Craig urges faithful to keep fighting

By Karen Tolkin Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Republicans must be re-elected this fall if their reforms are to continue, U.S. Sen. Larry Craig told a gathering of party faithful Friday evening.

Craig is facing competition from Democratic candidate Walt Minnick, who has been called one of the most credible candidates to come out of that party in decades.

Minnick, while an underdog, has the support of former Democratic Govs. Cecil Andrus and John Evans.

"If we're not given that privilege, and able to restore ourselves through the next election, then the revolution's over, folks," Craig said.

He said if Democrats gain influence in Congress, reform efforts will be halted on balancing the budget, welfare, and cutting spending. He criticized President Clinton's veto over the welfare reform package despite indications that he would sign it.

"You see, I really think he did inhale," Craig said.

He promised to fight for land and water control, which he said have formed a battle between Idaho and the federal government.

"The battle for public lands is a sincere and responsible fight," he said. "For several decades we have seen a progression of federal policy in this state that has slowly but surely changed the governance of those public lands."

Idahoans have managed the lands well for 100 years, he said, and recognize their importance to grazing, recreation and tourism.

Panel eyes Soc. Security stock plan

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Workers could put a big chunk of their Social Security payroll taxes in stocks, bonds or other investments under one of three plans being considered by a special advisory council.

If the plan is accepted, it would implement principles Republican presidential hopeful Steve Forbes has been promoting in his talk of privatizing Social Security.

Under the plan, workers could invest about 40 percent of their Social Security payroll deduction in a so-called personal security account, or PSA, held by private investment companies. The remaining 60 percent of payroll tax revenues would remain in the system as a basic source of Social Security funding.

The PSAs would be mandatory, but workers could choose how the funds in them would be invested, much as they can now put money in companies' 401(k) retirement accounts. Workers also could opt to have the Social Security system invest PSA funds for them.

Employers pay half the 12.4 percent payroll tax that goes into Social Security and workers pay the other half.

In retirement, recipients would have more choice how they are paid from their PSAs. They could get monthly payments, a lump sum, or leave the money to their heirs.

Supporters of the plan want to make available to anyone 55 or younger by 1998. Nothing would change for current Social Security recipients or those close to retirement age. They've already made their plans. We don't want to screw up their plans," Sylvester Schieber, a Washington economist on the Social Security advisory council, said Friday.

To cover transition costs, Schieber recommends a 1 percent national sales tax and some debt financing through bonds issued by the Social Security Administration.

Ruling puts online smut law in limbo

Newsday

A federal judge's ruling on Internet indecency raises more questions than it answers - and may leave some companies open to prosecution until higher courts sort out the contradictions.

The ruling Thursday blocked the government from enforcing a new law prohibiting people from sending "indecent" material to minors over the Internet.

But some industry lawyers said the decision leaves online services and companies that provide access to Internet vulnerable to prosecution.

The American Civil Liberties Union and others challenged the new law, passed by Congress and signed into law earlier this month, because it criminalizes the transmission of "indecent" material over the Internet.

Indecent speech is constitutionally protected but has not been well-defined in case law, unlike "obscene" speech, which is well-defined and not protected.

Thursday, federal District Judge Ronald Buckwater agreed with the ACLU that the government could not prosecute cases in which "indecent" materials were knowingly transmitted to minors. The next step is a hearing by a three-judge panel, which will include Buckwater. No date, however, has been set.

Lawyers Friday were going through the decision to figure out where the temporary restraining order applies. Most agreed that the case is certain to go to the Supreme Court and said the government will probably be restrained in enforcing it until then.

A Justice Department spokesman said the decision to hold off on prosecutions is being reviewed on a day-to-day basis. The law on cyberspace is confusing and contradictory. For example, the judge's restraining order applies to materials sent by "communications device."

Commuter, Amtrak trains crash, killing at least 12

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - At least 12 people were killed and dozens injured Friday when a Maryland commuter train bound for Washington's Union Station collided with an outgoing Amtrak train and erupted in flames on a snow-swept stretch of tracks in Silver Spring.

All of the fatalities and the worst of the injuries occurred on the three-car MARC commuter train, which struck the Capitol Limited moments after the Amtrak train crossed into a residential area of Montgomery County, Md. with 150 passengers aboard about 5:30 p.m., authorities said.

Moments before the impact, MARC conductors running through the cars shouting to passengers that a crash was imminent said that they should get on the floor, several riders said. One frequent MARC rider said he suspected the train, which originated in Brunswick, Md., had been on the wrong track since shifting tracks at Point of Rocks.

"The whole time we was coming up here I felt something wasn't right," said MARC passenger Kelvin Williams, 19, of Seat Pleasant, Md. Bleeding from the head, Williams was the first survivor witnesses saw emerge from the wreckage, crawling through a jagged crack beside a door. He was coughing and crying. "We hit switched tracks at Point of Rocks because they said up ahead was a stalled train. We got to Rockville and everything was okay," Williams said. "Then three conductors came out screaming, 'Everybody get down!' And then we crashed. Everybody was crying and screaming."

Montgomery County fire department spokesman Denise Fox confirmed that 12 bodies were found on the MARC train. Maryland State Police Superintendent David B. Mitchell said "quite a few" passengers were still missing about 8:30 p.m.

The MARC train was being pushed by a single locomotive, which placed a passenger car at the point of impact. The first MARC car was mangled beyond recognition and the second car was crushed like an accordion. Officials said most of the injuries were burns and blunt trauma.

The Amtrak train was traveling from Union Station to Chicago, and it departed at 5:25 p.m. with 175 passengers and crew, said Amtrak spokesman Clifford Black.

On the Amtrak train, both locomotives and four baggage cars derailed, but many of the passengers riding farther back on the two coaches, one sleeper, diner and lounge cars felt only a violent jolt. Mike Ross of Sandpoint, Idaho, was sitting in the Amtrak train's seventh car. "Most of the people in my car were on the floor. We hit a commuter train head on. We hit them pretty hard. It threw a lot of people on the ground."

GOP candidates renew attacks day after acrimonious debate

The Washington Post

NASHUA, N.H. — Fresh off their Thursday night slugfest, the Republican presidential candidates continued to attack one another over economic issues and campaign tactics, and not even a fresh blanket of white snow here could brighten the negative tone of the GOP contest.

The candidates carried on their war of words in new advertisements and along the campaign trail, as polls showed a tight contest for Tuesday's primary.

The candidates carried on their war of words in new advertisements and along the campaign trail, as polls showed a tight contest for Tuesday's primary. Dole (Kan.) aired a new commercial featuring his chief surrogate in the state, New Hampshire Gov. Steve Merrill. In the ad, Merrill lobs criticism toward both of Dole's principal opponents here, conservative commentator Patrick J. Buchanan and former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander. "Pat Buchanan's own statements make him unelectable," Merrill charged. "And Lamar Alexander's tax and spend record is too liberal for New Hampshire."

Buchanan and Alexander countered with ads of their own. Buchanan's accused Dole of voting to raise taxes repeatedly in the Senate, while Alexander's decried Dole's negative campaigning. "It's Washington politics as usual," the narrator says. Alexander also took a friendly jab at Merrill by showing him smiling and shaking hands with Alexander, both of them wearing Alexander's trademark red-and-black plaid shirt. "Lamar Alexander's record is so good, it has earned him friends across New Hampshire," he said. Speaking to reporters after a walk through downtown Nashua and an appearance before schoolchildren, Alexander criticized Buchanan's protectionist trade policies as "putting America last," and said Dole's charge that he had regularly raised taxes as governor paled in comparison to what Dole has done. "I think that's the most ludicrous to have. Sen. Dole lecture me about fiscal discipline," he said. Alexander called on Dole to pull his negative ads, but stopped short of forecasting the use of such advertisements in the future.

Lamar Alexander works the crowd Friday at Parkale Junior High School in Manchester, N.H. He won the election students held on Thursday.

Chung-Jen Tan, the IBM team's lead designer, said he wouldn't throw in the towel just yet. "Garry is the best and we are the second best right now, though we don't know yet for sure."

Man vs. machine: Kasparov wins 5th game

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — After having his draw offer rejected, Garry Kasparov rallied Friday to defeat Deep Blue and clinch at least a tie in their six-match tournament. "Today was a good day," Kasparov said. "I proved this machine isn't invincible."

The 32-year-old world chess champion has two wins and the IBM-designed computer has one. There have been two draws. Deep Blue must win Saturday's sixth and final game to salvage a tie.

Kasparov can win the tournament and a $400,000 first prize with either a win or a draw. He'll have the advantage of playing the white pieces, and going first.

Veteran actor, 'M-A-S-H' star dies of heart failure

LOS ANGELES (AP) — McLean Stevenson, who played the flumming commanding officer and chief surgeon of TV's "M-A-S-H," has died, his agent said Friday. He was 66.

Stevenson died of a heart attack late Thursday at a hospital, agent Robert Malcolm said. Stevenson played Lt. Col. Henry Blake, the wamanizing goof-off commanding officer of the 4077th Mobile Army Surgical Hospital, for the first three seasons of "M-A-S-H." The role won him a 1973 Golden Globe Award and a 1974 Emmy nomination.

In the series, Blake died when his plane was lost at sea as he returned to the United States. "McLean Stevenson was one of the kindest, most sensitive people I've worked with or known," said Gary Burghoff, who played Blake's clerk, Radar O'Reilly. "My personal sense of loss is magnified a thousand times by what this kind, funny gentleman has meant to all those who knew him."

Stevenson

He was 31 before he broke into acting after careers as a medical supplies salesman, insurance clerk, seaman and assistant director of athletics at Northwestern University, where he earned a theater arts degree. "I had nine jobs in eight years and I didn't like any of them," he told The Associated Press in 1975. He was walking across a football field when he decided to go into show business. "I watched those poor slobbs practicing like crazy, knowing that if they didn't block they wouldn't get paid," he recalled. "It was crazy to stay in college athletics unless you were a coach. I decided to go to New York and become an actor."

Craig

Craig, however, along with the rest of the Idaho delegation, drew the worst marks in Congress from environmentalists for his stance on environmental issues.

The League of Conservation Voters criticized Craig on a number of environmental issues including failing to halt the sale of public lands to mining companies for a fraction of their value without returning any mineral profits to the public. Craig said he still has plans to achieve a balanced budget amendment, as was his message at last year's dinner. Last year, he lacked one Senate vote toward seeking state ratification for a balanced budget amendment.

He promised, as chairman of the private property rights caucus in Congress, to turn over more control to the states and reduce federal government involvement.

He drew heavily from Revolutionary War themes throughout his speech, and quoted from Thomas Paine's pamphlet Common Sense. "As we enter the campaign season of 1996, let us not be summer soldiers or sunshine patriots," he said, drawing a standing ovation.

Correction

The story in Friday's sports section about the Cross State Wrestling Tournament contained incorrect information. Jerome wrestler Justin Martin pinned Ed's Chad Brown when the two teams met earlier this year. Buhl wrestler Anthony Bartlett competed in a different weight class for that meet. The Times-News regrets the error.

Clinton shakes hands in heartland

MASON CITY, Iowa (AP) — Jerry Christiansen roused his family at 5 a.m. to stand in line for the hottest tickets in town. Then he stood in line some more — until 3:30 a.m. — before he got inside to see The Man. Even then, he had to wait another two hours to hear The Speech.

And it was good. "It's a once in a lifetime opportunity to meet a president," said Christiansen, 46. "I've met a lot of vice presidents but not a president."

"I got to shake his hand," 11-year-old Penny Olsen gushed as she left with the Christiansens.

In America's heartland, it's still a big deal when the president of the United States comes to town, 21-car motorcade, police escorts, VIP welcomes and live television coverage from start to finish. There's an air of expectation, excitement, a sense that something big is happening.

Farmers park their cars at the end of driveways and watch for the flashing red lights on the highway, leading Bill Clinton's entourage into town.

As the black limousine nears, flying presidential flags on both sides, the farmers roll down their windows and raise up their video cameras, a salute to the one candidate who gets a super-charged reception.

Before the Iowa caucuses, Republican candidates crisscrossed the state for weeks in dusty campaign buses. If they were lucky they talked to 100 people in half-filled hotel ballrooms.

For that matter, Bill Clinton got the so-what treatment four years ago when he ran against Iowa's favorite son, Sen. Tom Harkin, and came in fourth.

But this time Clinton — President Clinton — got a reception that made Republicans grind their teeth in frustration. There were 15,000 people cheering Clinton in Iowa City, 2,500 in Mason City and 8,200 in Des Moines. All capacity crowds.

People surged forward at the end of each speech. Hundreds of arms strained toward Clinton for a touch, a handshake as Secret Service agents inched him along a waist-high rope line.

A born campaigner, Clinton reached out with both hands. When it looked as if he had shaken every hand, he looked for more and found them.

The man from Hope, Ark., declared he is no stranger in rural America.

"I'm fairly sure that I am the last American president who will ever be elected who once lived in a home in the country without indoor plumbing," he declared in Mason City. "I'm not ashamed of it and I survived it and it makes a good story now — especially when I tell wide-eyed kids about the snakes that used to get in the outhouse."

The audience howled.

No president had ever visited Mason City before. The people got a good show from Clinton: a marathon speech rebuking the themes of his State of the Union address. At 53 minutes, it was only six minutes shorter than the actual speech to Congress.

AT&T to raise basic rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — AT&T will raise basic long-distance rates for most of its 80 million residential customers by an average 40 cents a month starting Saturday.

The nation's largest long-distance company said Friday the 4.3 percent increase — the first for residential customers in more than a year — is needed to bring prices closer to the cost of providing service.

AT&T spokesman Dan Lawler didn't know exactly how many residential customers would be affected by the increase, but said "most of the consumer base" of 80 million customers would see the rate hike.

Rivals MCI and Sprint had no immediate comment. Lawler would not say how much revenue the rate increase would generate.

Injured policeman alert, but not speaking, after surgery

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Gary Dockery was alert but not speaking Friday as he continued to recover from lung surgery that followed his emergence from 7½ years in a coma-like state.

"He is fixing his gaze on people," said Dr. James Folkening, Dockery's physician since the policeman was shot in the head in 1988.

A tube to assist Dockery's breathing was removed from his throat today, and he is breathing on his own, Folkening said.

Dockery's breathing was a little sluggish but doctors were still encouraged. It will be days before his neurological recovery can be charted, however.

Dockery's amazing rebound began Monday when he broke the silence that had dominated his world for 7½ years. After chattering for 18 hours, then withdrawing again, Dockery on Thursday underwent an operation to drain infectious fluids from his lungs.

There was a risk that the procedure could plunge him back into limbo. But hope, once again, emerged from the despair.

Doctors say Dockery opened his eyes after the surgery and even responded to questions by squeezing the hands of relatives at his bedside at Parkridge Medical Center.

Doctors are hopeful he will return to the wakeful state he was in Monday, when he began talking again, Folkening said this morning on NBC's "Today" show.

"It may take a few days to get that far, but we hope so," he said.

Just last week Dockery's family was warned that the pneumonia would kill Dockery unless he had the operation.

Man's AIDS claim rejected

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — A jury on Friday rejected a man's claim that he contracted the AIDS virus while his dentist extracted some of his teeth.

Jurors said the dentist, Anthony E. Breglio of Springfield, was negligent in how he treated the dental tools used on 49-year-old James Sharpe.

But they said the negligence did not cause Sharpe's infection, and they awarded no damages.

"We thought we were doing something just and good, and the public out our throat," Sharpe said, promising an appeal.

NASA delays launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Equipment trouble forced NASA to delay the launch of a spacecraft to an asteroid Friday.

Managers said they would try again Saturday afternoon to launch the unmanned Delta rocket from Cape Canaveral Air Station. Once launched, the spacecraft will spend three years flying to Asteroid Eros and then become the first spacecraft to orbit an asteroid.

The 25-mile-long Eros is one of the largest asteroids orbiting the sun relatively close to Earth.

Sports channel set

ATLANTA (AP) — Turner Broadcasting System, Inc.'s board Friday approved plans to launch a round-the-clock sports cable channel later this year.

The channel, to be called CNN/SI, will be a partnership between Turner's cable news channel CNN and Sports Illustrated, the magazine owned by Time Warner, Inc. The new network will cover sporting news, not live sports events.

Shoppers avoid malls at night

The count of night shoppers is falling. Recent research indicates 43 percent of those who once visited malls at night no longer do so. Their main fear, they say, is the "dark parking lot."

In '90s marriages, the bride and groom themselves pay for more than 70 percent of the wedding expenses, according to recent studies.

Napoleon Bonaparte said, "History is a set of lies agreed upon."

Those who know their garbage say about 20 percent of the space in city landfills nationwide is taken up by construction and demolition debris - concrete, rebar, wallboard, lumber and packaging.

Q. What do you call that creepy feeling on your scalp when your hair stands up?
A. "Piloomotor reaction."

"Children!" cried Honore de Balzac. "You bring them into the world and they drive you out of it!"

A group of parrots is called a company.

Q. Where's the largest Oktoberfest celebration?
A. Munich. Second largest is Ohio's Oktoberfest Zinzinnati. In the city zounds so similar.

Pioneer screen actress Norma Talmaidge hid her jewels in brown paper bags next to the vegetables in the refrigerator. Then she told somebody and got nervous. She switched them into her shoes - rubies in red shoes, emeralds in green shoes, sapphires in blue shoes.

Q. In canals, what's the difference between the Bacina and the Dromedary?
A. The two-hump Bacina is bigger, sturdier and slower. It's the better heavy-load rough-terrain packer. The one-hump Dromedary is niftier and swifter. It's the better riding or racing animal.

NATO captures alleged terrorist training camp

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — NATO forces have seized what they called a terrorist training camp, and the alliance's senior commander in Bosnia today accused the Muslim-led government of being involved. Peacekeeping troops found an arsenal of 50 weapons at the camp, including sniper rifles, submachine-guns and children's toys wired to explode, NATO said. Eleven people, including three men with Iranian identification papers, were detained. Hundreds of NATO troops were flown in by helicopter to central Bosnia today to look for anyone who might have escaped when peacekeepers seized the camp, a former ski cabin 20 miles west of Sarajevo, on Thursday.

In addition to the three men with Iranian papers, soldiers detained eight Bosnians, NATO said. At least one of the 11 was released; an Iranian with a diplomatic passport, and the others were to be released to Bosnian government authorities soon, the NATO-led force said in a statement. NATO has no judicial authority in Bosnia and therefore no authority to hold them. A NATO spokesman, Lt. Col. Mark Rayner, said the initial assessment was that the men carrying Iranian documents were training Bosnians to carry out acts of terror. U.S. Adm. Leighton Smith, commander of NATO forces in Bosnia, inspected the camp this morning and linked it to the Bosnian government.

1st body pulled out of remains of caved tunnel

TOKYO (AP) — For a week, rescuers have dynamited and dug through the rubble of a collapsed tunnel in northern Japan. On Friday the really tough work began: the unearthing of the 20 victims. Workers on the snowy, windswept northern island of Hokkaido pulled out the first body late in the day. The man had been crushed to death over the steering wheel of his car as he drove to work. He was killed when a skyscraper-sized rock slid off a mountainside and crashed through the tunnel roof last Saturday, trapping the car and a bus carrying 19 people. Rescuers have been working since then to remove the massive rock and dig out the victims from the disaster site near a remote seaside village 550 miles north of Tokyo.

Police suspect radical group in failed attack

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Police blamed the leftist November 17 terrorist group Friday for a failed missile attack on the U.S. Embassy, and suggested the assault was linked to Greece's quarrel with Turkey over a barren islet. The antitank missile fired late Thursday just failed to clear a wall surrounding the embassy in Athens. It hit the wall of an embassy parking lot about 200 yards from the main embassy building, damaging three parked cars. Police said that the attack bore all the marks of November 17, Greece's deadliest urban guerrilla group, which has targeted Americans, Greeks and Turks in the past. The militant nationalist group has killed 20 people since 1975, and last attacked a year ago. "Until now no organization has claimed responsibility. But the action and the material used point directly to November 17," the anti-terrorism department said in a statement. November 17 is the only Greek guerrilla group to have used antitank missiles, stolen from an army base. Earlier, police said a previously unheard-of group calling itself National Struggle claimed responsibility.

Women dressed as clowns dance at the old market of Cologne, Germany, Thursday during the opening of the 5-day street carnival.

Germany kicks off carnival

BEUEL, Germany (AP) — Women masquerading as washerwomen stormed town hall waving 5-foot-long bananas. Some used comparably oversized scissors to trim men's ties. Men dressed as bears tried — and failed — to repel the assault.

And everyone, male and female, swigged beer and schnapps, preferably out of baby bottles. So began the Rhineland's carnival season, or what locals call the "five days of madness." On the first day, "Weiberfastnacht," or "Women's Carnival," an annual and proto-feminist ritual.

While Germany is known more for a love of rules than for a love of fun, inhibitions are cast to the wind when carnival comes around.

"It's a time to switch off your troubles, to let yourself go," said 41-year-old Karin Stein, clutching a large plastic cup brimming with a mix of beer and cola.

Communities all along the Rhine celebrate Women's Carnival. But the place to be is Beuel, where the festival originated nearly two centuries ago. About 4,000 people crowded in front of Beuel's town hall on Thursday, waiting for the day's traditional denouement: the storming of the building by local residents dressed as washerwomen.

As always, the make-believe laundry women scaled the building using ladders, and beat back the defense force of men in bear suits.

Experts disarm WWII bomb

VILLA SAN GIOVANNI, Italy (AP) — Highway and rail traffic leading to this port city was blocked for most of the day Friday, as experts worked to defuse a British bomb dropped during World War II.

Authorities closed off all main highways and railway tracks outside Villa San Giovanni, the major port for ferries to Sicily. Traffic is expected to remain blocked for up to four days, the time it will take to disarm the bomb, according to Italian state television.

Authorities also evacuated more than 4,000 residents of Villa San Giovanni from their homes.

The unexploded bomb, which contains 1,300 pounds of TNT, was dropped in the summer of 1943 by Britain's Royal Air Force. It was discovered 10 days ago by maintenance workers.

Report: Ferry deaths could be as high as 338

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — A Cabinet minister said Friday that the death toll from a ferry sinking in January was nearly double what was previously reported, with up to 338 people dead.

Previous reports said an estimated 187 people died when the Gurita sank in a storm off northern Sumatra. The ship was said to be carrying its full capacity of 226 passengers, and only 39 survived.

But Communications Minister Haryanto Dhanuirtito said the ferry was actually packed with 377 people, hiking the death toll to 338. Only 55 bodies have been found, but the rest are missing and presumed dead.

Oil tanker runs aground off shore of wildlife area near Wales coast

SAINT ANN'S HEAD, Wales (AP) — Pollution control teams struggled Friday to contain a five-mile oil slick off the coast of Wales in an area renowned for its wildlife.

Planes sprayed detergent as boats strung booms around more than a million gallons of oil spilled from a tanker that ran aground late Thursday.

British officials said the biggest concern today was that the slick was nearing a conservation haven for sea birds and other wildlife.

The Sea Empress, which sails under a Liberian flag, was carrying 37.6 million gallons of oil when it ran aground in western Wales late Thursday. Officials said 1.2 million gallons leaked, creating a slick about five miles long. The 1989 Exxon Valdez spill was 11 million gallons.

The spill threatened seabirds, seals, porpoises and dolphins that make their home on and around the nearby Skomer and Skokholm islands. Skomer island is a wildlife refuge.

"This could not have happened in a worse place," said Phil Rothwell of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds.

It was the second time in four months that a tanker ran onto rocks in western Wales.

Police arrest several in IRA bombings

LONDON (AP) — Police investigating two IRA attacks in London arrested several people in a series of raids Friday, the commander of Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist branch said.

Commander John Grieve said police raided more than 20 locations in London and several outside the capital. "Several arrests have been made," said Grieve, who did not say how many people were arrested, where they were being held or what they were suspected of doing.

The Irish Republican Army killed two people and injured 100 last Friday in a bomb attack in east London's Docklands business district. The attack ended a 17-month cease-fire in the outlawed group's violent campaign against British rule in Northern Ireland. On Thursday, police said a small bomb discovered in central London after telephone warnings had "all the hallmarks of the IRA." It was deactivated by police.

Magic Valley banks fare well

By Julie M. McKinnon
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — With mergers and other corporate changes dominating the national banking scene, two banks in the Magic Valley are keeping things simple yet strong.

They attract other customers who don't like decisions being made out of state. They give loans to their hard-working neighbors who may have been turned down elsewhere.

"If you give them a chance, an opportunity to pay it, they do," said John Evans Jr., chief executive officer of D.L. Evans Bank. "It's easy to turn down a loan if you're out of town."

Farmers National Bank of Buhl had a nonperforming loan ratio of .39 percent in the first three quarters of 1995, when the national rate was 1.22 percent, according to a recent report by Sheshunoff Information Services Inc. of Austin, Texas.

"Over the past few years, we've been able to have more recoveries than losses," Farmers National Bank President Ron Brown. The bank's return on assets was 2.10 percent, more than a percentage point higher than what the banking industry uses as a benchmark for good performance.

D.L. Evans Bank, meanwhile, had assets of more than $106 million — a growth of 13.4 percent — and a return on assets of 1.23 percent in the first three quarters of 1995, according to the report.

Overall, banks with offices in the Magic and Wood River valleys are doing well, according to the report.

Only 5 percent of the loans in Idaho banks in the first three quarters of 1995 were nonperforming. That rate is second only to banks in Wyoming, where 43 percent of loans were nonperforming.

Meanwhile, Idaho banks had a return on assets of 1.24 percent, a drop of 3 percent from the first three quarters of 1994. The national rate was 1.19 percent for the first three quarters of 1995.

Sheshunoff also reported:

- West One Bank Idaho's assets rose 2.8 percent to nearly $4.52 billion. West One's

- nonperforming loan ratio was .35 percent, and its return on assets was 1.52 percent.
- First Security Bank Idaho's assets dropped 1.9 percent to more than $3.808 billion. The bank's nonperforming loan ratio was .44 percent, and First Security's return on assets was .75 percent. (New accounts, deposits and loan business are growing in the Magic and Wood River valleys, said Vice President Curtis H. Eaton.)
- Key Bank of Idaho's assets rose 2.5 percent to nearly $1.368 billion. Key Bank's nonperforming loan ratio was 1.22 percent, and the bank's return on assets was 1.19 percent.
- First Interstate Bank of Idaho's assets rose 4.5 percent to more than $995 million. The bank's nonperforming loan ratio was .47 percent, and First Interstate's return on assets was 1.93 percent.
- Bank of America Idaho's assets rose 3.8 percent to more than $452 million. Bank of America's nonperforming loan ratio was .34 percent, and its return on assets was .54 percent.

- Farmers National Bank of Buhl's assets rose 3.6 percent to more than $134.6 million.
- D.L. Evans Bank's nonperforming loan ratio was 9 percent.
- Sheshunoff also reported on the performance of savings and loans, which had a national nonperforming loan ratio of 1.74 percent and a return on assets ratio of 1.3 percent.
- First Federal Savings Bank of Twin Falls' assets grew 0.4 percent to more than $212 million. First Federal's nonperforming loan ratio was .3 percent, and its return on assets was .45 percent.
- Home Federal Savings and Loan's assets grew 9.9 percent to more than $113 million. Home Federal's nonperforming loan ratio was 1 percent, and its return on assets was .89 percent.
- Washington Federal Savings and Loan's assets grew 12.7 percent to more than $4.585 billion. Washington Federal's nonperforming loan ratio was .4 percent, and its return on assets was 1.8 percent.

Presidents Day closes schools, library, banks

TWIN FALLS — Banks, public schools and the public library will close on Monday for Presidents Day.

City Hall and the courthouse also will close for the day. But police and fire departments will be staffed during the closure, and the city's Public Works Department will have crews on standby duty for water and sewer emergencies. City Manager Tom Courtney said.

The City Council will hold its weekly meeting on Tuesday.

The post office will be closed and there will be no mail delivery on Monday.

River Run Gallery features Sturges' sculptures

KETCHUM — "Spirits of the Sawtooths Man and Nature" is an exhibit of sculpture by Debbie Edgers Sturges that is on display through March 1 at the River Run Gallery, 291 First Ave.

Paintings by Robert Devise and sculpture by Gwynn Merritt will be on display through March 3 at the Gail Severn Gallery, 620 Sun Valley Road.

Receptions for the artists will be held from 6 to 9 tonight at the galleries. For more information, call the River Run Gallery at 726-4878 and the Gail Severn Gallery at 726-5079.

Albertson College invites new students to meet faculty

TWIN FALLS — The Albertson College of Idaho admission office will host an information night at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Canyon Springs Inn on Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

All students and parents interested in learning more about Albertson College are invited. Students and parents will have an opportunity to meet one-on-one with faculty, students, alumni and representatives from the admissions and student financial services offices.

For more information, call (208) 459-5305 or 1-800-AC-IDAHO.

CSI Board of Trustees reschedule monthly meeting

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho Board of Trustees' monthly meeting has been rescheduled.

The meeting will be held at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday, in the Taylor Building Board Room. The public is welcome.

Pianist, entertainer, humorist, storyteller performs tonight

HAILEY — Wladimir Jan Kochanski will appear in concert at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the auditorium at Wood River High School.

Kochanski is a pianist, entertainer, humorist and storyteller. He plays in a bold, romantic style, commenting before and after each piece and often invites children in the audience to join him on stage.

He has released 13 recordings and was honored in 1982 with the bestowal of Knighthood in the Order of Polonia Restituta by the Polish Government in Exile.

Admission is $8 in advance and $9 at the door for an individual, or $30 in advance and $35 at the door for a family. Tickets are available at the Sound Socket and Brower Electric, both in Hailey; the Chapter One Book Store in Ketchum or by calling Lucille Brower at 788-4042.

Critics: Flat tax figures hard to interpret

By Meredith Cohn
States News Service

WASHINGTON — The average household in Idaho would pay $893 less in taxes under a flat tax proposal under consideration in Congress, supporters suggest. But critics argue that the numbers are misleading, and that the middle class could get squeezed.

Idaho's Republican senators, conservative Washington think tanks and commentators, and multimillionaire presidential candidate Steve Forbes say taking all Americans at the same rate is simple and fair. And with the election-year rhetoric propelling the issue, some polls show the public warming to the idea.

"A flat tax will make everyone pay their fair share, and disallow tax avoidance tricks such as tax shelters," said Sen. Larry Craig, who supports a flat tax bill pushed by Rep. Dick Armey, R-Texas.

And spokesman Mark Snider said for Sen. Dirk Kempthorne, who has not backed any specific proposal: "The concept of looking for ways to simplify the tax code to make it fair, he's for that."

Armey's flat tax proposal would institute a flat 17 percent tax on everyone — after a period of transition — with a personal deduction of $26,200 for a married couple and $5,300 for each child.

Taxpayers would simply add up their salaries and subtract their personal and child deductions and the tax rest, all on a form the size of a postcard, supporters say. That means a family of four making $36,800 would pay nothing.

Armey's host of backers in Washington, including the conservative Heritage Foundation, say provided government spending drops and the budget is balanced, the American public's tax payments would drop from $539.84 billion to $414.86 billion, or by nearly $125 billion.

"The current system, which penalizes work, savings, investment, and entrepreneurship, imposes nearly $200 billion of compliance cost on the economy and corrupts the political process," a report from the Heritage Foundation reads. "By contrast, a flat tax would spur growth while treating taxpayers equally. Moreover, a properly designed flat tax would provide much needed tax relief."

Flat tax proponents also argue that an industry of lobbyists would die because there would be no loopholes to seek from Congress.

But not everyone is convinced a flat tax system would benefit the middle class, would be as simple as it appears and would do away with special-interest loopholes. Even supporters admit the rich stand to make gains because their tax rate would go down from the current progressive system, and their considerable savings and investments would be off limits.

S. M. Ghazianfar, chairman of the economics department at the University of Idaho, said the flat tax's appeal is understandable in conservative Idaho because it seems like everyone pays the same portion of their pay. But he said he thinks it could end up hurting many Idahosans.

Further, opponents say if businesses are taxed on workers' fringe benefits such as health care, they may stop offering it.

"Also, if a flat tax means we reduce tax revenue by $200 billion what does that mean for so many public sector activities? Who's going to lose? The elderly? The poor? Those are concerns," Ghazianfar said.

Crapo responds to environmentalists' attacks

By William Brock
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho's Congressional delegation was unfairly singled out for its zero rating on environmental issues by the League of Conservation Voters, according to one of the besmirched politicians.

"They pick their questions to get the result they want," Rep. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho, said in an interview Friday.

"We've had 500 or 600 votes in Congress and they picked 12."

Crapo, an Idaho Falls attorney, said he has always been a defender of private property rights and added that he's proud of his votes to defend those rights.

The league's green scorecard "is a yearly ritual they go through and they tried to make it look like we really stand out" in contrast to Congressional delegations from other states, Crapo said. "Utah and Alaska also are represented by delegations with extremely conservative environmental voting records, he said.

In a related matter, Crapo said he's mulling whether to give his support to a bill that would authorize states to "share" management of federal lands with Uncle Sam.

"Where possible, we should let states manage" land controlled by the Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management, he said. Trouble is, Crapo said, the issue of local control often is clouded by the specter of states selling erstwhile-federal lands to private interests.

Such a move would generate tremendous public outrage, Crapo said, because "we have a rich treasury of public lands."

Aside from ownership, the most piercing question about state control of federal land centers on whose management standards would apply, Crapo said. There would be little advantage for Idaho to apply existing federal regulations, he said, so new Idaho-style guidelines would be needed to oversee logging, grazing, mining and recreational uses.

"We need to let the people in the community work out the decisions," he said.

Conservationists fear that would allow industry groups to push for maximal corporate profits by weakening environmental protection — in short, a "rape and run" approach to public lands management. Favorite trout streams, horse trails and deer hunting areas could suffer as a result, critics warn.

Crapo disagreed.

"I tend to believe that states would protect the environment," he said. Still, he added that writing new regulations would require a delicate sense of balance.

"We've got to be very careful that we do it in a way that's not environmentally harmful," he said. A good first step, Crapo added, would be for the Idaho Department of Lands to try its hand with a few "pilot projects" in carefully selected areas.

Kniewel requests to jump

By Virginia S. Garber
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Motorcycle daredevil Robbie Kniewel came to town Friday to ask for permission to jump the Snake River Canyon, local officials and a business leader say.

But some aren't saying much else.

Kniewel met with county commissioners from both sides of the canyon and Twin Falls city representatives behind closed doors at the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce.

Kniewel has broken his famous father's other records, and a "skyy-cle" launch across the Snake River Canyon is the one challenge left, Commissioner Dennis Maughan said.

City Manager Tom Courtney and chamber Director Kent Just declined to comment on Kniewel's visit.

The daredevil's dad, Evel, failed to shoot across the 500-foot deep canyon in 1974. But his attempt brought rowdy onlookers, huge crowds, property damage, unpaid bills and untold chaos to the city.

The younger Kniewel, however, hopes to own his high-powered canyon leap would be "kind of a festival affair" — a positive community event, Maughan said. "He's a different person than his father."

"It wouldn't be a crazy biker-type thing," Kniewel said in 1993, when he made practice runs up his father's old 106-foot dirt ramp and down to the canyon rim east of the Perrine Bridge.

With the help of 5,000 pounds of thrust, Kniewel's steam-powered cycle would propel him from zero to 450 mph in three seconds at an angle of 57 degrees, promoters said in 1993.

Kniewel offered Friday to give some start-up proceeds to Twin Falls for abused children and drug prevention programs if he finally makes the jump in a year or two, Maughan said. The Washington stuntman was in Twin Falls primarily to gauge local reception, he said.

Officials gave him mostly favorable responses, Maughan said.

But Courtney said Kniewel would have to obtain "a number of approvals" before making the leap, including landowners' and local governments'.

And officials asked a lot of questions about how the city would be protected from the large crowd an Evel rerun would be likely to attract, County Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said.

Perhaps 100 people now live in a pricey subdivision near Eysel's jump ramp on the south side of the canyon, Hempleman said. So the daredevil's son would probably use a site of at least two or three miles upstream, Hempleman said.

Just called commissioners several days ago to invite them to meet with Kniewel at the chamber office Friday, Maughan said. But the meeting didn't appear on a posted county agenda.

All three Twin Falls commissioners were at the chamber office Friday for about 5 minutes — until they noticed they had a quorum and "we bugged out," Hempleman said.

"It's against Idaho open meetings law for two or more commissioners to discuss a potential decision in private without public notice."

Just said he would be ready to talk about the prospect of a Kniewel canyon crossing "maybe never, maybe in 90 days."

Governor announces more federal help

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Phil Batt announced on Friday that his request has been approved for $1.5 million in additional federal aid for workers who have been dislocated because of northern Idaho flooding.

"These funds will help provide temporary employment to those who have been put out of work by the disaster," Batt said.

The U.S. Department of Labor approved Batt's request for emergency assistance that will be used to provide temporary employment doing cleanup, repair and construction of public and private, non-profit property.

The jobs may last up to six months for workers who have been dislocated as a direct result of the flooding. Other eligible long-term unemployed individuals or dislocated workers also may be helped with the money.

The U.S. Department of Transportation has allocated $6 million to help repair Idaho high-

Batt

In Orofino, Jenny Franklin is maintaining a vigil as her home teters on the verge of falling about 50 feet off an eroded cliff into Orofino Creek. If the home drops, it will be added to a list of 16 destroyed throughout Clearwater County.

"It could simply break us, just trying to get the electricity and phone hooked up again," she said.

Further north, flood waters covering part of St. Maries were being pumped into the St. Joe River at the rate of 50,000 gallons a minute. But even with four pumps going full-bore, the 400-acre flood area would not be dry until Saturday, Sunday, Benewah County Sheriff Rodney Thornheller said.

About 100 St. Maries homes remained flooded, some of them under as much as 8 feet of water. Two airplanes also were found in the water, completely gutted, said Darren Blagburn of the state Bureau of Disaster Services.

Three dikes collapsed at St. Maries during the flooding. "It's basically mass destruction," Blagburn said. "It's like filling a bathtub with no plug to pull."

Idaho Supreme Court rules in favor of Catholic Diocese in abuse suit

BOISE (AP) — A 1993 lawsuit against the Roman Catholic Diocese of Boise was sexually abused by a priest in 1971 was filed 20 years too late, the Idaho Supreme Court says.

The high court's unanimous opinion on Friday upheld a decision by 4th District Judge D. Duif McKee that the suit filed in 1991 by Russell and Martin Bonner of Boise was barred by the two-year statute of limitations.

The brothers said their memory of the alleged abuse by a priest identified as "Father Luke" had been repressed until 1991. But the Supreme Court agreed with McKee that the statute of limitations began to run when the alleged abuse took place because there was "some objectively ascertainable damage" to the boys at the time for which a lawsuit could have been filed.

"Even though the emotional damage the Bonners say they suffered may have occurred until they remembered the events, there was also immediate damage at the time of the abuse," Justice Byron Johnson wrote for the court. "An act of sexual abuse is a battery and entitles the victim to at least nominal damages in a suit filed immediately following the act."

Elko court hands man 2 life sentences for murder

ELKO, Nev. (AP) — A man already facing the death penalty in Pennsylvania has been sentenced here to two life terms in prison without parole for killing a North Dakota woman.

Bradley Martin was sentenced Thursday for the 1993 murder of Donna Martz, of Rock Lake, N.D. Martin was given one life term on his guilty plea to first-degree murder. The sentence was automatically doubled because a deadly weapon was used.

Martz was abducted from a Bismarck, N.D., hotel parking lot, driven across-country and then murdered in the desert near Osino in October 1993.

He pleaded guilty in January in exchange for the prosecution's agreement not to seek the death penalty.

"This court doesn't have the authority to deliver the sentence it would like," District Judge Jack Ames told Martin on Thursday.

"You're not worthy of walking among decent human beings. And if I ever receive a request for clemency for you I will do everything in my power to see that you remain in prison where you belong."

His life sentences are to run concurrently and concurrently with his death sentence, the Elko Daily Free Press reported.

A co-defendant, Carol King, also pleaded guilty here under a plea bargain and is scheduled to be sentenced March 6, prosecutors said.

Both earlier were convicted of killing retired Palmyra, Pa., florist Guy Goodman, 74, in September 1993.

Goodman's murder was the start of a 12-state flight that passed through Elko before ending with the couple's arrest in Yuma, Ariz., on Oct. 5, 1993.

Martin, who had a string of 20 felony convictions, was released on a four-hour furlough from a Lebanon County, Pa., penitentiary for a conjugal visit with King. Instead, they went to Goodman's home, murdered him, and took his car and credit cards.

The pair resurfaced in Bismarck, N.D., later in September, where they abducted Martz from a hotel. She was forced into the trunk of her own car and driven to Elko, where Martin and King went shopping Oct. 3, 1993.

They then drove out to Osino and Guy Goodman, 74, in September 1993. They then drove out to Osino and Guy Goodman, 74, in September 1993. They then drove out to Osino and Guy Goodman, 74, in September 1993.

once in the head with a .357 magnum revolver, according to Deputy District Attorney Rob Lewis.

Martin will be returned to the U.S. State Prison, but the U.S. Attorney in North Dakota is expected to extradite him to face charges of kidnapping and escape, to avoid prosecution.

'Slapped Cheek' hits Magic Valley

By Julie M. McKinnon
Times-News writer

MURTAUGH - If you spend time with a child who suddenly appears to have slap marks on her face, don't bother reporting child abuse.

Instead, get yourself and others who were near her ready for an onslaught of Fifth disease, also known as "slapped cheek."

Fifth disease, which is spread through respiratory secretions like the common cold, is popping up in the Magic Valley at a higher rate than normal this year.

The disease is characterized by the red, lacy rash that appears on children's cheeks, as well as their bodies. But Fifth disease actually is contagious a couple of days before the rash breaks out, when sufferers are dealing with fever and other flu- and cold-like symptoms.

"Once the rash is there, they're not considered contagious anymore," said Margaret Howard, a public health nurse with the South Central District Health Department. "The damage has been done, so to speak."

"A child with a fever is a sick child and should be kept home," added Howard, who said the same goes for adults.

Typically, Fifth disease is not dangerous for youngsters or adults - except in pregnant women, Howard said Friday. Pregnant women exposed to Fifth disease should contact their doctors, Howard said.

The disease's incubation period is four to 20 days, and it runs its course in a few days, she said. Fifth disease is more prevalent in children, Howard said.

In the past two weeks, doctors at the Pediatric Center in Twin Falls have treated about 20 cases of Fifth disease, and the office also has fielded numerous questions about symptoms that sound like those related to Fifth disease, a Pediatric Center nurse said.

The health department does not keep statistics on Fifth disease, but Howard said she has heard of more cases this year. There have been isolated outbreaks in Murtaugh, Kimberly, Hansen and Twin Falls, she said.

Several students at Murtaugh Elementary School have had bouts of Fifth disease since early December, said secretary Larac Curtis. Even kindergarten teacher Debbie Cutler got it, along with three of her own students.

"It's like chicken pox - it goes around," said Cutler, who suffered from the disease for about two weeks and knows of four other children with its symptoms.

Besides flu- and cold-like symptoms and a rash, Cutler said, she had swelling that prevented her from kneeling to help a student without having excruciating pain. In the morning, Cutler couldn't make a fist, and she couldn't get her shoes on, she said.

Some Murtaugh students with Fifth disease also itched, Curtis said.

"We're still having an occasional slip-in-the-face look," she said Friday. "It's been really strange."

Clinton phones former governor Evans during Idaho flood tour

By John Thompson
Times-News writer

BURLEY - After a tour of Idaho's flood-ravaged panhandle region Wednesday, President Bill Clinton took time out to place a call to old friend-in-the-Min-Cassia area.

As Air Force One left Boise headed for the East Coast, the president telephoned former Idaho Gov. John Evans to catch up on old times and discuss the present state of affairs in the country.

They talked in an interview Friday, Evans said the president is troubled by anti-federal government "western attitudes" that have been expressed throughout his term as president.

Evans said he told the president that what he is hearing in Washington D.C. from western senators and congressmen is a minority opinion.

"Idaho residents favor protecting the forests and our natural resources," said Evans. "We don't favor the sale of public lands or turning them over to states. Those lands are public lands and should remain available to all of us. What you are hearing about is the second Sagebrush Rebellion and it will fail miserably just like the first one did."

Evans and Clinton were elected governor of their respective states in 1978. The two met and became friends shortly thereafter, but Clinton was defeated in his bid for reelection to the Arkansas governor's seat in 1980.

Evans said he encouraged his friend to run again and he invited Clinton to speak at the annual Jefferson-Jackson Banquet in Boise in 1981.

"He was very discouraged about politics at that time but the Idaho people were friendly and gave him a warm reception," Evans said. "It gave him a boost, he ran for reelection and won, and we've been rather close friends ever since."

In 1992, when Clinton won the presidency Evans was there for the inaugural ceremonies, and Evans hopes to be a delegate to the National Democratic Convention this summer to further lend his support to the president.

"During our conversation, I also emphasized to him that he is held in high regard in relation to how he negotiated with Congress on the budget in recent months and his stance on Medicare and Medicaid," said Evans. "He is on the right track and doing what the working people of Idaho expect."

Evans added that he asked a staff member in Gov. Phil Batt's office if he could attend the president's meeting in Boise during this week's visit, but he didn't get a response in time to make the trip.

A rotary snowblower built by Kodiak Northwest in Paul was tested Thursday in the Snake River in North Burley. The machine and five others just like it will be shipped to Norway.

Paul home to mammoth snowblowers

By John Thompson
Times-News writer

PAUL - Over the past 30 years, skilled workers in this small Minidoka County town have crafted a name for themselves in the world snowblower market.

Kodiak Northwest builds big snowblowers. Bigger than the snowblowers kept in many Idaho garages. Bigger than some garages.

Powered by diesel engines capable of cranking up 500 horsepower or more, the machines can hurl a stream of snow 150 feet at a rate of 6,000 tons an hour. The Kodiak Northwest machine has become so popular on the world market that there is a six-month waiting list to buy one.

In the past five years, Kodiak has never gotten far enough ahead of demand to actually have a single machine in inventory, company President Bruce Burtenshaw said.

The company's self-propelled snowblowers are used mainly at airports and other places "where the work can't stop just because the weather is bad."

"Our machines are like fire trucks," Burtenshaw said. "They sometimes sit around a lot, but when you need them, you really need them."

Kodiak Northwest also builds snowblowers for front-end loaders, street sweepers and plows. It has plans to build a hay-hauling machine for one-ton bales, he said.

The company was founded by Burtenshaw's father-in-law, Bruce Neibaur, in the early 1960s. Burtenshaw said his father-in-law liked to buy old rotary snowblowers and rebuild them in his spud cellar during the winter, when the farm work slowed down.

In about 1965, Neibaur got his first contract to build a new snowblower. His company, named Idaho Norland, existed for several years but was later sold to a German company that went bankrupt.

Burtenshaw graduated from Utah State University in 1972, "with a degree in administration. He came to Paul to work in Neibaur's shop for one summer, hoping to become a high school football coach."

After learning about the business, Burtenshaw couldn't leave it. When the Germans bought the business, he stayed on and worked for them. When the Germans went bankrupt, he picked up the pieces. He and partner Harry Badger created Kodiak Northwest.

"We have developed a reputation in the industry that our machines are the toughest and most reliable," he said. "When no one else can build it they come to us. We do custom work to meet any need."

Kodiak Northwest machines are working all over the lower 48 states, as well as in Canada, Alaska, Norway, Sweden, Finland, Chile and Israel. When new machines go out, Burtenshaw and mechanic Al Jensen personally deliver them to make sure the new owners get properly oriented.

"Airports have to be able to clear runways in five minutes, and there is always pressure to build bigger, faster machines," he said.

Other challenges the company faces are meeting the demands of an international market. Each machine sold has to be specially tailored to the language of the buyer. That means all of the machine's gauges and controls have to be detailed in the customer's specific language, he said.

Engineering new gear boxes, blower heads and different configurations that adapt those parts to huge diesel engines is another challenge, he said.

All of the machines are four-wheel-drive. Most have two diesel engines, one to power the blower head and the other to drive the wheels. The company buys the engines, some power-train components and various other parts from other manufacturers. But the frame, cab, controls, blower and most of the rest are all manufactured in Paul, he said.

"We have grown out of this little farming community into one of the premier manufacturers in the world," Burtenshaw said. "We are proud of our employees. They are hard-working, talented, honest people who take their work very seriously. With a management team of only two people, everyone must know their job and do it well."

City of Rocks plan awaits congressional approval

By Jennifer Bunch
Times-News writer

ALMO - A plan that would hand the City of Rocks National Reserve over to local management and allow work to begin on preservation of natural resources is pending congressional approval.

Until now, approval has been held up by a controversy over rock climbing at one location in the City of Rocks, reserve Superintendent Ned R. Jackson said. Resource preservation in the reserve can begin only after the plan has been approved, he said.

"It's stuff that really needs to be done to prevent further damage to the resources," Jackson said.

Fences need to be built to protect riparian areas, and work to stop erosion needs to be done, he said. The reserve cannot get funding for the projects until the management plan is approved, Jackson said. Even if it is approved this year, the reserve still will not be able to get the money until 1993, he said.

Though approved by the National Park Service director for the Pacific West Field Area at the beginning of February, the management plan awaits approval from the Interior Secretary Interior Bruce Babbitt and the U.S. Congress.

The reserve has been managed by the state for the past year through a temporary order, Jackson said. The order was issued, because a debate between historians and rock climbers over climbing of Twin Sisters has held up final approval of the reserve's management plan. Twin Sisters is a rock formation about 450 feet high that towers at the southern entrance to the City of Rocks.

The issue still hasn't been settled, but the National Park Service decided to seek congressional approval of the reserve's management plan rather than continue to wait for a resolution, Jackson said. It could take several more months before things are settled, he said.

"Rather than hold up everything else in the reserve, that was withheld from the record," Jackson said.

The management plan is approved in a "record of decision," he said. The climbing management plan will be incorporated into the record at a later date, he said.

The reserve's management plan calls for preservation and protection of its cultural and natural resources in the City of Rocks, a landmark on the California Trail for pioneer emigrants. Livestock grazing will be permitted in the reserve, as will rock climbing, hunting and stamping. Private land ownership within the reserve shall continue. The plan calls for construction of a visitor center.

He reminded them that Batt intends for his plan, assembled with input from state biologists, to focus mainly on improving bull trout habitat in areas with the greatest potential for results at the lowest cost.

Scully said he would like to see the plan include tax incentives and funds to land owners to help them make bull trout habitat improvements such as restoring stream-side vegetation and building fences to keep livestock out of stream sections important to the fish.

Anglers question advisory group's role in recovery plan

POCATELLO (AP) - Only five anglers showed up for a Pocatello meeting on Gov. Phil Batt's plan for restoring dwindling Idaho bull trout populations.

Larry Mercer, a board of directors member for Idaho Steelhead & Salmon Unlimited, said he attended Thursday night because improving water quality in central Idaho streams where bull trout live also will protect populations of such game fish as rainbow and cutthroat trout.

"I'm here for what bull trout recovery will do to help other fish of the state - not just bull trout," Mercer said during the meeting conducted by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game to gather public comments on the plan.

Keene Huefle, an Idaho Rivers United member and trout fisherman, said Batt should acknowledge in his plan that measures taken to reduce impacts on Idaho waterways from mining, logging, grazing and agriculture that will help bull trout recover also will help other species.

Mercer, Huefle and Idaho Rivers United board member Bill Davidson said the basin advisory groups "on which Batt's plan will depend for citizen input on protecting bull trout are weighted heavily with people who mine, log, ranch and farm. As a result, they suspect that some measures scientists likely will recommend to help the fish will not be taken."

The basin groups were established by the Legislature in 1995. Their members are appointed by Batt to make water quality improvements in Idaho. The Legislature took the action to settle a lawsuit alleging that more than 900 streams in Idaho violate federal Clean Water Act standards.

"The basin advisory group process was designed to limit nonuser representation and has done that very effectively," Davidson said. "If the governor is looking at the basin advisory groups to solve the bull trout problems, we are in deep trouble."

Diek Scully, a Fish and Game regional fisheries biologist, told anglers that scientists know bull trout are more quickly harmed than other Idaho trout species by stream silt from logging and mining, by irrigation diversions and by lack of shade that overgrazing can cause.

He reminded them that Batt intends for his plan, assembled with input from state biologists, to focus mainly on improving bull trout habitat in areas with the greatest potential for results at the lowest cost.

Scully said he would like to see the plan include tax incentives and funds to land owners to help them make bull trout habitat improvements such as restoring stream-side vegetation and building fences to keep livestock out of stream sections important to the fish.

"In the early 80s we went in this direction giving big tax cuts to the rich to try and make the economy go, bankers, but it didn't do anything to really increase investment," he said. "The economy grew some that was just the natural progression out of a recession, and we got a $3 trillion debt from the little exercise."

Chazanfar and Entlinger both advocate more public education and a more thoughtful congressional review of the tax code.

"We don't need flat tax to have a system without loopholes and deductions. We have to decide if they're more annoying than useful," Entlinger said.

Briefly

Legislature introduces fuel tax hike

BOISE - The House tax committee has allowed introduction of legislation raising the state fuel tax by 3 cents per gallon and boosting registration fees for cars and light trucks by $10 to fund improvements in U.S. Highway 95.

Sponsor Rep. Hilday Kellogg, R-Post Falls, said that would generate $300 million per year, which could be used to finance $300 million in bonds.

The Revenue and Taxation Committee debated the proposal only briefly before approving introduction. Chairman Rep. Steve Antone, R-Rupert, said nothing will happen on Kellogg's bill until after the Legislature deals with other measures designed to generate more income for highway construction.

Kellogg said issuing bonds to cover long-needed improvements to U.S. 95, western Idaho's major north-south route, would free up money for other projects.

Her statement of purpose with the bill estimated that based on historic spending and projected funding, that would free up $147 million for other projects.

Bill to eliminate tax checkoffs fails

BOISE - The Idaho House has rejected a bill that would have allowed state tax officials to remove programs from the state income tax checkoff that don't attract much donations.

"Some times we do things that may not be economical, but they certainly do a lot of good," said Rep. Frances Field, R-Grand View. The bill was defeated on a 42-20 vote Friday.

State income tax forms have seven checkoff lines, allowing people to donate money to seven programs, including nongame wildlife, the U.S. Olympic Committee, Alzheimer's disease programs, Agriculture in the Classroom, timber promotions, the Children's Trust Fund and drug enforcement.

Tax

the liberal Citizens for Tax Justice, labels the flat tax an election year gimmick that "will never be implemented because veteran politicians recognize that if it did it would be a political disaster" for them in the long run with their middle class voters.

He said the flat tax will cause one of two scenarios: It will raise the same amount of money in taxes that is currently raised, but push the tax rate well beyond 17 percent and "become the largest middle class tax increase in history."

Or more likely, he said, "It will cut government revenue by $200 billion and, therefore, cut that much in programs and services, and give 75 percent of the savings to the richest 20 percent in the country."

Flat tax supporters say the $200 billion shortfall in revenue would be made up by cutting government spending and economic growth.

Entlinger said the only federal budgets big enough to cut $200 billion from them are Social Security, defense, and interest payments on the debt - "two programs no one seems to want to cut and one no one can," he said.

And on the growth side, he said $1 trillion more in wages would be needed and Americans produce only $3 trillion now.

Idaho

Compound to be cleaned or torn down

POCATELLO (AP) — Ligertown operators have 90 days to make their mobile home and the animal cages surrounding it comply with building codes or the ramshackle compound near Lava Hot Springs will be demolished.

Robert Fieber and Dotti Martin declined comment about the possible action. They were at the Bannock County Courthouse on Friday negotiating charges filed against them after 19 lions were shot as a result of some of the big cats escaping last September.

A county board of appeals decided on Friday that Ligertown is dangerous because its wiring, sanitation and structure fail to comply with building codes. The board denied an appeal of the condemnation from Fieber and Martin.

"I totally concur with the board's decision," Commissioner Tom Katsilometes said. "I'm glad to see the process move forward to a conclusion."

Budget writers tighten grip on cash

BOISE (AP) — Legislative budget writers tightened their grip on general fund receipts Friday, trimming back the governor's requests for more manpower to monitor released convicts and for new equipment for state tax collectors.

But the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee did vote to use nearly $80,000 from the treasury to replace lost federal money that was financing a substance abuse program for released inmates.

And the panel boosted support for adult protective services so Office on Aging Director Jesse Berain can handle a dramatically increasing caseload. Both actions were taken over Gov. Phil Batt's objections, although state financing of the substance abuse program followed the committee's decision a day earlier to eliminate a similar program inside the prison. The committee had also slashed five regional coordinators from the Health and Welfare Department's substance abuse efforts.

Budget writers approved $32,000 more than Batt recommended in response to the 53 percent increase in reports for protection since the Office on Aging took over the program last summer from the Health and Welfare Department. But they had earlier refused to provide another $100,000 for the same purpose.

Batt had said he rejected both increases simply because money was so tight and Berain had initially indicated he could handle the load without additional resources.

The committee cut the governor's request for nine more people in the Correction Department's field and community service programs for released convicts to four full-year and four half-year workers. Those positions would become full-time in 1998.

2 INEL scientists indicted

BOISE (AP) — Two Idaho National Engineering Laboratory scientists have been indicted on charges of illegally dumping more than 100 hazardous and low-level radioactive waste samples and trying to cover up their actions.

The indictments, made public Friday after a federal grand jury returned them Tuesday, allege Jay A. Johnson and Steve Garcia poured radioactive waste samples down a sink at the INEL and threw hazardous waste samples into a dumpster in 1994. The two men also are charged with lying about their actions to federal auditors.

There is no evidence of a public health risk from the discarded materials, Assistant U.S. Attorney George Breitsmeyer said. But the charges for violating hazardous waste laws and then covering it up are serious, he said.

Election process changed

BOISE (AP) — Idaho political candidates will be able to file nominating petitions without getting signatures on nominating petitions beginning with the May 28 primary.

Gov. Phil Batt on Thursday allowed a bill approved by the Legislature to become law without his signature. It allows candidates to collect signatures of registered voters on nominating petitions, or to pay the filing fee without collecting any signatures.

Maryland delegates, senators honor Ripken

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — The snow couldn't stop baseball's iron man. It did make him a half-hour late.

With fanfare and standing ovations, the Maryland General Assembly on Friday welcomed Cal Ripken Jr., showering the Baltimore Orioles shortstop with plaudits as one of the finest citizens of the state.

Ripken broke Lou Gehrig's consecutive game streak last Sept. 6. For many lawmakers, it was the first time they had laid eyes on Ripken since the record-setting game at Camden Yards.

In both the House and Senate, the shortstop received proclamations on what the legislature designated as "Cal Ripken Day." House Speaker Casper Taylor also presented the player with a framed series of photographs from the day Ripken broke the record.

Just to make sure nothing went wrong, Taylor, D-Allegany, told delegates Thursday not to bother Ripken for autographs.

Caprati accepts wild card for tournament in Germany

PARIS — After an aborted comeback attempt in Paris, Jennifer Caprati has accepted a wild card invitation to play in Essen, Germany, next week, WTA Tour officials said Friday.

Caprati was scheduled to make her first tournament play since November 1994 at the Paris Open this week. Minutes before she was set to play, she withdrew, citing a pulled muscle in practice the evening of the match.

Since then, Caprati has stayed in Paris and received treatment, and WTA Tour officials said that she will attempt to play in Essen next week.

"My leg feels much better now than it did earlier in the week," Caprati said. "Hopefully it will be 100 percent by next week. I am looking forward to my first match."

Penn State center still doesn't recognize parents, coach

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Five days after being elbowed in the jaw, Penn State center Stacey Hrivnak is suffering from amnesia and still doesn't recognize her parents, teammates or coach.

Hrivnak, a 6-5 sophomore from Central Dauphin High School, calls her coach, Rene Portland, "the tall blonde lady."

Hrivnak has had three concussions in the last 15 months, most recent on Sunday in a 78-62 victory over Northwestern. After getting hit in the jaw, she played for nearly eight minutes before coming to the bench and complaining about feeling lightheaded and having a headache.

CSI men can't hold on to first-half lead

By Larry Hovey
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Utah Valley absorbed a solid 45-point first-half effort by College of Southern Idaho Friday night — and then blitzed the Eagles 83-71.

The Scenic West Conference victory keeps the Wolverines on top in the race for the league title and right to host the regional finals. CSI, meanwhile, falls out of a four-way tie for second place and puts the rest of the season up in the air.

The first part of that answer comes tonight when CSI closes out its home season against Salt Lake at 8 p.m. While this was a physical and athletic game in the first half, the Eagles clearly dominated. But when Utah Valley went to its 1-3 zone and did some other things to make it mental, the Wolverines took complete charge. And they didn't hurt themselves by taking control of the boards as well. It wasn't a pretty sight after that and Utah Valley gave a clinic in how to build a close margin with five minutes left in the game to a comfortable 12-point.

The cardinal sin came in first 15 minutes when CSI ran up 13 and 14-point leads. Two of those mental things then hit the Eagles.

First, a ball in the basket was got tangled, costing CSI its first 15-point lead. And then a back-court technical foul gave Utah Valley four free throws and the final field goal of the half.

All of that let Utah Valley into a 45-31 deficit with 1:48 left to eight. "We bury them in the first half and let them back in with all the

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho probably blew it self out of Scenic West Conference championship consideration when the Eagle women committed a turnover, foul and missed a layup in the closing 12 seconds.

That combination made it possible for Tricia Ferrin to hit two free throws and hoist Utah Valley into a 64-63 decision Friday night.

The victory tightened Utah Valley's grip on first place with one loss while CSI fell into a tie for second with Salt Lake Community College with three league defeats.

The Eagles could reclaim second place when they host Salt Lake at 6 p.m. today in their final home showing.

In a teeth-pulling comeback, the Eagles erased a 56-46 deficit over the final nine minutes of the game — and it took that long to get there.

It started looking hopeful when Franci Olson hit free throws with 30 seconds showing for CSI's first lead since the opening moments of the second half. Casey Murdock then forced a jump ball to give CSI the lead with 12.7 showing.

And then it collapsed.

The inbounds pass almost took guard Amanda Covington out of bounds. She tried to throw it back in over her head but Utah Valley smothered it and Ferrin came out dribbling to the hole.

Covington fouled her and she drilled both charities.

With 8.3 showing, CSI brought Oakley nips Murtaugh for Southside crown

By Brad Bowlin
 Times-News sports editor

JEROME — For three quarters of basketball Friday, the Murtaugh Red Devils had the crowd wondering: Just who is the best team in the A-4 Southside sub-district?

The question was answered in the final period, however, as Murtaugh hit just one of 12 shots from the field and top-seeded Oakley came away with a 52-47 victory.

"I thought we had the game in the third quarter," Devil coach Rob Goetsen said. "Then the fourth quarter — we have five turnovers the whole game and we double that in the fourth."

The win sends the second-ranked Hornets against the Northside Conference champ (Shoshone or Carey) here, Wednesday night, with the winner going to the state tournament Feb. 29 in Idaho Falls.

Murtaugh faces a must-win game against the Northside runner-up Wednesday. Games begin at 6 p.m.

While fatigue certainly played a role in Murtaugh's fourth-quarter free-fall (the Devils were playing their 11th game in 17 days), Oakley center Taylor Critchfield had a couple of hands in those problems as well.

The 6-5 junior led all scorers with 19 points and was a terror on the boards, pulling down several key rebounds in the final period.

Almost as big as the rebounds was his foul shooting. Critchfield opened the scoring from the free throw line, then hit a pair with four seconds remaining to ice the game for the Hornets (21-2).

He did the same thing to the same team from the same free throw line two years ago in the junior varsity tournament.

A crisply-played game in which small leads repeatedly appeared and vanished led up to Critchfield's decisive shots.

Matt Smith's three-pointer put the Hornets up 11-4 with a minute to play in the first, but Murtaugh rallied to tie on a three by Tanner Stanger, who scored his team's first 11 points.

Again Oakley built a seven-point lead, using a big rebounding advantage to convert a four-point play that started with Critchfield's bucket and ended with Smith's put-back of a missed free throw.

Brooke Lowe gave the Hornets their biggest lead, at 26-18, with a three-pointer moments later, but the Devils rallied again. A 7-2 run keyed by Lee Andersen's three-pointer ended the half with Murtaugh trailing just 28-25.

The lead jumped to five before Murtaugh seemingly took control in the third. Kevin Nebeker's move around Critchfield put the Devils in front 35-34.

Neither team scored for almost three minutes until Murtaugh point guard Mike Funk pulled his whirling dervish imitation in the lane, finished with a finger-roll and gave the Devils a three-point margin. Stanger followed with a three that put Murtaugh up 40-34 with a minute left in the period.

"We're a good hustling team. We were just trying to stay close in the first half and make that run in the second half," Goetsen said.

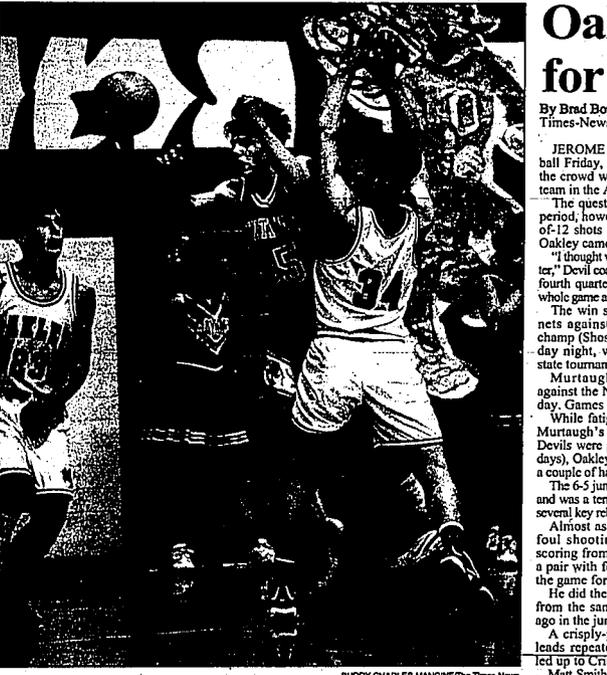

The run ended with a Critchfield basket inside and a Smith three-pointer. Critchfield converted a three-point play moments later and Oakley never trailed again.

"I don't know if we want to play this team again," Hornet coach Blair Garner said. "Funk is just such a great point guard, he creates real problems for us."

Murtaugh (17-8) was the only Magic Valley Conference team to beat Oakley during the regular season, and lost by just two earlier in the tournament.

In the junior varsity championship game, second-seeded Murtaugh beat No. 1 Oakley, 45-37.

U.S. women ski big in downhill competition

The Associated Press

SIERRA NEVADA, Spain — Don't look for Picabo Street on the podium for the women's combined at the World Alpine Skiing Championships, even though she won the downhill portion of the event on Friday.

The same goes for Americans Megan Gerety, who was fourth, and Hilary Lindh, who was seventh. None of the three is much good at slalom, and that counts for the other half of the event on Monday.

The combined seems sure to go to a strong slalom racer like Austria's Renate Goetschl or teammate Anita Wachter, who did well Friday in downhill. Germany's Katja Seizinger, the defending Olympic gold medalist in downhill, also has a shot. She was third in the combined downhill and is a slalom threat.

Street, 24, the defending World Cup downhill champion and second in combined in the last world championships, clocked 1 minute 41.95 seconds on the 3,084-meter

(10,118-foot) long Veleta course. Italian Isolde Kostner — who won the super-G gold earlier in the week — was second in 1:42.15 and Seizinger, the Olympic downhill champion, was third in 1:42.16.

"My slalom definitely has to improve," said Street, who fell and banged her head as she was carrying skis en route to the start house Friday. She said she isn't sure what happened, suggesting she might have blacked out.

"I think it knocked me about for a moment or two," Street said. "I got up and the skis were gone and my other skis were off my feet."

Street didn't seem ruffled by the fall, turning immediately to her medal chances.

"If I race on Monday in the slalom, it will be more for training and for fun," Street added. "I don't have big expectations for combined. I think the rules favor the slalom skiers and my slalom's not so good at the moment."

Street has already picked up a bronze here in super-G.

Picabo Street soars to a victory in the downhill competition of the World Alpine Ski Championships Friday.

Gerety, the 24-year-old girlfriend of American Olympic downhill gold medalist Tommy Moe, shared Street's thoughts.

"I don't really ski slalom," Gerety said. "This is really just practice for the downhill."

Carey knocks off Dietrich, 69-63, in Northside tourney

The Times-News

High school sports

GOODING - Carey made good on Coach Lee Cook's prediction by eliminating Dietrich, 69-63, Friday and moving into the A-4 Northside sub-district championship game.

Dietrich led for most of the game, but the Panthers outscored the Blue Devils 21-13 in the final period to pull out the victory.

Buddy Peterson hit a pair of three-pointers in the final period to spark the Panther comeback.

Carey (17-5) is guaranteed a spot in Wednesday's district playoffs in Jerome. First they will battle Shoshone tonight at 7:30 p.m., needing a victory to force a second championship game on Monday.

Dietrich ends its season at 13-12 overall. In the North variety tournament, Shoshone defeated Ketchikan, 54-52 and Camas County beat Carey, 58-47. Shoshone and Carey will meet for the title tonight at 6 p.m.

Minico wins first dual

NAMPA - Minico garnered its first win of the Nampa team dual wrestling tournament Friday, easily defeating Centennial 55-6.

For the dual, the Spartans had seven pins. "The tournament was seeded," said Minico coach Herb Cooper. "So it will get tougher as we go."

Minico wrestles Meridian today at 9 p.m. If the Spartans win, they advance against the winner of Capital-Pocatello.

Valley and Gooding advance

WENDELL - Valley doubled Kimberly 53-41 and Gooding slipped by Glens Ferry 61-56, to advance in the Class A-3, District 4 boys' basketball tournament Friday.

The losses send Kimberly and Glens Ferry home for the season.

After trailing by one after the first quarter, Valley took the lead at the end of two and carried it out for the easy win.

Not one Kimberly player managed double-digit scoring, compared to four for Valley.

In the Gooding-Glens Ferry game, both teams hit 21 field goals and both teams hit 12 free throws. The difference was the dis-

RICHMOND, Texas - Warren and Felicia Moon whizzed past motorists in a car chase that hit speeds of 90 mph just moments after the NFL quarterback allegedly assaulted his wife, a witness testified today.

The Minnesota Viking's black Lexus was inches away from his wife's white Lexus when the couple rushed past her around 1:11 p.m. on July 18, Karen Seliger told jurors in Moon's misdemeanor assault trial.

The Moons acknowledge they had a heated argument around lunchtime on July 18 in which the NFL star lost control. The two drove away from their home in separate cars.

Police dispatched investigators at 1:09 p.m. to the couple's home after 7-year-old Jeffrey Moon told them in a 911 call that "My daddy gonna beat my mommy."

Moon's trial at the Moons' home by police in the Houston suburb of Missouri City.

It appears that not all officers take notes at crime scenes. Other officers convinced Mrs. Moon to submit a statement and have photos of her injuries taken after they wrongly told her that the two documents would go nowhere if she refuses not to press charges.

Tennis star's father remains in tax case

KARLSRUHE, Germany - Steff Graf's father, taken into custody six months ago to keep him from fleeing a tax evasion investigation, will remain jailed, a court ruled Friday.

Graf, 57, was arrested Aug. 2 for allegedly failing to pay taxes on up to $27 million of his daughter's tennis earnings. He is jailed in Mannheim.

The state high court was required to review Graf's status after six months in confinement.

The next review is due in three months, but Graf lawyers can force it earlier if they can show the reason for his detention.

Graf has to remain jailed because he is the prime suspect in the tax evasion case and might try to flee if released, a court spokesman said.

Also under investigation in the case and jailed in Mannheim is the Graf family tax adviser, Joachim Eckhardt.

Mannheim prosecutors have said Steff Graf remains under investigation but there are no grounds to arrest her.

High wind sends scores soaring in senior tourney

LUTZ, Fla. - Al Geiberger fashioned an even-par 71 on a cold, windy Friday for a one-stroke lead over Buddy Allin and Calvin Peete in the opening round of the Suncoast Classic senior tournament.

The temperature dropped into the 40s by day's end and tents and portable toilets around the Tournament Players Club of Tampa were blown down by wind gusts of 40 mph.

It was the first time since the Daytona Beach Seniors in April 1984 that no player broke par in the first round of a Senior-EGA Tour event.

How tough was the day? Ray Floyd shot 80. Rocky Thompson, who shot 61 in 1994, was 1-under with four holes to play and finished 4-over. Tony Jacklin shot a 46 on the back nine on his way to an 85. John Paul Cain opened with a front-side 37 and finished with a back-nine 49. Hans Henning made 11 on the par-4 15th.

The field averaged 77.3 strokes per round.

But the worst was yet to come. There were only 26 points left in the CSI bank.

The Eagles fought visitors off for a while but the last tie came at 61-61 with 8:12 to play.

"We played scared the whole second half," said Irons. "We played not to lose, rather than to win. We played bad, we coached bad and the whole thing was bad."

Badger women top Ohio State

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Katie Voigt scored 18 of her 22 points in the second half as No. 11 Wisconsin defeated Ohio State 79-67 Friday.

Ann Klapperich had 18 points and 12 rebounds for the Badgers. Barb Franke added 17.

Wisconsin scored the first four points of the second half to take a 33-27 lead at the 19:06 mark.

Voigt scored seven points in a 9-2 Wisconsin run to extend the Badgers' lead to 47-38 with 12:21 left.

Ohio State came back with a 9-2 run to cut the margin to 49-47 at 9:33.

Voigt scored nine points, including a 3-pointer, to lead Wisconsin on a 19-4 run for a 68-51 lead with 3:49 left.

Wisconsin (18-5, 4-11 Big Ten) surged ahead while Ohio State's Katie Smith, the Big Ten's career scoring leader, sat on the bench because of foul trouble.

Adrienne Johnson and Marcie Alberts hit 3-pointers to keep the Buckeyes within striking distance at 70-60 with 2:10 left.

Ohio State (18-8, 8-5), forced to foul, sent Wisconsin to the line, where the Badgers sank 9-of-12.

Wisconsin hit 26 of 31 free throws in the game to Ohio State's 13 of 25. Smith led Ohio State with 17 points but hit only five of 18 shots.

Altered adds 13 and Johnson 12.

No. 8 Old Dominion 92, Richmond 44

NORFOLK, Va. — Ticha Penicheiro scored 15 points, had 11 assists and grabbed 10 rebounds Friday as No. 8 Old Dominion beat Richmond 92-44.

The Monarchs (20-2, 12-0 Colonial Athletic Association) led from the opening tip, ran up a 32-20 lead at the half, then emptied the tank in the second half.

Richmond (10-11, 4-6) was hampered by 31 turnovers, 32 percent shooting and a 50-34 rebounding disadvantage.

Florida State 81, No. 10 Virginia 41

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Tori Suber scored 13 points and was helped by a swarming Cavaliers defense as No. 10 Virginia routed Florida State 81-40 Friday.

Virginia (19-3, 10-3 Atlantic Coast Conference) led by 19 points at halftime and kept pulling away.

The Seminoles (7-16, 2-12) shot only 31 percent in the first half, and went more like 19-55 in the second half.

The Seminoles, who have never beaten Virginia, have dropped 11 of their past 13 games.

Wendy Palmer, who leads the ACC in rebounding with 11.5 a game, had five rebounds against Florida State. Jenny Boucek had 11 points and Palmer finished with 12.

Lysa Moorfield had 14 points and seven rebounds for Florida State.

No. 23 Stephen F. Austin 82, Sam Houston 66

NACOGDOCHES, Texas — Katrina Price scored 22 points, leading 23-ranked Stephen F. Austin to an 82-66 victory Friday night over Sam Houston State.

Price hit four of five 3-pointers for the Ladyjacks 19-3 overall, 14-0 Southland Conference.

Reserve Andee Shiroon led Sam Houston (14-8, 10-4) with 25 points, including 6-of-11 shooting from 3-point range.

Sam Houston outscored Stephen F. Austin from the field, getting 61 points on 27-of-62 shooting from the field, including 7-of-17 from 3-point range.

Stephen F. Austin hit 27-of-68, including 5-of-15 from outside the arc.

Sam Houston was whittled for 23 fouls, and the Ladyjacks converted 23 of 35 free throws, while Sam Houston tried just nine free throws, making five.

The Ladyjacks were called for only 10 fouls. Christie Smith had 10 rebounds for Stephen F. Austin, which dominated the boards 50-35.

Leslie Hale had nine for Sam Houston.

No. 22 Purdue 96, Minnesota 62

MINNEAPOLIS — Tonya Kirk had 22 points and 16 rebounds to lead No. 22 Purdue to a 96-62 victory over Minnesota, keeping the Gophers winless in Big Ten play.

It was the third straight victory for Purdue over its defensive intestine was there from the outset and that is why we won the game.

felt our defensive intestine was there from the outset and that is why we won the game.

Minnesota (4-20, 0-14) snapped a school-record 14 straight games and fans' win since an 80-73 victory at Marquette Dec. 20.

The Gophers shot 42 of 115 straight Big Ten games dating back to last season.

Scoey Lovelace had 16 points and 10 rebounds for Purdue. Jannou Roland added 15 points, Michelle Vandorn 11 and Michelle Griffin 10.

Cheri Stafford led Minnesota with 14 points and Kay Schmidt added 11.

Minnesota scored the game's first six points and stayed close early. The Boilermakers took the lead for good at 15-13 on Vandorn's basket with 12:45 left in the first half.

That started a 16-2 run that put Purdue in command. The Boilermakers led by as many as 36 points in the second half.

Lovelace continued her march up the Boilermakers' career scoring and rebounding lists.

The senior from Detroit has 1,426 career points, fifth on the career list. MacChelle Joseph is the leader with 2,405 points.

Loveless has 1,245 assists and is fourth on the list with 807, 25 behind leader Donna Gill.

No. 7 Iowa 81, No. 9 Penn St. 69

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Nadine Dornod scored 26 points in the first half to help No. 7 Iowa hold off No. 9 Penn State in an 81-69 victory Friday night.

Iowa (21-2, 6-1) overtook Penn State 28-9 over the final nine minutes of the first half to build a 21-point lead, then weathered a comeback that pulled the Lady Lions within five late in the game.

The Hawkeyes finally overcame the rally with Kristen Cluser's four free throws, the second two after she stole the ball, and Tiffany Gooden's block.

Cluser (18-4, 10-3) played the final 10 minutes without leading scorer Angie Pothoff, who collapsed in the Lady Lions' free throw lane, apparently with a broken thumb.

The game was stopped for 10 minutes while coach Rene Portland knelt on the floor in prayer for Cluser to attend to Pothoff.

The Penn State senior was able to walk off the floor and went to the dressing room moments later. She did not return to the bench.

Taryn Smith added 18 points for Iowa, 15 in the second half, and Gooden scored 16. Katrina Mack scored 18 of her 22 points in the second half to lead Penn State. Kim Calhoun had 12 points for the Lady Lions, while Pothoff and Tiffany Longworth each scored 11.

St. Louis' Igor Kravchuk and Detroit's Mathew Dandaneau check each other Friday during the first period.

Avalanche down Panthers in OT

MIAMI (AP) — Mike Keane's backhander 55 seconds into overtime capped a furious rally, giving the Colorado Avalanche a 5-4 victory over the Florida Panthers on Friday night.

The Avalanche erased a 4-2 deficit, scoring a pair of goals in the final three minutes of the third period, then won the game in overtime.

Colorado tied the game late on goals by Joe Sakic and Sandis Ozolinsh. Florida led 4-1 after one period.

goals and an assist to cap the Washington Capitals' comeback victory, 4-3 over the Toronto Maple Leafs.

Jim Carey had 26 saves for the Capitals and got an assist, his first point in 77 NHL games.

Pottery goals by Brooks and Michel Povek in a 34-second span of the first period gave Washington a 2-0 lead. After Toronto tied it, Calle Jones and Brooks scored 27 seconds apart to put the Capitals up 4-2 in the second period.

Blues 4, Red Wings 3

ST. LOUIS — Stéphane Matteau's goal with 55.5 seconds left capped a four-goal third period as the St. Louis Blues rallied from a two-goal deficit to beat the Detroit Red Wings 4-3.

The Blues had tied it 3-3 on Geoff Courtonne's goal with 1:20 remaining. Matteau then won it for the Blues when he swatted the rebound of Igor Kravchuk's shot past Detroit goalie Mike Vernon.

The win snapped the Blues' four-game home winless streak and the Red Wings' three-game winning streak. It was only the Red Wings' second loss in their last 15 games. St. Louis has now won three of four.

Stars 6, Oilers 1

DALLAS — Shumate Mike Modano had the first four-goal game of his career as the Dallas Stars snapped a 10-game home winless streak with a 6-1 victory over the Edmonton Oilers.

Jer Lehtinen contributed a career-high four assists and Andy Modan scored 32 shots in his first action since early January for the Stars.

Modano, with one goal in his previous eight games, gave the Stars leads of 2-0 and 3-1, then notched his third career hat trick with 7:42 to play on a rebound. Modano boosted the Dallas lead to 6-1 with 5:12 left with his 25th goal, finishing off a 2-on-1 with Lehtinen.

Penguins 1, Jets 0

WINNIPEG, Manitoba — Jaromir Jagr broke open a scoreless game late in the second period as the Pittsburgh Penguins defeated the Winnipeg Jets 1-0.

But the surprise may have been that the Jets held their own against the Northeast Division leaders and peppered goaltender Tom Barraso in the third, although they couldn't send it into overtime.

Winnipeg and Pittsburgh each failed on five power-play chances.

Furyk holds Hawaiian Open lead

HONOLULU (AP) — With the wind bending the flagsticks for the second straight day, left-hander Russ Cochran shot a 6-under-par 66 Friday to join three other players atop the leaderboard after 36 holes of the $1.2 million Hawaiian Open.

Brad Fabel and Steve Stricker, with 70s, and Jim Furyk, with a 71, were also at 139, 5-under for two rounds of the 6,975-yard Waialae Country Club course.

Cochran came from far back to grab a share of the midway lead after a day in which Wayne Levi led most of the way only to falter coming home.

Levi, whose 67 gave him the 18-hole lead, shot a 38 on the back to complete a 1-over 73 and drop a stroke back of the leading group at 140.

He was joined at 4-under by Brandel Chamblee, who fashioned a 67, and Keith Clearwater, who had his second 70.

Brad Faxton, with a 67, moved into contention at 141 along with Kenny Perry, Paul Azinger, Jeff Hart, Phil Blackmar and Gary Hallberg. Perry shot 69, Azinger, Hallberg and Blackmar had 70s and Hallberg a 71.

Among those in a large group at 142 were Ryder Cup member Tom Lehman, former Masters champion Larry Mize, 1994 British Open runner-up Jasper Parkirk and Vijay Singh, who won double bogey on No. 18 scored a round of 70.

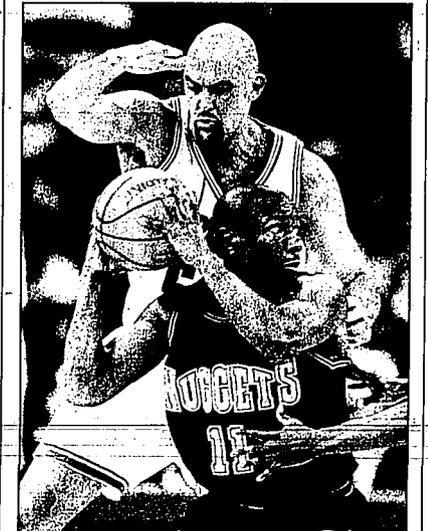

Scott Simpson, a shot back of the lead after Thursday's round, struggled to a 76 and was at even par with 143.

Seventy-eight players made the cut on 3-over 147.

The final group included John Morse, who added a 73 to an opening 74 in defense of the Hawaiian Open title he won last year.

The winner of the tournament, which is sponsored by United Airlines, gets $216,000.

Magic crush Bucks, 121-91

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Shaquille O'Neal made the first 3-pointer of his career and the Orlando Magic tied the NBA record for home wins at the start of the season Friday night with a 121-91 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks.

The defending Eastern Conference champions improved to 27-0 on their homecourt, equalling the start of the 1946-47 Washington Capitols. They can break the record by beating Philadelphia at Orlando Arena on Tuesday night.

O'Neal's 3-pointer at the buzzer capped a 40-point first quarter in which the Magic shot 77 percent. The All-Star center had 19 in the period and finished with 31 despite sitting out the last eight minutes of the game.

The center took an inbound pass from Joe Wolf above the 3-point line with just under two seconds left in the period. He was 0-9 from that distance the last three years, but looked confident when he turned and banked a 26-foot jumper for a 40-25 lead.

Anfernee Hardaway, who didn't play at all in the fourth quarter, had 24 points and 10 assists.

Bulls 103, Timberwolves 100

MINNEAPOLIS — Michael Jordan gave the largest crowd in Target Center history what it came to see night, scoring 39 points.

Scottie Pippen added 29 points for the Bulls, who were the main attraction for the 20,214 fans. It was the largest crowd to see an NBA game in Minnesota since the Wolves played in the Metrodome in 1989-90, their first year in the league.

It also was the first sellout for the Wolves since 19,874 turned out for a game against the Orlando Magic on Feb. 19, 1995.

Although they wasted a 15-point third-quarter lead and had to struggle for their fourth straight win, the Bulls still remained perfect in 13 games against Minnesota.

Isiah Rider led the Wolves with 29 points, 21 in the second half.

Knicks 116, 76ers 84

NEW YORK — The New York Knicks welcomed Brad Lohaus into the starting lineup and had their highest-scoring first quarter of the season. Lohaus, acquired eight days earlier in a trade with San Antonio, replaced Charles Oakley in the starting five.

Pro basketball

Oakley went on the injured list earlier in the day with a broken thumb. Lohaus finished with eight points and four rebounds in 19 minutes.

Derek Harper had 21 points, Patrick Ewing had 18, Doug Christie 16 and Anthony Mason had 15 points and 12 rebounds. Clarence Weather- spoon led the Sixers with 20 points.

Hornets 107, Nuggets 100

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Charlotte exploited the absence of Denver center Dikembe Mutombo as Matt Geiger scored a career-high 28 points.

Geiger's work and the sideling of Mutombo helped the Hornets to a 64-36 advantage in scoring in the paint. Glen Rice got 20 of his 26 points in the paint, including 11 in the second half.

The 7-foot-2 Mutombo watched the game in street clothes, resting a sprained left ankle he sustained one night earlier in Denver's loss to Milwaukee. It ended his streak of consecutive starts at 295, third-longest in the NBA.

Pacers 95, Bulls 94

BALTIMORE — Reggie Miller scored 29 points, including the tie-breaking free throw with 13 seconds left, as Indiana ended a three-game losing streak.

Rik Smith got 11 of his 28 points in the fourth quarter, nine during an 11-0 run midway through the fourth period.

The Pacers survived a career-high 32 points from Washington's Jovan Howard. Calbert Cheaney had 18 points for the Bulls, who dropped their sixth straight game, a season high.

Spurs 113, Warriors 95

SAN ANTONIO — David Robinson had 17 points and 18 rebounds, while Vinny Del Negro scored 20 points as the San Antonio Spurs snapped a two-game losing streak by beating Golden State 113-95 Friday night.

Chris Smith, making his first start since coming to San Antonio in a trade from the New York Knicks, added 15 points and seven rebounds. Sean Elliott scored 16 for the Spurs, who won for the first time since the All-Star break.

Chris Gatling and Tim Hardaway each scored 18 points for the Warriors, who had their two-game winning streak broken.

San Antonio broke the game open with a 15-4 run at the start of the third quarter. Elliott scored six points during the streak and Avery Johnson's two free throws with 5:42 left gave the Spurs a 79-58 lead.

Conduct loophole exposed by Tonya-Nancy affair to be closed

ATLANTA (AP) — Two years after its most celebrated case of sportsmanlike conduct, the U.S. Olympic Committee is about to close a big loophole in the rules of behavior for Olympic athletes.

The revision of the code of conduct for team members at the Games began after the Barcelona Olympics in 1992 and accelerated after the Tonya Harding-Nancy Kerrigan conflict at the Winter Olympics two years later.

Confusion over when an athlete becomes an Olympian — and therefore when the USOC's code takes effect — allowed Harding to avoid disciplinary action before Lillehammer and even thereafter. The USOC won a $25 million lawsuit if she was kept off the team.

Although some fine-tuning — including the exact date when the rules go into force — is needed, the new code is expected to be approved by the USOC's executive committee this weekend and receive final passage by a board meeting in April.

"We've learned from experience," said Dr. Ralph Hale, a USOC vice president and the head of the code rewrite task force. "You can't live in a never-never land."

The pending revision also would stress the long-established priority of working through arbitration to resolve disputes over team selection and eligibility. But committee members said the new code would not make the courts off-limits.

"There's nothing in the code to preclude a U.S. athlete from going to court," said John Ruger, a former Olympic biathlete who has worked on the revision. "But we have to make this simple and we have to use common sense."

The idea to revise the code followed the '92 Games, where some members of the basketball "Dream Team" used pencils and pens to cross out sections of the rules forcing them to wear athletic gear manufactured by companies competing with their own sponsors.

But the biggest push for change came from Harding and Kerrigan. Despite growing evidence of her involvement in plotting the attack on Kerrigan, her archival, at the Olympic figure skating trials in January 1994, Harding said she would behave in a way that brings honor to themselves, their team and their country.

The current code does not govern behavior until an athlete is formally named to the Olympic team. That can be as long as eight months or just a few short weeks before the Games begin, and that unspecified timing was a key in the Harding case.

Figure skating federation discipline could not be met out without a long waiting period, and the USOC rules were not relevant because the attack on Kerrigan took place before the team was picked.

But Hale and his colleagues believe they can solve that dilemma. If the revised code is approved, the USOC rules would automatically take effect a predetermined number of days before a fixed point in the Games themselves.

Although Hale and others said that date must still be worked out with the executive committee, other sources said the revised proposal would be 45 days before rosters are submitted, which usually takes place a few days before opening ceremonies.

Setting a fixed date creates a problem, Hale acknowledged, because of the disparity in team selection dates and methods.

"But we have to have something in place for Atlanta," he said. "We still have ample time."

"But we have to have something in place for Atlanta," he said. "We still have ample time."

Hale said other problems to be ironed out included when to hold arbitration, how to use the International Court of Arbitration in sports for U.S. athletes and how American athletes stand under the code when the Olympics are held in foreign countries and governed by foreign laws.

The revision was to be completed last October but was postponed so the task force could explore all possible scenarios.

"Asking 'What if?' is a huge part of this process," Ruger said. "Despite the delay, Hale said the code would be ready for the Atlanta Games in July."

Daulton breaks in new glove

The Associated Press

No wonder spring training looks a little different to Darren Daulton. For one thing, he's seeing balls hit at him. After an entire career spent as a catcher, Daulton is trying to make the transition to the outfield in his new season. If successful, he'll become the 13th player to start in left field on opening day in the last 13 years for the Philadelphia Phillies.

Spring training

Daulton is so sure he'll do OK in his spot that he no longer has catcher's mitts, he says.

"I burned them all," he said Friday. Daulton is in camp early in Clearwater, Fla., breaking in his new glove and learning a position he hasn't played since some brief time in the minors more than a decade ago. "This is going to be a different kind of camp for me," Daulton said. "Two busloads of pitchers and catchers were going to work today and I had a smile on my face."

Daulton asked for the move after saying that his years behind the plate — and nine operations — had worn him down. The Phillies accommodated their All-Star and signed former All-Star Benito Santiago to catch instead. "I just have to be fundamentally sound," Daulton said. "I've got to see the ball and go catch it. I think I have enough speed... to overcome any hurdles."

Manager Jim Fregosi said he's not looking for Daulton to win a Gold Glove in his new spot.

"In the worst case scenario, Darren will be an adequate left fielder," Fregosi said. "I think it is much easier to catch a fly ball than it is a pop up behind home plate."

Daulton, 34, said he hopes to regain some pop at the plate now that his knees will get a break. He had nine home runs and 55 RBIs last season, which ended when he tore anterior cruciate ligaments on Aug. 25.

"When my base isn't strong, I don't hit the ball well," he said. "I can be a better offensive player with the move. I'll put up better numbers and that will be best for the team. ... I think I can still be a 25-homer, 100-RBI player."

Reds

Jose Rijo is disappointed that his elbow problems have prevented him from throwing harder this spring. But he's more disappointed with the way the Reds have treated him. Rijo is making slow progress from his rehabilitation from reconstructive surgery. He can throw medium-speed fastballs, but no breaking pitches at Plant City, Fla.

"The doctor told me not to force it. My range of motion is not consistent," he said. Rijo, the former ace of Cincinnati's staff, said he's still upset that team owner Marge Schott didn't offer to fly him to Los Angeles for the first round of the playoffs last October. Even though Rijo was injured and couldn't pitch, he wanted to be on the bench for support. "I don't think I'll ever get over that," Rijo said. "I'm not as excited to come to spring training as what we used to. I don't feel like part of the organization anymore. I feel like just another employee."

"But that's the way things go around here. When I came here, this was a great organization. Now look at it."

Orioles

A familiar face was watching when new manager Davey Johnson held the press conference for pitchers and catchers. It was Johnson's former manager with Baltimore, Earl Weaver.

"I was on cloud nine and that just put me on cloud 12 or 13, seeing Earl," Johnson said. "I knew he was pumped for me as I was for me." The Orioles worked out in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., despite morning rain. By the afternoon, skies were clear.

Rockies

Bret Saberhagen was back on the mound, albeit not to pitch. Saberhagen, still sidelined by shoulder trouble, took part in fielding drills for pitchers in the Colorado camp at Tucson, Ariz. Saberhagen is not expected to throw from a mound until early March. In the meantime, he's on a schedule that includes three workouts daily.

"He's put in some hours," manager Don Baylor said. "It's not going to be lack of effort." "When I see him throw and he doesn't feel anything (pain), I think it's a grave then," he said. "It will be very uplifting the day he walks onto the mound. He'll feel he's climbed to the mountain top."

Astros

Houston manager Terry Collins altered his practice plans for Saturday because of possible showers. With the forecast calling for rain in Kissimmee, Fla., Collins said Saturday's workout had been moved from 10 a.m. EST to noon.

Valley basketball team, coaches deserve praise

I'm again amazed! The Valley Viking ladies basketball team played in another state championship game!

The outcome has never been what the players, coaches and fans have prayed for, but the accomplishments have been tremendous.

No one likes to lose at anything, much less a state championship game. But innumerable want-to-be athletes, like myself, can only dream about playing in a state tournament, much less being fortunate enough to participate in a championship game.

Hopefully these young ladies will soon enjoy the satisfaction from their accomplishments they deserve. The accomplishments have been many.

The coaches are amazing. Coach Malone and Coach Musmann are both very special gentlemen. They know how to coach; they are willing to give of themselves, and they care about their students.

Three championship games in a row, with three very different teams and three very different personalities — a feat I can't begin to analyze. The only constant has been the exceptional coaches. Their accomplishments haven't only been in the last three years either. We have enjoyed many great teams in the past several years. Thank you, gentlemen, you're great.

Again the fans were awesome. It was great to have the tournament locally this year so the community could all share in the excitement. But distance has never deterred the fans. Whether in Boise or Lewiston, Valley's fans have always been the greatest. The student body and community are beyond belief.

Great kids, great teachers, great coaches, great neighbors — no wonder I'm so proud of Valley High School and the Eden/Hazelton community. RUSTY SCHWARZ Eden

Dive into free agency

The Associated Press

OK, football fans, take a deep breath and here we go:

Available for your favorite team as NFL free agency began Friday were Super Bowl winners, future Hall of Famers and developing stars.

Neil O'Donnell, who led the Steelers to the AFC Championship and Larry Brown, who was the Super Bowl MVP for Dallas after spoiling O'Donnell's day with two interceptions, were free. So were Marcus Allen, one of the game's best-ever running backs, and Art Monk, the holder of several major receiving records. Both will wind up in Canton five years after they retire.

Players at or near the highest level of performance will get a chance to get rich quickly. Watch the likely bidding wars for 49ers cornerback Eric Davis and Cardinals cornerback Aeneas Williams. Steelers tackle Leon Searcy, Bears receiver Jeff Graham and Saints receiver Quinn Easterby.

"With the development of the passing game, the premier positions have become quarterback and tackle on offense, pass-rushing ends and good coverage cornerbacks on defense," said agent Leigh Steinberg, who represents players at all those positions. "Teams are looking to fill their needs in those areas through free agency."

Not all teams. Jimmy Johnson, just getting started in Miami after two seasons as a television commentator, will emulate his method of success in Dallas — through free agency. "I think there is a risk when you try to build a team with veteran free agents," Johnson said. "I think any time you bring in a veteran from another club, you are going to have a guy who has been through the rigors of professional football and you are going to have a guy who has an opinion on how you do things. When you bring in a college player, he doesn't have an opinion, because it's his first exposure to professional football."

"I'm not interested in having a lot of opinions. I am interested in having guys who want to work and want to do everything it takes to win. In some cases, you might say, 'I want guys who have blind loyalty, not guys who want to give me opinions on how they do things elsewhere else.'"

Not going anywhere else is tackle Gary Zimmerman, who re-signed with Denver. The six-time Pro Bowl contract with the Broncos, ending speculation the 34-year-old veteran might retire. "I wouldn't be surprised if Gary has three years left," Broncos coach Mike Shanahan said. "It all depends on how he feels. As of right now, he feels extremely good. He said he feels as good as he's felt in a long time."

"He's the type of person that wants to play at a certain level and if he can't play at that level, he doesn't want to play at the next level down." Also staying put is running back Harvey Williams, who rushed for 1,114 yards and scored nine touchdowns last season for the Raiders.

"I just wanted to put that silver and black back on," Williams said. "If you cut me open right now, I'd probably bleed silver and black."

The Times-News would like to congratulate these three JANUARY CARRIERS OF THE MONTH, who were chosen because of their sales capabilities, excellent service and collection skills.

Ryan Peterson, a sophomore at Twin Falls High Schools is a Times-News carrier with route number 873. He is the 16 year old son of Bruce & Jonnie Peterson and likes football and snowboarding. His future goals include graduating from High School and attending college. Ryan now uses his car to deliver his papers, but will always remember when he did the route on his bike.

Katie Kober is a Times-News carrier with route number 716. She is the 12 year old daughter of Rick & Kathleen Kober, and is a 7th grade student at O'Leary Junior High. Katie enjoys soccer, baseball & rollerblading, and is active in her Church Youth Group. Her favorite class is PE, and her future goals include going to College. Katie is saving the money she earns as a carrier to go to Orlando with her family, and appreciates how nice her customers always are to her.

Religion

Restore daily influence of religion

This is the truth — you will live longer if you are engaged in regular religious practice.

Not only will you live longer, you will be happier, your family will be stronger and you will have higher self-esteem. That's the conclusion of a study of religious practice done by the Heritage Foundation, of Washington, D.C.

Clark Morpew
Faith today

This should not be startling to anyone living in the United States, because we are probably, among developed nations, the most religious and pious. Almost 50 percent of the population attends worship in any given week. Seventy-eight percent pray at least once a week and 57 percent say they pray daily.

If you regularly attend religious worship services, your marriage will have more stability, your moral code will be stronger and you'll have fewer bouts with depression. The study also says religious people are not as likely to get killer diseases. As you can see, the benefits of regular religious practice are immense.

Also, this miracle of social consciousness doesn't belong to one faith alone. You can be any flavor of Christian you want — Pentecostal, mainline or fundamentalist. You can be a Hindu and worship one of the millions of gods in that religion. You can be a Buddhist, with that faith's emphasis on happiness and enlightenment. You can be a Muslim and adhere to the five pillars of Islam.

All you have to do is get into the habit of regular religious practice. And if we all did that, this country would be so much better we would think we were living in the vestibule of heaven.

I believe illegal drug use would go down along with crimes of all kinds. Families would stay intact, and children would grow up with a stronger moral foundation.

So, if it is true, I believe it is, why does television ignore religion? Why do we seldom see a person on a sitcom talk about faith? Why is it true that movies almost never explore questions that have religious significance? Why is it that television news programs steer clear of religious happenings?

Those are exactly the questions the Heritage Foundation is asking in the just-completed study. The foundation wants government to begin a national debate on the benefits of regular religious practice.

The study calls for the president to appoint judges, especially on the U.S. Supreme Court, who are sensitive to religion. And the foundation wants the census in the year 2000 to ask questions that will reveal the intensity of religious practice in the U.S.

Those measures are fine, and I would welcome any of them. But what I want most, more than those things I believe religious leaders to get their backs up and hang a whopping criticism on those who have only negative things to say about religion. I think some religious leaders are wimps. They seem loath to criticize elements of the popular culture such as violence and sexual content in movies.

Of course, movies have immense influence over the young. So do rock music, television, teen magazines and, I suppose, newspapers to a lesser degree. These are the great public-information gatherers in our world. And except for newspapers, religion is absent from their presentations. In some cases religion is even ridiculed as being outdated, irrelevant, strait-laced and utterly boring.

Back to the genius of modern religion. Why haven't leaders taken on the media that make a laughingstock of religion? Is it possible to get the kind of role that appears in their parishioners' family rooms? Haven't they seen a movie in the past 10 years? I can't believe we are willing to tolerate and participate in the trashing of moral values in this country.

But the question is, how do we restore that influence of religion in our daily lives? We do religion. We participate in worship, Bible studies and social action projects. We stop carping about our leader's wrinkled suit and scuffed shoes and we get behind a national effort to rebuild a spiritual presence in our neighborhoods.

And we hit the streets with the religious message of our choice. Take your faith to the people. I believe we will feel better, and so will the nation.

From 'pipe dream' to reality

Winona Watson recently returned from her fourth trip to Haiti.

Twin Falls woman teaches typing at Haiti university

By H. R. Weixel
Times News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Using 20 typewriters as tools in her field of service, a Twin Falls woman has been spreading good news and goodwill in the troubled island of Haiti.

Winona Watson recently returned from a four-month stint teaching typing at the Christian University of Northern Haiti it was her fourth trip to Haiti.

Watson, who will celebrate her 70th birthday on Sunday, made her first journey in 1981. She was a chaperone for a Baptist group of young people who went to Haiti to put a roof on a parsonage.

During her latest adventure on the island south of Florida, Watson used her skills as a secretary to teach typing to university students.

She had 36 students taking turns using 20 old typewriters. She taught six classes four days a week and "taught my breath on Friday."

With a total student enrollment of 212 at the university and 85 of them enrolled in the typing class, Watson was teaching the most popular class in the school. Completing the typing class is a requirement before a student can enroll in a computer course.

"Everybody wants to learn computers, but they had to take typing first," Watson said. "We only have eight computers at the university, so we really need more."

Watson said she was thrilled with the typing classes she had this year.

"I started teaching typing during my second trip down there in 1988," she said. "When I started, I had only one typewriter — mine. I never had a classroom before this year. As many as eight students would come around my kitchen table. That was our classroom. Now we have a classroom and 20 handmade tables to put our typewriters on. It's wonderful."

Anyone who would like to donate a typewriter or computer for use at the University of Northern Haiti, may call Winona Watson at 734-7818. Donations for shipping costs (about $2.50 a pound) would also be required.

Special training and coaching by Watson, made it possible for one of her students, Obad Payoute, to teach the typing classes after her return to Twin Falls.

"He is very young and about the same age as the other students, but he is a very intelligent young man and the others admired him and accepted him as their teacher," Watson said.

Payoute has a "working scholarship" which allows him to work for his tuition costs, but gives him no money for food. He also teaches a history class at night.

Watson plans to return to Haiti in September. She said she hopes to take some typewriters with her.

While in Haiti, Watson lives alone in a small apartment near the university. The nearest place to shop is 2.5 miles from her home.

"I just make a list and find somebody who is going that way and can bring me what I need," she said. "I always lose weight when I go, because I never have much time to cook and eat. But I eat better than most Haitians. Potatoes are expensive, since they are not grown there, so we eat a lot of rice and beans with tomato sauce. The Haitians can feed at least 20 people with one leg of a chicken. They mix it with beans or rice."

Hunger and unemployment are major problems for the Haitian people, according to Watson. Many of the villagers do not eat for three or four days. Most have no jobs.

"They are so skinny it's pitiful," Watson said. "Many have 20-inch waistlines."

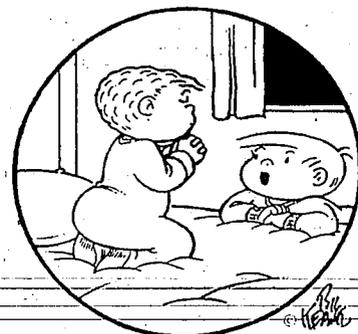

One student told Watson, "I have a job, but I still cannot put food on the table. It hurts when you know your child has to go to school hungry with not even a slice of bread."

The university staff is attempting to start a feeding program. The project was sparked by some Americans who came as a work group to Haiti, saw the hungry people and left $500 for food.

The university, operated by American and Southern Baptist Mission endeavors, was opened in January 1994. Watson said she had "a very small part" in getting the university established on the Haitian island. She mailed 553 letters asking for prayer and financial support.

"It was a pipe dream, but now it's reality," Watson said. "At the university we have a seminary and business, agriculture, education and theology departments."

THE FAMILY CIRCUS

"I'm tellin' Mommy. You're goin' over her head."

Merry Christians celebrate 10 years on cartoon pages

The Associated Press

Limited of New York.

When "Family Circus" cartoonist Bil Keane first began putting religion into his work in the 1960s, some religious conservatives took offense at the irreverence of mentioning God on the funny pages.

Today, when one of his young characters reinterprets a commandment as "Honor thy father and thy mother" or threatens to tell his mother that a sibling at prayer is "goin' over her head," he gets accolades from the same group.

"Even the strictest religious person from the strictest religious sect allows a little levity," Keane said. "Today, they congratulate you for carrying the Christian message into the comics."

While Keane says he has been doing the same thing all along — reflecting the reality of religion as a part of family life — there has been a noticeable change in the pews, say, many religious humorists.

Christian comics are finding dates in church halls, where they may be greeted by portraits of a smiling Jesus. And clergy are discovering a little humor from the pulpit is welcomed by congregations seeking more joy in their faith.

Celebrating this trend on its 10th anniversary is one of the strongest advocates for religious humor in churches, the Portage, Mich.-based Fellowship of Merry Christians. The fellowship has come out with a new book: "Holy Humor: The Best of the Joyful Noiseletter," published by MasterMedia.

Some samples from the collection, which offers some of the best jokes and cartoons from the organization's newsletters over the past decade, encourage churches and religious individuals to laugh at themselves a little.

A paramedic said his most unusual 911 call came from a church, where an usher was concerned that an elderly man had passed out in a pew and appeared to be dead. What was so unusual about that?

"Well," the paramedic said, "we carried out four guys before we found the one who was dead."

A good sermon should have a good beginning and a good ending, and they should be close together as possible.

An inexperienced preacher was conducting his first funeral. He solemnly pointed to the body in the coffin and declared: "But we have here is only a shell. The nut is already gone."

Cal Samra, fellowship president, remembers borrowing $1,000 to produce the first 4-page newsletter distributed to 200 people in April 1986. Today, more than 10,000 people subscribe to the Noiseletter and the association, which offers an array of services from sales of humor books to playbooks in churches, has a mailing list close to 40,000.

Or, as the English writer G.K. Chesterton once said, "Angels can fly because they take themselves lightly. Never forget that Satan fell by force of gravity."

LDS Church leader to visit BYU-Hawaii

The Associated Press

ers say the Mormon church is the second largest church in Hawaii.

HONOLULU — More than 20,000 people are expected to attend a speech by Gordon B. Hinckley, president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, at Brigham Young University-Hawaii on Sunday.

Hinckley, who was ordained head of the 9 million-member church last March, will address the semiannual regional conference of Oahu congregations.

More than half of the state's 53,000 Mormons are expected to attend the event. Local lead-

Hinckley, 85, of Salt Lake City, has been a top church leader since 1961, when he was named to the Council of Twelve Apostles, the policymaking body of the church.

During his visit, Hinckley is expected to meet with Catholic Bishop Francis X. DiLorenzo. The two are expected to discuss joint local lobbying against proposals before the Hawaii Legislature to permit gay marriages and legalize casino gambling and prostitution.

'Confessing Movement' may be problem for Methodists

The Times-News and Dallas Morning News

A new movement is picking up speed in the United Methodist Church. It's called the Confessing Movement, and its goal is to return the 8.6 million-member denomination to its doctrinal roots and make the church more conservative and evangelical.

"This is really a group from the Southeast that wants to enforce a theological orthodoxy that's never been in place in the Methodist Tradition," contended the Rev. Jim Frisbie, pastor of the Twin Falls First United Methodist Church. "It's made up of conservative, patriarchal, male-dominated types who want to roll the clock back to 1956."

The Confessing Movement has held all-night sessions in hotels to write position papers and plot strategy. It's sending literature to the approximately 1,000 delegates to the denomination's quadrennial convention in April, where it hopes to compel debate on Methodist theology.

"There has to be a major reformation in our self-understanding," said William Abraham, a professor at Southern Methodist University's Perkins School of Theology and a leader of the Confessing Movement. "What's at stake for Methodists is whether we're going to (hold onto) the core of Christian tradition."

The movement has about 15,000 members in 45 states. Critics say the group is a threat to the denomination's tradition of tolerance.

They say the situation has worrisome parallels to the Southern Baptist Convention, which was riven in the 1980s by a power struggle stemming from disputes over scriptural inerrancy. In response, the Confessing Movement has taken out an ad in Methodist publications calling for critics to attend.

They (the Confessing Movement) are trying to float a theological litmus test which would control the seminar. Please see CONFESS/2

New publisher opens 'Door' to even more religious satire

Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel

Religious phonies, flamboyants and pompous ones, beware. The Door, the Christian version of Mad magazine, is slumping on new targets and opening to a broader audience.

For the first time, in 25 years, the religious satiric magazine is changing hands. Its new publisher: Trinity Foundation, a Dallas-based activist group that specializes in investigating televangelists.

Foundation president Ole Anthony promises more satire, more investigations, and even a column on religious TV by veteran critic Joe Bob Briggs.

"I think people are waiting for this kind of honesty," says Anthony, who drew national notice when he helped ABC's "PrimeTimeLive" and the syndicated program "Inside Edition" investigate "Word of Faith" preacher Robert Tilton in 1991. "We see our role as being the same as the media, to destroy idols. John the Baptist said to bring forth fruit necessary for repentance."

The January/February issue is a joint work of Trinity and the outgoing publisher, Youth Specialties of El Cajon, Calif., which makes up-sold materials for church youth ministries. The March/April issue will be the first one totally published by Trinity.

The transfer is an outright gift, with no money involved, according to Mike Yaconelli, who recently stepped down as Door senior editor after 25 years.

"It's been a heckuva ride, but I don't have the energy to keep it going," Yaconelli says from his home in Yreka, Calif. "Satire takes an energy, and I've become too mellow. It needs a more caustic edge."

Few readers have ever accused "The Door" of being mellow. A byproduct of the "Jesus Freak" movement in Southern California of the late '60s, "The Door" has gained some notables as a fundamentalist leader Jerry Falwell, rocker Amy Grant and televangelist Tilton.

While never piling up large subscription figures - it peaked at 24,000 a decade ago and fell to 9,000 last year - "The Door" has gained some influential admirers. House ads have quoted such notables as Oregon Sen. Mark Hatfield, reformed Watergate conspirator Chuck Colson and sociologist Os Guinness.

The major draw for readers has been the magazine's humor - almost unheard of in generally somber U.S. evangelicalism. The Doorkeepers, as they call themselves, have mocked the flamboyant and punched holes in flawed logic.

Favorite Door features have included the Green Weenie Award for the "Religious Loser" who posted the biggest scam of the month; and "Theologian of the Year," which has highlighted such people as Tammy Faye Bakker and Jessica Hahn.

What Yaconelli calls the "cover-assessment" has been a point of contention. The Christmas 1971 cover spoofed commercialism by running a cartoon with Santa Claus in the manger instead of Jesus. In December 1994, the magazine did it again by rejecting Santa with Barney the purple kids' show dinosaur.

Such antics typically have caused 40 to 50 readers a year to cancel their subscriptions.

More seriously, The Door editors prize their lengthy interviews with such luminaries as Billy Graham, Tony Campolo and Garrison Keillor, best known for his "Prairie Home Companion" radioact.

Under the new arrangement, the magazine will continue to be edited by longtime Door-keeper Bob Darden of Waco, Texas.

Missionaries

BURLEY - Sister Courtney Lynn Petersen has been called to serve an 18-month mission for the LDS Church in the California Los Angeles Spanish-speaking and the Los Angeles Temp Visitors Center Mission. She will speak in sacrament meeting at 2:45 p.m. Sunday at the Unity 1st Ward chapel, 275 S. 250 E., and will report to the MTC Wednesday.

Petersen graduated from Burley High School and received a Young Women's Recognition Award in 1993. She attended Smith College in North Hampton, Mass., and Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, where she is a junior sports broadcasting major. She also studied at the BYU Jerusalem Center during the summer of 1995. She is the daughter of Joe and Linda Petersen of Burley.

Petersen

daughter of Tom and Ann Peters of Jerome and the late Lorna Peters and the granddaughter of Ralph and Blanche Peters of Jerome, Bud and Paulina Johnson of St. George, Utah, and Larry and Nelda Kershaw of Caldwell.

Speakers laud religious-freedom rulings

Dallas Morning News

INDIANAPOLIS - Christians won a number of legal battles involving religious freedom in 1995, but they must remain vigilant in asserting their constitutional rights, advocates said at the National Religious Broadcasters convention recently.

Religion and the law was a major theme at the 53rd annual meeting of the National Religious Broadcasters, the only national organization for religious broadcasters and a group primarily made up of evangelical Protestants.

Last year was a "banner year for religious liberties," said Mat Staver, president of the Liberty Counsel, a Christian legal rights organization. He pointed to several U.S. Supreme Court victories, including a case involving a University of Virginia student who sued the school after he was denied student activity fund money for a Christian magazine.

However, some other leaders of religious-rights groups sounded cautionary notes.

"Despite all the court rulings and wins we've had, the battle continues to rage," said Alan Sears, president and general counsel of the Alliance Defense Fund.

Jay Sekulow, director of the American Center for Law & Justice, put it this way: "We're in a tremendous struggle for religious liberties in this country."

Sekulow predicted that gay and lesbian rights will be a key legal issue in 1996. He cited an effort in Hawaii to legalize same-sex marriages.

"Unless there's miraculous intervention, it's going to happen," Sekulow said. "No civilization has ever survived this type of moral decadence."

The speakers appeared at a breakfast last week sponsored by the Alliance Defense Fund and later at one of the religious broadcasters' educational workshops. About 5,000 people attended the Indianapolis convention.

Many of the speakers said they were encouraged when a federal appeals court last month upheld the constitutionality of the Religious Freedom Restoration Act.

The ruling blocked the city of Boerne, Texas, from using historic preservation laws to prevent a Catholic church from tearing down a 73-year-old sanctuary.

The Religious Freedom Restoration Act says that government must show a "compelling interest" before it can substantially burden the exercise of religion.

Many religious groups were closely watching the decision by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, hoping that the church would be allowed to demolish the sanctuary and build a larger structure.

Confess

ies, publishing houses and boards and agencies of the church," Frisbie said. "(They say) if you don't believe like we do, you can't have any money."

Frisbie sees the movement as mostly a response to the women's movement and the rising concerns over issues of homosexuality and, to a lesser extent, abortion.

But if the Confessing Movement mounts a fight, observers say, the conflict could suck life out of the United Methodists, who've been losing membership for more than 25 years. That puts them in the same company as other mainline denominations. In most of those denominations, conservatives are organizing groups to battle what they consider the too liberal tilt of their national leadership.

Confessing Movement leaders named themselves after the German churches led by Dietrich Bonhoeffer that stood up to Hitler and the Third Reich, a stance that cost Bonhoeffer his life. Their position papers describe the centrality of Scripture and the need to reground the church in its historic doctrine. They repudiate the church for various controversies revolving around gender/sexuality and for experimenting with what it calls penitence.

Last summer the denomination was jolted when the Rev. Jenne Audrey Powers, a top church executive, announced she is a lesbian. Powers helped plan the controversial 1993 Re-Imagining Conference, which drew criticism from moderates and conservatives for promoting what they called neo-pagan worship through worship of a female personification of God.

The conference and its fallout are perhaps most emblematic of Methodism's problems, according to Abraham.

Frisbie said the Confessing Movement is not being well received in the West, North or Northeast.

Debbie Pitney, District Superintendent of the United Methodist Church's Eastern District, agreed.

"But there is a reasonable sized group," she said. "They had a kind of no-host meeting, and 900 people came."

Pitney will be attending the April convention as a clergy delegate from the Oregon-Idaho Annual Conference. So far, she said, everything she's received in the mail indicates that there is no legislation connected to the Confessing Movement.

"In southern Idaho, there are 42 churches and only one church - in the Boise area - has declared itself a part of the Confessing Movement," she said. "Of course, that doesn't mean there are not other United Methodists who would agree."

Pitney characterized the movement as an attempt to persuade everyone to believe alike on what she calls the "hot button issues."

She said, "They (the Confessing Movement) would like us to have a standard confession of faith and, when you first hear that, that's not bad. I can easily agree with you. But - I believe in Jesus Christ. I believe in the Holy Spirit ... but, for me, it is then, 'Therefore ... and my belief in Christ leads me to a different perspective'."

Pitney pointed out the fact that no one draws distinct lines within her denomination. She views that as a strong point, she said, but she also sees it as the point that causes people the most frustration.

"I certainly don't buy into it (the Confessing Movement)," Frisbie said, "but I'm willing to discuss it with people, and I'm sure there are people in my congregation who would be in one of those camps."

Last month, the members of the St. Philip United Methodist Church in Garland (outside Dallas), Texas, debated how they would respond to the Confessing Movement.

"The pastor, the Rev. David Rucker, and a hearty half of the church's governing board wanted to sign up and add 'A Confessing Movement Church' to its stationery. Other members didn't. Ultimately, they voted to allow members to join as individuals. In the process, a few members dropped away. The issue is expected to resurface."

"We want to call the church back to its center and be consistent with Scripture and its heritage," Rucker said. "Maybe there are some who need to leave the church, and we're not volunteering to do that and we're not willing to kick anybody out. We ought to have a clear enough stance that people say, 'I believe' or they don't. The bad image of Methodists is that you can believe anything you want."

Fire presents major threat to homes

Keeping a home safe

Other
 Leave a note on when you go away. It says someone's home.
 Put some of your inside lights on timers so that they will go on even at designated times. (Leaving lights on in the daytime signals that you're away from home.)
 If you have an alarm system or a dog, post signs warning of its presence.
 Cats may be great pets, but dogs are much better for detecting burglars. The bigger the dog the better, but even a little yapper will deter many burglars.
 Don't stop at clutter. Have a neighbor pick up mail, newspapers and groceries daily.

The Associated Press
BOSTON — Quick! The bacon you're frying for breakfast has burst into flames. Do you A.) Douse it with water? B.) Throw the pan in the sink? or C.) Slap on the lid and shut off the burner?
 The answer is C. If you know that, you're in the minority, according to a new survey by the National Fire Protection Association. Where do you feel safest from fire? A.) At home? B.) In a car? C.) In a hotel?

Fifty-three percent said they felt most protected in their home. But some 50 percent of all fire deaths — nearly 3,500 last year — occur there, the NFPA said. About 10 to 12 percent of fire deaths occur in cars and hotel deaths account for half a percentage point.
 "If you do have a higher level of confidence that they're really ought-to-be-in-their-homes, said NFPA spokeswoman Julie Reynolds.

The study found that most people are complacent about the threat of fire, believing it won't happen to them, Reynolds said. They overlook even the simplest precautions, such as testing batteries in smoke detectors and taking note of emergency exits in shopping malls.

Forty-two percent of people said they did not look at the fire escape plan on the back of the door during their last hotel stay, and only 10 percent said they always check for fire exits in malls.

"Everywhere we looked, each of these findings, kept underscoring that they have a greater level of confidence than is realistic," Reynolds said.

The survey also found:
 • People in the West and South feel least confident about their safety from fire. The West had the lowest rate of fire deaths last year — 13 per 1 million residents, while the South had the highest rate — 24 per million. In the Northeast and Midwest, the rate was 21 per million.

• People in rural areas died at a higher rate than those in cities and small towns. In cities, it was 20 per million and in small towns, 16 per million.

• 79 percent of those surveyed knew to "stop, drop and roll" if their clothes caught fire. The rest said they would try to remove their clothes, look for a fire extinguisher or take some other action.

• 34 percent of people knew to smother a pan fire with a lid, while 29 percent said they would reach for baking soda or salt — a viable, but less effective option. Nineteen percent said they would use a fire extinguisher, 5 percent said they would pour on water, 7 percent said they would carry the pan to the sink.

Cooking equipment, particularly unattended food, is the leading cause of home fires, Reynolds said.

The association conducted the telephone survey of 800 adults nationwide as part of its 100th anniversary observance. The results, released Thursday, have a margin of error of 3.5 percentage points for the nationwide data and 10 percentage points for subgroups.

HP reports 31% rise in quarterly profit
 SAN JOSE, Calif. — Hewlett-Packard Co., which has a plant in Boise, said Friday that its first-quarter profit rose 31 percent, exceeding analysts' expectations and sending its stock price higher.
 The company, buoyed by robust demand for its computers, earned $790 million, or $1.50 a share, for the three months ended Jan. 31. It earned $602 million, or $1.15 a share, for the same quarter of last year.
 Revenue rose 27 percent to $9.3 billion from $7.3 billion. Orders were up 29 percent to $10.1 billion from $7.8 billion.
 Hewlett-Packard is a leading maker of computers, from laptop PCs to machines for many users.

Officials blame archaic laws on loss of high-tech plant
 SPOKANE — Business officials say archaic Washington laws prompted owners of a proposed high-technology manufacturing plant to pick Butte, Mont., over Spokane.
 State law prevented Washington cities from offering the same sort of tax advantages that Butte could offer, the head of a Spokane economic development agency said.

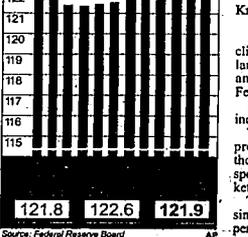

Advanced Silicon Materials Inc., of Moses Lake, decided this week to build a $500 million silicon plant in Butte. Silicon is used to make computer microchips and the plant is expected to employ around 365 people by the end of the decade.

Firm rolls out chip for parents to block sex, violence on TV

Knigh-Ridder News Service
 Zilog Corp. is ready with a V-chip to enable adults to block sexy scenes or violent content from appearing on their television sets.

When Congress passed, and President Clinton signed, the historic telecommunications law of 1996, one of the provisions required new television sets to contain a V-chip that can filter out the equivalent of R-rated or X-rated TV shows. The filtering could prevent children from seeing TV shows their parents deem objectionable.

Industrial production

Factory production falls, partly due to blizzard

Knigh-Ridder News Service
WASHINGTON — News Friday of a decline in U.S. industrial output in January was largely explained because of severe weather, and analysts are looking for a rebound in February.
 However, it's very unclear how much the industrial sector rebound, analysts added.
 The Federal Reserve reported industrial production fell 0.6 percent in January, although noted the East Coast blizzard was responsible for declines in output of most market groups.
 The January fall in output was the largest since March 1991, when output dropped 0.8 percent, the Fed said.

The loss in industrial production follows a revised 0.2 percent gain in December, previously reported as up 0.1 percent.
 The January decline put the Fed's index of the output of U.S. factories, mines and utilities at 121.9 percent of the 1987 average, up 0.1 percent from January 1995. The index was a revised 122.6 percent in December, last reported at 122.6 percent.
 The Fed also reported U.S. industries operated at 81.9 percent of capacity in January, after adjusting for seasonal factors, down 0.8 percentage point from a revised 82.7 percent in December and up from 81.2 percent in January 1995.
 The December rate was previously reported at 82.8 percent.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"I walk firmer and more secure up hill than down."

—Montaigne

"I'd rather hold tough hands," bragged the club shark. "The tougher the hand, the more likely the duplicate top."

"Show us your skill with this slam," lauded the club nee-dler. "It should be an easy challenge for you."

The shark didn't do too well. He won his diamond king and drew trumps. Next, he cashed dummy's diamond ace and ruffed a diamond. Then he took the spade finesse, dummy's jack losing to East's king. Back came a club and the shark was embarrassed.

"Wait a minute," he apologized, "I played too quickly. Let's go back to trick four."

"No you don't," said the nee-dler. "You don't get a second try at the table and you won't get one here."

How should the play have gone? A much better way to play the slam gives South the time-to-lose for a 3-3 spade break before he is forced to commit himself in clubs.

After drawing trumps and ruffing out diamonds, South should lead a low spade to dummy's ace and a low one back. If East wins (today's case), the club finesse is unnecessary. One of dummy's clubs goes on South's spade queen.

What if West had the spade king and South's spade queen lost to it? Then West's only safe return would be a spade. If spades prove to be 3-3, South would not need the club finesse. If they don't split, he would finesse, knowing it was his last and only shot.
