HARDIN, Mont. — More than 120 years after Conter's Last Stand, the bastle of Linde Bighom Bardefield National Monument rags on.

In the latest skirmish, fans of 14. Col. George Armstrong Conster claim the Montana park's Indian superintendent allowed modern Indians than summer to descente the mass grave where 220 of Custer's 7th Cavalry troopers are buried. The superintendent, Gerard Bakler, denies the accusation. He claims, in turn, that "Custer hoffs" themselves discharded the grave.

since it was regarded.

The national abortion rate, which peaked in 1980 at 29 per thousand women, has been falling steadily since then. In 1994, the Institute estimates, it fell to 24 abortions per thousand women, based on data from state health departments and abortion providers. In the new study, 57 percent of abortion patients said they had used birth control in the month they became preparant. This compared with 51 percent in 1987

Based on this, the researchers concluded that abortions resulting from contraceptive failure had increased, even though the survey did not probe whether the women used birth control during every act of intercourse in the month they became pregnant.

The study also found that pregnancy due to condom failure had more than doubled, to 32 percent, since 1987.

Nearly 17 years later, Douglass, now a 32-year-dld state legislator, wrote the law that will allow him and his sister to watch Hatch die by injection for the slayings of their parents that night in 1979. Science's new version of Martian life not linked to little green men

WASHINGTON — As scientists crowed Wednesday that they may have found signs of acrily life on Mars, they found themselves stumbling across guestions that have worned theologians and bartenders for ages. Their discovery is still tentative. But one verdict is already in: The little green men evolved from us and our imaginations, not some Martian landscape. The Martian version of life that Wednesday's disclosure jointed to was far more primitive — and benign.

Wednesday, scientists ecstatically announced that they think that thiny squiggles on a potatosized piece of rock from Mars are signs of ancient life on that planet. But along with that came fundamental questions. What exact ly is life? And what exactly was found?

While working with the Office or Aging council, Mahan interviewed a bedridden woman in Jerume who didn't have enough money to employ around-the-clock help, so she was helpess four hours a day.

"The public money is just not going to be there," Mahan said.

The organizers are soliciting letters of support from churches and agencies to obtain a 525,000 private grant. The money will establish a group and pay for training and a coordinator to match volunteers to a need. If someone wants a handicapped camp built, for example, the coordinator would find a volunteer with carpentry skills.

The local group would be affiliated with the National Federation of Interfaith Volunteer Caregivers, which reports it has more than 300 coalitions throughout the U.S. Starting just last year, service agencies were invited to join churches in interfaith explosion of TWA Flight 800, the head of the investigation said Wednesday. Most of the large pieces of wreckage that might comeal trapped bodies have been recovered, National Transportation Safety Board vice chairman Robert Francis said.

Additional victims unlikely to be recovered from TWA Flight 800

EAST MORICHES, N.Y. (AP)

— Divers are "increasingly unlikely" to find any of the 35 bodies still missing from the explosion of TWA Flight 800, the head of the investigation said Wednesday.

Earlier Wednesday, divers raised a fire-damaged 75-foot length of the plane's right wing. Crews also brought ashore the cockpit's shared-off windshield, a piece of fuschage with nine windows, and a stainless-sted milet, among other items.

"There are not the kinds of pieces of wreckage out there any more where we can expect to find bodies," Francis said.

"It's not fair to people no think-there's a huge piece of wreckage down there that's going to be crovering up 30 bodies."

So far, 195 of the 230 people killed in the July 17 explosion have been recovered, but name in the last two days, and the medical examiner has closed a temporary morgue at a Coast Guard staton near the recovery.

Asked what the changes were by finding the remaining withins, Francis said: "Increasingly milledy. In fairness in the fan-thes that are out these waiting, time is not something that is help."

Francis said that the piece of right wing recovered Wednesday was so large it would have to be can in two before being brought to shore.

Pension plans should be protected

WASHINGTON — The Labor Department, attempting to enhance the security of employee pension plans, on Wednesday directed U.S. firms to invest workers' savings more quickly and urged Congress to subject large retirement plans to more strungent audic. "Government cannot fall short on its responsibility to ensure that workers' pensions are there when they expect them and need them," Labor Secretary Robert Reich told reporters. "While the vast majority of plans are well WASHINGTON -- The Labor run, we discovered through our enforcement efforts that too many employers held workers' contributions to their pension plans too long."

The investment directive will increase the value of pension-plans nationwide by 576 million annually, the Labor Department estimates. It requires employers to deposit retirement funds withheld from a worker's pay into the designated investment account within 15 days of the end of the month in which the paycheck is issued.

The rule, scheduled to take effect in six months, has prompted complaints by many compa-nies who claim it will impose an unreasonable administrative bur-den on their pension plan admin-den on their pension plan administrators.

Currendy, companies can wait as long as 90 days before deposit; ing withheld funds in investment, accounts. Reich said Labor Department investigators found that some companies — especially those with financial problems — "improperly use the funds as a type of interest-free loan to manage cash-flow problems."
Reich said the 90-day window denies workers additional earnings that could be generated.

Molecule discovery offers clues to origin of Earth life

NEW YORK (AP) — Boosting a theory of how life on Earth first emerged from the primordial soup, scientists have discovered that a short chain-like molecule can reproduce itself in the test can reproduce itsell in the test tube.

Most scientists believe that some kind of self-reproducing molecule was needed for life to merge. Its job would be to pass information from one generation to the next. Nowadays, that job is generally handled by DNA.

Popular theory says that originally, a chemical cousin of DNA called RNA may have been the reproducing molecule that let life emerge.

reproducing molecule that let life emerge.

But the new research supports the less popular theory that mol-ecules called peptides may have played that role instead. Scientists found that a peptide was able to promote the forma-tion of new copies of itself.

Scientists should seriously consider a possible role for peptides in the origins of life; said researcher M. Reza Ghadiri of the Scripps Research Institute in La Jolla, Calil, He and colleagues presented the work in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature.

The result is surprising and exciting, said Stanley L. Miller of the University of California at San Diego. While scientists have usually focused on the replicating ability of RNA and DNA, he said, "this brings another view-point into this, with considerable potential."

Peptide reproduction would be fundamentally different from the way RNA and DNA reproduce, said Dr. Stuart Kauffman of the said Dr. Stuart Kauffman of the Santa Fe: Institute in New Mexico, who studies the origin of life. DNA or RNA are strands that form the famous double helix structure.

GOP reaches deal on abortion plank campaign's interest to have a floor fight," he said. "Those who want to precipitate one are not interested in Senator Dole's well-being but in Some other ideological goal." Senior Dole campaign aides held a conference call with several GOP abortion-rights activists Wednesday to urge them to accept the appendix idea as a compromise and end talk of a floor fight. As the compromise talks intensified, House Speaker Newt Gingrich said the abortion debate was a sign of the GOP's diversity—and not as divisive a struggle as portrayed in media accounts.

GOP voters favor abortion foes

Republican voters in Kansas, Republican voters in Kansas, Michigan and Georgia chose Senate norminees who oppose abortion over, candidates who back abortion rights in a stuming rebuke to moderates calling for tolerunce less than a week before the start of the party's national convention.

In Bob Dole's home state, the GOP contest pitted Republican moderates aligned with the woman who succeeded him against the party's social conservatives — and the conservatives wen easily.

CIA agents face questions from officials

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA inspector general is investigating allegations of drug and arms smuggling by agéncy operatives working out of an airstrip in Mena, Ark., during the 1980s, CIA and congressional officials said Wednesday. CIA Director John Deutch ordered the investigation last spring in response to a request in February by Rep. Jim Leach, R-Lowa, chairman of the House Bankling Committee: Leach's panel is conducting its own investigation of money laundering in the Mena area, stemming from the committee's Whitewater inquiry and related issues.

Mark Mansfield, a CIA spokesman, said there is no deadline. "It's going to be done as expeditiously and thoroughly as possible," Mansfield said. "These questions are not new. There have been questions, allegations really for some time now."

Probation program works for us, the fair, the kids

When you go to this year's Twin Falls County Fair and Rodeo, you'll benefit from the labor of young lawbreakers – or rather, from the labor of young exlawbreakers, whose penance takes the form of weed pulling, paint scraping and similar chores. A news story earlier this week described how 40 such teen-agers have worked at the fairgrounds as part of a juvenile probation program.

Taxpayers should be glad to hear about such programs, for two reasons.

about such programs, for two reasons.
One, the fairgrounds and other public facilities can certainly use the help.
And two, physical work is good for the soul – especially a teen-age soul.
Much fuss has been made in recent

Much fuss has been made in recent years about compensating the victims of crimes. That's good, as far as it goes. But a crime isn't just an offense against an individual victim. It's an affornt to all of society. Ideally, offenders should pay back society, too.

Since January, juvenile offenders in Thyin Falls County have put in about 3,500 hours on various community-service projects. (Non-profit organizations can call the county to sign up for similar help.) In this way, the community gets a little payback. Even more important, the young workers get a feeling of accomplishment.

Anyone who has been around young people knows how important that feeling is. Though the self-esteem movement has been widely ridiculed, youngsters really do need to feel good about themselves.

bout themselves. JoAnne Craner, a county official Joanne Craner, a county official working with the program, says that after a couple of days' work, the kids begin bragging about what they have accomplished. You don't have to be a psychologist to understand how a sense of pride can influence a person's future behavior.

Once having felt the pride of productive work, the young probationers may feel inspired to go looking for the feeling on their own time.

No single program will solve any community's juvenile-crime problems, because kids have lots of individual reasons for getting into trouble. But what we've heard about Twin Falls County's community-service program sounds like a project worth nurturing.

gram sounds like a project worth nur-turing.

Last year, when the Legislature turned over juvenile probation to the counties, this kind of common-sense creativity was what everyone hoped for. The community will be watching to see whether it really steers kids our of trouble's way. We'd bet on it.

District shouldn't hide reality

Looks like Mr. Garner has embarnased the Kimberly School District by his ultimatum, "quit your partitine job or you'll be fired."

It appears to me that Mr. Mc. Cormick is trying to take care of his obligations and pay his bills — what a novel ideal Maybe Mr. McCormick could speak to students in the future about the importance of honesty, working hard and taking care of responsibilities, some of the values that the school district is trying to instill in students. Doesn't the similar situation apply to other Kimberly School District employees who work in bars in Twin Falls, or is it only if you work in a bar in Kimberly or buy alcohol in Kimberly that you are then considered to be "indiscreet."?

The grocery store in Kimberly sells liquor at the same counter that kids rent video games and movies. You don't think kids see the rows of bottes on the wall behind the counter? (Or is it OK as long as they don't see anyone that works at the school buy. It?)

I commend the district on its attempts to educate students about the dangers of alcohol. One such lesson should be that it's a reality; it is legal and must be used responsibly by adults. Give kids some credit; be honest with them and don't try and hide the real world from them. They'll discover it sooner or later -don't you think it's best if they are armed with the whim to pay his bills, raise his fam.

Clinton will benefit from 'echo politics'

AN DIEGO - Dispirited Republicans, their fates linked with Bob Dole's, have of late experienced life as all Lent and no fates as a fate of his economic plan, built around a 15 percent across-the-board tax cut, which he hopes will, at last, draw a sharp distinction between himself and his rival. Will flaming hope replace dull despair in Republicans ranks? Time will tell, but recent events have already tale Republicans that trying to draw sharp distinctions between conservation and Climton, too, favors at ax cut, but one smaller and more targeted. This reflects the reversal of rates in contemporary American politics.

On convention's eve, GOP indebted to Coolidge

LYMOUTH NOTCH, Vt. - Just days before the Republican National Convention in San Diego. I was invited to the tiny hamlet of Plymouth North, the birth place and burial site of Calvin Coolidge, 30th president of the United States. The occasion was the annual gathering of the Calvin Coolidge, Memorial Foundation. The timing couldn't have been better, because Bob Dule's tax cut plan is vintage Coolidge. In fact, Coolidge was the first fiscally and culturally conservaive president of this century, and it is a tribute to him that the Republican Party, Bob Dole and the country are returning to his way of thinking.

Coolidge has been maligned by a lot of historians, not because of his alleged personality weaknesses but because of his uncompromising ideas, integrity and character.

Dole's critics in the White House claim is tax-cut proposals will balloon the Dole's critics in the White House claim his tax-cut proposals will balloon the deficit and wreck the economy. They should consider the stunningly successif Revenue Arc of 1926, engineered by Coolidge and Treasury Secretary Andrew Mellon. In 1922, the effective tax rate on the wealthy was 50 percent, who paid a torul of $77 million in federal taxes. By 1927, Coolidge had cut their tax rate to 20 percent, but he same group paid $230 million in taxes. Meanwhile, the total tax burden on people making less than $10,000 fell from $130 million less than $10,000 fell from $130 million.

in 1923 to less than $50 million in 1929.

Codidge's philosophy about rating and government was as important as the results. To a society struggling under the weight of foderal delts, he said, 'I favor the policy of contant, not because I wish to save people. The men and women of this country who trill are the cost of the government. Every dollar the cost of the government. Every dollar we carelessly waste means that their life will be so mach the more about their life will be so much the more about their life will be so much the more about and to the cost of the solid set in the set of the solid set in the more about and their life will be so much the more about and the set of the se dant. Economy is idealism in its most practical form."

In Coolidge's view, the role of public policy was not to redistribute wealth but to create it. "After all, he said," there is, but a fixed quality of wealth in this coun-try at any fixed time. The only way that we can all secure more of it is to create more."

And Coolidge saw a link between wealth, individual character and social progress: "Wealth is the product of industry, ambition, character and untiring effort. In all experience, the accumulation of wealth means the multiplication of schools, the increase of knowledge, the dissemination of intelligence, the encouragement of science, the broadening of outlook, the expansion of liberty, the widening of culture."

For Coolidge, this was more than philosophy. During his administration, the federal budget strank, the national debtwas cut almost in half, unemployment was 3.6 percent, consumer prices rose at just 0.4 percent. The national wealth increased an astounding 17.5 percent, total education spending rose fourfold, and il interacy was cut in half.

One historian who appreciates.

Coolidge, Paul Johnson, said, "No public man carried into modern times more comprehensively the founding principles of Americanism, hard work, furgality, freedom of conscience, freedom from government, expect for serious culture.

Costly government, Coolidge believed, robbed those who must pay for it, not only of their money but of family and leisure time. "The combinuing costs of public administration can be met in only me way—by the work of the people. The higher they become, the more the people must work for the more the more the people must work for the more the more the for themselves."

BUBL - An ammonia leak forced a precautionary evacuation in Buhl Duesdy evening.

Just after 7 p.m., a citizen reported a strong smell of gas near South Eighth Street.

Responding fire department units established a safety zone around the area and advised residents within the area to leave their homes temporarily.

The leak was traced to an unsecured valve on a runk at Western Farm Service, about a block from Eighth Street.

"With Hute wind in the area, the gas did not dissipate rapidly; that's why we had to evacuate some homes in the mea," Assistant Fire Chief Earl Tyree said.

Approximately 50 residences were evacutated. A three-man team went into the area and controlled the leaking valve. Two fire engines and a resoue unit were on the scene for more than an hour.

Prosecution lays out case against Filer man

TWIN FALLS - The prosecution Wednesday, drew, on, several law, enforcement officers to build their case against a Filer man facing four felony chorques stemming from a February shootout with police.

The defense, meanwhile, tried to raise questions as to whether Ernest Ray Watts Jr., could have known he was firing shors at police officers.

Watts 31, is charged with two counts of aggravated assault in connection with a seven-hour standoff and shootout which left a Filer police officer and a Twin Falls County sheriff's sergeant injured.

The jury heard arguments Tuesday and Wednesday from Twin Falls County Chief Deputy Prosecutor John Lothspeich and defense attorney Bill Holllifeld. The jury also heard a muffled 911 call from Watts' 10-year-old daughter and testimony from at least seven law enforcers Wednesday. Filer police officers, Michael Orban and Morgan Case were dispatched to Watts' Sixth Street home in Filer about 10 p.m. on Feb. 25 after Watts' upset daughter told a 911 dispatcher that she and her mother needed help from Watts, who had been drinking alcohol. Case talked to Watts' wite and daughters in the kitchen while Orban tried to coax Watts out of his bedroom. As Watts' wife and daughters left out the back door, Watts allegedly shot Orban Hollifield Wednesday questioned Watts' ability to identify Orban as a police officer. He said poor lighting and the officer's dark uniform could have made him hard to recognize, and barking dogs and a loud heater could have prevented him from hearing what Orban was saying.

After the initial shooting, Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies and Filer police officers surrounded the house and the word of the county sheriff's adeputies and Filer police officers surrounded the house and the county sheriff's all special be wasn't coming out. The subdivision issue is still touchy frupilic nearing on the ordifer county officials, even as they get closer to approving the idea.

"I support cluster developments with great reluctance," said commission chairman Leonard Harlig. "It's an alternative which may lead us to confine impacts from a larger to a smaller area, but my heart's not in it."

Once residential zoning is introduced into agricultural areas, farming is "doomed" and south-county subdivisions will only accelerate the industry's demise, Harlig said.

While the majority of the south-county ranchers support the cluster development ordinance, the Rogers family does not.

not.

Darrell Rogers said his family has filed suit against the county because they believe the ordinance is flawed on three counts.

The ordinance is purely mandatory, is unnecessary, and violates state law by depriving a land owner full and complete use of his ag land, Rogers said.

For example, Rogers said, if a subdivision is built adjacent to his farm, he will not be allowed to spray herbicides with an half-mile of the homes. That would cost his family $58,000 per year in lost revenues, and said he would support the ordinance if the county would reimburse his lost income.

Harlig said he agrees with the family's position, but cluster development offers an alternative to the current subdivision code.

This new chapter of county code was developed to address the increasing number of requests to subdivide productive ag land in the southern part of the county.

Under the plan, not more than 10 percent of a land tract will be subdivided, leaving the remaining 90 percent available as open space for farming.

AG, prosecutors to develop policy

Attorney General meets with attorney's association board

McCALL-Fresh off a Supreme Court defeat, Attorney General Alan Lance told Idaho prosecutors he will work with them to develop a policy covering the prosecution of cases involving violent crimes.

prosecution of cases involving violent crimes.

Lance met with the Board of Directors of the Idaho Prosecuting Attorneys' Association Tuesday, just four days after the Supreme Court ruled he could not take over prosecution of three Minidoka County capital cases.

Many of the state's prosecutors became concerned when Lance announced last month he was taking over prosecution of the three cases.

The Idaho Prosecuting Attorneys' Association issued a policy statement condemning Lance's move, saying it "sets an unworkable precedent for future working relationships with the attorney general."

Tuesday's meeting with Lance was arranged after that statement was issued, to discuss the relationship between the automete general and procuring attorneys.

"It was a very positive, productive meeting," Idaho Prosecuting Attorneys Association President John Swayne said. "The focus of the meeting was how we can work together. We're going to work on our communication."

Lance said in a statement Wednesday that the discussions were harmonious and productive in the said of the gutarney general's office and of Idaho's prosecuting attorneys," he said. "We will cooperate in processing cases in an effective and cost-efficient manner."

Minidoka reserve fund Bly Kevin Miller Times-News writer

RUPÉRT - Defense attorney fees in three Minidoka County capital cases have surpassed $80,000, depleting the reserve fund that was covering the county's public defense expensés. With the justice fund general reserve overdrawn, county commissioners will likely petition the 5th District Court to reopen the budget, and use money earnarked to get the county through the start of the upcoming budget year, which opens Oct. 1.

"If will cause in little bit of a crunch-for next year," said County Clerk Duane Smith, predicting a crunch that probably will continue for several ensuing years.

years. Minidoka County has never had to reopen its budget before, he added.

County commissioners haven't revently submitted bills from defense attorneys. When the bills are approved - probably on Monday - the defense costs in the cases of Corey Hood, Jesus Diaz, Kody Butcher, Brian Mack, Matthew Mines and Shannah Reeves will total $94,384.33. And no one has yet been tried on any crime. "We know it's going to get togger. I don't know how we're going to get control of it, or if we can," Commission. Chairman John Remsberg said.

Officials say no to taxcap

RUPERT - The City Council voted unanimously Tuesday to oppose the controversial One Percent Initiative after the Association of Idaho Cities asked the city to take a public stand on the issue.

Association of Idaho Cities rasked the city to take a public stand only the issue. "We aren't necessarily opposed to limiting real estate taxes, but there needs to be some reality here in how we approach funding for cities and counties," said Mayor Dwinelle Allred said. "The way the Legislature has this set up now, it limits everything we want to do." The cities' association last June asked officials from each city to declare their position on the initiative last June. Since then, only 20 cities have responded, and all of them have rejected the initiative. "These numbers are a good indication that the association has used up most of their ammunition and is trying death by a thousand sticks now." said Rom Rankin of Coeur, d'Alene, president of Idaho Property Owners' Association and author of the initiative. "By trying to get city officials to oppose it, they figure others will follow suit and vote against it, but it doesn't appear to be working." Tri-state panel disagrees over water use MONTPELIER (AP) — Its a ritual that occurs every 20 years — representatives from Idaho, Utah and Wyoming meet to contemplate changing the agreement between Utah, Idaho and Wyoming about how water in the Bear River Watershed is used.

Prayers of farmers reveal tough row they hoe

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in behalf of all farmers and our embattled farming industry. Farming is one of the hardest, most labor-intensive occupations in this country. This year has been particularly difficult because a very wet spring and summer have prevented many of us from planting all of our crops. Consequently, many individuals are uncertain about the future of dairy farming in our state. In addition, the Southern states have suffered severe drought. This has also affected crop production, so you can bet that soon customers will be complaining about the price of food. Fortunately, in our great country we are blessed with the quantity and quality of our food products. My grandmother sent me this prayer, which she clipped from a newspaper many years ago. Its author is unknown. Perhaps it stand why a pound of T-bone steak is considered too high at $3.50 while a 3-ounce cocktail at $2.25 is not, and people pay $1 for a soft drink at the convenience store without blinking, but insist that a 15-cent glass of milk is inflationary.

"Help me, too, my Lord, to comprehend why $5 movie tickets are a normal expense, but $3.50 for a 60-pound busthel of wheat is unimaginable, why cotton is overpriced at 60 cents a pound but a $250 cont shirt is a bargain; and why corn is too steep when 3 cents fills a bowl, but no one buts an eye paying $1 for a serving of flakes in a restandant and a sorver divine insight.

Weber coach gets probation, pay cut

OGDEN. Utah - Two years' probation OGDEN, Unh – Two years' probation and a 25-percent pay cut have been ordered for Weber State basketball coach Ron Abegglen under self-imposed sanctions proposed by the school for NCAA rules violations.

Weber president Paul H. Thompson, who flanked Abegglen at a news conference Wednesday, said the coach's penal-ty – yet to be approved by the NCAA – would amount to $22,000 ayear.

Cigar has just begun to smoke

By Andrew Beyer The Washington Post

When Cigar scored his 16th consecutive victory in a special race at Arlington Park last month, headlines across the country declared that he had equaled Citation's record winning streak. If he captures the Pacific Classic at De Has Samrday, he will be hailed for surpassing that 46-year-old standard. Sports fans revere records and milestones, and

The Daily Racing Form struggled with this issue, and amounced on its front page that "out of respect to the many winning streaks over the many winning streaks over the page of t

All of these gyrations to define Cigar's streak as a record are unnecessary, because his achievement is amazing whether other horses have won 17 or 53 or 55 races in a row. Consider how rare it is for a baseball, basketball or forball team to win 16 straight games without suffering a poor performance, being victimized by bad luck or losting because a rival performed exceptionally well.

The Raiders, playing in newly renovated Oakland Coliseum, return to their home field as true members of the community when they face the Seattle Seahawks on Thursday.

Last year, they commuted to games from Southern California while their move to Oakland was completed.

"We were the traveling circus," White said. "Ifeel that this time it's permanent. This time it's your home."

Quarterback Jeff Hostetler said the Raiders now have a real home-field advantage.

"We came out there (last season) for the Dallas game and we hadn't been there for three or four the day before and had a week. Heck, we were sliding all over the field and Dallas had practiced there the day before and had a better feel for what it was like," he said.

The Raiders also will get a first look at the $100 million in improvements made to the Colisoum for the team. Captain Hook and a tale of the high seas

A few years ago in Sabang, a tropical par-lise in the East Indian Ocean, a chap uned Steve told the following tale:

"It had been raining for days.

'It had been raining for days.

I was riding a bus along the northwest coast of Borneo, but the road ended at a washed-out bridge across an estuary. The headlights shone onto a savagely fast brown torrent, laden with logs and dead water buffalo.

Further progress was unthinkable. The bus driver curned back, dropping us at the last major town. My fellow passengers, adaptable soults, took rooms and settled down to an evening of reveity.

FORCE OF NATURE William Brock

Determined to keep moving, I stole away to a shipping office and chatted up a pair of Chinese secretaries. With few words and many delightful gestures, smiles and blushes, they directed me to a worns and many delightful gestures, smiles and blushes, they directed me to a waterfront tuvern. There, they promised, I would meet a sea captain due to sail that night. I bent my steps to the saloon, which met all expectations for a waterfront bar in Borneo. Knives, machetes and blowguns were thecked at the door. Dysk tribecoman, their lips permanently sneared from a lifetime of chewing betel nuts, laughed in one comer. Most had pierced earlobes stretched it they drooped to their shoulders; the holes in some were large enough to encircle a cantaloupe, and one resourceful fellow hung his pipe from one ear and his moking mixture from the other. Elsewhere, a collection of hard-looking Chinese and Malays smoked and drank and eyed one another warfly. The air was thick with foreign intrigue and I stood out like Ronald McDonald in a police lineup. The captain was hugely in evidence.

of the contact was hugely nevidence.

The caprain was hugely nevidence.
Short, stout and recking of bad habits, he looked like he d'juist gene six rounds with a rhino. I broached the idea of passage on his ship and be agreed with a boozy sweep of his arm.

The ensuing few hours were a blur as salvo after salvo of trues found the mark. There was considerable wild dancing number of the prinning a man's hat to the wall. Armed soldiers arrived shortly afterward and one of them busied himself with flash-bulbs and a camera.

and one of them busied himself with flash bulbs and a camera. The moon was high and full when the captain and I finally stumbled onto the street. We hailed rickshaw. The ship loomed into the mondlight a few moments later — a big cargo vessel that looked enormous atop a swollen, high tide. There was no gangway, ladder, or even a rope leading to the deck - which looked like Camp 5, high above us. The captain fumbled for something in his pocket, then came up with an old-time, curved bosun's whistle.

He gave a long, unsteady blast.

A light came on in the wheelhouse.

Voices sang out and a door alammed: Then a winch began a low, grinding rumble and the cargo boom slowly swung out over the dock.

The hook, inexorably, began dropping and I sensed the captain was about to make a dramatic entrance aboard ship.

I was expecting to stand on the hook, or at least throw a sling around it and stand in that – but the captain was a man of simple habits.

With a sharp bark, he halted the hook just overhead, then reached up and embraced it with a pair of thickly tattooed embraced it with a pair of thickly rattooed arms.

I was deeply skeptical of the idea, burdened as I was with a round the world rucksack.

The captain was impatient and, none too subtly, urged me to get with the hug-the-hook program, I too, wrapped my arms around the hook.

It was a ludicrous scene and we guffawed like lost souls as we rose - belly to belly - each man locked in a drunken struggle between gravity and his own strength. The captain, unshaven and unwashed, was not my top choice for a hook companion.

Once aboard, the captain retired to his cabia and I collapsed on a burlap bale of cardamom. The ship docked shortly after dawn and I hopped ashore, melting away in the crowd of fish mongers, freight haulers, vendors and thieves.

Outdoors Editor William Brock swears he heard this story in Sabang.

The Beckey Direct to The Elephant's Perch could be Idaho's most challenging rock climb

STANLEY - Whenever Idaho climbers get to talking, the conversation always gets around to "The Elephant's Perch" – and then everyone falls silent, remembering the long, scary sweep of graite that intimidates most contenders.

- A-1,200-foot wall of golden stone, the Perch towershove the Saddleback Lakes, a couple of miles from the southern end of Redish Lake. With 25 separate climbing routes inside the Sawtooth Wilderness Area, it has something for everybody.

The lines range from easy classics to long, desperate routes where some appring "hardmen" come of age – and others lose their nerve.

All of the routes are worthwhile, but one is legendary. The Beckey Direct.

First climbed in 1963 by Fred Beckey, Herb Swedland and Steve Marts, the route has become a mandatory test op and a congratulated him on his bold lead.

Then I steeled myself to take over the sharp end of the rope. We've been swinging leads for years and, over the ensuing eight hours, we swapped back and forth like Slamese twins.

My pitch led 90 feet up a crack system, committing me to little holds over a big void. At the top of the pitch, I pulled onto a comfortable ledge and brought Dave up.

Once again, Dave forged ahead and surmounted several strenuous corners. Strong, coordinated and one notch shy of fearless, he made the vertical dance look easy.

I followed in my own, somewhat more angular style and collected the rack of hardware when I reached his belay stance.

Above me was a chimney system, brimming with frightening and precariously wedged blocks; some were as big as automatic dishwashers. Like a centipede in a minefield, I worked my way up the slot – gingerly pushing and pulling on the debras, secretly praying everything was fixed in place.

The next 500 feet was a non-stop succession of flaring cracks that threatened to spit us out, teetering boulders and strenuous corner systems. Slowly but surely, the Beckey Direct was wearing us down.

The tension didn't relent and, more 900 feet up the wall, Dave found himself halfway up a pitch, scrabbling around for a pair of bolts drilled into the rock years before. He was 18 feet above his last piece of protection, so he was facing a 36-foot fall before the rope would even come under testion.

Dave was mighty eager to find to find those bolts. He finally did, and wasted no time clipping carabiners through their eyes, then connecting them to the Please see DIRECT, Page D2

Wildlife agency seeks to reduce licenses to protect mule deer

HELENA, Mont. (AP)—
Montanal's wildlife agency seeks to reduce by two-thirds the number of hunting licenses for mulder this year, in a move to ensure survival of a species whose populations are declining in some parts of Montana.

The state Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks will recommend reducing the number of licenses to hunt anulerless muldeder this fall in northeastern, southwestern and central Montana. The general hunting season for mule deer will span from Oct. 27 knowledge. 1.

The public will have the opportunity to comment on the proposals at hearings in late August or early September. The Fish, Wildlife and Parks Commission will decide in October whether to approve the department's recommendations.

Montana's mule deer populations-have declined-over the past two years, with fawn crops smaller than normal entering the 1995 winter season. Tough winters and long periods of drought are prompting the department to issue about 13,000 licenses in 1995, two-thirds less than in 1995 when 43,000 were sold.

This and much more is why Janson moved the lifesiae red horse and bull elk that stood in front of his Fishin' Hole Sporting Goods store across the street to the roof of new digs that double his floor space.

The new, 1,480-acre reservoir north of Kremmling and other fishing hot spots on the west space.

After years of economic struggle and a near-death blow from the shutdown of the Louisiana Pacific waferboard plant five years ago, Kremmling is reshaping itself. It is becoming Colorado's newest fishing town. "I'm still cautiously optimistic," Janson said, "But (hope of a fishing boom) was part of the equation when I bought the new building last year."

The biggest single event cementing the boom happened on Memorial Day, when Wolford of fishing and other waters of public fishing access opened upstream on the Colorado River and Williams I'm when the proposed of the colorado River and Williams of the River and Williams on the Blue River, about 2 miles on the Blue River, about 2 miles on the Pig frogs, which can grow up to 1 1/2 feet long, are the prizes of the swamp. Although the frogs aren't endangered, environmentalists say the air boats of late bottomed vessels that glide through the swamp, propelled by giant fans—are damaging the marsh grass needed by other species.

Environmentalists have peritioned the National Park-Service for a 50-frog per-day limit and a ban on the boats from 11 p.m. to 5 a.m.

"These requests are not punitive in any way," said Don Barger, spokesman for the National Parks and Conservation Association, which filled the petition along with the Biodiversity Project.

Program is last chance for prairie chicken

EAGLE LAKE, Texas — The

EAGLE LARK; acras — and threater prairie chicken is on its last leg.
All that is standing between it and extinction, scientists say, is a helping hand from man.
Once vastly abundant along the Texas and Louisiana Gulf Coast, the endangered bird's population has plummeted in the last few years as its native grassland prairie habitant has disappeared.
The current, grim estimates only 42 of the birds remain in the wild, scattered in three South Texas counties.
That is less than 10 percent of the population just 3 years ago.

Texas counties.
That is less than 10 percent of the population just 3 years ago.
"This is the most endangered species in Texas, if not in the nation," said Terry Rossignol, manager of the Attwater Prairie Chicken National Wildlife Refuge in Colorado County, about 50 miles west of Houston. The 8,000-acre lederal refuge was created in 1972, five years after the prairie chicken was listed as endangered.
"It's down to a critical situation now," said Rossignol. "The prairie chicken is in what's called an 'extinction vortex." As the numbers get smaller and smaller, the rate of mortality accelerates. It gets harder for the males to find mates to breed with, and the birds just start racing toward a complete disappearance."

To halt that vortex, state, fed-ance."

To halt that vortex, state, federal and private wildlife officials have launched an ambitious program to breed the prairie chicken (which is actually a grouse) in gram to breed the prante cancace, which is actually a grouse) in captivity.

Starting with eggs taken from the wild, biologists have raised about 100 of the birds at four locales: the Houston and San Antonio 2005, Texas. A&M University and Fossil Rim Wildlife Center in Glen Rose, Texas.

Beginning this month, 78 captive-breed birds are being released into the wild—where, it is hoped, they will mate with their hoped their continuity of the will be the will be will be the will be decided by the continuity of the will be decided and the will be sufficient "breeding scotle" to ensure a continuing steady supply of new chicks.

"It's their last chance," donations, will hold back sufficient "breeding stock" to ensure a continuing steady supply of new chicks.

"It's their last chance," Andrew Sansom, executive director of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, said of the captive-breeding program.
"It this doesn't succeed, we're going to lose them."
Rossignol said the goal of the breeding program is to swell the native population to about 5,000 in the next four years.

That is not as daunting a target as it may seem, he said. Each nesting female lays a dozen or more eggs a year, and those chicks, in, turn, are mature enough to breed by the following year. The introduction of just five breeding females a year into each of the three Texas counties where the birds survive could reverse the population decline.
"If we can achieve our goal of decline.

"If we can achieve our goal of 5,000 birds, and I think we can, then we can look toward delisting them," he said, meaning that the Attwater's prairie chicken could be removed from the endangered-species list.

Without the captive-breeding program, he said, the prairie chicken's goose is cooked.
"If we just sit back and do nothing, it will be extinct by the year 2000."
This year's first release took place July 19, when 16 birds raised at the Houston Zoo were set free on the wildlife refuge. Five days later, five more birds were turned loose on the refuge. Additional releases are planned through August, at the federal refuge and at a 2,200-acre preserve in Galveston County that was donated last year to the Texas Nature Cohservancy by Mobil Corp. (The third and last spot where the prairie chicken is known to exist is on private ranchiand in Refugio County.)
Before their release, the birds are fitted with radio collars so scientists can track their movements and determine how many survive.

In a test program last summer. If male prairie chickens were really the name of the released birds with that rate of survival. Even in nature, ewere quite pleased with that rate of survival. Even in nature, ewe are quite pleased with that rate of survival. Even in nature, ewe hat the chicken is the discussion of the released birds could live. That to the survival could live and the survival county of the released birds could live. That to the the captive-breeding program could work."

Sanson, the state parks director, estimated the cost of the prairie-chicken rescue effort at more than $500,000, including state and federal funds as well as private donations of money, volunteers' time and land.

"You can say, why spend all tions of landy, why spend all thou can say, why spend all thou can say, why spend all this money on 42 birds? One reason is it helps us convey an important message about-our-intent to protect our environment, he said.

"We do this because it's one of the things that distinguishes us from the other animals."

The Attwater's prairic chicken, named for the Scottish naturalist H.P. Attwater, was once so bountful that its distinctive maring cry echoed across the coastal shows economy losing steam on its own

MASHINGTON — Fresh evidence the nation's economy may be slowing on its own — without an interest-rate hike — was revealed Wednesday in a new survey of regional business conditions. "The economy continued to expand in June and July, though in some areas the pace of growth has moderated since the last report." the survey by the Federal Reserve's 12 regional distincts showed. The findings were consistent with other recent data that the economy continues to grow, although easing from the stizling pace of last spring. The Fed survey, conducted before July 30, also found few signs of price pressures, saying the cost of raw materials and finished goods was "essentially flat."

Durables, raw materials prices essentially flattened out

Until recently, many analysts and investors expressed concern that Fed policy makers would boost short-term interest rates soon, possibly at their Aug. 20 meeting, to keep the economy from overheating and inflation from boiling over.

But the latest data conforms with aneconomy cooling itself without the help of higher interest rates.

And while some fear a tight job market could boost the cost of goods and services, the Fed survey found that so far "wage pressures remained subdued."

VACUUM SALES & SERVICE

For those who have a quick trigger, today's hand will provide a good lesson. When the opponents have the majority of cards and reach a coutract you can beat, don't double. The double might push them to a contract they will make. Worse yet, the double might result in telling declarer how to play the hand. (A careful declarer may make four spades if he never leads trumps.)

East's pre-empt to three hearts; jammed the bidding, and South could do little etse but pass. North had the values to continue and raised to four diamonds. South-showed his reasonable spade support and was greeted by a hungry showed his reasonable spade sup-port and was greeted by a hungry double by West. A double of this sart is Ill-advised, especially when partner's pre-empt has promised to defensive values.

Warned of the disastrous spade heak and fearing a seven-eard fit, South tried five clubs. This was duly doubled, and when North went back to diamouts, another dictable.

The play was swift. South won his heart ace, led to dummy's chib ace and played another club. West won and shilled to spaces to give East a ruff, but that was all. When clubs and diamonds split nicely, South had no trouble winning 11.

tricks.

The lesson? Without warning, declarer will surely fail at four spades. Better to settle for a small plus score than risk paying off to a huge minus caused by an impulsive double.
