Bloody end seen to long standoff

The Associated Press
SALT LAKE CITY — A woman who holed up in the Freeman compound in Montana for 2 1/2 months said Friday she has been betrayed by a court's child custody ruling and predicts a bloody end to the standoff.
 Gloria Ward's two children, Courtnie, 10, and Jaylynn, 8, where placed temporarily with Robert Gunn, Courtnie's father, following an emotional court hearing at which Ward pleaded that the children be left with her sister, Lynn Nielsen.
 Nielsen, of Salt Lake, had brokered the negotiations that led to Ward walking out of "Justus Township" outside Jordan, Mont., Thursday with the children and her common-law husband.
 Ward, whose decision to leave gave the FBI its first big break in the Freeman stalemate, said it was understood that when she walked out of the 960-acre compound, Nielsen would take care of the children.

 She predicted the court's contradictory ruling won't sit well with the Freeman, who have little trust of the judicial system.
 "Before today, I would have thought maybe things would end peacefully," she said. "But not anymore. Not after today."
 "They (the Freeman) see me get screwed and they know they're going to get screwed and that the law won't be

Medical account fight dooms insurance bill

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — Legislation guaranteeing access to health insurance for workers who change jobs appeared doomed Friday because of a dispute over medical savings accounts.
 House and Senate Republican leaders consulted privately throughout the day, trying to design a pilot program for such tax-deductible accounts that would be acceptable to all of them.
 But the ideas being floated were described as a "death sentence" for the bill by Democratic Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., who has been in close contact with the White House.
 "I intend to oppose it as vigorously as possible, and if it should even reach President Clinton's desk, I am confident he will give it the veto it deserves," said Kennedy.
 Sen. William Roth, R-Del., the chairman of the Finance Committee, said Kennedy's remarks "risk derailing the entire bill."
 Opponents fear that such savings accounts would be most attractive to healthy people, thereby draining their contributions from the risk pool that insures the sickest Americans. That could drive up health premiums for the people who need the most health care.
 Democrats have said they would accept a trial for tax-deductible medical savings accounts in a few states. But Republicans are suggesting a nationwide experiment that limits which employers could offer them.
 Republicans were still refining their proposal, but one idea being floated would allow employers with 50 or more workers to experiment with the accounts.

National Guard armor bangs away in live-firing exercises near Orchard

By Julie M. McKinnon
 Times-News writer
BOISE — Six years ago, 23-year-old Daniel Archuleta joined the Idaho Army National Guard as a tanker after graduating from Minico High School.
 He wanted to keep out of trouble — and have an adventure, just as the ads promised.
 After a while, Archuleta joined the regular Army, spending three of four years in Germany driving a Humvee for a company commander. The Heyburn man was back in the Mini-Cassia area a few months before re-enlisting as a part-time Guardsman.
 And, this week, Archuleta was back doing what he joined the military to do: Rolling along in a $1.5 million, 63-ton M-1A1 Abrams tank, for now leading rounds.

 "It was like I got addicted to it, so I came back in," Spc. Archuleta said Thursday, a day after his Burley-based tank company qualified in live-fire combat against computerized targets on the Orchard Training Area south of Boise.
 "I'll probably make it a career," he said. "I must admit, these things are pretty fun to ride in."
 Archuleta and 225 other part-time Magic and Wood River Valley soldiers in the 2nd Battalion of the 116th Cavalry are in the midst of their annual two-week summer training at the desert training range. Some are tankers, others serve as Humvee-driv-

Many train in Idaho area

The 138,000-acre Orchard Training Area has the National Guard's only multi-purpose range complex for training heavy equipment, such as M-1A1 Abrams tanks used in the Persian Gulf War.
 Guard members from nearly every state, as well as a couple of U.S. territories, practice on the desert training grounds 25 miles south of Boise. Armored personnel carriers and attack helicopters also can be used there.
 On Thursday, the Guard took an assortment of media people on a Black Hawk helicopter from Twin Falls to the Orchard Training Area.

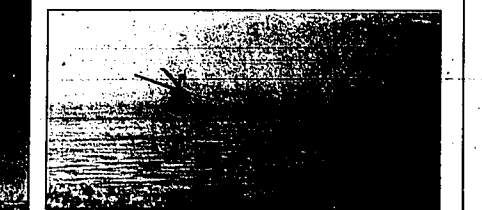

Daniel Archuleta of Heyburn returned to the Guard after a tour in the regular Army.

"We know the way they fight," said Command Sgt. Maj. Jack Keefer, who like Blunck is a full-time soldier based in Twin Falls. "I guess you could relate it to a football game: You try to out-trick them before they out-trick you."
 But not everything is even close to being a game.

Rain soaks part of parched Texas, extends into Great Lakes

The Associated Press

Rain stretched from the Gulf Coast to the Great Lakes Friday, with as much as 4 inches falling on drought-parched sections of Texas.

The heaviest rain in Texas fell overnight between Waco and Brownwood, with 3-inch downpours from Denton to Sherman.

In many parts of Texas, the rain was accompanied by wind gusting to 80 mph, hail as big as golf balls and lower temperatures.

Farmers welcomed the rain and the break from the drying heat. Said Doug Andrews, extension agent for McLennan County, Texas. The moisture came in time to benefit growers of corn, he said.

"Some was already damaged to the point of yield loss. That will not be undone," Andrews said. "But the rains that have come this week are going to complete their crop."

Clammy air aids firefighters

BIG LAKE, Alaska (AP) — Calm and clammy air Friday helped fire crews fight a huge wildfire to a standstill Friday, but a second blaze sprang up and spread rapidly in another forest 100 miles south.

About 1,200 firefighters were dumping water and hacking down trees and scrub growth to encircle the 65-square-mile fire in the Matanuska Valley about 6 miles north of Anchorage, which destroyed 299 houses and buildings, one-third of those in the fire's path.

State fire investigator Mark Barker said the fire, which blew up in every direction around the rural towns of Big Lake and Houston, acted "a lot like a tornado. One house is there and the other isn't."

With the larger fire in check, about 100 fresh reinforcements from California were diverted to the new blaze, which spread to 2,500 acres in its first day Friday in an unpopulated area of the Kenai Peninsula along the Gulf of Alaska.

But the focus remained on the earlier fire, which authorities believe was sparked by fireworks Monday.

Bulldozers and other earth-moving equipment being used to cut fire breaks lined a highway, a hundred yards from a cluster of shops that sell fireworks.

Rising humidity, still air and forecasts of rain this weekend gave firefighters hope they could contain the fire in a few days.

The fire continued to smolder in hundreds of spots, though no buildings had burned in the last two days and a haze of smoke that stretched as far as Anchorage had cleared at sunny skies.

Some of the 700 people evacuated as the fire spread saw the devastation for the first time Thursday.

The ruins of one house were coated with red fire retardant dumped from a tanker plane. A burned-out Ford truck sat in the driveway, its humpers melted onto the ground.

Freemen resume negotiations

JORDAN, Mont. (AP) — The Freeman returned to the negotiating table a day after four left their compound, and a senior official said Friday the negotiations will delay, for a while, further FBI pressure tactics.

Two Freeman joined two FBI negotiators at a card table that has stood vacant on a dirt road at the edge of the Freeman compound since May 21, when the last talks fell apart.

One was identified as Edwin Clark, widely recognized as a leader of the 17 people remaining on the sprawling ranch.

Clark had met alone with the FBI at a small country church a mile outside the compound the past two days, but this meeting took place at the entrance to what the Freeman call Justus Township.

It lasted about 30 minutes, and the Freeman returned to the compound.

The negotiating session came a day after Gloria and Elwin Ward left the compound with Ms. Ward's two children, Courtney, 10, and Jaylyn, 8. Ms. Ward was wanted on a Utah state charge of felony custodial interference, but authorities there agreed to drop the charge if she left the compound.

Some suggested the departure of the young children signaled that aggressive moves by the FBI might be in the offing. Others said the departure was a step toward a peaceful resolution of the 75-day standoff.

In Washington, a senior official said the emergence of the Wards and the children will postpone, at least temporarily, further steps by the FBI to tighten pressure on the anti-government fugitives.

The FBI wants to see what might be accomplished before turning to those pressure tactics, according to the official, who requested anonymity.

Among those steps were electronic jamming of cellular telephone, television and radio signals at the Freeman ranch "in order to generally isolate them," the official said.

Air National Guard fighter crashes; pilot safe

VALLEY SPRINGS, S.D. (AP) — An Air National Guard F-16 jet crashed into a ravine and burst into flames Friday after the pilot ejected safely, a National Guard spokeswoman said.

Col. Ron Dardis of Sioux City, Iowa, landed 1 1/2 miles from the crash site. He was flown to a hospital for observation.

Dardis and another pilot in a second F-16 were flying to Iowa to conduct maneuvers when Dardis' jet developed engine problems, said Maj. Ruth Christopherson of the Sioux Falls Air National Guard office. The National Guard was investigating the cause of the crash.

Hart joined the Guard seven years ago to get G.I. Bill benefits. "I wanted to go to college, but I'd never have the money to go to college," said 26-year-old Hart of Burley, who went to the College of Southern Idaho and now is a diesel technician at Christiansen Implement of Burley. "The only reason I was able to go was the Guard."

Nine months after Hart's first six-year tour ended, the husband and father of three re-enlisted. He missed his military family — and the money.

For every month's weekend training, Hart makes $170. "There's a lot of people who don't make that in their civilian jobs," he said.

Plus, unlike others his age, Dardis said he isn't tempted to get into trouble with guns and the law.

"We run around with guns, but we do it as a professional now," said Archuleta, who works at a Cooper Equipment in Burley.

Standoff

provided to any of them either," she said.

The well-being of the children has become a paramount concern of agents attempting to talk the Freeman out of the compound, where they have resisted numerous attempts to convince them to surrender, Colorado Sen. Charles Duke, a leader of the so-called patriot movement, who abandoned his efforts at brokering a surrender, accused the Freeman of being common criminals who were hiding behind the children.

"Of the 17 people believed left in the compound, the youngest is 16. Ward maintained that she had given her children to the FBI, but court records show that 3rd District Judge Frank Noel, at the request of Nielsen and Steve Mangum, Jaylyn's father, granted temporary custody of the children to Nielsen on May 15.

In addition, Mangum, in an affidavit filed in April, said he would not oppose a decision to drop felony child custody interference charges against Gloria Ward if it meant that his daughter would be freed from the compound.

Assistant Attorney General Craig Barlow said the offer to drop the charges was extended six weeks ago as a conciliatory gesture to the Freeman. "I never heard anything back, but I suppose we'll keep the deal," he said.

Martin Tanner, Nielsen's attorney, said that custody order played a role in the negotiations that ultimately convinced Ward to leave the Freeman compound and take the children out of harm's way.

But Friday, Noel said he has "security concerns" about Nielsen's relationship with Gloria Ward and decided the girls' interests would be best met, at least for the time being, by Gunn.

Ward did not have an attorney at the hearing and wept openly as she urged the judge to place the children with Nielsen. She also begged for visitation rights, which the judge granted providing they are supervised.

Ward walked out of the compound, accompanied by the children and her current-law husband, Elwin Ward, following extended negotiations between Nielsen, the Freeman, the FBI and an enigmatic Utah cult leader whose teachings Ward has followed.

Ward and her husband are disciples of John Perry Chaney, who is jailed in Utah on charges that he ordered his 13-year-old daughter to wed a 48-year-old apostle. Chaney, 39, is married to another of Gloria Ward's daughters, a 15-year-old who is pregnant and in foster care in Michigan.

According to Tanner, Chaney wrote a letter to the FBI in which he called Nielsen's adoption son. The letter was delivered by Nielsen.

Reed Richards, chief of the Utah attorney general's criminal division, said it contained a revelation that Ward and his family should leave the compound.

Gloria Ward said Friday "pretty much" she lets the FBI know if Freeman subscribes to Chaney's religious beliefs, adopted from early Mormon Church teachings and include polygamy and marriage of young girls as soon as they begin to menstruate.

Dole wins conservative praise with abortion stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bob Dole won conservative praise Friday for pledging to keep the Republican platform strongly anti-abortion and his call for tolerance of different views on the issue won enough support from GOP moderates to suggest Dole would escape a divisive convention fight.

Ending weeks of internal campaign debate, Dole said Thursday night he would not propose — and would not accept as GOP presidential nominee — any retreat from the current platform language calling for a constitutional amendment banning abortion.

Dole Buchanan Robertson Clinton

Dole names policy chiefs

Dole also called for a "declaration of tolerance" in the GOP platform that welcomes those with different views on abortion or other issues.

"This is not compromise, it is civility," Dole said.

Dole's statement brought a flood of reaction from politicians and activists on both sides of the issue, including praise from such disparate figures as President Clinton and Pat Buchanan, Dole's conservative GOP primary challenger.

"Anything that restores civility in this debate is a positive thing and I applaud him for it," Clinton told reporters.

But, eager not to lose his giant lead among moderate women who support abortion rights, Clinton pointedly noted: "He is in favor of a constitutional amendment to ban abortions and I am not. There is a real difference there that I don't think can be papered over."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The former Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld and former Missouri Rep. Jim Weber will serve as Bob Dole's co-policy directors, his presidential campaign announced Friday.

The pair will coordinate the work of three newly formed teams making recommendations on domestic policy, economic and trade issues, and foreign affairs and national security. In a statement, Dole called the teams "a source of ideas and strategic counsel."

Rumsfeld, 64, directed defense under President Ford, for whom the former Illinois congressman also served as White House chief of staff. He has been in private business since 1985, alternately heading a pharmaceutical company and high-technology communications firm.

Weber, 43, was earlier named to serve as Dole's liaison to the committee rewriting the platform at this summer's Republican National Convention.

In six terms in the House, he built a reputation as a solid, anti-abortion conservative and adherent to supply-side economic theory.

five base without alienating suburban swing voters who tend to favor abortion rights.

"We don't want the convention dominated by the mega talking about one issue," Dole said Friday as he campaigned in Tennessee. "We've got a lot of things we agree on."

Anti-abortion conservatives will have the most votes at the San Diego convention, and Dole pleased them by vowing to leave the 1992 platform intact. "Welcome news for the cause of life," was John Buchanan characterized Dole's pledge.

Dole clinched the Republican nomination in March, but Buchanan has withheld an endorsement, partly because he was wanting to see if Dole would try to change the anti-abortion plank.

There was some initial concern among anti-abortion leaders that Dole wanted the "declaration of tolerance" added directly to the abortion plank. But after Dole aides assured them that any "big tent" language would go into the platform preamble, most embraced Dole's statement.

Buchanan suggested preamble language that would not single out abortion. "We respect and welcome in our ranks those who may disagree with one or several of the planks of this platform — and we openly welcome them in the cause of a Republican victory in 1996."

Pa. Robertson, the Christian Coalition founder and president, also embraced Dole's idea. "The tolerance language, if it is at the preamble of the entire platform, I think it's a very good thing," Robertson said on his Christian Broadcasting Network. "That means it's a big tent, and it's a big enough party to accommodate differing points of view."

While eager not to offend Dole, however, several abortion-rights supporters said the statement did not go far enough.

California Gov. Pete Wilson and Massachusetts Gov. William Weld vowed to press ahead with efforts to rewrite the platform. Weld said it should either acknowledge both points of view on the issue or be silent on abortion.

"I don't think a throwaway line — 'We understand some people disagree with this' — would be sufficient," Weld told reporters in Boston.

But anti-abortion forces are certain to have a majority on the platform committee, and it was already uncertain whether Weld, Wilson and other abortion-rights supporters would have enough votes to force a floor debate on the platform plank.

Any such effort appeared to suffer significant damage Friday when two other moderate GOP governors, Christie Whitman of New Jersey and George Pataki of New York, applauded Dole's statement and said they hoped there would not be a divisive convention battle.

Equipment, leadership flaws draw blame for Brown crash

WASHINGTON (AP) — A warning beacon should have told the harried, behind-schedule pilots of Commerce Secretary Ron Brown's plane they were dangerously off course.

The crew flew on, unaware they lacked the equipment to properly monitor the warnings and should not have even taken off for fog-shrouded Dubrovnik, on the Croatian coast.

These errors, combined with commanders who failed to train their crews adequately and ignored tough restrictions on flying near military and civilian airports, led to the April 3 crash of Brown's CT-43A aircraft into a mountainside, the Air Force said Friday. The crash killed Brown and 34 other people.

The plane was two miles off course.

"The CT-43A accident was caused by a failure of command, air crew error, and an improperly designed instrument approach," concluded the report, prepared by a panel headed by Air Force Brig. Gen. Charles Coolidge Jr. In the absence of any one of those factors, the accident would not have happened, the report said.

In effect, the report blamed the 86th Airlift Wing commanders, the pilots of Brown's plane, and the Croatian "civilians who designed the airport's instrument landing procedures. Three senior officers with the air wing have already been relieved of command; the pilots were killed in the crash; the Croatian government protested the report's conclusions about their landing procedures.

President Clinton, a close friend of Brown's, told reporters Friday

"confirms that he is willing to make abortion illegal for most American women. No verbal window dressing will change that fact."

Of most concern to the Dole camp, however, was reaction from Republicans. And by late Friday, the consensus was that Dole had taken a giant stride toward avoiding a floor battle over abortion policy at the August Republican National Convention.

Avoiding a convention battle is something Dole maintains considers a key to maintaining enthusiastic support among the GOP's conservathat the briefing he received the night before was "a very painful, personal experience."

"I kept thinking that this peculiar mix of circumstances — if it happened, the crash might not have happened," Clinton said.

Clinton noted that some corrective steps have already been taken, with more to come. They include more training for pilots and commanders; minimum equipment requirements for military planes to handle all types of emergency situations; and a strict ban on landing at international airports deemed unsafe by the Defense Department. Defense Secretary William Perry had previously ordered a retrofit of all military passenger planes with "black box" recorders to aid investigators and with the most modern navigational devices.

A six-month investigation that produced 22 volumes of detail found that the pilots, Capt. Ashley Davis and Timothy Shafer, had mapped out a prohibited flight to Penza, Russia in neighboring Bosnia. Fixing the error in flight put them 15 minutes behind schedule and caused them to rush their approach. As it neared the runway, the plane was flying at 250 mph, roughly 90 mph faster than recommended, leaving them less time to monitor the wavering needle that was guiding them to landing.

"This kind of crew put great stock in arriving on time at a location," said a grim Gen. Ronald Fogleman, the Air Force chief of staff at a Pentagon news conference. Fogleman refused to place all the blame on the pilots but added, "Clearly it is ultimately the air crew's responsibility to flight plan and execute the mission. People who wear these wings know that from the first day they're pinned on their chest."

In addition, the pilots erred in setting their course heading into the Dubrovnik runway, according to the investigation. The mistake meant they were not compensating for a strong crosswind on the stormy day that blew them off course. They also failed to notice that their navigational system that they were drifting toward the mountainous coast.

The critical pilot error, Coolidge said, came beforehand when the crew failed to realize that an instrument landing at Dubrovnik would require a two-channel receiver to gain direction bearings that use 1930s technology. The military version of the Boeing 737 was equipped with a one-channel receiver. Knowing this, the pilots should not have taken off or Dubrovnik, he said.

Every indication at the crash site was that they had little or no warning of the approaching disaster. The plane hit the mountain wheels down, flaps up at 160 mph without yawing from its incorrect course.

Investigators did find the No. 1 engine of the aircraft at full throttle, the only indicator that the pilots saw the crash coming and tried to avoid it. According to witnesses, the plane never descended out of the "cloud" cover. It hit the 2,300-foot mountain 125 feet below the summit.

Marines investigate new officers cheating

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — The Marine Corps is investigating allegations that nine newly commissioned officers cheated on a map reading exercise, an offense that could lead to their possible expulsion from the corps.

Four administrative boards have completed their inquiries and forwarded recommendations up the chain of command, Chief Warrant Officer Bill Wright, spokesman at the Marine's training base at Quantico, said Friday.

He said the recommendations will eventually go to Gen. Charles Krulak, commandant of the Marine Corps, with a final decision being made by John Dalton, the secretary of the Navy.

Wright said five other boards have yet to complete their inquiries and forward recommendations. The board proceedings are closed, he said.

Already commissioned, the nine were undergoing the Marines' 26-week training course for new officers.

One exercise requires trainees to use basic map reading techniques to find a number of boxes in wooded areas on the base. Wright said the allegations are that the nine obtained advance information on the boxes' location.

Arson destroys N.C. sanctuary in latest of black church burnings

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Arson destroyed a 93-year-old wooden sanctuary in the 30th fire at a Southern black church in the last year and half.

Federally investigating on the scene stopped short of saying whether the fire Thursday night was related to the previous burnings.

The building, which dates to 1903, was used only to store old pews and other things on the grounds of the Matthews-Murkland Presbyterian Church. The mostly black 175-member congregation worships in a new building 100 yards away.

The church was planning to renovate the building and use it as a wedding chapel or for other community activities. It estimated the loss at $150,000.

Investigators said the fire had been set. They did not say how. "We won't say it's connected to the other fires, but we're just getting information from the scene," said Mark Logan, agent in charge for the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Meanwhile, President Clinton told reporters: "All I can tell you right now is we are working very hard to get to the bottom of this."

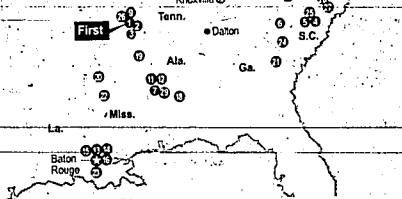

Fifty-five people have been arrested in the other fires. But authorities have said they have found no evidence of a national racist conspiracy. The church is nestled into seven acres in one of the city's most affluent and predominantly white neighborhoods.

The Rev. Larry Hill, the church's pastor, said his church had received no threats. "It's painful to see things like this still happening in 1996," he said. "Right now we're praying for genuine healing within the nation and the world."

According to a tally of cases the ATF considers "open," six black churches have burned in Tennessee, five each in Louisiana, South Carolina and Alabama, four in North Carolina, three in Mississippi, and one each in Virginia and Georgia.

Prospects that Hale will testify still muddy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prospects that President Clinton's chief accuser will testify during the Senate Whitewater Committee's final week appeared muddy Friday, though the panel's chairman said David Hale still was scheduled to appear.

Late Thursday, the committee canceled plans to question Hale, a former Arkansas banker, behind closed doors on Friday, since he is serving a 26-month sentence for defrauding the federal government through his lending company, is refusing to speak unless ordered by a court or given immunity by the committee.

A court ruling would take several weeks — time the Whitewater committee doesn't have as its 14-month investigation nears its close next Friday. The committee had subpoenaed Hale for Friday's closing interview and a public hearing next Wednesday. He has said that he would appear before the panel, but would assert his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination. A grant of limited immunity would mean his Senate testimony could not be used against him in other cases.

Committee Democrats, who say they also want to hear Hale's testimony, continue to balk at granting him immunity on grounds he would use it to manipulate the panel and escape further prosecutions. A state prosecutor in Arkansas has disclosed he plans to charge Hale by July 16 with stealing $150,000 from a burial insurance company he controlled.

"The committee is continuing to explore options to obtain Mr. Hale's very important testimony," 16 chairman, Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., said Friday in a statement. D'Amato said he decided to cancel Hale's private appearance Friday because the Democrats had rejected his proposal to get a legal expert's opinion on Hale's Fifth Amendment claim, as a way to get him to testify before the committee goes out of business on June 14.

Nonetheless, D'Amato said, Hale still was scheduled to testify at the hearing next Wednesday.

D'Amato noted that Hale reaffirmed Thursday, in a letter from his attorney, that he would not testify without a grant of immunity. He said he would ask the panel to vote on Tuesday to grant Hale immunity so that he could testify publicly the next day.

But D'Amato already has failed in such a bid. When he asked the committee this week to approve a grant of immunity, he failed to muster at least two Democratic votes needed to secure two-thirds approval for such a move.

David Carle, a spokesman for the committee Democrats, had no immediate comment on D'Amato's statements Friday.

On Thursday, the Democrats rejected D'Amato's proposal to ask a legal expert to determine whether Hale should be forced to testify without a grant of limited immunity.

D'Amato has wanted Hale to testify about a $300,000 loan made by his federally-backed lending company to Susan McDougal in 1986. Hale testified last month in a federal trial of Ms. McDougal, her former husband, James McDougal, and Arkansas Gov. Jim Guy Tucker that Clinton, then Arkansas' governor, had pressured him to make the loan.

Clinton testified by videotaped deposition in the same trial that he had never talked with Hale about money. The McDougals, who owned the failed Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan, and the Clintons were partners in the Whitewater real estate venture.

Limited immunity would have no bearing on Hale's current government, and he would still be subject to perjury charges if he lied to the committee. Moreover, any existing evidence already accumulated against him or any evidence gathered without assistance from his testimony also still could be used — most notably in the state case.

Navajos flock to site of sacred visitation, but many question the meaning of rite

BIG MOUNTAIN, Ariz. (AP) — By Cadillac and by pickup truck, by four bus and by motorcycle, the people keep coming, turning off the reservation highway and bumping down 13 miles of rocky dirt road.

Thousands of Navajos have made a pilgrimage to this desert community since May 5, when a 96-year-old woman said she was visited by two tribal gods in the form of old Navajo men.

Yet even as Navajos flock to the site, sometimes waiting hours for a glimpse of Irene Yazzie's rundown hogan, there is widespread disagreement about how authentic the visitation was. The debate rages at trading posts and diners, where people eat mutton stew and fried bread under tarps and gossip in the dying Navajo language. "To some, the visit is a clear message — Navajos are in grave danger if they continue to forsake their traditions. The deities, it is said, warned that drought, poverty and rampant alcoholism on the reservation are all proof of the danger. But some suspect the story was concocted to scare Navajos to return to their traditions, a tale like that of the white-buffalo-held sacred by the Plains Indians.

And some suggest the visitation was dreamed up to give the area a sacred aura and thereby boost the Navajos' claim to the land. The land is at a center of a bitter battle between the Hopi and the Navajo tribes. The grounds were declared Hopi land by Congress in 1974, but about 250 Navajo families still live there. "If it was really sacred, it should have been closed just to the medicine men," said Bessie McCabe, a 47-year-old Navajo. She sheepishly admitted visiting the pilgrimage site "mostly out of curiosity."

Clinton defends record on gays

WASHINGTON (AP) — Threatened with protests in San Francisco, President Clinton declared Friday he's done more for gays than any other president but won't relax his opposition to homosexual marriages.

"I can't change that position," Clinton said. "I have no intention of changing it."

Clinton's stand on same-sex marriages has riled many in San Francisco's large gay community, prompting Mayor Willie Brown to suggest that Clinton cancel a visit Sunday to avoid possible backlashes. Clinton is to visit the Presidio and attend a fund-raiser at the home of Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif.

Clinton said he would not change his travel plans. "I don't think any president has ever been more sensitive to the fundamental human concerns or the legitimate interests of gay Americans than I have. And I have been roundly criticized for it in many quarters," he said.

Indeed, press secretary Mike McCurry was confronted with questions about whether the White House was trying to stir up gay protests — or had encouraged Brown to make his warning public — in order to slow Clinton in a more centrist political position. "Absolutely not," McCurry responded. Homosexuals were an important constituency for Clinton in the 1992 race, voting overwhelmingly for him and contributing $2.5 million to his campaign.

In San Francisco, rumors of an anti-Clinton protest continued to circulate Friday.

San Francisco supervisor Tom Amiano, who is gay, said that he wouldn't be surprised if there were protests, but that he would not organize them. He suggested that Clinton sit down with representatives of the gay and lesbian community to discuss same-sex marriage.

Clinton spoke at a Rose Garden news conference in which he also underscored his "strong differences" with Republican rival Bob Dole on another contentious social issue: abortion. Dole supports a constitutional amendment banning abortion; Clinton opposes the amendment and supports a woman's right to have an abortion.

A few words of advice for new clerics

Thousands of new clergy people will be graduating from the seminaries of our land in the next few weeks, many of them to serve as parish pastors for the first time.

In my capacity as a friendly mentor to young clergy, I want to give them some advice. Sure, it's fun being a parish pastor, but there are a few things you should know as you head out to take over St. John's by the gas station and turn it into a fervent community for your Lord.

I must admit, I got some of these suggestions from a four-page newsletter called the Parish Chute, a publication of the Association for Battered Clergy. They reprinted it from the newsletter of the East Central Synod of Wisconsin of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America.

Faith today
Clark Morphey

First, beware of those who meet you at the bus or train or however you get your parish. There is one reason people want to be the first to meet the new person—it's all about control and power. They want something from you. Always treat these people with patience and kindness. Listen to their complaints very carefully—they're really trying to tell you about their needs.

Second, when you enter the sanctuary for the first time, you will notice the American flag is either hanging or standing next to the altar. The first thought that might pop into your mind is moving it to the back of the church where it belongs. DON'T.

I remember moving an American flag from an altar. I moved it Saturday evening when no one was around. I figured no one would notice; they would see it at the back corner of the sanctuary as they left worship and think it looked OK stuck back there.

On Monday the flag had been moved back to the altar. I moved it again on a Saturday evening. On Monday, yep, back on the altar. So I asked my secretary whether she was moving it. She was not. The mystery continued and the little tug-of-war lasted several weeks until the phantom flag mover finally gave up.

Third, any time a parishioner completes a big task, a building-committee chairperson, for instance, make a public display of thanking them. And don't just say thanks. Make a big deal of it. Call the faithful one by one and give her a bouquet of flowers. Or give him a little plaque that will say a thousand times how much you appreciated the work he did.

Fourth, make a big fuss on Mother's Day and a little less fuss on Father's Day. If your congregation can afford to buy flowers for every mother, you will be a saint in hundreds of hearts. Give an extra flower to the oldest mother, the youngest, the mother with the most children and of course, the mother who traveled the farthest to be with her children.

When Father's Day rolls around, have the fathers stand and be recognized, but don't give them flowers. Instead read passages from the Old Testament book of Proverbs and preach a little sermon about fatherhood—three minutes tops.

Fifth, a few years ago I wrote a column about Christmas carols, calling on congregations to avoid Christmas hymns until the true liturgical season. Don't start singing carols in Advent, I told my faithful readers.

Big mistake. I got more mail on that one flub than I would normally get in half a dozen columns.

Pastors refused to speak to me on the street. One kindly clergyman refused to shake my hand as I left worship.

Make no mistake, the people want their carols and they want them during Advent.

Finally, don't mess with worship. Don't change anything.

You may be able to add some things to the service, but don't omit anything. If you want contemporary sounds, add them to the traditional service.

If you want an entire contemporary service, add it to the list of services already available. But don't omit a service, because you will likely be taking a walk to a new congregation.

There is, some friendly advice from your friendly mentor. Heed it and be happy.

Clark Morphey is an ordained clergyman and is religion writer for the Saint Paul Pioneer Press, 345 Cedar St., St. Paul MN 55101.

Armed with a Bible and a gun

Jerome County deputy insists spreading God's word is his real career

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — A German-born Jerome man wears a clergy robe and the uniform of a deputy sheriff, but he insists that he has only one job.

The Rev. Baldwin Camin, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church and a Jerome County reserve deputy sheriff, says his philosophy is that law enforcement is the job of both a preacher and a cop, because, "Gott hat uns alle als Suender erkannt, deshalb hat er seinen Sohn, Jesus uns gegeben, uns aus der Suennde zu retten."

Translation: "God has concluded that we are all sinners, so He gave His son, Jesus, to redeem us from sin."

He continued, "It's my job to get out into the world and let people know this."

Born in Helmstedt, Germany, on the Western border between East and West Germany, Baldwin Camin was the only son of Albert and Emmi Camin. After spending many years in a Russian prison camp, Albert Camin was released and started a nursery business with greenhouses and hotbeds. In 1952, a massive hailstorm smashed the glass in the greenhouses and destroyed the hotbeds, leaving the family heavily in debt and unable to rebuild the business.

"We were stone broke, in absolute bankruptcy," Camin said.

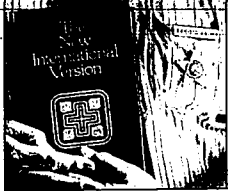

The family gave what little they could salvage and all their household goods to "the tax people and the people we owed."

But America loomed on the horizon for the German family.

A friend who had immigrated to the United States found a New Jersey company needing someone with gardening skills and contacted the Camins. They packed what few possessions they had and took a ship to America.

"I was just a kid, but I walked off that boat in the New York City harbor with everything I had under one arm — a few pieces of clothing and an old family picture," the Baldwin Camin said.

In America, the hardworking Camin family rebuilt. The only child received a good education and became a Lutheran minister.

'I will say a gun is not my favorite tool. The Bible is. I asked a prisoner one time if it bothered him that I carried a gun and his quick reply was, "No, it's just part of your uniform," which gave me a new perspective of it all.'

— The Rev. Baldwin Camin, Jerome County reserve deputy

Speaking fluent high German, he has used his dual language abilities as a German preaching minister in Indiana and Washington state. He conducted worship services for German war brides whose husbands were stationed at Ft. Lewis, Wash.

"I don't preach in German here in Jerome, but I do hang around with a German music group called Alpenpieler," Camin said. "As far as I know, this is the only semi-authentic German band in the Magic Valley."

The group plays at care centers, private parties, festivals and other community events.

Being a preacher and a deputy sheriff have a lot in common, Camin contends, noting that both care about people, deal very specifically with the application of the law and the Gospel and identify good and bad and then do something about it.

To qualify as a reserve deputy sheriff,

When the Rev. Baldwin Camin isn't pastoring at St. Paul's Lutheran Church, he works in law enforcement as a Jerome County reserve deputy. Camin also wears the badge of chaplain for the department.

Camin had to complete law enforcement training, and he must spend at least 10 hours a month as a deputy, a job that pays $5 per hour.

"Sometimes I spend a lot more than 10 hours a month, it all depends on accidents and things like that," Camin said.

He recalled assisting a driver and children involved in an accident and then having to drive the ambulance to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center so the EMT's could attend to a severely injured child during the trip.

He also recalled responding to a domestic conflict call where a weapon was involved in the altercation, requiring the assistance of several other deputies.

"It was pretty risky, but we were able to get it all straightened out," Camin said. "My congregation is generally very supportive of my work. However, you might say, they are of two opinions. Some say we need to be out there with the world. One is convinced I am totally out of line because I carry a gun."

He continued, "I will say a gun is not my favorite tool. The Bible is. I asked a prisoner one time if it bothered him that I carried a gun and his quick reply was, 'No, it's just part of your uniform,' which gave me a new perspective of it all."

The minister and wife, Janet, are the parents of three sons. Timothy, 26, is a graduate of the University of Washington who speaks fluent Japanese and will soon marry a Japanese lady, Jonathan, 25, a graduate of the same university, wants to be a police officer, but presently works for an electronics assembly plant in Marysville, Wash.

Marc, 19, is a dispatcher with the Jerome County Sheriff Department and a student at the College of Southern Idaho.

This month, Baldwin Camin will make a trip to Concordia Theological Seminary in Fort Wayne, Ind., to receive his doctorate degree in ministering.

New Liverpool archbishop steps into controversy

The Associated Press

LONDON — Along with his miter, Britain's newest Roman Catholic archbishop takes on a slew of troubles, most notably a church divided and shrinking in Liverpool, home of the nation's biggest Catholic flock.

Pope John Paul II recently appointed Bishop Patrick Kelly as archbishop of the gritty northern port city, where attendance at Mass is dwindling and crime is rising.

Liberals and traditionalists alike welcomed the appointment of the archbishop, but by a narrow margin, an orthodox theologian with an imaginative, personal approach to congregants.

"Patrick Kelly will hold the church together, not by avoiding issues, but by meeting them head-on," said Catholic writer and commentator Bill Oddy, a leading traditionalist.

Peter Stanford, a commentator from the church's liberal wing, said Kelly "has the wit and imagination to heal divisions." He said the new archbishop "pioneered work with divorced and separated Catholics when it was not popular to do so."

A headline on Kelly's appointment in the next issue of The Catholic Herald will read, "Right place, right man, right time," said acting editor Harry Coen.

In April, the independent-minded Kelly touched a raw nerve when Liverpool-born novelist Alice Thomas Ellis wrote a column attacking Kelly's liberal predecessor, Derek Worlock, who forged close links with the Anglican state church.

The traditionalist Ellis accused Worlock of diluting the Catholic faith and blamed him for dwindling church attendances. The city, with its strong Patrick Kelly was appointed by the pope as Archbishop of Liverpool in Britain.

Irish Catholic minority, once was Britain's powerhouse of Catholicism.

Clergy and bishops rallied to the memory of Worlock, who died in February, saying that prominent Catholics demanded the pope intervene.

Ellis applauded Kelly's appointment, saying it would bring the church in Liverpool "back a bit to a more faithful mode of Catholicism."

Church figures show Liverpool has 540,000 Catholics, yet attendance at Sunday Mass fell from 114,000 in 1993 to a little over 100,000 last year.

Idaho churches feel fire of guns-in-church debate

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The subject of guns is exploding inside the hallowed walls of several Utah churches — and Idaho church leaders are starting to feel the backfire.

The controversy erupted when Utah public safety officials began discussing whether or not the state's concealed-weapons law precludes schools, churches and private businesses from forbidding permit holders to carry weapons on their premises, according to Associated Press wire stories.

The notion of guns in churches caught many religious leaders off guard, with no official policies among most church groups.

But this week the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints issued a brief statement on the subject: Guns are not welcome in Mormon houses of worship.

"Churches are dedicated for the worship of God and as heavens from the care and concerns of the world," said the statement, which grew out of discussions by Apostles Neal A. Maxwell, M. Russell Ballard, and Joseph B. Wirthlin. "The carrying of lethal weapons, concealed or otherwise, within their walls is inappropriate, except as required by officers of the law."

On the local front, Twin Falls Stake President Monte Carlson agreed.

"I don't want any guns around my kids or where I am worshipping," he said, "but it's a sad day when the church has to issue a statement. It's a bad commentary on today's society."

Other local church leaders voiced similar feelings.

"I can't imagine church being a place where people want to protect themselves," said M. L. Glatz, pastor of Twin

Blockbuster drops gun ban

The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Blockbuster Entertainment has abandoned its attempt to ban guns from its 3,300 video stores across the nation.

Meanwhile, in the wake of a Mormon Church statement opposing guns in houses of worship, Utah's governor and legislative leaders are talking about amending the state's controversial 1995 concealed-weapons law.

The law made it easier to obtain a concealed weapons permit. But some have interpreted a provision of the law as precluding schools, churches and private businesses from forbidding permit-holders to carry weapons on their premises.

Blockbuster was the only major retailer in Utah known to have attempted to prohibit gun toasters.

It has quietly removed the signs prohibiting firearms, but denies the reversal stemmed from a pro-gun lobbying campaign that included the threat of a boycott.

Catholics mull cremation in funeral rites

The Associated Press

No one is saying they should scatter the ashes of deceased family members into the ocean. And Catholics still should forget about keeping the remains in a jar on a fireplace mantle.

But a committee of Catholic bishops says Catholics should no longer have to leave the cremated remains of a loved one outside in the hearses during a funeral Mass.

In an action that addresses one of the most profound mysteries of the Christian faith — how human beings receive eternal life after death — the bishops' Committee on the Liturgy is urging the church to appeal to the Vatican to lift the ban on bringing the ashes of the deceased into church.

This is a faith that distinguished itself from pagan Roman culture in its earliest days by its practice of burying rather than cremating the dead. Now, as a result of changes in American culture, it is being asked to reconsider its insistence on the presence of the body at funeral Masses.

Even the discussion reflects an evolving attitude among many people in the news who no longer assume an intact body is the best preparation for resurrection.

"If the Lord can resurrect a body, he can certainly get all the parts back together again," says Monsignor Alan Detscher, director of the Secretariat for the Liturgy.

The committee's proposal will be presented to the National Council of Catholic Bishops at its spring meeting June 20-22 in Portland, Ore. Cremation was forbidden in the Catholic Church until 1963, when allowances were made for the practice in cases of necessity as long as cremation was not chosen as a sign denying belief in the resurrection of the dead.

Today, however, cremation has become more common. In 1990, 17 percent of Catholic funerals involved cremation of the body, and the percentage is expected to rise to more than one in five by 2000. The reasons for cremation are not theological, but primarily economic, according to church officials.

It is cheaper to cremate a body immediately rather than pay for the casket and other related costs for viewing a body in a funeral home.

When older people die in another state, it is also less expensive to have their remains cremated rather than have their bodies brought back for the funeral Mass in their hometown.

The Rev. William Rusch, director of the Office of Liturgical Practices of the National Council of Churches, said in most mainline Protestant churches permitting the ashes inside at a funeral service would not even be an issue.

And the Catholic Church in Canada and three regional dioceses in the United States already have received permission from the Vatican to allow the practice.

World, religion-filled with false prophets

In the Bible, in Luke 6:26, Jesus said, "Woe unto you, when all men shall speak well of you. For so did their fathers to the false prophets." Today, things are pretty much the same. The world is full of false prophets when it comes to prophecies, and some are even given medals for their service.

Some of the better religions are the ones that help the living, for the Bible states, "The dead recall not anything" (Ecclesiastes 9:5). Jesus also said, "God is not the God of the dead but of the living" (Matthew 22:32).

Suicide bombers who believe they will be rewarded for their deeds give us just one good example of what is wrong with many religions. WILLIAM HAFNER

Assembly of God Church in Twin Falls, did confront the situation once.

"I asked the individual never to bring the gun back again," he said. "If I became aware of it, I would try to the individual and try to find out why he feels the need to carry a gun to church."

At least one Utah pastor holds a different opinion. "I wonder why there would be a problem with it, unless they don't trust those in their congregation who carry arms," Thomas Korkish, pastor of the Anchor Baptist Church, was quoted as saying in an Associated Press story.

He added that he suspects the issue is being raised by the liberal clergy.

And Scott Engen, spokesman for the Utah Shooting Sports Council, called the Mormon church statement "difficult and disappointing."

He said, "Devoted members of the church who have chosen to take the responsibility for providing for their own safety lawfully and legally are forced by this church edict to choose between their adherence to church policy and their ability to provide for their lawful self-protection."

Meanwhile, Utah Department of Public Safety Commissioner Doug Bodero fears a broad interpretation of the state's concealed-weapons law could nullify existing bans on weapons in schools and erode the ability of church and business leaders to keep their domains gun-free.

Senior Lieutenant Ike Maxson of the Twin Falls Sheriff Department shared similar concerns. "If you are on personal property, you might be able to tell people you can't bring in a concealed weapon," he said, "but somebody might challenge it."

Maxson heard that, in the state of California, several counties and cities have passed ordinances that prohibit carrying concealed weapons in public places. But, Idaho State 18302-C only adds prohibitive conduct.

Most people interpret that to mean you can't take a gun into a courthouse or school, Maxson said.

There are 26,972 holders of concealed-weapons licenses in Idaho, according to Bob Taylor of Criminal Identification in Meridian. Approximately 728 of those are in Twin Falls County.

Utah has approximately 10,000 holders of concealed-weapons permits.

attorney, Robin Riggs, met privately Tuesday with National Rifle Association lobbyists who maintain Utah's concealed-weapons law guarantees the license-holders access to churches, schools and private businesses.

Riggs then briefed the governor and Public Safety Commissioner Doug Bodero, who has argued in favor of giving church and school leaders authority to regulate firearms on their premises.

After the meeting, Leavitt indicated he would support a clarification in Utah's concealed-weapons law, but would not specify what changes he will seek.

Rep. Michael Waddoups, R-Bennion, who sponsored the law, said he may support a change allowing churches to decide whether permit-holders may bring their weapons to church.

"That makes sense to me — it is private property," he said Tuesday.

Scott Engen of the Utah Shooting Sports Council was quoted Tuesday in a copyright story in the Salt Lake Tribune as saying his organization and the National Rifle Association will consider all means to change the bill, including possible litigation.

Job growth makes White House happy

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — The economy added twice as many jobs as had been expected last month, a surge that brought smiles to the White House but made Wall Street nervous.
The Labor Department said Friday that business payrolls grew by 348,000 in May, marking the fourth straight month of strong job gains.
The job strength attracted a flood of new entrants into the labor market, coming at the same time that recent college graduates and student summer workers normally begin seeking jobs. This nudged the unemployment rate up to 5.6 percent.
The May survey of business payrolls showed an increase of 348,000, the second biggest gain in the past two years. The government also dramatically revised upward its 2,000-worker increase for April job growth.

President Clinton, happy about strong job growth in an election year, insisted that the economy was "steady and strong" without any signs of overheating.
"There is no evidence of inflation in today's economy," Clinton said at a Rose Garden event called to highlight the strong job growth.
Addressing market fears about imminent Fed rate hikes, Clinton said, "if they see that we are producing this level of job growth with no inflation, then I would think the interest rates should stay down."
Stocks and bonds both plunged after the initial release of the unemployment report. Bond prices took their worst drubbing in three months with falling demand pushing the yield on Treasury's 30-year bond, a key benchmark for long-term borrowing costs, up to 7.07 percent.
However, stocks recovered from a drop that at one point had pushed the Dow Jones industrial average down by 85 points. In late trading, the Dow rose nearly 30 points.
Many private economists said the bond market was correct to fear imminent Fed rate hikes, arguing that the latest unemployment report has now tipped the scales to one or possibly two quarter-point increases this autumn.
Some economists worried openly that the economy might be in a boom-bust cycle where the Fed will have to slam on the brakes so hard to fight inflation that doing so would run the risk of tossing the country into a recession.
But Labor Secretary Robert Reich discounted those fears and said all signs pointed to solid growth and more jobs.
Many private economists said they believed the economy was growing at an annual rate of 3.5 percent to 4 percent in the current quarter, far higher than last year's anemic 2 percent pace.

Union Pacific derails Conrail bid for Southern Pacific

The Associated Press
SAN FRANCISCO — Union Pacific, which hopes to acquire Southern Pacific Rail Corp. and create the nation's largest railroad, Friday rejected Conrail's $1.9 billion offer to buy major portions of Southern Pacific.
"The Southern Pacific is not for sale," said Drew Lewis, chairman and CEO of Union Pacific.
Conrail's plan "would wreck" the improved rail services that the Union Pacific Southern Pacific and Burlington Northern Santa Fe will deliver throughout the South Central region of the country, Lewis said in a letter to David LaVan, chairman and CEO of Conrail.
The Conrail proposal also would harm the public by forcing shippers to rely on inferior service using two-carrier interline routes, Lewis said.
There was no immediate response from Conrail, which on Wednesday raised its bid by almost 27 percent for Southern Pacific's Eastern lines. At that time, San Francisco-based Southern Pacific said the offer still was inadequate.
Bethlehem, Pa.-based Union Pacific faces mounting federal opposition to its $5.4 billion attempt to acquire Southern Pacific.
The Department of Justice on Monday asked the Surface Transportation Board, which has responsibility for approving the merger, to deny it outright because the plan would hurt consumers, farmers and exporters.

Yeltsin's spending spree raises questions

Pro-Yeltsin supporters demonstrate in favor of Pres. Boris Yeltsin in front of the communist-party dominated parliament building in central Moscow. Yeltsin and communist leader Gennady Zyuganov are caught up in a tight race for the presidency.

MOSCOW (AP) — Boris Yeltsin reached into the ranks of Russia's backyard gardeners Friday with promises of everything from seeds to police protection for potato patches.

While he was at it, he promised teachers and health workers a raise.

The decrees were just the latest lavish promises in a re-election shopping spree that has alarmed even Yeltsin's own financial officials and stolen the populist thunder from his Communist rival.

No one knows just how much the president's campaign pledges will cost, but even the most conservative estimates run in the billions of dollars.

If Yeltsin tries to make good on everything he's promised after the June 16 election — something few expect him to do — it could bust the budget and derail the free-market reforms his administration has championed since the 1991 Soviet collapse.

"There's no way he can deliver on all these promises," said political analyst Michael McFaul.

That doesn't stop the president, who's in a tight race with Communist leader Gennady Zyuganov. Everywhere he goes, he's got goodies to hand out.

"I've come with full pockets," a beaming Yeltsin said when he arrived in the Arctic mining city of Yuzovka on a recent campaign trip. He gave a car to a coal miner on the spot.

Yeltsin's campaign platform calls for higher wages, bigger pensions, more welfare benefits, housing loans, job subsidies, more unemployment benefits. And

Sailors vote Police train to prevent violence

VLADIVOSTOK, Russia (AP) — Sailors and fishermen in the Russian Far East who will be at sea during Russia's presidential election June 16 have begun casting their ballots.

A total of 213 polling stations have been set up on ships to accommodate about 13,000 sailors, fisherman and research scientists in the Far East who won't be on shore on the official polling day, the ITAR-Tass news agency said.

Most of the rest of the Russian electorate will cast their ballots on June 16. The main candidates for president are the incumbent, Boris Yeltsin, and his Communist challenger, Gennady Zyuganov.

Meanwhile, riot police in the region have begun a special training course to prevent election disturbances.

Police are training in a local sports stadium in Vladivostok to learn how to guard polling stations and parties' campaign headquarters, ITAR-Tass said.

Communist and hard-line candidates are expected to do well in the Far East, and police want to be ready for possible riots.

Alexander Vasilyev, the head of the police in the Russian Far East, told ITAR-Tass he had received an order from the Interior Ministry to mount extra police patrols during the vote.

stretched to the limit, even with the help of the International Monetary Fund, which approved a $10 billion loan for Russia. The deficit is rising and revenues are only 65-70 percent of what was anticipated.

"The effect of the elections on the economy turned out to be much worse than I personally had expected," a glum Economics Minister Vyevgeny Yasin said this week.

The president is casting his net wide as he tries to pay for at least some of this, going so far as to order the Central Bank this week to give up some of its strategic reserves. The Central Bank, fearing a return to hyperinflation and a threat to its independence, is protesting the order. The move also could jeopardize the IMF loan, which strictly forbids direct bank financing of the budget deficit.

It's not clear whether Yeltsin's promises — even those that the government is already paying out, like back wages — are actually winning him any votes. People regard wages as their rightful due, not a gift, and many suspect the largesse will end after the election.

"People don't have great expectations," Anatoly Bogreyev, a teacher in Volgograd, said during Yeltsin's recent campaign trip to the southern city.

But even skeptics say the president might be showing that he now cares about the economic plight of the millions who have suffered through four years of halting reforms.

"At least he has put these things on the agenda," McFaul said.

that's just the tip of the iceberg.

Among other things, Yeltsin has promised a costly all-volunteer army, free vacations for kids living in the Arctic, bigger student stipends and debt relief, tax breaks and price supports for farmers. He also promised $10,000 for a convert, $20,000 for a Muslim cultural center, $2 million for a college library, $26 million to the coal industry, $560 million to the defense industry and $3.2 billion to rebuild southern Chechnya.

While many of Yeltsin's promises will undoubtedly wither after the election, some of the bills are already coming due.

already coming due.

The government has spent more than $16 billion in the first three months of the year to catch up with overdue wages — and it still owes more. On Monday, it will begin compensating people for savings lost to inflation after prices were freed in 1992.

Bank officials say the first payouts in Moscow alone will cost the government more than $250 million. And that's just for next year, the age of 80. In theory, Yeltsin's decree will eventually apply to everyone in Russia.

But the budget is already

Former Soviet Republics warily watch Russian campaign

KIEV, Ukraine (AP) — On a recent train ride through western Ukraine, the piped-in music suddenly switched from Western pop to the Soviet anthem.

A few passengers laughed. Others fell uncomfortably silent. "That was a joke," a Ukrainian professor reassured his daughter. "Was it?" asked a passing waiter.

These Ukrainians — like tens of millions of people in the former Soviet republics hugging Russia's vast borders — are keeping a nervous eye on the presidential campaign next door. Most are hoping hard that Communist leader Gennady Zyuganov doesn't defeat President Boris Yeltsin.

Regardless of how the propaganda painted it, the Soviet Union was a Russian creation. Many Russians, nostalgic for the days of Soviet power and economically scarred by market reforms, are pining for its resurrection.

But few people in the other former republics want a return to the Soviet Union, which collapsed in 1991 with its former components becoming independent nations.

No one can predict what a Communist victory in June 16 elections would bring Russia's neighbors, but speculation is rampant about a return to the uglier aspects of Soviet rule — annexation, labor camps, censorship.

"Boris Yeltsin is the only guarantor of further democratic reforms in all countries of the post-Soviet space," said Georgian President Eduard Shevardnadze. Zyuganov insists he would not force any of the former republics into a new union. But his rhetoric is rich with the gospel of Russian greatness, and many fear his more hard-line deputies would waste little time in pushing for more control over former satellite states.

"Everyone knows what will happen, but no one wants to talk about it. There will be nationalization and chaos," said Nurbulat Masanov, a political scientist in Kazakhstan, a former Soviet republic in central Asia.

This apprehension prompted an unprecedented show of unity among leaders of the Commonwealth of Independent States; the loose coalition of all the former republics except the Baltic states. The leaders last month announced their "firm and unanimous support" for Yeltsin.

"Without question, the lesser evil for Ukraine is a Yeltsin victory," said Ukrainian lawmaker Ivan Zayats, deputy head of the nationalist party Rukh.

The only CIS member to express reluctance at supporting Yeltsin was Belarus, where President Alexander Lukashenko has championed new alliances with Moscow.

Belarusians, eager for salvation from post-Soviet economic woes, have largely supported the moves.

Russia's Communist-led lower house of parliament passed a resolution in March demanding the restoration of the Soviet Union. The vote carried no legal weight but provoked an outcry in the other 14 former Soviet republics. On Wednesday, the same body voted on whether to demand that Ukraine and Kazakhstan turn over "traditionally Russian territories," but the proposal fell short of the votes needed for passage.

Despite the fears, some leaders in the former Soviet republics are keeping cool about the race, at least officially.

The tiny Baltic states, loath to associate themselves with Moscow, insist that Russia's revived Communists don't pose a threat to their Western-oriented policies and economies.

"The impact (of the elections) would be the same as on the European Union," Estonian President Lennart Meri said. "Security is indivisible, and Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia are part of Europe."

In former Soviet central Asia, many people fear that a Zyuganov regime would stimulate the authoritarian tendencies of the region's own leaders.

"If the Communists win, they will limit freedom of expression ... which will be welcomed by our political circles," said Natalia Ablova, director of the Kyrgyz-American Bureau on Human Rights in Kyrgyzstan.

While most people in the former Soviet republics appear to favor Yeltsin, most of the 25 million ethnic Russians living in neighboring countries are plugging for Zyuganov.

Many feel resentful — and in some cases, persecuted — by their new governments, and forgotten by post-Soviet Moscow.

"Kazakhstan used to be a country for all," said Ivan Shegolkhin, an ethnic Russian lawmaker in Kazakhstan, where there are almost as many ethnic Russians as Kazaks. "After independence it became a country for Kazaks."

Pockets of Zyuganov support also appear among his ideological brethren in neighboring states.

Panteleimon Georgadze, chairman of the United Communist Party of Georgia, backs his Russian counterpart.

"Integration must be promoted," he said, "so that we may become once again an almost single country."

Cali confesses to drug trafficking charges

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — The leader of the world's most powerful drug cartel has confessed to charges of drug trafficking in return for a reduced sentence.

Gilberto Rodriguez Orejuela, 57, head of the Cali drug cartel, will be sentenced in coming weeks, the prosecutor's office said Friday. Drug trafficking carries a prison term of 18 to 24 years, but Rodriguez Orejuela is expected to get three to four years less because of his confession. He can also get time off for good behavior in prison.

The Cali kingpin, admitted in a deposition Thursday that he shipped 1,650 pounds of cocaine to the United States in 1982 and 1983.

"I accept responsibility for the charges leveled against me," he told prosecutors, according to radio and newspaper reports. He has been cooperating with authorities since shortly after his arrest last June.

Under Colombian law, confessing to charges preempts the need for a trial, and a case goes directly to a judge for sentencing.

Five other charges of drug trafficking and illegal enrichment are pending against Rodriguez Orejuela. The prosecutor's office said that if he is convicted of those charges any sentences would be served concurrently.

1 arrested, others sought for nuclear smuggling

MUNICH, Germany (AP) — A nuclear engineer has been arrested on charges of smuggling about six pounds of radioactive uranium into Germany, and authorities across Europe are seeking suspected accomplices.

Prosecutor Dieter Emrich said Friday that the 49-year-old Slovakian man was arrested May 29 in a bank in the southern city of Ulm, about 50 miles east of Stuttgart.

The engineer and an unidentified accomplice had opened a safe deposit box there to store the uranium, Emrich said. The arrest came one day after police in Germany were tipped that the engineer had offered to sell the material to a contact in Austria for $11 million.

The material consisted of 63 ounces of uranium dioxide and about 34 ounces of uranium pellets, which Emrich said was packaged in lead containers and a travel bag deposited in the bank vault.

Neither the smugglers nor bank employees were exposed to radioactivity.

The material is being examined to determine if there was enough material to construct a nuclear bomb.

Part of the uranium is believed to be from a commercial heavy water nuclear reactor in the former Soviet Union, Emrich said.

Netanyahu's adviser: We'll make peace, but not too hastily

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister-elect Benjamin Netanyahu wants a final peace agreement with the Palestinians but won't be pressured to complete it by existing deadlines, a top aide said Friday.

"You have to have a realistic pace. Anyone who negotiates the gun to his head reaches a bad agreement," Netanyahu's foreign policy adviser, Dore Gold, told The Associated Press.

Israel and the Palestinians

began negotiations on the final status of the West Bank, Gaza Strip and Jerusalem last month, and have committed to signing an agreement by May 1999.

Israeli media reported Friday that Netanyahu's team has drafted policy guidelines calling for the new government to expand Jewish settlements. The draft ruled out a Palestinian state, a division of Jerusalem between Jews and Palestinians, and a withdrawal from the Golan Heights captured from Syria in the 1967 Mideast War.

The document defines the Jordan River as Israel's eastern border, says Israel will maintain control over West Bank water resources and gives Israeli security forces freedom of operation in the entire area, one-third of which is under Palestinian control.

Palestinian leaders expressed worries Friday about such hard-line positions.

"If this is the direction the new government is headed, it certainly has set itself an impossible task," said Palestinian legislator Hanan Ashrawi.

"I don't see how it can reconcile peace with expanding Jewish settlements, with refusing the creation of a Palestinian state and with keeping Jerusalem," Ashrawi said.

Netanyahu aides said Friday that any decision on the government guidelines would be made next week, and that several drafts were circulating.

"A significant expansion of the 144 Jewish settlements in the West Bank and Gaza would likely cause an immediate crisis between Israel and the Palestinians."

In his first public dispute with Netanyahu this week, PLO leader Yasser Arafat said that the creation of a Palestinian state with Jerusalem as its capital was inevitable, despite Netanyahu's objections.

Gold said Friday that Arafat's statement was unfortunate; but that it would be a mistake to engage in tough rhetoric. "Now is the time for all parties to be constructive, to keep confidence," he said.

5 arrested in London bombing

LONDON (AP) — Police and soldiers hunting the bombers who shattered an IRA cease-fire arrested four men Friday in rural Northern Ireland. Another man was picked up in London.

The men were arrested during dawn raids on farm buildings in South Armagh, near Northern Ireland's border with the Irish Republic.

Anti-terrorist officers seized parts of trucks stored in farm buildings, trying to trace a flatbed truck used to transport the bomb to Britain, security sources said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The bomb exploded Feb. 9 in east London's Docklands business district killing two news vendors, injuring more than 30 people, and causing millions of dollars of damage.

The explosion followed the Irish Republican Army's announcement of the end of a 17-month cease-fire. The outlawed group complained about the slow pace of moves to negotiate a political settlement in British-ruled Northern Ireland.

A police statement said the men arrested in Armagh were brought to England for questioning "in connection with recent terrorist crime in Great Britain." A spokesman refused to elaborate.

The suspects were arrested three days before all-party talks are due to start in Northern Ireland under the supervision of former U.S. Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell.

Russians bust suspected spies in Far East

MOSCOW (AP) — Russian security officials have busted a number of spy rings in the country's Far East, including foreign agents posing as missionaries and engineers, a Russian security official said Friday.

Maj. Gen. Alexei Tyazhlov, chief of the Federal Security Service in Khabarovsk territory, said U.S., Chinese and North Korean intelligence operatives were especially active in the region, but they were being kept under close surveillance.

Tyazhlov said South Korean efforts to set up a spy ring under the guise of a religious mission had been foiled recently.

Spies posing as engineers and defense conversion consultants have tried to infiltrate military factories in the region, said Tyazhlov. The Interfax news agency reported.

In the first quarter of 1996, 169 Chinese people who came to the Khabarovsk region on various exchanges were found to have visited other parts of Russia where "guided tours are not provided."

The Federal Security Service is one of the successor agencies to the former KGB.

UN warns aid is running out

GENEVA (AP) — U.N. aid programs for refugees from Chechnya, Georgia and Azerbaijan are running out of funds, the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees said Friday.

UNHCR director for Europe, John Horekens, said the agency needs more than $22 million to feed and house refugees in the Caucasus, but has received less than $7 million. Of those funds, less than $300,000 remains.

About 80,000 people have fled the war in the Russian republic of Chechnya for nearby regions. Azerbaijan shelters around 890,000 displaced people, most of whom fled the war in Nagorno-Karabakh an enclave in Azerbaijan populated largely by ethnic Armenians.

Georgia has 280,000 displaced people who have fled conflicts in its regions of Abkhazia and South Ossetia.

Around the valley

Jerome boy dies in bicycle-car accident

JEROME - A 9-year-old Jerome boy was killed on his bicycle Thursday evening when he pulled into the line of traffic and was hit by a car.

Matthew J. Sauer pulled out of a driveway at 700 N. and 406 E. in Jerome, and was struck by a car driven by 30-year-old Ricardo Hernandez-Kios of Jerome.

Sauer sustained massive head injuries and was pronounced dead at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center at 8:45 p.m., about 40 minutes after the accident, said a Idaho State Police dispatcher.

No citations have been issued, and the case still is under investigation.

A trust fund for Sauer's family has been established under Matthew J. Sauer's name at the First Security Bank in Jerome.

Fire in Devils Corral area blackens about 5 acres

JEROME - A fire in the Devils Corral area in Jerome County charred about five acres Thursday night and early Friday morning.

The fire was spotted at about 10 p.m. Thursday night and was completely extinguished until 1:30 a.m. Friday morning, said Pam Wallace, fire information officer for the Shoshone District of the Bureau of Land Management.

Investigation is still pending, but the fire is suspected to be human caused, Wallace said.

Vehicle manslaughter case heads to arraignment June 17

JEROME - A preliminary hearing was held Thursday at the Jerome County Courthouse in the vehicular manslaughter case against John Thomas Lane.

Lane was driving a delivery truck which crashed head on into a car driven by Shoshone Police Chief Chuck Cox on U.S. Highway 93 on May 29. Cox was killed in the accident.

Arraignment is set for June 17 in district court, said Jerome County Prosecutor John Horgan. If convicted of vehicular manslaughter, Lane could face maximum charges of 10 years in jail and fines.

Jerome bone-marrow drive is being held today

JEROME - A bone-marrow drive for 31-year-old Kris Brand of Jerome is being held today at the National Guard Armory on the Jerome County Fairgrounds.

During the drive, healthy donors aged 18 to 55 will have a small blood sample drawn. Those samples will be tissue typed, and the results will be added to the national registry.

Today's drive will be held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. to help find a donor for Brand, who has leukemia.

Twin Falls styling salon holds ribbon-cutting today

TWIN FALLS - A Twin Falls styling salon will hold a ribbon-cutting ceremony at 11 a.m. today to celebrate its own makeover.

Shear Delight/Video Images, at 327 Seventh St. E., recently completed a major remodeling that added more retail and work space and "a better atmosphere for everyone," owner and stylist Donna Kruger said.

Kruger's shop employs two other hair stylists and a nail technician.

Homeless cook cleared of all charges

By Karen Tokkinen Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - After living in the county jail for more than six months, a homeless cook cleared of child abuse charges on Friday was set free.

A jury acquitted Danny Lee Wolfe, 27, of four counts of sexually molesting an 11-year-old girl who had lived with her family in a tent just a foot away from his last August.

Happy at the verdict, Wolfe said, "I knew that I was innocent all the time."

Arrested while cooking at a Boise

Red Lion Hotel in November, Wolfe's only civilian clothes in Twin Falls were his chef's uniform. He intends to return to Boise, he said, where his job is waiting for him.

During their closing arguments, prosecutors tried to outline gaps in Wolfe's story. He testified that he wasn't drunk the night of the alleged incident, though his friend Terri Voyles said he told her he was too "buzzed" to leave her house to go back to his tent.

They reminded jurors that Wolfe had left Twin Falls just days after the alleged incident and failed to pick up his check from the Royal Lounge after learning that he would first have to talk to the police.

"The wicked flee when no man pursueth," Prosecutor Richard Bevan told jurors, quoting from the Bible. "This man is a child-molester."

But defense attorney Brad Calbo pointed to the troubling lack of physical evidence.

"The girl had claimed Wolfe tied her with yellow rope and covered her mouth with gray tape and that when he lit a cigarette lighter she could see a table. However, witnesses said Wolfe never went back to his tent to get his belongings, before leaving for Boise, and no rope or tape was ever found. They also didn't find a table in his tent.

Doctors also didn't find any rope marks on her body.

The only physical evidence presented was a doctor's report of an abrasion inside her stomach which had been sexually molested about the time of the alleged incident.

The two charges of lewd and lascivious conduct were "ludicrous," Calbo said. "It's a ridiculous story."

Wet spring cools job growth

The Times-News and The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS - A cool, wet spring has slowed Magic Valley's job growth, but area labor-market analyst Lon McDonald expects catch-up activity this month to "kick the economy up another notch."

The jobless rate in Twin Falls, Jerome and Gooding counties inched up two-tenths of a percent to 4.2 percent in May, McDonald said. But construction, agriculture and tourist industries soon will have to accomplish work delayed by the weather, he said.

For several years, the valley has enjoyed low jobless rates that some economists thought were out of sight forever, McDonald said.

Rates in the early and mid-1970s were generally at this level, he said. But for the next eight or 10 years, unemployment shot up dramatically.

A changing labor force and strong economy have sent rates working their way back down since 1988, McDonald said. An increase in part-time work - especially in retail - has taken more people away from complete unemployment.

Standard swings in the food-processing industry sent the Mini-Cassia area's jobless rate soaring from 4.9 percent in April to 6.6 percent in May, McDonald said. But that's down from the 9.1 unemployment rate in May a year ago, when most layoffs were down, he said.

A large percentage of Mini-Cassia workers are employed in food processing, an industry which experiences substantial layoffs in spring, stored-potato quality deteriorates, and plants may decide it's no longer efficient to operate, McDonald said.

Idaho's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate was pushed back over 5 percent last month by wet weather, but analysts said the job outlook remains positive for the remainder of 1996.

The Department of Employment reported a three-tenths of a point increase in the state's jobless rate to 5.1 percent last month as the civilian labor force was essentially stable while weather

2 local men killed in whey tank

By John Raprecht Times-News writer

BUHL - Two local men were killed late Thursday night trying to repair a faulty valve in a whey tank at the Green River Dairy west of Buhl. Vernon Dale Moor, 32, of Paul, and Gary Scott Phillips, 32, of Wendell "succumbed to fumes" and were pronounced dead on the scene shortly after 8:30 p.m., Twin Falls County Coroner Gene Turley said in prepared statement.

Skip Alden Teske, 25, of Eden, who also had been working on the tank, was rescued by two men who were fixing fences nearby.

Mike Viestra, 37, of Twin Falls, and James Greenlea, 39, of Jerome, used a chainsaw to cut a whole in the side of the whey tank.

The two helped pull Teske from the tank, and then removed the bodies of Moor and Phillips. Efforts to resuscitate Moor and Phillips proved futile.

The bodies were taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center for examination.

Twin Falls County deputies, the Buhl Police Department and quick response units were called to the Green River Dairy at about 8:30 p.m. regarding a chemical spill.

Upon arrival, deputies found there was no spill, but that three men had entered a 5,500 gallon whey tank.

The Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department, the Twin Falls County Coroner's office and federal safety inspectors are continuing their investigation of the case.

Buhl pioneer store closes after 50 years

By Virginia S. Garber Times-News writer

BUHL - After nearly 50 years of business, Roper's clothing store is closing its Buhl operation. Roper's manager hopes the shop on the corner of Main Street and Highway 30 won't stay empty long. The building is for sale or lease, and several parties - including at least one Roper - have expressed interest in leasing it, said general manager Jeff Roper of Burley.

"The last thing we would want is an empty building here," he said.

The Buhl store - the Roper family's third - has sold brand-name men's, women's and boys' clothing from jeans to suits since 1948, Roper said. "For years, this was one of our very best stores."

But big retailers that have opened recently in Twin Falls have drawn buyers from a large area, and many locals shop mostly in Twin Falls, Roper said.

"They definitely hurt small, surrounding communities," Roper said. At his family's small Buhl store, "traffic has dwindled fairly dramatically over the last few years."

The Roper family also owns downtown clothing stores in Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert and Boise, and those stores are doing fine, he said.

Roper's began unravelling its Buhl business on Wednesday with a by invitation sale for residents of Buhl and nearby towns.

A public going-out-of-business sale began Thursday and will continue until mid-July, when Roper expects shoppers to strip the store of merchandise and fixtures.

The store is offering "huge discounts" already and will continue to slash prices until everything is gone, he said.

But at least one familiar face won't disappear. Manager Vern Rodig, an employee of the Buhl Roper's since 1955, will transfer to the Twin Falls store, Roper said.

Wood River homeowners keeping watch

By Barbara Newlert Times-News correspondent

HALEY - Homeowners along the Big Wood River are keeping a close watch on the thermometer as warmer weather raises the possibility of flooding.

The Big Wood River crested at the 5-foot mark, or 2.45 cubic feet per second, Friday, just 1 1/2 feet from flood stage.

With Friday's temperature reaching 82 degrees and today's and Sunday's forecast for more of the same, the National Weather Service has predicted the Big Wood will reach the 6-foot mark by Monday.

While some flooding in low-lying areas along the river can occur sooner, the official flood stage occurs at the 6-foot mark, or when the river flows at 4,000 cfs.

Decline to Sign group urges end to initiative

The Associated Press

BOISE - If the group pushing an anti-gay initiative in Idaho had the best interests of the state, it would drop the effort, an opposing group says.

That was the request Friday from Decline to Sign, a group formed to battle the Idaho Citizens Alliance and its anti-gay initiative.

Thursday, the Oregon Citizens Alliance announced it was dropping its effort to get a similar initiative on the ballot in that state. Chairman Lon Mabon said the initiative was being abandoned because of last month's U.S. Supreme Court ruling striking down a Colorado anti-gay rights law.

Mary Rohlfing, co-chairman of Decline to Sign, said the Idaho Citizens Alliance proposal is closer to the invalidated Colorado law than the one proposed in Oregon. "The Decline to Sign campaign is calling upon Kelly Walton to do the same thing," Rohlfing told a Boise news conference.

Record snowpacks in the surrounding mountains mean a lot of snow left to melt. The Big Wood watershed snowpack now stands at 157-percent of the 30-year average.

The average snow course in the Big Wood drainage contains 13.6 inches of water and has lost one inch of water over the past 24 hours.

Dollarhide Summit checks in with the greatest amount of snow left to melt. At an elevation of 8,420 feet, the snowpack contains 21.3 inches of water, compared to a normal reading of 8.2 inches for this time of year.

Galena Summit's snowpack contains 8.4 inches of water - 109 percent of average.

Some flooding along low-lying lots in Haley's Della View Subdivision has occurred, but Blaine County Commissioner Leonard Harlig said the river is holding steady for the time being.

Homeowners who bought large, plastic offer dams last year, to protect their homes from high water have repositioned the dams to protect their investments, Harlig said.

While official flood stage is 6.5 feet, a flood warning may be issued any time before that to let people take necessary precautions, National Weather Service Meteorologist Jennifer Hill said.

As of Friday, a flood warning had not been issued.

For additional information on water levels in the Big Wood and its tributaries, call city offices or the Blaine County Sheriff at 789-5555.

Walton, of Heyburn, is state chairman of the Idaho Citizens Alliance.

There was no immediate response from the alliance's office, but on Thursday, Executive Director Kelly Johannsen said the group will continue its effort to qualify for the November ballot.

Supporters have only four weeks to turn in 41,335 signatures of registered voters to qualify for the November ballot.

Johannsen said her group's initiative is substantially different than Oregon's. "The reason they are dropping theirs doesn't apply to ours," she said.

Johannsen said the Idaho initiative does not go as far as Colorado's Amendment 2, which was declared unconstitutional because it violated equal protection guarantees.

The Colorado law banned state or local laws protecting homosexuals from discrimination. The Idaho proposition, similar to one that failed by less than 3,000 votes in 1994, also would ban state and local laws protecting homosexuals from discrimination and prohibit using tax money or the public schools to portray homosexual behavior as acceptable.

But Johannsen said the key difference between it and the Colorado measure is that the Idaho proposal specifically addresses special status.

Rohlfing said the differences are insignificant. "Have'n't they read their own initiative?" she asked.

If the ICA initiative makes it on the ballot, that will trigger "a costly, divisive legal battle" that Idaho taxpayers will have to finance, she said. She said the state of Colorado spent at least $2 million defending its law.

Rohlfing said she was aware that Johannsen said the ICA won't drop its efforts. "We hope they will. We really believe that they are not unreasonable people," she said.

She said the ICA appears to be just trying to "save face."

The power to grant withheld judgment was conferred by the Legislature, the court said, and is not an "inherent right" reserved to the judiciary by the Constitution. Withheld judgment allows a judge to retain jurisdiction over a defendant, and the conviction eventually would be entered if terms of probation are met.

Teton residents worry about floods

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) - High snowpacks, rising waters in the Snake River and a special federal designation is causing many to scurry to get flood insurance in Teton County.

Some Teton residents say their level is higher than it has been in a decade.

The flood insurance is possible because Teton County was mapped into a special hazard area, which qualifies those in the county for a national flood insurance program.

That opportunity combined with above average snowpacks, increasingly hotter weather and rising river stages have people making visits to insurance agents.

"I've got a lot invested in my house," said Donny McClelland. "I can't afford to have my house floated away and have to replace it."

As of Friday morning, officials said there have been no deaths, major injuries or property damage due to flooding.

McClelland, a West Bank homeowner who bought flood insurance for the first time this year, took a recent trip to Yellowstone National Park. "I was alarmed at the depths of snow and thought about possible flooding."

The snowpack is 184 percent of normal, according to measurements by the U.S. Natural Resources Conservation Service.

"It's the biggest water I've seen in 10 years," said Dave Hansen, a longtime commercial rafter.

But cooler nights have helped offset the warmer days, said Don Barney, the county levee supervisor.

He said the county levees show no damage and high-water channels are being used to relieve pressure from the main flow of the Snake River.

Still, the demand for flood insurance has increased.

"We've had quite a few people come in at the last minute," said Jim Greer of State Farm Insurance. "I think reports of the above average snowpack have people worried."

Those who seek such insurance need to be aware that these policies must go through a 30-day waiting period before policies can go into effect.

The insurance policies were made available through the Federal Emergency Management Agency. The program was started to minimize development in flood plains and reduce the cost to the federal government of damage restoration after a flood.

FEMA developed the program because flooding accounts for 90 percent of the disasters in the United States.

Feds offer plea bargain after discharge

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) - Reports that Post Falls sewage treatment plant managers failed to report an illegal discharge into the Spokane River have drawn a plea bargain offer from the U.S. Department of Justice.

Based on a U.S. Environmental Protection Agency criminal investigation, the U.S. attorney's office has offered to accept a guilty plea to failing to report an illegal discharge.

In exchange for Post Falls' plea, the government agreed it would not prosecute the city or its employees for other violations identified, according to documents obtained by the Coeur d'Alene Press.

The EPA launched its investigation last year after an employee provided the state Division of Environmental Quality with samples of an October 1995 discharge that was neither logged nor reported to the state within 24 hours, as required by law.

That spill dumped more than 650 pounds of sludge into the river.

The documents also reveal an employee alleged plant managers required lab personnel to falsify testing data by increasing chlorine levels before sampling for coliform bacteria. Samples that exceeded permitted levels were dumped or labeled as inaccurate and not included in monthly reports.

Meanwhile, an Environmental Quality investigation concluded plant supervisors violated reporting provisions of its discharge permit, documents show.

Concerns about the accuracy of discharge reports casts a shadow on the effort by Idaho and Washington to determine the maximum amount of treated sewage the river can safely handle, since the plant's discharge was based on its own lab reports, the state report said.

But Post Falls Mayor Jim Hammond on Thursday said a private consultant hired by the city cleared plant operators of any wrongdoing.

"She said there were some errors made, but there was no falsifying," he said.

Pat Brown, a consultant for Environmental Training Consultants, was paid $5,775 for the study, city administrator John Hendrickson said.

Miep Gies: Stereotypes still exist

BOISE (AP) - Miep Gies has no flowery explanation for why she has become a hero for those while hiding Anne Frank and other Jewish refugees in Nazi-occupied Holland.

"I tried to help," she said. "It is better to try than to do nothing."

Gies is the only survivor of the story of Anne Frank and her world-famous diary, in which the girl recorded her experiences of living in a secret annex behind her father's Amsterdam business.

Gies, 87, who was a clerk for the father, Otto, recounted her version of the events Thursday to nearly 500 people in Boise.

Gies was only 15 when she died in the Bergen-Belsen camp after the family was betrayed. After the Franks were arrested, Gies found the diary on the floor in the hiding place.

When Otto Frank returned from the camps, she gave it to him.

"I could not save Anne," Gies said. "But I saved her diary."

Gies, raised in Vienna during World War I, confessed to being hated by Germans and Austrians for what they did to Jews. But she said Otto Frank "implored her not to make the same mistake the Nazis made, and stereotype others."

Racism continues to spread lives in Bosnia, Rwanda and other countries, she said. Gies said she is a fund-raiser for the Idaho Anne Frank Center, which is planning a human-rights educational center in Boise.

Tribe begins building 2nd gaming hall

LEWISTON (AP) - The Nez Perce Tribe is breaking ground on a second, larger bingo and gaming hall.

Tribal gaming manager Diana Pinkham said the operation will employ 200 people with an estimated annual payroll of more than $2 million.

"The regional economic impact will be in the tens of millions," she said Thursday.

A 24,000-square-foot temporary building will go up on a 35-acre site off U.S. Highway 95-12, east of Lewiston. Construction of the $3 million enterprise is expected to be completed by the first week in August.

It will feature a 400-seat hall with electronic bingo plus 400 video pull-tab machines, a restaurant and administrative offices.

Pinkham said tribal leaders will decide next week if alcohol will be served.

Development of a permanent building is planned to begin in a year.

Tribal leaders struggled to secure financing. Pinkham said negotiations have been under way with Sharp Image Gaming of California since last fall and "it all came together, all of a sudden."

Sharp Image also financed the 150,000-sq-ft Perce Tribal Bingo and Casino, which opened in Kamiah in December. Fifty people work there.

The smaller Kamiah operation was intended to be a training ground for the Lewiston venture.

The Lewiston operation will be bigger than the Coeur d'Alene Tribe's building near Worley, Pinkham said. The Coeur d'Alene's facility has been so successful the tribe was able to pay off the $2.9 million mortgage in just three years.

High snowpack keeps visitors off mountains

BOISE (AP) - Backpackers are knocking on the door of central Idaho's mountains, but nature is not letting them in.

Trails in the 8,000- to 10,000-foot Sawtooth National Recreation Area near Stanley will not be free of snow for recreationists until mid to late July, some slightly later than last year.

In fact, Geri Raymond of the Stanley Ranger Station is still advising people about hot spots for cross-country skiing.

"They're still snowboarding on Galena Summit," she said Thursday. "The kids are having a great time, but there's still snow."

The summit, on Idaho Highway 75 between Ketchum and Stanley, is at 8,752 feet.

Up to 6 feet of snow remains in the mountains and high-elevation trails and back roads are clogged with mud and snow. Remote campgrounds still are closed.

Idaho experienced a snowpack of 135 percent to 133 percent of normal. Now, with warmer temperatures, the snow has started to melt more rapidly, but not fast enough to get into the high-country.

BURLEY - A Burley man was killed Thursday afternoon when he drove his 1994 Chevy pickup out from a private farm road in front of another vehicle.

Elgin Jay Garrett, 70, died in the crash, according to a report from the Cassia County Sheriff's Department. Garrett could not see the 1996 GMC Jimmy driven by Candace J. George, 35, of Murtagh, because his view was blocked by a row of trees and other equipment, the report said.

George and passenger Amber George, 12, were taken to Cassia Regional Medical Center for treatment of minor injuries. The accident occurred at 200 South 900 West.

1 man dies, 2 injured in vehicle wreck

ALBION - A Burley man was killed Friday morning in a one-vehicle accident south of town Thursday night and two other men suffered serious injuries.

Chad Jones, 24, of Burley, was flown to the University of Utah Medical Center where he died from his injuries just before 8 a.m. Friday, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Scott Nash, 19, of Burley, also was flown to the Medical Center, where he was listed in critical, but stable condition with head and neck injuries, the spokeswoman said.

Bill Durfee, 24, of Rupert, was listed in fair condition Friday afternoon in the intensive care unit at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center in Twin Falls, a hospital spokeswoman there said.

The three were riding in a 1983 Dodge traveling north veered off the side of the road, over corrected and rolled, according to a news release from the Cassia County Sheriff's Department.

The men weren't wearing seat belts, and it is unknown who was driving the car.

The incident is under investigation. All three men initially had been taken to Cassia Regional Medical Center.

Batt will watch Montana mine's effect on lake

SANDPOINT (AP) - A flood of phone calls and letters from Bonanza residents has prompted Idaho Gov. Phil Batt to promise state protection for Lake Pend Oreille from a proposed mine upstream in Montana.

Batt said Thursday he will take an active role in watching over ASARCO's proposed Rock Creek project near Naxos, Mont.

One of his first moves will be to meet with Montana Gov. Marc Racicot to request the two states work together on their environmental concerns. A meeting date has not been set.

In the meantime, Batt is taking action "after receiving hundreds of letters and phone calls from people on and around Lake Pend Oreille."

"I would first like to make it clear that I regard Lake Pend Oreille as one of our state's greatest assets, and I will not allow its diminishment," he said.

Diane Williams of the Clark Fork-Pend Oreille Coalition said the governor's involvement will bring a more scrutiny of ASARCO's proposal.

"We just wanted to make sure someone was paying attention," she said.

ASARCO wants to excavate about 10,000 tons of ore a day for 30 years. However, many fear it would pollute the Clark Fork River and eventually Lake Pend Oreille.

The Montana Department of Environmental Quality and Kootenai National Forest said the environmental impact statement, which is expected to take up to a year to complete.

Williams said one of the coalition's main concerns has been "kind of a slum dunk of the process of writing the final EIS."

Batt spokeswoman Amy Kleiner said Idaho still has some say over what requirements ASARCO will have to meet to construct the mine.

"But most will come from Montana," she said.

Still, Kleiner said the Idaho Division of Environmental Quality is required to ensure clean water throughout the state, and it is implementing rules to comply with federal requirements.

Bonner County Commissioner Steve Klatt said he is glad Batt finally recognized the mining proposal as an "issue of concern."

Klatt emphasized the county is not opposed to the Rock Creek project, but fears it could damage the watersheds and in turn hurt the local economy.

"I hope he is somewhat forceful with Governor Racicot in making us know that our water quality is as important to us as mineral extraction is to them," the commissioner said.

Students at crumbling school get better place

NAMPA (AP) - Lakeview Elementary School has educated mostly disadvantaged youngsters on the city's rusted and pockmarked north side for a century.

But a school that has stood as a dim reminder of the lack of opportunity is closing its doors as the students move into the new Snake River Elementary School.

"I'm excited," 11-year-old Kreg March said.

"The second graders are lucky; they get to go to school there for years."

With more space, a new library, air conditioning and updated wiring at the new school, teacher Janet Mabbutt said she thrilled she can offer children more next year.

"It'll be worth it," Mabbutt said. "Here, when you plug in an overhead projector something usually blows, and since the basement was condemned last year we've had no place to put the library."

Sixth-grade teacher Nichole Schmidt will not mind trading in Lakeview's wide, wooden baseboards and charm for Snake River's new science lab and spacious classrooms either.

Her class of 35 did not even fit into their room this year. The tight conditions in one of two mobile units made science experiments and other hands-on activities virtually impossible.

But moving on always means leaving something behind.

"I'm going to miss this old school," 11-year-old Mac Reyes said. "We have nice grass here and a bunch of cool trees."

Located behind the Snake River Stampede Arena, their future school will sit within a large park.

Those details are critical to students who did not even believe they deserve less because they have had less, Schmidt said.

Jobs

curtailed work in construction, logging and agriculture.

Despite the increase, the rate was still three-tenths of a point below the year-ago rate, marking the ninth straight month joblessness has run below the previous year.

With the labor force remaining at 613,000, the decline of 1,700 from April to May in the number of Idaho workers on the job still left total employment nearly 18,000 higher than it was in May 1995. Over 581,000 had jobs last month.

Idaho's increased jobless rate followed the rate nationally. It rose two notches to 5.6 percent even though businesses added to their payrolls at the fastest clip since February. It was the sixth straight month that Idaho unemployment has been lower than the nation's.

The impact of the weather was felt throughout the southern and northern parts of the state. Only eastern Idaho saw its jobless rate hold steady.

While construction and logging picked up in May, the employment gains were not as large as expected because of the weather.

At the same time agricultural field work was slowed while the large amount of snow in the high country curtailed recreational activities.

But analysts said the prospects for stronger job growth into the summer are good with the economy showing a moderate pace "throughout the year."

And even with May's increase, average unemployment through the first five months of the year was remaining under 5 percent. The record was 5.1 percent in 1989.

Letter may have prompted family to leave compound

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A letter from a jailed Utah cult leader, accused of marrying off his 13-year-old daughter may have helped persuade a family of four — including two young Utah girls — to leave the Freemen compound in Montana. Gloria Ward, her common-law husband Elwin Ward and her two daughters, Courtnie, 10, and Jaylynn, 8, left the ranch Thursday. The girls arrived by plane in Salt Lake Friday morning, according to Utah Attorney General Craig Bateman.

Gloria Ward had been charged with felony custodial interference in Utah for taking the children out of state against a court order. The state agreed to drop the charges as part of the deal that persuaded the family to leave.

'I had almost prepared for just the opposite — a hostile takeover of the Freemen compound.'

— Steve Mangum, Jaylynn's natural father

Ward and her daughters were escorted through Salt Lake City International Airport by Nielsen. The girls also met with their fathers, who declined to talk to reporters after their airport reunion. Jaylynn's father is Steve Mangum of Murray's Courtnie's father is Robert Gunn of Kearns. An attorney for Nielsen, and Reed Richards, chief deputy Utah attorney general, both said a letter from jailed Utah John Perry Chanev may have led to the Wards leaving the compound. Chanev allegedly is the spiritual leader of Elwin Ward and has called Ward his adopted son.

Nielsen's attorney, Martin Tanner, said she appealed to Chanev and he agreed to write to the Wards. Chanev wrote that he had a revelation she should not stay with the Freemen, according to Richards.

From his cell in the Utah County Jail in Provo, Chanev, told KSL-TV that he was appalled his private note had been disclosed and he denied he told the Wards to leave. He said he left the decision entirely in their hands.

"I do not know the people in Montana. I do know members of my personal family and I wrote a letter to members of my personal family asking them to do what they thought was right. And that was it," he said.

Chanev, 39, is accused of marrying off his 13-year-old daughter to a 48-year-old friend and follower. Chanev himself married a 15-year-old girl who is another daughter of Gloria Ward. That girl is in foster care in Michigan while authorities are trying to get the marriage annulled.

Chanev tried to pay his $200,000 bail in February with a $400,000 bogus check signed by Freemen leader LeRoy M. Schweizer.

Gunn, Courtnie's father, said, "It's just great to have her out. It was just afraid they were going to go in shooting and she'd get hurt."

He said he has not seen his daughter for 1 1/2 years and was not sure what was going to happen next.

Richards said the girls should be back in Utah "within the next couple of days."

Gunn hopes Utah authorities will allow Courtnie to stay with him and his wife, Valerie, and their four children at their home in Kearns.

Mangum is seeking custody of Jaylynn. Mangum, a truck driver who is divorced from Gloria Ward, said he was very grateful for the outcome.

"I had almost prepared for just the opposite — a hostile takeover of the Freemen compound," he told KUTV Friday.

He said dropping the custodial interference charge "was something we had to do to get the kids out of harm's way."

Mangum said he was worried about the effects of his daughter's association with the cult members. He saw her last October and "she expressed some pretty bizarre beliefs then and she's had another seven, eight months to learn more of these so-called teachings."

Nevertheless, he said, "Things are looking a lot brighter today."

After her divorce from Mangum, Ward joined a wandering group of excommunicated Mormons called the House of Chanev. The group believes girls can be married at age 12. When she joined, Ward dropped her given name, Tamara Christenson.

Nuclear waste experiment launched

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Hours after getting permission from a federal judge, Argonne National Laboratory started up a controversial nuclear waste treatment experiment.

It was the start of what Argonne officials hope will be a three-year test of a concept known as "electrorefining." It involves the melting of used nuclear reactor fuel to separate out several other materials, including a reusable form of uranium.

The program still faces a legal test. But a federal court in San Francisco on Thursday threw out a temporary restraining order that held the electrorefining project on hold. Oral arguments on a related lawsuit are scheduled for July 12.

With Thursday's ruling, Argonne crews at the Idaho Argonne Engineering Laboratory began their first "hot run" of the electrorefining project.

At 7 a.m. Friday, crews for the first time placed chopped up pellets of highly radioactive nuclear fuel in the electrorefiner — a heated, electrically charged salt solution that separates uranium from plutonium and other nuclear materials.

The process previously had been tested with a form of uranium that cannot sustain a nuclear reaction.

Over three years, Argonne hopes to run tests with about 125 spent nuclear fuel assemblies — a fraction of the old fuel from its Experimental Breeder Reactor II. Argonne executive assistant Paul Pugmire said Friday.

Girl may have deadly bacteria

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Laboratory tests are expected to determine by the weekend whether a 12-year-old Idaho Falls girl is suffering from potentially deadly meningococcal bacteria.

The girl, a student at Emerson Elementary School, was admitted to an Idaho Falls hospital Thursday night and two hours later was sent by airplane to Primary Children's Hospital, Salt Lake City.

Although tests are still being done to confirm the girl's infection, the doctor who treated her at Eastern Idaho Regional Medical Center believes that the girl's illness is caused by the bacteria. Her identity was not disclosed.

The bacteria is contagious and can lead to meningitis, an infection of the brain and spinal cord or blood. It takes extremely close contact "to contract the infection," said Brenda Baumgartner, hospital representative.

The risk of getting the infection is extremely low, the District 7 Health Department said.

Earlier this year, three Rocky Mountain Middle School students became ill with what is believed to be the infection. In March, a Bonneville High School student was hospitalized with a confirmed case of meningococcal infection.

An outbreak of the bacteria in Rigby led to a claim against the school district alleging that officials failed to inform families of the infection.

How Serious A Problem?

- 25% of older adults have significant mental health problems
- Between 6,000 & 10,000 Americans over age 60 commit suicide each year
- The severity of mental health symptoms increase with age

Symptoms/Characteristics Which May Indicate A Problem:

✓ Depressed Mood	✓ Constant Worry
✓ Irritability	✓ Difficulty Making Decisions
✓ Social Withdrawal	✓ Appetite Change
✓ Inconsistent Memory	✓ Change in Ability to Care for Self
✓ Preoccupation with Death	✓ Loss of Energy
✓ Sleep Disturbance	✓ Decreased Activity Level
✓ Helplessness

Presence of any combination of these symptoms for longer than 2 weeks indicate the need for an assessment by a trained mental health professional.

Oregon considers park closures

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Officials are considering closing as many as 40 of Oregon's 220 state parks because of budget problems.

The state Parks and Recreation Department faces a potential $3.6 million deficit, partly because of declining fee revenue.

Some campers are turning to private campgrounds because overnight camping fees have reached as much as $22 at some popular parks.

Fees provide more than 70 percent of the two-year, $60 million park budget for 1995-97.

Officials said the least popular parks would be targeted if shut-downs are needed and that virtually all parks that require reservations for camping would not be in danger of closing.

"It's not going to be the flagships," said Robert Meinen, department director. "It's not going to be the areas that generate a lot of revenue."

He said raising fees has been all but ruled out because that probably would further discourage visitors.

Former cheerleaders compete for Senate leadership position

ONDRE, Miss. (AP) — For years the corridors of Washington power...

They both came up at a time in Mississippi in the '60s and the '70s when the university campus was a breeding ground for people who were going into politics.

Trent Lott 'always had real good hair.'

— Amy McMahan, Lott's cheerleading partner at the University of Mississippi will take the Senate's top leadership post, but the odds are not in his favor.

Clay Jones, a Mississippi-based syndicated political cartoonist, portrays Lott as a helmeted Viking warrior carrying a sword while leading for victory.

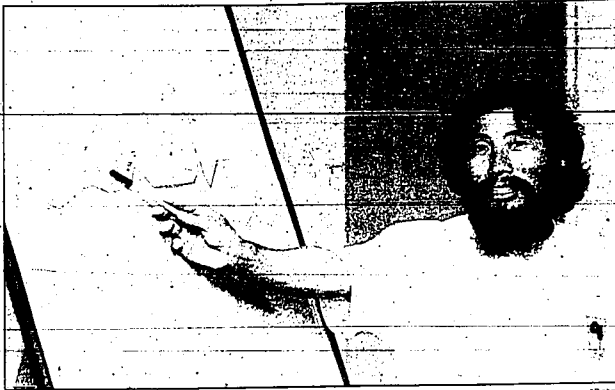

Both of them have always been dynamic, somewhat charismatic people, very confident, capable," said Gerald Walton, provost at Ole Miss.

"He was thin. We used to kid him about it," McMahan remembered. "Every time we were supposed to jump or he was supposed to catch me, he's just say 'I did it very cautiously.'"

Lott and Cochran both graduated from law school at Ole Miss, married sorority girls and fathered a son and a daughter.

But in 1978, Cochran's career seemed to move onto a fast track when he won the Senate seat vacated by long-serving Democrat James O. Eastland Jr.

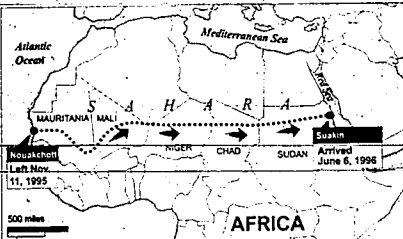

In 1988, Lott was elected to the Senate, succeeding Democrat John C. Stennis. Fresh off the 1994 campaign trail, Lott vaulted into the position of majority whip, the number two post in the Senate GOP leadership by defeating Sen. Alan Simpson of Wyoming by a single vote.

Jong Yul Choi, 38, indicates Thursday his route across the Sahara he followed on a seven-month long trek. Choi crossed five countries during his 4,588-mile walk.

Korean crosses Sahara Desert: A 4,588-mile trek in 7 months

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — A South Korean adventurer who walked across the vast Sahara Desert gave a simple, time-honored reason for his journey: because it was there.

There was a desert in Africa so I wanted to cross it," Choi Jong-sul said Thursday at the end of a 4,588-mile trek that took nearly seven months.

This time the 38-year-old crossed towering dunes and lonely hills from the Atlantic Ocean to the Red Sea.

Organizers of the trip said he is the first person to walk a west-to-east route across the Sahara.

Choi said he was shocked at finding a piggy-bank-bursting check inside.

3-year-old receives big tax refund check

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Three-year-old Max Rosen isn't even old enough to collect an allowance, much less pay income tax.

"The longer we have this thing, the more I expect to start seeing girls lining up at the front door," said the tyke's father, Neil Rosen.

New 'Jeopardy' category: Naughty pictures

CHICAGO (AP) — I'll take "embarrassing mix-ups" for $1,000, Alex.

Jeopardy viewers in 22 Chicago circles Thursday found themselves suddenly watching coveting, naked women rather than the usual three contestants phrasing answers in the form of a question.

Ex-teacher indicted on molestation charges

ALFRED, Maine (AP) — A former prep school teacher convicted last month in New Hampshire of child pornography has been indicted on molestation charges.

David Cobb, a highly respected teacher for 27 years at prestigious Phillips Academy in Andover, Mass., was indicted Thursday by a York County grand jury on two counts of unlawful sexual contact.

Cobb, 59, is in jail in Strafford County, N.H., awaiting sentencing on attempted sexual assault and 321 counts of child pornography.

faded jeans and a T-shirt with "Sahara" written in red on a black square.

On Nov. 11, Choi left Nouakchott, Mauritania, near the Atlantic Ocean. He walked 4,588 miles before arriving Thursday in Suakin, a Sudanese port on the Red Sea.

He then flew north to Cairo.

In all, he crossed five countries — Mauritania, Mali, Niger, Chad and Sudan — under an unrelenting sun.

Choi walked for 13 hours a day, covering 25 miles at his first and working up to 37 miles. He wakes at 4:30 a.m., breakfasts for 30 minutes and started walking.

He allowed himself an hour for a lunch of rice, dried beef and pork and a few 10-minute water breaks before resting for the day at 6 p.m.

Choi said he went through seven pairs of shoes, slept sporadically because of the heat, and had malaria and diarrhea.

Near the end he was hauled at the border between Egypt and Sudan, whose relations have deteriorated in recent months.

So Choi moved the final leg of his trip from al-Quseir, an Egyptian Red Sea port, to Suakin.

The defense had suggested the 55-year-old doctor shot himself in the head. But prosecutors said the angle of the wound, the distance the gun was held from the head and the pattern of blood on the couch where he died proved otherwise.

Mrs. Sutorius' first four marriages ended in divorce, with some of her ex-husbands claiming they escaped with their lives.

Her third husband, artist Grant Bassett, said that during their nine-month marriage she would get worked up watching TV talk shows and threaten to kill him.

"When I heard that, Dr. Sutorius was dead. I thought 'I'm so lucky to be alive, it's not

In 1990, shortly after she divorced Bassett, she was convicted of threatening a boyfriend with a gun.

Her fourth husband, computer consultant David Britton, testified she threatened to kill him on many occasions.

Before the trial, he said he was surprised their marriage ended because he hid the ammunition to a pistol he kept in their home.

Otherwise, he said, "it would be me on the couch with a bullet to my ear."

Sentencing was set for June 24.

'Threatening' woman convicted of murder

CINCINNATI (AP) — A woman accused of threatening the lives of some of her first four husbands was convicted Friday of killing spouse No. 5 for his $1 million in assets.

Della Dante Sutorius, 45, faces a maximum of life in prison for aggravated murder in the shooting death of Dr. Darryl Sutorius, a heart surgeon who died Feb. 18 at their home in suburban Symmes Township.

The defense had suggested the 55-year-old doctor shot himself in the head. But prosecutors said the angle of the wound, the distance the gun was held from the head and the pattern of blood on the couch where he died proved otherwise.

Burley sizzles in Shoshone

Storm interrupts, cuts short twinbill

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — Eric Ondler and a major electrical storm provided most of the voltage Friday night when the Burley Legion downed Shoshone.

Ondler had two triples and a single, worth three RBIs, in the opener which Burley won in the mercy-rule shortened 13-2.

He added a run-scoring double in the first inning of the nightcap which was being interrupted by power outages more than negligible amounts of rains. The Shoshone field has mercury-vapor lights, which must cool for at least 15 minutes before they will re-ignite. Burley won the nightcap 13-3 in the fifth inning when the game was called after the third outage struck.

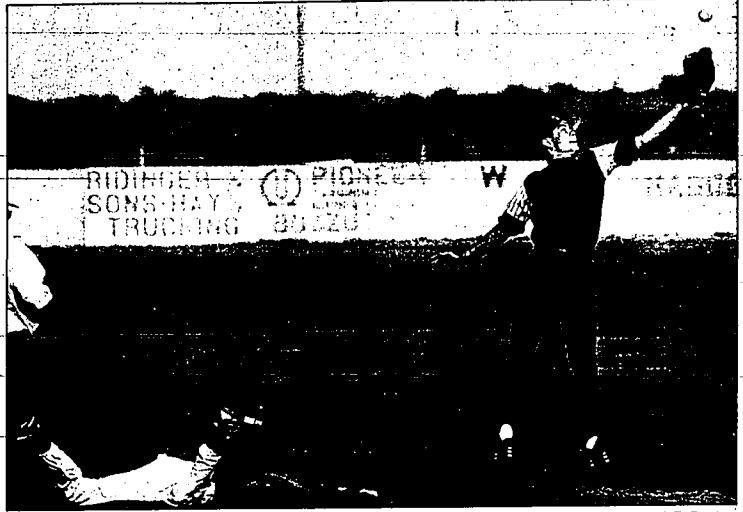

Eric's been hitting it well all spring," said Burley Legion and high school coach Matt Harr. "This wasn't anything really special."

Ondler drove in one run and scored another in Burley's three-run first. His triple plated the walking Wes Taylor in the second and his second in the fifth added another run.

Harr's other good moments came on the mound where he is trying to rebuild a staff. Jordan Robins limited Shoshone to two hits in the opener and freshman Brett Dayley had worked the first-inning without a hit.

Shoshone's problems stemmed from absences, six off the roster and as many as five starters. Coach Tony Bozzuto said three of the players were in foreign countries — two in Mexico and one in southern California.

Shoshone expects to be short-handed when it plays at Jerome this afternoon but should start regaining manpower after that.

Shoshone broke Robins' shutout attempt in the second when Clayton Suidy lived on a dropped third strike, stole second, took third on a passed ball and scored on Joe Flora's sacrifice fly to right field.

In the fifth, Flora rapped a three-bagger to dead center field and scored on a wild pitch.

Rodgers to instruct clinic at T.F. Muny

TWIN FALLS — Former PGA professional Phil Rodgers, rated one of the top short-game instructors in golf, will conduct three one-day clinics at Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course June 21-23. Each session will run from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Early emphasis will be on the full swing and the later portion of instruction will concentrate on pitching and putting. Cost is $250 for each clinic and class size is limited to 10 students. More information may be obtained from the pro shop at 733-3326.

Openings still available for benefit golf tourney June 15

TWIN FALLS — There are still openings in the Magic Valley Christian High School Benefit Golf tournament, June 15.

This is a four-person scramble with a shotgun start at 8 a.m. and an awards luncheon following the tournament at Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course.

The entry fee is $45 and includes green fees, golf cart and lunch. The proceeds from this tournament will be used to support the programs of the Magic Valley Christian High School.

Registration forms are available at The Christian Bookstore, Little Red Hen or any First Federal Savings Bank. For more information call Ron Rasmussen at 733-4222.

Signups extended for 3-on-3 adult basketball league

TWIN FALLS — Idaho Sports Connection has extended its 3-on-3 adult basketball league signups.

There are a few openings in the 6-foot, 2-inch and under division as well as the 6-foot, 2-inch and over category.

Games will start June 20, a week later than earlier announced. ISC is also looking for women to start a 3-on-3 division. Sign up sheets are available at Donnelly Sports or call Rick Lamphire at 326-4522.

It wasn't pretty

Rodman saves poorly shooting Bulls for a 92-88 win and a 2-0 lead over Seattle

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — It's not a pretty thing, this coronation of the Chicago Bulls.

In an ugly Game 2 in which Dennis Rodman, of all people, was the only one looking good, the Bulls overcame poor performances, even worse than their rusty Game 1 effort and beat the Seattle SuperSonics 92-88 to take a 2-0 lead in the NBA Finals.

How gruesome was it?

The Bulls scored only one basket from the field in the final six minutes, had their second-worst shooting night of the postseason (39 percent) and blew three straight free throws in the final 10 seconds that would have clinched it.

Finally, after a jump ball sequence that was so ugly it had to be done over two times, Rodman controlled the tip, got fouled and made the second of two foul shots for the final four-point margin.

The crowd at the United Center let out a scream of relief and walked to the exits shaking their heads, wondering how the supposed best team in the history of the league could have played such a stinker.

But as they did many times in the regular season and in the first three rounds of the playoffs, the Bulls managed to find a way to win despite playing near their worst.

The main reason was Rodman, who grabbed 20 rebounds — tying the NBA Finals record with 11 on the offensive end — and dominated a third quarter in which the Bulls took over with a 2 1/2-minute stretch of good basketball — their only one of the night.

"I thought we'd play little better, but we didn't," Rodman said. "But that's what the playoffs are all about. The people get their money's worth and hope we can get one Sunday."

Game 3 is Sunday at Seattle, and the Sonics will be trying to become only the third team in NBA history to successfully come back from an 0-2 deficit in the Finals.

Seattle's Shawn Kemp slaps the ball from Chicago's Scottie Pippen in the first quarter Friday in Chicago.

Sampras feels heat in Open

The Associated Press

PARIS — The draining five-setters, the record heat and the emotional strain finally took their toll on Pete Sampras at the French Open.

For five rounds, Sampras battled bravely through the toughest draw he's ever faced, defying the odds to make a run at the only Grand Slam title he's never won. But by the time he lost the first-set tiebreaker to Yevgeny Kafelnikov in Friday's semifinals, Sampras had nothing left.

Physically and mentally spent, the top-seeded American wilted in the 93-degree temperatures — the hottest ever recorded at Roland Garros on a June 7 — and surrendered 7-6 (7-4), 6-0, 6-2 in 1 hour, 46 minutes.

"I was very, very tired," Sampras said, still looking exhausted an hour after the match. "After the first set, I just felt the balloon popped, the tires were flat. I just hit the wall, I guess." Kafelnikov, the straggled Russian, never looked bothered either by the heat or by Sampras' game as he

Friday at the Open

A quick look at Friday, the 12th day of the French Open:

☞ WEATHER: Sunny and 92 degrees, the highest temperature on June 7 since 1974.

☞ ATTENDANCE: 17,116 spectators, a record for a 12th day of the tournament, 110 more than last year on the same day.

☞ WINNERS: Sixth-seeded Yevgeny Kafelnikov upset No. 1 Pete Sampras in straight sets to reach the final. Kafelnikov will meet No. 15 Michael Stich, who beat No. 14 Marc Rosset in the other semifinal.

☞ A LOOK AHEAD: In the women's final Saturday, defending champion Steffi Graf plays two-time French winner Arantxa Sanchez Vicario.

☞ QUOTE OF THE DAY: "After the first set, I just felt the balloon popped." — Sampras after losing to Kafelnikov.

☞ TRAT OF THE DAY: Helmer Stich, not Kafelnikov, was broken in their semifinal matches. Kafelnikov didn't even face a break point.

seeing on the court," Kafelnikov said. In Sunday's championship match, Kafelnikov will meet 15th-seeded Michael Stich, who continued his improbable run with a 7-6 (7-4), 6-0, 6-2 win over No. 14 Marc Rosset.

Stich returned recently from surgery on his left ankle and nearly bypassed the French Open to concentrate on preparing for Wimbledon, where he was champion in 1991.

"This is something I never would have believed could or would happen," Stich said. "I don't know why it happened or how it happened, but it happened."

Sampras, who had never progressed beyond the quarterfinals at the French until this year, reached the semis the hard way. He played three five-setters, including wins over former two-time champions Sergi Bruguera and Jim Courier.

Into the Rat's nest

Avalanche take 2-0 lead, Lemieux to foe's territory

MIAMI (AP) — As if the Colorado Avalanche don't already have things going their way, now they have Claude Lemieux back for Game 3 of the Stanley Cup final.

"He brings a lot of leadership and work ethic, and makes us better," Colorado defenseman Jon Klemm said of Lemieux, who is returning following a two-game suspension.

It's hard to imagine that the Avalanche can be any better than they were in winning the first two games in Denver, particularly in Game 2 Thursday night when they beat the Florida Panthers 8-1.

The addition of Lemieux for Saturday night's game will probably mean more scoring punch to a lineup that has outscored Florida 11-2 in the first two games.

"In the last three days of practice, Claude has probably been our best player," said Avalanche coach Marc Crawford said of Lemieux. "The coaching staff is really excited about having him come back into the lineup, because you can see he has so much determination. You can see it in his stare right now that he wants to come in and make a contribution."

Although Lemieux only has four goals in 17 playoff games, he did score 39 during the regular season and is regarded as a premier playoff performer. Last year, he was the playoff MVP while leading New Jersey to the Stanley Cup championship, the use of two rings he has won.

Lemieux also has a dark side, making him a factor whenever he is on the ice. In this year's playoffs, he has been suspended twice for violent hits.

His latest suspension followed

Lemieux spent his suspension working out in the Colorado locker room while the Avalanche were working over the Panthers.

"He did a terrific job with the guys in the room, being a leader, being a guy who supports each and every guy on the team," Crawford said. "He's been a major factor in our success throughout the year and into these playoff games. It's a nice comfort to have, knowing you can have a competitive guy like Claude coming back into the lineup going into a very tough battle."

The official name of the Panthers' rink is the Miami Arena. Unofficially, it's called the "Rat's Nest" because fans throw plastic rats on the ice after every goal the team scores.

That could make for a very long night for the opposition, unless of course the Avalanche continue to dominate the series as they have the first two games. Panthers coach Doug MacLean doesn't think Thursday night's lopsided loss will have any carryover effect in Miami.

"Sometimes when this happens, it's a good thing," MacLean said. "I remember the Islanders trounced Edmonton in their quest for five (Cups) in a row and didn't beat Edmonton after that. Who knows?"

"I think we will play very well Saturday night. I have no doubts about that. It will be a battle in the 'Rats Nest.'"

Ex-Princeton coach ready to sign as Kings assistant

CHICAGO (AP) — Pete Carril, who retired as Princeton coach, will join the Sacramento Kings as an assistant.

Carril, 65, who ended his career at Princeton with a record of 514-201 and 11 Ivy League titles, spent the last few days at an NBA pre-draft camp in Chicago with Kings vice president Geoff Petrie. Petrie played for Carril at Princeton.

Petrie said he plans to hire Carril in "the near future."
"We've been friends for awhile and I know that Pete's one of the best basketball minds around," Petrie said. "He is at a stage where he can still teach and we think he'll be a tremendous asset to our organization."

Carril said he could sign a contract as early as today. "I want to be useful and helpful, but I don't have any major decisions to make," Carril said. "I'm going to be seen and not heard."

Carril returned in March after his team was eliminated from the NCAA Tournament by Mississippi State. The Tigers had upset defending national champion UCLA 43-41 in the opening round.

Nets make it official: Calipari is new coach

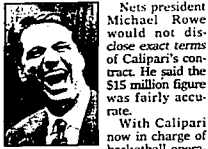

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — John Calipari didn't get the Rick Pitino treatment from the New Jersey Nets, but the former Massachusetts coach was offered enough to take his first NBA coaching job.

The Nets today formally announced the hiring of Calipari — for five years at a reported $15 million — at a well-attended news conference. Not only will he coach the woeful Nets, but Calipari also carries the title of executive vice president of basketball operations.

Pitino, Calipari's mentor who led Kentucky to the national championship, last week turned down the Nets' $25 million offer to become coach, GM and part-owner.

"I want to tell you I am excited about this opportunity," Calipari said today at the Continental Airline Arena. "I wanted to be coach of the Nets."

"My goal is to create a love affair between this organization and the fans of New Jersey. I also want to thank Rick for not taking this job."

Nets president Michael Rowe would not disclose exact terms of Calipari's contract. He said the $15 million figure was fairly accurate.

With Calipari now in charge of basketball operations, general manager Willis Reed will change jobs and be senior vice president for player development and scouting.

Rowe said Calipari would decide, whether he wanted to hire another general manager or additional executives.

The club also said it would build a training facility. The Nets have been using gyms at Fairleigh Dickinson and a local trucking company.

"We are delighted," Rowe said. "We have been untiring in the search for a new coach and we got a little lucky, too."

Unexpected Els returns to field

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Though Ernie Els obliged the sentiments of many fans last week by shooting 75 during the final round of Tom Watson's win at the Memorial, his closest pursuer this week isn't expecting that kind of performance again.

Els needed only 23 puts Friday in a 5-under-par 66 at the Buick Classic that gave him an 11-under 131 total, five strokes ahead of David Frost and David Gray.

Els looked at shooting a number on the weekend," said Parry, whose 66 Friday tied Els' round as the best of the day. "Ernie will not back up. He is going to have to do some chasing."

Els' unpredictable performances in the third and fourth rounds of tournaments in 1996 gives the field some hope, despite his nearly flawless play during perfect weather of the first two rounds.

He has averaged just over 69 strokes in the eight PGA third rounds he's played this year, seventh-best on the tour. But he's averaged four strokes higher in his Sunday rounds, 150th-best. His best finish all season was the tie for sixth at the Memorial, where Watson broke a nine-year winning drought.

Els said he wanted to remain aggressive this weekend.

"It's like a new start tomorrow," he said. "It's a new mindset — you think of everybody as being even."

Frost had a second-round 69. Greg Norman, who had a 70, Mike Reid, 71, and Kevin Sutherland, 69, were another shot back at 137.

With four of the statistically hardest holes on the PGA Tour in 1995 — the tight, tricky water course at Westchester is regarded as one of the more difficult the pros play each year and a good tune-up for next week's U.S. Open.

But in the 10 rounds Els has played at Westchester over the years, he has been under par nine times. He finished second to Lee Janzen in the Buick Classic in 1994 and tied for fourth last year.

Weiskopf takes Seniors lead

MIDWAY, Pa. (AP) — Tom Weiskopf's eagle on the 16th hole of the 40-hole Senior PGA Classic and the first-round lead Friday in the $1.1 million Pittsburgh Senior Classic at Quicksilver Golf Club.

Weiskopf held a one-stroke lead over Brad Bradley and local favorite Arnold Palmer, who placed his approach shots around the pin all day in shooting a 3-under 69, Palmer's second-best score of the season.

Palmer's previous best round this year was a first-round 68 on March 30 at The Tradition, where he finished 43rd. He has not won a tournament since 1988, when he won the Senior Tour's Crestar Classic.

On Friday, Palmer and Weiskopf both kept the ball below the pin on most greens, a key to success at hilly Quicksilver. Weiskopf, who now devotes most of his time to his golf course design business, hit 15 of 18 greens despite limited practice.

"It's about as well as I've played this year," Weiskopf said. "I drove the ball well and hit a lot of wonderful iron shots. It was one of those days for me."

Weiskopf's only troublesome hole was the par-4 No. 3, where he left his approach shot 12 feet above the pin and knocked his first putt 15 feet past the hole. He eventually three-putted for a bogey, but avoided trouble the rest of the way.

His eagle on par-5 No. 15 came after his approach shot stopped 8 feet below the hole, leaving him the easy eagle putt.

Palmer, meanwhile, recovered from a bogey on No. 10, which put him at even par, by scoring birdies on the 12th, 15th and 16th holes.

"I wanted to always use enough club to reach the pin, but not use too much club so that I would be sitting above the hole," said Palmer, who is from nearby Latrobe. "For the most part, that strategy worked."

Palmer's score could have been better. He missed several key putts, including an 8-footer on No. 2 and a 5-footer on No. 7.

Eastwood, who has been battling a sore leg for about a month, played the front nine in two-under par, then shook off two bogeys on the back nine by sinking a 12-foot putt for an eagle on the par-5 17th hole.

"I am very pleased with that round, especially with my leg problem," Barnes said.

Dave Eichelberger, J.C. Sneed and Brian Barnes were at 2-under par. Eichelberger won the tournament in 1994, when it was known as the Quicksilver Classic. He was even par through 12 holes before scoring birdies on three of the last six holes.

Kein leads LPGA after 2nd day

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Emilee Klein shot a 6-under-par 66 Friday to take a one-stroke lead over Pat Bradley after the rain-delayed second round of the LPGA Oldsmobile Classic.

Klein, who has three top-10 finishes this season, stands at 10-under 134 midway through the tournament, both has been plagued by rain from the start.

Dana Dormann, one of three players who shared the first-round lead, and Alison Nicholas are one stroke behind Bradley.

Bradley had a second-round 67, while Dormann had a 70 and Nicholas a 69.

Play was delayed for almost three hours Friday. The second first round was delayed for about 3 1/2 hours and it doesn't get much better as Saturday's forecast calls for a 40 percent chance of showers.

Laura Davies led at 138. The best first-round co-leaders had rough second rounds. Dale Egging had a 74 and was at 140, while Gail Graham had a 77 and her 143 total barely made the cut which was at 144.

Klein opened the second round on the back side at the 6,919-yard Walnut Hills course and finished the nine holes in a seven-hole span on the front.

"I started out kind of shaky," Klein said. "I was never upright, but my tempo was off. I focused on tempo and was patient and I started hitting the ball great."

Having changed from a mallet putter to a blade following last year's British Open, Klein said her putting has greatly improved.

"My putting gets a little better each week," Klein said. "My putting has improved over the last year (because of) maturity and a lot of hard work. Putting is the biggest change in my game over the last year."

Klein's best finish so far this season was a tie for third at the Twelve Bridges LPGA Classic.

"I got up and down from everywhere today," she said. "This course is very tight and the greens are smooth. I hit the ball very straight and consistent. I have been trying to be patient, eventually I will break through. I have been working hard on my game. There is a lot of golf left this week and I am usually pretty steady. I'm not a real streaky player."

Bradley said she was pleased with her start, which included three birdies in the first four holes she played.

"That made the day a little bit easier," said Bradley, who finished first round before the afternoon rains.

"It was a perfect day for scoring. I was pleased to take advantage of my moments. (Saturday) I'll try to stay as focused as the last two days. The way the scoring is going, it's not going to stall after today. These were the best two days I've ever had here."

LSU coach says he still cheers for Hurricanes

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Louisiana State coach Skip Bertman has won a pair of national championships after a similar experience as an assistant with Miami. On Saturday, his current team met the Florida Gators for the title at the College World Series.

Bertman, the U.S. Olympic baseball coach, is a Florida native and Miami graduate who was the Hurricanes' senior coach for eight years when Ron Fraser was building the 'Canes into a two-time national championship team in the 1970s and '80s.

"I was a Hurricane," Bertman said. "I grew up with Miami and the university. Outside LSU, I always root for Hurricane teams in football, and baseball for that matter. It's exciting to play against a team you grew up with. Our championship teams in '91 and '93 when we were hot, playing well in all phases of the game. They're just doing a great job."

LSU has been hot team, too, scoring 45 runs in its last two games in the regionals and nine in each of their first two wins at Omaha. Then they beat second-place Florida in a 2-1 pitchers' duel Thursday.

Bertman will try to quiet the Hurricane fans that are hitting 377 in Omaha after a regular season at 440, fourth-best in the nation. LSU will start Kevin Shipp (5-4) with Brett Laxton (8-2) ready if needed.

"I feel great about being able to smile," said Shipp, who has two relief appearances and his first two saves of the season at the CWS. "Hopefully I can go out and pitch as I have all year, keep them off balance with my curve ball, throw my fastball in and out and hold them down to as few hits as I can."

Shipp has some big game experience. He pitched in the junior college national championship game a year ago for Meridian (Miss.) Community College. Being a part of two of the three wins with two saves at the CWS also has given him a confidence boost.

"We've worked hard for this situation and put ourselves in a good situation to be playing for the national championship," said LSU catcher and captain Tim Lincecum. "I think we've been playing decent. I don't think we've played our best yet here and we're still finding ways to win and that's impressive. But Miami is a hot club."

Miami coach Jim Morris agrees. "We feel like we're playing very well right now," he said. "We know LSU has got a great club. They've got a lot of guys who can hit it."

Morris also is going with his big game pitcher, J.D. Arreaga (12-1), who has started every big game since Morris came to Miami three years ago. The junior left-hander threw seven innings at five-hit ball to hold top seed Alabama to one run in the 'Canes' 15-1 romp on Sunday.

Hall of Famer gets probation in tax case

NEW YORK (AP) — Willie McCovey, the Hall of Famer slugger who remains among baseball's all-time home run champions 16 years after retiring, was sentenced Friday to two years probation for evading taxes on baseball memorabilia.

"It's one of those things that was overlooked at the time and I do accept responsibility for it," the 57-year-old McCovey told U.S. District Judge Edward R. Korman in Brooklyn.

He entered the courtroom with the help of a crew still recovering from an 11-hour back operation last fall. He still faces reconstructive surgery on both knees as a result of baseball injuries.

"This is Willie McCovey, your honor. This is a man who stepped up to the plate and accepted responsibility in this matter," said McCovey's lawyer, John Pollok. "I have never represented a man or woman who possesses the kind of quiet dignity this man possesses."

McCovey stared straight ahead during the sentencing. He had previously pleaded guilty to a single count of tax evasion.

McCovey admitted he failed to declare $41,800 in income in 1983, when he made $87,000, and $63,800 in baseball memorabilia income received between 1980 and 1990.

"The only thing I'd like to say is while I've always tried to do the right things, I have never willingly tried to cheat the government," McCovey told Korman.

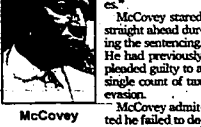

McCovey was sentenced to two years probation and fined him $5,000 for his role in a baseball memorabilia market that exploded in popularity in the 1980s.

He faced up to seven months in prison and a $250,000 fine under the plea bargain.

McCovey, who played mostly for the San Francisco Giants, is eighth on the all-time home run list, having hit 521 before retiring after the 1980 season.

In December, former Brooklyn Dodgers outfielder Duke Snider was sentenced to two years of probation and ordered to pay the Internal Revenue Service about $27,000.

Both men were charged after an investigation focused on a January 1989 autograph show in Atlantic City, where the pair and eight other former major leaguers reportedly failed to report more than $240,000 in cash they received.

McCovey admitted he failed to declare $41,800 in income in 1983, when he made $87,000, and $63,800 in baseball memorabilia income received between 1980 and 1990.

Trainers fear filly in Belmont Stakes

NEW YORK (AP) - The filly My Flag's presence in the Belmont Stakes is a red flag to D. Wayne Lukas and Nick Zito, the two dominant Triple Crown trainers of the 1990s.

"My opinion is that My Flag has a very good shot," said Zito, who will saddle Preakness winner, Louis Quatorze and Saratoga Dandy for the 1 1/2-mile finale of the Triple Crown on Saturday. "I'm afraid of her. I think she'll run better than most of them in there."

While predicting the winner Saturday will be one of the six horses that ran in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, Lukas said, "But I'll hedge my bet with My Flag." The filly's trainer made the right decision. She won at Belmont since 1988. The last to win was Tanya in 1905.

"I'm one of the few guys who think Shug (McGaughey, My Flag's trainer) made the right decision. She's got a lot of advantages."

The daughter of Easy Goer, the 1989 Belmont winner, and Personal Ensign, unbeaten in a 13-race career, has always trained and raced well at Belmont Park, her home base. In four Belmont starts, she has two wins, including the Breeders' Cup Juvenile Fillies; a second and a third. Easy Goer won eight of 10 Belmont starts. Personal Ensign won all 10.

"That went into my thinking," McGaughey said Friday.

My Flag's chances could be compromised by her late running style in a Belmont record-equating field of 15 starters. Fifteen also ran 1983 when Caveat won.

"What if one of those 14 stop in front of her," Zito said. "History will be stopped in the making."

My Flag was made the early co-favorite at 6-1 with Skip. Away, 12th in the Derby and second in the Preakness.

The entry of Louis Quatorze, who bounced back from a 16th in the Derby to win the Preakness, and Saratoga Dandy, who, 9-2, gave Zito his first Belmont victory. Since 1990, the trainer has won two Derbies, had a win and second in the Preakness, and has had four seconds in the Belmont, including the last two.

Editor's Note, sixth in the Derby and third in the Preakness, and Prince of Thieves, third in the Derby and seventh in the Preakness, each are 8-1 to give Lukas a third straight Belmont victory. His string of six consecutive wins in Triple Crown races, beginning with 1994 Preakness, was snapped in this year's Preakness.

The 3-1 early favorite is the gelding Cavonnier, beaten a nose by the now-retired Grindstone in the closest Derby since 1959 and fourth in the Preakness.

Shannon Miller wins National gymnast title

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Shannon Miller fell off the balance beam in her first round Friday, but recovered with nearly flawless performances in the other three optional events to capture the National Gymnastics Championship.

Miller, a five-time medalist at the 1992 Olympics and the 1993 national champion, was in first place after Wednesday's compulsory. But she scored a 9.3 on the vault and fell into third place behind Jaycie Phelps and Dominique Moceanu.

She came back with a 9.8 on the vault, a 9.85 on the uneven bars and a 9.9 on the floor exercises to edge Phelps by five-hundredths of a point over the two-day competition.

"I've had competitions before where I've had to come back. The fall woke me up and got me going for the next three events," she said.

The top 14 finishers will go to Boston later this month for the Olympic trials. Following Moceanu were Amanda Borden and Kerri Strug.

Dominique Dawes finished sixth, followed by Kristy Powell, Jennie Thompson, Mary Beth Arnold and Katie Telford in tenth.

Theresa Kulikowski was 11th, Mahini Bharadwaj and Larissa Fontaine tied for 12th, and Kristen Maloney finished 14th to qualify for the trials.

Monica Flammer in 15th and Alayna Ingram in 16th also made the U.S. national team.

Miller's coach, Steven Nunno, said Miller's experience pulled her through after the beam.

"If she was feeling sorry for herself at all we were going to have more problems than we were wishing for," he said.

Moceanu, the 14-year-old defending champion, said she just wanted to do her best.

"Hopefully I'll be better before the next ones, which will be more important," she said. "It was all right. I could have done better. You can always do better. I just hope to do better next time."

Moceanu's coach, Bela Karolyi, said it "wasn't the happiest night of my life, and not for her, hopefully."

"But the way she pulled through in a fairly difficult situation makes me feel yes, she's still a strong competitor for the coming games in quite a few events," he said.

The top six finishers in each event will compete in the event finals on Saturday, as do the men's top event performers.

Brands, Jackson advance to finals

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) - Terry Brands and Kevin Jackson earned spots in Saturday's finals during the U.S. Olympic Freestyle Wrestling Trials Friday at the Spokane Arena.

Eric Akin pulled off an upset win at 114 1/2 pounds, while Pat Santoro, Pat Smith, Mike Van Arsdale, Kanamit Solomon, Dan Chaid and Tom Erikson also posted wins to advance.

Ten weight-class winners during Friday's elimination tournament will wrestle the No. 1 seeds on Saturday. The No. 1 seeds, winners of the recent national championships, had byes.

Winners of the best-of-3 matches on Saturday will, Atlanta 1996 Olympic trials, the finals at 105 1/2 pounds. Solomon will advance to Saturday's 105 1/2 finals against Rob Elter of Clarion, Pa.

Akin came back from a 6-0 deficit to upset Zeke Jones 7-6 in overtime at 114 1/2 pounds. Jones, a silver medalist in the 1992

Olympics, protested the decision. Akin will face Lou Rosselli on Saturday.

Brands, a two-time world champion, advanced to the finals by in the 125 1/2 pound finals defeating Brad Penrith 10-0 on just Saturday.

No. 1 men's seeds downed at trials

BALTIMORE (AP) - Mike Dodd and Mike Whitmarsh delivered the most stunning upset so far at the Olympic Beach Volleyball Trials, beating No. 1 seeds Karch Kiraly and Kent Steffes 3-2 Friday.

Kiraly, who won two gold medals for indoor volleyball, and Steffes must advance through the losers' bracket to obtain one of the two remaining men's berths in this summer's Olympic Games.

"On the women's side, Barbra Fontana Harris and Linda Hanley won both their matches Friday to clinch their Olympic berth."

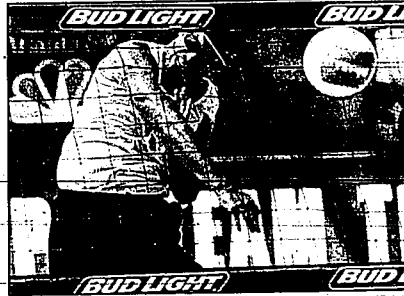

Leading 8-7 in the middle of the match at the Harborview Complex in Baltimore, Dodd and Whitmarsh ripped off five straight points and seven of eight to advance to Saturday's Olympic qualification match against Randy Stoklos and Adam Johnson.

"This win is really sweet," said Dodd, 38. "It's a way it's tough when you beat a guy like Karch who has meant so much to the sport. It's kind of a double-edged sword."

Kiraly, considered among the best indoor volleyball players ever, said he didn't think Dodd and Whitmarsh could play "that perfect of a match against us again."

"There are days like that when you can't do anything wrong," he said.

National team loses another spot U.S. softball takes 2 in exhibition

TREXLETON, Pa. (AP) - America's hopes for a cycling medal at the Atlanta Olympics will have to depend on more than just the U.S. national team.

Team Shaklee's Brian McDonough of Weston-Salem, N.C., edged national team member Adam Laurent in the men's points race Friday night to give Shaklee its second Olympic berth at the 2000 Games, at the Lehigh Valley Velodrome.

On Wednesday, Kent Bostick of Shaklee upset two national team members to win the men's 4,000-meter individual pursuit at the Olympic trials.

The U.S. national team had hoped to send six of its eight long cyclists to Atlanta for a shot at the gold in the four-team pursuit. But with Shaklee taking two of those spots on the Olympic team, four members of the national team will now stay home instead of just two.

McDonough wasn't even the best Shaklee had to offer. He was trying to help teammate James Carney win. On Thursday, Carney upset defending national champion Mariano Friedick, who injured his knee in a spill, in the first round of the men's points race.

The points race is a complicated event that features 36 riders and awards points to the top four finishers every fifth lap. The 50th lap and 12th are worth double, and whoever has the most total points wins the event.

Coaches will select the second points race competitor on Sunday when they round out the U.S. squad with the four team pursuit selections.

Also Friday night, Marty Nothstein, who lives just a few miles from the Lehigh Valley Velodrome, gave the hometown fans something to cheer about when he swept William Clay for the Olympic berth in the 200-meter sprint before a track record crowd of 5,261.

HAZLETON, Pa. (AP) - Michele Smith and Lisa Fernandez each threw a perfect game Friday night to lead the U.S. Olympic softball team to a pair of exhibition victories.

Smith struck out 13 of 15 batters in a 9-0 victory over the Drifton Under-18 all-star team in the first game, which was called after five innings due to an eight-run rule.

Team USA broke the game open with a seven-run fifth inning highlighted by two-run homers by Sheila Cornell and Jennifer Brundage.

In the second game, Fernandez struck out 14 of 15 as Team USA defeated the Pennsylvania Class A All-Stars 6-0. The game was called after five innings because of lightning.

Istanbul Olympic bidders open arms, cross fingers

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) - At the mouth of the Bosphorus, an old fisherman plucked down an Olympic banner. He draped it over his head and tried to take a nap.

The symbolism, though unintentional, was on target: There is no rest from the publicity blitz. The organizers of Istanbul's scorching bid for the 2004 Summer Olympics have blanketed the city with their pitch while thousands of delegates and reporters are in town for a United Nations conference on urban ill.

"Why be shy?" said Ridvan Mentes, a member of the city's 2004 Olympic Bidding Committee.

Planners, he added, learned the value of hype during the failed bid for the 2000 Games, awarded to Sydney, Australia.

Banners bearing the interlocking Olympic rings stream from bridges and poles. Crews move around the city by night slapping up billboard-size posters with the "Olympicist" slogan. Turkey's president gave the bid a plug at the ceremony on the eve of the city summit opening.

Privately, however, the Olympic boosters have their fingers crossed. Their bid can get a world-class push if the U.N. summit runs efficiently and safely.

But the meeting also could turn against them. The problems being discussed - uncontrollable urban growth, pollution, overtaxed social and transit systems - are the same liabilities that could sink Istanbul's quest for the first intercontinental Olympics. Istanbul's 10 million people span both sides of the Bosphorus Strait, which separates Europe and Asia.

Turkey's human rights record - especially its village-evacuation tactics in its war against Kurdish separatists - will likely come under closer international Olympic Committee scrutiny if Istanbul emerges as a leading candidate.

"I won't lie and say they won't look at human rights," said Mentes. "Sure, there are things against us. Staff is a mess. Air pollution is a mess. But these are just the type of things we could tackle with the momentum of the Olympics. The city could really benefit from the games."

Ten other cities - six in Europe, three in Latin America and one in Africa - also are seeking the games.

The Trouble with Bees

Lousy weather, mites wreak havoc on U.S. honeybees

The Associated Press

America's honeybees are in a bad way. Already weakened by 12 years of battling blood-sucking mites, bees have been brought to their knees by a soggy spring on the heels of many regions' exceptionally cold winter. Experts estimate that more than 90 percent of wild colonies have been wiped out nationwide, along with a large number of those tended by beekeepers.

"It's devastated the population of unmanaged bees that are in hollow trees and old buildings and things," said Hachiro Shimunuki of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's bee research laboratory in Beltsville, Md. Shimunuki estimated that this year's winter-spring-parasite catastrophe has killed off 30 percent of existing colonies of domesticated bees, but emphasized that the number varies widely from one state to the next.

In Maine, state apirary inspectors reported losing 80 percent of kept bees. In Wisconsin, beekeepers lost 57 percent of their stock. New York estimates losing 60 to 70 percent of its domesticated bees.

Even in Georgia, where losses are estimated at only 15 percent, hive inspectors noted a shortage of bees available to pollinate the state's squash crop.

But most farmers managed to get their plants pollinated some way, Shimunuki said.

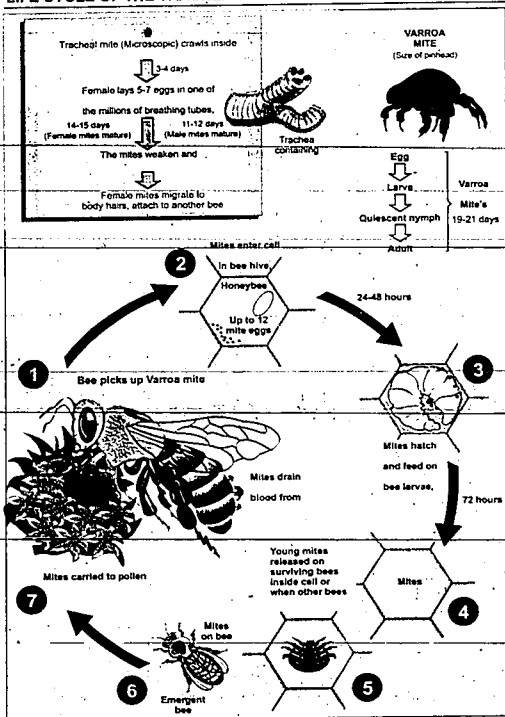

"I don't think it's been a critical shortage," he said. "Nobody has called in a panic and said, 'We don't have any bees.' But those who depend on wild bees for pollination are in for a rough summer. Gardeners and small farmers who can't afford to rent colonies from beekeepers won't see very much in the way of cucumbers, melons, apples, blueberries and the dozens of other crops that won't produce without bees."

"The people probably who will suffer will be backyard types," said Troy Fore, executive secretary of the American Beekeeping Federation and professional beekeeper in Joplin, Mo. "People who don't go to the trouble of renting bees."

In the past, many farmers relied on wild bees to pollinate their crops. Although these aren't wild in the truest sense — they're really just domesticated colonies that have escaped human domination — they are wild in the sense that they don't require tending.

But as those populations have declined in recent years, bee rental has become a sizeable industry. Keepers make $46 million annually renting their charges to farmers, who rely on bees to produce an estimated $9.7 billion worth of crops.

LIFE CYCLE OF THE TRACHEAL MITE AND THE VARROA MITE

sucks its blood. But it's the larger, tick-sized varroa mite that really puts bees in a bind. It attacks both adults and developing eggs by attaching to them from the outside.

"The mites get onto the adult bees and live off their blood," Shimunuki explained. "But what they do to young bees is much worse. If infested eggs hatch at all, the young can emerge disfigured, often lacking a wing or a leg."

And because the honeybee colony does not tolerate anybody who is physically disfigured," Shimunuki said, worker bees usually devour the crippled insects as soon as they're born.

The two types of mites, which appeared in the United States in the 1980s, have devastated bees around the country. Agriculture Department researcher Gerald Loper, who has monitored bees in the Oracle, Ariz., area since 1983, has seen them divide from 215 colonies in 1993 to 12 this March.

"I think they may well have seen their low point this spring," Loper said. "This year has been worse than most, especially in the Northeast, because of the weather: Cold winters wipe out bees simply because the bees' body heat can't keep the hives warm enough. So if a hive's population is already reduced by mite infestation, it's that much more susceptible to the cold."

"You don't have the critical mass to keep the hive warm," Shimunuki said.

Cool, rainy weather this spring just made matters worse by delaying the blooming of plants, he added. No blooms meant no nectar, so bees had to live on honey for a few weeks longer than they normally would. Many hives probably just ran out, Shimunuki said.

Remaining colonies will probably bounce back, Loper said, but many won't be the same. In the colonies that he's studied, Africanized bees, also known as killer bees, have shown more resistance to the mites than their honeybee counterparts. So the colonies that pull through will be those that have hybridized with the invaders from the south, becoming more aggressive.

But experts said that they can't predict how the decline in the wild bee population will affect wild plants and the animals that eat them. But they guessed that in places such as New York and New Jersey, which may have no wild honeybees left, there aren't going to be too many wild berries this year.

VARIETIES OF BEES

- Honeybee
  - Golden brown in color.
  - Most important type of bee in pollination because of their industriousness.
  - "Scout" honeybees communicate to other workers the direction and distance of flowers from the hive by an elaborate dance.
- Wasp
  - Characterized by slender, narrow-waisted body.
  - Many different types, including yellowjackets and hornets.
  - Many live in a colony, like honeybees, with a caste system of queen, drones and workers; other types make solitary nests.
- Leafcutting bee
  - Make their nests in the ground or some natural cavity, frequently wood.
  - Use cut pieces of leaves or flower petals to line their tunnel walls and partition them into cells.
  - One species is an important pollinator of alfalfa in the West.
- Digger bee
  - Medium, usually black with markings of yellow, red or metallic hues.
  - Nest in burrows dug in the ground or in banks along streams.
  - Main tunnel shaft is usually vertical, with lateral chambers lined with wax and stocked with pollen and nectar for the young.
- Carpenter bee
  - Large variety resemble bumblebees, while small are dark bluish-green in color.
  - Build nests in cavities they cut with their sharp jaws in solid wood or the stems of plants.
  - Can cause considerable house damage due to tunneling.
- Bumblebee
  - Have large, round, hairy bodies with distinctive yellow and black color.
  - Important pollinators of certain kinds of clover.
  - Usually nest in the ground, in abandoned mouse or bird nests.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff

"Think like a man of action; act like a man of thought."
— Henri Bergson

Today's East started on the right track. He was on the way to beating South's game. What got in the way? West had more than East had hoped for, distracting East from the main goal.

East took his heart ace and saw the obvious. With no prospects of winning a trick in either spades or diamonds, his side had to play for three winners in clubs. Accordingly, it was not difficult to find the shift to a low club at trick two.

South ducked to West's Jack and West continued with the club king. That's when the train went off the tracks. Instead of overcalling and leading a third club, East allowed West's king to hold and South made his game, escaping with only two club losers, and the heart loser.

"Perhaps I should have played my king first and then my Jack," offered West. "Even if you had a spade trick, we still needed another club."

"That would have helped," replied East. "However, I take all the blame. It was obvious we had to win three club tricks. In the unlikely event you held K-Q-J and didn't choose a club for your opening lead, South would have ruffed the third round anyway. So, it was clear for me to overtake your king to give you a third-round ruff."

East was right to take the blame. A small portion of it should go to fate. Had West not held the pesky jack of clubs, there would have been no problem in finding the best defense.

ANSWER: Three hearts. Offer the raise and leave the final decision to partner.
