The official in Washington, who spoke on condition of anonymity, did not provide a timetable for when — or whether — the presidential directive would be carried out. With speculation growing in Washington about U.S. military movement against Iraq, the official said the action" is very likely."

The developments came as the White House accused Saddam of 'unjustified behavior' in attacking the Kurdish safe haven in northern Iraq and warned ominously that such action will have consequences. The State Department advised Americans to leave Iraq immediately.

Trimner, 40, of Gooding, leader of "Idaho Fathers for Equal Rights," said divorced fathers have become strangers to their children because of a legal system that favors maternal ties.
"You're told you're a visitor to your children," Trimner said. "You're no

When fathers can't be a part of their children's growth, it sends the children on a downward slide.

Skin cancer may have genetic link

The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Scientists have more NEW YORK — Scientists have more evidence that a particular gene stands guard against the most common cancer in people, and that damage in the gene leads to skin cancer.

At least 750,000 Americans a year get the skin cancer, called basal cell carci-

It is highly curable if treated early,

It is nightly currate it treated early, and deaths are rare.

The new work might lead to a substance that could be smeared on the skin cancers to stand in for the damaged gene, and so provide a treatment, said Dr. Mae Gailani of the Yale University School of Medicine.

Genes and diabetes - A4

uenes and diagotes - A4

In June, scientists reported that a gene called "patched" was damaged in some cases of the basal cell cancer.
That suggested that the gene normally suppresses such tumors, and that the cancers proceed only after that suppression is lost.
The gene also was shown to be mutated in an inherited disease that includes lots of basal cell cancers.
In the September issue of the journal Nature Genetics, Gailani and colleagues report a larger test of the idea thar mutatinas in the gene lead to noninherited basal cell cancers.
"Using a screening test, they found that the gene was damaged in 12 of 37 non-inherited basal cell tumors, and that these mutations had occurred withint the patjents rather than being inherited.

ea. Then researchers looked more closely at the gene in two tumors where no genetic damage had been found. In both cases, the gene turned out to-be mutated.

So the screening test probably over-looked most mutations in the gene, said Yale's Dr. Allen Bale, another study author.

In truth, the gene is probably damaged in most if not all non-inherited basal cell cancers, he said.

Some of the mutations identified were clearly caused by sunlight exposure, which is known to promote basal cell-cancer; but the cause of other nutations was not clear. So other unknown factors may damage the gene too, researchers said.

McDaniel said Lockwood singled out Nadine for neglect, feeding the others in her custody "while that baby was in the curib with a chicken-bone. The little girl-was in there chewing on a bone."
—Police were called Saturday by Nadine's father, Leroy Dickerson, who reportedly did not live with the family and had not seen the girl for several months, Scoppetta said.

Dickerson said Lockwood took out her frustrations over their splintered marriage and the demands of raising seven children on Nadine.

"Detectives told me that Carla picked on Nadine because she looked the most like me," he told the Daily News. "She was the throwaway baby."

Autopys results were not yet available, said Chief Medical Examiner Charles. Hirsch.

Most neighbors were not aware that Lockwood had more than six children. "Nobody knew that baby," said Ester

Those early findings tend to strengthen the theory that a bomb or missile brought down the jumbo jet, and to weaken the likelihood that the plane exploded because of a mechanical malfunction. While investigators say they do not know enough to declare the explosion a criminal act, the possibility of an accident appears more remote as the evidence mounts.

"National Transportation Safety Board investigators - previously have determined that the center fuel trank explosion was the cause of the crash — or was a secondary blast, including the same of the crash — or was a secondary blast, gindled by another force.

During his annual telethon benefiting the Muscular Dystrophy Association, Jerry Lewis accepts a $249 dopation for Jerry's Mid – his 4-year-old daughter, Danielle, who raised the money selling cookies to the television studio crew.

Jerry Lewis telethon raises record sum

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jerry Lewis' annual Labor. Day telethon raised a record $49.1 million in pledges and contributions for the Muscular Dystrophy Association's battle against neuromuscular diseases. "It's the greatest feeling in the world to see this magnificent outpuring of love from the American public," Lewis said after the 21-hour broadcast from CBS studios. This year's telethon, Lewis' 31st, surpassed last year's record of $47.8 million.

31st, surpassed last your of $47.8 million. Included in the live broadcast was a tribute to Lewis former comedy partner, Dean Martin, who died last Christmas Day.

After a montage of film clips from Martin and Lewis movies and television appearances, Lewis wiped a tear from his eye and said: "He hears it and he knows what we're doing! I celebrate his life."

Lewis said Martin was supportive when he approached him about hosting the first telethon.

"He said 'Let's get it on, pal, and he helped me build this organization," Lewis said. "So we commemorate my partner's contribution to this fight against muscular dystrophy. Lewis also announced that a muscular dystrophy clinic would be named for Martin at the St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Youngstown, Ohio, near Martin's boyhood home of Steubenville. In years past, protesters have objected to the telethon, arguing that the donations don't got where the money is needed. MDA spokesman Jim Brown said more than 80 percent of the proceeds go directly into research or patient care.

Scientists locate possible gene for common form of diabetes

NEW YORK (AP)

Researchers have found the apparent hiding place of a gene that promotes the most common form of diabetes, one that affects 15 million Americans.

Scientists think several genes play a role in susceptibility to type 2 diabetes, but they haven't identified any gene yet. The location suggested by the new study is the second to be implicated. Scientists hope the genes will reveal the biology of diabetes and lead to drugs for treatment and prevention.

The region may contain 100 genes or so, which is around a thousandth of the whole human collection, researcher Effe Lander said. Nobody knows what fraction of type 2 diabetes might be related to the gene, he said in a telephone interview from Finland. Lander, of the Whiteheal Institute for Biomedical Research in Cambridge, Mass, reports the work with colleagues there and elsewhere in the September issue of the journal Nature Genetics.

Range fire contained near INEL

The Associated Press

A range fire that blackened 219,000 acres of land in eastern Idaho came to end Monday, thanks to the efforts of a firefighting crew that reach 180 people during the weekend.

Forest Service information officer Lynn Ballard said the fire was contained Sunday night, and was expected to be fully controlled 24 hours later.

"It looks pretty good out there," he said Monday. "It's pretty black."

Ballard meant there were few unburned areas within the fire, which could cause the fire to flare up again. "There's not much left out there," he said.

Some farm equipment and a haystack were burned, but the fire's threat was more potential than real. It came within a couple of miles of the boundary of miles of the boundary of the fire's hard was more potential. The said of the fire team was pared to about 100 people on Monday.

Bonargo has competed on the Tommy Armout tour in Florida and various other small tours for which pros put up an entry fee, then try to win it back and then some.

He has cashed checks, mostly for a few hundred bucks, in five of his, nine events, a respectable showing for a rookiet.

"If you play bad, you don't feel like practicing," he said. "But I've noticed that on the Armour tour there must be The pury used, you don't feet like practicing. The said. "But I've noticed that on the Armour tour there must be 20 guys with recent PGA tour experience who go to the range and work on something, whether they shot 67 or 77."

Bears maul Cowboys; Smith injured

CHICAGO - The Dallas Cowboys' season-opener was already lost. Then the defending Super Bowl champions really lost Monday night, as four-time NFL rushing champion Emmitt Smith was carted off the field with an injury.

By the time Smith got hur while dving over the top of defenders after a fake handoff with 3:41:10 go, the Cowboys already were beaten by the Bears. Chicago used two trick plays and an intense defensive effort to win 22-6. The initial announcement was that Smith had pain up and down his back but had movement of all his extra-critica she went for precautionary X-rays.

Deion Sanders lived up to his retailed as a prime-time player in becoming the NFL's first tow-only state of the cowboys from losing their opener for only the second the property of the plays wasn't enough, however, to keep the Cowboys from losing their opener for only the second through the record the player of the plays and was on the receiving the player of the play and was on the receiving the player of the player of

Drivers capture 1st Speedway victories

TWIN FALLS - Dick Capps and Sort I Japah broke through for their first big wins in the NASCAR Grand American Modfred division Samuday night. Stere Jones started the evening with the quickest time-trial lap, at 15517 seconds. He used his 12th place starting spot in the main event to move up 10 positions - the most of any driver - and claim the 5200 bonus from division sponsor Mountain Dew. Capps won the Beat, followed by Bruce Quale and Tim Broompson, Points leader Eddy McKezan took the A heat, with Travis Metz and Jerry McKean in second and third.

The 40-lap main event was slowed early by some first-lap tangles, but ran cleam after that with track record-holder Capps taking the checkered flag ahead of Jones. Eddy McKean, Mets and Quale.

McKean's third-place finish-should keep him in the lead for the Great West Division of the Winston Racing Series. Lynch took-the dash for eash for his first win.

It was championship night for the Fox Stocks, and Dorothy Money led all the way in the main event. Her victory, although impressive, did not-give hermough points to pass champion. Edde Bales. Sheri Coats was sond in the season standings, followed by Money, Kimberly Miles and Allison Hammerbeck.

The Street Stock main event was close all the way, but when it was over, points leader Doug Dugger was in the lead. James Chappell and Randy Price completed the top three. Dale Miles took the A heat ahead of Dugger and Ken Menck. The B heat went to Coats, Chappell and Price. Rookie driver Rick Adkins tookhe dans for cash.

As usual, the Fony Stocks provided several yellow flags but some close racing. When the 25-lap main event was over, it was points leader Kurt Campboll leading the pack, followed by Jeff Coats and Larry Morris. Campbell also took the A heat, ahead of Coats and Edward Keyes. Daren Amundson won the B heat; Stephen Ellifrita and Larry Morris finished 23.

"The Thunder Stock main event saw Sheri Coats win the heat race, followed by Toby Stapleman and J. Dee Vaneps. The main event ended in similar-fashion, with Coats leading fromstart to finish. Doug Albright and Clay Pond were second and third-After the race, however, Coats was disqualified for not going to the tech inspection area, giving Albright the win and dropping Coast to 10th. Coats did win the dash for each.

Saturday night will be championship night for the Grand American Modifieds and the Thunder Stocks.

| Vanderbilt more low key as big game nears

NASHVILLE, Tenn. – Talk of upsetting Notre Dame and becoming the Northwestern of 1996 is dying down the closer Vanderbilt gets to its season opener against the sixth-yanked Fighting Irish.
Players' boasts reached Notre Dame coach Lou Boltr last week, and he cautioned that anything was possible. But on Monday, Vandy coach Not Downwer and his players were more respectful.
We all know who we are playing. Downhower said.

Russia's leadership meets to discuss Chechen accord, reveals confusion

MOSCOW — Russia's leadership displayed fresh doubts and confusion Monday about the Chechen peace plan worked out by national security Chief Alexander Lebed, and President
Boris Yeltsin kept his distancefrom the accord.

-Alexander-Lebed, and President-Boris Veltsin kept his distance-from the accord.
Following a meeting between Lebed and Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin, the two men issued sharply-contrasting state-ments to journalists. Lebed claimed Chernomyrdin supports the agreement with the Chechen separatists. Chernomyrdin, who only a day before said the deal was on the "right path," raised new questions, and explicitly avoided giving his approval. The differences underscored Moscow's cautious and worried dattitude toward Lebed's handi-work — a deal that would seem to end the war but that postpones resolution of its basic conflict: Chechnya's bid to secede from Russia. Russian politicians are easer to Chechnya's bit to Sected the Nessia.

Russian politicians are eager to end the fighting, but few are eager to be associated with humiliating defeat that has claimed more than 30,000 lives. The "question," "Who—lost-Chechnya?" is already beginning to echo in the cautious statements of leading politicians.

Doubts about the agreement were voiced publicly by Yeltsin's chief of staff, Anatoly Chubais, at a news conference. "There is certainly a question," said Chubais. "What is the price we paid for the agreements that were signed?" Chubais, retierating Yeltsin's reason for launching the war against Chechen separatists, declared that "one absolute priority." Must be pressyring "Russia's territorial integrity," which would mean rejecting Chechen independence. "It am far from being cuphoric that all the problems have been solved," Chubais said.

lems have been solved," Chubais said.

Lebed worked out a framework agreement over the weekend with Chechen military commander Aslan Maskhadov that postponed a decision on Chechnya's status until on or before Dec. 31, 2001, and established a joint commission to oversee demilitarization and rebuilding of the warravaged region.

Lebed negotiated the deal in ine hours of talks with Maskhadov, and it was endorsed by the Chechen leadership. But in Moscow, which has seen night by-telovision, reports of Russtain soldlers in retreat, the Lebed plan has been a bitter pill to swal-low.

Lebed, who has been trying to get a meeting with Yeltsin, insist-ed Monday that the agreement reserved the "letter and spirit" of a draft that had been reviewed in Moscow before he went to Chechnya. But, speaking to strac-trun - telovisition, Lebed. also acknowledged differences between what was proposed and the treaty that emerged.

HAILEY - Blaine County's going to try a new approach to cope with a huge increase in court flings.

Deputy Prosecutor Rick Allington will leave the prosecutor's office and set up his own office in Hailey to handle the county's misdemeanors. That will allow Prosecutor Doug-Werth to handle felonies and civil cases.

Sun Valley Mayor Tom Praggastis said the insidemeanor position is a new approach. Western 'shoot out' in Bellevue Labor Day parade

Inter-News correspondent

BEILEVUE — There was a whole for of fussin' and fighting soin on the streets of Bellevue Monday at the annual fown Labor Day parade.

With about 900 people looking oc, the "Shoot Out Gang" carried out at age-old tradition by starting the parade with a bang; a Western shootout on Main Street.

Many locals set up camp in front of their houses and storefronts.

Children were ererywhere, swarning parade cars and floats for the candy contestants gare away.

Mardean Weston, who lives on a ranch south of Bellerue, came to the parade with her husband Allen and her two grandchildren from Boise, Chris and Sean.

Rothchild Mining Corporation says no one has even asked what it is doing to address community concerns. Company spokesman Jeff Connelly said highly-publicized fears about the proposed, milling operation in Warra Springs Canyon's Bassert Gudh are not based or facts.

"Give us a chance to show that we're not going to be like the past operator," Connelly said. "It's not going to be like you think it's going to be It's is a small operation in mining terms. It's 50 acres."

The proposal

The proposal Rothchild Mining Corporation earlier this year proposed to resume one militage operations at its Bassett Gulch size, on the back side of Bald Mountain on Forest Service land. The mill date back to the 1950s; Rothchild bought the milling claim on the property in 1957. The site has three "tailing ponds" and buildings housing mill equipment.

Up to 13 truckloads a day would be shipped from Croesus daily, along Bellson Street to Halley, up Highway 75 through Ketchum to Warm Springs Road, past the Warm Springs lifts and Board Ranch area, and over approximately two miles of unpaved road to the mill.

At the mill, ore would be pulverized, carried with water and flooration chemicals, then discharged into milling ponds, where ore and liquid separate. Some water would be recycled, and the gold concentrate would be shipped out of state for further processing.

A test run of two trackloads of sample ore was scheduled for, Friday but was postponed temporarily, according to the Forest Service. The tests will explore one content and the operation's feasibility.

The 1872 mining law gives Rothchild a right to mine, Connelly said. Getting there is another question.

Rodgers and Jones conducted interviews with 19 African-American grandmothers, ranging an age from 47 to 74. Forty-woo percent, they learned in their admittedly limited study, were in their situation because of drug abuse by the child's mother. Death of the parents or immaturity of the father and mother were the second- and third-most common reasons a child was turned over to grandparents.

the trum anyway, out it wan same be a hig mess." People lie all the time, Enrique observes. But nobody likes a liar. The Catholic high school stu-dent has learned the hard les-son that rich and famous jour-nalist Joe Klein is now learning quite publicly.

The Newsweek columnist and CBS commentator blithely admitted this summer that he is Anonymous, author of the popular novel "Primary Colors," an unflattering satire of the 1992 Clinton presidential campaign. Klein confessed after months of emplantically denying to politicians, fellow journalists, and even close friends, that he had anything to do with writing the book. Lying, as any 4-year-old has been told countless times, is bad.

In poll after poll, Americans rank honesty as the No. 1 trait-they value in friends, in children, in presidential candidates.

In a Gallup survey last year, the majority of respondents indicated that they couldn't imagine a situation in which it would be "all right for you to lie" to a friend, stranger or colleague. Philosopher Immanuel Kant made that very argument. So did St. Augustine, who "contended that any lie, and any profuse not kept, was a sin against God's gift of speech," Yale University law professor Stephen L. Carter wrote in his recent book, "Integrity". Telling the truth is part of the American ethos. Our cultural heroes include straight shooters smif, but bestowing a name is really potent.

Prople have all these ideas about how to package things. We learn that red on the cover belgs to self books and blue is not a good choice for a food product, says Leonard Ashley, author of "What's in a Name." "You are packaging a child. Names are very powerful. And you're going to call him Desmond?"

Baby names, say experts who study baby-naming trends, are often chosen based on parents comonic, cultural and geographical ties and the images that the names evoke.

evoke.

And while a lot of the research on such trends is far from spientific, pondering names can tellyou a lot about the people who choose them, they say.

The choices are mind-boggling. There's the ever-changing popular-name lists. This year try Ashley Joshua or Caitlin. Family root Joshua or Caitlin. Family roots may work, especially if you're upper-crust and use a family name as a first or middle name. Hunter Spencer or Ashum. There are cul

Producer makes human rights his forte

NEW YORK — In the era of the incredibly shrinking sound bite, the made-for-TV political convention and the made-for-the-U.S.A. Olympics, Damy Schechter stands apart.

A former cival rights organizer, former radio commentator, former TV reporter and former network producer, Schechter, with his partner and fellow network refugee Rory O'Connor, produces the critically acclaimed series "Rights & Wongs: Human Rights Television." That alone might be enough for most, but Schechter seems unwilling, or unable, to take it unwilling, or unable, to take it easy.

He's putting the final touches on a new book, looking to resurrect his old radio personality, "Danny Schechter, The News Dissector," and recently flew off on two day's notice to film the Dalai Lama in South Africa.

Those who know Schechter are used to his drive. A success in network relevision, he gave up the money and the pressige to try working another way, developing programs with depth, different perspectives and an emphasis on his own particular set of values.

depth, different perspectives and an emphasis on his own particular set of values. "I can't tell you how many friends I have in the networks who feel that they're in golden handculfs," he said. Ask Schechter to discuss his work and his mind is off, quickly jumping from one thought to the next. Getting a word, or a question, in edgewise is a bit of a feat. Fortunately, listening to him can be quite entertaining. On how he became a radio commentar in 1970 at WBCNFM in Boston: The vacancy was created, he recalls, when his predecessor was brought minded and they got and they are they were hister dropped. "So I get my first job thanks to J. Edgar Hower."

On his first big event at Harvard after winning a prestigious Neiman fellowship in 1977. At an off-the-record talk by Henry Kissinger, he asked a question given to him by protesting students. They wanted to know how the former secretary of state could justify himself to his children given all the dead in Indochian. "Half the room erupted in boos and catcalls. I thought I would never work again."

boos and catcalls. I thought I would never work again."

About criticism that "Rights & Wrongs" hasn't been given the wide dis-ribution that Schechter and O'Connor seek because it advocates a position. He wondered aloud how a series focusing.

'Our company's mission is to do well and do good, and we're trying to combine those two things.'

on human rights could be advocacy? Who would comment for the other side: "Hide?"
Such comments absent context might create the impression Schechter is simply a child of the '50s who never grew up. That would be wrong. An Emmy Award-winning producer at ABC's "20/20" and the producer of CNN's first primetime talk show, before "Larry King Live," the 54-year-old journalist and entrepreneur has both talent and sophistication. "He was innovative," says Ed Turner.

"He was innovative," says Ed Turner, executive vice president of CNN and Schechter's boss shortly after the net-work was launched in 1980. "At a time when nobody knew who CNN was, he. could get good guests."

Turner, then CNN's managing editor, admits the newsroom staff sometimes kidded Schechter about his views, like telling him "Karl Marx is on the phone." But it was all good-natured and Turner notes Schechter's politics never seeped into his work at CNN.

Given his formative years, though, it may have been inevitable that Schechter would cast off the shackes of network TV. He was born in the Brown to a garment worker father and a mother who wrote nine books of poetry. In the civil rights movement, he helped organize the march on Washington in which the Rev. Martin Luther King Ji. guve his "Have a Dream" speech.

Welfare 'reform' becomes battle for some

If, by some leap of faith, you believe politicians when they say that women on welfare will somehow be able to find jobs to support their families and that the new law to "reform" welfare is not punitive, then the question becomes, how do low skilled women get jobs?

And, in view of the fact any jobs these women get will be low-paid ones, how do the sead the season of the seaso researched the subject on a grant from the Joyce Foundation.

"Low-skilled works are entry-level job seekers was deadly a school diplot of the seekers was deadly a side Pindus, a CPA and holder of an MRA in health that in the seekers was deadly a side Pindus, a CPA man holder of an MRA in health that in the seekers was deadly a side produced by the seekers was deadly a side produced by the problem of flat or falling wages and the lack of opportunity to advance to high-skilled jobs. So, even with jobs, they are unable to sipport their families.

The follow's, therefore, that low-skilled-workers also are low-wage workers. According to the Families and Work-Institute, a namprofit organization based in New York, these workers earn salaries ranging from minimum wage to S8 an hour. Few receive health or other benefits and, adding to their financial difficulties, work tends to be part time. Training plus more hours of work, according to Pindus, are keys to solving the double whammy of low skills and low wages.
"Entry-level workers need training said. "And there are different ways jobs can be restructured to be full time." Audrey Freedman, a New York econ-mist concerned about the new welfare law, estimates there could be as many as 5 million wannen who would have to find jobs. The assumption is that most of the women are low-killed, with little oppor-tunity to get jobs, training or promo-tions.

runity to get jobs, training in preservious.

To find out if there is hope for the future, the Urban Institute researchers focused on the health-care industry because of "its current restructuring, with a view to finding where the growth in jobs might be."

Pindus says opportunities are in "long-term care, because of the aging of America, and in home health care. And a lot is happening in hospitals and nursing homes, where staff patterns are changing because of cost-containment incentives."

Some of the training for entry-level iobs in health care, Pindus found, is as Loyal customers, both companies are offering givenways like bankers on a toaster binge. We'll get to that, but let's start with a look at the products themselves.

Web browsers are software you use for seeing and interacting with the material that's on the Internet – text, pictures, video, voice, music, graphics, animation and more. The complexity and variety of online offerings are increasing drastically to match these new technologies.

These products do not connect you to the Internet, You need an account through a company like you in the Internet. You need on account through a company like America Online or CompuServe, or through a local Internet Service Provider, to hook up to the worldwide network before these products can do their magic. To get the full benefit of Web suffig, I recommend an ISP account for faster service and better prices.

To get the new Microsoft and Netscape products, all you need to do is download them from the companies' Web pages. (See accompanying box for addresses.) Microsoft's new Internet Explorer 3.0 isn't available for Windows 3.1 users; it's only for Windows 3.2 and the workstation version, of Windows, called NT. Microsoft has an earlier version of the software, with fewer features, available for Mac and Windows 3.1.

windows 3.1.

Netscape released Navigator
3.0 for Windows 95, Windows 3.1 3.0 for Windows 95, Windows 3.1, Macintosh and other workstation systems. Either way, all you have to do is click on the icon for the downloaded program to install it. I found both a breeze to get run-found both a tree-or-ning.

Both companies are pressing a number of technical points to claim they have the superior product. The differences are criti-cal if you're trying to create extremely sophisticated Web sites.

But, guess what? From the user's point, it's almost-irrele-vant.

ant. Both browsers work almost identically for the average user.

It's possible you'll want to visit a Web site that is set up specifically to work with one browser or the other, in which is ase your should grab whichever one your should grab whichever one you should grab whichever one product over the other.

Here are a few issues:

Both browsers now include the ability to read and send e-mail and discussion group messages. (Netscape has had this ability for a while, Microsoft is catching up.) Netscape's in integrated a little more smoothly into the browser. Microsoft's offers some advanced e-mail handling functions — such Microsoft soffers some advanced e-mail handling functions— to handle a large volume of mailor separate personal notes from work traffic.

Microsoft uses a different format-for-discussion-group messages, which some people might find easier. The list of groups is in a separate floating window, instead of sharing screen space

a separate Hoating window, instead of sharing screen space with the message you're trying to read. I have been comfortable with the Navigator model, but-some folks may prefer Internet Explorer's version.

America Online, CompuServe and Prodigy are making it much easier for customers to choose the superior Netscape and Microsoft browsers instead of the inferior browsers that the services have used. Directions for doing so are featured prominently in the Internet sections of those services.

ly in the Internet sections of those services.

To accommodate many of the more sophisticated multimedia features and information-sharing functions, the products have crossed a great threshold in the sesential definition of what the Internet is. While the meta-physics of the matter might not be of interest to users, it carries an enormously important change that you need to be aware off. Your computer its now.mitch.

Terence Reese was widely recognized as Britain's teading player of the last five or six decades. Not only was he a champlon at the table, but he was also a champlon as an author. He wrote more that he was also a champlon as an author. He wrote more that he was also a champlon as an author. He wrote more had being the second of which fall into the category of bridge classics. The play of today's hand is from one of his many excellent works.

At the table, South took dummy's club king, and when East covered, South ruffed. South treid cash his top spades, but East ruffed the second round and returned a trump. It was not enough. South was able to ruff a clow spade with dummy's last-trump, and his last low spade event on dummy's club queen.

In his analysis, Reese points out that East could have defeated the slam had he not been so quick to ruff south's spade king. Had he discarded instead, South would be iff with two spade losers. If South drew trumps, West would get two spades. And If South tried to ruff the spades, East would score two overruffs.

Reese also noted that the bidding might, havo led, South, to the Reese also noted that the bid-Reese also noted that the bid-ding might have led South to the sure way to land the slam. If South ruffs the first heart, draws trumps and cashes the top spades, a club lead to dummy's king will neutralize East. Dumny scores a heart and a club, and South's spade losers go away.
