City Council approves school plan

By Virginia S. Garber
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A plan to build an alternative school on the Rock Creek Canyon rim earned support Monday from the City Council and two local pastors, and a thumbs-up from a deputy attorney general.

Six of seven council members voted to include the $14 million school construction among revitalization projects being considered for Old Towne. Councilman Lance Claw abstained from voting.

But a former speaker of the Idaho House blasted the plan, and the Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency — which would issue bonds for school construction — declined to vote on recommending the plan. At a noon meeting, members said they were worried about a preliminary opinion issued by the Idaho attorney general's office last week.

That document said the agency may be overstepping its bounds. But late Monday, Deputy Attorney General Thomas F. Grattan wrote that the Urban Renewal Agency "may have the authority to construct an alternative school to be leased to the Twin Falls School District if the transaction is properly structured."

And it will be, say school district and city officials.

Under the plan, the Urban Renewal Agency would issue bonds to build permanent alternative school quarters on canyon-rim land the city recently purchased for the agency. The agency spends property taxes generated in its Area 2, which includes Old Towne and industrial areas south of Rock Creek.

For the life of the agency's bond — perhaps 15 years — the school district would

Senate slates term-limits vote

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate staged a desultory debate Monday on a proposed constitutional amendment to impose term limits on members of Congress, with a pivotal test vote set for today.

The measure is expected to fall short of the 60 votes needed to end debate, and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole said it's possible that will be the end of the proposal for the year.

"The freshmen are telling me they just want one vote," he said Monday, as first-term Republican lawmakers led the charge. "We can have more if they want them."

Term limits enjoy widespread public support, as measured in the polls.

But the House rejected the measure last year, and the prospects for approval are dim in the Senate.

Complications of surgery claim housewife-humorist

The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Erma Bombeck, the housewife humorist whose wry take on suburban life — from cleaning toilets to getting the kids to take out the trash — earned her a wall of fame of yellowing columns on refrigerators across America, died Monday after a kidney transplant. She was 69.

"Erma Bombeck taught those of us who write columns that the funniest things are the things that our readers know the best — houses, cars, kitchens and of course kids," fellow humor columnist Dave Barry said.

Bombeck died at a hospital in San Francisco, where she underwent a transplant earlier this month.

Bombeck

Bombeck began her column in 1965. It appeared twice a week in about 600 newspapers, amusing readers with her gentle, self-deprecating humor.

Writing about her son's speed in the 100-yard dash, Bombeck said: "I figured it had to be nine days and nine hours. I once asked him to run the garbage out to the can and it sat by the sink until it turned into a bookend."

She used her light touch on more weighty issues, including that inevitable time when children leave home. "Wouldn't it be wonderful if parents could look at their teen-agers and say, 'I want you to stay, but you can't.' Wouldn't it be wonderful if teen-agers could look at their parents and say, 'I don't want to.' Please see BOMBECK/A2

INEL security craft saves young escapees

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

ARCO — A security helicopter from the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory saved two juvenile-escapees who led police for 75 miles on a chase from Twin Falls in a stolen pickup, then wrecked the vehicle and began scrambling across the frigid lava desert.

"I really believe they would have froze to death had we not had the helicopter find them," said Carl Van Etten, sheriff of Butte County.

Josh Kyptoon, 15, of Jerome, and Terry McBride, 16, of Buhl, walked away from the center sometime before 5 p.m. dinner Sunday, authorities said.

They stole a 1993 blue and silver GMC pickup and eluded law enforcement through Twin Falls, Jerome, Latta, Blaine and Butte counties, sometimes at speeds up to 100 mph Van Etten said.

The pair flipped the pickup about 24 miles west of Arco when they hit a stretch of road construction — then they crawled out the rear window of the wreckage and fled into the desert near Craters of the Moon, Van Etten said.

A multi-agency team scoured motorists' not to stop for anyone as lawmen searched by car and foot for the escapees, Van Etten said. When darkness and snow began falling and the wind picked up, Van Etten summoned an INEL security helicopter.

The helicopter began combing 15 square miles of craggy desert at 11 p.m., flying about 400 feet above the ground without lights and using infra-red heat monitors to detect the pair, Van Etten said.

Fifty minutes later, the boys, shivering with cold in shorts and T-shirts, waved to the craft as it sped them 1.5 miles from the wreckage on Highway 94, Van Etten said. The windfall had plummeted to one degree below zero, he said.

"They were extremely cold, they definitely weren't dressed for that kind of adventure," Van Etten said. "At that point in time they were ready to turn themselves in."

The helicopter hovered just above a cleared patch of ground, and two Butte deputies jumped out and arrested the pair.

They were flown back to the highway, treated by ambulance workers for bruises and scrapes, then driven back to Twin Falls early Monday morning, Van Etten said. The juveniles were not seriously injured by the cold, he said.

"I don't understand why they got out into the lava flow," Van Etten said. "The terrain is rocky, jagged and sharp. It's as close to impossible as you can get."

"The deputies apprised me of what this was pretty stupid," Van Etten said.

Rare steak poses less risk as cancer source

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Like your steak well done?

Lots of pan drippings?

Not a healthful choice, says the National Cancer Institute.

The latest research suggests that cooking meat too long — and at too high a temperature — increases the risk of cancer.

And pan gravy? Better not even think about it.

Red meat has long ridden high on the list of questionable foods, largely because of its high-fat link to heart disease.

But meat-eaters are also known to have a higher-than-usual risk of some kinds of malignancy, especially colon cancer.

So researchers set out to see if the way people fix their steaks and hamburgers has a bearing on this risk.

Their study was conducted on beef-loving Nebraska farmers — 176 stomach cancer victims and 503 healthy people — and is the first to examine this question.

"We found increasing risk with increasing doneness," said Mary H. Ward, a cancer institute epidemiologist who presented the findings Monday at a meeting of the American Association for Cancer Research.

Her team discovered that folks who prefer their meat medium, medium-well or well-done are about three times as likely as those who eat their beef rare or medium rare to get stomach cancer.

Why? Stuff with the decidedly unappetizing name of heterocyclic amines may be the key.

These are carcinogens — cancer-causing agents — and they are formed when animal protein known as creatine is heated to high temperatures.

Arkansas tornadoes kill 4; state police head off would-be looters

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — Firefighters went from house to demolished house Monday, searching for more victims of tornadoes that killed four people, including three children, and smashed hundreds of homes.

"I just started praying," said Leisa Didway, who rode out the storm Sunday night in her closet with a friend and the friend's 1-year-old son. "I held her and the baby. I was just praying to God because I didn't know what else to do."

The twisters ripped through Fort Smith's historic district and the suburb of Van Buren, sweeping some houses off their foundations, before roaring on to St. Paul, a rural community 50 miles away. At least 50 people were injured and more than 330 left homeless.

State troopers patrolled Fort Smith to guard against looters after five people who police said were about to start looting were arrested and charged with providing a safe haven for looters. The National Guard ordered 45 members to report for duty.

The Red Cross said 636 homes, 30 apartment units and 217 businesses were damaged. Of those, 35 houses, five apartments and 78 businesses were beyond repair. Damage was put in the millions of dollars.

The tornadoes were part of a series of storms that moved into Arkansas from Oklahoma.

In Oklahoma, severe storms and flash floods Sunday and Monday were blamed for five traffic deaths. Two tornadoes touched down in McAlester on Sunday, injuring nine people and damaging about 350 buildings.

An Arkansas radio and TV reports had warned that storms were coming, but a tornado knocked down telephone lines that would have carried word to emergency workers to start the streets, Fort Smith police Cpl. Tim Randolph said.

In Fort Smith, a 2-year-old girl and a 5-year-old boy were crushed to death.

"The house had fallen on him," said Michelle Fuller, a neighbor of Kyle Richard Johnson's. "He was dead instantly."

Six blocks away, rows of 30-foot trees 2 feet in diameter by across High Street, where Angelica Marie Flemming died.

leave, but I must. It's so much better, but to close the door gently on childhood than to slam it," she wrote in 1990.

Even with her success, Bombeck still did housework, wrote about shopping at discount stores and said she never forgot the excitement of earning $3 per column when she began her career.

"I can't let go of being a housewife," she told Life magazine. "You have to be part of it or you don't know what you're talking about. You've got to empty the garbage, wash the dishes, the toilet bowls. Doing the laundry keeps you humble."

Bombeck was diagnosed in 1992 with breast cancer and underwent a mastectomy. Shortly after that, her kidneys began failing from a hereditary disorder. She underwent dialysis four times a day at her home and went on a waiting list for a kidney transplant.

Doctors had diagnosed the kidney disorder, called adult polycystic kidney disease, in 1949.

She underwent the transplant earlier this month at the Medical Center of the University of California at San Francisco. The hospital said she died of complications following the transplant.

Mombeck once said "I'm broke because of my state-aided revenue, then inherit the land and building south of Maxwell Avenue when the bond is paid."

The district would have to decide each year whether to continue the lease arrangement.

The Magic Valley High School, honored for years in the First Presbyterian Church, provides an education for pregnant teens, teen parents and kids who can't cope with the regular school system.

Crow said he didn't vote Monday because his wife works for the school district.

But-fellow-Councilman-Chris Talkington, whose wife teaches at Magic Valley High School, said Clow took the easy way out.

"We're not paid to sit on the fence," he said. Talkington contends that his own wife will work for the school district regardless of the location of the alternative school. When later votes on alternative school construction arose, he said, "I'll revisit it at that time."

Talkington and Mayor Jeff Gooding both said they are members of the First Presbyterian Church but don't see that as a conflict of interest in council votes on the alternative school.

Wet weather extends from southern Plains across Dixie

The Associated Press

Heavy rains, high winds and severe weather pounded parts of the South Monday, while warm temperatures swept from northern Indiana into southern New Jersey.

Calm, steady rain fell Monday in Oklahoma, Missouri and Arkansas, where flash flood watches and tornado warnings were in effect following severe weather the night before.

Tornadoes in Arkansas killed four people, including two children, and smashed hundreds of homes overnight. In Oklahoma, they caused injuries, leveled four homes and destroyed a school. The tornadoes were part of a series of storms that moved into Arkansas from Oklahoma.

Up to three inches of rain was possible in parts of Illinois, Tennessee, Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio, and as much as 3/4 inch of rain had fallen by Monday afternoon in McAlester, Okla.

National forest logging option

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Sierra Club for the first time is advising an end to all commercial logging of national forests.

Members of the century-old environmental group voted by a 20-1 margin to change their timber policy.

Casting mail-in ballots over the past three months, members voted 39,147 to 20,287 in support of banning logging on all federal, public lands in the United States, a club spokesman said Monday.

The votes were tallied Saturday. The result reflected about 10 percent of the San Francisco-based club's national membership of 587,499.

While the club opposes logging in many cases it never before formally advocated an end to all logging on national forests.

Mitsubishi workers take field trip to protest

CHICAGO (AP) — Mitsubishi Motors shut down its sole U.S. assembly plant Monday and brought more than 2,000 workers to Chicago on buses to demonstrate outside a federal agency that accuses the automaker of sexual harassment.

Blue-collar workers joined managers on the company-sponsored trip to the offices of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. Dozens of buses brought the workers, who were paid for the day.

"Two, four, six, eight! We're here to set the record straight!" protesters chanted as they walked down Madison Street. Police closed the downtown street for several blocks during the 1½-hour demonstration.

The EEOC filed a class-action lawsuit against Mitsubishi two weeks ago after an 11-page complaint by 24 women who brought their own federal lawsuit in 1994. The EEOC said Mitsubishi's management turned a blind eye to "gross and shocking sexual discrimination" at its plant in Normal.

Business experts said Mitsubishi's hardball tactics are almost unprecedented and may generate public sympathy for the company but probably won't affect the lawsuit.

Mitsubishi Motors assembly plant workers protest in front of the EEOC's Chicago offices to demonstrate against the federal agency which filed a complaint alleging widespread sexual harassment at Mitsubishi.

"An opportunity for me to move up. I get better backing as a woman than I've ever gotten before."

The lawsuits allege relentless harassment of more than 300 women who worked at the plant, including insults such as "where" demands for sex and retaliation against whistleblowers.

Mitsubishi has denied the allegations, shutting down Monday's assembly line and sending a bus caravan of employees 120 miles to Chicago for a demonstration was just part of its aggressive campaign to fight back.

The company also has set up a telephone bank so workers can call the EEOC, Congress and the White House to dispute the allegations. Mitsubishi is Japanese-owned; management at the Normal plant consists of both Japanese and Americans.

Employees who chose not to participate in the demonstration were required to attend company-organized training sessions on sexual harassment, said Patricia Benassi, an attorney for the 29 women who filed the first lawsuit.

Fourteen of them still work at the plant — most of them on the assembly line — and they have been shunned since their case became public, Benassi said. She derisively called the protest "the best demonstration money can buy."

High court to review force award

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a case likely to be watched closely by law enforcement policy-makers nationwide, the Supreme Court agreed Monday to study an $872,000 excessive force award against an Oklahoma county.

The justices voted to review rulings that said Bryan County must pay Jill Brown $765,000 in actual damages and $87,000 for lawyer fees.

She sued the county over a 1991 incident in Grayson County, Texas, just over the Oklahoma border in which she was thrown to the ground by a sheriff's deputy.

The justices must decide whether the county was punished unfairly after complying with Oklahoma law in hiring Reserve Deputy Stacy Burns. He had a long record of criminal misdemeanors but Oklahoma law bars only the hiring of convicted felons in such jobs.

A decision, expected sometime in 1997, could offer new guidelines for the care law enforcement must take in their hiring decisions. The court's review comes at a time when a majority of the justices appear skeptical of what they deem excessive federal oversight of state and local governments.

In other matters, the court:
 • Refused, in a dispute from Georgia and Alabama, to stop courts from resolving disputes over the prices broadcasters charge for political advertising.

• Rejected an appealing argument that it rule on punitive damages awards for more than 2,000 people who say they were hurt by the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident, at Pennsylvania's Three Mile Island reactor in 1979.

• Let stand a Florida county's ban on nude dancing despite arguments that the ordinance violates exotic dancers' freedom of artistic expression.

New complaint asks for revived investigation of house speaker

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new complaint asks the House ethics committee to reopen the investigation of volunteer work that a telecommunications entrepreneur performed for Speaker Newt Gingrich.

The complaint contends new information shows Gingrich allowed the Wisconsin businessman, Donald Jones, to perform official work in violation of House rules and federal law.

The committee ended its original investigation March 29. It told Gingrich he failed to comply with standards governing volunteers but decided against punishing him.

Both the original complaint and Monday's filing were submitted by Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., and Ralph Nader's Congressional Accountability Project.

Volunteers in congressional offices are not allowed to perform the work of regular employees, must receive educational benefit from the service and cannot use official resources for unofficial purposes.

The new complaint said Gingrich violated those guidelines by letting Jones advise him on telecommunications issues and work in behalf of a private literacy program supported by the speaker.

Gingrich spokesman Tony Blankley, echoing earlier comments about Jones' role, called the filing "another baseless complaint," and "an increasingly discredited abuse of the ethics process."

"Newt did not look to Mr. Jones for advice or interpretation of any telecommunications legislation," Blankley said.

"As the committee stated in dismissing the original complaint, the speaker's office took caution to ensure that Mr. Jones performed no official duties" and that the office made efforts to ensure that his participation was proper.

The complaint said that after the original committee findings, Gingrich publicly commented that Jones spent most of his time on the private "Earning by Learning" reading program supported by the speaker.

Gingrich also commented after the ruling that Jones contacted parties in New Zealand on behalf of Republicans in Congress on privatization issues.

Citing media stories, the complaint said Jones at the same time was trying to establish a fiber optic cable network in New Zealand.

Jokes preceded bombers last blast

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — It was the start of a shoe box, neatly wrapped, heavy, and when it arrived at timber lobbyist Gilbert Murray's office, workers jokingly said it looked like a bomb.

"There was interest about the package. People passed it around and discussed it and actually said, 'Hah, hah, this could be a bomb.' That's just human nature, I guess," said Doni Zea, vice president of the California Forestry Association.

A year ago this week, Murray took the package, opened it and died. The April 24, 1995, blast was the third and final slaying attributed to the Unabomber. The shadowy mail bomber's trail stretches from a Chicago parking lot to Murray's former office four blocks from the California Capitol.

Also a few blocks from Murray's office is the site where the Unabomber trail may finally come to an end. The federal courthouse for California's Eastern District. The gray courthouse, which has department store-style escalators running from the lobby to the second floor and all the charm of any other 1950s-era government building, is a potential site for the trial of Theodore Kaczynski, the 53-year-old hermit and former Berkeley math professor arrested at his mountain cabin in Montana.

Kaczynski is accused of possessing bomb components but has not been charged in any Unabomber case. If he is charged, California officials hope to try him here. Two Unabomber deaths occurred in Sacramento, the third in New Jersey. Of the 23 people injured, several were from Northern California.

Federal sources in California believe Sacramento is the likely site for any trial. Politics is also playing a role in the potential prosecution site. Gov. Pete Wilson wants the trial in state court in Sacramento County to give a political boost to the local Republican prosecutor, who is being groomed for the 1998 race for state attorney general.

"This man may have a serious mental illness, and it is more likely than not that the defense is going to be insanity," said Donald Heller, a former U.S. attorney in Sacramento, who prosecuted Manson disciple Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme for the 1975 attempted assassination of President Ford and is now in private practice.

"The best place for that kind of prosecution is in state court. The DA's office in Sacramento County is probably better equipped to try an insanity defense than federal court; it's fairly rare that you get an insanity plea in federal court."

The California Forestry Association, often at odds with environmentalists, represents timber interests before the Legislature and Congress. Investigators said similar organizations were listed on notes in Kaczynski's cabin.

"From the minute after it happened to this day, I think we were targeted, targeted for a reason, or an airline. This guy should be called the 'Eco-bomber,'" said Zea. Murray's successor, who was out of the office the day the bomb exploded, The FBI code-named the case Unabom because the bomber initially targeted universities and airlines.

As the one-year anniversary of Murray's death approaches, the CFA's offices are no longer in the building where he died.

And security is much higher at the agency's new location on the Capitol Mall: Security cameras scrutinize the entrance, a scanner examines packages that come in the mail, and staffers were given training in recognizing potential bombs.

Proposal aids crime victims

WASHINGTON (AP) — Victims of violent crime would have the right to speak at the sentencing of their attackers and would be protected from intimidation under a constitutional amendment proposed Monday.

Three lawmakers — Sens. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., and Jon Kyl, R-Ariz., and Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee — introduced the amendment to mark National Crime Victims' Rights Week.

"This year, 43 million Americans will be victimized by serious crime," Kyl told a news conference.

Feinstein said that while, accused criminals "have all kinds of basic rights guaranteed," such as the rights to remain silent when arrested and to a speedy trial, victims "have no rights at all."

The lawmakers cited a Justice Department survey am indicating that crime costs Americans at least $150 billion a year, including factors such as legal fees, lost work time and the cost of police.

The proposed amendment would give victims the right:

- To be present at significant legal proceedings in the offender's case and to speak at sentencing, including the right to object to a previously negotiated plea or to the offender's release from custody.
- To be informed of any release or escape of the criminal.
- To a speedy trial of the alleged attacker.
- To full restitution from convicted offenders.

An anti-terrorism bill passed by Congress last week, under which President Clinton has said he will sign, requires such compensation.

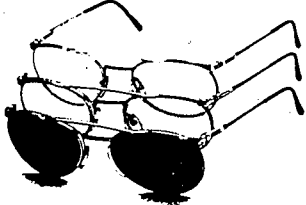

For an amendment to become part of the Constitution, 290 House members and 66 senators must vote for it and 38 state legislatures must ratify it.

Editorial Medical savings accounts offer advantageous trade-off

Of all the Contract With America bills being debated in Washington these days, none draws quite as vivid a distinction between the politics of the past and the future as the idea of medical savings accounts.

The proposal, which died in the Senate last week under veto threat by President Clinton, would have allowed every American to deposit several thousand dollars a year into an account earmarked for medical expenses. The deposits then could be deducted from federal income tax returns.

Over a working lifetime of, say, 45 years, such an account could mean a substantial sum — including interest — to a worker who made the maximum annual investment.

It's a pay-as-you-go idea that has the great appeal of making common sense — especially in the managed-care world that will soon dominate America's health care.

If, somewhere down the line, your insurance company decides it won't pay for a second doctor's opinion or vetoes an operation you need, you'll have the means to pay for it your self.

The Democrats, of course, prefer Clinton's failed health-care dinosaur of two years ago, under which the taxpayers and health insurance ratepayers would pick up the tab.

Trouble is, the same folks who figured out the math for that system also gave us the current Social Security financing system, which is headed for a train wreck of monumental proportions not too long after Clinton's second term expires.

The Democrats would prefer that the country didn't dwell on that, though. It's a question of fairness, they argue.

We wonder whether they'll make the same argument when it comes time to bail out the nation's bankrupt health-insurance system 10 years from now.

It's high time Washington realized that not all the wishful thinking in the world can make 2 and 2 equal 5. Some states have tried medical savings plans — including Idaho. The Idaho plan, allowing deductions from state (but not federal) income taxes, has been on the books for a little more than a year.

States that have tried this idea are finding it's an advantageous trade-off. People who decide to participate now do so for the tax advantages; 30 years down the line, states will bear less of a burden for Medicaid.

Eventually, of course, that's the kind of logic that's going to have to shape all entitlement programs in this country.

For despite their mastery of voodoo economics, Democrats can't wish away the consequences of the demographic tidal wave that will strike with full force after the turn of the century.

By 2015, there will be 20 million more Americans collecting Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid than there are now — and a lot fewer wage-earners paying their premiums.

Unless Washington makes some hard decisions soon, the baby boomers will face a much bleaker future when they get sick.

Hubert Humphrey, the spiritual godfather of entitlement, once said that a job is the best welfare program.

He might have added that having money in the bank is the best health-insurance program.

Dole's decline opens Newt opportunity

Four years ago, opinion polls showed George Bush's popularity heading south. Many in the Bush camp refused to panic or take corrective measures. They bet on the president would pull out of his inoperative and head back in the direction of his record-high approval ratings that followed the Gulf War.

What some believe could be "Bush 2" — the presidential campaign of Bob Dole — is facing a similar challenge. A Los Angeles Times survey reveals that a majority of Americans have already become disenchanted with the Republican Congress and have little enthusiasm for Dole. The survey shows President Clinton beating Dole, even with third-party candidates Ross Perot and Ralph Nader in the race. In a two-man contest, according to the survey, Clinton beats Dole 55:37 percent. In a four-way race, Clinton wins with 45 percent to Dole's 32 percent. Perot gets 13 percent and Nader 6 percent.

What do Washington Post columnist Stephen Rosenfeld offer a formula. After hearing former British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher speak at William and Mary College recently, Rosenfeld wrote, "What struck me most from her speech and a chat was the unity of public statement and personal belief. This is a rare quality in a realm otherwise bulging with political hushers, compromise politicians and phony works. It is one of the core mysteries of leadership."

This is the only way Bob Dole can beat Bill Clinton without help from White-water independence counsel Kenneth Starr. Dole must articulate firm beliefs and principles, not general ones, or the risks being overhauled by the sickest campaigner, promise-breaker and ence-straddler in the history of modern politics. Dole's speech to the American Society of Newspaper Editors last Friday about the liberal judiciary was a good start. But he will have trouble with that issue because he has voted to confirm 182 of Clinton's 185 nominees to the federal bench. Dole says he did this "out of deference to a president's constitutional prerogative," a statement that glosses over the issue of principle. If most of the president's nominees were liberals, why didn't Dole oppose them on philosophical grounds, as many liberal Democrats have done with Republican nominees (remember Robert Bork)?

Thatcher's "unity of public statement and personal belief" is a summons to the only person who may be able to rescue the Dole campaign: Newt Gingrich. Gingrich must emerge from his reclusive seclusion, and no matter what the cost personally, speak truth to the nation. The Republican theme ought to be (and should have been) not a revolution but a second year of independence from the "monarchy" of big government, from victimization and dependence on government to individual freedom, accountability and prosperity. In such wars, combatants are sometimes wounded, even killed — including generals like Gingrich. But wars of independence are bigger than individuals and personalities.

As The Weekley Standard put it, "It is time for Gingrich to come out from hiding and do what he has always done best: rally the faithful, articulate the agenda for his movement and his party, and help frame the national political conversation in a way that will clear the stark choice facing the United States in November, 1996."

Gingrich isn't just Speaker of the House. He is, as the magazine put it, "the national political figure most associated with the swing agenda that has yet to be implemented, and it's going to take a far longer time than he may originally have thought at the height of the enthusiasm in early 1995" (italics mine).

If Gingrich burns out, if the press and his opponents search him beyond recognition, so be it. Others will rise up to take his place.

Besides, isn't a comet a dying star? And when the comet streaks across the sky, isn't our attention diverted from Earth to the heavens? Does it ever marvell?

Gingrich should go for it, almost as if he were running for president. He should articulate a national agenda, and if a government united under Republican leadership would allow us to do for ourselves and our families.

If Gingrich leads and Dole loses, the yearning for independence will remain. If Gingrich doesn't lead and Dole loses, and if the House reverts to Democrat control, he and his ideas may never rise to such heights again. Of course, if Dole wins — but can he without Gingrich and his independence mantras alongside him? Six months before the election, it doesn't appear so.

Judge by way they treat others
This letter is in response to Ron Thomas who wrote of homosexuality being unnatural and his belief that homosexuals make a conscious choice about their lifestyles.

I have always felt ambivalent about this subject since I have been unable to find any way to fully embrace homosexuality as an OK way of life. On the other hand, I cannot judge or condemn someone simply because his or her sexual preference is with a consenting adult of the same sex. Homosexuals and lesbians are human beings, not monsters. They are the same as heterosexuals in every way save one. They can be kind or cruel, giving or selfish, lazy or hard working, just like anyone else. But we condemn them for one difference and fear that they are sex-crazed and possibly eying our sons and daughters? This kind of thinking comes from narrow-minded people who speak out of ignorance and unfounded fears.

Scanning the Bible so we can sling judgments at one another is a copout. God blessed us with thinking minds and feeling hearts and wants us to use them. God also made all kinds of different people. We may not understand or agree with all of them, but haven't we been taught that each person is made in God's likeness and that he has infinite love and mercy for us all?

A close relative of mine recently confided in me that he is gay. Being an adult, he has lived a miserable lifetime of lies trying to conform to society's definition of "normal" and knowing the ridicule and humiliation he would face if he did not. He once said that no one would choose to live like that. Indeed, who would consciously choose to live a lifestyle that would subject them to alienation, ostracism, condemnation and all-out hatred? Let's get out of the closet of ignorance and prejudice and judge everyone by their everyday actions and the way they treat others, because that is how we'll all be judged in the end.

There's no justification for gays

Re: Echo Dulos, Twin Falls
Leviticus says, "Thou shalt not lie with mankind as with womankind, it is an abomination... the land and nations shall be defiled in these," and, "Whoever does this, even their should shall be cut off from their people." Leviticus also says, "If a man lies with another man as he does with a woman, both shall be put to death."
There is no justification for the homosexuals' sin, and they will never begin to fulfill their purpose until they seek God's forgiveness. I pray you let me correct your condescension of the Greek and Hebrew translations for the word "unchast" and how one might have been born from a mother's womb this way.

Greek and Hebrew means "a castrated or impotent person." Our homosexual-to-be translations for the word "unchast" cannot begin to compare with a eunuch who was born impotent or choose to be castrated or were castrated by men that they might serve God!
It is a strange word and not easily accepted as God's word usually is. Thank you, Echo, for reminding me also that I must continue to seek God's manual for... the truth, no matter what the circumstances.

Democrats back Bailey

An open letter to Donald McMurrain: There were many more important topics for me to write to the editor about, but your latest letter has struck a nerve.

Back in 1992, I attended the Democratic Presidential Caucus in Twin Falls to cast my vote for Bill Clinton. That year I became very involved with the local Democrats. I attended all the meetings, manned the booth at the fair, spent many hours at Democratic headquarters, ran a very successful fund-raiser at the Art Club and helped in celebrating our victory of Mike & Liz Pizza on election night.

Funny, but in all that time I never once met you, Mr. McMurrain.

The last few years I have been away from home on business and my involvement was mainly keeping in touch. Again this year, I attended the presidential caucus. The room was packed with Democrats from all walks of life. We chose 17 delegates and 17 alternates for the state convention, new people came forward for precinct committee and campaign strategy was formulated.

Once again your face was not in the crowd. If you had ever once attended a meeting or gathering of local Democrats, you would know that the issue of gay rights has never been discussed. Don't try to make this primary election something of which it is not just to further your cause.

The support of the local Democrats will be behind candidate Dave Bailey for county commissioner because he calls himself a Democrat and the name fits.

Aerial application is safe

The agricultural growing season is once again in full swing in Magic Valley and that means aerial application is in business. I am concerned that aerial application and the "pesticide scare" are synonymous in Magic Valley. Hopefully, this letter can erase public concern and criticism by documenting some facts.

First, as an aerial applicator, I am obligated to follow strict guidelines set by the Environmental Protection Agency, Drug, Enforcement Administration, Department of Agriculture, Food and Drug Administration and Federal Aviation Administration, to mention a few. These agencies ensure that public safety is at a premium. Aerial application is one of the most regulated industries in our nation, yet we are the most criticized due in part to our visibility.

We are big and visible for a reason! We generate our own sounds which should alert the public that safety precautions are needed, much like a train blowing its whistle. The public must accept their responsibility when pesticides are being applied by whatever means. They must initiate actions to avoid unnecessary exposure. Watching is fine, but not at the field's edge. When jogging or cycling, be courteous, avoid the sector being treated. By working together, the aerial applicators and the public can continue to make aerial applications a safe and effective way to treat agricultural fields. Aerial applicators put safety first and are willing to work with any concerns that they are made aware of beforehand.

Second, I believe that education is the key to easing the fear of pesticides. Chemicals can be related to things we touch and use everyday in our homes. How many people realize that their shower cleaner is a fungicide and that pool chlorine is a bactericide? The term "fly-sprays" are nothing more than "over the counter" pesticides. The May 1995 Illinois Cooperative Extension bulletin from the University of Idaho says, "A national Academy of Sciences report has shown that homeowners in the U.S. use up to 10 times more pesticides per acre on their lawns and gardens than do farmers on their crops."

Finally, the food supply in the United States is not only the safest but is the most abundant in the world, and pesticides are one of the important tools that have made that abundance possible. There is surely a reason why you spend less of your paycheck for food and fiber than anywhere else in the world or why your life expectancy continues to rise.

Briefly

4 Saudi men arrested in bombing

RYADH, Saudi Arabia — Four Saudi Arabian men have been arrested in connection with a bombing at a military post in the Saudi capital that killed five Americans and two Indians, the interior minister said Monday.

In televised confessions, the four said they had planned a wave of kidnappings and assassinations but abandoned those plans because they feared being caught.

The Nov. 13 car bombing hit a three-story building used for a U.S. military program for Saudi Arabia's National Guard. It dealt a blow to the country's reputation as one of the safest places in the Middle East.

"We deeply appreciate the Saudi government's commitment in finding and apprehending the killers," Raymond E. Mabius, the U.S. ambassador in Saudi Arabia, said in a statement.

Ship hijacker apologizes for deaths

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip — After decades of violence and living on the run, the mastermind of the Achille Lauro hijacking surfaced Monday in a luxurious apartment to talk of peace — and to apologize.

"The killing of the passenger was a mistake. ... We are sorry," Abu Abbas said of the 1985 cruise ship hijacking, when his men shot and killed American passenger Leon Klinghoffer, then had the victim's body and his wheelchair thrown overboard.

The guerrilla leader, who lived most of his adult life underground planning attacks on Israel, came to the Gaza Strip on Sunday in a show of support for Yasser Arafat and his peace agreements with Israel.

British hiker's body found in mountains

MADRID, Spain — The badly decomposed body of a British mountain climber missing since late February has been found in a Spanish canyon, police said Monday.

Christopher Bennett, 36, died from a severe head injury, an autopsy showed. A shepherd found his body on April 18 near the mountain village of Trevéler, the British Embassy in Madrid said. Police said they saw no evidence of foul play and believe he fell to his death.

Bennett was last seen near the village of Capileira in the Sierra Nevada mountains near the city of Granada. He came to Spain on Feb. 23 on a hiking trail.

Britain hints retaliation over beef ban

LUXEMBOURG — Raising the prospect of a European Union trade war, Britain hinted Monday that it might retaliate against the 14 EU nations that have banned British beef because of mad cow disease.

Britain's partners immediately warned that any tit-for-tat bans could rattle the EU in crisis.

"Retaliation would not be a good thing. It would not be in Britain's own interest," said Spanish Foreign Minister Carlos Westendorp.

British news media reported Monday that the government was ready to ban imports of EU beef. Foreign Secretary Malcolm Rifkind stopped short of confirming the reports but said that, if the ban was not lifted soon, "inevitably other options would be looked at."

Canadians unsure about Prince Charles

TORONTO — For the first time since his separation, Prince Charles is returning to the biggest nation in his future realm. Canadians, though, are not at all sure they want to be his loyal subjects.

The one-week trip that begins today is Charles' 11th official visit to Canada, but his first since 1991 — a year before he and Princess Diana announced their marriage had collapsed.

To Canadians who want to break ties with the monarchy, the prince's marital woes make Charles an embarrassing and unacceptable successor to his mother, Elizabeth II. Charles is to assume the throne when she dies.

Cleric says Muslim's duty to join rallies

MANAMA, Bahrain — Issuing a new challenge to Saudi Arabia, a senior Iranian cleric is asserting that every Muslim has the duty to participate in rallies during the annual pilgrimage to Mecca. The statement Sunday by Ayatollah Jannati, made in the holy city of Mecca and carried by the official Islamic Republic News Agency, is certain to cause Saudi Arabia serious concern. The pilgrimage, or hajj, approaches its peak later this week.

NATO warns civilians may die

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — NATO officials Monday of manipulating the plight of refugees for political ends and warned that civilians could be hurt if orchestrated rallies continue.

Soldiers in the NATO-led peacekeeping force have increasingly had to separate angry crowds.

In two incidents over the weekend, soldiers fired in the air and U.S. helicopters buzzed crowds to disperse them. Several people were injured.

Maj. Simon Havelock said NATO was "concerned by what seems to be a cynical attempt to manipulate concerns of people about their property and homesteads for narrow local or political ends."

Troops of the multinational peace implementation force will try harder to defuse tensions but such a policy carries high risks, he said.

"If soldiers become involved in civilian disturbances ... there is a recipe and a potential for serious injury and fatality," Havelock said. Soldiers have not been trained in crowd control, do not carry riot shields or tear gas, he said.

"We are not going to become a rent-a-crowd-control organization," he stressed.

Near Doboj, Danish and Polish troops fired over rival Muslim and Bosnian Serb crowds Sunday after they had been pelted with "dangerous objects," a statement issued by the peace force said Monday.

It displayed an impressive array of weaponry, including two U.S. helicopters, six Leopard main battle tanks, several armored personnel vehicles and 100 soldiers.

Bosnian Serb Radio in Doboj claimed 20 people were injured in Sunday's clash.

Lebanese survivors haunted by memories

QANA, Lebanon (AP) — All Deeb should not a drop of blood in the carport at Qana, but he will be forever scarred.

The 21-year-old carpenter lost 17 family members — four others born in his home — when Israeli artillery shells struck a U.N. base in southern Lebanon last week.

Amid smoke and flames, Deeb helped carry out the wounded and piled up pieces of shattered furniture.

"Some of the bodies were too hot to touch," he said. "Others I attempted to carry away, but I couldn't before my eyes." With stretchers scarce, each available pallet held up to three waiting refugee babies, some missing limbs.

He who survived is forever wounded," Deeb said in a scarcely audible voice, his meaty hands still trembling.

As he recalled the horror in Qana, flies swirled around his blood-stained clothes. There's still no official death toll, but various official counts range from 76 to more than 100.

Like many of the refugees, the Deeb family fled from the Israeli army when they moved into the headquarters of the Fijian battalion of the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon.

Most were gathered in a mess hall when they flung of 155 mm howitzer shells mired the small U.N. compound into a hell of intense fire and charred bodies. Israel said the attack was a mistake; its gunners had been aiming at nearby rocket launchers of Hezbollah guerrillas.

Out of more than 20 relatives at the camp, Deeb can confirm only two survivors other than himself. He lost seven cousins, his grandaunt, two uncles, their wives, two sisters and their three children.

His father, mother, brother and a sister are still unaccounted for. Deeb doesn't know if they were killed in the attack or are among the hundreds of survivors who fled in panic.

Deeb had harsh words for the Hezbollah guerrillas whose rockets fired from 300 yards away drew the deadly Israeli retaliation.

"Why did they come here?" he said. "They knew our children were hiding in this compound."

Deeb said that after the first shell fell, he looked frantically for cover. Just before the second shell exploded, he rushed into one of the compound's tiny shelters, a room measuring no larger than 4 feet by 6 feet, that was already crammed with 40 people.

"People screamed. Allahu Akbar!" (God is Great) before their cries were drowned by more shells," Deeb said. Then Deeb's uncle, Hussein, appeared at the shelter entrance and called for all able-bodied people to come urgently.

"By the time we came out, ambulances were beginning to arrive," Deeb said.

His words briefly muffled by the roar of low-flying Israeli fighter jets.

Children's book banned in Turkey

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — A court ordered copies of a Turkish translation of the children's book "The Little Prince" confiscated because they insult the founder of modern Turkey, the book's publisher said Monday.

Software companies win case

BEIJING (AP) — A local court awarded three U.S. software companies $53,600 in a piracy case, an official newspaper reported Monday.

It was the first civil suit concerning software since China signed the Berne convention protecting literary and artistic works in 1992, the China Youth News said.

The Beijing Intermediate Court ordered the Beijing Juron Computer Co. to pay damages to Microsoft Corp., Autodesk Inc. and WordPerfect application group, now part of Corel Corp.

Juron was also ordered to immediately stop its piracy of Microsoft's DOS 6.2 and Windows 3.1 software, turn over all its pirated goods and pay a fine of $9,638.

Microsoft discovered the piracy last year when it found that a Chinese customer had bought the DOS 6.2 software from Juron although Microsoft had not yet marketed the software in China.

Microsoft sent agents to purchase the pirated software and computers that had the software installed. Autodesk and WordPerfect also discovered that their software had been pirated and sold by Juron.

Although the court immediately confiscated 90 sets of pirated software from Juron's store, it was after the three software firms filed suit, the Chinese store continued to sell pirated goods while the case was being handled, the report said.

Industry experts estimate that Chinese and foreign software developers and distributors lost 4.87 billion yuan, or $26 million, to Chinese piracy in 1994, the last year for which figures are available.

Speeding train kills 4, injures 50

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — A train was traveling through heavy fog at more than triple its permitted speed when it derailed, killing four people and injuring 50, investigators said Monday.

Their also said a passenger was found dead in the express train's engine, where access is strictly limited. They could not say why the passenger was there.

The engine and eight of the train's 11 cars ran off the tracks at a railroad switch early Sunday near Jokela, about 30 miles north of Helsinki, the capital. It was Finland's worst train wreck in nearly 40 years.

The engineer and three passengers were seriously injured. The engine's trip recorder, found in the wreckage, indicated a speed far above the 21-mile-per-hour limit for the railroad switch that apparently derailed the train.

The recorder showed the train's speed to be between 70 and 87 mph, said Kari Lehto, head of the team investigating the accident.

Ed Board approves Cross as AD, Davis as coach

POST FALLS (AP) — After some grumbling about his $89,980 annual salary, the state Board of Education has endorsed former Philadelphia Eagles football star Irv Cross as the new Idaho State University athletic director.

The board also approved Kermit Davis as head basketball coach at the University of Idaho. His salary will be $75,000, plus incentives.

Both will be required to make sure athletes perform academically and stay out of trouble as conditions of their contracts.

Cross, a former CBS sports commentator, will earn $18,930 more than his counterpart at the University of Idaho, Pete Laska, and $9,105 more than Boise State University’s athletic director, Gene Blegmanier.

Board members did not like the idea of paying Cross more than the others.

Roy Mosman of Moscow chided Idaho State President Richard Bowen for deciding not to negotiate with Boise State and Idaho from a IAA conference to the 1-A Big West, yet wanting to pay higher Big West salaries.

“I’m going to oppose this because you’re not going to be taking our taxes in the Big West,” he said.

But Mosman changed his mind after Bowen defended Cross as the right man for a university athletic program plagued with poor performance on the field and a list of players with criminal charges.

“He’s very much emphasizing the student part of the student athlete,” Bowen said of Cross. “His set of goals, his set of values are precisely what we need for athletes.”

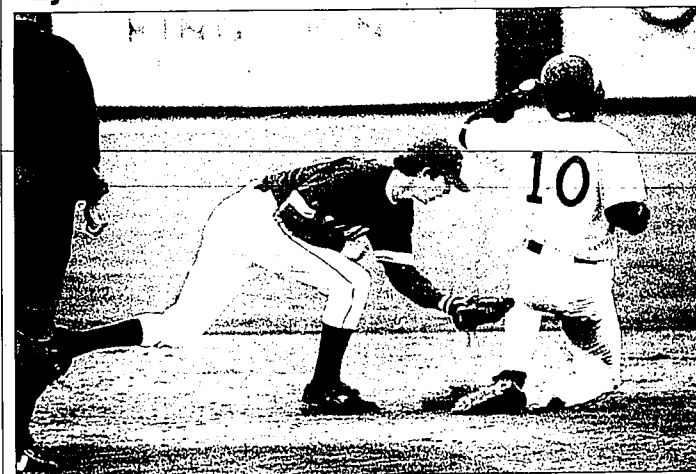

The board approved Davis’ hiring without public comment, though they discussed his two-year NCAA ban for recruiting violations in executive session behind closed doors with Idaho interim President Thomas Bell.

Bell coached the Vandals in Big Sky Conference titles in 1989 and 1990 before departing for Texas A&M, where his career was derailed by the ban.

Bell backed Davis’ salary, saying the median annual salary for basketball coaches in the Big West Athletic Conference is $79,883.

Boise State basketball coach Bob Jensen makes $61,000 a year and Davis’ predecessor, Joe Cravens, earned nearly $58,000 a year before he was fired earlier this year.

CSI’s Doug Stubbs easily beats the tag by Prairie’s Aaron Anderson on a third-inning double that knocked in a pair of CSI runs Monday in Twin Falls.

Eagles claw Prairie, 10-6

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — The Golden Eagle baseball team put all of its strengths — and weaknesses — on display Monday in a 10-6 win over Prairie Baseball Academy.

The good came early, as CSI (40-15) racked up eight runs in the first three innings and looked ready to run-ride the visitors from Lethbridge, Alberta, Canada.

Brandon Duckworth, hitting .407 coming in, raked a two-run double in the first. Kevin Ray Kimball ripped an RBI single in the second and the bats really heated up in the third.

The Eagles tallied five runs on four hits and two Prairie errors in that frame. Minico High School grad Chad Schow rocketed a double to the left-field wall, scoring two. Catcher Doug Stubbs followed with his own two-run double.

Chris Gillette capped the uprising with a sacrifice fly, but then the Eagles slumbered with an 8-2 lead.

“We don’t maintain the intensity,” CSI coach Jim Walker said. “We don’t go in for the kill.”

That has been the Eagles’ Achilles heel all season, and it showed last Monday.

Prairie (4-14) added one run in the sixth and three more in the seventh to pull within 8-6. Prairie’s first three hitters greeted CSI middle reliever Troy Metzdorf with a single and two doubles before Walker brought in Jonathon Lampshire.

After a fielding error on a bunt, Lampshire retired the next three hitters and only gave up a single the rest of the way.

Despite the 2-1 series win over Prairie, Walker’s main concern is how his team will compete against Region 18 Northern Division foe North Idaho this weekend.

The Golden Eagles need to win at least two of three from the Cardinals to maintain their division lead over Ricks. CSI, currently 9-3 in division play, owns the regular season in Rexburg May 4-4.

Ricks swept North Idaho 4-2 and 7-2 Monday, leaving them a game and a half behind CSI at 7-4 in league play.

Today’s scheduled doubleheader against Dixie College has been cancelled.

Los Angeles had 17 ground-ball outs as it lost its fourth straight. The Dodgers are 1-5 on their seven-game road trip.

Bike racer contemplates bombing, patty melts

Sitting in a quiet room of my grandparents’ home in Morris, Okla., I listen to the deafening overtures of a spring thunder storm, and think about tomorrow’s road trip.

After a hearty breakfast (thanks, Grandma), I’ll begin a 1,500-mile drive through the cradle of the Civil War, up I-40 and into Lancaster, Tenn. My team is expecting me for a photo shoot and six weeks of racing along the eastern seaboard. I have quite a few things on my mind. As David Letterman says, I am contemplative.

John Foster Road Trip

It was a difficult weekend. My grandparents received me two days early thanks to a crash that knocked me out of the 89er Stage Race and off my bike for a few days. The race was in Norman, Okla., about 15 miles south of Oklahoma City. Friday’s race began 10 minutes after the nationwide moment of silence commemorating last year’s bombing of the federal building there.

I participated in the 1995 race shortly after the bombing, and it was just as difficult to focus on riding this year as last. Thoughts about the future — both that he might come along where the next race will take me and the longer-term question of where racing will fit into my life — make concentration difficult.

Every time I have pulled on a jersey and stripped down my helmet in the last few weeks, I smile at the comments of a good friend who revealed to me that he might actually could be a pro cyclist some day. He has been good to me for months about my level of dedication, and I had a hard time understanding why until he told me that he believed in me.

Contemplative.

All this freeway time gives me too much time to miss my girlfriend, who is backtracking in Europe until June. The solitude of the road allows me to mull the tough decisions she and I face when she returns. It is difficult to devote so much time and energy to cycling, and have enough left for her. It is OK, now. But what will happen when she steps off the plane?

Contemplative.

Which CD selection is proper when driving through Tennessee? I didn’t bring any Elvis for Memphis. Maybe James Brown will — I suspect Patsy Cline will — more than — suffice in Nashville.

Contemplative.

My thoughts return to last month’s conversation with Tim Jones at Dunkin’s in Twin Falls. I listened to this business man, athletic, community leader and friend explain the virtues of accepting the help of others. Life is easier when you have friends you can count on, he said, and I thought of all the people I had in Twin Falls who have contributed wisdom and support to my journey. Every one seems anxious for me to have every opportunity for success, and I wonder when I can ever do to show my thanks.

Contemplative.

How does Cathy’s Cafe in Dumas, Texas, home of the ‘91 state volleyball champion Demonettes trust the young man who says the Swiss cheese grease doesn’t seep in like it does in most patty melts?

Contemplative.

The next couple of weeks will see two important races on my calendar — the Tour de Moore in North Carolina and the Joe Martin Stage Race in Arkansas. As my injuries heal, I am feeling stronger, so the races are beginning to draw my excitement.

Contemplative.

Life on the road is quite a bit more simple. The answers aren’t any easier, but the questions do seem more clear.

John Foster of Twin Falls is an elite amateur bike racer currently on the road racing circuit.

The only other hits off Cormier were singles by Gattis in the seventh and Bruce Clayton in the ninth.

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - The Bruin junior varsity's hits couldn't quite ball out the defense in the second game of a baseball doubleheader against Jerome Monday.

Tiger ruled pitcher Chad Reddick nailed down a 5-3 victory as Jerome rebounded from a 13-8 loss in the opener.

Reddick entered the mound in the sixth inning with his team trailing, 5-2. He and the bases full of Bruins wither out.

Kelly Webster's grounder up the middle went for an error and a Bruin run, but that was all Twin Falls would get. Reddick retired the next two batters on easy flies, then set the Bruins down in order in the seventh.

In the opener, shaky Bruin defense surrendered three unearned runs in the first inning, but Twin Falls sent 12 men to the plate the next inning.

The Tigers rallied in the sixth, getting four runs on just two hits,

Filer sweeps Twin Falls

TWIN FALLS - The Filer softball team swept a doubleheader Monday against the Twin Falls junior varsity.

The Wildcats gave up seven runs in the fourth inning, but held on for a 12-11 win in the opener, then followed with a 7-6 triumph of the Bruins in the rematch.

Down 9-8 going into the sixth inning of the first game, Filer got four runs, including a 2-run double by Stephanie Allen with two outs. Allen finished the game with 23 hits.

More than being pleased with the win, Filer Coach Bruce Lenington was happy to have his players hit.

"Campbell throws really well," he said. "She throws harder tonight than when we played in Filer. That's what we need. We just don't see anyone who throws that hard at our level."

The second game started the ball for 11 runs in the third inning to blow open the game.

"We put together a lot of hits in a row," Lenington said. "We had nine hits in that inning. It ended with a bases loaded triple by Kelly Arnold."

Janie Harvey also hit the ball well in that game for Filer. She went 2-for-4 with a double.

Lenington said Filer will play the next game on Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. at the home of the game.

meaning the next time the Eagles take the field will be Friday against North Idaho's arsenal of left-handed pitchers.

"The Cardinals threw three lefties at CSI earlier this month, but the Eagles took two games in Coeur d'Alene.

CSI has a talent edge over the other teams in the division. The only question is whether they will put it on the field at crunch time. Walker said.

"I'm not really worried about these games if I know our kids come to play," he said.

Hometown, Huskers bid Berringer farewell

GOODLAND, Kan. (AP)—In a service where the number of mourners nearly equaled the size of his hometown, Nebraska quarterback Brock Berringer was eulogized Monday by a sobbing coach as a "great example of how to live your life."

Friends, family and teammates filled a high-school fieldhouse for a joint funeral service in which a Nebraska football helmet rested on Berringer's casket.

"I can honestly say that there was nobody I coached that had better character than Brock Berringer," Nebraska football coach Tom Osborne said. "He was just who he appeared to be, and I'm certainly a better person for knowing him."

In a town of about 5,000 people, some 4,000 mourners attended the funeral for Berringer and Toby Lake, a friend who was in the small plane that crashed last week near Lincoln, Neb., with Berringer at the controls.

Nebraska quarterback coach Turner Gill addressed his eulogy to Berringer.

"You were the definition of a team player," Gill said. "I was so proud to have coached you and to have known you. You were a great example of how to live your life."

Gill broke down in tears after his eulogy.

Around town, many people were wearing red-and-white ribbons, the Nebraska colors, and ribbons were tied to street signs. The schools were closed, as were many businesses, and in Lehigh, Mo., both Dale called it "a very sad day" for the community.

"Countless Kansans and Nebraskans have testified to the fact that Brock was a champion in all aspects of his life," he said.

Two caskets on wheels were set up in the Max Jones Fieldhouse, where Palbearers place the coffin of Brock Berringer into the hearse Monday after the funeral service at Goodland High School foldhouse in Goodland, Kan.

Berringer played basketball. On one casket was a Nebraska helmet, on the other a heap of red roses.

The numbers 18 and 99 registered on the scoreboard 18 for Berringer's number at Nebraska, 99 the lake's number as a high school football player at Goodland.

Mourners watched highlights of the two men's lives on two large-screen televisions. Berringer was shown reading to children and playing football.

"Perseverance is a key to my life,"

Berringer said on the tape. "I know my dad is watching me everywhere I go."

Berringer was 7 when his father died. The funeral was delayed about 45 minutes by the arrival of a bus from Lincoln carrying Berringer's former teammates and coaches.

The service began with pastors Dan Bosman and Loren Strait reading obituaries of the two men.

A reserve quarterback who helped Nebraska win the 1994 and 1995 national championships, Berringer, 22, also loved to hunt, fly airplanes and spend time with school children and other Nebraska football fans.

The crash in the alfalfa field occurred two days before the NFL draft, and Berringer was expected to be among those chosen.

Lake, 32, of Aurora, Colo., was the brother of Berringer's girlfriend, Tiffini Lake. Lake, also a licensed pilot, managed an interior finishing business in Denver.

Medvedev advances in Monte Carlo Open

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP)— Andrei Medvedev, a winner here in 1994, advanced to the second round of the $2.2 million Monte Carlo Open by beating Alberto Berasategui 6-4, 6-4 Monday.

Medvedev, a Ukrainian, reached as high as No. 4 in the world rankings. Novak is now No. 18 and is 12th seeded in the rich tournament on the French Riviera.

Berasategui, a Spaniard, is another player who has fallen. He was a French Open finalist in 1994 and was as high as No. 7 but is now No. 35 and slipping more.

Thomas Muster is top-seeded and the defending champion. He won the final last year in a dramatic comeback against Boris Becker after the Austrian was two sets down and saved two match points. Muster went on to win the tournament and added the Italian Open and the French Open on his way to a 40-0 match winning streak on clay.

In matches involving seeded players, France's Arnaud Boetsch, seeded 11th, topped Marc Goellner, a qualifier from Germany, 6-2, 6-4, coming back from a 4-1 deficit in the second set.

Also, Petr Korda of the Czech Republic, another former French Open finalist, topped 14th-seeded Todd Martin of the United States 6-4, 6-3 in a re-match of the Davis Cup match that Martin won.

Stefan Edberg, the six-time Grand Slam tournament winner in his last year on the tour, topped Alex Corretja of Spain 7-6 (8-6), 6-3. Corretja ended Muster's clay-court streak last July.

In other first-round matches, two more Czech players advanced. Jiri Novak downed Jonas Bjorkman of Sweden 2-6, 7-5, 6-3, and David Rikl ousted Frenchman Henri Leconte 6-2, 6-7 (6-8), 6-1.

Another Czech lost as Renzo Furian of Italy downed Daniel Vacek 6-4, 7-6 (7-3).

IAAF says Reynolds not singled out for test

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)— Track and field's ruling body says its random drug test of star runner Bub Reynolds should not be construed as harassment.

"He has not been singled out," Isvan Gyulai, general secretary of the International Amateur Athletic Federation, said by telephone Monday from the group's headquarters in Monte Carlo, Monaco.

"The goal of our policy is possibly to have everybody in the so-called top 20 undergo unannounced testing."

Reynolds answered a knock at the door of his suburban Westerville home Sunday and was greeted by IAAF officials. They asked him to submit to a random drug test.

He complied, and the results are not expected for a week or so.

Reynolds, the world-record holder in the 400 meters and an Olympic gold medalist in the 800 relay, was suspended in 1990 by the IAAF after allegedly testing positive for steroids. Reynolds insists he never has used steroids or other banned drugs.

"They just said it was a random drug test and, of course, they know how I feel about them," Reynolds said.

Said Gyulai: "This is the way it has to be. It can be embarrassing and not very nice for someone to knock on your door at 10 at night. But we want to have surprise tests. They have to be a surprise. The rule is the same for everybody."

No other sport requires random, out-of-competition drug testing. "We need help in the sport but we need to find another way other than these random tests," he said.

It was the second random test administered to Reynolds since the IAAF reinstated him in 1993. He passed a test taken in July 1995.

Gyulai said random testing ensures trust in the sport.

"We were advised and requested by athletes several years ago to have unannounced testing to have a clean sport," he said. "We are very proud of this policy. We currently conduct about 1,500 unannounced random tests a year around the world."

"If you are an elite athlete and want to have a clean sport, you have to do as the others do. We think this is the proper thing to do and will continue to do so."

Reynolds fought the 1990 suspension in the courts and in June 1992, won an emergency order from a U.S. Supreme Court justice that allowed him to run in the U.S. Olympic trials.

He failed to qualify for the Olympics, and the IAAF extended the suspension until Jan. 1, 1993. The IAAF said his participation in the trials was not in the best interest of the sport.

Reynolds was reinstated after the suspension ended but continued to request damages and penalties from the IAAF for the period he was sidelined.

Reynolds also sued the IAAF in federal court in Columbus. He said its public-announcement of the test result defamed him, denied him due process and cost him income.

The IAAF presented no defense, saying the court had no jurisdiction.

Love ousts Pavin from World Championship

LAKE OCONEE, Ga. (AP)— Corey Pavin might be the best American golfer when it comes to the match-play format. His track record didn't help him Monday, though.

Davis Love III ousted the defending U.S. Open champion from the Anderson Consulting World Championship of Golf with a 2-up victory in the American sectional.

"I feel lucky to have won the match against a player who I feel is probably the best match-play player on our side," said Love, the lowest-rated player in the field. "I was nervous the whole day, waiting for him to blow me away."

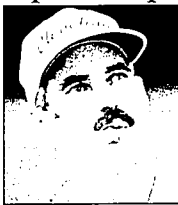

Pavin, who has a 10-71 match-play record in three Ryder Cups and the inaugural President's Cup, was the top-seeded American. But it was not a good day to be rated higher at the Jack Nicklaus-designed Great Waters course.

All four lower-seeded players won, including the No. 7 Scott Hoch, who beat No. 2 Tom Lehman, 1 up; No. 6 Mark McCumber, 4 and 2 over No. 3 Loren Roberts; and No. 5 Lee Janzen, 3 and 1 over No. 4 Peter Jacobson.

"He made three putts in that 6- to 10-foot range," Pavin said. "Mine would not go in, but that's the way it goes."

With the collapse of Greg Norman's World Tour, this event is the closest golf comes to crowning a true world champion, though it's a match-play process stretching over more than nine months.

Sectional winners from the United States, Japan, Europe

Corey Pavin Loses to Love and the Rest of the World will meet in the finals Jan. 4-5 in Scottsdale, Ariz. The Japanese finalist, Hisayuki Sasaki, was determined last month; the other sectionals will be held in the next three months.

In the American semifinals Tuesday morning, it's Love vs. Janzen and Hoch vs. McCumber. The finals will be held in the afternoon.

Love went ahead of Pavin for good with a birdie at the par-5 sixth hole. Love, who was consistently longer off the tee, reached the green in two and two-putted, while Pavin came up short with his second shot, clipped up within four feet of the cup but tipped out his birdie attempt.

Pavin fell behind by three shots with only five to play before staging a comeback. He birdied 14 and Love bogeyed 15 to cut the gap to only one hole. Both men had pars at the next two holes, Love saving his at No. 17 with a tasty, 7-foot putt.

'SportsCenter' ad campaign draws cult following

By John Nelson
The Associated Press

Commentary

First, Roger Clemens tosses andrew jacks Edwards out the window. Now, Keith Olbermann performs a little sloppy knee surgery on Jim Harbaugh.

With the words "More suction, please!" still ringing through the newsroom, the silliness continues at ESPN.

And why not? Last year's "SportsCenter" ad campaign created such a huge cult following, ESPN is starting a new round of comical commercials on April 29 to promote its landmark show.

"It used to be when we went out in public, we'd get a lot of da-da-da, da-da-da," Olbermann said, humming the "SportsCenter" theme. "Now we get lines from these spots thrown back at us in public. You need more outrage! People shout that at Dan Patrick all the time. Better him than me."

The "SportsCenter" campaign is the creation of Wieden & Kennedy, the biggest ad agency in Portland, Ore., which is kind of like being the tallest midget in Kansas. More indicative of Wieden & Kennedy's success is its client list, which includes Coca-Cola, Microsoft and Nike, as well as ESPN. Not too shabby.

The 15 "SportsCenter" spots will run mostly during sports or late-night programming in select markets across the country, and ESPN plans to shoot more of them during the summer.

"It's a campaign that has caught the attention and captured the imagination of sports fans everywhere," said Judy Feuring, ESPN's senior vice president for marketing. "Anyone who can develop an advertising idea that is talked about, you know that you've hit a home run."

Feuring said "SportsCenter" has developed a huge cult following over the years, "and I think this advertising campaign has latched onto it. In some cases, it has developed a cult following of its own."

Besides the Olbermann-Harbaugh piece, the new round of ads includes the Hartlem Globetrotters playing keep-away with Chuck Steiner's highlights coach, Craig Kilborn opening up a 900 "Hot Talk" line for anyone tired of talking sports, and actor Tony Roberts cast as the lead in the romantic comedy, "SportsCenter: The Movie."

The best of the new ads, however, is one featuring huckled gorilla. Howie sitting in his uniform at ESPN headquarters next to Olbermann. Howie is trying to explain how tough the game used to be by showing Olbermann where Bobby Hull once whacked him on the knee.

"You're not listening," Howie says, scuffing a paper in Olbermann's hand. Howie then spears Olbermann in the neck with his stick, smacks him in the chops with a glove, cross-checks him across the back of his head, yanks him by his sleeve, pokes him in the belly with his stick and finally pins him against the desk with his forearm.

Then, Howie threatens: "Say Mommy!"

Olbermann responds weakly: "Mommy."

Again, Howie demands: "Mommy!"

"I haven't laughed so hard since Norman blew the Masters."

"That was his line, too," Olbermann said. "Now I'll get that for the next six months. Everyone I go, people will yell 'Say Mommy!'"

"OUTTAKES: ESPN is dragging its tail just a little bit after missing the first pick in the NFL draft on Saturday.

"Seventeen hours of live TV, and you'd like to have the first pick obviously," ESPN spokesman Dan Quinn said.

That pick was Keyshawn Johnson to the New York Jets, and when NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue announced it, ESPN was doing a feature on Johnson.

"There was a lot of stuff going on, the first half hour is kind of hectic," Quinn said. "We had a lot of Keyshawn on the phone speaking to the Jets, and then we went to some comments. Tagliabue just walked to the podium and made the announcement."

Sort of snuck up on them... CBS Sports has had its troubles, but still the No. 1 golf network. On Sunday, Jim Nantz had an exclusive interview with Greg Norman aboard his yacht, Aussie Rules, and asked him whether, in light of his Masters flop, he thought he was destined to be a tragic figure in golf.

"I think this thing's written in the wind, you know, with people's lives," Norman said. "Maybe it's destiny. I will win it. I just know I will."

Bulls may have 72 wins, but Rockets team to beat

The Associated Press

Time to stop gushing over the Chicago Bulls. The regular season's over and the Bulls were great, but it doesn't mean much in the NBA for the next two months.

The Houston Rockets are still two-time defending champions and the team to beat. And the Bulls still have to overcome their failures of the past two seasons.

"We're not going to give it up, not without a fight," Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich said Sunday.

The Rockets, finally healed after injuries hit them hard the past 2x and play the Los Angeles Lakers in a best-of-5 playoff series beginning Thursday night. Houston won the title as a sixth seed last year after losing all the way as a No. 2 seed in 1993-94.

"If we're healthy, I'd say on paper, you have added a Mark Bryant, added an Eldridge Recastor to a championship team, you have to feel you're better," Tomjanovich said. "But talent and potential really means nothing in getting the prize."

Are you the best team? Can you handle the tough situations?

The first year we didn't have an explosive offense. We have more options now than we had in the first championship year. Right now, we have to get back to the team that does what it takes to win."

Other first-round matchups are Chicago-Miami, Orlando-Detroit, Indiana-Atlanta and Cleveland-New York in the East and Seattle-Sacramento, San Antonio-Phoenix and Utah-Portland in the West.

The Bulls are coming off the best regular season in NBA history (72-

ID, which assured them of the home-court advantage through the first round. First, though, they have to get there.

There are two images to remember from last year's playoffs before penciling in the Bulls as the automatic champion: Rudy T.'s mouth and Michael's mistakes.

Tomjanovich stood at center court in the Summit last June, confidently filling around him as the Houston Rockets celebrated their second straight championship.

"Never underestimate the heart of the crowd after his team swept the upstart Orlando Magic.

The speech came nearly a month after Jordan, the castaway after a 21-month retirement, bunched his way through Games 1, 3 and 6 against the Orlando Magic and the Bulls were eliminated in six games in the Eastern Conference semifinals.

"He's probably still the greatest player, but he wasn't quite his old self and the people around him weren't the same," Scottie Pippen said after Jordan had his earliest playoff exit since 1988.

Jordan looked much better this season as he won his eighth scoring title and is probably headed for his fourth MVP award. The Bulls revealed in their unprecedented success, but they repeatedly said 72 wins won't mean a thing unless a championship follows.

"The most important thing is for us to win the title," Pippen said. "We've had a wonderful season, it's been challenging for us all season and we've been able to meet those challenges. But now it's a big challenge for us."

Their first task will be getting past the re-made Miami Heat. Coach Pat Riley always has his team well-prepared and focused and will try to turn the series into a draining battle that takes something out of the Bulls.

"The important thing is to get 15 wins any way you can," Jordan said. "If we win every game by two or three points, that's OK. If we win the games by 15 points, that would be a serious statement. But we don't expect that to happen. We want to redeem ourselves for last year."

Chicago's strongest competition in the East should come from Orlando, which has the same nucleus that was better than the Rodman-less Bulls last season. The Magic won 60 games this season, three more than last year, and have enough weapons to stay close with any team—even Chicago.

Indiana could struggle without Reggie Miller in the first round against Atlanta. And the winner of the New York-Cleveland series tries to be overmatched in the second round.

Toronto moves Walker up to take over for Malone

TORONTO (AP) — Brendan Malone, his team having finished its inaugural season with a 21-61 record, was fired Monday as coach of the Toronto Raptors because of differences with general manager Isiah Thomas.

He was immediately replaced by assistant coach Darrell Walker, a former teammate of Thomas' who was signed to a three-year contract.

The moves came one day after the expansion team completed what Thomas called a "great year." The collection of castoffs and young players beat Chicago, Orlando and Seattle this season, with home attendance at 950,000.

Malone, who had been an assistant with Detroit and New York for nine seasons, was in the first year of a three-year contract reportedly worth $300,000 annually.

"He was a tireless worker," Thomas said. "Everything that he did was about winning."

"Unfortunately, as you all know, we had philosophical differences about the way this organization should run and where we should go in the future."

Malone's departure had been expected two weeks after he and Thomas openly disagreed about which players to use and when to use them.

"As Brendan more or less said himself his competitive nature more wasn't able to see the big picture in terms of where we were trying to go," Thomas said.

In separate news conferences, the Raptors and Malone called the parting amicable.

Asked if he was fired — as sources earlier indicated — or if he resigned, to move on, Allen said. "Wherever I end up after this year, I will always be an ambassador of this university."

Allen and Doron Sheffer formed one of the best backcourts in Division I and helped lead Connecticut to a 32-2 record.

Last season, Allen led UConn in scoring (23.4), 3-point shooting (46.6 percent), and minutes (34.7). He is the school's third leading career scorer with 1,922 points.

"I'm definitely pushing on," he said.

His voice trembling and his eyes moist with tears, Allen said he wants to financially care for his family, who accompanied him to the Gampel Pavilion news conference. Allen has a 3-year-old daughter.

New Jersey Nets coach Butch Beard watched his team lose to the Boston Celtics Friday night. Beard was fired Monday.

Nets bounce Beard; eye Pitino to replace

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) —

After winning just 30 games in each of his two seasons and then cutting his losses for prevailing him with second-line players, Butch Beard left little doubt about his dismissal.

The only question was when, and the Nets answered that Monday. They fired Beard two days after the team ended its season by losing 23 of its final 30 games.

Speculation on a replacement already is centering on Rick Pitino, despite recent comments by the Kentucky coach that he wants to win another NCAA title.

"No one thing totally was the real reason I made the decision," Nets general manager Willis Reed said in announcing the decision to not pick up an option year in Beard's three-year contract.

"I thought Butch had taken the players as far as he could," Reed added in a conference call.

Beard, who earned about $350,000 annually, is owed no money, said a source close to Nets management.

The Nets had either seven days from the end of the season or until June 1 to decide on the option year.

Reed said he wants to find a replacement as soon as possible. "I think we'll try to talk to all of the people I feel are great coaches, and that won't be limited to Pitino," he said.

The source said the Nets will consider current and former NBA coaches and college coaches, although they are leaning toward someone with NBA experience.

In a brief conference call, Beard said he was "extremely happy for me" and the opportunity that the Nets gave him.

"I'm sorry it didn't work out the way we wanted it to," he said.

Beard then thanked the team and coaches for working hard. He took no questions.

"I wish the New Jersey Nets a lot of luck with whomever they get in here," Beard said. "I will move on and they will move on."

Otter grills Fish and Game hopefuls

By William Brock
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Gov. Phil Batt wants the Idaho Department of Fish and Game to become a more user-friendly agency, and that will be his top priority when he chooses two people for the state Fish and Game Commission.

"The governor wants to turn the regulatory agencies of state into service agencies," Lt. Gov. Burch Otter said Monday. "We need a (Fish and Game) commission that's in philosophical alignment with the governor."

Otter and Batt staffer John Chaburn were in town Monday to interview nine men — including incumbent Wes Rose — for the commission's lone Magic Valley seat.

Another six candidates will be interviewed today in Salmon for the commission's newly created seat representing Lombi and Custer counties. Both appointments are for four-year terms that begin July 1.

The appointments are important because Fish and Game commissioners establish Idaho's hunting and fishing regulations, including length of seasons and bag limits.

They also hire and fire the Fish and Game director — a sometimes-controversial position atop a large state agency with a sportsman-generated budget and a commitment to the welfare of fish and wildlife.

Otter grilled local candidates with questions ranging from whether game wardens should carry guns, to the role of "good science," to what they'd look for in a new Fish and Game director.

Both Rose, a Jerome optometrist, and Dr. Frederick Wood, of Burley, have powerful allies who are urging Batt to appoint them.

Other local applicants include Dale Quigley and Richard Bubak of Twin Falls, Ben Collins of Buhl, Don Heath of Fairfield, Lee Amaral of Pico, Gene Fredericksen of Jerome and Vern Ravencroft of Bliss.

"There are a lot of politics that go into this," said Batt spokeswoman Amy Kleiner.

"This is the most demanding commission appointment in Idaho."

Batt's choice must win confirmation from the Idaho Senate, where Rose has a highly influential fan. Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly — chairman of the powerful Resources and Environment Committee — has assured the governor that Rose would enjoy strong Senate support.

Otter said he'll give candidates another 30 days to submit more information about themselves before he presents Batt with a prioritized list of names.

Jerome takes home state title

By Rob Lundgren
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — The Tiger Speech Team returned from Nampa this weekend with another state title to go along with the other eight state championship and two runner-up trophies the school's teams have earned since 1986.

Jerome's 32-member contingent placed 10 individuals in the top three at this year's state meet, including seven first-place, from the 12 speaking categories.

Four hundred contestants, representing 44 schools took part.

Gold medal winners included: Sarah Hendrickson, Beth Martin, Kent Arah, Judson King, Jordan Lott, and double winner Bryan Leavitt.

Summer Hinton, Hannah Cowdy and Darel Rowland rounded-out the Tigers' second- and third-place individual finishes.

This year's title was a bittersweet irony for head coach, Judy Fredericksen.

The nearest competitor to Jerome's 26 team points was Centennial High School with 18 points. Centennial's speech team is coached by Fredericksen's daughter, Susan McInerney. In fact, four other Jerome speech team graduates are coaching at the high school level.

Industry group grades lawmakers

The Associated Press

BOISE — Support for business from the nation's most Republican Legislature slipped dramatically during the 1996 election-year session, falling to levels matching the pinnacle of Democratic influence, Idaho's largest business lobby says.

The Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry's annual assessment of legislative support on issues it considered critical put the Legislature's composite average at 75.3 percent.

That compared to a record 87.7 percent during last year's session and approached the less-than-75-percent composite averages of the Legislature in 1992 and before during the Democratic ascendancy that culminated in an even partisan split in the state Senate.

The 1994 election gave

Republicans 57 of the 70 House seats and 27 of the 35 Senate seats in the worst deficit for Idaho Democrats in two generations.

Association President Steve Ahrens blamed the decline in support from last year on business opposition to a number of tax proposals that drew considerable backing from lawmakers facing a myriad of special problems. Business opposition was based on the impact those bills would have on the stability of the state's overall tax structure.

"It wasn't that legislators were necessarily looking for more money to spend," Ahrens said. "Instead, they were searching for funding sources to solve specific problems that were bothering their constituents."

The most notable was the local option sales tax authority

Jumping spiders are harmless, helpful and scary

By Steve Koehler
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — With the arrival of spring, you may have seen jumping spiders around your home. Don't be alarmed.

Jumping spiders leap like frogs, eat pesky bugs, and they are virtually harmless to man, yet scare many people.

They hang out where they can catch flies, which means on the sunny side of your house or inside by the windows.

But come dark, they bug it — they sleep inside a silk tent that they spin in a corner.

Unlike their web-spinning cousins, who are so near-sighted that they depend on their tactile sense to catch bugs stuck on their webs, jumpers see well and hunt their prey.

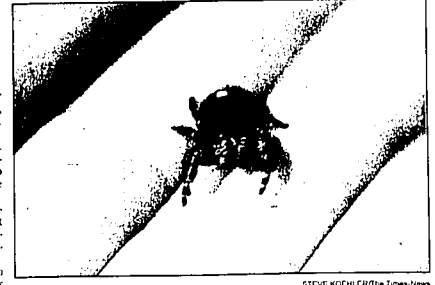

Catlike, a jumper will stalk an insect or another spider until it gets close enough, usually an inch or two, then pounce. A jumper can leap up to 40 times its length.

Jumpers are the smallest of the spiders. The largest jumper in this area is the daring jumping spider, which can grow to five-eighths inch. Most jumpers here are three-eighths inch or less.

The daring jumper is black with metallic green jaws and a white to orange spot atop its abdomen. Lesser colored markings occur between the spot and the spinnerets at the tip of the abdomen.

Spiders have gotten a bad rap thanks to fictional Hollywood movies. But jumpers can be beneficial.

They catch and eat pesky house flies that are faster even than a human with a fly swatter.

This common jumping spider is a master fly catcher. Two fuzzy arms called palps hide the fangs at the tips of its metallic green jaws.

New Canadian wolves wander out of park

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — The Canadian wolves most recently transplanted into Yellowstone National Park seem more inclined to wander outside its borders, officials said.

But while two groups have already moved into Montana, park officials say they intend to combat the migration.

"It's not our intent to let them stay there with the amount of time we have invested in them," Yellowstone biologist Mike Phillips said.

"We just haven't had time to craft a conservation strategy yet," Phillips said.

Three young males from a third pack were more than 10 miles west of Yellowstone's western border near Hebgen Lake and the town of West Yellowstone. They had killed a moose calf there and were feeding on it, Phillips said.

"We expect them to stay there for a day or two," he said.

Federal biologists have notified ranchers that the wolves are in their areas, but they have been no attacks on cattle so far, Phillips said.

Guidelines for the federal wolf recovery plan allow ranchers to shoot wolves they find in the act of attacking cattle, but not otherwise. Wolves that attack livestock are to be removed by predator control officials.

Four female wolves, an adult and her three pups, that had roamed far from the park last week are now returning on their own, officials said.

Magistrate: Gag order may have helped kill legislation

POCATELLO (AP) — Sixth District Magistrate Mark Beebe said Thursday that people who believe the gag order he imposed in the Ligertown case helped cause the failure of legislation designed to prevent such suits from developing in the future.

But he thinks the 1997 Legislature likely will approve legislation.

Ligertown, a lion-tiger-wolf hybrid compound at Lava Hot Springs, came into the news last September. Several African lions escaped from the ramshackle collection of pens and cages. Nineteen of the big cats were shot after some of them escaped.

On Friday, Beebe ordered Ligertown owners Robert Fieber and Dotti Martin to jail, Fieber for one year and Martin for six months. Both will serve more than seven years probation after release. They were sentenced on gag order.

Because of it, county officials did not testify before the Legislature on a proposed exotic animal act that failed.

Ultimately, Beebe said the gag order worked because it served the interest of justice. He selected the jury from Cassia County because of extensive pretrial publicity in Bannock County and barred cameras from the courtroom during trial and sentencing. Beebe also ruled that allowing the jury to tour Ligertown could be prejudicial to Martin and Fieber.

Prosecutors wanted Beebe to order the jail terms to start immediately. Deputy Prosecutor Mark Murphy worried that if the sentence were delayed, the couple might flee. But defense attorney Claussen said Martin and Fieber have too much at stake in their appeal to leave the state.

Batt: Nuke dump should open on time

The Associated Press

Idaho Gov. Phil Batt emerged from a tour of New Mexico's nuclear waste dump for orphans and contaminated water Monday convinced more than ever that the facility should be allowed to open in two years as scheduled.

The Waste Isolation Pilot Plant, Batt said, "has been studied exhaustively. It is the most logical and environmentally acceptable place to store this type of waste."

"It is appropriate that on Earth Day, we take steps forward to deal with safely deal with the byproducts of nuclear fission," the governor said.

Batt toured the facility in southeastern New Mexico with Congressman Michael Crapo, whose district includes the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, and New Mexico Gov. Gary Johnson.

Once opened, the dump will begin receiving shipments from the more than 2 million cubic feet of plutonium-contaminated waste now stored at the INEL, and Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary has repeatedly stated the Clinton administration's commitment to meet the 1998 scheduled opening date.

Crapo and other members of Congress are pushing legislation to accelerate the opening by nearly a year.

But getting the dump into operation in the next three years is crucial to the federal government keeping the first major commitment in the deal it struck last October with Batt under which the governor agreed to limit resumption of nuclear dumping in Idaho for promises that most radioactive waste would be removed from the INEL by 2035.

"I want to do all I can to apply pressure to open that facility," the governor said. "With the Idaho agreement now in place, the Department of Energy knows they have to open WIPP."

Failure to meet the early 1999 deadline for beginning to transfer waste from the INEL to New Mexico would stop future shipments of new high-level Energy Department nuclear waste to western Idaho.

It would not, however, halt shipment of highly radioactive waste from the nuclear Navy, which accounts for about half of the 110 tons of new waste that the agreement allows to be sent to INEL over the next four decades.

Lawyer asks judge to move 'Fiesta' trial from Minidoka

By Jennifer Bunch
Times-News writer

RUPERT — A judge plans to decide today whether a trial involving the owners of Fiesta Mexicana should be moved from Minidoka County, because a defense lawyer contends pre-trial publicity may have prejudiced potential jurors.

Fiesta Mexicana owners Albino and Efraim Ortega face trial next week on charges of aggravated assault. The charges stem from a dispute a year ago with a tow truck driver outside the dance hall.

Two-track driver Randy Timmons told police that Albino Ortega had threatened him with a gun during a dispute that started over towing cars belonging to dance hall patrons.

Efraim Ortega has been charged in connection with firing one shot from a .357-caliber Magnum handgun.

The Ortega's attorney, Keith Roark of Hailey, argued in court Monday that Fiesta Mexicana has been pugged in the local news media as the "root of all crime" in Rupert. Roark referred to recent articles in The Times-News and the South Idaho Press. The publicity may prejudice a jury, Roark argued.

"The public now identifies the Fiesta Mexicana with violence," Roark said in his request to move the trial to the 5th Judicial District other than Cassia County. The 5th District basically covers the Magic Valley.

Fifth District Judge William Hart told attorneys he will issue his decision today on whether the trial should be moved.

Minidoka County Prosecutor Gara Newman argued Monday that the Ortigas were rarely if ever mentioned in the newspaper articles. Newman suggested the court consider moving the trial only if an unbiased jury could not be found.

The trial already was postponed in February, on Roark's assertion that the verdict in the O.J. Simpson case might have prejudiced a local jury, Newman said.

The news articles linked recent gunfire that occurred two blocks away from the Fiesta Mexicana with the dance hall, Roark said. The suspects were not even dance hall patrons, he said.

Media reports indicated the suspects, all illegal aliens, had been part of a crowd behind the dance hall.

Roark mentioned articles about a citizens' committee that Rupert Mayor Dwinelle Allied formed to help curb crime in town. Allied had said publicly that Fiesta Mexicana were one of the reasons for forming the committee.

Allied said in a telephone interview Monday that the committee will be looking at all crime in Rupert, not only trouble at the Fiesta Mexicana. It has been denied the group just will address juvenile crime, he said.

Roark pointed to Rupert City Attorney Rick Ballou's statement, quoted in The Times-News, that Ballou had advised police not to go inside the dance hall during dances. It is an officer safety issue, Ballou said in that story, explaining that officers make routine checks at every other ball in town.

On Monday, Ballou said the committee's purpose never was to lay a fundamental focus on the dance hall. But the Fiesta Mexicana has been a factor in some of the crime going on in Rupert, he said.

Roark also cited a Times-News editorial encouraging Rupert to turn up the pressure on the Ortigas to end problems at the dance hall.

Times-News Managing Editor Clark Walsworth said the newspaper has a responsibility both to report news and to provide a forum for the discussion of public issues.

"We don't want to get in the way of the judicial process, and if anything that we publish causes a problem for the courts, that is regrettable," Walsworth said.

"On the other hand, we have a responsibility to cover public issues, and incidents at Fiesta Mexicana have been very much a matter of public interest in the community."

National parks gain Earth Day spotlight

By Meredith Cohn
States-News Service

WASHINGTON — On the Earth Day agenda for Yellowstone National Park: wilderness designation, protection for the geothermal features and more money courtesy of President Clinton. And more private funding via a bill from the GOP.

Clinton, after a day of helping clean up the flooded and silted river banks in the Yellowstone area, announced his administration's package of initiatives that will require administration and congressional action. The bills were packaged for the Earth Day.

"Our 'crown jewel' parks, like Yellowstone and Yosemite, are the centerpiece for millions of American families for their annual vacations...Sparing visitation levels approaching 300 million annually have accelerated wear on parks, buildings and landscapes. The Clinton administration's plan, 'Parks for Tomorrow,' will protect and rebuild America's park system," says the article.

Yellowstone, Glacier and Grand Teton national parks are among 17 parks that stand to gain wilderness designation that protects it from development, according to three separate administrations. Also, Clinton is seeking passage of legislation from Rep. Pat Williams, D-Mont., to protect Yellowstone's mountains.

The president also wants $181 million more for the National Park Service to manage the system; Yellowstone has been operating on a series of temporary budgets passed by a Congress that cannot agree on a permanent one. The park's budget for 1995 was about $19.5 million — the same as last year — but has absorbed about $2.2 million in mandated salary increases.

To compensate for now, the park plans to close Norris campground and museum in the north end this summer, cut back on seasonal employees and leave vacant positions unfilled, according to park spokesman Cheryl Matthews. Potholes will be filled, Matthews said, but no major road work will be done.

Clinton is seeking congressional reform of concessionaires to make contract holders pay more for the privilege of operating in the parks. This could have a significant impact on Yellowstone, where officials are about to renegotiate 30-year contracts with restaurant and hotel vendors.

Also included in the package are plans to preserve historic structures within parks; provide better housing for employees; offer more power to the parks to solicit private donations and partnerships; start pilot programs to improve public transportation to decrease traffic; and reduce noise from overflights of tourist airplanes.

While tourist flights over Yellowstone are not considered a problem yet, traffic is plaguing the nation's first park, according to Mark Peterson, the Rockies Mountains representative for the environmental group National Parks and Conservation Association.

"We're glad the president is shutting the barn door on the flights issue," Peterson said. "On traffic, I was just in Yellowstone this weekend and driving on one park road and you wouldn't believe the potholes. Congress has just cut to the bone the park's budget and they have no money to fix them."

Peterson said the park has been requesting local chambers of commerce to promote other tourist destinations because of crowding in summer months.

Park spokeswoman Matthews says visits to the park have increased from about 2.2 million in 1985 to 3.1 million last year.

Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, who chairs the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, said he will introduce a bill this week to make it easier for the parks to raise money from private sources.

Murkowski said the legislation will bring in millions to the parks for upkeep and repairs by encouraging partnerships with businesses. Private sponsorship of parks would be allowed, while those that already take advantage of the national parks including publicly owned advertisers and movie makers would have to pay for the privilege through licensing and marketing fees. He says safeguards will be in place to stop "improper commercialization" of the parks.

"Obviously, none of this will or should detract from the federal government's or the Parks Service's responsibility to our parks. The goal is to augment that involvement with additional private funds, much like those currently funneled by the March Earth Day-related initiative to raise money, Murkowski said.

Death penalty case will sap Minidoka County coffers

By John Thompson
Times-News writer

RUPERT — The Minidoka County prosecutor says she probably will seek the death penalty for the two men charged with murdering Blake Morgan on April 11.

"It's still early in the game, but the murder was cold blooded and it was certainly a death penalty case," Prosecutor Gara Newman said during Monday's Minidoka County Commission meeting. "I can't say for sure now if it's a death penalty case, but it looks that way."

The defendants, Kody Butler and Jesus Diaz, remain in the Twin Falls County Jail. Both men are charged with first degree murder and armed robbery. In a previous interview, Newman said the charges could change if fingerprint and other evidence conclusively proves who fired the shots that killed Morgan.

If the prosecution decides to seek the death penalty, the case will take a bite out of the county's general fund budget this year, according to Public Defender Douglas Whipple, who will defend the two suspects.

Whipple didn't offer any estimates during Monday's meeting, but he did repeat the words, "enormous expense," several times during a discussion with

'I can't say for sure now if it's a death penalty case, but it looks that way.'

— Gara Newman, prosecutor

the commissioners.

"The case will have to go through the federal system and we are going to have to hire investigators and pay for special seminars," Whipple said.

He explained that one of those seminars is required by the American Bar Association for defense attorneys in murder trials.

He apparently expects the county to pick up the tab for the seminar. He was unavailable for further explanation Monday afternoon.

Death penalty cases are expensive to defend and prosecute because an automatic appeal is granted in the event of a conviction.

The process takes months or longer, because the various facets of the trial are taken through the appeals process, and anything found to have some basis for appeal is remanded to District Court.

Another option for the prosecution is to opt away from the death penalty and seek a life sentence, for which there is no automatic appeal.

Newman added that five major felony cases, including the Morgan homicide, currently are being prosecuted by her staff. She said a budget used to pay expenses related to witnesses is running a significant deficit, and she expects it to worsen in the next fiscal year.

In other county business, several county officials joined in a discussion about how crime, and especially juvenile problems, seem to be on the rise in Minidoka County.

Whipple said use of the drug methamphetamine is becoming a major problem in the Mini-Cassia area. He said the drug has a lot to do with crime because it makes people violent.

Local law enforcement officers say methamphetamine, with the street names "meth," or "crank," is becoming the drug of choice in the Mini-Cassia area.

A public hearing to accept comment on proposals to build a new airport in the Mini-Cassia area is scheduled for 7 p.m. on May 31, at Burley City Hall. Documents outlining the various proposals including cost analysis and site selection are available at the county courthouse.

ADL report says Freemen activities documented in 18 states

JORDAN, Mont. (AP) — Operating from a remote base near this eastern Montana town, the extremist Freemen have spread their ideas of hate, "gun law, justice and financial trickery" to at least 18 states, the Anti-Defamation League says.

The Freemen contend they are not involved in federal law and have set up their own jurisdiction, which they call Justus Township, on a foreclosed loan and ranch.

The heavily armed Freemen have been holed up in their 960-acre compound, surrounded by FBI agents, in a 29-day standoff.

There was little activity Monday, in contrast to Sunday's visit by six reporters. Freemen in public occasions an unusual amount of movement by people and vehicles inside the rural enclave.

The ADL, in a report released at its annual meeting in Washington, D.C., says the Freemen movement is an "outright assault on the very basis of American constitutional democracy."

The ADL report details how followers of the movement declare themselves exempt from America's laws, regulations and taxes; conduct seminars laced with racial and religious bigotry; and promote their own brand of justice.

"That's the unfortunate part about it. Other states and other communities will have to live with some of the things that we have," said Nick Muldon, the Garfield County prosecutor in Jordan, whose life was threatened by the Freemen.

The Freemen use bogus liens and money orders, propounding a system of so-called "common law" in defiance of the actual courts, said Abraham H. Foxman, ADL national director.

The report outlines how, over the course of a year, hundreds of people went to the ranch near Jordan to learn how to produce false financial documents using home computers and laser printers.

Minidoka District officials to discuss superintendent

By John Thompson
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Minidoka School District officials will meet in a special executive session tonight to consider six applicants for superintendent.

School Board Chairman Bill Hucybert said 28 people are involved in the selection process for the new superintendent. Those people are school district staff, administration, board members and taxpayers.

The field was narrowed from 13 to six candidates during the past two weeks. Hucybert said tonight's meeting will be to discuss the candidates and what they should be asked during interviews.

The district also has a vacancy for an assistant superintendent, because Richard Goodworth announced last week that he plans to retire.

In an interview Monday, School Board member Norma Claridge suggested leaving the position unfilled to save money.

Claridge was one of the four board members who voted in February to buy out the last year's Superintendent Michael Bishop's $79,500 contract.

"They refer to each other as an speech family," she said. "For those who did not make the finals, they rallied around who were in the finals."

Assistant coach, Linda Burton has worked side-by-side with Fredericksen during Jerome's championship streak, and is quick to praise the students for their success.

"They are not just speech kids," Burton said. "They are so diversified, yet when it comes to speech time, they come together and all clones are left behind."

"I've travelled the state with the team for 11 years, and they have never shamed or embarrassed me, the team or the school," she said.

Twin Falls Magistrate Judge Roger Burdick has been an ardent supporter of Fredericksen and Burton since his son, Ben, won a couple of state titles for Jerome in the early '90s.

"July and Linda should be put in the Idaho sports hall of fame," Burdick said. "No coach or teacher can point to a better record than those two have achieved. It's a dynasty of excellence."

Fredericksen, Jerome's 10 state placers, only four will be lost to graduation.

granted to Kootenai County over the association's objections. If successful, some believe that kind of option is a taxing power which could be spread statewide.

"On other issues, legislators maintained the strong support for business and they've employed in past sessions," Ahrens said.

The business position ultimately prevailed on the 20 of the 23 specific bills used in the assessment. Most of the bills that the association opposed passed one House before being killed in the other.

And during 1996, there were no new business tax increases, but legislators rolling up perfect bills on new business tax increases were held by Democrats in the House and four in the Senate voted with the association 100 percent of the time.

Among the bills backed by the association and enacted this year were the increase in the gasoline tax, creation of a worker training fund through diversion of unemployment insurance premium tax money to clean up polluted land and limits on the grounds for challenging public land management actions.

In addition to the local option tax for Kootenai County, lawmakers lucked the association by defeating creation of charter schools and restrictions on worker's compensation claim.

The highest mark this year was 94.4 percent for Republican Sen. Clyde Boatright of Rathburn. Two other GOP senators, John Sands of Hagerman and Bob Lee of Rexburg, were over 90 percent.

They were offset by Democrat Mary Lou Reed of Coeur d'Alene and Republican Stan Hawkins of Ucon, who both were at 56 percent, and Democrat Clint Stennett of Ketchikan and Republican Rex Ferguson of Riggins, who each were at 59 percent.

Overall, the composite average for the Senate was just under 79 percent, down from 82 percent a year ago.

In the House, the most pro-business voting record belonged to Republican Caucus Leader John Tippets of Bennington at 90 percent, the only one to break that barrier.

The lowest percentage was held by Democrat John Alexander of Pocatello at 41.

The composite House average was 73.5 percent, a dramatic slide from the record 91 percent composite a year ago.

Families seek damages from jail

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The families of two women who died after hanging themselves in the Bonneville County Jail last fall have filed claims for at least $500,000 in damages.

If not voluntarily settled, the claims stemming from the deaths of Amy Jo Hagen, 22, and Salma Richardson, 19, are required before the families can take state and county governments to court.

Hagen and Richardson died within days of hanging themselves with bed sheets from the bars of their cells on Oct. 18.

County officials have disputed past allegations that the deaths were in part due to negligence by jail personnel.

Richardson's husband and parents accused both Bonneville and Bingham counties of negligence, specifically claiming Bonneville County jailers did not provide adequate supervision. Hagen's parents made similar charges against Bonneville County and the state Department of Health and Welfare.

The Richardson claim contends a state evaluation determined her to be a suicide risk a month before her death.

After completing a 28-day treatment plan at the Alcohol Rehabilitation Association, she sought additional help that was dropped. The county was dropping its contract with the treatment provider, the claim stated.

Jurors feel other charges warranted

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Two jurors who last week helped convict Douglas Carlson of murdering 22-month-old Nicole Hoover say they feel other charges are warranted in the case.

Bonneville County Prosecutor David Johnson said Monday he willing to discuss the case with concerned jurors, but Carlson's guilt has "been proven accurately in a court of law."

Carlson, 29, was convicted of first-degree murder in the beating death of Nicole, daughter of Carlson's former girl friend. The baby died last summer.

After the verdict was announced, juror Don Michaelson told a Post Register reporter, "Doug Carlson is not the only person who is guilty in this case."

In a letter to the editor published by the paper Sunday, juror Wendy Carroll expressed similar concerns that someone else had injured Nicole.

Johnson said he talked to Carroll shortly after the verdict, but hasn't heard from other jurors and isn't sure how widespread the sentiment might be.

He convinced prosecutors and investigators had similar concerns. Defense attorneys alleged Evelyn Hoover, Nicole's mother and Carlson's former girlfriend, could have caused Nicole's injuries.

"It's a question," Johnson said. "How much did Evelyn Hoover know about what happened?"

THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff

In human affairs, the best stimulus for running ahead is to have something we must run from.

"I'll take my nine and run," chorled South after a fortunate lead gave him a club trick. It was to be a short spade but he pulled up anchor at trick two, discovering he had more to gain by working in lead of diamond.

South happily won his club queen and counted two more winners. He saw five spades, two red aces and two club winners. Quickly, he cashed his spade queen and jack and East's discard brought a lone diamond. A trick later in spades had disappeared and it was too late to find a replacement.

He tried the diamond ace and another diamond, but East was in no hurry to win in dummy. There was no longer any way to get a diamond winner and South held himself to only eight tricks.

When there is an estimate that it's often best to "take your nine and run." In today's layout, there was no reason for haste. If spades were going to run, they would be later than diamonds.

At trick two, South should have led a diamond jack to dummy's ace and a diamond jack. This insurance would have cost nothing but it might have paid off.

When he establishes a diamond winner safely before his spade entry is gone and instead of down his partner would.

Duplicate flyers should play the same way. It's the best legitimate shot at an overtrick and it comes with no risk.

Short-term T-bill rates stay mixed

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities were mixed in Monday's auction.

The Treasury Department sold $11.5 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 4.97 percent, up from 4.87 percent last week. Another $11.7 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.02 percent, down from 5.03 percent.

The three-month bill rate was the highest since they sold for 5.03 percent on April 8. The six-month bill rate was the lowest since they averaged 4.97 percent on March 29.

The new discount rates understate the actual return to investors — 5.10 percent for three-month bills with a $10,000 bill selling for $9,874.40 and 5.22 percent for a six-month bill selling for $9,746.20.

In a separate report, the Federal Reserve said Monday that the average yield for one-year Treasury bills, the most popular index for making changes in adjustable rate mortgages, fell to 5.51 percent last week from 5.62 percent the previous week.

Opposition builds to Bell Atlantic-Nynex deal

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Executives of Bell Atlantic and Nynex said Monday that their $2.3 billion merger will benefit both customers and employees by creating more jobs than layoffs and providing better, simpler service.

But opponents fear the industry is undoing the 1984 breakup of the old Bell System, which was meant to encourage competition.

Some consumer advocacy groups objected on the grounds that the deal violated the spirit of the telecommunications deregulation law passed two months ago.

"The public was told the new law would lead to new entrants in every market and instead we are seeing the same old monopolies banding together to prevent competition from developing," said Bradley Stillman, telecommunications policy director at the Consumer Federation of America.

New York State Attorney General Dennis Vacco said Monday his office already had begun to review the deal. "I find it somewhat ironic that several years ago there was a breakup of AT&T. Ma Bell as it was called, and now the Baby Bells are coming back together," Vacco said. "We have to take a very careful and close look at it to make sure it's not going to diminish competition, especially for telephone rates."

However, Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., a primary author of the deregulation law, was optimistic the proposed union would not discourage new local phone competitors.

"I think that it will probably be good in the long run," Pressler said Monday. "I think it will prove to benefit customers."

The new Bell Atlantic, serving 13 states and the District of Columbia, will have revenue of $27 billion, 37 million, and 143,000 employees.

Before its breakup, AT&T Corp. had annual revenue of about $60 billion, 110 million phone lines and 1 million employees. It's making even more money today, with annual revenue of $80 billion, 80 million long distance customers and 300,000 employees.

But AT&T is shrinking with the spurt of its communications equipment and computer manufacturing businesses. By the end of the year, it will employ 200,000 and have revenue of around $25 billion.

It had been clear well before passage of the telecommunications reform that Bell Atlantic and Nynex would merge. They initiated their cellular operations last summer and their discussions of an outright merger became public in December.

Investors had a mixed response to news of the deal: Bell Atlantic rose $2.25 to close at $67.25 a share but Nynex fell $2.50 to $50.50 in trading Monday on the New York Stock Exchange.

For now, for most residential users, the deal will have no obvious impact; most people will continue to have just one choice for local phone service — their existing Baby Bell carrier. The only difference will be that Nynex will change its name to Bell Atlantic.

Neither company now has a telephone exchange, nor would they until after the deal is closed, a year from now or so. And it will be several years before AT&T, MCI, Sprint, cable or cellular companies provide adequate competition to the local carriers.

The merger would be better for business customers. Bell Atlantic and Nynex serve contiguous regions along the Atlantic coast and their merger presents a chance to eliminate some inefficient decisions in business phone operations, which are acute between New York City and New Jersey.

Bell Atlantic chief executive Ray Smith and Nynex chief executive John Scoble, Nynex chief executive officer who becomes chairman of the merged company, said there would be plenty of competition in their region.

They blamed the critical comments from AT&T and MCI on the comments that broke into the new Bell Atlantic's territory.

Soon-to-be marrieds of '90s tend to be older, more careful

Knight-Ridder News Service

PHILADELPHIA — Forget Romeo. Forget Juliet, too. Forget dewy eyes and empty pockets, innocence and young hearts. Forget the romance of stage and screen that fills your head when you hear the word "newly weds."

By the soon-to-be marrieds of the '90s who are, on average, older, more experienced, and seemingly a lot more careful than any generation before.

Recent census data confirm what conventional wisdom has suggested for years: People are getting older. The median age of a bride in the '90s is 24 1/2. The median age of bridegrooms is almost 27.

"Take Jennifer Dragoun and Jeff Carver. She's 25, he's 26. They've been a couple forever — since they met as students in high school six years ago. She's in medical school, he's working full time, just getting an MBA.

Standing in the middle of a bare floor on a recent Sunday afternoon, amid samples of wedding cakes, ice sculptures, and services offering limo rides, disc jockeys, honeymoon cruises, and all things matrimonial, they talk as if their marriage were a foregone conclusion, as if they always knew they'd be together. As it is, they lived together for two years, and they're now planning their wedding — for October 1997, when she'll be 26 and he'll be almost 28.

What's the war? It's the economy, stupid.

"We had to plan around financial aid, around when we could get time off," Dragoun said.

"We wanted to be fairly close to some financial stability, and knowing where we'd be," Carver said. "We wanted to wait until we had the money."

And there were emotional issues. Carver's parents married at 21, divorced at 35. They're both remarried, but their experience left Carver perhaps more cautious than he would have been. "I don't want to make the same mistakes they made... They're now each remarried happily, but why have we to go around twice?"

Money, Security, Stability. Ask any about the wedded duo who have been a couple for any length of time why they didn't get hitched sooner, and these are the answers:

'Women want to have careers. They want to wait until they're more settled, more established, when they've worked and had some independence.'

— Susan Williamson, 30

you'll hear:

"We wanted to wait until we both had jobs.

We wanted to wait until I finished school. Until she finished school. Until we had our loans paid off. Until we could afford the kind of ceremony we wanted."

Or, an emotional variation on the above theme: "My parents married young, then got divorced. I didn't want that to happen to me."

Karen Moffett and Bob Salladino, both 24, also have been together for six years, and also are planning nuptials for '97.

"We went pretty early on that we wanted to be together, but it was, 'Let's wait until we finish school and until we have good jobs,'" Salladino said. They both teach school now, so the wait will end soon. They've already been engaged for a year.

"By waiting so long, we were able to save. That was a big factor," Moffett said.

Susan Williamson, a 30-year-old who was trying on wedding gowns at Suky Rosan's, also was waiting.

"Women want to have careers," she said. "They want to wait until they're more settled, more established, when they've worked and had some independence."

But "don't think 30's late," said Kim Buller.

Williamson's cousin, who was helping her try on dresses.

"These days, a bride's married so young these days. Oh, that's at 21, and people say, 'Oh, that's so young!'" said Williamson's mother, whose name is also Susan.

"She was a bride at 21. So were all her friends. But times have changed. 'Women want to feel comfortable that if they ever had to be on their own, they can manage,' she said.

"We've never seen a 21-year-old bride anymore," said Patti Winkler, the bridal buyer at Suky Rosan. "We send 'em home!"

Sweetheart sours on personal hygiene

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating a wonderful man for three months. He takes me out to dinner, to the movies, shopping, etc. He is in his early 40s and I am in my early 30s.

He is everything I have ever wanted in a man, and I really care for him. However, there are a few problems that I don't know how to handle. For one thing, he wears the same clothes for three or four days in a row, and after the first day, he tends to smell of perspiration. He says he showers every other day. Also, he doesn't brush his teeth regularly.

We are going to be living together soon and I would like to clear up these problems before we move in together. Please give me some advice on how to tell him, because his feelings are easily hurt. If I weren't for the reasons stated above, he would be perfect. Also, this is a small town, so please don't print my name, initials or where it came from. He reads your column every day.

- HIS GIRLFRIEND

DEAR GIRLFRIEND: You must tell your sweetheart that you are concerned about him because he doesn't take proper care of himself.

Explain that it's imperative that he see his dentist twice a year, and that he brush and floss his teeth twice a day so that his mouth is always "kissing sweet." And pointing out the importance of showering every morning and in the evening, too, if he goes out that evening. It goes without saying that a well-groomed adult launderer or changes his clothes daily.

Once it has been pointed out to him, insist that he follow these suggestions.

Living with someone who has poor personal hygiene could be very trying to anyone with a keen sense of smell, and I'm putting this mildly!

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

DEAR ABBY: With summer coming, this may help people who have swimming pools.

We bought a home with a pool. Each warm day, we came home to a "pool party" - but not ours. All the neighborhood kids were on our property.

We could not keep them out; they climbed over our locked fence. We got our lawyer to print a "release of responsibility" form. The children had to have it signed and notarized, and could not use the pool without a parent and the signed form each and every time they used the pool.

Needless to say, the parents got tired of watching their own kids, so now we finally have the exclusive use of our pool.

- SAN FRANCISCO READER

DEAR Congratulations. Others could learn from you.

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago - perhaps three or four - you printed a brief prayer titled "A Serenity Prayer."

Will you kindly print it again? It is one of the wisest prayers I've ever read.

- LONGTIME READER IN HAWAII
DEAR READER: With pleasure.

"God grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change, the courage to change the things I can, and the wisdom to know the difference."

Verjuice gives fruity touch

To their dishes some cooks like to add green grape juice - it's called "verjuice" - for a tart fruity touch. Old movies show the pioneer blacksmith as a solitary sort of stalwart who labored alone. In fact, that historic worthy usually needed a hired man. There was so much fourth-hand work.

That "Mary had a little lamb" you've read. Add this: Mary's little lamb was gored to death by a mad cow of the undisclosed variety. No report of any trouble there, good: in that Colorado town named Timbleshire.

The French painter Paul Cezanne didn't even get a man-sman suit until he was 56 years old.

Who paid Gen. Douglas MacArthur $500,000 under the table early in World War II?

A. Don't know about "under the table," maybe you can get that. Philippines President Manuel L. Quezon gave him the money "for services rendered" when MacArthur left the Philippines for Australia. The payment wasn't made public until 1979.

L.M. Boyd
What's what?

Q. How come the young Harry Truman didn't make it into West Point? He tried, didn't he?

A. That he did. The eyesight exam got him.

Q. Where was this country's first seaside resort?

A. New Jersey's Cape May is usually so credited. Records of 1766 indicate vacationers already were going there by sailing ship and stagecoach.

The very elderly, who can still remember wagons on the old farm road, always balked even before the horses, came into sight. The old wag on wheels made noises that dogs could hear but people couldn't.
