Montana hate victims go after Freeman

JORDAN (AP) — Victims of hate groups came here Friday to launch a ballot petition to touch Montana's law against the tactics of the anti-government Freemen, who have been booted up in a farm compound near here for 33 days.

Backers will have no problem gathering the 20,392 voter signatures needed to qualify it for the November ballot, predicted Ewan Barrett of Bartlett Co., chairman of the Montana Anti-Extremism Coalition. The deadline is June 21.

"When one Montanan is threatened, all Montanans are threatened," Barrett told a news conference in a community hall 24 miles northwest of Jordan, near the crossroads where the FBI restricts access to the encircled Freemen farm complex eight miles away.

First signers included Tammy Schmitzer, whose family was the target of anti-Jewish vandalism in towns in Musselshell and Garfield counties, both of whom have been the targets of threats from Freemen and sympathizers.

Observers at the news conference included James "Bo" Griz, who helped end the bloody siege at Ruby Ridge, Idaho, and Runcy Weaver, whose wife and son were killed there by federal agents. A U.S. marshal also was killed.

The initiative petition would ask voters to approve a new law letting individuals sue for damages if they receive threats or false lies against their property. It would also simplify the legal process for removing such lies.

False lies, clouding title to property and forcing expensive legal action to clear the title, are a favorite tactic of Freemen against their enemies.

"We weren't trying to bomb you," Griz told Barrett during a discussion. "We just wanted to see how much support (the Freemen) have in the community."

The informant went to a meeting on McCranie's property April 20 and saw pre-mixed explosives, fuzes, igniters, chemicals and end caps. On Tuesday, the informant quoted Starr as saying he wanted to fully arm the pipe bombs on April 27.

"Starr said that whoever wanted one could have it but they were to bury them in their back yards. And that the pipe bombs would be to defend their rights against invasion of the government," the affidavit stated.

Starr, dressed in blue jeans and a plaid, short-sleeve shirt, looked up but declined to talk to reporters as he left the courthouse in the custody of U.S. marshals.

McCranie came out, covered his head and chest with a light blue jacket and ignored reporters.

Tax repeal help sought

High winds buffet Great Lakes region as cold air rolls in High winds howled across the upper Midwest and Great Lakes region. Winds gusting up to 35 mph were reported from Minnesota to Michigan, and continued to northern Missouri.

Colder air from Canada caused record lows Friday morning. In International Falls, Minn., the temperature dropped to 14 degrees, breaking the old record of 16 degrees in 1956. In Duluth, Minn., it was 19 degrees, breaking the old record of 20 set in 1950.

Today's weather fact

If you own a dog or cat, then you own a fairly good weather barometer — at least according to some folklore forecasting theories. If your cat begins licking itself, its feet up high while walking, the chance of rain supposedly is higher. For a feline rain predictor, see if your cat washes its face. You can also check your garden. Spiders can also forewarn of deteriorating weather. As folklore has it, "Spiders repair their webs before bad weather."

Lebanon

The agreement came a week after Israel — targeting Hezbollah gunners — shelled the U.N. camp and killed scores of civilians. The attack convinced world leaders into action. Until, then, the major powers had not taken a major role in ending the new fighting along the last active Arab-Israeli war front.

"I want to make it clear to the leaders of Lebanon — we have no territorial desires on Lebanon," Peres said. "We have no bad intentions. We are not interested in destroying or dividing Lebanon."

Both sides kept firing after the truce was announced at 6 p.m. (9 a.m. EDT), with Hezbollah pounding northern Israel with Katyusha rockets and Israeli artillery shelling southern Lebanon, where 90 percent of the population — or about 500,000 people — had fled.

Israeli warplanes carried out more bombing raids and naval gunboats continued firing on the coastal highway.

'Domino' transplant involves 3 patients

MIAMI (AP) — For the past 10 years, Ronnie Ann Harris suffered stomach aches so excruciating she couldn't get out of bed. Unable to eat for half that time, Ronnie, 17, was the perfect candidate for an intestinal transplant.

"What doctors didn't realize until surgery last week, though, was that Ronnie also was the perfect candidate to be a liver donor.

In the first "domino" liver transplant in the United States, Ronnie received a liver and a large and small intestine from a young donor, then gave her own portion of a healthy liver to a third patient. The recipient was a woman waiting at the University of Miami's Jackson Memorial Hospital for a new liver.

"They took my liver, and they gave it to someone else," a pigtailed Ronnie, clutching a fluffy pink rabbit, said Friday from her hospital room. "That was neat. A special thing."

The procedure, which has been performed at least twice in Portugal, could have important implications on the future of organ donation. It could reduce the number of organs wasted in multi-organ transplants, experts say.

"This addresses concerns that we and others have that by doing the more complicated transplants, the patients who are awaiting solitary grafts will be devalued," said Dr. Andrews G. Zakris, chief of the liver and gastrointestinal transplant division of Jackson Memorial.

"It moves the field of transplantation forward and they are to be congratulated for this," said Dr. Alan Langnas, acting director of transplantation at the University of Nebraska. "It's the responsible thing to do."

Several "domino" operations involving the heart and lungs have been performed around the world in recent years, but the Miami operation was the first involving a liver, according to the United Network for Organ Sharing, which serves as the national database for organ donors and recipients.

Auction tops $34 million

NEW YORK (AP) — The feeding frenzy on Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis' estate ended Friday with the sale of her BMW and another presidential rocking chair, adding up to a four-day total of $34.5 million.

The extraordinary estate sale — a gift to her children Jackie had laid out in her will — exceeded Sotheby's expectations by a whopping 650 percent.

The auction house's most optimistic projection had been $4.6 million.

Of more than 5,000 bits of memorabilia, not a single item went unsold.

The oak rocking chair used by President Kennedy on the second floor of the White House sold Friday evening for $453,500 an unidentified telephone bidder.

The resale price was $3,000 to $5,000.

Mrs. Onassis' 1992 four-door BMW 325i sedan — the last item on the block — sold for $79,500. It was valued at $18,000 to $22,000.

1996 budget war is over at last

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the epic 1996 budget war over at last, President Clinton and Congress are already waging next year's fiscal battle.

Yet Republicans who achieved little of their budget-balancing agenda face even longer odds of success in this election year's intense political climate.

"Slim" are the chances former Rep. Tim Penny, D-Minn., who made deficit reduction a top priority while in Congress, gives for a budget deal between the two sides this year. Penny believes that even if GOP presidential candidate and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole agrees to bargain with Clinton, Republicans may be too fractured to back an agreement.

The 18-month-long budget battle of '96 came to an end Friday when Clinton signed a $159 billion measure financing scores of federal agencies for the fiscal year's remaining five months. The legislation helped deficit-cutting Republicans nail down their chief budgetary accomplishment — a $20 billion cut from last year's levels.

Those reductions, while considerable, came strictly from annually approved domestic programs, that one-seventh of the $1.6 trillion budget that finances road-building, space shuttle flights and other federal government functions.

Untouched were the huge, fast-growing benefit programs of Medicare and Medicaid that are the chief causes of the federal deficit and that Republicans pledged to revamp while balancing the budget by 2002. The budget fight ended with no changes in those programs, no package for balancing the budget and none of the GOP's promised tax cuts.

"Clearly, they accomplished far less than they set out to do," said Susan Tanaka, vice president of the Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget, a bipartisan anti-deficit group. Now, by Dole's own admission, Republicans are preparing to write fresh blueprints for balancing the budget by 2002. Perhaps next week, the House and Senate budget committees will approve plans resembling last year's proposal, participants say.

That will preface a year in which Congress will send Clinton separate bills reshaping benefit programs, trimming spending and taxes. Though there might be agreement this year on welfare reform and perhaps other items, the likelihood is high that Clinton will cast vetoes that Republicans will portray as unenthusiastic about shrinking government. In hopes of pre-empting his GOP rivals, Clinton this week repeatedly invited Republicans to revive defunct budget-balancing talks.

Sen. Bob Dole and Rep. Newt Gingrich meet reporters on Capitol Hill, after the House passed the budget for the balance of this fiscal year.

To most people watching the process, the odds of a comprehensive budget deal this year seem remote because of politicians' campaign-year desire to draw contrasts with their opponents, not join forces with them.

"Obviously virtually nil," are the odds that Scott Hodge, who monitors the issue for the conservative Heritage Foundation, gives for a bipartisan budget pact.

On Thursday, Dole and House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., said before even considering renewed talks with Clinton, Republicans will first write their own budget. Even then, the two leaders indicated, they would meet with the president on their own terms — "if he has a serious offer," Gingrich said.

The difficulties of achieving a major reordering of the budget in a politically divided government are amply illustrated by the spending legislation Clinton signed Friday. Without dispute, it enabled the GOP to deliver cuts in annually approved domestic programs of a magnitude unseen for decades. And Republicans claimed it was merely a first step toward purging even more unneeded bureaucracy. But the 200 programs Republicans said the bill eliminated were mostly small, obscure items like the $1.9 million Christa McAuliffe scholarships and the $3 million White House Conference on Aging.

In contrast, at the beginning of the GOP crusade to cut spending last year, the House approved a Republican-written budget promising to eliminate the entire departments of Education, Commerce and Energy.

Boy charged in infant beating denied release

MARTINEZ, Calif. (AP) — A 6-year-old boy charged with attempted murder in the savage beating of a 1-month-old baby was ordered to remain in custody Friday after a prosecutor said he had threatened the infant before.

"This young man is very angry ... he should not be released, period," Deputy District Attorney Harold Jewett told Juvenile Court Referee Stephen Easton.

The child is accused of kicking, punching and using a stick to beat a sleeping Ignacio Bermudez on Monday during a burglary. The infant's babysitter was in another room during the beating.

The baby remained in critical condition Friday and likely will have permanent brain damage, doctors said.

The 6-year-old boy is believed to be the youngest person ever charged with attempted murder in California.

Jewett said the boy had previously gone to the apartment in Richmond, about 10 miles north of San Francisco, and had "expressed the belief the family there had been harassing him, looked at him the wrong way and he had to kill the baby."

The boy's public defender, Leslie Blalock, told Easton she was concerned that Jewett had "not set up to deal with someone of this age."

But Easton agreed with Jewett and ordered the boy held. His next appearance is scheduled May 3.

Prosecutors filed burglary charges against the boy and 8-year-old twins for allegedly trying to steal a Big Wheel tricycle at the apartment.

The boys' names have not been released because of their age.

Authorities said the boys found the infant asleep in a bassinet while his 18-year-old stepfather was in another room.

Tough prison commissioner fired

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Alabama's prison commissioner, who won praise from tough-on-crime politicians everywhere for reviving chain gangs, was fired Friday after announcing plans to put female prisoners in leg irons.

"There will be no woman on any chain gang in the state in Alabama today, tomorrow or any time under my watch," Gov. Fob James said in a statement announcing the resignation of Ron Jones.

The governor quickly shot down the idea of putting shackles on women inmates and send them out in work crews after reading about it, to his surprise, in the morning papers Friday, his spokesman said.

Interstate-80 cited as one of the deadliest

FALLON, Nev. (AP) — A national magazine's designation of Interstate-80 through Churchill County as one of the deadliest interstates in the nation has officials scratching their heads.

"I would have to disagree with that statistic," state Department of Transportation spokesman Scott Magruder said.

The current issue of USAA, published by the United States Automobile Association, placed the stretch of 180 through the county No. 9 on its Top 10 list of deadly highways.

A story in U.S. News and World Report in December was the basis for the current report, which tracked highway deaths for every 100 million miles traveled on interstates from 1990-1994 and came up with a figure of 3,197 fatalities for every 100 million miles driven on the short stretch of 180 in Churchill County. Topping the list was I-90 in Montana's Silver Bow County, with an average of 6.2 deaths. The national average was 0.645 deaths per 100 million miles.

Rounding out the Top 10 were I-70 in Emery County, Utah; I-15 in Beaverhead County, Mont.; I-25 in San Miguel County, N.M.; I-40 in Crockett County, Texas; I-59 in Lamar County, Miss.; I-15 in Mitchell County, Utah; I-27 in Lubbock County, Texas; I-80 in Churchill County, and I-20 in Feter County, Texas.

Cancer rates are up for Black men

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cancer rates are up slightly for black men, still the Americans most likely to get and die of cancer, according to a National Cancer Institute study.

The study, released Thursday, found that black men had a 20 percent higher cancer rate of 560 cases per 100,000 people and a cancer death rate of 319 per 100,000, the highest for any of the measured groups. Statistics released last year showed a cancer rate of 557 per 100,000 and a cancer death rate of 316 per 100,000 for black males.

The National Cancer Institute includes the data in an annual report called the Surveillance, Epidemiology and End Results program. It covers statistics for a five-year period, 1988 to 1992. The report includes data for 172 time the cancer statistics among ethnic groups other than black and white, adding 11 new categories.

For all cancers combined, the new study finds that white non-Hispanic males are second to black males in incidence of disease. Cancer struck this group at the rate of 481 cases per 100,000 people.

For cancer deaths, Hawaiian males were second to black males, with a mortality rate of 230 per 100,000.

Among women, white non-Hispanics had the highest rates of all cancers, with 354 cases per 100,000.

Alaskan native women were second, at 348 per 100,000. Far second, at 179 per 100,000, were black native women had the highest rates at 172 per 100,000.

Big dogwood tree recognized by bark

CLINTON, N.C. (AP) — A.J. Bullard recognized the dogwood tree right away by its flowers and by its — well, bark. But it wasn't until he took a closer look that he realized the tree — with a diameter of nearly 3 feet — had championship potential.

"I stopped and observed it closer and realized it was a monster," Bullard said. "It just took my breath away."

Bullard, a retired dentist from Mount Olive, sent the dogwood's dimensions to the National Register of Big Trees in Washington, D.C., which certified it last August as the largest in the country. Bullard waited until spring, when the tree is in its full glory, to announce his discovery.

Neo-Nazi receives mixed verdict

ALLENTOWN, Pa. — A neo-Nazi who said he watched as his two cousins killed their parents and brother was convicted Friday in just one murder.

Nelson Birdwell III was convicted in the death of his uncle, Dennis Freeman, who was beaten over the head in his bed with a bat and pick handle. A speck of his blood was found on Birdwell's T-shirt.

Prosecutors said Birdwell, 19, helped kill his aunt and uncle and fatally beat their 11-year-old son Erik in February. But the defense said Birdwell — who has an IQ of 78 — was unable to stop the murders, call police or escape from his cousins.

Teen arrested for not having shots

PORT WASHINGTON, Wis. — Sixteen-year-old Jacob Kallas was arrested, cuffed and jailed overnight because he didn't have the paperwork for his muscles, mumps and rubella shots.

Jacob's mother, Janet Kallas, admits she ignored two court orders to provide her son's new school with proof of the immunizations, which he did receive.

But she couldn't believe authorities would throw her child in jail over a missing piece of paper. "I didn't realize we were in such a police state," the mother of five said. "We're talking about a really good kid who's breaking out because he's in jail. It's my fault. I should be the one who was held."

Friend: Lack of work pushed actress

NEW YORK — When Margot Kidder dropped out of sight and turned up covering in a stranger's back yard she was depressed over her inability to find work in Hollywood, a friend of the actress says.

Theater producer Robert Franz said Kidder, 47, told him Thursday that Hollywood considered her an aging has-been. She asserted that "Hollywood has a system that, when you reach a certain age, you're dumped — they spit you out," Franz told the Post. "I need rest — and I need work," she reportedly said.

The actress who played Lois Lane in the "Superman" movies called Franz on Thursday from an undisclosed private hospital, the newspaper said. Kidder was taken to a hospital psychiatric ward after she was found Tuesday, dazed and disheveled, in Glendale, Calif. She was later transferred to a second hospital.

Clinton embraced by candidates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two trips to Connecticut illustrate the dramatic rise in President Clinton's political standing within the Democratic Party.

In the closing days of the 1994 campaign, Clinton visited the state to deliver a blistering attack on the Republican "Contract with America." However, like many Democratic colleagues in close races that year, Sam Gejdenson politely found a reason to be elsewhere.

But as Clinton prepares to speak at this year's Coast Guard Academy commencement — and raise his profile in the 1996 campaign — Gejdenson couldn't be more eager to welcome the president to Connecticut. Since first learning of Clinton's May 22 plans, the congressman's staff and Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee aides have been pushing the White House to arrange a joint appearance.

Gejdenson has plenty of company; the president's campaign time is much in demand in the spring of Democratic content. And why not?

Helped in part by the unpopularity of House Speaker Newt Gingrich, Clinton's job approval ratings — 55 percent in one recent survey — are among the highest of his presidency. Loyalty to him among Democrats is sky high.

Clinton also has staked out a big early lead over presumptive Republican nominee Bob Dole, allowing him the luxury of targeting Democratic Party television ads to areas where Clinton's interests overlap those of House or Senate Democrats.

And, as he proved again Friday

Dole promotes trust issue but Clinton wins in poll

WASHINGTON (AP) — According to Sen. Bob Dole, the fall election boils down to who parents would trust with their children — Dole or President Clinton. A poll today said more people would pick the president.

Clinton

"If something happened along the route and you had to leave your children with Bob Dole or Bill Clinton, I think you'd probably leave your children with Bob Dole," Dole, the Senate majority leader and certain Republican presidential nominee, said last week.

Dole said the fall election "boils down to who do you trust."

A poll by The Washington Post published Friday found a majority of people would pick Clinton over Dole by almost two-to-one.

According to The Post poll of 1,011 adults, 52 percent would do just the opposite of what Dole expected — and trust their children with Clinton. Twenty-seven percent said they would trust Dole with their children and the remaining 21 percent said neither, or that they couldn't decide. There was no margin of error published with the poll.

was the biggest source of complaints. "The president has made the assessment of a top Gejdenson aide. "We certainly view him as an asset."

"That description of Clinton is more almost as common as it was unthinkable not long ago. It was just a year ago, for example, that Clinton was so overshadowed by the new Republican Congress that he made the eye-popping statement, "The president is relevant."

And there was plenty of bitterness among Democrats who survived the 1994 elections but saw their majority — and committee chairmanships — captured by Republicans who used Clinton's health care debacle and 1993 tax increases as powerful midterm election weapons.

"Six, eight months ago there was this sort of late and nastiness," said Natalie Davis, a longtime Alabama Democratic activist running for the Senate this year. "I don't hear that from people anymore. Not that I expect him to carry Alabama, but even in rural areas people talk of him making a comeback of sorts."

That is a far cry from 1994, when Clinton was political poison in the South — and most everywhere else. "A real drag," was how unsuccessful Oklahoma Senate candidate Dave McCurdy described Clinton not long before the election.

by headlining a $1.3 million Democratic National Committee event in Philadelphia, Clinton is a prolific fund-raiser.

He has already raised $3.5 million just for Democratic House candidates, and next month he will announce several additional DNC fund-raisers as well as events for House Democratic leader Dick Gephardt and New Jersey Rep. Robert Torricelli, who is running for Senate.

While it is still spring, some Democrats now believe the party has decent odds of picking up the 20 seats it would take to regain the House majority.

Senate Democrats also are more optimistic about their chances of regaining control, and Clinton was welcomed Friday at their strategy retreat in Delaware.

At the most recent House and Senate retreats before this, Clinton

Chance passed for critical comment

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton's spokesman passed up a chance to criticize Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole Friday, saying that he's been so criticized by fellow Republicans recently that "I don't think we're going to try to pile on him."

The Dole campaign suggested the White House was trying to jockey its way out of discussions liberal judicial appointments.

White House press secretary Mike McCurry was given the chance to criticize Dole when reporters asked if Clinton would soon be responding to harsh criticism by Dole.

Christopher produces results

JERUSALEM (AP) — Warren Christopher overcame a week of sleep deprivation, a Syrian snub and diplomatic complications to bring home the agreement to halt fighting in Lebanon between Israel and extremist Shiite guerrillas.

Seventy years old, the American secretary of state looked crisp as ever Friday as he proudly announced an accord — titled simply "The Understanding" — that permits tens of thousands of frightened Lebanese to return to their homes and benefits to emerge from bomb shelters.

"We have achieved the goal of our mission, which was to achieve an agreement that will save lives and end the suffering of people on both sides of the Israeli-Lebanese border," Christopher said in recapping his seven days of feverish diplomatic shuffling.

Beginning Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres stood at his side.

Warren Christopher and Shimon Peres, moments before announcing an agreement halting two weeks of bloody exchanges between Israel and extremist guerrillas in Lebanon.

Just before the news conference, Peres called Christopher into his office and popped open a bottle of Yarden sparkling wine, made at an Israeli winery in the occupied Golan Heights on Syria's border.

"Warren, you did it," Peres said, holding his glass aloft. "You looked upon it as a mission, and you never gave up, and we're very grateful to you."

Christopher made six round trips between Damascus and Jerusalem, meeting every day of the aching ordeal with Peres and his aides, and suffering only once with one humiliating exception. On Tuesday, Assad stood him up.

Without complaint, Christopher returned to Jerusalem but only after suffering another setback. He had wanted to helicopter into Lebanon from Cyprus to meet with Prime Minister Rafik Hariri and parliament speaker Nabih Berri but was advised by the U.S. military that the trip would be too risky in light of the rocket exchanges and collateral turmoil.

Typically, Christopher concluded he could not put such a risk in the 13 aides, diplomatic security guards and reporters accompanying him. He called off the trip, and the next day, with more than 300 bodyguards in tow, the group drove in convoy from Damascus to Chitrua, a town in Lebanon's Syrian-occupied Bekaa Valley, for Christopher to meet with Hariri and Berri. It was a sign of respect for Lebanon's sovereignty that rarely gets as a virtual Syrian protectorate.

Keeping in mind that his peace mission was the overriding goal, Christopher ignored Assad's snub and kept shuttling back to Damascus until he got final approval Friday of the agreement that Assad is committed to help see through.

At times, Christopher got by with three to four hours' sleep. On the last day of the shuttle he had to fly a modest U.S. Air Force cargo plane back and forth between Jerusalem and Damascus.

Unlike Christopher, the crew of his regular Air Force jet is required to rest at least 15 hours between flights. So the C-141 transport was flown in from Germany.

The diplomacy was tedious. Ironically, the last hurdle was almost trivial: What role France would play in the agreement?

Backed by Syria and Lebanon, France was given a place with the United States, Israel, Syria and Lebanon in the monitoring group that will oversee implementation of the understanding.

Throughout his mission, Christopher had to contend with French Foreign Minister Henry de Charette's separate cease-fire proposal and independent missions by Russian and other European diplomats as well.

These rival initiatives offered the Arabs the possibility that Israel would be forced to give up its buffer zone inside Lebanon.

For 14 years, since Israel invaded Lebanon in 1982, the Israelis feel their army's presence across its northern border has helped keep terrorists from infiltrating.

Christopher's aides insisted the U.S. proposal was the only one with a chance of being accepted by both Israel and the Arabs. Christopher prevailed, but it's possible the diplomatic sideshow lengthened his mission.

Accord warms ties between China, Russia

SHANGHAI, China (AP) — The presidents of China, Russia and three central Asian countries signed a military agreement Friday to reduce-tension along the 4,600-mile Chinese border.

The signing ceremony capped a three-day state visit to China by Russian President Boris Yeltsin that brought Sino-Russian relations to their warmest level in decades.

Yeltsin and Russian government ministers traveling with him signed 14 bilateral agreements in Beijing, including one setting up a hotline between Beijing and Moscow.

On Friday, Yeltsin joined President Jiang Zemin and the presidents of Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan and Tajikistan in Shanghai, China's largest city.

The document, the product of four years of negotiations, stipulates that border troops will not attack or carry out military exercises that threaten the other side.

It also restricts military exercises in scale, scope and frequency, and requires each side to inform the other of any major military activity within 60 miles of the border.

But Yeltsin said the agreement was only the first step and called on the parties to begin work on reducing border troop strength.

Kazak President Nursultan Nazarbayev said it was a step toward setting up a common Asian market.

Movie's passion wins China

BEIJING (AP) — They loved the big screen.

Now the movie version of "The Bridges of Madison County" has rivaled China, selling 1.29 million tickets the first week and opening the capital — one for every 10 Beijingers.

It's a dream of passion for some, a morality lesson for others. Either way, the love story of a traveling photographer and a Midwestern farm wife has an appeal here that goes beyond the sentimental. Its theme — adultery — touches on changes in sexual mores as capitalism pushes China away from communism.

Extramarital affairs were taboo in the early decades of communist China. Leader Mao Tse-tung kept harems for himself but expected restraint from everyone else.

In today's China, experts at telephone hotlines are in question after question about sexual problems. Many blame urban China's rising divorce rate on bedroom woes and roving eyes. Shops in Beijing sell sex toys and lingerie openly. Mistresses are common luxuries for successful businessmen, and prostitution is everywhere — from Beijing's luxury hotels to village karaoke bars.

In contrast with these changes, Robert James Waller's novel — a runaway bestseller last year in its Chinese translation — seems downright wholesome. His heroine may fall madly in love with a romantic stranger, but in the end she decides to stay with her husband and children. She and the photographer cherish the memory of their passion until they die.

Some Chinese, like many American critics, found the story more than a bit unrealistic.

"If they really lived together a long time, they'd run into a lot of problems," said a 25-year-old woman outside a theater where the movie was showing. The film version opened April 20 around the country and is running through Sunday.

Czech parliament opens secret police files

PRAGUE, Czech Republic (AP) — Nearly seven years after the 1989 anti-Communist revolution that introduced democracy, the Czech Parliament voted Friday to open files of the old regime's secret police.

The law was adopted by 112 of 119 deputies. Parliament spokesman Roman Zambach said. Six deputies voted against the measure and one abstained.

According to the law, which will take effect on Dec. 1, 1996, all Czech citizens will have access to files about them compiled by the STB secret police.

Sometimes, stupidity helps Satan

Evil is a subject that has never interested me much, and Satan as a personality is not someone I would invite over for a drink.

I've always felt it was better to keep my distance from Satan just in case some of his evil nature might rub off on me. But recently, all kinds of interest in Satan has been springing up like a demon out of a dung heap.

For instance, I saw a book the other day that was all about art that depicts Satan through two centuries. And theologians are writing about evil, most notably Elaine Pagels, from Princeton University, who wrote the excellent book "The Origin of Satan" (Random House, $22).

Clark Morphew
Faith today

So I've been doing some reading and talking to people around here who have encountered evil in one way or another. I talked to a couple of retired Lutheran missionaries from Madagascar. The Rev. Duane Olson, a retired missionary of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, says the folk religion of the Malagasy people infers the culture with a solid belief in spirits, especially spirits of ancestors. And that belief translates into a conviction that evil spirits can capture human beings and turn them toward evil. The only way these spirits can be overcome and cast out, Olson believes, is through the power of Jesus Christ.

Olson remembers the first exorcism he saw as a young missionary in Madagascar when a woman was possessed by three demons named Red, Bad Feet and Long Teeth. The woman was thrashing about and screaming. Olson tried to preach. Finally Olson and a native pastor took the woman to a gathering of pastors that included some exorcists.

A native pastor approached the woman and commanded the demons to leave. They refused and argued amongst themselves. Olson said he heard the voices and was started when the demons decided to leave. As the demons fled, Olson heard the Malagasy word for "go home" receding into the distance. "Hoolie, hoolie, hoolie," the woman repeated as they returned to their neither world.

This kind of story may puzzle you, because much of the demonology found in other countries does not seem to happen here. But Olson is a reputable clergyman who teaches world missions at Luther Seminary, a highly respected theological school in St. Paul, Minn. So it's OK to wonder about such stories. To discount them out of hand may be a bit hasty.

Speaking of Lutherans, Martin Luther, the founder of that denomination, had many stories about Satan, and some of the stories are legendary. The old reformer saw Satan and talked with him and finally concluded that the devil "lives under the eaves of the church."

Let's go back to that book about the artful depictions of Satan. The art I remember from childhood showed Satan dressed in red, with huge goat horns, piercing eyes, fangs and another set of eyes planted on his buttocks. As a boy I thought those backside eyes were the best idea ever conceived. But today's theologians think that creative picture of Satan is bogus.

"I don't conceive of Satan in that way," said Ardel Caneday, assistant professor in Biblical studies at Northwestern College in Roseville. "Those are efforts to describe Satan in a picture form. I would see Satan in much more subtle terms, as a human being who mastered the subtle art or craft of deception."

Most Pentecostal Christians believe that demons can possess people and drive them into erratic behavior. Exorcisms today are gentler, and Pentecostals tend to focus more on spiritual problems such as compulsive behavior.

Further, it is my considered opinion that most of the evil that has come into my life was a product of my own stupidity. The old Pogo cartoon said it well: "We have met the enemy and he is us."

And that raises another question: How can you tell the difference between a demonic person and a person who is acting like an idiot? I've known plenty of idiots, but I've never in my life met someone who was possessed by evil spirits.

Christian counseling

2-year-old center puts God at center of mental healing

"The Lord has given us the tongue of learned, to give us a word, in season to him that is weary..." —Isaiah 50:4

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Breakthrough Christian Counseling Center office looks a lot like any other counseling office. There is a computer, magazines, a box of Kleenex, an anger poster. But that's where the similarity ends. On the wall is a "God is Love" plaque. Bibles are nearby.

Want to know more?
The Breakthrough Christian Counseling Center is located inside the Christian Center at 181 Morrison St. in Twin Falls. There is a sliding fee scale for payment. For information, call 733-1996.

Breakthrough opened two years ago at the Christian Center, and 54 individuals have used its services. It's classified as a self-sustaining ministry of Pastor Jim Sommer's church. Two part-time counselors are on staff: Steve Wills, a counselor at Perrine Elementary School, and Patrece Meza, who works with Health & Welfare and Preferred Counseling. Both are members of the Christian Center church.

Wills explained the difference between secular and Christian counseling, as practiced at Breakthrough, by saying that secular counseling empowers clients tap their own power to become self-sufficient while Christian counseling involves tapping into the power of God.

"In a Christian family, there are different roles and expectations," said Wills. "The man is to be a servant leader of his family, and the role of the family is to glorify and honor God. The man is to be a preacher of truth and prayer in his Christian counseling."

He recalled one adult who was having marital problems. The man came into the office in an almost psychotic state, Wills said. First, Wills referred the man to a psychiatrist for medication. Then he began to explore the Bible with him.

"When he began to seek the Lord and apply (biblical principles) to his life, his marriage became stable," Wills said. "He's off all medication now."

Wills said it's sometimes frustrating to move between the secular and Christian worlds. He knows his limitations in the secular workplace, he said, and he is able to honor the wishes of parents and their values systems. But he sometimes feels something is missing.

"If only I could send people home (from school) with God and Jesus as their source of power," he said. Meza has similar feelings about her role.

"I can be a light in my workplace, but I can't necessarily share that light, unless someone asks me to," she said. At Breakthrough, Wills and Meza are free to share their faith.

Meza can use a favorite exercise with her clients. She gives them a "How-I-Spend-My-Hours" graphic and asks them to fill in their daily activities. She then talks with them about the time they spend on their devotional lives and on other activities that promote Christian growth.

Both Meza and Wills give their clients copies of scripture references as they help the people with conflict resolution and communication skills.

"I went to a Christian counselor when my father died," Meza said. "I got some perspective — this is what happened and there is some meaning there, and I can share his memory and what he did with other people. Wow. That put me back into a setting where I could go on with life."

Wills explained it this way: "God has a blueprint and design, but we don't follow it as consistently as we should. When we apply it, it works."

Hillary thanks Methodists for social conscience

By David Crumm
Knight-Ridder News Service

DENVER — First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton thanked her church Wednesday for helping to mold her social conscience.

"This church was a critical part of my growing up," she told 4,000 United Methodists attending an international church conference. "I cannot even list all the ways it influenced me and developed me as a person, not only in my own faith journey but in my sense of obligation to others."

Clinton said her lifelong concern for the welfare of children was a direct result of her Methodist upbringing.

She recalled the song "Jesus Loves the Little Children" and said "The words of that song have stayed with me more personally and longer than many earnest lectures on race relations. And, to this day, I find myself wondering how anyone who ever sang the words to that song can be prejudiced against any group."

Her 31-minute address urged United Methodists to continue sponsoring programs to protect and teach children around the world.

The personal message, which never veered into politics, was received enthusiastically. Four times, the crowd rose for standing ovations. "If we are able to persuade every parent that it's important to talk to a baby, to be affirmative toward a child, to wrap that child in the love, attention and discipline every child needs — then by the time those children reach our schools, we could persuade our teachers to look at every child and see hope and see possibilities," Clinton said.

The United Methodist Church, which has more than 10 million members, is the third-largest denomination in the United States, after the Roman Catholic and Southern Baptist churches.

In many ways, the church is the quintessential American denomination, said the Rev. William Quick, pastor of Detroit's Metropolitan United Methodist Church, in a 15-minute introduction before Clinton's address. "This denomination of ours has been described as America's most characteristic church. It's short on theology, long on good works, brilliantly organized, primarily middle class, frequently bigoted — and much more confident of the goodness of the person next door. It has exhibited all of the chief American faults and virtues."

Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., right, says goodbye to first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton this week at a national child abuse prevention center in Denver. In the middle is Susan Hiatt, the center's director. Mrs. Clinton addressed the United Methodist General Conference earlier in the day.

Former Idaho lawmaker heads overseas

POCATELLO (AP) — L. Ed Brown, a former state legislator and Pocatello mayor and city councilman, will work in Japan, Korea and eastern Russia for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

"We are really excited about this opportunity and consider it a sacred trust," said Brown, who was sustained to the Second Quorum of Seventy at the church's semiannual general conference last month in Salt Lake City. He will work with local Mormon Church leaders and missionaries in 30 stakes and 13 missions in the three countries. Brown and his wife, Carol, will be accompanied by their two youngest daughters, Becky, 16, and Jennifer, 20.

Six of their eight children are married, and they have 21 grandchildren.

Brown, 58, a Preston native, has been with the Church Education Program since 1963. He moved to Pocatello in 1981 to work as an instructor at the LDS Institute of Religion on the Idaho State University campus.

He was an instructor for three years, then took a three-year leave of absence to serve as mission president in the Republic of Korea.

After returning from that assignment, Brown was associate director of the LDS Institute at Idaho State, then director.

He most recently was director of seminaries supervising 37 programs and 12,000 Seminary students.

Brown was on the Pocatello City Council for nine years and served three terms in the Idaho House of Representatives.

Catholic official OKs pill for mentally handicapped

VATICAN CITY (AP) — It is morally acceptable to give birth control pills to mentally handicapped women who could be "induced or forced" into sex, a Roman Catholic theologian said Wednesday.

But use of the pill should be kept to a minimum in such cases because "it would be administered without their consent," said the Rev. Gonzalo Miranda, who teaches at the Vatican's Pontifical Academy "Regina Apostolorum." Some church figures in the past have said exceptions could be made to the Vatican's total ban on artificial contraception. They have cited women with mental handicaps, or areas or women who are subject to a high risk of rape, such as those who live through Bosnia's ethnic terror and mass rapes three years ago.

Miranda's comments appeared to extend the exceptions for the first time to mentally handicapped women. "If there is a serious and imminent risk of violence, it is permitted to administer the pill to women with mental handicaps," said Miranda, who also is secretary of Catholic University's Bioethics Institute.

In an interview with SIR, the news agency of the Italian bishops conference, Miranda said artificial contraception is morally wrong "when it accompanies a desired sexual act, with the scope of avoiding its effects."

The health director of Italy's muscular dystrophy association, Fortunato Mangiola, called Miranda's position "the usual hypocrisy of the clergy."

"Who can establish, for example, if a girl with Down's syndrome, who has a personal life, who studies and works, is not able to intend or want?" he told the ANSA news agency.

What is the Shroud of Turin?

Centuries-old linen bears the negative image of a crucified man. Many believe to be Jesus Christ

Dimensions: 14'3" x 37"

TIMELINE

1357: First recorded appearance in Lirey, France, as the Shroud of Chambery, France, fire

1578: Shroud moved to Cathedral of St. John the Baptist in Turin, Italy

1898: Photographed for the first time; negative image discovered

1973: Vatican allows testing; pollen grains from the Dead Sea discovered

1988: Carbon testing dates Shroud to 1260-1390

1993: More fiber testing

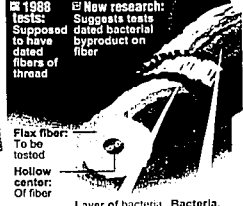

SOURCES: Turin Shroud Centre, University of Texas Southwestern, research by BIRENNA SIRK

WHAT IS THE CONTROVERSY?

1988 tests carbon-dated the shroud to 1260-1390. New research suggests microorganisms may have interfered with the testing.

One strand of thread contains a number of fibers

Key is fiber testing

1993 fiber testing

Theory: Shroud is Christ's burial cloth

Carbon 14: Radio active substance used to determine age of ancient artifacts

Test: Shroud fibers heated with carbon dioxide laser to release Carbon 14

Theory: 1988 testing sampled contaminants, not linen fibers

Biogenetic vomish: Plaque-like coatings of bacteria, fungi growing on fabric fibers

Test: Linen fibers must be isolated from varnish-like residues, iron red staining

"The Soul Is Here For Its Own Joy," edited by Robert Byl (The Ecco Press, $20). This anthology celebrates the role of the discipline in the greatest poetry of the ages. The editor, author of the best-selling book "Iron John," spent more than a decade collecting what he considers the finest poetry from a number of religious traditions, historical periods and literary movements. The book is divided into 10 sections, each exploring a different aspect of spirituality. The dozens of authors include John Donne, Edna St. Vincent Millay and the great Jesuit poet Gerard Manley Hopkins.

"We Inhabit a World that is both visible and invisible," said Elizondo. "Western theology is largely shaped by the rules and logic, which disrupts our ability to connect to the invisible. Yet the Latino culture has more of a sense of connection to the invisible world. For Latinos, the interplay of the spiritual world and the physical world comes through prayer."

Group promotes tolerance, understanding

SEATTLE (AP) — The Interfaith Council of Washington is like a tiny world, populated by individuals of different personalities, cultures and faiths.

But the people occupying this microcosm are voluntarily bound by a desire for mutual respect and understanding, which often flows from their desire to assist the countless issues that could separate them.

"It's amazing for all of us to discover we are all people. We have a lot of ideals and values in common," said Avolene Collins, a council member from Suisun, a form of Islamic mysticism.

The council had its beginnings 10 years ago when representatives of 15 spiritual traditions gathered here for an interfaith service called "Peace Through Harmony."

The idea was to teach about and promote acceptance of world religions, first among their leaders in the Seattle area, then among their congregations and eventually in the community.

The Interfaith Council, formally organized in 1989, offered an alternative to several other church groups which were dominated by Christian denominations.

The Rev. Pete Pathfinder Davis, a Wiccan priest and the current council president, recalls the early days:

"The tension in the room was palpable. Everyone in that room, in a heroic to most eyes, chose to use the room. Now, we have all come to know one another as individuals, to know one another as friends."

The council meets once a month. At full participation, the rolls grow. In a current meeting from Bahá'ism, the World Spiritual University (Brahma Kumaris), Buddhism, Christianity, Islam, Judaism, Sufism, the

- Islam — Monothestic religion with Allah as the son and Mohammed as chief prophet and founder.
- Judaism — Monothestic religion based on the laws and teachings of the Holy Scripture and the Talmud.
- Sufism — A form of Islamic mysticism established in the 8th century in response to the formalism of orthodox faith and social and political oppression.
- Adherents include 12th century poet-mathematician Omar Khayyam.
- Creteoptheistic Sufism — Found in 1675 in New York City. It is a premise that the universe and all within it are one interrelated and interdependent whole. Imposes no dogma.

- Vedanta (Hinduism) — Its holy scriptures, the Vedas, consist of divine truths which were revealed to ancient sages of India. Belays in ritualism, the law of cause and effect, and the divinity of all souls.

Hispanic Christians embrace the power of prayer

Dallas Morning News

"We came to ask the Virgin's help in getting registered in school and to guide us to succeed," Garcia says. "She will listen to our prayers. She always has."

Her friends nod solemnly in agreement.

It is Garcia's third visit to the shrine, a sacred place for Hispanic Catholics set in an imposing sanctuary just off U.S. Highway 83 in San Juan. It is the first visit for her friends, Deanna Ortiz, 18, and Caroline Orzua, 18.

The force of prayer, its ineffable reality in their lives, is the common bond these worshippers share, said the Rev. Virg Elizondo, a noted Hispanic theologian and pastor of San Fernando Cathedral in San Antonio.

forps, including praise and thanksgiving. Integral to prayer life among Hispanic Catholics, Elizondo said, is a form of necessary prayer called la promesa and the pilgrimage.

"La promesa is a bargain with God. Why not? Life is a series of bargains," Elizondo said. "God has made a bargain that he would be with us if we would be his people. La promesa is a bargain that can't be broken."

Nationwide average for gas hits highest since Gulf War

Knight-Ridder News Service

Erm Blanchard fumed at the gas pump in Los Angeles, where she was filling her tank Monday. At 10, the rolling numbers reached $25 and kept on twirling. "I'm hating my life right now," the Beverly Hills real estate agent groaned, as the pump checked to a halt. "I sell a house," Blanchard said glumly, before speeding off.

The average winter — which led many refiners to produce more heating oil than gasoline — and

Pump prices

oil-market speculation tied to a lingering dispute with Iraq are among the chief factors causing the sharp price hike.

The average price nationwide for well-service unleaded gasoline hit $1.27 a gallon this week — the highest level since the start of the Gulf War in 1991, according to the Computer Petroleum Corp., a Minnesota-based oil-research agency.

While prices have spiraled across the country, nowhere are they so high as in sprawling, car-crazy Southern California, where walking and public transportation are not big options.

The California Air Resources Board on Thursday called in oil executives to explain to the board the sudden drop in prices, which had been inching up for three months and then began leaping.

A combination of factors are responsible, said the oilmen, who earlier had blamed most of the blame on the extra cost of producing new cleaner-burning gasoline required in California as of June 1. Supply decreased somewhat because of fires in two California refineries and an oil leak on the trans-Alaskan pipeline, the oil executives said. And prices typically rise at the start of the peak driving season, anyway.

All those factors, and an additional reason, were cited in a letter that California's Chevron oil sent to its gas stations: "Chevron is looking to get a good return on its refineries for its stockholders," it stated the April 16 letter, which several station owners said accompanied notification of a 9-cent-a-gallon price hike.

Mark Johnson pushes his car the final few yards Thursday in Fremont, Calif. He ran out of gas waiting in line for four hours to buy gas at a station selling the fuel for 99 cents.

Elko battles to subpoena feds

By Karen Tolkinen
Times-News writer

'It's a federal question, and federal courts have to decide.'

— Mike Woodbury, Elko County prosecutor

ELKO, Nev. — It's known for cowboys, casinos and call girls. Add court battles to the list. Elko County has surfaced as the winner (sort of) in the latest one: a duel with the federal government over whether the county has the right to subpoena federal employees.

A Nevada district judge said in court Friday that he intends to lift his earlier hold on the county grand jury's attempts to subpoena a U.S. Forest Service employee in its investigation of whether the federal government is trying to drive cattle and ranchers off federal lands. After three hours of arguments Friday, Judge Thomas Stringfield said he would overturn his previous decision to quash those efforts. But it doesn't end there, said his law clerk, Collett Harrison. The judge also said the issue should be addressed at the federal court level within 10 days from next Friday, she said. If a federal judge doesn't occur him decision, then the grand jury will be able to subpoena any federal employee it wants. So that means Elko County isn't yet in the clear. In March, the federal courts ruled against another Nevada county, Nye, which sought to assert local control over public lands managed by the U.S. Forest Service and other federal agencies. Friday, attorneys from Washington D.C. argued for the Department of Agriculture's motion to quash the subpoena of Ben Simione, assistant Humboldt National Forest supervisor. Terry Henry and Keith Saxe argued that a U.S. housekeeping law allowing federal agencies to control the dissemination of information meant that only the heads of agencies could be subpoenaed. But Stringfield disagreed. Part of that same law says departments are not able to withhold information from the public, Harrison said. "That act is not intended to apply to public entities seeking information from federal agencies," the judge's clerk said.

"That grand jury is a public entity and therefore he did not feel the statute applied in this situation," Saxe released a brief written statement confirming the facts of Friday's hearing. Forest Service spokeswoman Cheri Howell said the attorneys didn't plan to contest the decision. "I don't think anyone was surprised," she said. County Prosecutor Mike Woodbury said while it felt good to have the district judge's backing, another could happen in federal court. He plans to seek a federal court ruling even if the Forest Service doesn't appeal the Nevada judge's ruling. "He's not the last word on it," he said. "It's a federal question, and federal courts have to decide."

Hansen teen dies following motorcycle, semi-truck crash

TWIN FALLS — A Hansen teenager was killed Friday morning when he crashed his motorcycle into a semi-truck rig.

Garrett King Bastian, 19, was riding west on Kimberly Road when he apparently tried to pass a truck that was turning right onto Hawkins Road at 12:52 a.m., said Cpl. Dave Benefield of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department.

The truck dragged his 1995 Kawasaki ZN900 motorcycle 150 feet down the road before the bike burst into flames. Bastian, found lying in the road 45 feet away from the impact, died of massive head injuries when the truck ran over him, Benefield said.

Benefield said he cited Bastian Thursday night for speeding 80 mph in a 50 mph zone. The truck driver, Richard Willden of Magna, Utah, said he "never saw the motorcycle anywhere, it was coming out of nowhere," Benefield said.

County commission considers ordinance for new evidence

TWIN FALLS — County commissioners on Monday will consider an ordinance admitting new evidence to planning and zoning cases that are appealed to county commissioners.

"It should make things better for people," Commissioner Dennis Maughan said. Commissioners will hold a public hearing on the ordinance at 10 a.m. Monday on the fourth floor of the courthouse.

Also at 10 a.m., commissioners will designate a polling place for the May primary election and hold a closed session regarding potential litigation in a personnel matter.

Hailey legislator seeks permit for new area TV station

HAILEY — Sun Valley and Ketchum could get a new commercial television station if the Federal Communications Commission approves an application by state Sen. Clint Stennett.

The co-owner of KSKI radio and Channel 13 said he would like to carry programming from two new networks, UPN and Warner.

But the Democrat cautioned a final commission decision is at least three years away. Moreover, EDA/HQ Inc, the parent company for KSKI and Channel 13, is only one of at least four applicants who want to run the station.

The station was created by the FCC in 1988 and has remained idle since then, Stennett said.

Allegations fly in Jerome sheriff's race

By Liz Wright and Rob Lundgren
Times-News writers

JEROME — A candidate for Jerome County sheriff claims the incumbent broke the law when he allowed deputies to drive two speeders that bore the same license plates last winter.

"It is called fictitious display," said former sheriff's deputy Wayne Childers. "You and I would be fined for it."

Sheriff George Silver III also failed to insure a department van that shuttled juvenile offenders to the Snake River Juvenile Detention Center in Twin Falls, Childers said. A deputy wrecked the van last autumn, costing $2,783 to repair, he said.

"This came out of the taxpayers' pockets," said Childers, who is campaigning against Silver and Jim Weaver in the Republican primary. Childers also is suing the county for wrongful termination from his deputy position.

But Silver said he doesn't think Idaho code requires law enforcement vehicles to have license plates. His deputies shared license plates for several weeks until the state sent the county a pair of license plates for one of his department's

CSI names new library

TWIN FALLS — At the urging of the Student Senate, the College of Southern Idaho Board of Trustees has named the campus' new library building in honor of college President Gerald R. Meyerhoff.

Recipients form Magic Valley transplant support group

By Jennifer Bunch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — For organ transplant patients, a second chance at life means a regimen of daily medication and having to avoid stress and crowded, closed rooms.

But Magic Valley transplant patients and their families no longer have to ride the emotional roller-coaster alone.

Kidney and pancreas transplant patient Joey Wilson, 34, is trying to get the word out about the Magic Valley Transplant Support Group. An LDS Hospital social worker in Salt Lake City enlisted Wilson to start a south-central Idaho support group. The group is open to anyone who wants to attend.

No local hospitals offer transplants, though many Magic Valley residents have been through the procedure. This will be the first local support group for transplant patients, Wilson said.

"It doesn't matter what hospital, what transplant, everyone is invited," he said.

So far, Wilson has compiled a list of 20 people from the Mini-Cassia area who have had transplants. His list is growing.

Trea Scarle, 31, had a heart and double lung transplant nearly two years ago. She must take medication every day for the rest of her life, so her body won't reject the new organs. The drugs suppress her immune system, which means she has to be careful not to become sick people or go to crowded, closed-room functions such as her children's school carnival. But she doesn't have to cart an oxygen unit with her wherever she goes.

"Sometimes it's frustrating one problem for another, but they are better problems," she said.

The support group will provide educational information to transplant patients, Wilson said. Veteran patients can direct pre-transplant patients to where they can find help to pay for the surgery, he said. Educating the community about transplant and organ donors are other projects the group may be able to tackle. Individuals can help each other to cope with lifestyle changes as well. The group's agenda will be determined by the group, Wilson said.

The spouses of transplant patients also may benefit from the support group, Amy Wilson said. Since her husband came home a year ago from his transplant, she has been discovering a new Joey.

About 10 people attended the support group last month, which was held in Twin Falls, he said. All participants were from the Mini-Cassia area. The group will meet this month in Burley to gauge the response here, he said.

Tanker trouble

Firemen watch flames and smoke from an oil tanker rollover rise high into the sky Thursday in Salt Lake City along the I-80 and I-15 collector. The tanker, carrying crude oil, caught fire and caused about $500,000 in damages.

Tanker trailer ruptures, catches fire, damages road

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — There were no injuries but damage was estimated at $500,000 when an oil tanker-truck trailer broke loose, fell over, ruptured and caught fire at the I-80 I-15 collector, city fire officials said. Officials originally feared the I-80 Airport Reno exit from northbound I-15 would be closed for several days while crews repaired the fire's damage to the highway. However, the highway patrol said the damage proved not to be that serious and the highway was reopened about 10 a.m. Friday. Fire Capt. Jeff Stanfield said the accident happened at 10:30 p.m. Thursday. The truck, owned by Darryl Taylor Transportation and hauling crude oil for Flying J, was westbound on I-80. The rear tanker broke loose at the hitch, hit the concrete barrier, broke open and burst into flames. Stanfield said. The driver drove free of the spill. Witnesses said flames and fireballs reached 100 feet high. Fifty firefighters were called to contain the fire which was quickly extinguished after crash trucks from Salt Lake International Airport arrived and pumped foam on the burning fuel.

Doctor challenges lawmaker to substantiate gay statement

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Dr. Gary M. Watts is tired of unsubstantiated claims that homosexuals are trying to recruit young people into their ranks.

So the Provo radiologist is offering to donate $10,000 to charity if state Rep. David Bresnahan can prove the claim that his younger brother, who was gay and died of AIDS, was coerced into a homosexual lifestyle by a scoutmaster.

But Bresnahan said Watts took his comments out of context and the controversy is subjecting him and his family to public scorn.

Watts issued his challenge in response to a statement Bresnahan made at last week's special legislative session during floor debate on a bill outlawing school clubs that deal with human sexuality.

The bill was drafted to remove the Gay-Straight Alliance from East High School in Salt Lake City.

During the House debate, a fearful Bresnahan said his younger brother, Donald, at first believed his homosexuality was genetically based. But later, after his illness progressed, he told Bresnahan that he and several other troop members had been molested by Scout leaders and that had precipitated their subsequent homosexuality.

Bresnahan then warned that adult homosexuals are recruiting youngsters into a gay lifestyle.

"I know if my brother were here today, he would be telling you, or asking me to tell you, that we need to protect kids from these pervers," the West Jordan Republican told other lawmakers.

Watts said Bresnahan's statements were homophobic. He said that since his own son told him of his homosexuality eight years ago, he has been reviewing all the literature on the subject.

"I've met with gay men and women across this state. I know of their pain and anguish, seen the hatred and fear of them," Watts said.

He said stories like Bresnahan's must be publicly rebuked.

"That's why I'm offering $10,000 to charity if his choice if he can prove that all these men (molested in the Scout troop) became homosexual. It is improbable. It is impossible. The numbers don't add up in any study I've seen. And public officials who say these things must be held accountable."

Watts said Bresnahan can't prove some of the old Scout troop is homosexual because of molestation — as he said in his speech — Watts wants him to make a public retraction and apology.

Bresnahan said Thursday he wouldn't be conducting an investigation or apologizing.

Since reports of his speech were picked up in national media, said Bresnahan, "I've been subjected to hate calls from throughout the United States and I'm not going to put my family through this any more."

"All I did is relate a story told to me by my brother literally on his deathbed. I didn't question him then, ask for documentation, and I won't try to prove it now."

"Dr. Watts is grandstanding. He advocates the myth that no homosexuals are brought into this lifestyle, that all are born to it. I don't say all homosexuals are recruited, I believe some are born (that way). But not all," Bresnahan said.

The legislator also claimed many groups have had success helping gays become happy and well-adjusted heterosexuals.

"That's all I'm saying, and if Dr. Watts and others don't like it, that's too bad."

Watts pointed out that even Elder Dallin H. Oaks of the Mormon Church's Quorum of Twelve Apostles has written that organic causes of homosexuality cannot be entirely ruled out, and that attacking homosexuals is inappropriate conduct for church members.

Bear-hunting activists' house ransacked

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Proponents of the drive to end bear baiting in Idaho have returned home to Clayton to find their house ransacked.

Kathy Richmond said she and her husband, David, returned Thursday from a Boise petition drive to find their electricity off, phone cut off and drawers left open.

She blamed it on local hunters who she said have dogged the couple since they first made news last year, prosecuting a hunter who killed a cougar on their property.

Idaho Citizens United for Bears is the group's success. He told Bresnahan that he and several other troop members had been molested by Scout leaders and that had precipitated their subsequent homosexuality.

Richmond said the two have gathered 21,000 signatures themselves. Someone was looking for signatures, they did not find them.

"They're real valuable. We don't let them out of our sight. That may sound stupid, but now you see why."

Richmond said most drawers in the home were left open and their contents were spilled on the floor.

"If I had to make an educated guess, I'd say it's probably related" to the Richmond's activism, Custer County Sheriff Al Finley said.

He noted that in the past he has tried to calm people who were angry at the two for gathering signatures in Challo.

"I pointed out to them that they had a right to stand out there and gather signatures as well as the Richmond's," Finley said. "That's the nice thing about this country, we can try to promote our opinions without coming under the spur."

John Watts, a spokesman for the pro-bear hunting group Sportsmen Heritage Defense Fund, said he does not condone the incident.

"We are not behind it," Watts said. "I know nothing about it, and I feel very badly for them. I hope they find whoever did it, and I hope they get punished."

Richmond said she and her husband have been mistast as animal rights activists. She added the damage re-energizes her in the bear issue.

PTA president urges parents' involvement

BOISE (AP) — The president of the Idaho Parent-Teacher Association is calling on parents throughout the state to take an active role in finalizing curriculum guides that stress basic skill education in kindergarten through sixth grade.

"Parent involvement is critical to the success of public education," Terry Anderson of Pocatello said Friday. "I hope that many parent will get involved in the process."

The draft guidelines will be in all schools districts and libraries by early next week for review by teachers, parents and others. Their comments will be returned to state Schools Superintendent Anne Fox and her staff by May 31. They will finalize the guides for consideration and adoption by the state Board of Education in June.

"It's up to the school districts to use them, but we're hoping to set high standards for the school districts," Fox said. "People around the state have asked for very specific skills our students should learn."

The draft guidelines for Skill Based Curriculum were developed with the help of teachers, parents and others, and now Fox and Anderson hope to draw even more people into putting together the final product.

The subject-by-subject, grade-by-grade guidelines, which are accompanied by texts to determine progress, cover not only traditional topics like reading, mathematics and social studies but also subjects like etiquette and patriotism. Specific concerns such as the ability to make change or perform mathematical computations without a calculator are addressed.

Gov. Phil Batt said he would review the material before commenting on the specifics, but he endorsed the way the guides were developed.

"I like the process because this is to get approval from the local level," the governor said. "I think we ought to be clear on what we want from our students. The broad public support is what is needed."

Mormon choir to perform in San Francisco

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The 330-member Mormon Tabernacle Choir is making an appearance this summer in San Francisco for the first time in 30 years.

The choir will perform July 29-30 at Davies Symphony Hall as part of the Bay Area's Festival of History Week.

The First Presidency of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints said the performance will commemorate a historic voyage on Feb. 4, 1846, in which some 250 church members sailed aboard the Brooklyn from New York, around Cape Horn, to Yerba Buena. That Pacific Coast settlement where they landed five months later on July 31 later was named San Francisco.

Some of them also crossed the bay and helped found the town of Brooklyn, which later became part of Oakland, Calif.

Movie company will spend $3 million

CASPER, Wyo. (AP) — A movie company filming part of a new movie in Hell's Half Acre expects to spend about $3 million in Natrona County before filming is completed in mid-June, producers said.

Officials with Tri-Star, speaking during a meeting with Natrona

County and Casper officials and members of the general public, said they expect to begin filming the movie "Ship Trooper" next week and wrap up about six weeks later.

Most of the money to be spent in Natrona County will go to hotels, said Executive Producer Peter Davidson.

Van crash near California immigration checkpoint kills 2, injures 19 others

ALPINE, Calif. (AP) — A van packed with nearly two dozen people crashed near an immigration checkpoint Friday, killing two passengers and injuring 19 others, authorities said.

Officials said the van went out of control and flipped over several times when the driver tried to ram a Border Patrol vehicle. One of the injured was reported in critical condition.

The Border Patrol van was rammed after it pulled alongside the other vehicle and an agent motioned for the driver to stop. As the van plunged off the highway and overturned, people went flying out.

Both the Border Patrol van and the other vehicle and an agent motioned for the driver to stop. As the van plunged off the highway and overturned, people went flying out.

Officials were having all over — like a plane crash, said Mike Vaco, one of the first firefighters on the scene about 24 miles east of San Diego.

No one in the Border Patrol van was hurt, a county spokesman Ron Henley said.

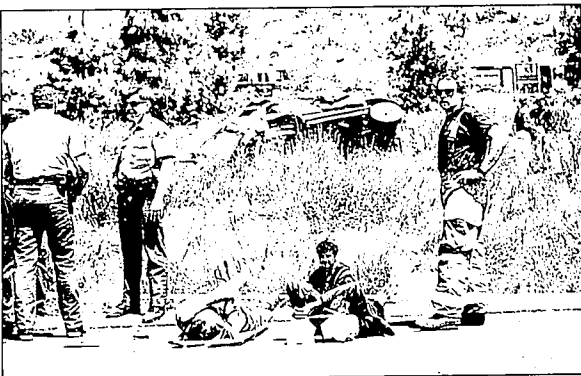

The California Highway Patrol said the van's passengers appeared to be illegal aliens, although that hadn't been confirmed.

"At this point we're more concerned about injuries than immigration status," said CHP spokesman Phil Kostantian.

Both the Border Patrol vehicle and the van appeared to be traveling at the legal speed limit for the area, 70 miles an hour, officials said.

Of the 19 people hurt on Friday's crash, one was listed in critical condition, Konstantin said.

The condition of the others was not immediately available.

San Diego County sheriff's deputies guard three men who were injured in a crash when the van they were riding in crashed near an immigration checkpoint Friday on Interstate 8 in Alpine, Calif.

The accident was the second deadly crash in Riverside County in recent weeks involving vehicles crammed with people near the border.

Earlier this month, eight illegal immigrants were killed and 17 injured when an overloaded pickup crashed near another immigration checkpoint in Riverside County.

The checkpoints are set up on major roads north of the Mexican border to screen traffic randomly.

In another case, Riverside County Sheriff's deputies were videotaped beating two immigrants on April 1 after a long chase involving a van crammed with illegal immigrants.

The accidents will not make the federal government abandon its 18-month-old crackdown on illegal immigration that includes more agents and more highway checkpoints along the Southwest border, said Ana Cobian, a spokeswoman for U.S. Attorney Alan Bersin.

"The people who are to blame are the smugglers who have a total disregard for human life," Cobian said. "We cannot look the other way and not prosecute these people."

The Legislature to build the library here," Craig said.

Board member Donna Brizee agreed. "There really wasn't another name considered," Brizee said. "The Student Senate was 100 percent behind the idea." She added that the students were involved in the naming process from the start.

It was a big surprise to Meyerhoeffer, according to Brizee. Board members invited their spouses and the people who would be housed in the library to this week's board meeting. She said Meyerhoeffer was a bit alarmed at the sight of the unusually large number of people attending the meeting.

"Gerry was really moved — almost to tears," Brizee said. Graydon Stanley, director of student services, said that if Meyerhoeffer knew about their intentions in advance, "he'd oppose it out of his humble spirit, and we didn't want to give him a chance to do that."

Stanley also said that the Student Senate felt more strongly than the board that the library be named after Meyerhoeffer because of his involvement with the students.

"The last two paragraphs of the resolution really state how the student felt about it," Stanley said. "They read: "Whereas, President Meyerhoeffer, through his warmth, generosity and genuine interest for the students, has fostered a cooperative spirit between students, faculty, staff and administration that is unrivaled at other institutions of higher education, and "Whereas, President Meyerhoeffer and his influence will continue to inspire and lead many future students toward greater successes,

"... we enthusiastically and gratefully recommend to the board of trustees that the new Library and Academic Development Building be named The Gerald R. Meyerhoeffer Building."

Meyerhoeffer was pleased by the vote. "Since my focus has been on the students all of these years, the fact that they had input into this decision is very meaningful to me."

Meyerhoeffer said "any time someone who has worked for a lifetime for an organization and is honored by the organization, it has special meaning."

According to Brizee, there will be a public dedication of the building sometime in the near future.

Minnick: Craig bill assures permanent INEL dump

BOISE (AP) — Democratic Senate challenger Walt Minnick on Friday warned that Rep. Mike Craig's Nuclear Waste Policy Act of 1995 could eliminate the political pressure needed to complete a permanent dump for the nuclear waste stored in Idaho.

But Craig spokesman Bryan Wilkes called Minnick's conclusion ludicrous and said passage of Craig's legislation would accelerate the removal of highly radioactive waste under the deal Gov. Phil Batt struck with the government last fall.

Under the key provisions of Craig's bill, scheduled for debate next week, work would not only continue on Nevada's Yucca Mountain as the likely permanent dump for the nation's nuclear waste, but Nevada would be designated as the site for a temporary storage facility until the Yucca Mountain is completed, which is not expected before 2010 and likely later.

Pressure for the temporary storage has built in recent years among the congressional delegations from 43 states with commercial nuclear power plants that are now storing their own waste.

Under a 1982 law, the government is required to take over storage responsibility for those hundreds of tons of waste in early 1998 — the original but badly missed opening date for Yucca Mountain.

With no permanent dump in sight, an interim facility is needed to meet that responsibility. But Minnick argues that by setting up a temporary dump — in Nevada or anywhere else — the pressure will off the delegations from those 43 states because their utility constituents would be free of the stockpiled waste.

"The problem is aggravated, he said, by the bill's cap on the utility customer fee that has been collected for the past 14 years to finance permanent dump construction. The administration now has the authority to raise the fee if necessary, although that power has never been exercised.

With Yucca Mountain already billions of dollars over budget and the prospect of diverting another $2 billion for building a temporary dump, Minnick said a capped fee would leave the government short of the cash needed to finish Yucca Mountain. But Wilkes said there will be sufficient cash to complete the construction work in Nevada under Craig's proposal, and he disputed the claim that it essentially eliminated the political pressure needed to finish a permanent dump.

In fact, he said, "we are very optimistic that Senator Craig's bill will get the waste moving out of Idaho beginning in 1999."

The governor's deal allows resumption of nuclear dumping at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory in return for promises that most waste will be removed by 2035. Enforceable by the federal courts, it also includes a provision that requires the tons of radioactive waste the nuclear Navy has stored at the INEL be among the first shipments to any temporary dump that is opened before the permanent facility.

Governor's conference hits Burley this week

By Jennifer Hunch Times-News Staff

BURLEY — The city's population is expected to increase by 250 next week.

Business people from across the state will descend on the Best Western Burley Inn for the annual Governor's Conference on Recreation and Tourism Wednesday through Friday at the Best Western Burley Inn. On-site registration fee is $125, which includes all sessions, meals and social functions. For more information call the Mini-Cassia Chamber of Commerce at 436-4793.

Growth in northern Idaho is slowing from an annual average of 12 to 15 percent, he said.

Former Gov. John V. Evans of Burley said the conference coming to Burley is a sign of increased state-wide awareness in what the Mini-Cassia area has to offer.

"It's an indicator that the tourism industry is gaining in this area," Evans said.

The drive from Burley to the pioneer towns of Oakley, Elba, Almo and Albion is a draw to visitors who want to venture off the beaten

To attend

Business representatives and the public are invited to attend the Idaho Governor's Conference on Recreation and Tourism Wednesday through Friday at the Best Western Burley Inn. On-site registration fee is $125, which includes all sessions, meals and social functions. For more information call the Mini-Cassia Chamber of Commerce at 436-4793.

Southern Idaho's growth rate is one reason the conference is coming to the Magic Valley

— Carl Wilgus, chairman

path, he said.

The event offers many recreational opportunities such as the City of Rocks, Pomerelle Ski Area, Walcott Park and the Snake River, Evans said.

The conference will begin Wednesday morning. Participants will go to the City of Rocks National Reserve Thursday.

"Things will be wrapped up Friday afternoon when Gov. Phil Batt stops in to hand out awards in recognition of state tourism projects."

Becky Smith, executive director of the Mini-Cassia chamber said the conference itself will be a boon to the local economy.

It will give the Mini-Cassia area a chance to advertise local recreation activities and services, she said.

The conference will include discussions of how to include recreation and tourism, the state's second largest industry, in local long-range planning. Other conference topics include heritage tourism and a discussion of federal land policy.

The City of Rocks trip will include a geologic tour, a history lesson about the California Trail and the transfer ceremony of the park's management from the National Park Service to the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation. And a trip to the City of Rocks wouldn't be complete without a Dutch oven dinner.

Friday morning a panel discussion will cover how Idaho business can cash in on the 2002 Winter Olympics in Salt Lake City.

Wilgus said the Olympic planning committee has estimated that about $100 million worth of products and services will be solicited from outside of Utah.

Alonso of a racketeering charge in November 1994, Prescott said.

"I mean it was a lot of money, not counting jurors fees, going to Burley (for the trial)," Prescott said. "We were probably a little sensitized. If we felt real firm about it, Silver would have paid for himself."

As for Childers' own suit against Jerome County, it is "not really costing the county, it's costing their insurance company," Childers said. He will "give anything in excess back to his county if he wins his suit and the race for sheriff."

Weaver, meanwhile, declined to join the argument. "I won't get involved in any negative comments toward my opponents," he said.

recently purchased squad vehicles, he said.

"You can't shut down patrol while you are waiting for those (plates)," Silver said. "I think if they really wanted to, they wouldn't have to put plates on them at all."

The lack of insurance on the wrecked van was a miscommunication either by his department or the insurance company, said Silver. The problem was corrected soon after the accident, Silver said.

To avoid waging a "dirty" campaign, Childers said he talks about the allegations in a few court reports about them. But Thursday night, he floated some of his assertions in front of about 15 people at a Jerome County Republican Central Committee meeting.

Childers was an employee of Silver's who contacted the FBI in 1994 with separate allegations of wrongdoing within the Jerome County Sheriff's Department. The state eventually charged Silver with a misdemeanor crime for using a jail inmate to fix his son's car.

Jurors last fall acquitted Silver of any wrongdoing. In the summer of 1995, Childers sued Silver and Jerome County, claiming he was fired because of his report to the FBI.

Childers said he disagrees with Jerome County commissioners, who paid $9,500 to attorney Keith Roark of Hailey for representing Silver against the misdemeanor charge.

"They need to stand with their values," Childers said. "That was taxpayers' money that went out, and the sheriff was not acting in line with his job."

Jerome County Commissioner Roy Prescott said the commissioners shared in the costs of Roark's representation because they couldn't agree whether Silver was operating as a public official during the alleged wrongdoing — in which case, commissioners would be required to pay full attorney fees, Prescott said.

Jerome County paid Roark roughly $47,000 after Roark won the acquittal of former Jerome County sheriff Erasmus "Mitto"

Idaho

Idaho's economic growth slows

WASHINGTON (AP) — The West enjoyed the best income growth of any region in the country last year, helped by a sizable rebound in California, which finally began emerging from a prolonged slowdown.

By contrast, the Plains states lagged far behind. Plunging farm incomes, reflecting bad wheat harvests, contributed to a 0.3 percent drop in per capita incomes in South Dakota and a 0.3 percent rise in North Dakota, putting those states dead last.

For the nation as a whole, per capita incomes grew by a robust 5.5 percent in 1995, the best performance since a 5.5 percent rise in 1990, the Commerce Department reported Thursday.

And the report only underscored the slowing of Idaho's economic expansion. The state — once a national leader in per capita income growth — expanded only 4.7 percent in 1995. Thirty states had higher growth rates including the border states of Oregon, Nevada, Washington and Utah.

But the rate was nearly a full percentage point higher the 3.8 percent growth state economists had estimated last winter. Instead of hitting only $19,134 last year, per capita income in Idaho totalled $19,264, according to the Commerce Department report.

But Gov. Phil Batt and other state leaders, while acknowledging the slower economic growth, point out that the new rates are still positive and are more sustainable over the long term. Economists also emphasize that many of the states that are posting substantially higher per capita income growth rates are rebounding from their own weak economies so that the impact of any increases is accentuated.

By comparison, Idaho's increases, while lower, are on top of strong economic activity in past years. As usual, the state with the highest per capita income was Connecticut, at $30,303 and the state at the bottom was Mississippi, with a per capita income of $16,531.

While Louisiana had the best individual performance, an increase of 6.9 percent, West Coast states dominated the top 10 list, taking five spots.

Per capita incomes were up 6.6 percent in Arizona, 6.2 percent in Oregon, 6.1 in Utah and 6 percent in both California and New Mexico.

The 1995 performance in California represented a remarkable rebound from losses totaling 2.1 percent in 1994 and 1.1 percent in 1993.

The state, hit hard by heavy cuts in defense industries, had been in the doldrums since the 1990-91 recession.

But analysts said the 1995 performance showed California's economy has stayed a comeback, reflecting its role as the country's biggest exporter.

"The depression times are over for California and the good times are back," said Allen Sinai, economist at Lehman Brothers in New York.

Paul Getman, an economist at Regional Financial Associates, an economic consulting firm in West Chester, Pa., said that a number of states in the West, not just California, were benefiting from gains in exports and in foreign companies investing in the region.

Other states in the top 10 in income growth were Michigan, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, all with gains of 6.2 percent, and South Carolina, with an increase of 6.1 percent.

In the bottom 12, after South Dakota and North Dakota, were Hawaii, up 2.9 percent; Oklahoma, up 2.1 percent; Alaska, up 3.2 percent; Arkansas, up 3.6 percent; Montana, up 3.7 percent; Minnesota, up 3.9 percent; and New Jersey, up 4 percent, followed by three states tied with 4.1 percent gains — New York, Vermont and Iowa.

Fees to be charged at Cascade Reservoir

CASCADE, (AP) — Recreation-minded people visiting U.S. Bureau of Reclamation facilities around Cascade Reservoir this summer will be asked to pay a day-use fee, agency officials say.

Reclamation is required to return money to the federal coffers for costs associated with public facilities, said Jerrold Greig, manager of the Snake River Area office.

The fees also will acclimate people to the system the Idaho Parks and Recreation Department will use when it takes over the reservoir sites by early 1998.

Daytime picnickers will pay a $2 per car fee, while recreational vehicles and those towing boats will pay $3. Season passers are $25, with senior citizens charged $20.

Minnick opposes Craig's waste policy act

BOISE (AP) — Democratic Senate challenger Walt Minnick Friday vigorously opposed Republican Sen. Larry Craig's Nuclear Waste Policy Act of 1995, claiming it guarantees Idaho will be a permanent dump for the radioactive waste already stored there.

The Boise businessman said the bill's creation of a temporary dump in Nevada while work continues on the permanent site eliminates the political pressure needed to complete the permanent dump at Yucca Mountain by removing the commercial waste now stacking up at 109 reactors in 43 states.

The Congressional delegations from those 43 states, well over a majority in both houses, have created the impetus to comply with the 1982 law requiring the government to take responsibility for

of last October's nuclear waste deal with Batt. Batt agreed to allow 110 more tons of high-level waste into the state over the next 40 years in return for promises that most of the waste would be removed by then.

Minnick, fighting an uphill battle to unseat Craig, contended that removing the thousands of commercial waste shipments now being stored on the reactor sites will end any interest by political leaders in those states in a permanent waste disposal solution.

Craig's bill undermines the financing scheme for Yucca Mountain construction by first diverting the up to $2 billion needed to build a temporary facility and then capping the payments customers of nuclear-powered utilities pay to finance the dump work.

Minnick Craig
commercial nuclear waste in early 1998, he said.

The bill is scheduled for debate next week.

Although Craig could not be reached for an immediate comment, he has maintained in the past that finding the temporary site while Yucca Mountain work continues eases the prospect for the government to keep its end of last October's nuclear waste deal with Batt. Batt agreed to allow 110 more tons of high-level waste into the state over the next 40 years in return for promises that most of the waste would be removed by then.

Minnick, fighting an uphill battle to unseat Craig, contended that removing the thousands of commercial waste shipments now being stored on the reactor sites will end any interest by political leaders in those states in a permanent waste disposal solution.

Craig's bill undermines the financing scheme for Yucca Mountain construction by first diverting the up to $2 billion needed to build a temporary facility and then capping the payments customers of nuclear-powered utilities pay to finance the dump work.

That fee has never been changed since it was authorized 14 years ago, but the administration has the authority to increase it if it deems that as necessary, and Minnick argued that it will be necessary once work on Yucca Mountain gets into full swing.

The challenger also complained that the bill creates $5 billion in taxpayer subsidies for those utilities after early 1998 by removing their responsibility for commercial waste storage without government compensation.

Minnick further called for a special scientific panel to be named to take 18 months to review sites for the permanent dump to assure the proper one is selected, although he said he believes now that Yucca Mountain is acceptable.

State flood relief in 1996 Federal Budget

The 1996 federal budget agreement just approved includes $1.2 billion for emergency disaster relief to help Idaho and the Northwest recover from this winter's flooding.

It contains two amendments to U.S. Dept. of the Interior's R-Idaho, authorized to provide $18 million to the Economic Development Administration to upgrade and repair dikes.

It also has $1.6 million to study damage to fish and wildlife habitats. And some money goes to emergency programs among a number of federal departments.

"Having spent several days in the affected communities during the disaster, I know full well how Idahoans pulled together to help their neighbors," Kempthorne said Friday.

"Releasing these funds will send a strong signal that the recovery has begun and we are on our way to restoring normalcy to the lives and businesses of Idaho and the Northwest."

Idaho film waits 50 years for movie premiere

BOISE (AP) — Nearly 50 years after it was made, a 1946 feature film written and co-produced by Idaho silent film pioneer Nell Shipman will have its premiere Tuesday.

Tom Trusky, head of the Idaho Film Commission at Boise State University, said the film was discovered at the British Film Institute in London.

It was filmed on location at Cape Charles, Va., and Trusky will be among the speakers at dedication ceremonies at the Cape Charles Museum and Welcome Center, when the film is premiered.

Trusky is editor of Shipman's posthumously published autobiography, "The Silent Screen and My Talking Heart."

The independently produced film had a complete film career that was filmed as "The Clamdivers Daughter" under the direction of Peter Varney. The title by which it is known today is "The Story of Mr. Hobbs," film found in London.

CSI drops pair to North Idaho squad

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The longer this season runs, the less College of Southern Idaho sports seem to be getting it.

The Eagles dropped a pair to North Idaho Friday afternoon, falling into a tie for the Northern Division lead with Ricks College.

North Idaho pounded out 11 hits to win the opener handily 8-3 and then scored a nice-ning runup 4-3.

The doubleheader sweep dampled North Idaho's win total in the conference

Briefly

'Unknowns' add dash of intrigue to tourney

TWIN FALLS — Something of a mystery twosome might throw a little spice into this weekend's Oasis two-person best ball tournament at Canyon Springs and Jerome Country Club golf courses.

A pair of collegians, Tommy Webster and Pete Niechenko provide the unknown quantity against a well-established bunch of competitors.

Two teams that command attention are Bret Rupert of Boise and Joe Malay of Weiser and the Burley tandem of Terry Spackman and Tracy Frank. Mickey Dugger is teamed up with Elko cohort Bret Elliott and Blue Lakes is represented by Jim Purves and David Driscoll.

With the two women flights being based on net only, low handicappers have stayed away in droves. Terrie Taylor, Jerome, with a 13, is the low flight titles tie for grabs.

The men's championship through fourth flight will play at Canyon Springs Saturday with the women's flight and last men's bracket slated for Jerome.

They will flip-flop for Sunday's final round.

Vikings sweep meet

Valley, Wendell, Hansen thinclads fare well at windy meet

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News sports editor

HAZELTON — Hansen football player Duane Legg won what has to be the longest pass rush in history Friday.

Legg, something over six feet tall and 200 pounds, lined up for the 100-yard dash in the classic three-point football stance rather than use the starting blocks. When the gun went off, he bolted into the stiff headwind and bent out fellow Clydeade Jared Wells of Oakley by two-tenths of a second.

Chris Barnett of Wendell won the 100-meter dash in 12.5 seconds. Legg and Wells ran 14.7 and 14.9, respectively, finishing last in the final heat of the six-team meet.

But when it was over, and the times announced, Wells let out a whoop like he'd won an Olympic medal.

"Track is for fun," he said, grinning.

"And it shows you the real man, well, he is in football next fall," Legg added, ribbing his competitor. It was suggested that Legg would have run faster if an Eastern Quarterback had been stationed near the finish line.

"Or a Twinkie," Wells laughed.

The jocularism masked what was a strenuous afternoon for runners and field competitors alike, with the races going into the teeth of a west wind.

Valley's boys and girls took the team competitions at the 18th annual event named for the former Valley School District teacher and coach who died suddenly from a heart attack while in his 30s.

Casey Crumrine and the Romer sisters, Beckie and Tanya, provided much of the Vikings' scoring punch. Crumrine took the 800, 1,600 and 3,200-meter races. Freshman Beckie Romer ran away with the 1,600 and 3,200 while junior Tanya won the 800, 400 and 200 — her first attempt at the latter distance.

Hansen's B.J. Myers, running against the wind, established a new meet record in the long jump at 21 feet, one-quarter inch.

Spurs handle Suns; Magic, Sonics grab leads

SAN ANTONIO - Vinny Del Negro scored 29 points, David Robinson had 28 and four other Spurs scored in double figures as San Antonio trounced Phoenix's 12:08 Friday night in the opener of their best-of-5 series.

San Antonio began pulling away in the second quarter, opening the period with an 18-10 run. Del Negro's layup at the halftime buzzer gave the Spurs a 58-44 lead, and they led by at least 20 through most of the second half.

Robinson and Del Negro each scored 11 in the third as San Antonio built a 24-point lead and led 95-71 heading into the final period.

NBA playoffs

The teams play Game 2 of the Best-of-5 series Sunday in the Alamodome.

The Suns shot just 42 percent from the field, compared with the Spurs' 62 percent. A frustrated Charles Barkley led the Suns with 26 points on a 7-for-17 shooting. He also had 12 rebounds. Kevin Johnson added 14 points.

Avery Johnson had 18 assists and 12 points. Sean Elliott added 16 points and Will Perdue 17. Perdue, who came to San Antonio in exchange for Dennis Rodman in the offseason, had a career playoff best in scoring, far surpassing his regular-season average of 5.2 points. His ferocious dunks in the fourth quarter kept the Alamodome crowd cheering howling as the Spurs kept the game out of reach.

Magic 112, Pistons 92

ORLANDO, Fla. - The Orlando Magic began what they hope will be a playoff run at the NBA Finals with a 112-92 playoff victory Friday night over the Detroit Pistons.

Dennis Scott made six 3-pointers and scored 23 points as the defending Eastern Conference champions routed the Pistons' first taste of post-season action in four years.

Alford broke the game open by outscoring Detroit 33-17 in the third quarter after the game was tied at halftime.

Shawne'e O'Neal had 21 points and Antwan Hardaway 18 for the Magic, who can take a 2-0 lead in the best-of-5 series by winning again Sunday at Orlando Arena.

Grant Hill led Detroit with 21 points. Alton Houston had 19 and Joe Dumars 14.

After the Pistons overcame a 13-point deficit in the first half, the Magic broke the game open in the third quarter with balanced scoring and good defense, forcing six turnovers and holding Detroit to 31 percent shooting.

Sonics 97, Kings 85

SEATTLE - The Seattle SuperSonics, trying to overcome the bitter disappointment of losing to the Lakers the past two seasons, beat Sacramento 97-85 on their playoff opener Friday night despite playing without suspended Shaquille O'Neal.

Gary Paxton, Seattle's other All-Star, scored a career playoff-high 29 points in a 45-minute nonstop performance as the favorite of Sonics, who were forced to sit out the playoff opener after getting in a fight with Denver's Tom Hammond in the regular season finale.

Paxton, 37 for the Sonics, while Mitch Richmond led Sacramento with 18 points on 4 of 13 shooting after being held scoreless in a pivotal opening quarter in which the Kings scored the game's first nine points. The Kings never recovered.

Game 2 of the best-of-5 series is Sunday night.

Nevada football coach steps down

RENO, Nev. - Nevada football coach Chris Ault is stepping down - again - to devote full time to his job as athletic director.

"My expectations as an athletic director are very, very high for myself. My expectations of myself as a football coach are very, very high. You cannot be a part-time football coach," he said Friday.

The emotional announcement marked the second time in three years Ault has quit as coach. He sat out the 1994 season, then returned in 1994 after his chosen successor, Jeff Horton, defected to the Greater Greensboro Club as he made his formal announcement. "Therefore, I'm resigning," there was a long pause. "Therefore, I'm stepping down as..." another long pause. "Anyway, I'm getting out of football," he blurted.

Fergus leads after 2 at Greensboro

GREENSBORO, N.C. - When the fun went out of golf, Keith Fergus puffed up his clubs and went home. After two rounds of the Greater Greensboro Club, he's glad he changed his mind.

Fergus, who quit the PGA Tour in 1987 to spend more time with his family, marked another highlight in his return Friday with a 5-under-par 67, a two-day total of 137 and the lead in the Greater Greensboro Classic.

Colbert shoots record in senior event

LAS VEGAS - Jim Colbert put himself in position to win the Las Vegas Senior Classic for the second straight year by shooting a record 63 Friday for a two-shot lead after one round.

Colbert's 63 was the lowest score since the $1 million event moved to the Tournament Players Club at Summerlin three years ago. He won here last year with an 8-under 205 in his hometown.

"I didn't feel a lot of pressure coming in," Colbert said. "Between the (Senior PGA and PGA) circuits, I've won 22 titles and I've only successfully defended once I didn't feel a lot of pressure."

Morris grubs narrow lead at LPGA

NASHVILLE, Tenn. - Marianne Morris took advantage of early calm winds to shoot a 4-under-par 68 Friday and take a one-stroke lead after the opening round of the $600,000 Sara Lee Classic.

Starting on the back nine, Morris grabbed three of her four birdies before making the putt, then chipped up to prevent her, and just about everybody else, from getting any more.

Top seeds advance in Big Sky tourney

BOISE - The top three seeds advanced to the semi-final round of the Big Sky Conference men's tennis championship Friday, and three-time defending champion Boise State swept Eastern Washington in the opening round.

No. 1 seeded Montana State dumped Idaho State 6-1 and No. 3 Northern Arizona defeated Montana 5-2. In a mild upset, Weber State, fifth-ranked, took the remaining spot in the semifinals over No. 4 Idaho, 5-2.

The Boise State doubles team of Ernesto Diaz and Albin Polonji, ranked fourth in the nation, defeated Eastern Washington's Brian Hart and Sam Stinson, 8-2.

Muster, Rios advance to semis

MONTE CARLO, Monaco - Thomas Muster survived a rare scare on clay Friday, rallying to beat 19-year-old Dutchman Sjeng Schalken, 5-7, 6-4, 6-4 in the quarterfinals of the Monte Carlo Open.

It was the 33rd consecutive victory for the top-seeded Austrian and defending champion, who took advantage of a tiring Schalken to come from a 2-0 deficit in the final set.

In other matches, Chile's Marcelo Rios took another step toward his second final in eight days, beating Magnus Gustafsson of Sweden 6-3, 6-4 and earning a semifinal meeting against Alberto Costa. Costa advanced with a 6-3, 6-3 victory over qualifier and fellow Spaniard Felix Mantilla.

Families' financial stress rooted in reality

By John Cunniff
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — It is reassuring to see a strengthening in home buying over recent weeks because it suggests stability, clear-headedness, a sense of direction and a certain amount of confidence in the economy.

That much can be read into the latest existing home sales, which soared to an annual rate of 4.21 million units in March, because all those quantities mentioned are required in making the decision to buy a house.

Home buying is the biggest financial transaction most families ever will be involved in, but it is even more than that. It is a commitment that requires the most intense and thorough analysis of one's own mind.

It is the real world, and it is in complete contrast to the world people have been reading so much about, that is, the world of politics where instability, middle-headedness, inattention and cynicism seems to rule.

And that leads to the issue of who it is that really is responsible for the stress in American life which everyone seems to be talking about?

Analysis

The most familiar explanation, one that the White House seeks to discount, is that job insecurity, stagnant incomes and rapid changing skill requirements are at the source of the disquiet.

Maybe so. Downsizing and its attendant layoffs have taken a toll. While it might be exaggerated by the media, as suggested by business and administration sources, it is true for tens of thousands of workers to fear or experience.

In a sense, it is as real an issue for them as buying a house is for others. Their future and self-respect are involved. These are not layoffs; for many 50-year-olds and their skills, they are the end. Like a terminal illness.

But even families an economist might categorize as comfortable seem to suffer stress. Superficially, their insecurity might be blamed on lifestyles, but when you probe more deeply you realize that lifestyles are mere symptoms.

Whatever, the way to inject life into a cocktail party is to mention the latest financial calamity to befall someone. Your story will be topped by another, and soon everyone will be talking about the high cost of living.

And it is high, not perhaps as indicated by the consumer price index, but certainly as measured by those lifestyles.

It isn't only that materialism is rampant and that people today "need" things that weren't even thought of yesterday. And that they will go to the limit of their credit cards to get them. And that they will then borrow.

Those tendencies are known and reported in each month's statistics on the high ratio of payments to income (near record highs) and in printouts of credit card delinquencies (they reached a four-year high late last year).

But there is more to this stress. It takes two or more earners to maintain it. In most refer to the typical family as being made up of two adult earners and two dependent children.

While some of this behavior is by choice, much isn't. Instead, the explanation lies in the failure of national economic productivity to return to immediate postwar levels. Weak productivity increases job everyone. Had productivity increases not succeeded, the economic pie that is shared by Americans would have been much larger today, meaning families would have had thousands more real dollars a year for themselves, and better lifestyles.

Richard Vedder of Washington University, St. Louis, calculates that 30 years of productivity drag — in this instance, traceable to government regulations — have lowered the nation's output by $1.1 trillion a year.

Taxes also have taken their toll, and ill-conceived government policies and poor business management too. Whatever the causes, they have deprived families of incomes, businesses of profits and governments of revenues.

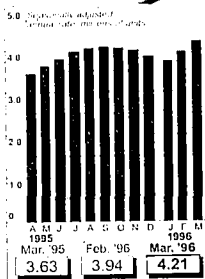

And to all this you can add the political posturing of elected officials, the shifting of government policies, the growth of bureaucracy, the insincere fiscal policies, the deceptive budgets, the middle-headed legislation.

Much of the stress on families should not have occurred. And yet it continues to increase.

It is real, not imagined. If only leadership had the clear vision of a home buyer the reality might be different.

Union decries effect of repetitious work

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Repetitious work, poor job design and violence have become the most significant safety and health problems in the American workplace, a union study says.

Since the early 1970s, rapid changes in the workplace have created significant new safety and health problems that put millions of workers at risk, according to the study released Friday by the AFL-CIO.

"Serious injuries and illnesses from ergonomic hazards — poor job design and repetitious work — are the most significant safety and health problems in the workplace today" and "are increasing at epidemic rates," it contended.

Thieves target sports utility vehicles

Toyota Land Cruiser, Mitsubishi Montero lead list of most popular

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The growing popularity of sport utility vehicles apparently extends to thieves.

The two 1993-95 model vehicles with the highest theft losses are the Toyota Land Cruiser and the Mitsubishi Montero, the Highway Loss Data Institute reported Friday.

It's the second year sport utility vehicles have led the list, taking over from high-priced sports cars that had previously been most popular with thieves, said Institute Vice President Kim Hazelbaker.

The loss ratings are a combination of frequency of a vehicle being stolen and the cost to insurance companies to pay the claims, Hazelbaker explained, with the average rating 100.

On that scale the Toyota Land Cruiser rated 2,340 and the Montero 1,894.

At the other end of the scale the Chevrolet Lumina had the lowest theft losses rating, 11.

The frequency of thefts has declined over the years, but the losses to insurance companies have increased, Hazelbaker said.

That is because there has been a drop in paydays, usually teenagers who take a car to drive around briefly, sometimes doing a little damage or taking the stereo before abandoning it.

Now the trend is toward vehicles being taken in their entirety, Hazelbaker said, "and in fact being exported, unfortunately."

Sport utility vehicles "are very popular vehicles to export to destinations in Latin America, South America, all over the globe," he said.

After the Land Cruiser and Montero, the top 10 vehicles for theft loss were Mercedes S-Class, 1,543; Acura Legend 2-door, 1,347; BMW 300i convertible, 1,051; Mercedes SL convertible, 972; Acura Legend 4-door, 665; Lexus GS 300, 620; Nissan 300ZX, 597; and BMW 300i 2-door, 555.

The 10 cars with the lowest loss rate were the Lumina, the Saab 900 4-door, 15; Buick Skylark 4-door, 15; Buick Park Avenue 4-door, 17; Saturn SW station wagon, 19; Buick LeSabre 4-door, 19; Subaru Impreza 4-door, 19; Buick Regal 4-door, 20; Ford Aerostar, 21; Ford E-150 Club Wagon, 22.
