Evidence of terrorism in jet crash strengthens

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — From the bottom of the continental shelf to the highest levels of Washington, Americans searched Friday for evidence that the nation's second-deadliest aviation disaster was also its deadliest terrorism attack.

The FBI stopped short of declaring the crash of TWA Flight 800 a crime, although the bureau announced a "massive" investigation to find out what caused the huge explosion that brought down the 747.

"We have a lot of things that look like accident, a lot of things that look like terrorism," said James Kallstrom, head of the FBI's New York office.

"Assuming the disaster may have been deliberate, agents began contacting informants in the terrorist underworld," according to a federal investigator who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity.

"It would be foolish not to be out there seeking every bit of information we can, from any corner," the source said.

Unidentified sources quoted Friday by

Heartbreak hotel, missile theory - A3

ABC News said a federal agency received a claim of responsibility for the TWA explosion from a group tied to Ramzi Yousef.

He is now on federal trial in New York City, accused of plotting to blow up 12 West Coast-bound airliners in a single day in 1995.

The group said the TWA explosion was in retaliation for Yousef's capture, ABC said. An FBI spokesman refused to comment on the report.

Yousef, 29, who says he is innocent and is representing himself at the trial, is also accused of bombing a Philippines Airlines flight in December 1994, killing a Japanese passenger.

Kallstrom told reporters that the FBI would not take control of the TWA investigation from the National Transportation Safety Board until more evidence is found. He urged people to call a toll-free number with tips, and gave the Internet address for the FBI home page.

Panel backs abortion pill

The Washington Post

Mifepreston, the controversial "abortion pill" also known as RU-486, is safe and effective and should be made available to American women, an advisory panel of the Food and Drug Administration concluded Friday.

Seven of eight voting members of the FDA's Reproductive Health Drugs Advisory Committee voted that the medical abortion method was safe for use in the United States, although they warned that "safe" is not the same as "risk-free."

The FDA is not bound by the recommendations of its advisory committees, but usually follows them. FDA Commissioner David Kessler said after the meeting that the panel had given him "a very strong signal" that the drug should be approved, and added, "We take that advice very, very seriously."

Buhl activist says 'Slow down'

By Karen Tolikkin

Times-News writer

BUHL — When he spies thugs awry in his community, Stanley Phillips gets mad. And then he acts.

He once halted traffic by brandishing a rock in the middle of the road after cars failed to allow three children to cross a Buhl street.

Now the 86-year-old community activist is trying to save his sister's health — by slowing traffic on the street where she lives.

Doctors recently ordered his sister, Viola Benn, to walk regularly after undergoing triple bypass surgery. She started to.

frightened her, and she ended her exercise regimen.

Sporting sandwich boards suspended by rainbow striped connectors, Phillips started standing this week on Fair Street. He tried yellow boards first: "Warning! This is 35 mph! Enforced. Watch 4 Children."

"That didn't work, so I switched to giant black writing on white signboard: "35."

"The reaction is fantastic," he said, spreading his hands. "Brake lights! I'm going to rename the street 'Christmas Tree Lane.'"

The city raised the limit on Fair Street from 25 mph to 35 mph about a month ago. Since then, residents say traffic.

Trash rates rise for Twin Falls County residents

By Analise Taylor

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Residents of Twin Falls County will be paying a higher fee to dump their trash after Oct. 1.

Twin Falls County Commissioners decided Friday that city residents will pay approximately $1.40 to $1.50 more for their trash pickup, bringing the cost to about $5.50.

The final amount must be determined by the City Council, because the county does not bill city residents directly for trash pickup. It merely sets the rate for the city's haulers, leaving the council to establish individual household fees.

Rural residents and those in towns such as Filer or Kimberly will have to pay $35 — up from $26 — per ton of garbage.

"The rate increase is higher than officials expected when they opened the Hub Butte landfill south of Twin Falls in December 1994. A year ago, the county predicted the $26-per-ton fee would increase $1 per year, at least through 1998.

"We want to plan for the long term," said Twin Falls County Commissioner Brent Reinke said Friday. "This fee will help to maintain a stable cash flow for five to 10 years."

"Twin Falls County will still have one of the lowest fees in the state after it is raised," Reinke added. "The fee is being raised now for budgeting purposes."

Ketchum recently announced its dumping fee is increasing to $55 per ton. Other Idaho cities pay even more.

The money will be used to open a new "cell" at the Twin Falls County landfill to take the county's trash after the cell currently being used is full.

Excavation of that new unit is planned for February or March of 1997, and it will be ready to use in October or November of next year, Reinke said.

URS Consultants, Inc., of Seattle, evaluated the county's Hub Butte landfill, seven miles south of Twin Falls, and provided commissioners with an estimate for the new cell.

The landfill currently is taking about 52 tons of garbage per year, meaning the new cell will be needed late next year.

Total cost for that cell will top $1.5 million. URS recommended that the county budget $765,000 over the next two years to pay for it.

Providing a new cell means a lot more than just digging a hole in the ground. Construction involves excavation, lining and drain rock replacement. Before it can accept garbage, the new cell must first pass federal, state, and district health standards, Reinke said.

The amount of garbage at the Twin Falls County Landfill has leveled off, Reinke said.

Ironically, the fee for dumping garbage goes up if the total volume of trash goes down, Reinke said, because the county gets the equivalent of a volume discount.

For instance, the "tipping fee" or cost to dump trash is estimated at $32.50 per ton if the county dumps 57,000 tons per year, while the rate climbs to $35.40 per ton if the trash volume falls to 53,000 tons per year.

Basques will boost Gooding economy

By Steve Crump

Times-News writer

GOODING — The good news is that Gooding's economy is about to get a two-day, $1 million shot in the arm.

The bad news is that it must share it. "We really don't know what to expect," said Gooding Chamber of Commerce President Kevin Koonce on the eve of the North American Basque Organization convention, which begins its two-day run today.

"If the visitors park, ride the bus and spend their money downtown, then we'll do OK."

Seventy-five delegates from 33 Basque organizations throughout North America gathered at the Gooding City Hall at 7:30 this morning for their annual convention, but that's only the beginning. Up to 700 entertainers will be in town, plus the families of the delegates and several thousand people who traditionally attend the Gooding Basque Organization's annual mid-summer festival.

Add to that the lure of Gooding's expanded Summerfest celebration, and this weekend has local merchants — and 50 vendors who've set up shop on the Fralun Middle School lawn — dreaming dollar signs.

The demand has overwhelmed Gooding's 100 hotel rooms, sending guests as far away as Twin Falls in search of lodging — and effectively spreading the event's economic impact over three counties.

Basques in the U.S., today's events - B1

And the Gooding Chamber of Commerce really doesn't know whether to expect 1,000 visitors or 10,000. When Boise hosted the NABO convention several years ago, it drew 50,000 out-of-towners.

"The Basques themselves don't know," Koonce said. "The only gauge we have was what happened when Buffalo, Wyo., hosted it last year. They had 4,000 to 6,000 visitors."

The rule of thumb, based on a University of Idaho study, is that each visitor to southern Idaho spends about $100 a day, on average. If 5,000 people show up for two days in Gooding, that's $1 million.

Idaho weather summary

Cool high pressure dominated the weather across Idaho Friday.
Most of the state was under sunny skies, the exception being the panhandle where partly to mostly sunny skies were the rule.

High temperatures were about 10 degrees below normal statewide. The range was from the middle 60s to the middle 80s. The coolest reading at mid-afternoon was 64 degrees at Coeur d'Alene while the warmest was 86 at Mountain Home.

Today's weather fact

Equator hurricanes? It will never happen. The closest a hurricane will get is usually a few degrees north or south, and even that rarely happens. Why? Hurricanes need spin to form. That spin is generated from the counter-clockwise flow around low pressure systems. Hurricanes start out as a weak impulse or low pressure area. From a low pressure system, the storm is upgraded to a tropical depression, then a tropical storm, to finally a hurricane.

Tornadoes batter Wisconsin, Pennsylvania

The Associated Press
Thunderstorms pounded the Ohio Valley Friday, while a tornado ripped through a small Wisconsin town and two others touched down in Pennsylvania.
The tornado that struck Oakfield, Wis., tore through a canning factory, a school and dozens of homes, leaving 17 injured.
In Pennsylvania, tornadoes hit two western counties and destroyed three homes, a mobile home and barn. Several roofs were ripped off other homes. No deaths were reported.
In Pennsylvania flash floods washed away part of an earthen dam in Jefferson County. A mud slide caved in the front entrance of a medical center in Crawford County in the western part of the state, flooding the parking lot and soiling into the building by tripping the automatic doors.
Thunderstorms swamped the Chicago area, while thousands of homes in southern suburbs appeared as if lands among flooded yards and streets. Disaster areas grew to 15 counties.

Northern Indiana farmers who welcomed the rain when it first arrived were cleaning up after thunderstorms that dumped more than the ground could soak up, flooding homes in Fort Wayne and Gary.
Many rivers in northern Illinois and Indiana were expected to crest three to five feet above flood levels in the next couple of days.
Severe storms broke out across southwestern Ohio in the morning and in central Maryland, where two inches poured down in 15 minutes in some areas, downing power lines and ripping off roofs. A state of emergency due to floods was declared in northern West Virginia.
By late afternoon much of the thunderstorm activity stretched from eastern New York to the Mid-Atlantic region and into the upper Tennessee Valley.
The rest of the country was relatively quiet and warm, except for the Pacific Northwest, where pleasant, cool conditions prevailed.

Jury deliberations to go on air

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — CBS News plans to let the public to know, beyond a reasonable doubt, exactly how the nation's jury system works.
Judges and jurors in four criminal cases gave the network rare access into the private world of jury deliberations, saying the project's educational benefits outweigh the loss of seclusion.

The project is only the second time a network has been allowed to tape jury deliberations. The first was in 1986, when Public Broadcasting Service aired a documentary on the subject—according to the American Bar Association.
The project is for a "CBS Reports" episode scheduled for broadcast this fall, said CBS News spokeswoman Sandy Genelus in

But that varies with the origins of the visitors, said Kent Just, executive vice president of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce.
"The study indicated that a visitor from California would spend $378, on the average," Just said. "Someone from Montana would spend $74."
"Most of them won't arrive until the weekend," said Jerry Shepard, director of the Gooding Chamber. "So we really won't know what we have to deal with Saturday until Saturday gets here."
Shepard said he had noticed only a moderate increase in activity downtown as of Friday afternoon, and several hotel managers along Twin Falls' Blue Lakes Boulevard North reported only a modest uptick in bookings associated with the Basque convention.

"We've been busy, but most of it has had to do with the (youth) baseball tournament in town this weekend," said Jerri Levine, who manages the Ameritel Inn.
But Koonce said his Wood River Inn, a downtown Gooding restaurant, has had its best week since he's owned the business.
"And every motor-home park in the area is booked up," he said.
Last year's convention, the second time the NABO has visited Buffalo, was a boon for the northwestern Wyoming tourist town of 3,600, according to Nadine Gross, director of the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce.
"The motels were full, and we've got 14 of them here," she said. "A lot of people came to town, and some of them contacted us this spring to ask when the Basque festival was going to be so they could plan their vacations to come back. It broke our hearts to tell them that they'd gone elsewhere."
"They can come back here anytime they want."

Poll suggests fight for control of Congress; Clinton steady

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fifteen weeks before the November election, voters are evenly divided over whether to support Democrats or Republicans for Congress and over which party they trust more to lead the country, according to an Associated Press poll.

The results illustrate remarkable overall stability in President Clinton's political standing over the past seven months. But they also suggest modest improvement in the Republican party's image and congressional hopes.

The biggest single factor in the improved GOP standing was the attitude among older voters, who moved away from Republicans during the 1995 budget debate as Clinton and congressional Democrats accused the Republicans of trying to slash Medicare spending. In the new survey, Republicans break even among voters over age 65.

Overall, asked how they would vote if elections for Congress were today, 41 percent of registered voters in the survey said "Democrat" and 40 percent said "Republican." Fourteen percent said they were undecided and the rest said they would not vote or refused to answer.

The AP survey results represented the best Republican showing on this question in months; two other recent national surveys showed Democrats with a three-point edge on the congressional ballot question.

"Taken together, the data suggest 'control of Congress remains up for grabs,'" said Democratic pollster Peter Hart. "The next 100 days will count a lot more than the previous 100 days."

In a December AP poll, Democrats enjoyed a 48 percent to 37 percent lead over Republicans when registered voters were asked their congressional preference. The survey was taken during a contentious period in which Republicans had forced temporary government shutdowns as part of their budget showdown with Clinton.

In that winter poll, 44 percent picked Democrats and 35 percent picked Republicans when asked which party they trusted most to lead the country for the next four years. In the new survey, voters were evenly split on the question, with each party receiving 39 percent support. Eleven percent said they trusted neither party.

"The polarization that was hurting Republicans at the beginning of the year has leveled off somewhat," said

Hart. "Some of the sharp edges have worn away."

Indeed, the biggest shift on this question was among voters over the age of 65. In December, Democrats had a 15-point edge when older voters were asked which party they trusted more to lead the country. In the new survey, Democrats had just a two-point advantage among these voters.

Likewise, the improved GOP standing against Democrats on the question of congressional preference was driven by older voters: voters over age 65 were evenly divided in the new poll when asked which party they would support for Congress in December. Democrats had a 20-point advantage.

The AP survey of 822 registered voters was conducted July 12-16 by ICR Research Group of Media, Pa., a division of AUS Consultants. The margin of sampling error was plus or minus 4 percentage points.

As for the presidential race, the survey showed Clinton with a commanding lead in a ballot test against Republican Bob Dole and Ross Perot, who is seeking the nomination of his infant Reform Party. Clinton received 45 percent to 33 percent for Dole and 11 percent for Perot.

Congressional pay freeze omitted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress would get a cost-of-living raise, federal employees would receive increased pay for age and abortions and the IRS would suffer a deep budget cut under spending legislation a Senate panel approved Friday.

Similar legislation cleared by the House on Wednesday would deny a 2.3 percent raise to lawmakers, federal judges and senior Clinton administration officials. With Eric's vote, the Senate Appropriations Treasury subcommittee deleted the pay freeze that GOP freshmen added to the House version.

The Senate bill also omits House provisions denying federal employees insurance coverage for abortions, except in cases of rape or incest or when the life of the woman is endangered. The ban, in effect during the Reagan and Bush administrations, had been reinstated when Republicans took control of Congress.

Like the House version, the Senate bill cuts the Internal Revenue Service's budget, but not so steeply. It provides $6.66 billion in fiscal 1997, a 6 percent cut from this year's $7.35 billion. The House would provide $6.57 billion, subjecting the agency to an 11 percent cut.

However, the Senate bill trims back even more severely than the House the IRS' problem-ridden program to modernize its 1960s-era computers. The House halved the administration's request to $424 million, while the Senate would provide $402 million.

The subcommittee chairman, Sen. Richard Shelby, R-Ala., said the money would enable the IRS to continue to operate existing innovations such as electronic and telephone filing and to deploy new systems already developed. It provides no money to develop new programs, Shelby said.

Joseph Lynchner and his sisters, Joy Smith, center, and Judy Teller, console each other outside the Ramada Plaza Hotel near New York's Kennedy Airport Friday. Lynchner's wife, Pam, and daughter, Katia, were aboard the TWA jetliner that crashed into Long Island Sound Wednesday.

Heartbreak hotel: Memories remain

NEW YORK (AP) — Softly, respectfully, Noreen knocks on their doors, inquiring after their needs.

"Miss," the maid tells a hotel guest whose door seems to be jammed, "I think your daughter is playing with the door."

The silence is followed by the awful truth:

"How I wish my daughter was playing with the door."

Noreen works at an airport hotel where the families of Flight 800 are sequestered.

"Who did you lose?" she says in her soft Jamaican lilt to a woman, head in hands, crumpled in an armchair near the elevator.

"My only daughter; my only daughter," comes the reply. A daughter whose birthday would have been today.

Sometimes, as she goes around dispensing her soap and towels and sympathies, the doors stay shut, keeping the world at bay.

Sometimes she is allowed in, and finds them huddled on the bed, clutching their photos for dear life.

"It's a deep emptiness," Noreen says. "It's the worst thing I've ever felt."

She feels the emptiness for herself, as well. Over the past decade, she has come to know many of the TWA pilots and flight attendants who have stayed at this hotel. Her mind is a jumble of the faces of some of those who died.

In the lobby, survivors drag themselves out of elevators in threes and fours, holding each other, sometimes crying.

One minute, they look fine. A moment later, they're heaped up against each other.

Around the clock, they drift in and out of a sparsely furnished ballroom, seeking the comfort of counselors, ministers, priests, rabbis, Red Cross workers.

Spanish, French, English and other languages intermingling.

Families who feel they can cope with it gather around the bar's television. Tear bursts are unleashed by footage of their loved ones' belongings being dragged from the water.

Missile theory nearly nullified

NEW YORK (AP) — The scenario is right off the pages of a Tom Clancy techno-thriller.

A terrorist in a small boat drifts offshore, scans aircraft radio transmissions to pinpoint his target, and knocks TWA Flight 800 out of the sky with a shoulder-fired missile.

Plausible? Barely, say experts suddenly facing questions about whether the Paris-bound jumbo jet that crashed in the Atlantic Wednesday could have been shot down by a hand-held anti-aircraft weapon.

"At the altitude we've been given, the probability is nil," said an expert at the Army's Air Missile Defense command in Washington. "I'm not saying it couldn't happen, but it would be like throwing a rock at a duck," said a second source, a senior Army officer versed in missile capability.

The experts, all of whom spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity, agreed that among a dozen or so portable anti-aircraft missiles in existence, only two — the U.S.-made Stinger and a Russian copy, the SA-14 Gremlin — would have been capable of downing the plane.

The Stinger's range, officially classified, is said by a Pentagon fact sheet to be "more than 3 kilometers," or 1.8 miles. Official publications give it as anywhere from 2.7 to 3.1 miles. The Gremlin, a close copy, has similar capabilities.

That ruled out any chance that a missile fired from shore hit the jetliner, which was 10 miles out and 13,700 feet, or 2.6 miles up, the spokesmen agreed. Even if fired directly upward from a boat, the missile would be at the outer edge of its range.

"Portable missiles begin running out of steam at 12,000 feet," said an analyst at Jane's Defense Weekly, the London-based military think-tank. "In any case, it would be extremely difficult to even identify a target at that distance."

"In order to fire upward you'd need a stable platform — something like an oil tanker, not a small craft," said the senior Army officer. "Our people spend hours and hours of training to get good with the Stinger."

The experts also agreed that a Boeing 747 jumbo jet could easily survive a hit by a Stinger or comparable missile, which would home in on the heat source of an engine rather than hit the fuselage.

"The two-pound explosive charge would destroy an engine but that wouldn't necessarily disable a 747 that has three more," said the Air Missile Defense source. He said there was every possibility that the pilots, in such a case, could make a safe emergency landing.

The sources also noted that modern jetliners use JP-8, a fuel that burns rather than explodes — making it unlikely that an engine hit by a missile would lead to the kind of instant, huge fireball that several witnesses to the TWA crash reported.

Senate rejects welfare changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate rejected a measure Friday that would have changed the Republican welfare plan and allowed children to continue receiving some federal help after their parents re-earn a wage.

Fifty-one senators voted for the measure introduced by Sen. John Breaux, D-La. — nine short of the 60 needed to pass an amendment that exceeds present spending limits.

The vote came on the second day of debate on a Republican overhaul plan that would replace the nation's various welfare programs with a single block grant, giving states more say over how the money is spent. The Senate expects to finish the bill next week.

The House voted 256-170 to approve its plan Thursday.

Republicans want to end the federal guarantee of aid to the poor that has been in place for six decades. Under the plans, welfare recipients would be required to find jobs within two years of joining the program and most participants would be cut off after time limits are reached.

States could deny federal money to mothers who have more children while on welfare, would free the needy from a cycle of dependence, restore their dignity and save the country nearly $60 billion over six years.

Former hostage dies of cancer

CHICAGO (AP) — The Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco, the Roman Catholic priest held hostage in Lebanon by Islamic radicals for 18 months in the mid-1980s, died Friday of cancer. He was 61.

Jenco had been undergoing chemotherapy for pancreatic and lung cancer. He died at St. Dominic's Church in the Chicago suburb of Hillside, said Terry Anderson, a close friend who was held captive with Jenco.

Jenco was head of Catholic Relief Services in Beirut when members of the radical Islamic Jihad snatched him from a city street in January 1985. He was freed in July 1986 after months of negotiations involving the Reagan administration, Shiite militants and Anglican envoy Terry Waite.

In 1995, Jenco wrote a book on his ordeal, "Bound to Forgive — the Pilgrimage to Reconciliation of a Beirut Hostage."

Threat was too great a challenge

ARCHER CITY, Texas (AP) — The City Council spent more than $13,000 to repaint its water tower silver, and another $1,000 installing flat steel bars around its legs to make it less inviting to graffiti artists.

"Now, if any kids climb up there, we're going to give them a spanking," a councilman in this city 100 miles northwest of Fort Worth added jokingly.

It apparently was too great a challenge to pass up, city manager L.B. Boren said.

A message appeared on the 150-foot-tall water tower over the July 4 weekend: "You must give us a spanking."

Stocks slip quietly into the weekend

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stocks gave up some ground Friday as interest rates rose and the latest computer-industry earnings failed to impress. But an exhausted market eased into the weekend with little of the drama that started Wall Street's busiest week ever.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 37.35 to 5,426.62, a loss of just 83 points for a week that started with an ominous slide of nearly 330 points, or 6 percent, before a stunning rebound Tuesday afternoon.

Broader measures also slipped Friday, with the tattered Nasdaq market showing the worst losses after two strong sessions, but it was the third straight day of welcome calm.

"Everybody is relieved that Alan Greenspan isn't going to do anything right away," said Tracy Herrick, chief investment strategist at Jefferies & Co. in San Francisco. He referred to the Federal Reserve chairman's indication Thursday that inflation isn't yet enough of a threat to warrant an economy-slowing interest rate hike.

"But it's been a quiet. After a very rocky week, I think many people have left."

The technology-laden Nasdaq composite index fell 12.14 to 1,057.68, but finished the week with a loss of just 6 points. At the low point of this week's steep, but brief selloff, the Nasdaq was off 95 points, or more than 8.5 percent.

Analysts attributed much of Friday's weakness to the bond market, where long-term interest rates edged higher after easing below a psychologically important barrier a day earlier.

Bonds had rallied Thursday as long-term bond yields — a key determinant of corporate and consumer borrowing costs — fell below 7 percent for the first time since the markets started to unravel two weeks ago on fears of a resurgence in inflation, which makes fixed-income investments like bonds less valuable.

On Friday, bond traders took some profits on Thursday's rally, and the yield on the 30-year Treasury rose to 6.98 percent. Higher interest rates can hurt stocks by raising corporate-borrowing costs and slowing consumer spending.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by a 7-to-5 margin on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume totaled 492.25 million shares as of 4 p.m., down from 465.65 million the previous session, but enough to make it the busiest week in NYSE history, with almost 2.5 billion shares changing hands.

The NYSE's composite index fell 2.19 to 342.91. The Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 4.83 to 633.73, and the American Stock Exchange's market value index fell 2.87 to 548.76.

Several leading technology issues slid sharply in the aftermath of their profit reports, released after the markets closed Thursday.

"People are having sobering second thoughts about how high price-earnings ratios can go and not be of concern," said Henry Hermann, chief investment officer at Waddell & Reed of Overland Park, Kan. Hermann also noted a report showing that investors withdrew $4 billion from stock funds in the week ended Wednesday, indicating that the market's gyrations were too unsettling for some people.

FCCM complains of poor service by US West

The Associated Press

MCI Communications has complained to federal regulators that poor service by US West is costing MCI business.

MCI, the nation's No. 2 long-distance company, is US West's second-biggest customer after AT&T. MCI also is preparing to enter the local phone business in competition with US West.

MCI told the Federal Communications Commission on Thursday that its customers who need US West to switch them over to connect to MCI's network experienced installation and repair delays and other "serious failures."

"Their ability to meet the dates is not nearly as good as it needs to be. It's deplorable," said Bill Lewis, MCI's regional government affairs manager in Denver. "We're losing business. Our customers are aggravated with us. They don't understand it's not our fault."

The complaint filed in Washington covers Idaho and the other 13 states of Englewood, Colo.-based US West's local service region.

MCI is asking for unspecified damages plus financial or other penalties against US West. Neither MCI nor US West could give a timetable for FCC action.

Comment period ends on Snake boats

LEWISTON (AP) — Jet-boat advocates hope they can create enough discontent to stop a Forest Service plan to ban motors from the Snake River in the Hells Canyon National Recreation Area for limited periods. The formal comment period ended Friday on the agency's latest plan to manage powerboats and float boats on the Snake.

Sandra Mitchell, executive director of the Hells Canyon Alliance in Boise, said she was optimistic that letters from jet boaters and their allies would convince the Forest Service to abandon its plan for motor-free periods on 21 miles of the river.

Wallowa-Whitman Forest

Supervisor R.M. Richmond will decide the issue.

Jodee Luther of Snake River Adventures in Lewiston said Richmond's decision could be life or death for the company she operates with her husband, Mike.

"The plan's effect on our companies will be to force smaller operations out of business, limiting choices for visitors," she said.

Mitchell said she was confident the alliance's campaign to spur letter writers to voice support for powerboats has helped.

"I suspect we have been very successful from the number of calls we've received and the number of copies of letters," Mitchell said. "Of course, the real success will be measured by the decision."

Richmond issued the new environmental assessment of a revised plan in June.

The original plan called for eight three-day motor-free periods each July and August on the uppermost 21 miles of the Snake in the national recreation area. Jet boaters and tour operators appealed the plan, saying it would devastate their businesses and was an unfair infringement on a traditional use of the river.

Regional Forest Service officials agreed in part, sending the plan back to Richmond for more work, which resulted in the current plan.

It calls for keeping six or seven three-day motorless periods for the upper 21 miles of river each summer but spreads them throughout June, July and August.

The no-motor provision was an agency effort to appease float boaters who say they want peace and quiet in the canyon. The ban, they say, is needed to keep conflicts between the two groups of boaters from growing.

Mitchell and other jet boaters argue that only a minority of canyon visitors object to their presence.

Although its members are willing to accept limits on their numbers, she said, the jet-boat community will not accept an outright ban on their use of the canyon.

Idaho director misses out on post

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) — Georgia educator Howard W. Fleming Jr. has been selected as the new president of the University of Southern Mississippi over the executive director of the Idaho State Board of Education.

Rayburn Barton, who has been the Idaho board's executive director since the mid-1980s, was among four finalists for the Hattiesburg job.

Ex-Idaho lottery chief vies for job

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Candidates for the Louisiana Lottery presidency agree that the lottery could benefit from dedicating its revenue to a specific program, such as education.

"When the lottery is dedicated to a specific program, people will continue to play it even if they lose because they feel better about it," former Idaho lottery executive director Wally Hedrick told the Louisiana Lottery Board's personnel committee.

Lamm endorsement contested

BOISE (AP) — Two Reform Party activists in Idaho are disputing the claim by a former Idaho chairman of United We Stand America that the state chapter would probably disappear if Ross Perot becomes the party's presidential nominee.

Gary Allen and Bob Wachter claimed the disparaging comments of Ira Holst of Lewiston were nothing more than "parring shots of someone discontented with grassroots activism."

"Some grapes," said Wachter, who served as the Idaho's chapter's first chairman after it was formed in 1992.

Earlier this week, Holst publicly endorsed former Colorado Democratic Gov. Richard Lamm over the Texas billionaire for the Reform Party's presidential nomination.

Holst said Lamm is more committed to the 10 main issues at the Foundation of United We Stand America, including a balanced federal budget and term limits, while making it clear he has no use for Perot.

"He lied to us," Holst said. "He told us, 'I'm Ross and you are the boss.' But it turned out, 'I'm Ross and I am the boss.' If he can't run an organization of 8 million people, how can he run the country?"

Allen, a member of United We Stand America and a Boise-based coordinator for the Reform Party, emphasized that one of the cornerstone principles in the organization's charter was that it does not endorse political candidates at any level.

United We Stand America in Idaho, he said, is only a loose coalition of people that works on specific issues by telephone, telefax and letter and that there have been no formal meetings of the group's board for the last two years.

Holst, who said he quit the national United We Stand America group in February, maintained that while there is no tie between the Reform Party and United We Stand America, many Idaho members who have ignored the Reform Party might change their minds if Lamm is the candidate.

Chechen leader reportedly reappears

Dzhokhar Dudayev Reported alive

MOSCOW (AP) — Kremlin officials said Friday that a man who surfaced this week claiming to be a Chechen military commander long reported dead could rally rebel fighters for new attacks on Russian troops. The officials said they believed the person who made a dramatic appearance at a news conference Thursday in Chechnya was indeed Salman Raduyev, a field commander reported dead earlier this year. But they dismissed as a "publicity stunt" his claims that separatist leader Dzhokhar Dudayev was alive as well. Dudayev had been reported killed in an air raid in late April. In Chechnya Friday, rebels fired on a Russian helicopter, seriously damaging the aircraft and badly wounding a solider, the military command said. In Moscow, the lower house of Parliament passed a resolution by a vote of 272-4 calling on President Boris Yeltsin to hold televised talks between the rebels and his Security Council. The head of the council, Alexander Lebed, is expected to visit Chechnya before the end of the month. The man claiming to be Raduyev told reporters that Chechen rebels carried out two bus bombings in Moscow last week that wounded 33 people. Rebel leaders have vehemently denied involvement. Raduyev's apparent reappearance triggered new fears in Russia of separatist attacks. The identity of the man claiming to be Raduyev, however, was in some doubt — he sounded just like the rebel commander but looked different. Wearing dark glasses and with a deep scar near his eye, he explained he had lost an eye and had plastic surgery after being shot by Russian troops on March 3. Russian news media, citing military sources, reported in March that Raduyev had died of head wounds suffered in a shootout with fellow rebels. The rebels denied it, but Raduyev had not been seen in public since. Russian officials said Friday they were convinced the man was Raduyev, and the Federal Security Service, one of the successor agencies to the KGB, denied Friday that it ever had declared him or Dudayev dead.

Canadian circus gets stage at Disney World

TORONTO (AP) — The daily, five days a week. Financial details of the deal, announced this week, were not disclosed. It will be the second home base for the circus in the United States — a troupe has been performing in Las Vegas since 1993. Another permanent show is expected to open in Berlin in the year 2000. The Cirque du Soleil becomes the second widely known Canadian institution to sign a major deal with the Disney empire in the past two years. The show, with a cast of more than 70, will be performed twice

Japan edgy over safety of its foods

TOKYO (AP) — Takeout manager Kazuo Tamura didn't think twice when a customer motioned to some food and asked, "This stuff is OK, isn't it?"

The unspoken words were obvious — food poisoning. "I knew what he was talking about," said Tamura, who runs a shop in Tokyo's ritzy Ginza district. "We've been extra careful."

Japan — famed for fastidiousness, hyper about hygiene — is discomfited to find itself in the grip of its worst food-poisoning outbreak in nearly a decade.

More than 7,400 people, most of them schoolchildren, have become sickened nationwide, many by a virulent strain of bacteria known as E. coli O157. Four have died and hundreds are hospitalized.

Top-level officials are holding emergency meetings. Customers scrupulously check expiration dates, and are making a run on household disinfectants.

Health officials were anxious to paint the outbreak as a fluke. Dr. Toshio Shimada, chief of the bacteriological division of the National Institute of Health, called it "abnormal."

He and others underscored the importance of distinguishing between conventional food poisoning — now blamed for stomach pains and diarrhea that afflicted several hundred students this week in Yokohama, outside Tokyo — and those linked to the far more serious E. coli O157 bacteria, believed to be causing a much larger outbreak in the western city of Sakai.

Mail strike could suspend monopoly

LONDON (AP) — The Royal Mail, the first postal service to issue stamps, faces suspension of its monopoly for delivering ordinary letters unless a labor dispute is quickly resolved.

As workers wound up a one-day strike and threatened another 36-hour walkout, the government said Friday it will abolish the Royal Mail's monopoly on letter delivery if they make good on their threat.

The suspension, intended as a temporary, strike-breaking measure, would allow private companies to deliver ordinary mail for at least as long as the employees stay off the job.

"If they do not (call off the strike), Post Office employees will know that it's their bone-headed union which is responsible for the loss of the monopoly," said Trade Secretary Ian Lang.

The government last suspended the Royal Mail monopoly on regular letter delivery during a strike 25 years ago.

Lang said private companies could start carrying letters that cost less than 1 pound ($1.54) as next Friday, the date postal workers have threatened their next strike.

Koreans warned against eating bear

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — South Korean tourists are welcome in Thailand, as long as they refrain from dining on bear.

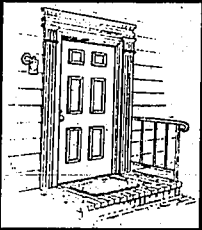

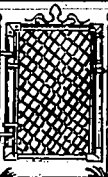

Thailand's tourism authority has warned South Koreans not to visit Thailand in order to eat bear, which some consider a delicacy. The Nation newspaper reported Friday.

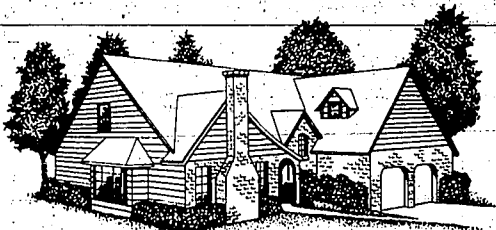

Five South Koreans were arrested a week ago after police discovered 24 bear paws and bear entrails in their van during a traffic stop.

The tourists and three Thais are suspected of killing six bears, which are protected under Thai law. The suspects face up to four years in prison and fines of $1,500.

Firefighters get handle on Sawtooth fire

STANLEY — A fire in the Sawtooths was contained to 100 acres Friday.

Firefighters contained about 90 percent of the South Fork Fire, said Sawtooth Area Ranger Paul Rice.

A steep and rocky hillside prevented firefighters from reaching one corner of the fire. Forest Service personnel will continue to monitor the fire from the air.

The fire started July 10 from an unknown cause, according to a Bureau of Land Management report.

North Fork, South Fork of Payette River and Baron Lakes trails have been reopened.

The fire burned lodgepole and ponderosa pine, and Douglas fir and subalpine fir trees.

Utilities commission takes comment on phone company

BOISE — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission will accept written comments until July 30 on a report by US West Communications that just more than $7 million of the company's 1995 revenue is available for "sharing" to the benefit of the basic service customers in southern Idaho.

For information, contact IPUC spokesman Gary Richardson at 334-0339. Send comments to the commission, 1000 N. IPUC, PO Box 83720, Boise ID 83720-0720.

Travel Council holds out money to local agencies

BOISE — The Idaho Travel Council announced awards of $1.8 million in Idaho Regional Travel and Convention grant funds to stimulate and expand tourism in Idaho.

Grants include:

- $126,211 to the South Central Idaho Travel Committee.
- $6,500 to the Region IV Idaho RV Campground Association's South Central Chapter.
- $5,712 to the Region IV Idaho Outfitters and Guides Association's South Central Chapter.
- $218,000 to the Sun Valley/Ketchum Chamber of Commerce.
- $19,000 to the Stanley-Sawtooth Chamber of Commerce.

Census bureau employees collecting data on spending

TWIN FALLS — Census Bureau employees are collecting information there on medical care, housing, food, education, buying habits and income levels.

The Census Bureau's Consumer Expenditures survey helps business owners and policy makers address consumer needs and plan public services, a bureau release said.

Participating households will receive a letter from Bureau Director Marsha Farnsworth Rice informing them of the survey. Census Bureau field representatives carry official identification cards with their photographs and signatures, and all individual information collected is confidential.

Money available for Idaho family home loans

BOISE — Fannie Mae, the nation's largest source of home mortgage funds, announced it has purchased $7.5 million in single-family, tax-exempt mortgage revenue bonds from the Idaho Housing and Finance Association to help give Idaho families access to a 7.25-percent mortgage rate.

The bond proceeds will help IHFA's single-family mortgage loan program and will be made available through Idaho mortgage lenders for 30-year, fixed-rate, FHA, VA and conventional mortgages, a Fannie Mae statement said.

The nonprofit IHFA promotes affordable housing for limited-income residents.

Transportation plans available for public review

TWIN FALLS — The drafted "Statewide Transportation Improvement Program," which details projects planned by the Idaho Transportation Department for the next three to five years, is available for review by the public.

Requests for bicycles, pedestrians, highways, airplanes, railroads and public transportation are included.

Public comments will be considered for the document's final version, which will be presented to the Idaho Transportation Board in September. People can get copies of the plan or submit comments by Aug. 14 at the TID District 4 office, 216 Twin St., Shoshone, ID 83354-0200. Or call 866-7800 or fax 866-7895.

Beet growers question proposed buyout

By John Thompson Times-News writer

BURLEY — Southern Idaho sugar beet growers backed the Burley Inn's convention center Thursday evening to denounce a proposal to buy out Amalgamated Sugar Co. and form a grower's cooperative.

But backers of the proposal say support for the buyout is picking up steam across the state, and growers who don't sign on are accepting a tremendous risk.

The deadline for subscribing to the co-op is midnight tonight. Growers are asked only $50 into the co-op for every acre of sugar beets they intend to grow. If 200,000 acres of beets are subscribed to, from growers in Idaho, Oregon and Washington, the co-op will be formed. If the co-op is successfully formed, the growers will pay an additional $350 per acre later this year and an additional $60 per acre, per year after that until the debt is settled.

Amalgamated's price was set at $266 million. A complex web of financial transactions is set up to pay off the debt over seven years.

Minidoka County beet grower Perry Gillette, who organized Thursday's meeting, said many growers are being forced into joining the co-op because they can't afford not to have sugar beets in their crop rotation. In his opinion, the buyout doesn't make good business sense because it is leveraged and risky to the farmer's too high.

Gillette also contends that scare tactics have been used by co-op organizers to manipulate growers, that today's deadline was arbitrarily set and that the consequences of forming the co-op are potentially catastrophic.

"For some of us there aren't any alternatives," Gillette said. "Most people are upset about the misrepresentation of facts and the lack of having a voice."

In addition, pre-tax earnings by Valhi, Amalgamated's parent company, have substantially decreased over the past three years and the reasons for the decrease have not been explained to growers, he said.

"The plant could shut down due to a strike, natural disaster, or power outage, and for every single day those beets pile up the farmers will lose," he said. "Every single dollar is pledged to covering costs and the farmers will get only what's left. On the concept of risk I challenge organizers to debate me through the media or any other way."

Magic Valley's Basques hold fast to tradition

By Steve Crump Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — Joe Oneida pauses from tilling the riot of rhubarb that's spilling over the neat irrigation furrows in the vast garden that overwhelms his back yard.

"I felt at home in this country right away," he says. "In school, the boys would give us Basques a hard time, and you'd either have to fight them or not fight them. After that, things were OK."

That was 80 years ago, about the same time that the Battle of Verdun was being fought in France. Even by the lost-horizon standards of this high, windy oasis where time stopped, when the UP freight quit slowing down, that's a formidable stretch of the 20th century.

"I wasn't even 5 years old," says Oneida, who's now on the brink of his 85th birthday. "Sure, I can remember the town back then. I can remember the boat I came over on. I can remember Spain."

Oneida came to Shoshone with his dad; most of the rest of the family immigrated piecemeal, in the fashion of the time. Herding sheep for the Bacons or the Goodings was steady work, but it wouldn't make you very rich very fast.

Good fortune had to be saved two bits at a time, with time to think, until the day when you could open your own sheep operation, as Oneida's father did, and then settle down on the land, as Joe did.

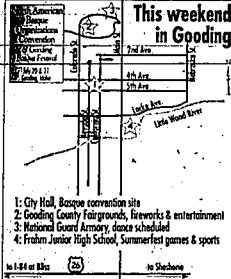

"It wasn't at all unusual for families to be separated when Basques came to this country," says Patty Miller, director of Boise's Basque Museum and Cultural Center. "A lot of men would come over alone, and it would be years before they could afford to send for their families."

Thousands of them got off the train in Shoshone. Although a plurality of the 10,000 Idahoans of Basque extraction now live in the Treasure Valley, it was Lincoln and Gooding counties that were — and in some ways still are — Idaho's proud Basque heartland.

"At one time there were six boarding houses here in Shoshone," Oneida recalls. "And they were full of Basques."

The boarding houses, Miller explained, were both home and refuge.

"Most of the Basques who immigrated to Idaho were from the same region, so They either knew each other or knew each other's families before they ever left Spain," she says. "Remember, that you could see the whole Basque Country into Owyhee County."

Alienated from the locals — at that time a mix of transplanted Protestant Midwestern farmers, Mormons, and rail workers of Greek and Eastern European ancestry — by language and religion, Basques were often vilified, Miller said.

"They suffered a lot of prejudice," Miller says. "They were called 'Black Basques.'"

As a result, community and extended family became vital links.

"Basques learned to depend on each other," Miller says. "They had to. Communication with their families in Spain was very difficult because, up until recently, very few people had telephones. If my mother wanted to call home, she'd have to make arrangements in advance for her mother to be someplace where they had a phone, and then hope she could get through."

Joe Oneida and his four brothers became Americanized quickly, but they never lost their strong sense of ethnic heritage. Oneida remembers helping a friend, who was a stonemason, build the first local court for handball — a sport about which Basques are passionate — and

Open house raises money for Hailey playground equipment

Tours of the 12,000-square-foot home of Loidy Samson and Kathy Kempa today is part of a fund-raising effort to buy playground equipment.

By Barbara Nelwert Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The dense foliage of mature trees and careful design make the 12,000-square-foot size of the home of Loidy Samson and Kathy Kempa.

Located in a neighborhood of modest homes across from the LDS Church, the Samson-Kempa house has picked the curiosity of Hailey's residents.

To raise money to buy playground equipment for the Hailey Elementary School, the house at 717 South River Street will be on display from 5 to 7 p.m. today at $5 a head.

After three years of construction, the house is a jewel among homes and may be featured in Architectural Digest magazine.

"The real success of this house is having it be a barrier-free house without looking like it," said Jeffrey Egan, principle design architect on the project.

The house was designed for the accessibility and convenience of Samson who suf-

Samson and Kempa located the home in the middle of Hailey to be within walking distance of downtown and to feel part of the community. The elegant simplicity of the house reflects a Japanese influence. Mahogany floors, doors and hand crafted wainscoting run through the home.

Minnick: 'If I lose ... I won't run for anything

By Karen Tolkinen Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It's his one and only shot at one of the U.S. Senate seats.

Democrat Walt Minnick of Boise, who is challenging incumbent Republican Larry Craig, said he will not run again for political office if he loses in November. And if he wins, he won't necessarily seek another term, he said.

Sounding dissatisfied with the campaign process, Minnick said he has spent most of his time raising money (he is halfway to his $3 million goal) and not enough time discussing issues.

"If I lose, I have said categorically that I won't run for anything else," he said. "I'm doing this because I think there are some things wrong in Washington."

One of those things, he told The Times-News editorial board Friday, is campaign financing.

"The only kind of person that can run as a challenger is somebody that has significant personal wealth or who has died himself or herself to a special interest that can raise that kind of money," said Minnick, who will spend $500,000 of his own money on his race.

"Anybody who says you don't pay more attention to somebody that can get you the $500,000, $100,000 that you do to Joe at the check-out counter at Circle K hasn't been through the process. I think campaign finance reform is essential if we're going to continue to have a democracy."

Early in the race, Minnick had pledged not to accept money from political action groups if Craig also agreed. Craig did not, saying that PAC money wasn't necessarily special interest money.

The former T.J. International president, in town for an Okajee rodeo on Friday and the Kimberly Good Neighbors celebration today, said he has not been able to come to the Magic Valley as often as he would like.

But one issue dear to the Magic Valley — nuclear waste storage at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory — is also one of his central campaign messages. He would like a new nuclear waste agreement for Idaho, he said, one that:

- Secures committed funds for cleaning up mixed waste and plutonium particles,

Minnick.

• Hastens the time table for cleanup.

• Sets stiff financial penalties for not clearing waste out of Idaho;

• Regains the ability to sue in court if the federal government does not live up to its end of the deal;

Allows Idaho to object to future environmental impact statements.

He would like to see teachers paid competitive wages, encourage Americans to save more and balance the budget now rather than after the turn of the century.

He said he has invited top national Democrats — U.S. Sens. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska, Tom Daschle of South Dakota, Sam Nunn of Georgia and Bill Bradley of New Jersey — to stump for him in Idaho. He will not invite President Clinton.

"I'm not going to invite him, but if he comes I'd show him courtesy," he said.

Board changes speed limits Irrigators sue utility for right to cheaper power

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) —

The Idaho Transportation Board has increased speed limits on U.S. 93 as it continues its review of the state's 5,000-mile highway system.

The board on Friday increased the limit from 55 mph to 65 mph on 25 miles of U.S. 93, from Arco to a half-mile south of the junction with Idaho 75.

In addition, the speed limit on 15 miles of Idaho 16 from the junction of Interstate 15 to six miles west of Weston was decreased from 55 mph to 55 mph. And the speed limit on Interstate 184, the Boise Connector, was retained at 55 mph.

Man killed at party

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — A 25-year-old man died after being shot and run over by a vehicle at a party.

Police Lt. Randy Watt said officers found Gregorio Gomez Landa dead when they arrived at the party to investigate a disturbance.

Party-goers identified a suspect, who remained at large late Friday, a police dispatcher said.

Landa's wife told police her husband and the suspect had a long-standing feud. She did not say what the argument was about, Watt said.

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A cooperative of hundreds of eastern Idaho irrigators is suing Utah Power & Light Co. for $10 million, claiming the utility is illegally blocking it from buying electricity from the cheapest generator.

The Snake River Valley Electric Association claims it is being treated differently from other cooperatives served by Utah Power.

"They really blundered in failing to meet with us," Palmer said. Utah Power spokesman Dave Eskelsen said the company does supply power to legitimate wholesale customers that have their own transmission lines and substations such as the Wall River and Lost River cooperative and the Lost River cooperative of Rigby, Ammon, Rexburg and Shelley.

But, Eskelsen said, "We have to have a point of delivery. Any wholesale customer can use our lines. But Snake River is attempting to use the wholesale transaction arena to supply retail customers."

Eskelsen said Utah Power has done all it has needed in dealing with the association including providing it with information on policies and prices and how to make an application.

Palmer, hoping the federal lawsuits served by Utah Power breaks Utah Power's hold on eastern Idaho customers, countered lines and substations serving the irrigators so they can shop around for a power source.

"Does a utility have the right to say, 'You will take our rates and our service and if you don't like it, turn your pumps off?'" George Palmer, a consultant to the association, said. "They won't even meet with us."

"It's going to be a landmark suit that attracts attention at the national level," Palmer said. Eskelsen said the utility has no interest in selling any of its distribution system or losing any of its customer base and welcomes the opportunity to settle the dispute in court.

Mowing for gold

Racers go to mow for glory

WATSONVILLE, Calif. (AP) — On your mark. Get set. Mow. If there were any poetic justice, that's what the starter would tell lawn mower racers at today's West Coast Regional Competition at the Orange County Fair in Costa Mesa.

But in reality, these particular racers won't be carrying their blades, and they'll be gunning their mowers on an oval track rather than a lawn.

And believe it or not, a good chunk of the competitive field this weekend will come from Pajaro. In fact, four out of the 12 lawn mower racers who'll participate work at C&N Tractor on Salinas Road.

So just ask Rodger Silva, Robert Mullane, Nigel Mallinson and Mike Cecil why anybody would want to spend their Saturday doing quarter-mile circles on their John Deeres in front of a festival crowd.

"We're racing fools," said Mallinson, service manager for C&N.

Forgive him if they don't take the natives too seriously, but there's only one main reason they're doing this.

"Just the fun of it, basically," said Mullane, the company's assistant manager. Or being able to say you might be the next Mario Andretti of lawn mower racing, or that you've even done it once.

"It's something for C&N, and in addition to being a driver is also the 'pit crew' of the group.

The four local lawn mower men first heard about the sport after C&N General Manager John Cooper sent away for some harmless informational brochures earlier this year. Lawnmower racing had a powerful attraction. Now they've got a shiny green John Deere with a black number painted on it, and they're some time practicing by driving around the C&N parking lot.

The four men will be competing in the U.S. Lawn Mower Racing Association's Stock class, which is the all-out anything-goes level.

"They say most of those (experimental mowers) look like go-carts," said Silva.

Though the U.S. association was founded in 1992, lawn mower racing has actually been around for at least 30 years. This is the first year the Orange County Fair will host the West Coast Regional lawn mower racing, which is the only one in California.

But Russ Kibota, a media coordinator for the fair, said the race has proven to be a draw at other events in previous years.

"It's very much a crowd-pleaser," said Kibota, though he admits "a lot of people ask, 'is that real?'"

Other contestants Saturday will be coming from as far away as Texas and Illinois, but the C&N team has an ace in the hole: Mike Cecil. Not only is Cecil a regular racer at the Watsonville Speedway, he was the champion last year in the Street Stock division. So you might not expect him to be hanging around on a lawn mower that — when it really cooks — gets up to about 10 mph.

But Cecil, who works in C&N's fabrication shop, just loves the race itself.

"I'll drive anything," he said. "It's just the competition of it."

How much competition, though, can you get at 10 mph? The C&N team members admit that with everybody maxing out at the same breezy speed, winning will be decided by very small details, like who makes the best start, who's able to keep their engine from faltering, and who can make the straightest shot.

If the other three blade runners hope to get any tips from Cecil, they'll have to make him talk soon.

"He won't. He won't tell us," said Mallinson.

After all, when it comes down to it, lawn mower racing isn't all green grass and getting to ride a cool little tractor. It's every man for himself. And the winner gets to go to the national competition, held over the Labor Day weekend in Rockford, Ill.

Which could be good or bad for the Pajaro newcomers — they're waiting to see if this is worth a long-term investment or just a funny-ounce.

"This being our first year," said Mullane, "we really don't know what to expect until we get down there."

Gooding

Edna F. Cuthright, 88, a Gooding resident, died Thursday July 18, 1996, at her residence, after a short illness.

She was born July 27, 1907, in Wilsonville, Neb. She came with her parents to Gooding in 1929, where she attended schools graduating in 1926. She enrolled in Albion State Normal School, received her teachers certificate and taught in the one-room school at Clover Creek. There she met her husband, Frank Cuthright and they married on Dec. 22, 1929, in Twin Falls.

Their first home was in Hill City, but only a few years later they moved with their two daughters to northern California, where they lived for some 20 years. She worked for California Public Utilities in Westwood, Lassen County, her husband, was hired by Morrison Knudsen and this employment took them to Colorado, Missouri and North Dakota before they returned to settle in Idaho.

She was active with her church, First Christian Church of Gooding, the Senior Citizens, Eastern Star, and others. They traveled extensively throughout the United States, Canada and Mexico; but one of their favorite places to go was competing Little Smokey. She is survived by her husband, Frank; her daughters, their families; and other relatives locally and throughout the United States. Her brothers, Lester Simonton and Lloyd Simonton, and her sister, Ethel Baldwin, preceded her in death.

Low S. Pratt Low Sanders Pratt, 79, of Oroville, Calif., died Wednesday, July 17, 1996, at Feather River Hospital in Paradise, Calif., of natural causes.

He was born May 17, 1917, at Jerome. He was in the grocery business, and operated a building department for 35 years.

Low was a member of the Oroville-First Ward Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and was a past bishop in Jerome and Oroville for a total of 14 years. He was past board member of PUC for 21 years, past board member of OVID and Kiwanis, past president of Rotary and Lions Club in Jerome. Boy Scouts of America and Century Club member for 12 years.

Low enjoyed cooking for his family and church gathering, being with his family and could often be found sharing stories with the grandchildren. Lew would find great pleasure in helping people in many ways, to finding him donations to people in need. He loved being a small cattle farmer, he tended to his 15 head of cattle everyday and at one time he had up to 300 head.

Low S. Pratt

Low and his bride had a love affair marriage of almost 60 years. Together they shared and noticed the small things of life. He touched many lives and will be greatly missed.

Lew is survived by his wife, Irene Pratt of Oroville; children and spouses, LuRene and Denny Biggs, of Oroville; and grandchildren, Monte and Rhonda Pratt of Oroville; one brother, Robert Pratt of Oroville; 13 grandchildren; and 24 great-grandchildren.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. on July 22, at the Monte Vista Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Oroville with Bishop Weldon Page officiating. Burial will be at the Memorial Park Cemetery in Oroville. Visitation will take place from 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday, July 21, at Scheer Memorial Chapel in Oroville.

Annual meeting of Aryan Nations set for this weekend

HAYDEN LAKE (AP) — The annual meeting of the white-supremacist Aryan Nations began Friday, and was expected to be a festival event.

There had been speculation that founder Richard Butler, 78, will step down from his leadership post and that a successor will be elected. But it is unclear whether that will happen.

The meeting, which runs through Sunday, is closed to the press unless reporters want to pay $100 to interview Butler, a person who answered the phone at the group's north Idaho compound said.

"People have been complaining to Pastor Butler a lot about the media," said Mullane, "who would not give his name, said."

That person also said that Butler may not step down, but might designate a successor.

Butler's Hayden Lake-based group calls itself the Church of Jesus Christ Christian (Aryan Nation) and addresses its leader as "reverend." The white-supremacist group uses rhetoric that echoes the Nazis of World War II, and is opposed to Jews and other races. The group celebrates Hitler's birthday and flies Nazi flags.

There also has been speculation that the group might move out of northern Idaho.

Senator asks feds to halt processing applications

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The chairman of the state Lands Resources and Environmental Commission has formally asked the federal government to cease processing patent applications for the central Idaho's Thompson Creek Mine. The patent granting the molybdenum mine ownership of the federal land is essentially renting right now would shift oversight of the mining operation to the state Lands Department and believes its governing laws are too lax to handle an acid drainage problem if one develops.

of the three states, Random argues that farmer's decisions were answered. Wilson, a Salt Lake City agricultural cop attorney represents the Snake River Sugar Co. and helped organize the buyout proposal.

According to Wilson, Valley's pre-tax earnings have declined in the last three years because the company's sugar beet processing plants. But that process is now complete and the company is targeting $30 million in pre-tax earnings this year, Wilson said.

The growers who assembled Thursday control about 45,000 acres of Idaho's sugar beets, according to statistics gathered by the meeting but not all of those growers voiced opposition to the proposal.

Mini-Cassia sugar beet growers currently control approximately half the acres needed to form the co-op. Mini-Cassia beet grower Gary Turner encouraged other growers to take a second look at the proposal.

"The company is for sale, and I would talk about who will buy it if we don't," Turner said. "The biggest hurdle is the first year, after that it's only $60 per acre."

BURLEY — What started out as a productive Thursday evening meeting for the Mini-Cassia Airport Committee quickly turned into a verbal battle when audience members began voicing concerns against a new airport in Minidoka County.

About 20 residents who live near three potential airport sites came to get some answers and to question next. But the committee couldn't help them on either.

"At this point, even you don't know what you're talking about here," said Rose Stevens, who lives near one of the potential sites on Meridian Road near Interstate 84.

"We've got questions you can't answer, and you're only raising some more."

The committee is considering the need for a new airport in the Mini-Cassia area. Three potential sites are being considered to build a new airport or expand the existing airport has not been made.

Thursday, the committee added another seven members and was scheduled to develop a list of subjects that need further study, as sign committee responsibilities, and establish a flowchart and time frame for the committee's work.

Instead, the committee adjourned more than two hours later with nothing more than a time selected for another meeting next month.

The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. on Aug. 21 in Burley City Hall. Will provide residents with an opportunity to formally voice their opinions about the airport during a public hearing.

Meanwhile, the committee has agreed to contact Armstrong Consultants — a Colorado-based company that is studying the Mini-Cassia Airport — to see if other sites can be incorporated into the study.

"If you moved this new airport to an abandoned area, half of us in this room would leave right now and not worry about any of this until it comes to a vote," said Gary Sever, whose family's home is located near two of the three proposed sites.

The first two sites are located southwest of Paul about a half mile apart. The third site is at Meridian Road just south of I-84. All three sites are located near residents who are contesting an airport anywhere near their homes.

'It's going to be in somebody's backyard no matter where you put it.'

—John Rensberg, chairman, Mini-Cassia Airport Committee.

"We keep going around and around on this without getting anywhere," Rensberg says.

Rensberg says a new airport is essential to the Mini-Cassia area's economic development. At least one area civic group, the organization of Rupert Businesses, has endorsed plans for a new airport in one of the three Minidoka County locations.

"The most asked question, however, was why a new airport is needed and when it would come to a vote."

"We need to start at the beginning and ask why we need the airport we have now, what function it provides and whether a new one will really benefit us anymore beyond what we start talking about sites or anything else," said state Rep. Jim Compton, R-Altion, a member of the Airport Technical Advisory Committee who is working with Armstrong Consulting on the study.

Expanding the Burley airport also is being explored, though it won't meet Federal Aviation Administration standards even if the runway length is lengthened. The runway length limits the number of planes that can carry. A new airport would serve the same types of planes that now use the Burley airport.

If the community decides to build a new airport, Armstrong Consultants has estimated the cost of buying the homes at any of the sites would be about $90,000 per home — plus $25,000 for moving costs, and additional compensation for legal expenses.

The consulting firm's study is being reviewed by the Federal Aviation Administration, the state, and Minidoka and Cassia counties. The FAA is paying for 90 percent of the $90,000 study. The state and counties are splitting the remaining cost.

Company proposes mill in Baldy's shadow

KETCHUM (AP) — A mining company wants to start an ore-processing mill on the west flank of Bald Mountain, the location of the Sun Valley resort. The mill, owned by Ketchum Inc. has filed an application with the Ketchum Ranger District, outlining its intention to use the Bassett Gulch Mill to pulverize the ore it gets from its mine at Croesus Creek, 2.5 miles west of Hatley.

At maximum capacity, Rutschild would haul 240 tons of ore per day from the mine through the cities of Hatley and Ketchum, and out Warm Springs Road to the mill. That is about 13 dump truck loads every day. The mill, built in the 1950s and acquired by Rutschild in 1986, is located in the Warm Springs canyon, one side of the ski hill. The nearest tailing pond is about 200 feet from a wetland. The mill could run for three to five years. The ore would be run through flotation and distillation devices and then shipped out of state to reduce its cost.

Nez Perce raise $608,100 to buy back own artifacts

LAPWAI (AP) — An impoverished and isolated Indian tribe in northern Idaho used MTV, the World Wide Web and high moral ground to win back 20 artifacts acquired by a Presbyterian missionary 150 years ago.

In four months, the Nez Perce raised $608,100 to purchase moosehorns, bags and dresses valued at $57,900 when the missionary sent them to Ohio in 1846. The items went back on display on the reservation last month.

The original value, $57,900, exact became a rallying cry and the exact amount donated by schoolchildren, rock bands and the rich to help the tribe retrieve priceless pieces of its past.

"Our values have been reactivated," you might say, said Horace Axtell, a tribal elder. "You feel like you're a stronger person. We have all of our things together again, like coming together."

But six months ago, when the tribe of 3,500 people agreed to raise the daunting price, no one was optimistic. "I was very skeptical," said Frank Walker, superintendent of the Nez Perce National Historic Park, where the items are kept. "People were talking about car washes, and I said this is way too much to be thinking in these terms."

Known as breeders of the Appaloosa horse, the Nez Perce helped explorers Meriwether Lewis and William Clark reach the Pacific, feeding them and giving them horses in 1805. Later, the tribe sent a delegation to Clark's home in St. Louis, seeking "white man's book of heaven."

Missionary Henry Spalding and his wife, Eliza, answered the call in 1836. They founded a church (there are six Presbyterian churches on the reservation today), a sawmill and a printing press. They also enforced a God-fearing code, ordering people to bury "heathen" eagle feathers and publicly whipping offenders, said Spalding's great-granddaughter, Joanne Spalding-Stacy.

Under-Christians influence, the Nez Perce ceded millions of acres to white settlement, but their 8 million acres were soon overrun by gold prospectors: Spalding died on the reservation in 1875. Two years later, war broke out with U.S. troops. A famous 1,000-mile retreat by Chief Joseph ended 40 miles from the Canadian border. The military slaughtered the tribe's Appaloosas.

A century later, the items Spalding had acquired and sent back to Ohio were deemed to the Ohio Historical Society, which loaned them to the federal historic park on the reservation. They were kept in glass cases.

In 1992, the Ohio society asked the National Park Service to turn the items. The Nez Perce, however, asked Ohio to donate the artifacts to the tribe, which would keep them in Idaho. Ann Frazier, the society's manager of communications, said: "We are a nonprofit and seek state and private funding. For us to do the one hand seek funding and on the other hand give away valuable collection would be inconsistent."

The 19 items were appraised at $583,100. A credit box of $25,000 was added. In December, the tribe's executive council, facing a 75 percent unemployment rate and devastating winter floods in the tribal village of Lapwai, agreed to raise the money by June 1.

"There was something very, very positive, what we came to call the quest," said Tom Hudson of Moscow, Idaho, an economic development planner hired by the tribe to spread the word. "People from all over the world made a connection with the tribe. They understood the value and importance of Native American heritage."

Stories began appearing in national newspapers. National Public Radio did a long piece. The rock group Pearl Jam sang the song "People from the band, MTV was interested. Some 400 rock radio stations were spreading the word."

A Web site was established on the Internet, with an on-line art auction. Hudson originated the idea of the $57.900 donation. "I wanted all Americans to find a way to invest in the quest."

"A lady from Massachusetts heard about us on radio. She makes $75 a week, and had never donated anything. She asked my permission to send $100. The first big donation was $100,000 from Lillian Disney, Walt's widow, who grew up in Lapwai. An anonymous donor gave $150,000."

By May 31, the day before the deadline, 4,000 donations had arrived but the tribe was still $11,000 short. The National Park Service had boxes ready to ship the artifacts back to Ohio.

"Before 8 a.m. (on the final day June 1), I had three people hand-deliver checks, a lady called from western Washington with $2,000, there were three checks in the mail at home, and schoolchildren from Boise donated $2,500. Frontier Elementary put us over the top," said Hudson.

On June 14, at a Chief Joseph Pow Wow, the 20 items were given to the tribe and placed in two display cases in the historic park. Great-granddaughter Spalding-Stacy handed the tribe a check for $608,100. The items were decorated with elk teeth and white and blue beads to tribal elder Nancy Halfmoon. "It was a miracle for this little tribe," said Spalding-Stacy.

House

The rectangular residence encloses a private courtyard, with deck, waterfalls, and garden. A 16-ton volcanic boulder was brought in from the desert near Dietrich as a focal point of the courtyard.

In the spring, rain gutters carry melting snow to create more than a dozen miniature waterfalls in the garden.

In the kitchen, a counter can be raised and lowered at the touch of a button for the times when a counter is used as a bar. A counter area for informal dining plus an extra sink and dishwasher have been installed at wheelchair height.

The house sports a forced-air gas heating and cooling system in addition to radiant heat in the mahogany floors. Most functions are automated. If you can touch a button, you can open windows, doors, close blinds and fireplace screens, and flush toilets.

Unable to negotiate stairs, Samson takes a mahogany-lined elevator to the lower level and a full-sized lap pool for her rehabilitation efforts. Designed by a California artist, the pool is lined with 13,000 individual, handmade mosaic tiles. A cover can be opened and closed to avoid excess humidity, which would damage the woodwork in the room, Egan said.

A hot-tub at the westernmost end of the pool room gives views of Delta and Carbonate mountains.

The lower-level also houses guest quarters the size of most condominiums and visits from the couple's children and other guests.

Attention to detail is revealed in special bathroom fan systems to eliminate fan noise, air is sucked into a fan box in the mechanical room, which then recirculates fresh air back into the bathrooms.

The dog kennel on the south side of the home includes mahogany decking and a large gravelled area. Volcanic rocks in the kennel include crawl-through, cave-like spaces with lights.

"At 12,000-square feet, the Samsons-Kemp's home is not large by Sun Valley standards. But the design and attention to details give it a warmth and draws attention away from its size, Egan said.

While the home remains vacant for the open house, Samson and Kemp plan to move in next week.

Even the dogs' comforts are not overlooked.

Man wages gold mine battle

He thinks the companies have gone too far

VICTOR, Colo. (AP) — In a cluttered room at the rear of a turn-of-the-century hotel, Bill Clymer is at war.

Here, surrounded by government studies, company reports and scientific papers, Clymer is taking on the Cripple Creek and Victor Gold Mining Co., a foe he believes threatens not only the landscape but the economic future of the tiny town he calls home.

What makes Clymer's fight especially effective — and surprising — is the fact he was a gold miner himself. For 15 years, he worked more than a dozen companies throughout the West, yank ore from the ground, in some cases plunging more than 8,000 feet into the earth to seek it out.

Now, armed with his knowledge of the industry, a telephone and a fax machine, Clymer rallies a network of Victor residents and regional environmentalists in an effort to stop what he calls the massive mining company's efforts to "rape, pillage and plunder" more than 500 acres of Teller County hill country.

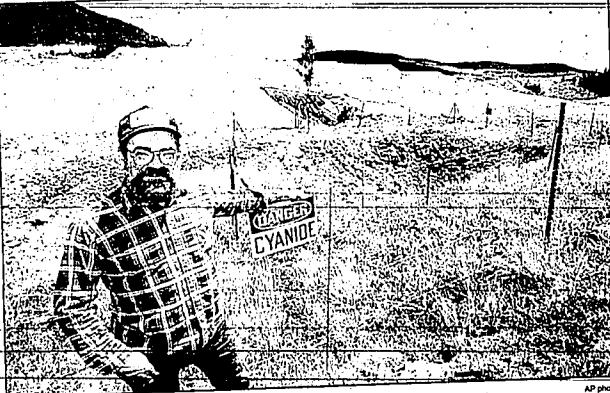

Clymer, 49, isn't anti-mining. In fact, he said if injuries hadn't forced him to quit, he'd still be on the job. He's taking on the Cripple Creek and Victor Gold Mining Co. because he believes it has gone too far in its efforts to pull every last speck of gold from the ground.

"They want to take a billion dollars of gold, destroy the environment and not take any responsibility," Clymer said.

There's no question the mining company is running a huge operation. Under its current plan begun in late 1994, about 250 miners will spend seven years moving 77 million cubic yards of earth.

In the process, they will literally turn mountains inside out, using massive diesel-guzzling machinery 24 hours a day. They will haul billions of pounds of rock to be crushed into the size of a pea. Giant crushers will turn the rock to rubble. The pebbles will be piled high and sprinkled with cyanide to leach out the gold.

Clymer has complained about the mine's reluctance to meet federal standards in treating water flowing off the property. He has demanded that the mine cut down on noise and vibrations from explosive work. He says the mine could be a better corporate citizen by plugging more money into local restoration projects.

Officials with the Cripple Creek and Victor Gold Mining Co. don't deny all of Clymer's assertions, but deny they have specific plans to mine Victor's foothills. Yet they won't rule out any future action.

They say they have agreed to some of Clymer's concerns.

For example, after prodding by Clymer, the company saved a head frame from the historic Cresson Mine — now the site of the company's massive pit — and moved it into Victor for permanent display.

The mine also moved a leach pad from the place where crushed rock is piled, then sprinkled with cyanide — from a site people complained was too close to Victor. And mine officials agreed to restore mined land beyond what state law requires.

"I don't know that Bill means one thing or another to the mine," said John Hardaway, the mine's environmental manager. "I do believe that some of the associations he's developed have caused a lot of unnecessary responses... I don't believe that the mine necessarily enjoys that particular approach."

The Environmental Protection Agency entered the picture after Clymer alarmed over a proposed state permit allowing the release of acidic water into gulches flowing into Cripple Creek, lined up environmentalists to fight the plan. Environmentalists took their concerns to the EPA.

"Bill's pretty determined," said John Wilcox, an employee of the mine and president of the Two Mile High Chapter of People for the West, a group that advocates less regulation of natural-resource industries.

"He knows the mining business, and he knows enough if he needs some help, he'll call it in from the outside," Wilcox said.

Clymer bought a run-down, 10-room hotel in 1980 on Victor's main street. He was hired to maintain creek at an Arizona gold mine, and in all, he worked for 16 mining companies, including some in the Cripple Creek area, but never for the operation he's fighting now.

His career ended in 1995 because of injuries, including getting hit in the back with a 25-pound rock that fell 100 feet down a mine shaft.

Now, he lives off disability payments and his wife's income. She gives tours in Cripple Creek. He also collects rent from some rooms at the hotel he is still renovating.

He acknowledges part of his motivation to monitor the Cripple Creek and Victor Gold Mining Co. is self-interest. He fears the area could lose its allure as a tourist attraction. That could kill his investment in the hotel.

"There are tourist sites that, if destroyed, will never be back," he said. "We won't have anyone come up here to see big open pits and leach pads."

'They want to take a billion dollars of gold, destroy the environment and not take any responsibility.'

Dear Abby fooled by faked baton-twirling fetish

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — An architect who wrote "Dear Abby" for help with a lifelong baton-twirling fetish was told to ignore newsmen and keep on twirling.

But the letter was a fake, written by a 23-year-old woman who was getting back at her parents' friend for a joke he played on her when she was 9.

"I can't top it, I admit it, and I'm afraid of her," Michael Deibele, 50, said Thursday of Julie Wilborn.

The letter ran last week and was revealed as a hoax a few days later, prompting Dear Abby to tighten up her letter verification policy.

In the letter Deibele was described as an architect, which is true, who lived a normal life except for his unusual hobby. The letter said Deibele liked to practice in his backyard but that it caused him considerable flak from friends.

Idaho hoops team bows to Nebraskans

LAS VEGAS — Pre-tourney favored Nebraska planned the first defeat on Idaho Basketball Summer Prep 58-45 in the Las Vegas all-star high school tournament Friday.
Wendell's Nick Kelsey paced the Idaho hoops with 17 points.
The defeat knocks Idaho into the consolation bracket where they will meet the Detroit All-Stars Saturday.

Denver Nuggets re-sign career 3-point leader Ellis

DENVER — Dale Ellis, the NBA's career leader in 3-pointers, re-signed with the Denver Nuggets on Friday.
The 35-year-old guard was a starter for most of the 1995-96 season, averaging 14.9 points a game.
Ellis, with Denver for two seasons, had exercised an opt-out clause in his contract, making him a free agent.

Judge sentences ex-pro bowl lineman to 1 year in prison

PHOENIX — After years of second chances, three-time Pro Bowl lineman Luis Sharpe was sentenced Friday to one year in prison for violating probation by using cocaine and methamphetamine.
“I don't know what else to do here,” Maricopa County Superior Court Judge Michael D. Ryan said after ticking off Sharpe's lengthy history of drug use and police run-ins.
Noting Sharpe twice has been wounded in drug-related shootings, the judge added: “I hope you understand and reach the realization while you're in prison that you have to make a dramatic change in your life. . . . If you appear in front of me again, it's consecutive terms in prison.”

Team says cornerback Carter will stay a Chief

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The Kansas City Chiefs on Friday matched a contract offer from the Minnesota Vikings to retain rights to cornerback Dale Carter, a mainstay in one of the NFL's top defensive units.
Carter, chosen to be the Pro Bowl the past two seasons, had said he wanted to play for Minnesota to be with his brother, wide receiver Jake Reed, and to rid himself of “the baggage” he's acquired in Kansas City.
Carter, who has had several scrapes with the law, is serving two years probation for an assault conviction stemming from a 1994 hotel fight.

Entertainers strike Olympic poses in the stadium Friday during opening ceremonies in Atlanta.

It's our party now

And the whole world has an invitation

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — The world may have been invited, but these Olympic Games are, once again, an American party. American athletes will win the most medals, American crowds will cheer them on. And everywhere in Atlanta, American economic might will be on boastful display.

“There's going to be a lot of patriotism and a lot of unity and country spirit,” wrestler Bruce Baumgartner predicted Friday, hours before he carried the flag into the opening ceremonies at the head of the U.S. team.

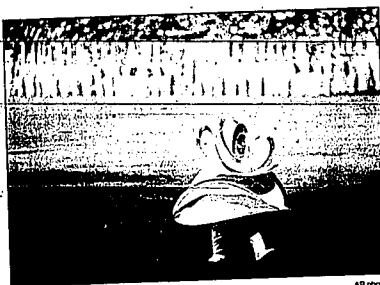

Baumgartner, a mountainous Pennsylvanian and unabashed patriot, has won gold medals in Los Angeles, Seoul and Barcelona. He knows what a home crowd can mean. “It will be a very big advantage to be in the United States,” he said.

“These games won't match the 1984 Los Angeles games for sheer American dominance. Then, the United States racked up an almost embarrassing 174 medals — 83 of them gold — in the absence of the archival Soviet elite teams.”

But the Atlanta Olympics could rival those games for sheer American exuberance and patriotism. And they have already set an Olympic record for corporate chauntiers. Foreign visitors face a nonstop assault of American commercial images that have prompted some to dub these the “Coca-Cola Olympics.”

Medal-wise, most people expect the United States to be the biggest winner in Atlanta. “We're going to do very well,” said Dick Schultz, executive director of the U.S. Olympic Committee.

Schultz said U.S. athletes might not win as many gold medals as in the 1992 Barcelona Games, when they won 37. One reason is the breakup of the Soviet Union. With no Soviet colossus facing the United States, there are actually more athletes competing from the former Soviet states, now independent nations.

A child dances in front of a line of performers Friday.

“The familiarity with the people, the language, the food,” Baumgartner said. “We're not in a foreign country, we're not isolated, we can travel, we can speak the language.”
“It's really a tough playing on someone else's home court,” said U.S. basketball star Teresa Edwards, a Georgia native. “I've done that, and I'm really looking forward to playing at home.”

Still, Schultz said he expects the United States to increase its overall medal count from Barcelona, when American athletes won 108 medals, second to the Unified Team.
Home-court advantage is one reason — and not just for the obvious reasons.
“A lot of it has to do less with the actual playing field — as it does just with the familiarity with the people, the language, the food,” Baumgartner said. “We're not in a foreign country, we're not isolated, we can travel, we can speak the language.”

Nicklaus turns back time at Open

The Associated Press

Nick Faldo doesn't like his play on the 6th hole.

LYTHAM ST. ANNES, England — For this day at least, Jack Nicklaus was forever young.

Seventy years after Bobby Jones won the first British Open played at Royal Lytham and 30 years after Nicklaus won his first of three British Opens, the Golden Bear turned back time and turned on the gallery with a 66 in Friday's second round.

His 7 under-par 135 after 36 holes was one stroke behind U.S. Open runner-up Tom Lehman and Paul McGinley of Ireland in the chase for the 125th British Open title.

“Today doesn't mean anything unless you do it the next two,” the 56-year-old Nicklaus said, mindful of some recent losses in major championships.
“I know what playing well feels like,” he said. “I know what I am inside. And I am pretty comfortable with those things right now.”

It was Nicklaus' lowest score in a major since he closed with a 65 to win the 1986 Masters — his last non-Seniors victory.

And it was the first time he opened a major with two rounds in the 60s since the 1981 U.S. Open, when he finished sixth.

“Yeah, I think I can win,” Nicklaus said. “I've always thought I can win when I play well.”
If Nicklaus does win, he would be the oldest British Open champion by far. Old Tom Morris was 46 when he won in 1867. The best finish by a 55-year-old in a major championship was the 16th-place effort by Gene Sarazen in the 1958 British Open at Lytham.

In 1972, Sam Snead tied for fourth in the PGA Championship at age 60.
For Nicklaus to win he would have to turn back a bunch of formidable contenders.

Tied with him at 135 were Ernie Els of South Africa and Peter Hedblom of Sweden.

Lurking at 136 were Nick Faldo, Corey Pavin, Mark O'Meara, Mark McCumber, Loren Roberts, Vijay Singh of Fiji and Padraig Harrington of Ireland.

Fred Couples, Mark Brooks and first-round leader Paul Broadhurst of England were another stroke back at 137.

In all, 31 golfers were within six shots of the leaders.
But even Faldo, probably playing better than anyone right now, had his eye on Nicklaus.

Couples play for doubles crown

By Myndee Euseon

TWIN FALLS — Some brave couples risked marital bliss to team up and compete for a mixed doubles crown in the Summer Sizzler Tournament.

Friday night's action included Bruce and Judy Graf pulling out a marathon victory over the husband and wife team of Scott and Marjorie Atkins 3-6, 7-6, 6-0 in 4.0 play.

In 3.5 competition, Kurt and Jenni Holcomb relied on aggressive groundstrokes to overcome first-seed jitters and pass by Howard and Rhonda Schaff 6-7, 6-2, 6-3.

The first round victory advances the Holcombs into Saturday's match against top-seeded Doug Pollow and Molly Arrossa.

The youth of Kevin McDonald and Laura Lynn Baird in the early rounds of 4.5 doubles.

In 5.0 singles, Alec Erquiaga spun, sliced and scrambled his way to a 6-3, 6-2 victory over Dave Little.

The tournament reaches full swing Saturday with all divisions taking the court. The championship rounds begin Sunday afternoon.

Reds break losing streak with win over Pirates

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pitcher Dave Burba homered for the second straight game and Barry Larkin won 4-for-4 as the Cincinnati Reds broke a four-game losing streak, beating the Pittsburgh Pirates 11-3 Friday night.

Larkin, who also walked, matched his career high for hits. Reggie Sanders, Jeff Branson and Hal Morris each drove in two runs.

Burba (5-9) helped himself with a solo home run in the fifth off reliever Chris Peters, but Wagner allowed sacrifice flies by Mike Mordica and Eddie Perez, but still earned his fourth save.

The Astros scored four runs in the bottom half off rookie Brad Woodall (0-1), making his first start of the season, to take a 4-2 lead.

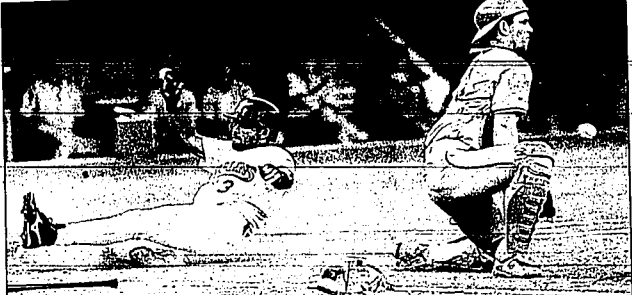

Expos 5, Mets 4
NEW YORK — Mike Lansing hit a solo home run in the seventh inning to cap Montreal's rally from a four-run deficit.

The Expos trailed 4-0 after three innings but tied it with one in the fourth and three in the fifth off reliever Ian Hutchinson (4-11).

With one out in the seventh, Lansing, who was 2-for-4 with two RBIs, hit his sixth home run. Mike Dyer (5-2) pitched two innings of hitless relief and Mel Rojas struck out the side in the ninth for his 14th save.

Irringhausen allowed five runs on nine

Philadelphia catcher Mike Lieberthal can't quite make the play as Florida's Quilvio Versalles safely home in the first inning Friday.

Astros 7, Braves 6
HOUSTON — Darryl Kile pitched eight innings before needing help in the ninth and Derek Bell drove in three runs as Houston snapped its five-game losing streak in front of 39,390, the Astros' largest wildness since June 24 against Colorado. He is 1-4 with two no-decisions in his last seven starts.

Twins knock Indians

CLEVELAND (AP) — Third baseman Jim Thome's error keyed a three-run rally in the seventh inning and the Minnesota Twins beat the Cleveland Indians 3-2 Friday night despite getting just three hits.

Indians starter Charles Nagy was working on a two-hitter and had a 2-0 lead with two outs before the Twins' comeback. They combined four walks, one hit, a wild pitch and Thome's misplay to take the lead.

Nagy (1-3), the AL starter in the All-Star Game, has not won in six starts since June 15. He is 0-2 with four no-decisions.

Frank Rodriguez (9-7) gave up a home run to Kenny Lofton on the third pitch of the game, and another solo home to Brian Giles in the sixth. He allowed six hits in 6 2/3 innings.

Tom Urbani (2-2) pitched 1 1/3 innings of relief for the win. Gregg Olson, Detroit's fifth reliever, loaded the bases with two outs in the ninth, but got Charlie O'Brien to pop out to second for his sixth save.

Felder hit a three-run homer, his 22nd, that made it 4-1 in the third, and Brad Ausmus blooped a single with one out, the fourth before Curtis connected with two outs off Mary Janzen (4-5).

John Olerud, who went 4-for-5, hit an RBI double that cut Detroit's lead to 5-5 in the fifth, but Ausmus scored in the sixth on Scott Brown's wild pitch.

royals 7, white Sox 4, 11 innings
CHICAGO — Bob Hamelin homered leading off the 10th inning Friday night, and the Kansas City Royals went on to beat the Chicago White Sox 7-4.

Hamelin hit a 1-2 pitch from Roberto Hernandez (1-1) into the right-field bleachers for his sixth home run, his 22nd, in 10 1/3 innings.

One out later, Craig Paquette doubled and Johnny Damon walked. Joe Randa followed with a grounder that deflected off first baseman Dave Martinez's glove to second baseman Ray Durham.

Hernandez, covering first base, could not handle Durham's throw and was charged with an error that allowed one run to score. Damon then scored on a wild pitch by Hernandez.

Red Sox 13, Orioles 2
BOSTON — Mo Vaughn hit a three-run homer and drove in five runs, and Jamie Moyer, auditioning for a possible trade, scattered five hits over six innings.

Moyer (5-1), who reportedly is being offered to contenders seeking left-handed pitching, had a one-hitter through four innings. He lost his shutout when Baltimore scored two unearned runs in the eighth inning.

Mike Stanley also hit a three-run homer for Boston.

Scott Erickson (5-8), who pitched well in his previous six starts, allowed six runs in 10 1/3 in his fourth inning, including Vaughn's homer in the fourth that made it 6-0.

Boston leadoff hitter Jeff Frye scored five runs.

Athletics 9, Rangers 6
ARLINGTON, Texas — Mark McGwire hit two home runs, taking over the major league lead with 33, and the Oakland Athletics beat the Texas Rangers 9-6 Friday night for their fourth straight win.

Jason Giambi also homered as Oakland homered in its 15th straight game, extending the team record.

The A's lead the majors with 154 home runs, and are on pace to break the big league record of 240 by the New York Yankees in 1961.

Brewers 7, Yankees 5
MILWAUKEE Cal Eldred, coming back from elbow trouble, won for the first time since April 1995 and Greg Vaughn, who leads the majors with 92 RBIs, hit a pair of run-scoring singles.

The Brewers took a 6-0 lead after two innings against Andy Pettitte (14-5). The AL East-leading Yankees lost for the fourth time in five games.

Eldred (1-0) won for the first time since April 27, 1995. He pitched five innings, going a few pitches past his 95-pitch limit, and allowed one run and six hits.

Eldred made his second start since undergoing major surgery to repair his right elbow on June 23, 1995. He had a no-decision July 14 against Toronto.

Don't call it a comeback — yet

Magic Johnson talks reappearance

ATLANTA (AP) — Magic Johnson hung around the Dream Team on Friday and uttered a now familiar refrain: He's seriously thinking about another comeback with the Los Angeles Lakers.

The signing of Shaquille O'Neal by the Lakers "definitely gets me to thinking that I can come back," Johnson said in Friday's USA Today. "He gets the juices going. I couldn't sleep last night with the thought of Shaquille signing with the Lakers. He always said he wanted to play with me."

Asked about a third comeback as he covered the Dream Team's Friday workout for NBC, Johnson said the chances were "better, much better" than 50-50 he'll return to the Lakers midway through next season.

As the Dream Team held its first practice at the Georgia-Dome a day before its opening game against Argentina, Johnson stood behind the baseline. Every so often, he'd yell to a player on the court and flash his trademark smile.

Johnson retired from basketball after last season, but has never closed the door on another comeback.

Los Angeles renounced its rights to Johnson to clear salary cap room to sign O'Neal. Under NBA rules, Johnson is forbidden from signing with the Lakers until January.

"Del Harris and Jerry West would have to feel good about me coming back," Johnson said of the Lakers' coach and general manager.

O'Neal, one day after signing a seven-year, $120 million contract with the Lakers, missed practice to return home to Orlando for the birth of his first child.

"She is going into induced labor today and he'll be back tonight," coach Lenny Wilkens said.

Meanwhile, frustrated Reggie Miller said he didn't expect to have a new contract signed until after the Olympics.

The Indiana Pacers offered a five-year deal worth $32.5 million in February, about a half of what Miller wants — and he refused to up the ante.

"We can all laugh at that one," Miller said. "I'm the second-best shooting guard in this league. I don't want $30 million. I should get more than Allan Houston and less than Michael Jordan."

Houston left the Detroit Pistons to sign a $56 million, seven-year contract with the New York Knicks — an average of $8 million per year. Jordan got a one-year contract with the Chicago Bulls worth between $25 and $30 million.

"You look at the recent signings, and I don't want to put the Pacers in debt, but I want to be paid," Miller said. "It's not even getting fair market value, it's just to be treated fairly."

Can Kukoc, Croatia repeat silver medal?

Toni Kukoc talks to reporters about his broken thumb.

ATLANTA (AP) — Don't cry for Atlanta. Or at least, save some tears for Croatia.

The 1992 men's basketball silver medalists' hopes for a medal could be hurt by Toni Kukoc's broken left thumb, after their first game of the Olympics on Saturday.

Thanks to the unluck of the blind draw, Croatia faces a tough task. Jordan brings to the court the same pool with the Dream Team, which loosens up Saturday night against Argentina.

Croatia's test comes less than two weeks after their best player fractured the top of his left, shooting thumb in an exhibition game.

"How important is Toni to us? That's like asking what Michael Jordan brings to the Chicago Bulls," said Croatia's Dino Radja, who plays forward for the Boston Celtics.

Kukoc charged out onto the Morehouse College court for practice Friday afternoon and effortlessly swished his first shot from the top of the three-point circle. But as the workout proceeded, he at times appeared to have trouble receiving passes.

"So-so. If I play, I play," Kukoc said, thumb buried in a cup of ice after practice. "We'll see tomorrow."

Lithuania, which practiced in a high school gym Friday, was prepared to face Kukoc.

"Oh, he'll play," Donnie Nelson, a Lithuanian assistant coach, said with hesitation. "He's not here for any other reason. He didn't come to observe the Croatian badminton team."

Yugoslavia, another Big Three team (that is, after the Giant One from the United States), is in the opposite pool, so the winner of Saturday's game will be likely to avoid the Dream Teamers until the gold medal game.

"It's going to have medal-round intensity to it," Nelson said. "It's unfortunate that both teams have to get to throw into that situation right from the get-go, but that's the draw and we've got no control over it."

"It's a big game," agreed Radja. "I can't change that, but I play them the first game. I don't care, really. If you want to win a medal, you have to beat them sometime."

The three leading non-U.S. medal contenders are not coincidentally, each other. At least two NBA players on their rosters. Besides Kukoc, the Bulls' forward, and Radja, who led the Celtics' sixth-man race last season, Croatia has the Toronto Raptors' 7-foot backup center, Zan Tabak.

He'll have to battle Lithuania's 73 Arvydas Sabonis, coming off a strong rookie season for the Portland Trailblazers. Sabonis and guard Sarunas Marciulionis, who averaged 10.8 points for Sacramento each, averaged more than 23 points each in Barcelona for the Lithuanians' 7-foot backup center, Zan Tabak.

Yugoslavia, left out of the 1992 games because of United Nations sanctions, is led by 6-11 Vlade Divac, charred from Los Angeles to the Charlotte Hornets as a key figure in the NBA's trading and bidding frenzy, and a Miami Heat guard, Fred Brown.

Unlike most of the major sports, competitors in men's basketball talk longingly of being satisfied with a silver or bronze.

Powell takes lead with 7 under par

COON RAPIDS, Minn. (AP) — Even on a tour reserved for older players, Jimmy Powell is considered a prodigy.

Powell is over 60, a "Grandmaster" on the Senior PGA Tour. That's regarded as a distinguished way of categorizing players who are beyond their competitive years, but someone forgot to tell that to Powell.

One of only two 60-plus players to win on the tour since 1985, Powell eagled the 19th hole Friday to shoot a 7-under-par 65 and take a one-shot lead over J.C. Sneed after the first round of the Burnet Senior Classic.

"I was playing with a guy the other day who's 74, and he said, 'Jimmy, you're going to be playing great when you're 74,'" Powell said. "I said, 'How come?' And he said that you don't change much physically from 60 to 74. I hope he's right."

Powell, 61, lurked just behind Sneed throughout the day before sinking a 28-foot putt on No. 18 to steal the lead.

It was one of eight eagles — one of five at the 535-yard 18th — on a breezy afternoon at the 6,909-yard Banker Hills Golf Course. Sneed also had an eagle, adding seven birdies to offset three bogeys on his way to a 66.

Six others were three shots back at 69, including defending champion Ray Floyd and Lee Trevino.

"I didn't shoot myself in the foot starting out," said Floyd, who won last week's Senior Players Championship. "You can't win a tournament in the first round, but you can lose it. I'm right there in a good position."

Jackpot golfer
cards 75 at Burnet

COON RAPIDS, Minn. — Lynn Reiersgard of Jackpot, Nev., carded a 37-38 for a 75 in the opening round of the Burnet Senior Classic Friday afternoon.

Reiersgard currently is 10 strokes out of first place.

Powell won last year's First of America Classic, becoming the first player over 60 to win since Mike Fetchick became the oldest winner when he was 63 in 1985.

Dale Douglass was three months past his 60th birthday when he won the Bell Atlantic Classic last month.

Powell, who leads the tour's money list for players 60 and older, made the first of his five birdies when he holed a bunker shot at No. 2 on the well-groomed public course.

"It was an easy trap shot, but it wasn't that easy," Powell said.

He moved to 4-under, one shot behind Sneed, with birdies at Nos. 4, 5 and 6. He nearly eagled the par-5 12th when he rolled a chip shot within six inches. That birdie moved him back within a stroke of Sneed, who had gone to the clubhouse.

Five straight pars followed before Powell hit a 2-iron from 220 yards to 20 feet on No. 18. He rolled that putt in to match his best score since a 64 in 1992 Newport Cup, but he still needed a "hand from the interview stand."

"I got to geticed up now," he said.

Lunn does it again to lead LPGA event

AGAWAM, Mass. (AP) — Mardi Lunn, who hasn't finished higher than seventh in an LPGA event, put together her second straight day of virtuoso golf Friday to build a one-stroke lead in the Friendly's Classic.

Lunn, an Australian who joined the LPGA tour in 1993, cranked out a 3-under-par 69, putting her just ahead of sailing but still dangerous Dottie Pepper. Lunn, who shot 67 on Thursday, completed 36 holes at 8-under-136. Pepper was at 137 after a 69 over the 6,381-yard Crestview Country Club course.

"I'm playing solid," Lunn said. "I didn't have a 3-putt in two days."

Grandie Burton, who shot a 72 Friday, and Connie Chillemi (69) were three strokes over the lead.

Lunn, whose best previous finish was a tie for seventh this year in the PING Welch's Championship, professes a laid-back approach that did not waver with the added pressure of leading.

"I very rarely take lessons — just go out and hit it. I very rarely worry about the technicians," she said. "It's the only way to take it.

Otherwise, you end up in the nut house."

Still, she chain-smoked cigarettes and sipped Coke while surging ahead Friday. She made a 25-foot downhill putt for birdie on No. 11 and a 6-footer after a nice chip on No. 17. She went to 8-under on that putt, then muttered "go away please, not now" at thunderclaps that suspended play for 45 minutes.

Pepper, diagnosed with a virus before the round, tore through the front nine with four birdies, including a 40-footer on No. 6, against one bogey.

She said the virus helped her focus on her game. "You can't waste energy," she said.

The wind picked up on the back nine and she had one birdie and one bogey going home.

Pepper, who has won twice this year to increase her career victory total to 12, said she considered quitting the tournament Friday morning after a sleepless night. But her doctor told her it would not hurt her to play, so she came back.

"I'm not feeling good, that was pretty darn good," she said. "I am back to bed ASAP."

U.S. vs. Cuba is Olympic boxing rivalry

ATLANTA (AP) — What about the Cubans?

It's a question U.S. amateur boxing fans have been asked ever since Duanne Bobick, the gold medal favorite at the 1972 Olympics, was knocked out in third round by a heavyweight relatively unknown outside Cuba. His name was Teofilo Stephenson, and his shocking victory turned U.S. Cuba boxing into a rivalry.

The Olympic rivalry will resume Tuesday when Eric Morel, a native of Puerto Rico living in Madison, Wis., boxes Maliko Romero at 112 pounds.

"I don't think the Cubans are as strong this year as they've been," said Jesse Ravelo, an assistant coach for the U.S. team.

There are, however, several veterans, including Felix Savon, Ariel Hernandez and Juan Hernandez, on the Cuban squad.

"The Cubans are tough, and we know they are coming to fight," said Antonio Tarver of Orlando, Fla., the 178-pound world champion.

Savon is a five-time world champion and 1992 Olympic champion; Ariel Hernandez is the 1992 Olympic and 1993 world champion at 165 pounds; Juan Hernandez is a three-time world champion and was a silver medalist at Barcelona.

Although the United States has never beaten Cuba in a dual meet, a victory by Morel would reduce the Cuban margin in Olympic matches to 9-6.

Three of those victories were in finals at the 1976 Olympics in Montreal. Leon Randolph outpointed Ramon Duvalon 3-2 at 112 pounds; Sugar Ray Leonard beat Andres Aldama 5-0 at 135; and Leon Spinks stopped Sisto Soria in the third round at 178.

This year's competition will be the second time U.S. and Cuban boxers have met in the same Olympics since 1976. The United States boycotted the 1980 Moscow Games, and the Cubans did not compete in 1984 at Los Angeles and 1988 at Seoul.

Cuba was 3-0 against the United States four years ago in Barcelona. One of those bouts was the 165-pound final in which Ariel Hernandez outpointed Chris Byrd 127 under the computer scoring system.

The first time Americans boxed Cubans in an Olympics was 1968, with the Cubans winning twice. The American victory was by Alfred Jones, 41 over Raul Marrero in a second-round bout at 165 pounds.

Cubans also won two of three meetings in 1972, including Stevenson's sensational victory over Bobick. The American victory was by Ray Seales, the 139-pound gold medalist, who outpointed Andres Molina in the quarterfinals.

Prayer, honesty and all that

Utah Jazz coach Larry H. Miller tends to basketball, business, God

By Denise Turner Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Layup, slam dunk, free throw, jump shot, God: Find the word that doesn't belong.

Trick question. There is no word that doesn't belong — if you're talking about the NBA's Utah Jazz.

Everyone sees John Stockton's pinpoint passes and Karl Malone's fadeaway jump shots, but few see the man of faith behind the Dream Teamers — Jazz owner Larry H. Miller, a man dedicated to godly values, both on and off the court.

Miller, raised in a Mormon family in Salt Lake City, owns 21 car dealerships in six states. Six years ago, he and his wife, Gay, bought their basketball team.

He's always been interested in maintaining top quality sports in Salt Lake City, he said on Tuesday at the Twin Falls-West Snake Center on Harrison Street, where he was conducting leadership training sessions for Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints missionaries.

Miller was once a world-class softball pitcher, inducted into the International Softball Congress in 1992, he said. He holds a .367 lifetime batting average and pitched 117 no-hitters and 18 perfect games before he retired from the sport in 1985.

"Salt Lake City lost Triple-A baseball twice, and I wanted to bring it back," Miller said. "The Portland Beavers owner, Joe Busch, told me he would bring his team if we would build a stadium."

So Miller, who owns the Delta Center, became project manager in charge of building two-year-old Franklin Quest Field. And the Beavers became the Salt Lake Buzz.

If you build it, they will come.

Miller considers character when he looks at potential players.

"We are as interested in winning championships as anyone," he said, "but this is a group of players we send out to appearances — to hospitals and charitable organizations."

Miller doesn't attend his team's Sunday games, though he knows there have to be some. He doesn't drink either, but beer is sold at his Delta Center.

"You can't own a building as public in nature without some of this," he said. "I can't be the community censor."

But Miller does have to answer to his local church leaders.

There is an accountability process in our church, and they ask, 'Are you honest in all of your business dealings?'" said Miller, who believes it's important to live up the values of your church on the job.

He also prays for his team, but not necessarily the way people might expect.

"I don't pray for them to win," he said. "I pray for them to play hard and represent the team well and stay away from injury."

He never asks his players to win either. Instead, he asks them to give what they've got.

"We would have liked to have won Game 7 against Seattle (in the Western Conference finals in May), but the entire team — all 12 — gave everything, and I'm awfully proud of them," he said.

Traveling
Looking toward next season, Miller is pleased with his trip of Stockton, Malone and (small forward Jeff) Hammeck. Stockton, 34, wants to play two or three more years, and Miller expects him to play for the Jazz.

"In major league sports (negotiations) you have a high-powered agent on the player's side and an attorney/agent on the team's side, but with John and me — and Carl and me — there is no agent or attorney," he said. "It's just to one, an absolute trust."

Miller isn't yet sure what his team will accomplish with off-season trades or free agents.

'We are as interested in winning championships as anyone, but this is a group of players we send out to appearances — to hospitals and charitable organizations.'

— Jazz owner Larry H. Miller

As owner of the Utah Jazz, Larry H. Miller, above, is dedicated to religious values on and off court. Part of Miller's visit to Twin Falls included the organization of a 3-on-3 basketball tournament for missionaries at the Twin Falls West Snake Center. Below, Miller is pictured with Idaho Boise Mission President David M. Brown.

"We were focusing on (former Boise State University star) Chris Childs, but he signed with New York," Miller explained. "Our position is determined by room under the salary cap and (with the Jazz being a small market in the NBA), if we do participate in the free agent market it will probably be through the domino effect — players will be cut loose from teams when others are signed."

Meanwhile, Miller will tend to his dealerships (he drives a '63 Falcon Sprint convertible in good weather and a Lexus the rest of the time) and root for the Atlanta Braves.

"My first ball glove had Braves shortstop Johnny Logan's name on it, so I've always been a Braves fan."

Miller is 52 now, and his seat at the Delta Center is on the floor, front row, Jazz side. His team has a new logo ("everyone likes it but me — I said OK when I had a lot of other things on my mind").

His wife and four grown sons come to most Jazz games. His grown daughter comes occasionally. All of the kids live within seven minutes of their parents — and their Miller grandparents. Three of the Miller boys joined their father in the car business. The fourth is studying in Japan through the University of Utah. The daughter works for the Larry H. Miller Group. "We have 12 grandchildren, so we have a couple of birthdays a month," Miller said.

"That's when the family gathers at the Larry Miller home, a five-bedroom traditional brick on 8/10 of an acre with pool and sports court. They eat cake and ice cream and — surprise! — play basketball."

Larry Miller never went to college, but he holds honorary doctorates from the University of Utah and Utah Valley State College and teaches graduate level business at Brigham Young University.

"There is too much emphasis on the outcome of professional sports games when whole cities put athletes on such high pedestals and feel like successes or failures with the fortunes of their teams," Miller said. "I have strong competitive instincts, but I still think it's a game."

The values beyond the hoops are another story.

"We come to realize that, if we are honest, the principles we live by cannot be separated in the different parts of our lives — business, family, church," Miller said. "There are principles we must live by wherever we are."

Catholic youth build 'mansion' for Mexican families

By H. R. Weixel Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — A bucket brigade formed by American youth helped bring true the dream of three Mexican families to have a roof over their heads.

Young people and their leaders from St. Edward's Catholic Church in Twin Falls have returned from poverty-stricken Tijuana, Mexico, where they put concrete roofs on two homes and poured the cement floor for another.

"We worked with the organization called Esperanza, that means 'hope,' to help build houses for Mexican families who need a home," said Darlene Wagner, who accompanied the group on the adventure June 28 to July 2.

Ann Nielson, director of St. Edward's youth program, coordinated the trip for the 14 youth and 11 adults who traveled to Tijuana for the construction project.

Homes near the construction site were made of tires and pallets. Some were built by nailing together garage doors. The buildings had no electricity, no running water and no indoor facilities.

The 40-by-40-foot Esperanza houses, by contrast, had two rooms and electricity, "which made them like mansions for the families who would live in them," Nielson said.

The philosophy of Esperanza is not to build a house for a family, but to build it with a family, Wagner added. "Family members help with the construction and they go back with bags of cement over an eight-year period. The cement is used to build other houses. Homes are built entirely of cement, including the roof, because that keeps them cool. Other work groups had put up the walls of Tijuana trekkers from St. Edward's Catholic Church are hard at work on a home they built during a recent mission trip to Mexico.

"We had a lot of prayers behind us, and God took good care of us." "This was the most touching one for us all," Darlene Wagner explained.

"According to the Esperanza philosophy, the family getting the home has to help build it. But the widow woman who was to live in the house had to work every day to support her 9-year old daughter. So the neighbors took her place and came to work for her. The widow had not only lost her husband, but recently her 16-year old daughter had given birth to a baby and both died of malnutrition."

"We had some close calls," but never a serious accident," Darlene Wagner said.

a building provided by Esperanza. They were fed lunch by neighboring Mexican families.

"The food was really good," Darlene Wagner said. "For lunch they brought us Mexican food — like burritos — rice and beans."

To finance the trip, the youth held fund raisers. Church members and Twin Falls businesses gave donations that were used to purchase plane tickets to San Diego, where the group rented vans and drove to Tijuana. Wagner was one of the drivers.

Driving in Mexico was quite an experience, she said. "We got stuck a couple of times, but we finally made it."

The group spent $3,000 on supplies to help build the homes.

"This was a very, very moving experience for me," Nielson said, noting that the work project changed the lives of the 25 Twin Falls youth and adults involved in it. "Although these people are living in poverty, they had a peace about them and they were very happy. One of the fathers (who would live in one of the Esperanza homes) showed me a picture of his six children. He was so content and happy that the family of eight would have a 40-by-40-foot home to live in. They are so content with a lot less than I have."

In addition to the Wagners and Nielson, those who went on the trip are Debby Mariak, Jon Mickel, Heidi Diehl, Mary Marinat, Jude Anderson, Letti Hernandez, Cindy Harmon, Jenny Hillman, Pete Hillman, Nick Hernandez, Sarah Schmid, Jenny Harmon, Desirae Diehl, Amber Diehl, Adam Arndt, Erin Michak, Mike Sutton, Vaughn Hegg, Bernicia Grover, Rebecca Auth, Juan Larios and Dañelle Beck.

Self-help books boil down to 4 questions

I have just received three books in the mail — sent by the publisher — books I did not ask for, don't want and won't read.

And they are all books to inspire, cheer and drive us forward into a positive lifestyle. You can't miss with these books. They will make you feel better in one way or another. These books are guaranteed to make you smile even when you stub your toe.

The interesting thing about religious self-help books is that after you finish reading a couple you realize they are all the same. You don't know anything about these authors except the little book jacket tells you. Have you ever wondered if this is someone you can trust? I mean, the author could be an agent of Satan and you wouldn't have a clue.

Faith Today Clark Morpew

The second thing I've noticed is that these people like to write about themselves. Most religious self-help books are filled with experiences the author has had over the years. Here is the author in India, helping Mother Teresa bandage a child's leg. Then they get a rickshaw and go to see the Dalai Lama, who invites them to stay for tea.

Then the author becomes a missionary to South America and saves the lives of dozens of children who were starving in the desert. Then the writer becomes a Muslim and moves to Saudi Arabia to set up a free medical clinic for the poor. Oh, I forgot to tell you the author is a medical doctor.

And you know, these fabulous experiences are true? The author could be a pathological liar for all we know.

Here we have a book called "The Soul of the Firm" (Harper/Zondervan, $18) that teaches us how to insert spiritual principles into our businesses. In a day when a single corporation can eliminate 40,000 jobs, I suppose this book could be important. But does it take a book, or would a magazine article do as well?

Another book is titled "Providence: The Story of a Fifty-Year Vision Quest" (Bantam, $10.95). Without even looking inside the book I know we're going to read about a man's life and how he jumped from one religion to another until he finally thought he found God.

Why would I want to read this book? It took the guy 50 years to find God. Give me a book I don't have to read 50 years to find God in about 45 minutes. That's the book I'll read.

All of the books I receive probably have some redeeming qualities. For instance, I have in my hand a little book called "The Web of Life" (Conari Press, $14.95) that is nicely written and full of little tidbits of wisdom. The author, Richard Louv, gives us some interesting characters, but mostly he writes about himself and his family. They seem like nice people, but 258 pages might be a bit much.

I wonder who reads these books. Are we in so much trouble as a people that we can't figure out the good life on our own with a little help from our friends? Are we so busy that we can't take some time off to examine our lives and make necessary changes? Are we not talking to our spouses and our friends? Don't people in religious institutions sit around and talk about values, morality and God anymore?

One of the books that came in this week is "How Then Shall We Live: Four Simple Questions that Reveal the Beauty and Meaning of Our Lives" (Bantam, $22.95). The four questions author Wayne Miller suggests we pose to ourselves are: Who am I? What do I love? How shall I live knowing I will die? What is my gift to the family of the earth?

The premise is that if you can figure out the answers to those four questions, you will be happy. That seems fairly simple. Take a piece of paper and make a list of things that define who you are: wife, mother, research chemist, believer and so forth. Then move on to the next questions.

Within minutes you will have defined a new you. I'm not playing with you here. This kind of exercise should be done often because we're changing every day.

Letter

The year 2000 will pass like other years Throughout the ages, many people have predicted the world would end at some given date. Even today, there are people who predict the world will end in the year 2000.

It is really sad, with all the knowledge in the world today, that so many people are still living back in the Bible days — a time when people were stoned to death just for picking up sticks on certain days. Missionaries were nailed to a cross just for speaking their mind.

Chaplains provide services at Olympics

KnightRidder News Service

They won't appear on a memorable Olympic moment. And they won't be featured in television commercials that tout the glories of the products viewers should buy.

Among the thousands of athletes, officials and visitors to the XXVI Olympiad that began Friday, 37 United Methodist ministers and directors of general staff support services at Emory University Hospital in Atlanta.

They responded to a request from a group of Korea Christians to a place to hold daily worship services at 5 a.m. and arranged for a 7 p.m. service every evening for those who want to come and pray in silence, according to their faith. No one leads the service.

After Atlanta was chosen to host the 26 games, Overall, who by then had moved to the Georgia capital, decided to join an interfaith advisory group that took on the task of planning religious services for the athletes, coaches and officials.

That's why the group began meeting one month for 2 1/2 hours to listen to members of various religions talk about their beliefs and about the religious needs of like-minded athletes.

The chaplains, whose only identification is a 2-inch badge that says "Olympic chaplain, Atlanta 1996," also will be ready for the unexpected, as happened during the 1988 Olympics when a ski coach died. Within 10 hours, a memorial service was organized by Olympic chaplains for representatives of the teams who wanted to attend.

Klan uses Bible to send message of hate

Knight-Ridder News Service

COLUMBIA, S.C. — The blue-and-white Christmas flag flutters to one side of the wooden trailer that serves as a mobile stage and pulpit.

Several little girls, one with blonde hair, dressed in two shoulder-length pigtail buns in the dusty field. Parents, some clutching worn Bibles, sit on planks atop empty 5-gallon buckets of volleyball mud.

A nasal screech blasts over the ancient faithful — "Kod is on our side!"

The heavy odor of gasoline drifts through the cool night air, a sickly-sweet reminder that something is very wrong in the dusty field.

At King's order, his throng leashes the makeshift pews, hoses flaming torches and forms a broad circle in the flat field.

People forming the circle, most wearing white robes, raise and lower their torches to the chant of "God, country, Klan."

Horace King says he quit drinking and "living life on the wild side" after joining the Klan in his 30s. Now, some 30 years later, he's grand dragon of the Christian Knights of the Ku Klux Klan in South Carolina.

Virgil Griffin believes blacks may be selling their own churches on fire to get public sympathy. The cross is the most prominent symbol of the Christian faith. Setting fire to that Christianity's symbol in the dark of night is at the heart of Ku Klux Klan ritual.

"We light this cross to signify Christ is the light of the world," a voice says into the darkness. It is the Klan chaplain, or "kiddus," named after Colde, the high priest of the ancient Druids.

On this recent night, about 60 members and supporters of the Christian Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, the largest Klan group in South Carolina, are clustered in rural Lexington County, where ranks of 52-year-old Imperial Wizard is the founder of the Christian Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. He lives in Mt. Holly, N.C., and attends an independent church. He has a 10th-grade education. "There is more hate in the Bible than love. Jesus hated. Why do you think he turned over the moneychangers' tables and whipped them?"

Charles Beasley was once brought up on charges by the Klan for "preaching too much." The 18-year-old minor is grand dragon of the North Carolina chapter of the Christian Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. He's also pastor of an independent church in Charlotte. Beasley dropped out of school in seventh grade. "I have never received a welcome at no party or any church like I have the Klan."

Barry Black believes that President Clinton is behind the church fires. "It's a conspiracy to take greater control of the country," says the 49-year-old Imperial Wizard of the Keystone Klan. Black, who is a Baptist minister, says he's now eager to go into public schools and teach kids the truth about the Klan.

The Christian Knights also face a civil lawsuit accusing them of conspiring to encourage two members to torch the churches.

Because of the investigation and lawsuit, this rally is more unsettling than most. Leaders from two Klan organizations and members from other white-separatist groups are present. Klan state group watchers say it is a rare and unnerving show of unity.

The grand dragon of the Keystone Klan, a Pennsylvania-based group, is speaking at the microphone. He vows his organization's help to raise money and support time housekeeper, Sara Davis, standing at Pratt's side.

Although the photograph was obtained by Quinn from the Utah State Historical Society, which cropped it in his request, it originally had a more unappetizing 1952 biography of Stephens.

When the owner of the picture, Stephens relative Don Noble, learned of its intended use, he threatened the press with legal action.

The result: The U of P Press faces the tedious task of removing the dust covers from 1,000 already used books and replacing them with another title-only cover. It also is cutting out of the book a single page of photographs that includes the disputed point.

"We didn't want to further delay the book" by seeing the copyright issue settled in court, Dulany said, even though copyright law generally gives precedence to the photographer, not the owner.

Quinn said the cropping was intended merely to illustrate Evans with one of his chums, not as evidence of a close relationship.

for the Christian Knights.

Also at the rally are men identifying themselves as members of the Christian Identity movement and the Aryan Nations, groups linked to white-separatist violence in other states. They, too, vow support.

"It's a concern," State Law Enforcement Division Chief Robert Stewart says of the show of unity in the traditionally factionalized groups.

Stewart doesn't know if the "momentary unity will lead to anything bigger. Klan membership in South Carolina has been falling for years, and Stewart says none of the four active groups has more than 100 members. Two of the groups are virtually inactive.

But Jack Levin, a widely known authority on hate crime, says the show of solidarity is worrisome: "Hate groups know their power in numbers."

Levin, director for the Study of Violence and Social Conflict at Boston's Northeastern University, says the groups use similar references to "lend an air of religious credibility" to their message of hate.

And few of the groups wear themselves in Christian robes more than the Christian Knights.

on, or leader, of the Christian Knights. The rally is in a field next to his tiny yellow house on Skitter Ridge, amid scrub pines and sand hills near highways where he posts signs inviting the public to attend.

King dreams of a resurgent Ku Klux Klan. The Klan is not in a disorderly state, he says. It's not about the Bible and a desire for order in a disorderly world.

The Klan is not for violence, he says. It's for racial separation, but the government is conspiring with blacks and others to mingle the races and trample on individual rights.

A Robed Klansman shows a blue-jacketed booklet into the hands of a visitor. The Bible Answers, Racial Questions. "It's about how race-mixing goes against the Bible. The words are hard to read, in the 'ye' and 'thou's' of King James English. The Klan depends entirely on this translation to make its case.

A couple of the verses jump out. One refers to destroying places of worship to prevent "race-mixing." The Bible says that to mean that blacks are cursed.

Still, the Klansmen insist they're loving Christians. Among those wrapped in the Klan robes is a pastor of a Protestant church — are church members from local and out-of-state churches.

Tempest brews over same-sex history

Protest about book written by former Mormon delays its publication

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — It isn't often that a respected university publishing house reprints 5,000 book covers, rurs out a page of photographs and fields nasty calls and letters about a scholarly work its critics haven't even seen.

But a long hot summer at the University of Illinois Press could get hotter once "Same-Sex Dynamics among Nineteenth-Century Americans: A Mormon Example," his bookstores in August, months behind schedule.

"I knew that this would be troubling to some of the Mormon community," said John D. Dulany, associate director of the press in Champaign, Ill. "I didn't anticipate these kinds of mine fields."

Neither did the book's author, D. Michael Quinn, a Yale-trained historian and former Brigham Young University professor who was excommunicated from the church in 1993 for research on women and Mormonism's male priesthood.

"There is a level of hatred among otherwise good people in Mormon culture that is very disturbing," said Quinn, who still considers himself a practicing Mormon. "It's a gut reaction they have to these issues, and it's a blind spot for them."

Likely to enhance the high feeling is the 53-year-old Quinn's first public statement about the controversy in the August issue of gay-oriented Out magazine. Though once married for 18 years and the father of four children, Quinn said, "I am overwhelmed with Mormonism. It's a gut reaction they have to these issues, and it's a blind spot for them."

The brouhaha over the book was touched off in early March by an Associated Press article based on the book's contents. The book examines all types of same-sex relationships and attitudes among early Mormons, both erotic and platonic. The story triggered a flood of angry calls and letters to newspapers in Utah and Ogden, which had 23,000 subscription cancellations apace.

"It's the most letters we've received about a single news story in the two years since I've been here," Quinn said. "I've never had it last that long," said Bruce Smith,

D. Michael Quinn, author of a controversial book on same-sex dynamics in Mormon history, says he knew he was gay from the age of 12.

publisher of The Herald Journal in Logan. "I received some nasty, vile comments, both written and verbal. Most of those kinds of comments were anonymous."

Later, the newspapers printed guest columns and letters, several from relatives of the late Evan Stephens, composer of many of Mormonism's most cherished hymns and director of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir for 26 years.

Stephens, who died in 1930, never married and spent much of his life with a succession of young male companions he called his "boy chums," all of whom later married. In his book, and in an excerpt printed last winter in the independent Mormon journal Dialogue, Quinn raises the possibility Stephens had erotic interest in other males. He stressed, however, that the composer may never acted on the impulse. "When I encountered the (Dialogue) article my first reaction was that I had before me a 'case study' in the use of innuendo to vilify the dead," George L. Mitton of Provo, wrote Dulany in a letter urging the press to cancel publication of the 416-page book.

Mitton, a grandson of one of Stephens' young friends, Samuel Bayliff Mitton, called Quinn's premise "categorically false," and accused him of misconstruing and taking quotations out of context and of "finding homosexual allusions wherever he looks."

Mitton also pointed out a problem with the book's dust jacket, or cover. It featured a photograph of Stephens and one of his companions, Noel S. Pratt, that had been cropped to exclude a woman, Stephens' longtime housekeeper, Sara Davis, standing at Pratt's side.

Although the photograph was obtained by Quinn from the Utah State Historical Society, which cropped it in his request, it originally had a more unappetizing 1952 biography of Stephens.

When the owner of the picture, Stephens relative Don Noble, learned of its intended use, he threatened the press with legal action.

Noah Movement stirs up politics

By Joy Thompson Knight-Ridder News Service

Commentary

I once had a roommate who had a little lax when it came to cleaning her hamsters' cages. Since we shared a room, I was more than a bit perturbed about this problem.

So when sub hints and threats failed, I pulled out the Good Book. Days earlier, I actually came across a Bible verse regarding the care of animals. Proverbs 12:10 reads, "A righteous man cares for the needs of his animals, but the kindest acts of the wicked are cruel."

She got the message; the cages started to look and smell much better. I and the hamsters, no doubt were grateful.

In recent years, some evangelical Christians have taken the concept of a righteous man caring for animals and turned it into a political statement. They are members of the Evangelical Environmental Network. And they have caused quite a stir among political conservatives.

Started three years ago by about 1,000 Christian congregations, the network, the EEN, has been labeled the "Noah Movement." Simply put, the group believes that nature magnifies the experience of God, and Christians must be responsible stewards of God's creation. Their idea is not to worship nature as some religions do, but to respect and, to a degree, protect it.

Recently, the organization has been crusading to save the Endangered Species Act. Conservatives in Congress have proposed weakening the act's provisions that protect the habitats of endangered animals and reducing the number of species on the endangered list. So far, the movement has succeeded in getting the Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt and the EEN has been put in the media limelight.

Some have criticized the EEN's views as extreme or radical. Two years ago, Robert Dugan, head of the Washington office of the National Association of Evangelicals, refused to sign the organization's declaration and resigned from its advisory council.

The threat to the environment and species is overblown, he said. Political opposition is mounting against the Noah Movement. He is concerned that over-regulation can stifle economic growth, and that maintaining a healthy economy is more important than maintaining the environment.

The EEN's stand is definitely a little one. "Save the earth and the animals" is a rallying cry one would expect to hear from New Agers and pagans, not evangelical Christians. However, the message is being preached in some evangelical congregations and beyond representatives in Congress.

Some claims by environmentalists that needs to be heard in order to keep careless and greed-driven economic growth in check.

I, too, believe nature reflects God. The Bible is full of lessons drawn from plants, animals and natural wonders and forces. It would be a shame if one day we end up having to use an encyclopedia to find out about natural wonders, because they no longer exist. However, that is unlikely.

Christian bookseller trade show draws 12,000

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Who's one of the biggest trendsetters in the country today? It's not a designer. It's not a model. It's not a TV personality. It's not a movie star. It's not a politician. It's not a sports star. It's not a singer. It's not a dancer. It's not a comedian. It's not a talk show host. It's not a reality show contestant. It's not a game show contestant. It's not a quiz show contestant. It's not a trivia show contestant. It's not a crossword puzzle solver. It's not a word search solver. It's not a sudoku solver. It's not a crossword puzzle solver. It's not a word search solver. It's not a sudoku solver.

That's the news from the 47th annual convention of the Christian Booksellers Association at the Anaheim Convention Center. More than 12,000 delegates flocked around the world are attending the trade show this week.

Gene Barna, president of Barna Research Group in Orange, Calif., explained the phenomenon to conventioners in statistical terms, gathered from his personal computer.

87 percent of Americans consider themselves to be Christian.

totally accurate in teachings. Almost half believe it can be taken literally.

And as a result, it's paradise on Earth for those selling God, according to Rhylis Tickle, a religion editor for Publisher's Weekly, the industry journal. For example, she notes:

Tennessee-based Ingram Book Co., the country's largest wholesale distributor, has posted a 450 percent increase in sales in the past 27 months.

Book of the Month Club's new "One Spirit" division is the fastest-growing subclub in 33.1 percent in the past year — and that doesn't count Bibles.

If anyone still isn't a believer in God's selling power, all they have to do is try to get through all the convention exhibits. There are six acres of retail heaven, including some 1,583 exhibits, hawking religious items for body and soul, and the home, too.

There are framed 3-foot prints of Jesus in the Garden of Gethsemane. There are greeting cards for any occasion (God Bless You; God Bless your baby girl; God bless your tomorrows — for retirees). And don't forget the really big sellers — the tapes, CDs, videos and books.

Tickle of Publisher's Weekly, says there are probably more than three dozen good reasons that Americans are moving back to God. As the end of the century nears, millennium may be infecting many. And baby boomers, as usual, are latching up the statistics, this time with visions of their own mortality.

But the boomers don't have the market cornered. The baby boomers and generation Xers are seeking God, but they are "using Christianity as a starting point and are looking all over the place," Tickle says. There is growing interest in "new age spirituality" (the book "Celestial Prophecy," alone has sold 5 million copies). But it's popular are classics by theologian C.S. Lewis and the Sufi poet Rumi.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"A man cannot be comfortable with his own approval."
—Mark Twain

Today's South had the values for his jump shift, and his trump suit was good enough to make his game. Unfortunately, because his plan was as good as his bidding, he allowed a routine 4-2 trump break to beat the game!

South ruffled the third heart and quickly turned his attention to trumps. He crossed to dummy's diamond king to take a winning trump finesse and then cashed the ace and led another trump. East won his king, and forced South to use his last trump on another heart. East's last trump remained to win the setting trick. South's analysis was self-comforting. "We being in game," he explained, "it was the bad-break that beat us."

How should South have handled the trump better? After ruffing the third heart, South should realize he can afford to lose a trump trick. While he cannot afford to lose a heart, if trumps are 3-3, he will always make the game. If they are 5-1, he will need a miracle. So he should prepare for the near 50-50 chance of a 4-2 break.

Instead of crossing to dummy's diamond king for a trump finesse, South should lead a high trump (not the ace), conceding a trick to the king. If East takes it, dummy's trump eight guards against another heart lead and South is safe. If East refuses his trump king, South crosses to dummy's diamond king to take the delayed trump finesse. Then he cashes his ace and rattles off his minor-suit winners, limiting East to only one trump trick.
