Coalition was surprised at those numbers.

"I think it was a very, very small sample," she said. "Actually, it was."

Last summer, Pat Raino of the Office of Highway Safety went to three sites in Twin Falls and three in the Rupert-Burley area, where she spent an hour, mostly at large intersections, charting use of child car seats.

"It was not a scientific survey," she said. "Maybe I was seeing a lot of summer traffic and seasonal workers."

Raino made 71 observations in Twin Falls and came up with a 56 percent child-seat use rate. In Rupert, she made 35 observations and found 12 using child seats. In Burley, 21 out of 52 were not using the seats.

"Of course, the general idea is to increase the numbers everywhere. "Some people always believe it is going to happen to someone else," said Lt. Lamont Johnson of the Twin Falls office of the Idaho State Police. "I have worked with the department 23 years, and of the accidents I've investigated myself and those I've reviewed on a daily basis, there is no doubt in my mind that they (child seats) work and they work very effectively."

He added, "I can think of only one incident in the 23 years where a child was in a (safety) seat and still killed."

Statistics cited by the Transportation Department show that, between 1991 and 1994, an unrestrained child under 4 was more than five times as likely to die in a traffic collision as a child who was restrained. Please see SEATS/A2

Thundering through downtown Spokane at near flood stage Monday, the Spokane River attracted scores of spectators Monday.

N. Idaho floods recede slowly

The Associated Press
COEUR D'ALENE — Flood water began receding in the Idaho Panhandle on Monday and hundreds of people were told they could begin returning to their homes along the Coeur d'Alene River following one of the worst Idaho floods in decades.

"Our first concern is getting people out of the mud and some place to stay," Gov. Phil Batt said after returning from his second tour of the flood-ravaged area in three days.

"We saw some houses on Saturday which were up to the eaves which are down to four feet now, so they are going down now." But it will be some time before the damage has been fully assessed and dealt with.

"We think it's $100 million or more," Batt said. "You just can't believe it 'til you see it."

"There's a remarkable show of strength of the people in northern Idaho," Batt said. "It's remarkable how they pulled together."

Lake Coeur d'Alene crested at just over 7 feet above its normal summer level in the early afternoon as did the Spokane River downstream, and officials said water was slowly receding. "It's a tremendous outflow in the Post Falls area," Batt said. "It's a Niagara coming out of there."

"There's still water in the city in Cataldo as well as St. Maries, but at least it has crested and now we're on the back side of things," state Disaster Services spokesman Darren Blagburn said. "The water is down 3 feet in Cataldo."

The National Guard set up a water purification system in Cataldo, and the Federal Emergency Management Agency established a toll-free number of residents to call to begin the paperwork for flood relief.

Batt said the federal agency planned to open up two main offices in Coeur d'Alene and Lewiston. Please see FLOOD/A2

GOP attacks Rubín for borrowing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin exceeded his authority when he tapped civil service trust funds to avoid federal default, a House Republican task force asserted Monday.

The task force called for legislation sharply restricting the government's ability to use the trust funds, and its chairman, Rep. Nick Smith, R-Mich., said Rubin should resign.

As a whole, the 11-member House Task Force on the Debt Limit and Misuse of the Trust Funds did not call for the secretary's resignation, although one member, Rep. Chris Cox, R-Calif., previously joined House Rules Committee Chairman Gerald Solomon, R.N.Y., in advocating Rubin's impeachment.

The task force complained that Rubin was misleading last fall in his warnings of the consequences of default as the national debt rose toward the government's $4.9 trillion borrowing ceiling.

"The secretary clearly could have been more forthcoming," the panel said. "(He) did not specify either to Congress or the public that failure to increase the debt limit would lead to disinvestment of certain trust funds, rather than a catastrophic default." Smith, at a news conference, said Rubin "intentionally tried to panic U.S. financial markets" — although throughout most of the period stock and bond markets have risen strongly.

Rep. Nick Smith, R-Mich., points to a chart during a Capitol Hill news conference and called on Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin to resign for overstepping his authority last November when Rubin disinvested the civil service retirement trust fund to pay bills after Congress refused to raise the debt limit.

The task force also criticized the disinvestment itself, saying Rubin's actions were "not within the bounds and intent" of a law designed to ensure government retirees continued receiving benefits during a debt standoff.

The report conceded that Rubin had authority to disinvest the funds — but only enough to cover the funds' obligations to retirees one month at a time.

Instead, Rubin withdrew enough to finance 12 months of benefits and later extended the period to 14 months. That's what's allowed the government to keep paying its bills since the debt ceiling began to pinch in mid-November.

"The result" was the creation of additional debt that was not approved by Congress and thus threatens the constitutional separation of power over the borrowing authority of the United States," the report said.

Rubin repeatedly has defended the legality of his actions but has said he will run out of legal and prudent ways to avoid the ceiling by mid-March. Early this month, House and Senate GOP leaders retreated somewhat from the confrontation over the debt ceiling. They told the president in a letter they would work with him to increase the debt limit, attaching only extraneous legislation acceptable to both Clinton and the Congress.

Port Authority hoards modern art

NEW YORK (AP) — When motorists in the New York City area pay tolls to use bridges and tunnels, they're also subsidizing a multimillion-dollar art collection.

The Port Authority, which operates bridges and tunnel links between New York and New Jersey, as well as the region's three big airports, owns more than 1,300 artworks, and most are kept far from public view, the Daily News reported today. The agency disputes that last assertion.

The collection, appraised at $26.7 million for insurance purposes, includes works by such modern masters as Pablo Picasso and Alexander Calder, the News said. The collection's resale value is estimated at $14.7 million.

To care for the works — a 38-page list of holdings — the government agency employs a curator paid more than $40,000 a year.

FDA approves Rogaine for over-the-counter sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — Balding Americans will be able to buy the hair-growth drug Rogaine by spring without stopping to see a doctor first.

The Food and Drug Administration decided Monday that Rogaine can be sold in drugstores alongside the shampoos and hair colorings, making it the only medically proven drug to fight baldness available without a prescription.

But while the move means people can buy a little hope against hair loss for about $30 a month, the FDA warned that not everybody should.

Some 40 million men and 20 million women suffer hair loss, most the hereditary form commonly known as male pattern balding. This is the only hair loss helped by Rogaine, which has been sold by prescription since 1988.

Even for those people, however, Rogaine doesn't always work, said FDA spokeswoman Ivy Kucpec. It helps about 25 percent of men and 20 percent of women to very gradually grow back moderate amounts of hair, mostly on the very top of the head.

They must keep using Rogaine indefinitely to keep the new hair.

Some experts warned the FDA in November that an over-the-counter Rogaine would be overused by desperate consumers who refused to admit it's not helping their particular hair loss. So how long should people use Rogaine?

"We recommend people try it for four months, but we actually had people in clinical studies who took longer than that," said Dr. Joann Data of manufacturer Pharmacia & Upjohn.

People should try Rogaine only if hair loss runs in their family and isn't a sudden or patchy type that might come from an endocrine imbalance, infection, pregnancy or even such hairstyles as tight braids, Data said.

If people use Rogaine for the wrong type of hair loss, "it won't exacerbate the balding they do have," she said. "But say they have a fungal infection, it would prolong the time to diagnosis and appropriate treatment."

Pharmacia & Upjohn said it will sell nonprescription Rogaine for about half the price of the identical prescription version, $29.50 for a month's supply.

Man defecates on airline cart, pays $50,000

NEW YORK (AP) — An investment banker accused of defecating on an airliner's food-service cart during a flight pleaded guilty Monday to a misdemeanor charge of threatening a flight attendant and agreed to pay $50,000 in restitution. His lawyer said his only problem was diarrhea. "I was angry," Gerard B. Finerman, 52, told Magistrate Judge Steven M. Gold as he admitted making the threat aboard a United Airlines flight from Buenos Aires to New York on Oct. 20.

Clinton welcomes anti-smoking teen-agers to Oval Office

President Bill Clinton meets with Ricky Lovelace, 17, and Yaseem Afear, 14, both of Virginia, on the need to reduce tobacco use by children.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton discussed smoking with an activist group of anti-smoking teen-agers on Monday and told how his daughter's pleadings caused his mother to quit.

When Chelsea was in grade school, the president said, she was impressed with the message conveyed in films that showed the deterioration of smokers' lungs.

"My mother had smoked all her life, practically, since she was a teen-ager," the president told seven students and three adults in the Oval Office.

"My daughter kept telling her what her lungs looked like, this 8-year-old beating up on her grandmother," Clinton said. "And for her eighth birthday, my mother stopped smoking. That was her gift to her granddaughter."

The president's mother, Virginia Kelley, died two years ago.

The 20-minute discussion in the Oval Office was held to underscore the president's drive against teen-age smoking. Clinton was told of a hands-on survey conducted by three of the teen-agers, testing how often stores were willing to sell them cigarettes.

"More than half actually would sell to us," said Christy Franco, 17, a student at Oakton High School in Vienna, Va. "We couldn't lie, so when they asked us our age we had to say 17." Without that, she said, "probably a lot more would have sold it to us."

She said she went to about 20 stores in one day, gasoline stations and convenience stores, and asked for cigarettes.

"If they sold it to us, like if they actually rang it up and everything, we gave them a 'gotcha' card," Christy said. Those who refused to sell the cigarettes would get a thank you card.

On the issues

Here are the responses of the major presidential candidates to the question: "Do you support allowing people to set up medical savings accounts that would be taxed only if used for purposes other than medical costs?"

DEMOCRAT

President Clinton: "No. We need to give Americans more choice and more access to affordable health care they cannot lose. But we must do so in a thoughtful way that strengthens our ability to ensure that Medicare remains available for all of our seniors. Medical savings accounts would 'drain' resources from Medicare and undermine our commitment to provide opportunity, security and quality care for all Americans."

REPUBLICANS

Lamar Alexander: "Yes. Medical savings accounts are one of the most innovative ways to let Americans get control over their own health care costs. They provide choice and flexibility, and they keep the government out of the doctor-patient relationship. I would like to see medical savings accounts available to all Americans."

Pat Buchanan: "Yes."

Sen. Bob Dole: "Yes." Steve Forbes: "Medical savings accounts can improve care, cut waste and protect Medicare without reducing your benefits. You control your health care, not the politicians." (From Forbes ad).

Sen. Phil Gramm: "Yes. I introduced legislation to allow individuals to make tax-free contributions to medical savings accounts. My proposal would also allow individuals to use excess MSA funds tax-free for whatever they choose, including the purchase of a long-term care plan."

Sen. Dick Lugar: "Yes. I co-sponsored a Senate bill in the last Congress that would establish such accounts. Congress and the president should move forward with this innovation."

Gunman fires at workplace

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A man fired from Packard Bell for urging armed rebellion against his bosses shot up his former workplace with 40 rounds of ammunition Monday until he was wounded in the shoulder by a security guard.

No one else was hurt in the shooting at the computer maker's headquarters.

"It's really miraculous that somebody wasn't hit with at least a ricochet," police spokesman Michael Heenan said.

Heenan said Phuoc Bui, 34, could be charged with attempted murder. Bui was hospitalized in good condition.

Bui had been fired Friday "for the kind of behavior that would make you suspect something like this — distributing literature to other employees about taking up arms against supervisors," Heenan said.

Russia's elite look for way out

MOSCOW (AP) — A glossy magazine for Russian businessmen is about to hit newsstands with an article, only half tongue-in-cheek, on "how to flee."

A banker with ties to the Kremlin and savings in Switzerland talks, only half-jokingly, about liquidating his Russian holdings in case he has to make a quick getaway abroad.

And a Western diplomat hears the same, semi-serious question posed by more and more of Russia's liberal elite. "If things go bad, will you get us out of here?"

Four months before presidential elections, a distinct queasiness is settling over the wealthy and the intellectual circles of Moscow and St. Petersburg. Communists are riding a wave of popular support, while the pro-reform camp is divided.

Could the country house bought last year be taken back by a Communist state this fall? Should the writers at feisty newspapers and television networks be looking for real estate in Spain?

Most Russians, including wealthy ones, are waiting to see what happens before they get seriously worried. Many say the Communists — if they could win the presidency in June — wouldn't really be able to turn back the clock on democratic and free-market reforms.

But would they try? Communist leader Gennady Zyuganov gives disturbing signals.

Zyuganov, who polls show would be a strong candidate for president, tells Western businessmen that he backs limited private enterprise and would make Russia a more stable, profitable place for their money.

But to other audiences, Zyuganov is anti-Western and anti-free market, favoring a return to state subsidies and state control. At rallies he stands alongside virulent anti-Semites, Stalinists and extreme nationalists.

A gathering last week of communist factions, including Zyuganov's, issued a statement promising "the return of property to the people, and the restoration of workers' power ... socialism and the USSR."

Statements like that led Dvornik ("Money") magazine to advise readers, in a story to be published this week, how to apply for residence abroad in case of emergency.

"If you have much money, you'd better turn it into diamonds," advises the reporter, Olga Kameneva.

Many rich Russians have long gashed their fortunes, even their families, abroad for fear of crime and general instability.

Rescue efforts fail in Japan

FURUBIRA, Japan (AP) — They ruled out tunneling. They tried blasting — twice.

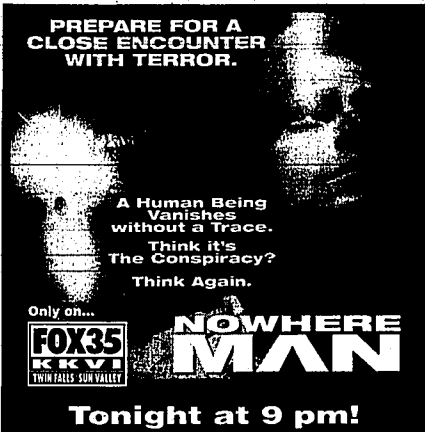

After three days, rescuers still could not dislodge a building-sized boulder and reach people trapped inside a crushed tunnel below.

And, as this morning approached, they grew less sure by the hour that anyone remained alive to rescue inside the snowy mountain at the edge of the sea.

Meanwhile, disheartened relatives watched, waited and looked plaintively into the darkness beyond the floodlit tunnel entrance. Inside, crews could see part of the crushed bus. But they could not approach it safely.

"It's regrettable that the expected outcome has not been achieved. I apologize to the families," said Makoto Niiyama of the Hokkaido Development Agency, which is heading rescue efforts.

Clinton should let striker replacement ruling stand

What part of "no" doesn't Bill Clinton understand?

Last week, a federal appeals judge upheld the nation's striker replacement law, dismissing a Clinton order to circumvent it. Now, Clinton's Labor Department says it will appeal.

The issue of striker replacement has long been dear to the heart of Big Labor, which wants to prohibit the federal government from contracting with companies that are on strike and to replace those workers on strike. And-organized labor has paid big money to get it done. The AFL-CIO and its allies were big contributors to Clinton's election campaign four years ago, and they still make up the largest single source of capital for Democratic congressional candidates. Clinton's March 1995 order was a sleazy attempt to achieve by fiat what organized labor's allies couldn't get done in Congress.

In 1993, when the Democrats controlled Congress, they had a bill to pass a "striker replacement bill." Seeing their chances evaporate in the Republican landslide of 1994, they pressured Clinton to decree that striker replacement was illegal.

The president, of course, was happy to oblige, overturning what's been the law of the land since 1938. That's when the Supreme Court ruled that employers could legally hire permanent replacement for employees who were engaged in strikes protesting wages, hours and working conditions. Such strikers must be placed on a preferential hiring list and be hired back once the strike is over and a position becomes available. And employers may under no circumstances permanently replace workers who go on strike to protest violations of the National Labor Relations Act.

Federal law already protects strikers. So why are the Democrats trying to ban hiring replacements?

Because doing so would give organized labor a huge advantage in dealing with employers. Why should unions negotiate in good faith if the law effectively puts a company out of business until it caves into the strikers' demands?

The president is grandstanding on this issue. He should let the judge's ruling stand.

Dam opposition lacks reasoning

Recent letters The Times-News show the lack of sound reasoning behind the emotional opposition to Auger Falls development. Is it fair for people to condemn someone else for disturbing a blade of grass or a drop of water when they live in permanent structures, benefit from low-cost hydroelectric power and consume water diverted from the Snake River? This reasoning provides no practical solutions to real-world problems.

Most concerning were the remarks of Bob J. Muffley, chairman of the Middle Snake River Water Resource Commission. Mr. Muffley characterized my comments regarding water-quality problems as "misleading" and "misinformation." If you compare Mr. Muffley's recapitulation of his study to my opinion regarding the "four primary sources" identified by his study, you will find two differences of opinion. They were the impact on water quality of the drought and of future hydroelectric development.

In the opinion of independent experts, the drought did contribute to water-quality problems. Nutrients discharged into the river from all point sources, were not diluted or carried away. Future hydroelectric development is not, according to independent experts, a source of water-quality problems. Sure, environmental mistakes were made 20 years ago in dam construction. Hydroelectric design and technology are better today, however.

Here are six reasons why hydroelectric development will not be a "primary" source of future Middle Snake River water-quality problems:

• Hydroelectric operation, a renewable resource, does not add any nutrients or pollution to the river.

• Auger Falls is the only remaining development possible on the Middle Snake River because state legislation prohibits all other such development.

• Auger Falls development does not impound water and, therefore, would not reduce oxygenation levels.

• The Division of Environmental Quality determined that Auger Falls development would have little to no adverse impact on water quality.

• Auger Falls development could actually lead to improved Middle Snake River water quality, due to the developer's offer discussed in my previous letter.

• Because of negotiated mitigation, Auger Falls development would improve wildlife and fish habitat.

The other factors in my previous letter, which Mr. Muffley discounted, are the benefits to public schools, state and local taxpayers and Idaho Power ratepayers from such a development.

Now is not the time to stand on radical ideology. This only promotes division and turmoil in our community. Now is the time to roll up our sleeves and work together to find win-win solutions to water-quality and other environmental problems.

Put pressure on nuclear waste

I am concerned about the mole mentality used in handling our nuclear waste. —"INEL to pile dirt on old reactors" in The Times-News on Feb. 3.

The 40 acres or more of nuclear waste that was dumped over the aquifer in the 1970s was handled the same way. Out of sight, out of mind — for now! According to the latest tests, that pollution is leaking toward the aquifer at a much faster rate than expected. Remember the Big Lost and Little Lost rivers both enter the aquifer in approximately this same area. Their original volume of water would have formed a lake if the percolation rate was not very rapid.

The million-dollar studies to clean this mess up have proven futile and resulted in soothing, don't-look-or-ask, we-have-it-under-control talk.

The $4 billion already spent in New Mexico and Nevada for waste storage seems to continually have a 10-year extension for completion.

It would appear to me that, with less than $4 billion, we could build four or more substantial and super-large structures. Located in strategic places, they would hold our nuclear waste safely in accessible rooms with monitoring devices to locate and make correctible any unforeseen calamity. This would also shorten shipping distances, eliminating a great deal of unnecessary risk.

Unfortunately, that does not solve the impending disaster that is relentlessly heading toward our aquifer.

Let us really put the pressure on and get an independent honest survey and a solution we can trust and accomplish.

Doonesbury offends 9-year-old

I think that Doonesbury comic you put in the Feb. 4 paper was totally uncalled for! My name is Leslie Stephens, and I'm 9 years old in the fourth grade. I go to Popplewell Elementary. I think you are trying to encourage young pre-smokers to smoke.

I am a healthy young child, and I am not going to accept any free fancy-shmancy jacket for something that is going to ruin my health and my life — smoking. I think Garfield is a funny comic! But when I looked at Doonesbury, it was not funny at all. I felt sick! I like to read the comics to be entertained. But I feel like someone is trying to talk me into smoking instead.

TV show should be off the air

I am writing to the public for help. Your help is needed to get this television show, "Late Date," off the air. It comes on on Channel 28 at 10:30 p.m.

I happened to stumble onto it while flipping channels looking for a movie to watch. Channel 28 does have very good movies. "Late Date" doesn't pull any punches at all about sex. It shows what they like or what they do.

The phone number you can complain to is 1-212-224-7000. It's disgusting that we as Americans would lower our standards so much we will allow this type of trash to be shown on an open channel.

Issue is who has wildlife control

I would like to respond to the letter written by Lynn Fritchman in The Times-News on Feb. 7.

Mr. Fritchman said that the issue is about sportsmanship and ethics. We say that this initiative is about anti-hunting and animal rights fanaticism with hidden agendas trying to dictate their lifestyle and beliefs on the people of Idaho.

Idaho Coalition United for Bears (I-CUB) is the political action committee for Palouse Voice for Animals. PVA is a radical animal rights group advocating total protection for all "non-human" animals.

The Sportsmen's Heritage Defense Fund is a political action committee. SHDF was formed by Idaho sportsmen to defeat the I-CUB initiative to limit methods of bear harvest. SHDF has the support of more than 90 state and national organizations.

I-CUB has never reported other than the Humane Society of the United States — not be confused with the Humane Society of America which works to support our pounds and humane care of animals. This group is a political fund-raising group dedicated to raising big bucks. It is the largest national animal rights organization in the nation with an annual 1992 budget of $19.2 million and is headquartered in Washington, D.C. This group gave $17,000 to I-CUB in 1995 while it received roughly $1,000 from other sources.

All political action committees have to file yearly financial statements with the state attorney's office. SHDF has raised $140,000, of which 80 percent was donated by the men and women of Idaho. The remaining 20 percent was received from sportsmen and women and groups supporting this effort.

I am sorry, Mr. Fritchman, but I don't think this initiative is about sportsmanship or hunting ethics. I think this initiative is about whether our wildlife is managed by HSUS with its hidden agendas and out-of-state monies or by Idaho's Fish and Game with its wildlife expertise.

Infractions likely to be repaid

To the Idaho Department of Lands regarding the proposed Auger Falls Hydroelectric Project on the Snake River:

The Jan. 29 public hearing held by the Department of Lands was extremely interesting and did much to confirm our opinion that Mr. Harmsen is absolutely wrong in attempting to further impact the free flow and water quality of the middle Snake River. Our objection was verbally presented at the hearing.

It is our understanding that there are already at least 70 existing water violations pending against Mr. Harmsen relative to the hydro plant west of Buhl. In view of that kind of business-manship, how in good conscience could the Department of Lands even consider making it possible for him to compound past mistakes? Certainly, it seems quite likely that, if Mr. Harmsen is allowed to proceed at Auger Falls, he will repeat past infractions on the Buhl project.

Mr. Harmsen and Cogeneration are replaceable, but the Snake River is not!

Thank you for your courtesy and assistance in bringing this matter before the public and giving us an opportunity to stop this truly unnecessary project.

Experts profess "zero impact"

In his recent commentary, David M. Cooper expressed his concern about disregard of the facts by the "mob" at the Auger Falls hearing. Buried in the emotion of the moment and the many opinions from both sides of the issue, I managed to catch a couple of "facts."

• Fact: The Snake River will be changed forever. The rhetoric seemed to center around whether the benefits, if any, justify this.

• Fact: One individual reminded Mr. Cooper in the meeting that he had overlooked the fifth source for the Middle Snake water-quality problems, that being water impoundment.

He forgot again in his published article.

• Fact: Cogeneration Inc. has no customer for the power from this proposed project. The corporation has been unsuccessful in attempting to force Idaho Power to purchase the power at more than three times the cost that power can be purchased for or generated today.

Concern was expressed that if Cogeneration had been successful, wouldn't the added costs be reflected on the monthly bill of every Idaho Power customer for the next 35 years?

• Fact: The viability of land application for the Twin Falls sewer plant is only in the feasibility study phase. Cogeneration "experts" stated this application was of a "filtering nature," and the filter being the ground beneath the site.

The concern expressed by the "mob" was that because this filter is not renewable, what happens when it (the soil) is saturated? Will the insult now applied to the river at the sewer plant just be moved downstream a couple of miles?

• Fact: Of the 80 or so folks who testified at the hearing and the additional 100 or so who did not testify, with the exception of Mr. Cooper and others reimbursed by Cogeneration for their services in their areas of expertise, not a single soul indicated support for the project.

Opinion: These folks don't believe the claims of the "experts" that water currently free flowing and being oxygenated over rapids and down a magnificent gorge could be impounded, moved through a canal and then pumped down a pipe back into the river with a "zero impact" to water quality if oxygen content is one of the parameters in determining water quality. Even if the "experts" are right, these folks seemed to believe the cost in environment and aesthetics immeasurably outweighs the benefits of "cost-inflated power" and the promise of questionable recreation opportunity.

Good reason to oust Craig

There's seldom a week goes by without a news story that gives Idaho citizens a dandy reason to vote against Sen. Larry Craig next November.

There were two such revelations last week. First, we learned that Craig thinks of another dam at Auger Falls in the Snake River as a splendid plan, a "win-win" project that he has helped to promote. Well, we know who the losers will be — all the Idahos who won't make money through the exploitation of an irreplaceable stretch of wild river. The winners? A Utah developer with a record of hydro violations and a handful of people who hope to share in his profits.

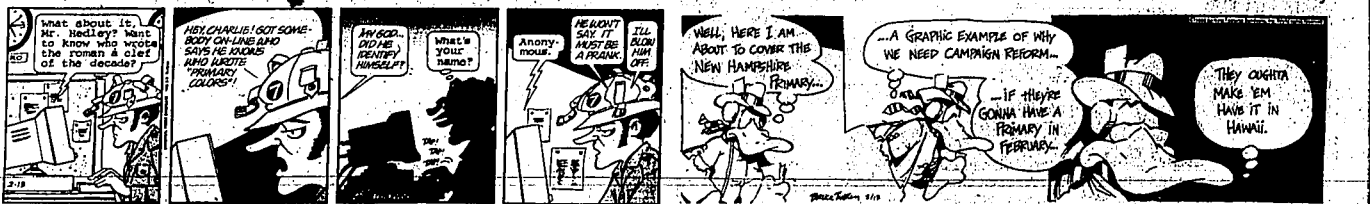

Next, we have our illustrious senior senator explaining that he doesn't consider his thousands in corporate campaign contributions as special interest money but simply as dollars donated by Idaho people who wish him well. Never mind that Craig would vote to clear out our city parks and strip mine the cemeteries if timber and mining corporations offered persuasive political action committee contributions.

But we have a chance to remedy all this. We tend to vote against people who have failed miserably to represent our interests. Craig is up for re-election in November.

'The stinker of the session,' state worker bonuses, falls in house

BOISE (AP) — Members of the Idaho House didn't think much of a proposal to increase the limit on bonuses that could be won by state employees from $1,000 to $2,500.

Sponsor Rep. Maynard Miller, R-Mosco, got just 15 of his colleagues to vote with him Monday as the House killed the legislation 53-16.

Miller warned it would be a slap in the face to state administrators, who need authority to award bonuses to produce outstanding or meritorious performances from employees.

"Excellence just doesn't happen," Miller said. "It requires time, inspiration, motivation and often money."

Rep. James Stoicheff, D-Sandpoint, called Miller's legislation "the stinker of the session."

He said legislators recently learned the then-director of the Idaho Housing agency received a $25,000 bonus. The then-director of the Idaho Lottery got $8,000.

"We tried to abolish bonuses altogether," he said, but the Legislature settled on a limit of $1,000 in bonuses per employee per year.

Stoicheff said administrators will "pick their pets, the ones that suck-up and they will be the ones that get the bonuses."

Rep. Bill Sali, R-Meridian, said if bonuses up to $1,000 per year are not enough, "he's not really the kind of employee that's being motivated because he wants to do a good job."

"If he's really doing that good a job, his pay ought to be enough," Sali said.

Rep. Golden Linford, R-Redburg, said $2,500 bonuses are not considered excessive in private industry.

Lawmaker sees impoundment as best solution

BOISE (AP) — Rep. Bill Taylor, R-Nampa, thinks too many motorists believe they can keep committing driving offenses and hold onto their licenses.

The House State Affairs Committee Monday approved introduction of Taylor's proposal to allow impoundment, and later forfeiture, of the vehicle of a person arrested for a third drunken driving offense.

A companion bill, allowing the same treatment for people who continue to drive after their licenses are suspended or revoked, was rejected for introduction. Some committee members thought it was too severe.

Although committee support was mixed for Taylor's third bill, allowing the impounding of a vehicle for up to 30 days if drivers fail to obtain liability insurance, it was ordered printed.

Taylor's bill calls for impoundment of a vehicle for the first drunken driving offense, impoundment for at least 30 days for the second citation and for a third offense, the vehicle is to be forfeited to the state.

Panel approves lower sales tax for counties

BOISE (AP) — The House tax panel has approved introduction of a bill that could allow merchants in Payette and Washington counties to collect sales tax at just half the statewide rate.

The idea is to help merchants along the border compete better with businesses in Oregon, which has no sales tax.

At the request of Rep. Donna Jones, R-Payette, the House Revenue and Taxation Committee approved a measure that would allow a 2 1/2 percent sales tax rate in the two border counties. The state rate is 5 percent.

Jones estimated the measure would cut state sales tax collections by $2.2 million per year, but she said that would be more than offset by higher retail sales in the two counties.

Man dies near Paris

PARIS (AP) — Capping an extensive weekend search, the body of a Chubbuck man was found in southeastern Idaho, dead from a snowmobile accident.

Charles Millard, 49, was found Sunday night about two miles west of Paris Peak. A search started 24 hours earlier when the Bear Lake County sheriff's department was informed Millard was missing after becoming separated from his partner in the Paris Flat area.

Deputies said Millard's body was found Sunday evenings.

Stabbing investigated

FORT HALL (AP) — The FBI and tribal police are investigating the weekend stabbing death of Verdick Eldridge, 46, Fort Hall.

Fort Hall police, responding to a 911 call Sunday afternoon, found Eldridge dead at a home. A second man with superficial wounds was taken to a hospital for treatment before he was taken into custody.

Panel approves BSU fund-raising resolution

BOISE (AP) — Legislative budget writers Monday overwhelmingly approved a resolution acknowledging that the state supports Boise State University efforts to raise private contributions for a new engineering school building.

The action by the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee, once ratified by the full Legislature, should make it easier for the school to raise the $6 million to $7 million in additional donations needed to match the three-year, $6 million contribution announced earlier this month by Micron Technology Inc.

The resolution was delayed Friday by some lawmakers still bristling over the Board of Education's decision late last year to transfer engineering education responsibility in Boise to Boise State from the University of Idaho as Micron demanded. And the debate again focused on what amounted to a turf battle between Boise State and Idaho for engineering control.

GOP finds money for fish, game

BOISE (AP) — An unusual coalition of moderate and conservative Republicans joined the budget committee's Democratic minority Monday to authorize spending $344,000 more on state wildlife programs than GOP Gov. Phil Butte proposes for 1997.

On an 11-8 vote, the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee added $200,000 for six wildlife biologists to help non-hunters enjoy the state's nongame wildlife programs and $144,000 to restore the Fish and Game

Department's part-time help to levels of several years ago.

The vote came during the opening session on the 1997 state budget.

The department gets all its revenue from hunting and fishing licenses and other special fees and does not rely on increasingly tight general tax money.

So it was not clear whether the action Monday was a signal that the overwhelmingly Republican panel would stray from the GOP governor's austere general tax spending plan when they begin dealing with it later in the week.

Republican Sen. Dean Cameron of Rupert tried to head off the spending by warning that dipping deeper into the revenues generated by sportsmen's licenses would only result in another license increase.

But the department's license fund will carry a balance of about $2 million through the new budget year, and analysts said that based on conservative revenue estimates, that fund will remain solvent at least until 2000. If revenue from current fees grows as expected, it probably would be even later before hunting and fishing licenses would have to be raised.

Supporters pointed out that the flooding in northern Idaho would significantly increase the need for more summer help to maintain access and other facilities, and that the extra $144,000 in temporary help is enough to give 15 high school or college students summer jobs.

Jerome man killed in truck accident

RICHFIELD — A Jerome man was killed Monday when his fuel truck was overturned on U.S. Highway 26.

Clifford Harmon, 57, died when he was thrown from his truck at 11:30 a.m. on the highway about four miles west of Richfield, according to Idaho State Police dispatcher Dee Silver.

About 250 gallons of diesel fuel spilled from the wreckage, stalling both lanes of traffic for an hour while workers mopped up the gas, Silver said. Cleanup crews managed to dam most of the leaking fuel with sand and dikes, Silver said.

Harmon was driving eastbound when his truck veered off the right side of the highway, he tried to correct his steering, causing the truck to tip over and roll twice, Silver said. Police are still investigating the cause of the crash.

Hagerman School Board sets bond issue election March 5

HAGERMAN — The Hagerman School Board will ask voters to approve a $5.36 million bond issue on March 5 to build a new high school.

The cost of construction and improvements is $3.25 million; the rest would be interest. Voters rejected a previous bond issue proposal, calling for a split campus with a football field on 20 acres outside of town.

Under the revised plan, officials would build a centralized high school campus on 12 acres next to the elementary school.

Hagerman High School is 70 years old, has a sagging foundation, crumbling concrete, inadequate wiring for computers, cramped classrooms, poor plumbing and leaky roofs, according to Hagerman Superintendent Ron Worrell.

Voting will be held from noon to 9 p.m. in the Hagerman High gymnasium at the Upper Salmon Power Plant. Two-thirds of voters must agree to the project for the bond issue to pass.

Police warn residents about warm-weather thievery

TWIN FALLS — Warmer weather has apparently awakened the thieving instincts in some criminals, prompting Twin Falls police to warn neighbors to watch each others' cars and homes.

About $11,000 worth of property was taken from homes, cars and yards over the weekend; victims reported 27 burglaries to the Twin Falls Police Department from Thursday through Sunday — car engines, stereos, jewelry, even a pair of boxer panties.

A typical weekend results in about 13 burglaries, said Lt. Ron Axman of the Twin Falls Police Department. Police are looking for patterns to the burglaries; no arrests have yet been made on this weekend's thefts, he said.

"Put your neighborhood watch together and watch for kids who are walking through the area, looking in cars," Axman said.

Twin Falls man sentenced to probation for sex crime

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man was sentenced to probation Monday after police said he asked a child for sex.

Dale Gene McDonald, 23, had earlier pleaded guilty to felony solicitation to commit lewd conduct with a minor. He was originally charged with first-degree kidnapping.

On Monday, 5th District Judge Roger Burdick sentenced McDonald to five years' probation, and threatened to send him to prison for two to five years if he violates the numerous conditions of his probation.

A pre-teen girl told police that McDonald locked her in his apartment on Sept. 7, 1994, asked her for sex and grabbed her briefly before she escaped, according to a police affidavit.

Minnick urges Land Board to reject Auger Falls project

TWIN FALLS — U.S. Senate aspirant Walt Minnick has waded into the Auger Falls debate by urging the Idaho Land Board to reject a proposal to dam the Snake River less than three miles west of the Rainier Bridge.

In a letter Monday, the Boise Democrat cited overwhelming opposition to the hydroelectric proposal at a Jan. 29 public hearing in Twin Falls. Minnick wrote that a surplus of electrical energy already exists in the Northwest and that any power generated at Auger Falls would undoubtedly be transferred out of the region.

Further, Minnick said the Middle Snake River does not meet state or federal water quality standards. He urged the Land Board to deny the developer's request for an easement to build a dam on state-owned land in the riverbed.

Physician: Alliance could stifle competition

By Virginia S. Garber and William E. Brock Times-News writers

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls cardiologist says a possible alliance between Magic Valley's largest hospital and a group of physicians is "fraught with danger" and could freeze independent doctors out of the county-owned medical center.

Dr. James Emery told the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center board of directors Monday night that he's concerned that an integrated hospital-physicians network would be "large and powerful" enough to put a damper on competition in local medicine.

Fifty-five doctors have said they'll participate in a partnership between the hospital and Magic Valley Health Network, Dr. Wayne Wright, another Twin Falls cardiologist and a member of the health network, told the board.

Those physicians want to reverse fragmentation in the valley's health care, share confidential medical records, offer a full scope of care, focus on preventative medicine and cooperate with the region's other medical providers, he said.

The network could organize doctor referrals, lower health-care costs, allow doctors to share patient medical history through a single computer system and eliminate paperwork, hospital board Chairman James Herrett said earlier.

If the hospital doesn't integrate with MVMH, the health network has "contingency plans" for accomplishing those objectives, Wright said.

The hospital board will meet again tonight at 7 p.m. to discuss, among other things, a draft version of the medical center's strategic plan.

The meeting will be held in the doctors' meeting room at the hospital.

Administrator John Bingham will apprise the board of the strategic plan's status. A general framework has been developed and Bingham will ask the board to formally adopt it before the first cycle of the strategic planning process.

Suites for the sweet

Find a unique gift for your Valentine

The Times-News local chapter of Soroptimist International.

Cupid's hands are full as Valentine's Day draws nigh, so several local sub-contractors are offering to fill your loved one's ears with song — or their belly full of chocolate.

For $25, the Valley Edition Barbershop Quartet will serve up a red, red rose and a love song or two anywhere in Twin Falls. The crooning quartet will serenade sweethearts wherever they may be — at home, work, school or an embarrassingly public place.

Proceeds will go to the barbershop society's national charity, Heartspring, which specializes in programs for children with cerebral palsy, autism, seizure disorders, hearing loss and developmental delays. In 1994, the local quartet ranked among the top 10 contributors nationwide annual contributions exceed $1,000.

For those who prefer to take their Valentine's Day treat orally — rather than aurally — there's always the 11th annual "Chocolate Affair" fund-raiser by the

For $5, chocolate lovers can indulge in an all-you-can-eat frenzy of sweet-tooth indulgence at Main Street Treats, 140 Main Ave. N. Virtually every permutation of chocolate known to man will be available from 7 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. Wednesday.

If you'd rather keep your chocolate obsession out of the public eye, the Soroptimists will package up a tournament selection for you to pick up anonymously. Call 423-525 or 734-5748 to make arrangements.

In the Burley-Rupert area, four women known as the Heart-to-Heart Quartet will sing two songs and deliver Valentine candy anytime between 9 a.m. and 8 p.m. Wednesday. The event raises money for Sweet Adeline competitions and costumes. The fee: $20.

Reservations to have a loved one serenaded are being accepted through today. To contact the Heart-to-Heart Quartet, call 436-3092, 654-2868, 678-3004 or 532-4626.

Rangeland panel seeks grazing fees for promos

By Karen Tolkinen Times-News writer

BOISE — Members of a year-old Idaho Rangeland Resources Commission are trying to get money this year so they can launch a media and education blitz to promote the grazing industry.

Promoters say it's a serious effort to address public concerns about the environmental impacts of grazing. Critics counter that it's no more than an attempt to gain state sanction to improve ranchers' image in Idaho.

At issue is a bill that would allow the commission to charge fees of those who run livestock on public and private grazing lands. Under terms of the legislation, scheduled for a hearing on Feb. 20 in the House Agriculture Affairs Committee, the commission could collect 2 cents per acre of private dry grazing land, and 10 cents per animal unit month on all domestic cattle and sheep on state and federal grazing lands.

The commission estimates collecting $317,770, said Stan Boyd, lobbyist with the Idaho Woodgrowers' Association — money that would go to some self-education programs on effective grazing practices, but mostly to filling the public in on ranchers' side of the issues.

"If agriculture is going to get the word out that we're good stewards of the land, we're going to have to do it ourselves," he said.

But that's where the Idaho Conservation League is skeptical.

This attempt is nothing more than to polish an image, lobbyist Mike Medberry said.

Bill would let officials publicize sex offenders' whereabouts

By Karen Tolkinen Times-News writer

BOISE — Sex offenders could see their names on TV or in the newspaper, or their pictures on fliers, if a bill cracking down on serious offenders becomes law.

On Wednesday, the Senate Judiciary and Rules committee will hold public hearings on a proposal that would permit local law enforcement officials to publicize the identities of offenders living in their communities, and another that would force sex offenders to register locally for life instead of for 10 years, which current law requires.

Both proposals have good chances of becoming law, said Sen. Denton Darrington, R-DeLo, the chairman of that committee.

"People don't have any tolerance for sex offenders," he said, "I think people ought to have that protection out there."

He withdrew the first proposal last year, expecting it to violate the double jeopardy clause of the constitution. Since last session, he said, the courts have upheld such laws elsewhere, so he's making another run at it.

The first proposal could draw the most controversy because it could make it hard for an offender to find a permanent place to live and because of philosophical opposition from civil liberties groups, Darrington said.

And while it isn't a top issue this legislative session for the American Civil Liberties Union, it does awaken some concerns, said Executive Director Jack Van Valkenburg.

He's troubled by reports from states with similar laws of neighbors taking the law into their own hands and retaliating against sex offenders and in some cases wrongly identifying the sex offender.

But if that happens, the sex offenders would fall under law enforcement protection, said Cassia County Sheriff Billy Crystal, who thinks the proposals are a good idea.

Of the 25 or so registered sex offenders in Cassia County, the benefit of warning neighbors and employers outweighs the potential risk, he said.

A few of those registered in his county are trying to become respectable citizens, but most move from job to job, making them hard to track, he said. None of their neighbors realizes that they are indeed sex offenders. Please see SEX/B3

How Idaho lawmakers voted

Senate		House
Issue	Yes	Yes	Yes
1) CLOTURE The Senate on Tuesday rejected a motion, 50-34, to end debate and clear the way for a final vote on a Republican farm bill. The measure required a two-thirds of the Senate, or 60 votes to pass. Seven senators — including Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, who was campaigning for president — were absent for the vote. A "yes" vote favors ending debate and clearing the way for final passage.	Yes	Yes	Yes
2) SUGAR The Senate on Wednesday voted, 50-46, to bar northeastern states from creating a compact to set regional dairy prices. A "yes" vote favors barring the New England dairy compact.	Yes	Yes	Yes
3) PEANUTS The Senate on Wednesday voted, 69-36, to block an effort to cut the government-guaranteed price for peanuts. A "yes" vote favors ending federal support for peanut farmers and raising peanut prices. Those voting "no" said peanut farmers should not be given special treatment by the federal government.	Yes	Yes	Yes
4) PROMOTION The Senate on Wednesday voted, 58-37, to cut money for a program intended to boost U.S. exports abroad. The Market Promotion Program would be capped at $70 million annually, down from its current level of $110 million per year. Foreign corporations would be prohibited from receiving any share of the money. A "yes" vote favors cutting the program's funding.	No	No	No
5) SUGAR The Senate on Wednesday rejected, 85-01, a measure to eliminate federal sugar subsidies after two years. A "yes" vote favors ending federal sugar subsidies after two years.	No	No	No
6) FINAL FARM BILL The Senate on Wednesday approved, 64-32, a farm bill that would make many federal commodity subsidies. Instead, farmers would receive fixed, but declining, payments over the next seven years. A "yes" vote favors the bill.	Yes	Yes	Yes

Idaho physicist keeps up Russian home page

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Nuclear physicist Peter Angelo has never been to Russia, but he knows plenty about the former Soviet Union's atomic technology.

He has an Internet link to more Russian documents than he could ever read. The Idaho Falls man sorts through them nightly to see what is technically accurate and of interest to the public.

Then he throws them onto the Internet's World Wide Web in a "home page" about the aftermath of the Cold War and Chernobyl.

Since he started in mid-January, more than 600 people have been interested, according to his electronic counter tabulating how many people peek at his home page. That makes his the second most popular service on the Idaho Online Web Server.

It is all part of the consultant's plan to become an expert on the effects of the Soviet nuclear technology. He argues he has learned the equivalent of a master's degree.

He also lives vicariously in Russia.

"I've been widowed by the Web," Peter's wife Bonnie complained, noting the four hours he spends on the project every weekday, and more on weekends.

The 37-year-old former reactor physicist for Argonne National Laboratory has Russian language tutor. His daughter named his well-known Labrador "Sabaka," which is Russian for "dog."

Missing man's car appears in Montana

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Authorities are hunting for a missing Ririe resident whose car turned up with two men arrested in Montana.

Bonneville County Sheriff's authorities Monday planned to search the car of Michael Shawn Fox, 52, which has been returned to Idaho.

Fox was last seen on Feb. 3 when he left a friend's home in Idaho Falls with the intention of driving to his mother's home in Ririe.

Cassia offers 3 bond issue options

By John Thompson
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Cassia County School District officials unveiled a multiple-choice bond proposal Monday night, asking voters to select one of three tax options to upgrade schools.

In a March 19 special election, voters will be asked to cast two ballots — the first picks which option they support, and the second authorizes the School Board to issue general obligation school bonds for as much as $21.9 million.

The bonds are a means of borrowing money for school construction, which property taxpayers would pay back over 20 years.

A district press release described the three options.

Option A is similar to a proposal that failed last year. It seeks the full $21.9 million, which would be used to build a high school in Burley, a regional technology center, a high school in Declo, a high school in Oakley, and additions to Raft River High School.

Option B, which the district has tagged the "No Tax Increase Plan," asks for $15 million and would renovate Burley High School, modify Declo High School, build a new high school in Oakley, and add onto Raft River High School and Burley Junior High School.

Option C, tagged the "Limited Consolidation Plan," would use $11.7 million to build a consolidated high school near Burley, close Declo and Oakley high schools, and build the initial phase of the regional technology center.

Voters also have the option to choose none of the above.

The multiple-choice concept, developed by the public finance division of Zions Bank in Salt Lake City, has been attempted once before in Idaho's Clark School District. It was voted down, according to a bank spokesman Thomas Pitcher.

Impact on taxpayers under

'I would like to ... suggest to all of us, taxpayers, parents of school children, the elderly in our community and everyone that the time to do something is now.'

—Everett Howard, Cassia County School District superintendent.

Option A breaks out as a $4.66 million increase on a $50,000 home in 1996. The amount decreases to $2.07 on that same home by 1998, according to the press release.

Option B, a $10,000 farm under option-A, the farmer pays $16.35 in 1996, decreasing to $7.26 by 1998.

Plan B, the $15 million "no increase plan" would do just that for $3.19 in 1996, in 1998 it would pay taxes on a $50,000 home, decreasing to zero by 1998. On a $100,000 farm, it asks for $11.18 million in 1996, according to the district's figures.

Plan C, the limited consolidation plan, asks for $11.7 million, which breaks out to $2.37 monthly on a $50,000 home. The plan also decreases to zero by 1998. For a $100,000 farm it asks for an $8.33 monthly increase until 1998.

District Superintendent Everett Howard said last year's failed bond proposal proved that something needs to be done now. Last year, 55 percent of the voters approved a $22-million bond proposal, but Idaho is one of three states that require two-thirds (about 67 percent) approval to pass a bond issue.

In a short speech, Howard stressed that the children should come first.

"The overall sentiment among the Board now, and I believe with the vast majority in the last election is that something needs to be done. The real question we have to ask ourselves is when and what would be done," he said. "I would like to address the when and would suggest to all of us, taxpayers, parents of school children, the elderly in our community and everyone that the time to do something is now."

In launching the campaign, the district has appointed a representative to campaign for each option.

Campaigning for Option A is Susan Price, who can be contacted at 678-2840.

Option B, the "no-increase" plan, is represented by Linda Petersen, 678-0000. And Option C, the limited consolidation plan, is represented by Leroy Funk, 678-0657.

Information will be mailed out to voters throughout the district, and public hearings are also being scheduled. Howard said a healthy debate is needed to fuel the process.

Central to the process is an assessment of the hospital's strengths and an understanding of current and anticipated dynamics in the health care market. Using that information, officials will develop a strategy to focus the hospital's resources in critical areas.

The final element will be implementation of strategy, including a marketing plan, business plan, leadership development plan, customer satisfaction plan, and other plans.

In a memo to board members, Bingham said development of the strategic plan is a major priority in the current fiscal year.

"The action board will listen to a report on special meetings with physicians, reports from the finance committee, an information systems update, and the auxiliary annual report."

School Board Grazing

considers computers

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Computers and motorcycles are among the items slated for discussion tonight during a meeting of the Twin Falls School Board.

School Board members will decide whether to approve bids for about $30,000 worth of computer equipment, according to information provided by the district. Meanwhile, basic-computer training will be available for teachers beginning Feb. 20 through the school district.

The Idaho Department of Education is proposing to offer motorcycle safety courses to students and residents from May 17 through Oct. 20. With the district's permission, the state would store 12 motorcycles on campus at the Twin Falls High School and provide insurance for all instructors and students.

The state would need a parking lot for riding motorcycles and a classroom equipped with slide projectors and a videocamera recorder. Lessons would be held during evenings and weekends, according to a three-page letter from the state Department of Education.

Board members will meet at 7 p.m. tonight at the office of the Twin Falls School District, 201 Main Avenue West. Call 733-6900 for more information.

are, he said. He isn't sure which are most likely to commit sex crimes again.

Crystal likes the idea of publicizing names — he would like to put the names in the news media, but isn't sure whether those trying to build respectable lives should be reported.

"I guess that's the $64,000 question," he said. "Where do we draw the line? Do we say all of them or do we place limitations on the names we release?"

According to the proposal, law enforcement officials would base their decision on a good faith belief that the person posed a threat to the community or was likely to commit more sex crimes.

Crystal said he definitely would have released the name of a man convicted of a sex crime who had tried to strike up a friendship with a young neighbor girl two years ago in his county. Neighbors discovered his identity before anything happened, but Crystal said the man was close to reoffending.

"After neighbors started shunning him as well as having public meetings about his presence, the man moved out of the county."

The other proposal — to force offenders to register for life — will draw relatively little flack, Dammington predicted.

"It retains provisions that would allow one-time, less-serious offenders off the hook, he said. Ten years after getting out of jail or off probation, the offender could petition the courts to be exempt from lifetime registration if he or she can prove that they are unlikely to commit future violent crimes, have no criminal charges pending and is not under investigation for other crimes."

"I'm not out there trying to make it out of propaganda," she said. "You have to base your decision on good information."

In a state in which 64 percent of the land is owned by the federal government, with more land belonging to the state, such commissions are crucial. Mum said, "These lands are managed by the public," she said. "If the public doesn't support what's happening on the land, it's going to change."

It's already happening in the timber industry, she said, which is saddled with lawsuits and negative public perception.

The rangeland commission has been unfunded since its inception because of disagreement within the farming and ranching industry, Boyd said.

At first opposed by the Idaho Farm Bureau Federation because of its mandatory nature, the commission's proposal has now taken on a different flavor. The fees are still mandatory, but those who pay them can ask to have them refunded.

Grazing

"Whoa boy, you would too," he said. "When you're out in front of the condition of the land and no amount of advertising and PR is going to change the degraded condition of the public lands."

The commission didn't need to go through the legislative process — it could have formed a private association to do the same thing, Medberry said. It's only for seeking legislative approval is to gain state sanction, he said.

Medberry called such a maneuver evidence of the influence of loggers and grazers on the Legislature.

"If it is allowed to collect fees, the commission will pattern its activities exactly after the Idaho Forest Products Commission, which started operating in 1992, Boyd said.

That commission spent about $550,000 last year on educational programs, including radio, television and newspaper ads, Director Betty Munis said. It runs public opinion polls before and after ad campaigns, and success is determined by how well informed the public seems afterward.

Her organization has operated safety seminars for loggers and helped set up school programs such as Project Learning Tree, encouraging teachers to incorporate trees and forests into their curriculum.

Munis says accusations from environmentalists are off base. "I just don't buy it," she said. "Our goal is: Let's put it out on the table. ... Natural-resources issues are

Greenspan in line for 3rd term at Fed

Greenspan

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Alan Greenspan has been whispering economic advice into the ears of Republican presidents going back to Nixon, but that doesn't mean he can't be Bill Clinton's man.

Indeed, the Democratic president appears set to nominate Greenspan for a third four-year term as Federal Reserve chairman in large part because of his Republican credentials.

The White House insisted Monday that the president had no recommendations, underscored by his National Economic Council, but administration officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said there were no other candidates.

Some officials had expected the Greenspan appointment last week. But they said the announcement was delayed because of trouble filling two other vacancies on the seven-member Fed board.

The president had been expected to nominate New York investment banker Felix Rohatyn as vice chairman of the Fed to replace Alan Blinder, who resigned last month to return to teaching at Princeton.

But Rohatyn's proposed nomination appeared in trouble Monday, with Sen. Connie Mack, a member of the Banking Committee and chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, leading a charge to derail it.

Committee staff memo attacking Rohatyn's long-held liberal views in support of activist governmental solutions to various problems.

Noting Clinton had declared the era of big government over in his State-of-the-Union address, Mack said of Rohatyn, "It would be difficult to find a nominee more at odds with Bill Clinton's rhetoric."

Congressional sources, who also spoke on condition of anonymity, said White House officials had been unable to find any Republicans on the Banking Committee willing to support Rohatyn, forcing the administration to reconsider whether to nominate him.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Mike McClure refused to discuss the recommendations Clinton was receiving, but he said the White House was concerned "that these appointments to what should be and must be an independent board are becoming enmeshed in politics."

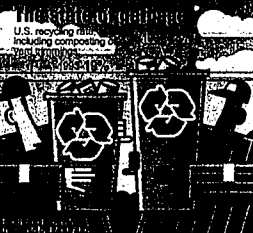

Private economists said Clinton's trouble winning approval for Rohatyn, a Democrat, demonstrated the political risk of nominating anyone other than Greenspan, a Republican first-nominated to the Fed in 1987 by Ronald Reagan and renominated by George Bush.

Various Democrats in Congress, including House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., have complained Greenspan has been overly concerned about fighting inflation and less worried about people losing their jobs because the economy was growing too slowly.

Analysts said while the pro-growth Clinton might have preferred someone else as Fed chairman, he bowed to political realities.

In addition, while Greenspan's interest rate increases have been blamed for the sluggish economy, the Fed has cut rates three times since last July and those rate reductions should ensure an economic rebound by the time voters go to the polls in November.

IRS aims telephone filing ad at young adults

WASHINGTON — To encourage tax filing by telephone, the Internal Revenue Service is targeting a television advertising campaign at 18-to-24-year olds.

The 15-second and 30-second spots, featuring animated pencils that complain they aren't needed anymore, already have aired on the NBC and Fox networks, IRS spokesman Steve Pyrek said Monday.

ABC, NBC and MTV — a "Generation X" favorite — also plan to show them.

Treasury securities hit lowest levels in more than a year

WASHINGTON — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities fell in Monday's auction to the lowest levels in more than a year.

The Treasury Department sold $13.8 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 4.59 percent, down from 4.88 percent last week. Another $13.8 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 4.71 percent, down from 4.79 percent.

The three-month bill rate was the lowest since they sold for 4.79 percent on Sept. 26, 1994.

Blue chips lead market to record

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Dow Jones industrial average bolted to its six-sixth-straight record Monday as investor enthusiasm, underscored by record flows of new cash into mutual funds, pushed the market's rally into a fourth week.

Most broad-market indexes rose, padding last week's records, but investors again showed a greater preference for bellwether issues as the safest way to ride the market higher.

The Dow industrial average gained 58.53 to 5,600.15, its first close above 5,600 and its 13th record in 16 sessions. The well-known barometer of blue-chip companies, which already has risen almost 500 points this year, was up nearly 75 points at one point Monday.

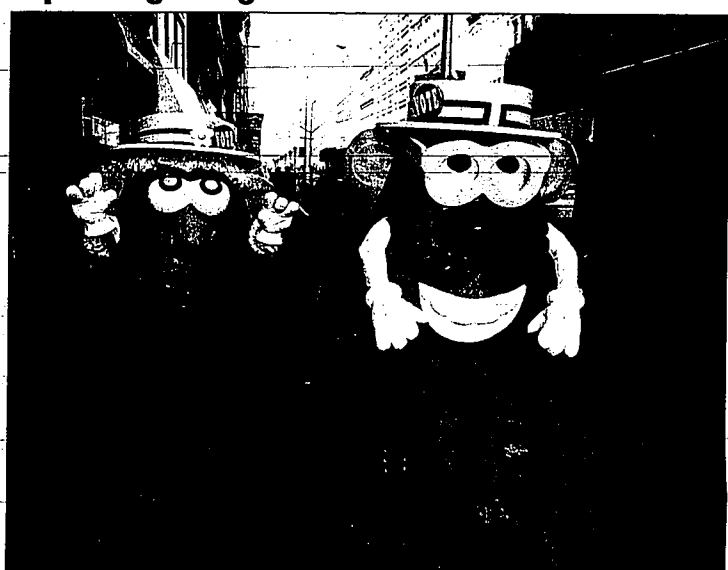

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by about 8 to 7 on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume totaled 397.84 million shares as of 4 p.m., down from Friday's buoyant pace.

The NYSE composite index rose 2.26 to 351.76. The Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 5.05 to 61.45, and the Nasdaq composite index gained 0.78 to 1095.38 — all new marks — but the American Stock Exchange's market value index fell 1.55 to 562.46.

Overseas, Frankfurt's DAX index rose 0.7 percent and London's FT-SE 100 gained 0.3 percent. Japanese financial markets closed Monday in observance of Foundation Day, a national holiday.

Traders and analysts have said the market owes much of its strength to record flows of cash into stock mutual funds. According to the Investment Company Institute, a mutual fund trade group, investors put a record $24.5 billion more into stock funds in January than they removed.

Spudding along

Mr. and Mrs. Potato Head walk along 23rd St., as they head towards the 1996 Toy Fair in New York City Monday. The Potato Heads were recently announced as the official "Spokespuds" to help get out the vote this election year with the League of Women Voters Education Fund.

Brewing companies cry in beer over false labels

The Washington Post WASHINGTON — Tastes Great. Does it matter where it's brewed and bottled? Anheuser-Busch Inc. and an assortment of specialty beer makers think it matters a lot. They are in a froth over the labels of some of their most successful small-pint competitors, such as Boston Beer Co. and Pete's Brewing Co. The companies do not tell consumers that their beers, including Samuel Adams Boston Lager and Pete's Wicked Ale, are not brewed batch by small batch in independent breweries by strapping men in lederhosen, but are produced under contract by the big guys — companies such as Pittsburgh Brewing Co., G. Heileman Brewing Co., Stroh Brewing Co. and Genesee Brewing Co. Furthermore, Anheuser-Busch points out, the creator of Samuel Adams has built its image and marketing advantage on being a revolutionary, dry-tasting Boston beer. But, despite its label, which says "Boston Beer Co., Boston, Mass.," the beverage is brewed elsewhere — a fact that's impossible to discern unless you happened to read the company's prospectus when it recently went public. "We're tired of some people in our industry claiming to be something they are not. They compete against large companies, portraying themselves as microbrewers controlling the process all the way," said Steve LeResche, spokesman for Anheuser-Busch Cos. "We put our name on every drop we brew." This may seem like Anheuser-Busch crying in its beer. It has about 45 percent of the U.S. market and is itself riding the boom in microbrews with new brands such as Red Wolf Lager (which it labels as its own). But, from a sales point of view, the concern is real. Overall, sales of traditional mass-market beers have been flat, and the fastest-growing segment of the market is specialty beers, which command premium prices. The specialty beers offer fuller-bodied flavor, natural ingredients and more flavorful hops. Anheuser-Busch knows that for each Samuel Adams or Pete's Wicked discovered by a drinker, an Anheuser-Busch Budweiser goes unappreciated. In a duxing this out in the marketplace, Anheuser and about 10 "craft" brewers have asked the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms to impose a rule that would force brewers to disclose the source of the brew on labels and in advertising. The agency said it would consider the petition, especially since it has been looking into contract brewing labeling issues anyway. The labels at issue are not out of bounds in a regulatory sense since brewers are allowed to use their principal place of business (if it's a brewery) or a brand name and place of production. Boston Beer said this campaign comes directly out of Anheuser-Busch's marketing department, which is making the location and ownership of the brewery more important than what's inside the bottle. "It's misleading to say it's brewed by the Pittsburgh Brewing Co. because we have no say in how we make the beer or control over it," said Jim Koch, Boston Beer's founder. "Host" breweries merely supply equipment and employees; the recipe and the ingredients, down to the hops ground in Germany and the proprietary yeast strain grown in Boston, belong to Boston Beer, he said. "Besides, once you've had a Sam Adams, it's hard to consider Bud the king of beers," he jabbed, playing on Anheuser's own advertising. Not to be outdone in the regulatory arena, Boston Beer asked the ATT to consider mandating "freshness" labels on beer so consumers could be sure they aren't buying a stale beer. This is company policy for Boston Beer, but Koch points out that many brewers use a secret code to flag shelf life. He also asked for a clear definition of "microbeer," a term now being overused and abused. Pete's said it "proudly" brews at Stroh Breweries, but Pete's is responsible for the overall quality of the product.

Report: AT&T, MCI talk about joining forces

NEW YORK (AP) — AT&T and MCI, fierce competitors in long distance phone service, are talking about joining forces in creating local telephone networks in major U.S. markets. The Wall Street Journal reported today. The negotiations between the two rivals — considered highly unusual in the industry — are only in the early stages, the Journal said. But the newspaper quoted unidentified executives at both AT&T Corp. and MCI Communications Corp. as saying the companies will reach an agreement to share in the cost of building local phone networks in some markets. Jim Byrnes, a spokesman for AT&T in Basking Ridge, N.J., said the company had no comment on the story. A call to MCI before office hours this morning was unanswered by a recording. The current discussions are the result of telecommunications legislation signed into law last week that allows long-distance and local carriers to cross markets. A new network such as the one envisioned in the AT&T-MCI talks could cost as much as $5 billion just to get started, and as much as $20 billion to become competitive. The regional Bell companies now control more than 95 percent of the local phone traffic in their markets.

Q. Seldom do traditional Koreans get divorced. Why?
A. They're strong on family, long on male domination, short on women's rights. Divorce is considered a deep disgrace.

Q. A dove hunter tells me he doesn't shoot pigeons. I thought they were the same bird...?
A. They are, except for size. Regional custom has given the dove name to some smaller species.

Good friend's bad grooming is source of embarrassment Club calendar

DEAR ABBY: I have a profound sense of guilt writing this letter, because the friend I describe is a marvelous mother, a devoted grandmother, and a smart, generous and thoroughly delightful woman.

The problem? Her appearance and personal grooming are her lowest priorities. When we are together (especially in public), I find myself being silently critical and embarrassed.

She lives out of town and visits me twice a year for two or three weeks. On her last visit, she brought clothes I've seen her wear for 20 years: torn skirts, stained blouses, and scuffed and worn shoes. When she entered my home, she kicked off her shoes.

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

Barf, her feet were dirty, including her toenails, and she seemed oblivious to anything but her own comfort.

This has nothing to do with money. She is well-fixed financially, travels extensively, has exquisite jewelry, etc. When I offer to take her shopping, she replies, "What for?" I have plenty of everything I need.

I love her dearly and wouldn't hurt her feelings for the world. Abby, have you — or any of your wise readers — any suggestions on how to deal with this? Frankly, I don't think she'll ever change, and I question if I can change my discomfort with her appearance.

— UP A TREE
DOWN SOUTH

DEAR UP A TREE: If you want the situation to change, hitting isn't going to do it. Your friend needs to be told to clean up her act, buy a few new duds, and get a pedicure before she goes shoeless in public.

Briefly

Morningside students seek labels

TWIN FALLS — Morningside Elementary School students are conducting a label collection drive that promises to deliver valuable educational equipment.
Through a program called "Campbell's Labels for Education," Campbell Soup Co. offers free equipment to schools in exchange for some playground equipment and software programs for school's computer lab.
Labels eligible for redemption include Campbell's soups, Franco-American, V8 Juice, Progress, Swanson, Mrs. Paul's, Vlasie, Peppergate Farm, Marie's, Open Pit, Pace and some others. Friends and family members in the community can help by giving the labels to the students or dropping them off at the school. For more information, call Jennifer Levitt at 734-2013.

Health, safety fair planned tonight

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls Head Start's annual Health and Safety Fair is planned for 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. tonight at the Head Start building, 296 Falls Ave. W.
The fair will offer free vision screenings, blood pressure checks and fingerprinting. A Farm-Die-Rama display depicting more than 70 agricultural accidents will be set up, along with displays by local health and safety agencies. Smokey Bear and Ukas, the local drug dog, will make special appearances. A chili and hot dog dinner will be served for free, but donations will be accepted.
Head Start sponsors the fair annually to provide children, their families and community with helpful information on safety and health. For more information, call Chris Anderson at 734-5550.

ADD consortium plans teleconference

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley ADD Consortium is sponsoring a two-session teleconference on attention-deficit disorders to train secondary teachers in strategies that are known to work with students who have ADD.
Nationally known experts and a panel of teachers and parents sharing their successes are featured in the program. Broadcasts are interactive, with each teleconference featuring live question-and-answer segments. Participants will have an opportunity to call the presenters via an 800 number and will be offered continuing education units for attendance. The broadcasts are underwritten by the Magic Valley ADD Consortium with the aid of a generous donation from the Blue Lakes Rotary Club.
"ADD Strategies for Secondary Students" is the topic of the first session, with broadcasts planned for 2 to 4 p.m. and again from 5 to 7 p.m. Tuesday in room 108 of the Aspen Building at the College of Southern Idaho.

The second session, offered at the same times on April 9, will address "Inclusive Strategies for ADD." For more information, call 734-3914.

Grant-writing workshop planned

TWIN FALLS — "Entering the World of Grant Writing," a one-day workshop, will be offered March 1 in Twin Falls.
Participants will gain a basic understanding of the grant-writing process, how to research funding sources and determine the organization's ability to manage grant-funded projects. A funding resource table will be available, and those attending will have an opportunity to begin writing a proposal.
Dana Meyers, owner of Management Solutions in Poacello, and Kathleen Hall will teach the session. Cost is $65 per person, and registration is set by Friday. For more information, call Meyers at (208) 234-1159. The event is sponsored by Management Solutions.

Kimberly plans 'Math-A-Thon' Friday

KIMBERLY — Kimberly Elementary School students will participate in "Math-A-Thon" this Friday.
Students will be given pledge sheets if they have parent or guardian permission to participate. They will be seeking pledges from sponsors for each problem they complete correctly on a math test. Prizes will be awarded to the top sellers, based on the money turned in and the number of pledges collected. All participants will receive a special certificate. Proceeds will be used to purchase a portable computer lab for the Kimberly Elementary School.

Lewis to receive Eagle award Friday

TWIN FALLS — Travis Lewis has earned the Eagle Scout Award through the Boy Scouts of America. The award will be presented to Travis at a court of honor planned for 7 p.m. Friday at the LDS 9th Ward Church on Elizabeth Boulevard.
Travis has completed 30 merit badges, which also qualifies him for a bronze palm to be awarded at a later date. For his Eagle project, he built two floating waterfowl nesting islands at the for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game at the Niagara Springs — Wildlife Management area south of Wendell.
Travis is the 16-year-old son of Mike and Rita Lewis of Twin Falls. He is a junior at Twin Falls High School, where he is a member of the varsity football team. He is a member of Troop 159, sponsored by the Twin Falls LDS 9th Ward.

Murtaugh beats Wolves, advances

By John Derr
Times-News writer

JEROME - After beating a team twice during the season, it's easy to overlook it when the district tourney comes along.

That is exactly what happened to the Murtaugh Red Devils Monday in the Class A-4 Southside sub-district boys' basketball tournament at Jerome High School.

Murtaugh had to come back from a first-quarter deficit and hold off the pesky Castleford Wolves, beating them 65-56, to advance.

In the other game, Halgerman sent Hansen home, beating the Huskies 60-46. The Pirates will play Raft River today at 8 p.m.

The win, Murtaugh's eighth in a row, sends the Red Devils into today's championship semi-final battle with Oakley.

"Defense is our game, when it's working we are getting the points," said Tanner Stanger, who had five steals including two in the last 90 seconds to preserve the victory. "They came ready to play and we overlooked them."

Castleford definitely came for a battle as it grabbed the early lead with solid defense, going ahead 12-10 in the first quarter.

The Red Devils heated up in the second period, outscoring the Wolves 18-9 as Curt Wright had seven points and Stanger chipped in eight of its game-high 15 points to give Murtaugh a seven-point advantage at the end of the half.

Murtaugh kept up the pressure, putting on a full-court press, at times, to rattle Castleford, building leads up to 17 points in the third period. Wright and Josh Funk tossed in 3-pointers as the quarter ended with the Red Devils in control, 48-33.

Castleford was not done yet as it went on a 10-3 run to start the fourth period. Mark Kinyon went 4-4 from the line and Kevin Kimball and Troy Parin each had a bucket to cut the lead to eight points.

line, Castleford's Guy Wells hit a long bomb to cut the lead to six with three minutes to play.

Josh Funk stepped up for Murtaugh as he canned 8-of-8 from the charity stripe to ice the victory.

"We have had some close games, so I'm getting used to hitting the free throw," said Funk, who went 8-of-9 in Saturday's game.

"Castleford came out ready and they forced us to hit our shots. This will give us confidence since we are the underdog," he said.

Wells hit another 3-pointer, but Stanger's steals, and solid free throw shooting sent Murtaugh into the championship semifinals.

"We came out extremely overconfident. I told them to remember Hansen," said Murtaugh coach Rob Geertsen, referring to a loss that kept the Red Devils out of a tie for the district title. "We all looked ahead to Oakley, but we need to learn to play against everybody."

"We were a step slow and had lapses in the second quarter that hurt us," said Castleford coach Andy Wiseman. "Funk really helped them down the stretch."

East Mimico holds wrestling registration

RUBERT - Registration-and-practice for freestyle wrestling will be Thursday at East Mimico Junior High School.

For children ages 5-8, registration and practice will be from 4:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. For children ages 9-and-up, registration and practice will take place from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m.

Each wrestler must bring a birth certificate. The cost is $25 a person. The fee includes insurance, USA Freestyle magazine and a freestyle card.

There will be tournaments every weekend, starting in the middle of March. The first tournament will be at Mimico High School.

For more information contact Grant Killoy at 436-1331.

Fans of Simplot athletes can keep track on internet

POCATELLO - Information about the Simplot Games, a premiere high school track and field event in Pocatello, is available to Internet surfers around the world.

The J.R. Simplot Co. has invited other nations to join them at the Games with the introduction of their World Wide Web.

"The Internet is a wonderful way for people to learn what the Simplot Games are all about," said Carol Lish, executive director of the Games.

Fans can get the latest information on their favorite athletes at the Games, scheduled for Thursday through Saturday in Holt Arena on Idaho State University.

"With athletes coming to Pocatello from throughout the United States and Canada, there are a lot of fans who will want to see what's going on," Lish said. "Now with the Internet, we can give them results of each race."

When browsers type in "www.simplot.com," they will reach the J.R. Simplot Co.'s home page. They can click onto the Simplot Games section.

Volpentest is a two-time Paralympic gold medalist and holds world records in the 100- and 200-meter dash, although being born without hands and feet. He will try to set a new world record in the 55-meter dash at the Games.

La Salle humors No. 4 Villanova

The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA - Kerry Kittles scored 23 points Monday night and No. 4 Villanova routed its rival La Salle 90-50, the worst loss sustained by the Explorers since 1945.

Jason Lawson and Eric Eberz each had 11 points for the Wildcats, winners of eight straight. Romaine Hayward had 14 for La Salle, which has lost eight of nine.

It was La Salle's worst loss since a 94-52 defeat to City College of New York on Dec. 15, 1945.

After neither team scored in the game's first 26 minutes, the Wildcats (21-3) toyed with the Explorers (5-18), leading by 30 points at the half.

Brian Flickinger's 3-pointer got La Salle on the board and cut Villanova's lead to 5-3 five minutes into the game. That was as close as La Salle would get.

The overmatched Explorers tried to play a slow-down game early but they missed their first six shots, and had four turnovers, including two shot clock violations, in the game's first five minutes.

Ahead 8-5, the Wildcats ran off a 9-0 run, capped by Lawson's layup. It was the first of three big runs that rendered the second half meaningless.

Villanova went on a 14-0 run, with Kittles hitting back-to-back 3-pointers, to assume a 36-11 lead with 3:25 left in the half.

The Wildcats finished the half with an 8-0

College men's basketball run. Two free throws by Chuck Konegay closed the half and gave Villanova its biggest lead of the half at 46-16.

Villanova compounded La Salle's ineptitude with 82 percent shooting from the floor in the first half, including 6 of 7 from 3-point range. La Salle shot 23 percent, and the Wildcats got 13 points off 11 La Salle turnovers.

No. 16 Syracuse 63, Rutgers 54
PISCATAWAY, N.J. - John Wallace scored 18 points and grabbed 12 rebounds in No. 16 Syracuse's uninspired 63-54 victory over Rutgers on Monday night.

The Orangemen (19-6, 9-5 Big East) certainly didn't look like the team that beat them No. 8 Georgetown by 21 points two days earlier. The game was one of those where neither shot well, both turned the ball with little pressure and the better team prevailed because of a run everyone knew was coming.

Rutgers (6-15, 3-10) was somehow within 39-36 with 9:53 to play, but as it has so many times in its first season in the Big East, it allowed the big run to come.

Syracuse scored the game's next 11 points to take a 50-36 lead with 5:03 left. The Scarlet Knights missed six shots from the field and the front end of a 1-and-1 in the span and the closest they got the rest of the way was 55-48 with 1:41 left on a four-point play by Billy Gilligan.

No. 9 Cavaliers handle N. Carolina, 83-70

The Associated Press

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. - Wendy Palmer got 20 points and 12 rebounds, and Tori Suber had 20 points and nine rebounds Monday night as No. 9 Virginia downed North Carolina 83-70.

"After shooting a poor 12-for-35 from the field in the first half, the Tar Heels went ice-cold during a decisive 21-6 Virginia run in the second half. Palmer and Mimi McKinney each scored six points in the sport that turned a 51-51 tie into a 72-57 Virginia lead with 5:18 to play.

Tracy Reid scored 20 of her game-high 26 points for North Carolina in the first 37

College women's basketball minutes. Tightly defended by Virginia's Jenny Boucek, Reid made just one basket during the Cavaliers' 21-6 run.

North Carolina never got closer than 76-67 in the closing minutes, and missed four of its last five shots in the last 1:50.

Virginia (18-5, 9-3 Atlantic Coast Conference) hit 31 of 60 shots from the field, compared to North Carolina's 27 of 76.

Virginia led 35-30 at the break. The Cavaliers solidified their control of first place in the Atlantic Coast Conference with their fourth straight win over the Tar Heels. Virginia took a half-game lead over Duke, which handed the Cavaliers a loss last Saturday in Charlottesville.

"On her way to her 14th double-double this season, the 51st of her career, Palmer grabbed 11 defensive boards in helping the Cavaliers take a 43-39 edge in rebounding.

Monick Foote added 14 points and McKinney 13 for Virginia.

Chanel Wright had 16 points and Tracy Sadler 14 for the Tar Heels (12-10, 7-5 ACC).

Wolverines stay at top of SWAC heap

The Associated Press

Derrick Elliott had consecutive 28-point games for Utah Valley in two overtime victories that kept the Wolverines atop the Scenic West Athletic Conference standings.

Elliott scored 10 of his points in overtime Friday against Snow (17-8 overall, 6-7 in the SWAC) to help Utah Valley (21-2, 11-1) to a 110-106 win.

Against Dixie (21-4, 9-4) on Saturday, he hit a 3-pointer in the closing seconds to force another overtime, then converted four key foul shots to seal a 102-99 victory.

However, Utah Valley lost its leading scorer for the season. Scott Benson, who averaged 20 points and seven rebounds an outing, broke his leg late in the game against Snow.

A three-way tie for second place developed, with Dixie, Southern Idaho and North Idaho with identical win-loss records.

Eastern Utah is half a game back at 82-8-4.

Southern Idaho won two road games over the weekend, upending Ricks (12-14, 4-9) by an 87-77 score and North Idaho 78-70.

North Idaho beat Treasure Valley (9-15, 2-11) by 103-66, while Dixie slipped past Salt Lake (15-9, 4-8) by 75-62. Eastern Utah edged unclear-dwelling Colorado Northwestern (6-6, 1-1) 72-69.

In other SWAC games, Ricks beat Treasure Valley 75-58 and Salt Lake tripped Snow (17-8, 6-7) by 82-79.

This week's key games include Utah Valley at Southern Idaho, North Idaho at Eastern Utah and Snow at Dixie.

UMass reigns NCAA poll for 8th straight week

The Associated Press

Things are getting pretty ho-hum about the college basketball poll.

Massachusetts was back on top Monday for the eighth straight week, and Kentucky stayed the runner-up for that same period.

There was some mixing among Nos. 3-6 as Connecticut moved up one spot to third, while Villanova jumped two places to fourth. Kansas, which had been in fifth since fifth after losing to Missouri and Cincinnati dropped two places to sixth after its buzzer-beater loss to Arizona.

The only new team in the rankings this week was Mississippi State, which came back in at No. 25 after a three-week absence. Coach Richard Williams just didn't sound all that thrilled about returning to the rankings.

"I guess it's good again for fans and players ... the regular old answers that coaches give to that question," Williams said Monday. "Go ahead and write down anything you want to write down. Choose your answer."

The Bulldogs (16-5) were ninth in the preseason rankings and fell out following a five-game run where they lost four, including consecutive split losses to Arkansas and South Carolina. They came back in on a five-game winning streak, the latest a road victory over Oklahoma on Saturday.

"We weren't doing the little things, coming up with loose balls, chasing long rebounds and blocking out," Williams said of the difference in the five-game runs. "I don't think we've improved dramatically offensively or defensively in terms of technique."

The No. 1 run by Massachusetts (23-0), the country's only unbeaten team, is the longest on the top since Duke spent the entire 1991-92 season there.

The Minutemen received 59 first-place votes and 1,619 points from the national media panel, while Kentucky (20-1) had five No. 1 votes and 1,563 points.

Connecticut (22-1) received the other first-place vote.

Utah led seventh from last week and was followed in the Top Ten by Wake Forest, Penn State and Virginia Tech. Purdue, which jumped from 14th to 11th, led the Second Ten and was followed by Texas Tech, Arizona, Georgetown, Memphis, Syracuse, North Carolina, UCLA, Iowa and Stanford.

The last five teams in the poll were Boston College, Iowa State, Eastern Michigan, Louisville and Mississippi State.

Michigan (15-9) fell out of the poll for the first time this season after Saturday's loss at Purdue, the Wolverines' fourth in their last five games.

The biggest jump of the week was Stanford's move from 25th to No. 20. The Cardinal (15-5) swept their homestand with Southern California and UCLA this week.

The biggest drop was Georgetown's fall from No. 8 to 14th, its first time out of the Top Ten this season. The Hoyas (19-5) lost road games this week to Villanova and Syracuse by a combined 34 points.

Burley falls to Highland; Twin Falls beats Pocatello

The Times-News
POCATELLO - After giving up 20 second-quarter points, the Bruins turned up the defense in the second half and claimed an opening run win over Pocatello, 62-50, Monday.
 The win sends Twin Falls against Minico tonight at 7 p.m. in Rupert in the second round of the Class A-1, Region III boys' basketball tournament.

The Bruins, who lost at Pocatello during the regular season, went to the free throw line 22 times in the fourth quarter.
 They only made 12, but it was enough to coast through.

 Dietrich took advantage of a 41-26 halftime lead to trounce Richfield 66-52.

Bliss stayed close with Camas County until the third quarter, where the Mushers went on a 21-12 run. Camas County ultimately dominated Bliss 73-43.
 Carey maintained about a 10-point lead the entire game to beat Idaho High School for the Deaf and Blind 70-54.
 Bliss and ISDB will meet in a loser-out game at 5 p.m. today. Camas County and Carey will follow.

Agassi breezes to win over college freshman

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) - An impatient Andre Agassi, who twice complained about his opponent stalling between serves, breezed to a 6-2, 6-2 win Monday over Stanford freshman Ryan Wolters in the Sylvania Open.
 Agassi, who quick-served Wolters at one point and often served before fans had finished applauding the previous point, ended exactly one hour to defeat the 19-year-old resident of San Jose.

Agassi twice complained to umpire Tony Cho that Wolters was taking more than the allowed 25 seconds between serves.
 "I thought he was taking too long. When you run a guy five or six corners and they take an extra 10 or 15 seconds, that makes a difference," Agassi said. "I think I've earned that right."

When Agassi took a few extra seconds later in the match hitting 'balls to the ballboys, Wolters went to the chair. Agassi responded with a quick serve, asking Wolters, "Is that fast enough for you?"
 Wolters said he couldn't understand what got Agassi so upset.
 "I felt like he was winning the match pretty easily and he was getting frustrated even though he was ahead," Wolters said.

The afternoon match was played before about 250 people in the San Jose Arena, which holds 11,000 for tennis. Among those fans was Livin Bocko, 9, of Santa Clara, who held a tiny Sylvania flag as she rooted for Kroskiel.
 "I've never played in front of a lot of people," Kroskiel said. "Maybe if there were more people I would have gotten scared."
 The first-round loss left Washington searching for things to do during the week.

Perhaps he'd go to the Golden State Warriors' game against the Boston Celtics on Wednesday night, he said.
 "Losing on a Monday," he mused. "The only thing worse than what I did is losing at 10 a.m. on a Monday."

Boxer Morrison tests HIV positive

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Tommy Morrison's up-and-down boxing career reached its low point Monday with the announcement that the powerful heavyweight had tested positive for the virus that causes AIDS.

Morrison's promoter, Tony Holden, confirmed that a test administered in Las Vegas last week came back HIV positive.

"He's taken it like a champ," Holden said. "He knows he's had a promiscuous lifestyle in the past. He's taking it better than his team (of handlers)."

Morrison, 27, did not attend the news conference. He remained in isolation at his home in the northeastern Oklahoma town of Jay, where he was providing blood samples to paramedics so further tests could be run.

He issued a statement asking people to pray for children affected by the disease because "I feel it would be selfish to ask you to say a prayer for me."

"I understand that there are people concerned about me," he said in the statement. "I am fine."

Holden said results of the latest tests are expected within 48 hours. He said Morrison still held out hope that a retest would show the original test false, but that the fighter has already talked about getting involved in AIDS awareness activities.

"It is true, I don't see us ever fighting again or ever wanting to," Holden said. "But right now we're not concerned about that."

Morrison had cited religious reasons when he initially refused to take a test for the virus in the days before his scheduled fight

Morrison

Holden said Morrison not to sign anything before contacting him or his attorney because of a new agreement with promoter Don King.

The Nevada Athletic Commission suspended him for medical reasons only hours before the fight.

Morrison's trainer, Tom Virgets, said he told the fighter the news of his suspension Saturday afternoon in the crowded casino at the MGM Grand hotel.

Morrison was to have received $50,000 to fight Weathers, the first step in a package of fights under promoter Don King that was to have led to a possible $4 million payday against Mike Tyson later this year.

Morrison is 45-3-1 in a seven-year career with 11 knockouts. His career has been marked by daunting setbacks, but he always seemed to work his way back.

A promising start to his career followed in 1991 when, weary and underweight, he was knocked out by Ray Mercer in the fifth round. Two years later, Morrison won the World Boxing Organization championship with a 12-round unanimous decision over George Foreman.

Parks had given her the virus. Samantha Clark said Parks told her he had tested positive for the AIDS virus while in Florida training for the McClellan fight.

Had the fight been scheduled almost anywhere else in the country, Parks could have still fought. Only Nevada and a handful of other states require that boxers be tested for the AIDS virus, despite the violent nature of a sport in which blood is almost always spilled.

"It's a very sorry situation," promoter Bob Arum said Monday. "It's preposterous that in a sport like boxing that testing isn't mandatory. You should think of the other fighter first."

Although Tommy Morrison became only the second boxer to test positive for the AIDS virus since Nevada first began testing fighters in 1988, boxing officials believe other fighters who are HIV positive may simply choose to fight in states that don't require testing.

Few states demand HIV testing for boxers

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Lamar Parks was only days from fighting Gerald McClellan for the WBC middleweight title in this boxing capital when he abruptly pulled out of the March 1994 fight with what he said was a bad shoulder.

A few days earlier, the No. 1 contender had tried to pass off to Nevada boxing authorities a blood test for the AIDS virus taken by a friend who was wearing a necklace with Parks' "Kidfire" nickname.

Nevada officials wouldn't bite. They refused the test, and Parks has never fought again.

"He had someone take a test for him in South Carolina and we refused to accept it," recalled Marc Ratner, director of the Nevada Athletic Commission. "He pulled out of the fight knowing we were going to test him if he came here."

Parks' former fiancee died a few months later of AIDS-related complications, but not before telling a newspaper that

Amateurs spar for place on U.S. boxing team

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Davarri Williamson failed in tryouts as quarterflyweight with the Indianapolis Colts and also the Arena Football Arizona Rebels. He probably didn't have the a pro arm.

The 27-year-old college graduate, however, has a pro power punch as he has demonstrated by stopping his first two opponents in the 201-pound class at the U.S. Amateur Boxing Championships in the Olympic Sports Center.

Monday, Williamson, currently working toward a masters degree in administrative services at Northern Michigan University, moved into the quarterfinals by rocking Kenneth Horsley of the Navy with left hooks at right hands and stopped him late in the third round.

Williamson, of Washington, has boxed only two years, and Al Miceli, his team coach at NMU and also the U.S. Olympic team coach, would like some of his bouts go the distance so that he can add boxing technique to his boxing power.

"Being who always a passion with me since I was a kid," Williamson said. "But I didn't want to give up basketball and football (which he played in junior college and at Wayne (Neb.). State, but he was qualified for the Olympic trials by winning an Armed Forces title last month.

There were three medical disqualifications in the 139-pound class, one on what was a professional boxing ban to offer. An Olympian with knockout power certainly would get a lot of pro offers.

Vargas of Oxnard, Calif., the 1994 U.S. champion at 132 pounds and a Pan American bronze medalist at 139 last year, was on the verge of being upset after two rounds of his 147-pound bout against Gary Jones of Washington. Jones rocked the 18-year-old Vargas with a left hook late in the second round and led 16-13, but Vargas overwhelmed his opponent in the final round and won 36-23.

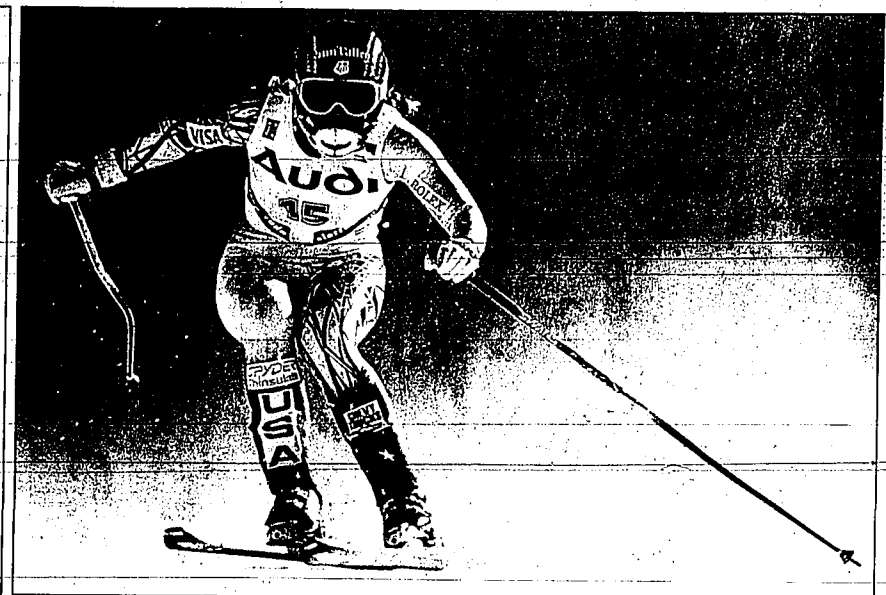

"He gave me a little wake-up call," Vargas said of the left hook by Jones. "He didn't hurt me, but I knew he was there."

Steve Caution of Philadelphia, the defending champion at 132 pounds, had too much power for Benjamin Bundy of the Navy and stopped him at 2:35 of the third round.

Jason Pires of New Bedford, Mass., scored with effective counter punching against aggressive Arnulfo Bravo of South Lake Tahoe, Nev., and scored a 20-6 victory at 119 pounds. Bravo was the U.S. 112-pound champion in 1995, while Pires was a 1994 champion at 119. It was the second bout for both boxers in less than 24 hours.

Steve Carter of the Navy was outpointed 13-7 by Teauce Shepherd of Millwaukee at 119 pounds, but he was qualified for the Olympic trials by winning an Armed Forces title last month.

Picabo Street of Sun Valley speeds down the course to claim 3rd place in the womens super-G at the World Alpine Ski Championships Monday in Sierra Nevada, Spain.

Kostner wins super-G; Street is 3rd

SIERRA NEVADA, Spain (AP) — Isolde Kostner of Italy seized the moment and the victory Monday when favored Katja Seizinger fell just 15 seconds into the super-G at the World Alpine Championships.

Americans Picabo Street and Hilary Lindh, both downhill specialists, finished third and fifth. "I can't believe it," Street said, thrilled with a medal in an event that's not her specialty. "I'm extremely happy with third place. Winning a medal is really a surprise."

Lindh won a World Cup downhill on the same course in 1994.

"It's good to know there is a hill you can do well on and that is also fun," said the 26-year-old from Juneau, Alaska.

Seizinger had been the dominant skier all season in super-G and defending world champion, so her fall created unexpected opportunities for the others, especially Kostner.

Skiing three starting spots after Seizinger, she finished the 7,464 feet course in 1 minute 21.00 seconds. Switzerland's Heidi Zurbriggen was second in 1:21.66 and Street was third in 1:21.71.

The opening event of the championship was almost perfect under bright, clear skies with 10,000 fans watching including Spanish King Juan Carlos and Queen Sofia.

Racing in her first world, Kostner had never won any super-G race before Monday, although she has two downhill victories on the World Cup circuit.

Street, the defending World Cup downhill champion, was almost as happy with her bronze as Kostner was with gold. Street has never won anywhere in super-G, and getting to the podium here was unexpected.

Street, who is expected to challenge for the downhill championship on Sunday with Seizinger, said she would use the race as a morale booster.

"I'm glad I got one in there today, it will give me confidence for the downhill," she added.

"Also, Katja is going to really be angry that she fell today and she'll be ready in the downhill."

Seizinger took her shift philosophically.

"I had too much rotation in the upper part of my body and I just couldn't get it back again," she said. "There was nothing you could do about it. Life goes on. I have enough experience."

Soon after crossing the finish, Street turned and began looking for her family who had come to cheer her on.

A broad smile on her face, Street rushed to hug her teammates and trainers and then threw her arms around Kostner, who she considers a close friend on the circuit.

Monday's Super-G course was fast and straight favoring the downhill specialists over the more technical giant slalom skiers.

The course is really fast, sometimes it's a little bit scary and you really have to risk. But other times it favors you," Street said.

Jennifer Capriati, shown in this 1991 file photo, returns to tennis in Paris on Tuesday for only her second match in 2 1/2 years.

Wild-card entry allows Capriati in Paris Open

PARIS (AP) — Jennifer Capriati returns to tennis in Paris on Tuesday for only her second match in 2 1/2 years. It will be a lot different from the first time she played in Paris six years ago.

"It's something I really want to do — so I accepted a wild-card entry without any kind of pressure from anyone," Capriati was quoted as saying in Monday's editions of the New York Post.

Barely 14, Capriati made the French Open semifinals in 1990 to become the youngest semifinalist in Grand Slam history.

Full of bubbly enthusiasm and innocence, she visited Notre Dame cathedral and wondered where the football field was. Asked about Napoleon, she said, "You know, he's the little dead dude."

She was ranked as high as sixth in 1991. Now, Capriati is back at 19 after a troubled exile from the game that included arrests for shoplifting and marijuana possession and tours in drug rehabilitation.

"I really feel excited about playing in Paris," Capriati said. "I've been working with my dad (Stefano) once again in Tampa and really feel like I'm ready to play."

Her return starts Tuesday with a first-round match against a tough Belgian player, Sabine Appelmans, at the Paris Open indoor tournament.

Appelmans, No. 25 in the world, is the highest-ranked non-seeded player in the 28-player event.

"I'm looking forward to playing her," the Belgian said after Monday's draw. "It will be a surprise to see how well she plays. I think she must be fit if she is playing, and I am looking for a tough match."

Capriati held the promise of becoming the sport's top star when she turned pro just before the age of 14. In addition to her semifinal appearance at the French Open in 1990, she reached the semis at Wimbledon and the U.S. Open in 1991 and won the Olympic gold medal in 1992.

But burnout and injuries eventually took their toll. Capriati quit the tour and moved away from her family after losing in the first round of the 1993 U.S. Open.

She was arrested on suspicion of shoplifting cheap jewelry in December of that year, and was arrested for marijuana possession in May 1994.

The police photo of a nose-ringed Capriati was published in newspapers worldwide.

Capriati made an aborted comeback attempt at a tournament in Philadelphia in November 1994. She lost to Anke Huber after three sets in the first round, dropped out of sight and has not played since.

Reunited with her father, Capriati has been practicing at the Saddlebrook resort near Tampa, Fla. She has reportedly lost 25 to 35 pounds and is in good playing shape.

Capriati has made no commitment to a long-term comeback.

Teen swimmer sobs as she denies steroids use

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Sobbing quietly, 15-year-old Jessica Foschi told national swimming officials Monday that she was "bewildered and shocked" when she tested positive for steroids.

"Still today I can't believe this happened," the promising freestyle swimmer told the board of directors of U.S. Swimming. "I've never taken anything — nothing remotely close to a steroid."

The board is deliberating whether to upgrade a two-year probation imposed on Foschi last November into a two-year suspension from all national and international competition.

Foschi, a 5-foot-10, 135-pounder who is anxious to compete in the Olympic trials next month, was 14 when the little-known steroid mesterolone was detected in her body following a national meet last August at Pasadena, Calif.

She was placed on probation and allowed to continue competing. But U.S. Swimming president Carol Zaleski appealed the panel's decision and called for a two-year ban.

Orlando that the review panel had made a mistake by not following the rules set by FINA, the international governing body.

Foschi, wearing a white blouse and vest, sat erect on a high-wheeled platform and told the 16 board members that swimming had become the most important matter in her life. She broke down into sobs and wiped her eyes with a yellow tissue when she said, "My family has a good reputation and this has certainly taken away from that."

She and her parents contend that her food or drink were sabotaged or that the urine testing was improperly performed or incorrectly handled.

Her father, Robert Foschi, testified that U.S. Swimming and U.S. Olympic Committee officials went from being cooperative to evasive as the family prepared documentation designed to show that Jessica could not have known she took the steroid, or that any family members, friends or coach had given it to her.

Foschi, 42, a civil engineer from Old Brookville, N.Y., said the family's overriding concern has been to have his daughter's urine sample retested, for her to continue swimming, and to salvage her reputation.

Jessica wiped away tears as her father described how the family had been affected by the drug test.

The family members smiled and nodded as Foschi said the family was so health conscious they took vitamins, that the two boys and two girls had to ask permission to take an aspirin and that they weren't permitted to drink sodas or eat cookies at home.

Foschi called the panel's 2-1 decision for probation "a victory of sorts" because it did not result in a total suspension and allowed Jessica to continue swimming.

The Foschis have filed a lawsuit in the New York State Supreme Court seeking to force the U.S.A. testing lab to turn over an analysis of the sample from the swimmer, which remains in storage, for testing by an independent lab.

Heisman winner endures combine

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The NFL scouting combine is behind him and new Heisman Trophy winner Eddie George can't think about selecting an agent to negotiate an NFL contract.

George was among the more than 330 NFL hopefuls who attended the NFL scouting combine that concluded Monday. Now it's time for the 30 NFL teams to begin intensive reviews of the material gathered in interviews and physical, agility and psychological tests conducted since the combine began Thursday.

"It's definitely a new experience," said George, a 6-foot-2, 220-pound tailback who led the nation with 24 touchdowns and rushed for an Ohio State-record 1,826 yards. "It's stressful, but that's what you have to do."

George didn't run or do much physical work in the RCA Dome, a common trend among players who expect to be selected early when the April 20-21 draft begins. He plans to conduct a full-workout in Columbus, Ohio on March 8 where he'll demonstrate the quick decision and cutting skills that had the Buckeyes undefeated and competing for the Rose Bowl and a national championship until losing to Michigan 31-23 in the final game of the regular season.

The senior tailback said he's been too busy to select an agent because of heavy demands on his time since he was presented with the Heisman.

"There really isn't any reason to rush and sign with an agent. Nothing happens about an NFL contract until you're picked in the draft and that's some six weeks away," he said. "I've been attending a lot of functions since the season ended, and an agent hasn't been a priority."

"I haven't had the time to concentrate on my conditioning. I just want to do my best when the NFL evaluates me. I didn't want to do some things here, and some things some other place. I want to do a complete workout in Ohio," he said.

He did undergo extensive physical testing here, including a second trip to the hospital for a CAT scan on the shoulder he injured as a freshman with the Buckeyes.

Women's top 4 teams unchanged

The Associated Press

In a week of changes throughout The Associated Press women's basketball poll, Georgia, Louisiana Tech, Connecticut and Stanford stayed in place at the top on Monday.

No. 14 Duke was the only other team not to stay in the same position at last week. Nine ranked teams lost at least one spot during the past week, including Iowa and Wisconsin in the Top Ten, but no one dropped out of the Top 25.

It was the fourth time in five weeks the poll had no newcomers. Georgia remained No. 1 for the third consecutive week, receiving all 39 first-place votes from a national media panel. The Lady Bulldogs (20-2), who have won 18 straight, had 975 points in the voting.

Wisconsin (21-1) and Stanford (21-1) before Georgia took over had 927 points, Connecticut (22-3) had 890 and Stanford (18-2) 844.

The changes began with No. 5 Tennessee and No. 6 Texas Tech each moving up one spot. Iowa suffered its first loss in Big Ten play, 62-42 Purdue, on Sunday, and dropped from fifth to seventh. That broke a 13-game winning streak for the Hawkeyes (20-2).

Old Dominion climbed two spots to eighth, Penn State advanced three places to ninth and Virginia slipped one spot to 10th after losing to Duke.

Wisconsin headed the Second Ten, falling from eighth to 11th after losing to Tennessee and Michigan State. The Badgers were followed by Alabama, Vanderbilt, Duke, Oregon State, North Carolina, San Diego, Colorado, Clemson and Auburn.

The final five were Mississippi, Purdue, Stephen F. Austin, Oklahoma State and Notre Dame.

Penn State's jump of three places was the biggest in the poll and was made by Florida, which went from 20th to 7th. Penn State defeated Michigan State and Northwestern over the weekend. Florida upset Mississippi in its only game.

Mississippi, which also lost to Georgia, fell four places — the steepest drop in the Top 25.

Washington State moved up to 13th after suffering its fifth loss in seven games, 71-66 to Auburn. However, the Commodores bounced back to beat LSU four days later and with their final four regular-season games at home, they have a 10-0 record.

The victory over Vanderbilt, plus an 88-46 rout of Kentucky, sent Auburn from 22nd to 20th.

Vikings' quarterback heads for trial on abuse charges

RICHMOND, Texas (AP) — Warren Moon heads to court Tuesday to face a spousal abuse charge pursued by prosecutors despite pleas from the quarterback's wife to drop the case.

The misdemeanor domestic violence case has taken several different turns in the seven months since Moon's panicked 7-year-old son Jeffrey placed a 911 call to police.

With trial set to begin before Fort Bend County Court-At-Law Judge Larry Waggenbach, it has become a tangle of wills between Moon, who has refused to enter a guilty plea, and prosecutors who have threatened to put his wife, Felicia, and son on the witness stand.

"I'm very confident that it's going to work out okay. Moon, looking relaxed, said Sunday while attending the NBA All-Star game in San Antonio.

Felicia Moon repeatedly has pleaded with Fort Bend County prosecutor John Healey to drop the misdemeanor assault charge, saying Healey is using his authority times he has gone ahead with a domestic violence case despite a victim's refusal to press charges.

Warren Moon, here with wife, Felicia, heads to court in Richmond, Texas, Tuesday to face trial on misdemeanor charges that he beat his wife during an argument last summer.

"I am not in the habit of going through our records and computers to answer general questions," Healey said.

Moon has admitted that he "lost control" during an argument with Felicia Moon last July 18, but his lawyer says the Minnesota Vikings star has rejected several plea offers.

"They want a trial. We're going to have a trial," lawyer Rusty Hardin said. "I just cannot live with somebody walking in and pleading guilty to something he's not guilty of."

The Moons and their four children have kept their primary residence in Missouri City in Fort Bend County, just south of Houston, ever since his days as a quarterback with the Houston Oilers.

The county, which boasts several high-income housing developments, is a favorite among sports celebrities. Hakeem Olajuwon and several other members of the Houston Rockets live in it.

On the day of the attack, Felicia Moon — a former board member for a Fort Bend County women's shelter — told police her husband struck her on the head with an open hand and choked her to the point of losing consciousness.

She broke free and fled in her car. Moon persisted in a chase that reportedly reached speeds of 100 mph. Felicia Moon said she evaded her husband and returned to their home, where police were waiting.

"In the seven months of back-and-forth court filings, Felicia Moon has asked that the matter be dropped. She has said, in court papers, that she plans to invoke her Fifth Amendment rights if called to testify.

Prosecutors have said they intend to grant Felicia Moon immunity from prosecution, forcing her to testify. If she refuses, she could be jailed on a contempt charge.

Prosecutors also have threatened to force Jeffrey Moon, now 8, to testify. He and the couple's housekeeper, Elena Marie Morales, were the only witnesses to the incident.

NFL commissioner seeks to stop Seahawks

LONDON (AP) — NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue reiterated his objection Monday to the Seattle Seahawks' proposed move to Los Angeles and said he believes it can be stopped.

Seahawks owner Ken Behring responded by affirming his intention to move his franchise to Southern California.

"We told the Seattle people last week that we thought they should be operating exclusively in the Pacific Northwest, which is where they are franchise to operate and that it was inappropriate for them even to be practicing in Southern California," Tagliabue said Monday during a promotional stop.

In announcing his intention to move his team earlier this month, Behring said the Seattle home game, where the team has played its home games, is seismically unsafe.

The Seahawks are expected to reach an agreement with Anaheim, Calif., in the near future to rent the practice facility used by the Rams before they moved from Anaheim Stadium to St. Louis last year.

In Los Angeles, Behring expressed surprise at Tagliabue's comments.

"We have not heard any such statements directly from commissioner Tagliabue or any other league official," Behring said. "In fact, the press reports this morning from London are directly at odds with supportive statements previously made to us by commissioner Tagliabue regarding the move of our franchise to Southern California."

"We have had meetings with Commissioner Tagliabue and his staff in recent weeks to discuss the fundamental structural problems with the Seattle Kingdom. We cannot believe that the NFL would want our fans and players, or the fans and players of other NFL teams, to be forced to play in unsafe stadiums."

Tagliabue noted that owners, including Behring, passed a resolution last year giving the NFL control over the team that moves into the Los Angeles market. He also stressed that the Seahawks' lease with the Kingdom expires in 2005.

Asked whether Seattle's move could be blocked, Tagliabue said: "I think it's possible to stop them. We had a specific resolution that the membership adopted, and Seattle voted for it, relative to Los Angeles."

"They have a lease for the next (10) years for their stadium in Seattle. And if they have a legitimate safety issue which the courts uphold, then the lease is a different question. Until that court case is decided, they are under a lease obligation to operate in Seattle. They're under an obligation with their franchise agreement with the league to operate in Seattle."

Behring said he remains confident the courts will confirm that, "in King County's breach of contract for use of the Kingdom, our franchise is under no further obligation to play its home games in the Kingdom. Accordingly, we are today reaffirming the move of our NFL franchise to Los Angeles."

The Seahawks could become the fifth NFL franchise to change cities in the last year. The Raiders and the Rams left Los Angeles last year, the NFL last week approved the move of Art Modell's team from Cleveland to Baltimore and the Houston Oilers plan to play next season in Tennessee.

Tagliabue spoke during and after a lunch of the American Chamber of Commerce in London. He is visiting Europe to promote the World League, a six-team developmental league backed by the NFL and the Fox television network.

Nicklaus indicates U.S. Open may be last of majors string

NEW YORK (AP) — Golfers, like boxers, never really retire. They always feel they have one more good one left in them.

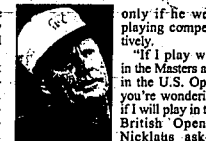

Even the greatest — and Jack Nicklaus falls into that category — walk away from competition with great reluctance. On Monday, however, the most successful player ever to pick up a golf club all but ended his consecutive major championship streak at 138 with this year's U.S. Open.

"I'm very proud of that 40th straight Open," Nicklaus said with his special exemption this year at Oakland Hills in June that will keep the streak going after the Masters.

"I remember my first one in 1957, making a 35-foot birdie putt on my first hole as a 17-year-old kid," he said in a conference call from his North Palm Beach, Fla. offices.

"A lot has changed since then. This year, Nicklaus, 56, said. "That probably will end my streak of consecutive major championships," he said about the U.S. Open in June.

Nicklaus is entered in the British Open at Royal Lytham & St. Annes in England this July, but he said he'd go only if he were playing competitively.

"If I play well in the Masters and in the U.S. Open you're wondering if I will play in the British Open?" Nicklaus asked. "Yeah, I probably will."

Nicklaus wasn't specific about what playing well meant, but it's a safe guess that he would need a top-20 finish in both to convince himself he should go to England.

And he hasn't finished better than 27th in a major championship since the 1990 Masters — 24 majors ago — and has missed the cut in a major 10 times since then.

Nicklaus, who will play in the PGA Championship this year, said he would "probably play in (another) PGA Championship along the way."

But he indicated that he would likely not return to the U.S. Open unless he played his way into the tournament.

"The USGA has been very kind in granting me an exemption," Nicklaus said. "I certainly don't expect them to offer me another. I would honor it, but I'd rather play my way in," he said, indicating he'd rather not be offered another special exemption.

"I still consider myself a golfer," Nicklaus said. "But I think I can do this better (run his equipment and design company), Jack Nicklaus-Golden Bear International) better than I play golf. That's probably why I haven't played as much golf."

Nicklaus has said he will return to the British Open in the year 2000 when it is played once again at St. Andrews.

"My appearance will be like Arnold Palmer's visit was this time, more ceremonial than golf," Nicklaus said after finishing the Open at St. Andrews last July.

By skipping the British Open this year Nicklaus will end an incredible streak in the four professional major championships that began with the 1962 Masters. He has 136 straight going into the Masters in April and it will reach 138 with the U.S. Open.

Nicklaus has played in the four professional major championships — the U.S. Open, British Open, Masters and PGA Championship — 143 times, beginning with the 1957 U.S. Open. He has won a record 18 major championships, taking the Masters six times, the PGA five, four U.S. Opens and the British Open three times. He also won the U.S. Amateur twice.

Nicklaus won his last major championship at the Masters in 1986 and last made the cut in all four majors in the same year in 1991.

Nicklaus called his victory in the 1986 Masters "my greatest moment" in golf.

"It was my last win in my fourth and my first win in two years," he said. "It was at a point in my career when nobody expected me to win, including myself. It was very special."

Just like the man who could stake a claim to being the greatest ever to play the game.
