One Percent: Tax cut or tax shift?

Backers believe it's time; foes cite impact

By Karen Volkman
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — If you vote yourself a property tax break in November, you could end up paying more for that new car.

That's the argument put forward by opponents of Proposition One, the One Percent Initiative designed to limit property taxes. Cutting property taxes and forcing the state to fund public schools will likely result in raising the 5 percent sales tax to 7 percent, state analysts say.

That means a property owner could see property taxes fall by as much as 50 percent, but that a car buyer would end up paying $1,050 in Idaho sales tax for a $15,000 car, instead of $750 in tax for that same car under the current rate. Everything from jelly beans to airline tickets would be more expensive.

But a proponent of the initiative told Ketchum business leaders Friday that the initiative is an idea whose time has come.

"We've seen through history, it's an economic fact that tax cuts help the economy," said Laird Maxwell, spokesman for the group backing the Coalition plans to fight initiative

TWIN FALLS — A coalition to fight a measure that would cut property taxes will kick off its campaign Monday.

"Virtually every credible voice in Idaho, from business to education to health opposes the One Percent Initiative," said Scott Peyton, spokesman for the No on One Percent campaign. "It's a bad idea and we look forward to the Magic Valley hearing that message from some of its leading citizens."

That includes Republican state Sen. Laird Noh of Kimberly, plus leaders from business, education and agriculture, he said.

He declined to name an amount of money to be spent on the campaign, but said, "It's a serious campaign and these days it takes serious money to run one."

"We plan to deliver our message very thoroughly over the next few weeks."

Hardware chain plans to close Twin Falls store

Ernst Home Center restructuring will affect Magic Valley outlet

By N.S. Nokkventer
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It's official. The Ernst Home Center store at Blue Lakes Boulevard North and Pole Line Road is closing within the next three to four months, according to company spokesman Jim Fox.

The regional hardware chain announced in July it was filing bankruptcy and closing 25 of its 83 stores under a restructuring. The chain, which opened its first store in downtown Seattle in 1953, has outlets in nine Western states, including Idaho and Utah.

Company officials said at the time the company had no plans to close the Twin Falls store.

"It's a great market for us — always has been and always will be," Fox said. The Twin Falls store won't close and won't reduce employee numbers, he said at the time.

But now the company has decided to include the Twin Falls store among the stores it plans to shut down to refocus on an "existing group of core stores that historically have been very profitable for us," Fox said Friday from the company's Seattle headquarters.

The company will transfer as many employees as possible, he said.

The Twin Falls store opened in September 1994 and employs about 50 people, some of them part-time. At 67,000 square feet, the Twin Falls store is one of the chain's biggest.

The retailer and its wholly owned subsidiary EDC Inc. each filed voluntary petitions for protection

Monument foes gather forces

Utahns ponder lawsuits, bills

The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — From senators and congressmen to a state attorney general candidate, foes of a 1.7 million-acre southern Utah national monument are gathering their forces.

Meantime, Conoco Inc. issued a statement late Friday calling on the White House to work with the company to "develop a plan where prudent oil and gas development of the area can coexist with — environmental protection and preservation ideals."

In a statement issued from Midland, Texas, by Bob Ireland, regional manager for exploration and development, Conoco estimated up to 5 billion or more barrels of untrapped oil could be in the monument area, already known for its huge coal reserves.

Conoco, in partnership with RangeLand Petroleum, is involved in exploratory leasing and drilling in and near the designated monument site, Ireland said.

At a news conference earlier Friday, Republican Utah Attorney General candidate Scott Burns said if elected, he will go to court to fight creation of the new Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument.

President Clinton evoked his authority under the federal Antiquities Act in making the monument declaration on Wednesday, but Burns believes there's room in the statute to challenge the decision.

"It is my belief that the Antiquities Act can be interpreted to require the smallest amount of land compatible with other interests, and 1.7 million acres is the biggest land grab in the lower 48 states," he said.

Sens. Orrin Hatch and Bob Bennett, R-Utah, supported Burns' call for a lawsuit. The two lawmakers also co-chair Burns' campaign to unseat Democratic Utah Attorney General Jim Graham.

Hatch has said he feels Clinton may have violated environmental laws passed in the 1970s by not obtaining more public comment and studies before acting.

Hatch and Bennett said numerous options for legislation are also under review in the Senate to ensure, as Hatch said, "that the Antiquities Act is not abused again."

On Thursday, Rep. Jim Hansen, R-Utah, introduced a bill seeking to ensure that any future monuments will be no larger than 5,000 acres. Congress is not expected to act on it before adjournment, but Hansen said he will reintroduce it next year, too.

Caffeine becomes new drug of choice

Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — Watch out, Dr. Pepper: A top caffeine researcher thinks you have the potential to be Joe Camel.

With anti-smoking sentiment snowballing behind strict government regulations, caffeine has supplanted nicotine as America's socially accepted drug of choice.

But people are forgetting that, like nicotine, caffeine is a physically addictive drug that could be harmful, says Dr. Roland Griffiths, a Johns Hopkins pharmacologist.

"Thirty years ago, we just socially accepted smoking as a part of our culture," Griffiths says. "Nicotine really wasn't even considered a drug. I think the same is true of caffeine today."

Although current medical evidence shows caffeine's health risks appear trivial when compared with those associated with nicotine, future findings could change perceptions, he says.

"If health risks are well-documented, caffeine could be catapulted in public perception from a pleasant habit to a possibly harmful drug of abuse," much like what happened with nicotine and cigarettes.

But while nicotine has

Perot hunts free air time in strategy shift

Ross Perot believes his Reform Party candidacy may receive a boost from public anger over his exclusion from the presidential debates.

Debate setback boosts anti-system arguments

The Associated Press

DALLAS — Locked out of the debates and denied prime TV time for his infomercials, Ross Perot is tweaking his campaign strategy to take advantage of free air time and reinforce his arguments against the two-party system.

"If I can't get on television, I can't get the message out," the Reform Party nominee said Friday in back-to-back morning TV interviews that signaled the start of his stepped-up free-media push. He also planned to appear on a round of Sunday morning talk shows.

Perot can certainly use the free TV time, given indications of a slow start in his fund-raising from the public. Campaign finance reports filed Friday show Perot raised just $74,000 in contributions in the two weeks after launching his campaign in August, hardly an impressive outpouring of support.

Another element of Perot's strategy is to use the Commission on Presidential Debates' recommendation that he be excluded from the debates to bolster his contention that the two-party system is closed and needs a shakeup.

"We have huge problems we have to deal with, face and solve," Perot said on NBC's "Today" show. "And the two parties can't touch them because they created these problems."

Perot filed a complaint Friday with the Federal Election Commission alleging that the bipartisan debate commission illegally endorses or contributes to political candidates or parties and should not be allowed to be host for the debates.

His campaign also plans to file suit Monday seeking

IDAHO WEATHER SUMMARY

Little in the way of precipitation was reported around Idaho today. Some light rain fell in the Lewiston vicinity and isolated showers were reported in the central mountains. Measurable precipitation reports included Grangeville .06 inch, Mullan .04 and a trace at Rensburg. High temperatures at mid-afternoon were in the 50 and 60s. Boise, Twin Falls and Mountain Home were the warmest with 69 degrees. Mullan Pass was the coldest spot at 37.

These readings followed early morning lows which dipped into the 20s at many places in the higher elevations and were only in the 30s at some valley locations. Skies over the Magic Valley were overcast early in the day but cleared in late morning before another band of high clouds moved in during the afternoon. Winds were generally light and from the west on the next to last day of summer. Autumn arrives on Sunday.

ACROSS THE NATION

Storms creep across northern Plains into Midwest

The Associated Press

A system that brought severe storms to the northern Plains continued its northeastward trek Friday, bringing more rain and thunder into the Midwest. Meanwhile, the East enjoyed another day of sunshine and balmy temperatures. Showers and thunderstorms soaked the upper Midwest as the low pressure system moved slowly northeast. The southern end of the system was expected to bring hail, fierce winds and hard rain to parts of Texas, Arkansas, Tennessee, Mississippi and Louisiana.

Light showers fell in the Northwest and northern Rockies, and light snow was possible in the higher elevations.

Light showers fell in the Northwest and northern Rockies, and light snow was possible in the higher elevations. Behind the storm system, a few light showers fell over Kansas and Oklahoma. Ahead of the system, a strong area of high pressure brought another dry, mild day to the East with sunny skies and morning temperatures in the 50s and 60s.

money. "It is time to put some money back in the private sector."

The state won't have to raise the sales tax, he said, to comply with the requirements of the One Percent. Instead, part of that will be made up by economic growth stimulated by property owners with more cash to spend.

And part of it will come from trimming government fat, he told local business leaders and representatives from construction, real estate and local government.

"In the private sector, businesses are downsizing all the time while maintaining the same level of services or better," he said. "Government should be able to do the same."

But government can't easily do that, said Jim Weatherly, director of the public affairs department at Boise State University.

"In the abstract, people support cuts or reduction in fat, but when it comes to any particular service area, they don't want to see cuts," he said. "The question should be placed to Mr. Maxwell, where is the fat?"

And the state won't have a chance to wait for an economic stimulus from the initiative, he said, because the added expenses will be immediate.

If voters approve the initiative Nov. 5, legislators will have to start allocating money for public schools when the session starts in January.

"It doesn't appear to be able to do that when we are now in the second year of a holdback," he said. "Tax revenues don't look very good right now."

Tax revenue was $42 million lower this year than expected, forcing Gov. Phil Batt to announce a 2.5 percent holdback in money already allocated for this year.

At Friday's meeting, business leaders analyzed what they believed would be the initiative's impact.

Cities and counties would have a tougher time building roads and sewers for new subdivisions because the initiative would prevent their budgets growing more than inflation, said Mark Dunham, executive director of the Idaho Association of Realtors, Inc.

"That will have a very chilling effect on housing," he said.

Blaine County School District would have to rely on the state for all its funding, said Superintendent Phil Homer. The district, surrounded by some of the top property values in the state, might not get the amount it is used to, he said.

"The Legislature can be a very fickle body," he said.

But Maxwell said residents can always vote to increase the budget.

"All you hear is gloom and doom," he said. "That's just outrageous to hear that kind of talk."

Friday's activity on the campaign trail

The Associated Press

The candidates:

- BILL CLINTON: Boasted in Portland, Ore., he has shrunk the federal government by 240,000 workers and saved taxpayers $118 billion. "We're bringing common sense to government," he declared.
- BOB DOLE: Launched a new television ad that contrasts a scene of school children dealing drugs with President Clinton joking on MTV about his dalliance with marijuana. The new spot was the culmination of more than a week of attacks on Clinton's record on fighting illegal drugs.
- ROSS PEROT: Is reworking his campaign strategy to take advantage of free air time and reinforce his arguments against the two-party system.
- AL GORE: Accompanied Clinton to Portland, Ore., to show off the administration's efforts in "reinventing government."
- Gore, the architect of the program to make the federal bureaucracy smaller and more efficient, details his and Clinton's accomplishments in a book called "The Best Kept Secrets in Government."
- JACK KEMP: Pledged during a stop in Knoxville, Tenn., to bring people together in a Dole-Kemp administration, while contending that the Clinton administration offers only fear.
- Bob Dole trusts the people," Kemp said of his running mate. "Bill Clinton trusts the government."
- PAT CHOATE: Blamed Dole for supporting the Commission on Presidential Debate's recommendation to exclude third-party candidates.

"We're asking the American people to contact Bob Dole, and just simply say, 'Bob Dole, if you won't play by the rules, if you won't let Ross Perot in the debates, we're not even going to consider voting for you,'" Choate said in Atlanta on CNN's "TalkBack Live."

Coming on TV:

- Dole and Clinton will answer a question about balancing the budget in one-minute spots at approximately 6:30 p.m. MDT on Fox.
- Perot on "Fox News Sunday" via satellite from Dallas.
- Perot on NBC's "Meet The Press" via satellite from Dallas.
- Dole and Clinton will answer a question about education in one-minute spots at approximately 5:55 p.m. MDT.

under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code. Ernst is a public liability company.

In July, shareholders sued Ernst's Centers, accusing company officials of violating securities laws in a stock offering nearly two years ago that netted Ernst $45 million.

The lawsuit, filed in federal court in Seattle, alleges the Seattle hardware and garden chain misled investors about its ability to compete successfully as a hardware superstore.

In seeking bankruptcy protection, Ernst has closed 14 stores, including six in Washington's Puget Sound area. It also has 11 other store closures pending.

Caffeine

fallen on hard times, caffeine popularity is surging. Cola wars have led the airwaves, designer coffee houses spur overnight like weeds, and "Espresso Barista" is a common listing in the help wanted section. Even as long ago as a decade, caffeine outranked nicotine as the most widely consumed drug in the world, according ing to a 1986 study conducted at the Addiction Research Foundation in Ontario, Canada.

Has society simply substituted one socially accepted addiction for another?

The answer, Griffiths says, could lie in the way society embraces caffeinated products despite knowing some adverse effects may result from their consumption.

Like nicotine products used to be, caffeine products today "are actively promoted as containing the drug," he notes.

For instance, the motto on Jolt Cola says it contains "all the sugar and twice the caffeine," while Celestial Season's ultra-caffeinated Morning Thunder Tea boasts that it packs "the power of a hundred charging buffaloes."

Perot

ing an injunction to halt any presidential debates planned by the commission.

Running mate Pat Choate echoed Perot's complaints on Friday in an appearance on CNN's "Talk Back Live," and pointed blame at Bob Dole, who supported the commission's recommendation to exclude third-party candidates.

Clinton, for his part, has said he would welcome Perot in the debates.

Perot himself challenged Dole to turn up for a debate in St. Louis Wednesday, where Dole will be campaigning — without any expectation the GOP candidate would accept.

"No way he's going to show up and debate me, because he has been part and parcel of creating the problems that exist," Perot said on ABC's "Good Morning America."

Clinton and Dole campaign officials were scheduled to resume negotiations today on the timing, format and number of debates.

A Clinton campaign official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Clinton may consider seeking another debate sponsor, or even debate Perot separately, although that talk could be political maneuvering.

Choate said if Perot can't get into the debates, the campaign still will get its message out, pushing the networks to sell time immediately after the debates.

"We'll give our answers and we'll promote it very heavily," he said. "People will want to hear what we have to say, I think they're making a tactical mistake."

The campaign has had difficulty buying the prime TV time it wants as the network promote their fall schedules, with Choate complaining the networks were "censoring the Reform Party and its capacity to work and talk with you about the important issues of our time."

ABC spokeswoman Janice Gremeyer responded: "According to federal law, we have to give him federal access and we feel we have complied."

Perot's campaign coordinator, Russ Verney, said the campaign is beginning to look at buying local television time.

So far this campaign, Perot has had five 30-minute infomercials, all with lower ratings than the 15 broadcasts he ran as an independent candidate in 1992.

He has purchased two more but half-hour broadcasts on ABC, which will air Oct. 6 and Oct. 20 opposite "Sixty Minutes," a hard time slot in which to compete for viewers.

RELIVING A NIGHTMARE

Driver Paul Crute, director of operations of JFK Presidential Limo Tours, and passengers retrace John F. Kennedy's fatal trip down Dallas' Elm Street Monday in a restored 1960-era Lincoln Continental limousine.

Limo tour remembers ill-fated JFK motorcade

DALLAS (AP) — For $25, you too can sit in the back of an open-top limousine making its way through Dealey Plaza, hear the crack of rifle fire as you glide past the Texas School Book Depository and feel the car speed up as it roars through the underpass toward Parkland Memorial Hospital.

It's one of Dallas' newest tourist attractions built around the assassination of John F. Kennedy, and some say it's sick and exploitive. But that's not stopping visitors from taking the one-hour trip.

"All my daughter had to do was tell me about it on the phone and I said, 'Sign me up,'" said Janice Ritting, 55, of Tacoma, Wash.

The tour, thought up by Paul Crute, retraces the path of the presidential motorcade in a 1964 Lincoln restored to look like the day the president was shot.

Crute, 34, gave up a career in sales to start the tour after seeing tourists wandering the assassination site. He makes maybe three trips on weekdays and eight a day during the weekend.

"Being in touch with the fact that it is such an unhealed wound, that's kind of what motivated me to dream this up," he said.

"It's sick," said Chuck DiDiovanni, a tourist from Chicago. "Let's not relive it again. It was a terrible time."

Crute said no one who has taken the tour found it offensive. "I view it as history and there's nothing tasteful or tacky about history," he said.

Many Dallas residents and city leaders have resisted annual memorials to the assassination, trying to erase the shame. A large but understated monument to JFK sits on the grassy knoll at Dealey Plaza and two privately run museums are nearby, one on the sixth floor of the School Book Depository where tourists can peer out the window Lee Harvey Oswald fired from.

As the tour began one day recently, Mrs. Ritting slid into the left rear seat, the place a pillow-battered Jackie Kennedy took. Mrs. Ritting's husband, Andy, took the right rear seat, resting his elbow on the door like Kennedy.

"This is really special," she said. "I have mixed feelings about it. I wouldn't miss it for the world, but it's kind of eerie. I relived this because it affected me so much."

Actress broke contract

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Loni Anderson's refusal to promote a cosmetics line with a National Enquirer interview amounted to a contract violation that should cost her $565,000, a jury decided Friday.

Jurors will return to court Wednesday to consider if punitive damages also should be assessed in the civil suit filed against the actress.

Guidelines issued for transplants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Responding to concerns about the risk of exposing people to animal-borne diseases, the government proposed guidelines Friday for transplanting animal organs and tissues into people.

The guidelines, which came years after some hospitals began experimenting with animal-to-human transplants, are needed now because of a shortage of human donor organs, the Food and Drug Administration said.

Doctors and other scientists are working to bridge the gap, from transplanting whole animal organs to genetically engineering animal tissue that the human body won't reject.

At the same time, researchers worry about how humans might react to animal-borne viruses and bacteria. Monkeys can spread the Ebola virus to humans, and primates carry simian immunodeficiency virus, closely related to the human AIDS virus. Scientists are exploring possible links between mad cow disease and Creutzfeldt Jakob disease in humans.

The FDA guidelines offer a number of steps from the breeding of animals to the makeup of transplant teams to ensure that cross-species transplants are safe. Patients should be told of the risks to themselves, families and other close contacts, including sexual partners, according to the guidelines.

"There's a very real problem," said Dr. David Kessler, the FDA commissioner, noting that 3,000 people die a year from lack of available transplant organs.

"I think because of this problem we are willing to take some very real risks," he said. "But the watchword is caution. This needs to proceed scientifically and cautiously."

Although the guidelines are voluntary, Kessler emphasized that the agency already regulates animal-based products used in human medicine and will keep doing so.

Study: Lowering alcohol limit would save 500 lives each year

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 500 lives could be saved every year if all states lowered their blood alcohol limit for driving to 0.08 percent, according to a report from a Boston University researcher.

"I urge every governor and every legislature to support ... a nationwide 0.08 standard to draw the line against impaired driving — the most frequently committed violent crime in America," said Katherine Prescott, president of Mothers Against Drunk Driving, which released the report Friday.

The study by Ralph Hingson of Boston University's School of Public Health was published in Friday's edition of the American Journal of Public Health.

Currently, 14 states have a 0.08 limit while the remainder define driving while intoxicated as a blood alcohol content of 0.10, Hingson said.

Hingson compared alcohol-related auto fatalities in five states that had lowered the limit with nearby

"How do we live our lives after we receive a transplant?"

— Jeff Getty, baboon marrow recipient

Some animal-to-human transplants have received widespread attention, such as the transplant of a baboon heart into Baby Fae nearly 12 years ago, transplants of baboon livers at the University of Pittsburgh, and transplant last year of baboon marrow into AIDS patient Jeff Getty of San Francisco.

Getty, 39, said he looks forward to reading the guidelines, wishes they could be more specific, but understands why they aren't — the government still doesn't fully understand the risk and won't assume responsibility.

"How do we live our lives after we receive a transplant?" he said, adding that he received advice from his transplant team this summer.

"I was advised by one of the team doctors that it was OK for me to resume having casual contact and safe sex with my partner," he said. He said doctors found no baboon viruses in him.

Research into so-called xenotransplants is widespread. Scientists are transplanting fetal pig cells to treat Parkinson's disease, genetically modified pig liver to counter human liver failure, pancreatic cells from pigs to treat human diabetes and fetal calf adrenal cells to ease the pain for people in the final stages of cancer.

For kidney patients, the need for sources other than humans is especially acute. More than 33,000 patients were awaiting kidney transplants in August.

"I think the viewpoint is that at some point in the next five years people are going to start to use xenotransplants, and I think the FDA wanted to be ahead of the curve," said Dr. Alan R. Hull, a Dallas nephrologist and medical professor and president of the National Kidney Foundation.

Among the guidelines, the FDA says surgical transplant teams should include a veterinarian and a doctor specializing in infectious diseases. The hospital or clinic should be associated with an accredited virology and microbiology laboratory.

Also, the proposals urge that samples of blood, cells and tissue from the animals and human recipients be saved for follow-up investigations. And the animals should be bred and reared in captivity from known stock and with close record-keeping and screening for known causes of infection.

Clinton dishing out plenty of pork

Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — Bill Clinton is developing a new political art form as he campaigns for re-election.

He is perfecting ways to pass pork out to voter groups even though his pork barrel is almost empty.

His hands are tied by federal debt. He is bound by his pledge to balance the budget, which leaves him little new money to spend. Nevertheless, as Election Day nears, Clinton time and again has found creative ways to slip his fiscal handcuffs — or at least to make it look as though they do not bind him.

On Wednesday, for instance, with a stroke of his pen, Clinton thrilled environmentalists nationwide by declaring almost 2 million acres of Utah's scenic red-rock landscape a national monument, restricting commercial development there. Cost to the federal government of locking up landscape as big as a small state by executive order: zero.

To be sure, some of Clinton's new proposals would cost taxpayers money — but not much, and he is careful to spell out how he would pay for them so as not to deepen the deficit. He unveiled a flurry of those ideas last month on his way to the Democratic National Convention, including proposals to:

- Teach every third grader to read, $2.75 billion;
- Clean up 500 toxic-waste sites by 2000, $1.3 billion;
- Give tax breaks for hiring welfare recipients, $3.4 billion;
- End the tax on capital gains for profits from home sales, $1.4 billion.

Clinton proposes to cover those costs by tightening a series of obscure business tax breaks and selling off some of the public-works spectrum.

"These are realistic proposals.

President Bill Clinton and Vice President Al Gore greet supporters after a rally Friday in Portland, Ore., that capped their Pacific Northwest bus tour.

We did not propose them until we worked through the major (spending) offsets and made sure we could pay for them," said Gene Sperling, a top Clinton economic aide.

None of those ideas will get through the Republican-controlled Congress before it adjourns this year, but the point is that Clinton has found ways to offer voters new proposals without opening himself to much criticism as a "tax-and-spend" Democrat.

Leading presidential scholars give Clinton high marks for ingenuity, but some question the merits of his new ideas.

"Given that balancing the budget is one of the tenets of his campaign, you can honestly say that he is not trying to break the bank," said Stephen Hess, a presidential scholar at the Brookings Institution, a centrist think tank.

"On the other hand," Hess observed, "you can say it looks like he hasn't got much vision. It looks like he's running for school board or police chief. A lot of these things don't have 'presidential' written all over them. Many of these things the federal government doesn't have much of a role in, like education and crime."

In those areas, Clinton recently has pushed such microproposals as a new nationwide police number such as 911 for nonemergency calls, a national registry of sex offenders for local police to consult, an expanded federal data bank on "deadbeat dads" to help enforce child-support payments, distribution of 50,000 donated cellular telephones to neighborhood-watch patrols, and support for curfews and uniforms for schoolchildren.

None of those initiatives requires congressional approval, and none would cost Washington any money beyond what's available in normal bureaucratic account shuffling. But each addresses "real-life problems" that polls show concern many voters — demonstrating Clinton's deft political touch.

"He started off the year by declaring the end of big government, and yet he certainly hasn't declared the end of activist government," Hess noted.

"Every president uses whatever weapons he has ... Often they are little things that sound bigger than they are," said Norman Ornstein, a leading analyst with the American Enterprise Institute, a conservative think tank.

"The budget doesn't allow for large proposals, and divided government makes large proposals unworkable. So a small proposal fits," Ornstein said. "These small programs are the political equivalent of dams and bridges."

It was easier in the old days. A president campaigning for reelection could dip into the bottomless federal Treasury and hand out popular projects like chips from a pork barrel.

Franklin D. Roosevelt promised dams and bridges and job-rich projects galore to every little whistlestop along the campaign trail. Perhaps it's no coincidence he was elected president four times.

Lyndon B. Johnson promised even more — to build a Great Society.

"He created one of the biggest spending programs. He was going to take in the cities, take in the poor, widen Medicare and all the rest ... The big programs — that was LBJ's version" of dams and bridges, said Henry Greff, a historian at Columbia University.

LBJ won election by a landslide in 1964.

Clinton lacks LBJ's limitless range, but he still finds a little traditional pork to pass around.

After he angered gay men and lesbians by vowing to sign a bill outlawing same-sex marriages, for example, Clinton told a San Francisco audience in July that he would seek an extra $65 million in fiscal 1997 for the AIDS drug-assistance program. (The money would come from nicking other accounts at the Department of Health and Human Services.)

And after Hurricane Fran devastated North Carolina, Clinton flew to Raleigh and promised an estimated $500 million from federal emergency coffers to speed recovery.

GOP candidate holds 2nd in primary

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A Republican struggled to make the cut in Friday's primary for the Senate seat held by retiring Democrat Bennett Johnston.

Former state Treasurer Mary Landrieu, a Democrat with a liberal record, handily led a 15-candidate field in this conservative state.

But as she stretched her lead, GOP state Rep. Woody Jenkins was surging toward second place.

In Louisiana's open primary, Republicans and Democrats compete on the same ballot. If no candidate gets a majority of the vote, the two top vote-getters meet in a runoff Nov. 5.

ISSUE: Minimum wage.

Here are the answers of the major presidential candidates to the request: "Explain your policy on the minimum wage."

Bill Clinton: "We continue to take action to value work and to value families. I fought for and signed legislation that raises the minimum wage by 90 cents over two years.

"This action will significantly improve the lives of 10 million Americans by rewarding work and responsibility and ensuring that work pays."

Bob Dole: "The recent increase of the minimum wage was a helpful, but small, step toward addressing the economic concerns of American workers. But we must do more. We must strive to increase economic opportunity for all Americans that promote jobs and economic growth. That is why I proposed my pro-growth plan for America's families.

"To stimulate greater economic growth and opportunity, Bob Dole will fight for: a balanced budget amendment; a balanced budget by the year 2002, tax relief and fundamental tax reform, ending the IRS as we know it; education and job training reform; and regulatory and lawsuit reform. Each of these initiatives will help fuel the economic growth and opportunity that are our birthright as a people."

Ross Perot: "Under normal circumstances I would favor a minimum wage increase. Our one-sided trade agreements make it counterproductive to raise the minimum wage because it forces more jobs to leave the United States.

"The best way to raise wages is to create more jobs. As the demand for workers increases, wages will rise. The minimum wage is through international and domestic policies that support America's 6 million small businesses and the 80 million people they employ. If our businesses are thriving, they will be able to pay their employees higher wages."

"Millions of American workers are underpaid or working in temporary or part-time jobs. The real way to increase the minimum wage is through international and domestic policies that support America's 6 million small businesses and the 80 million people they employ. If our businesses are thriving, they will be able to pay their employees higher wages."

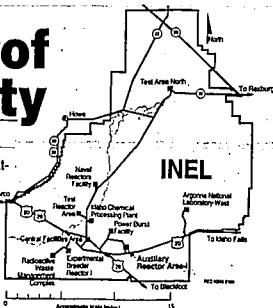

Notice of Availability

The U.S. Department of Energy has initiated a 30-day comment period involving the removal of a contaminated septic system at the Auxiliary Reactor Area-1 of the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

This time-critical removal action, which began in early September, involves the removal of a septic system, its contents and a small volume of soil contaminated with radionuclides, polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs), heavy metals and chemicals. The system was built in 1960 and received waste water from laboratory experiments and print shop operations until 1988, when the facility was deactivated.

Contaminated soil and waste removed from septic tanks, a seepage pit and manholes will be placed in containers and stored onsite until a treatment facility is identified. This project will be completed in early October at an estimated cost of $500,000.

More information on this project is located in the Administrative Record file for Operable Unit 5-07. The Administrative Record is located at the DOE Reading Room of the INEL Technical Library in Idaho Falls. Copies can be found at the INEL Information Repositories at the Marshall Public Library in Pocatello, Shoshone-Bannock Library in Fort Hall, INEL Boise Office, University of Idaho Library in Moscow and the Boise, Twin Falls and Idaho Falls public libraries.

A public comment period begins Sept. 21 and will end Oct. 20.

Written comments may be sent to Jerry Lyle, U.S. Department of Energy, Idaho Operations Office, P.O. Box 2047, Idaho Falls, ID 83403-2047.

Interested citizens may request a briefing on this project by calling the INEL Community Relations Office at (208) 526-4700 or the INEL's toll-free number at (800) 708-2680.

U.S. soldiers Bernard Holmes, left, and Thomas Boucher engage in platoon attack training in the Kuwait desert, near the Iraqi border, Friday.

U.S., Japan study helicopter basing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Japan will look at the possibility of creating a floating heliport to base some U.S. Marine Corps helicopters now stationed on Okinawa, officials said. The offshore heliport idea is one of three options being considered as part of the effort to adjust the American military presence on Okinawa, the officials said Thursday. The floating heliport would be for helicopters at the Marines' Futenma Air Station. "We ought to look at it, it has potential," said Gen. Charles Krulak, the four-star commandant of the Marine Corps. "It's the type of thing (about the future) that we ought to be doing." Krulak, who spoke with reporters Friday at the National Press Club, stressed that the floating ideas was just one of several ideas under study. He declined to say whether he favored it over any other. "The vision in me hopes that this floating offshore facility will be the solution," Defense Secretary William Perry said on Thursday. He added that as an engineer, he is aware that difficult technical problems must be overcome to build and operate such a facility. The other ideas involve establishing heliports at other local bases on Okinawa, such as Kadena Air Base or Camp Schwab.

RESERVE POLICE OFFICER OPPORTUNITY

The City of Twin Falls is accepting applications for Reserve Police Officers. This is a strictly volunteer, non-paid, position which allows citizens to be involved in their local police department. Applicants must be at least 21 years of age, possess a High School Diploma or the equivalent, and be able to pass the standard police physical fitness test. All applicants must have no felony convictions or serious misdemeanors. All applicants will also have to pass a background investigation including but not limited to employment and credit history. Those accepted in the program will be required to take psychological tests and drug screening. Those completing the subsequent TFPD Reserve Academy will be sworn reserve officers and will be allowed to ride with and assist patrol officers. All equipment will be supplied by the department.

Application and details can be obtained at the Twin Falls Police Department, 338 3rd Ave. E., on Saturday, Sept. 21 from 10:00 am until 2:00 pm.

American troops stage war games

KUWAIT (AP) — American forces fired automatic weapons and artillery rounds into the desert sand near the Iraqi border Friday. Washington's message with the war games: Saddam Hussein, do not threaten your neighbors again. While the latest confrontation between the United States and Iraq has eased in the past week, the White House is bulking up its military presence in the Persian Gulf. Hundreds of soldiers from the 1st Cavalry Division arrived here Friday, part of an airlift bringing 3,500 soldiers from Fort Hood, Texas, to Kuwait within a few days. President Clinton ordered them to this desert kingdom to augment a force of 1,200 that has been conducting exercises since August. More than 30,000 U.S. military personnel, most aboard ships, will soon be in the gulf. The crisis erupted three weeks ago over Iraqi attacks on Kurds in northern Iraq, fewer than 20,000 were deployed.

The United States says the intent of the military exercises is to show Saddam the Americans are ready to protect its oil-rich allies in the gulf. "It is a great opportunity to realistically do the same missions we may be called on to do in combat," Army Capt. Shane O'Kelly of New York City said as armored vehicles rumbled past, kicking up plumes of sand. Simulating a counterattack by enemy forces about six miles from the Iraqi border, a platoon of Americans in a trench triggered a mine and fired live ammunition from M-16s and a machine gun. The targets were cutout figures of green-uniformed troops that may or may not be Iraqis. A half-dozen Bradley fighting vehicles raced across the desert past a group of camels, which appeared oblivious to the action. Suddenly, a soldier shouted "Gas!" The troops pulled gas masks from their pouches and pulled them over their heads. One soldier was hauled out of the trench and taken to an ambulance on tracks, one of two who were "wounded" in the mock firefight. In real life, no threatening Iraqi troop movements were reported Friday, said Lt. Col. Andy Bourland, U.S. military spokesman.

Alternative school finds temporary home

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Clutching a trash bag in a nearly vacant church schoolroom Friday, teacher Beverly Beem wasn't sure how it felt to see Twin Falls' alternative school move.

"This has been a good house, we've enjoyed our stay," she said amid the clutter of furniture at the First Presbyterian Church, the first home of the school since 1989.

But there was little time for sentimentality as Magic Valley High School students and teachers moved into the Seventh-day Adventist Church, where the school will stay until it finds a permanent home.

The Adventist church, at 131 Grandview Drive, will give the school slightly more room to grow, said Terrell Donich, superintendent of the Twin Falls School District.

The school takes students who are program, parents, dropouts or struggling in regular school. A double-wide trailer houses a day-care center for the students' children, Donich said.

Sometime next autumn, the school will take up to 60 junior high students with behavior problems.

Eventually, the Twin Falls School District hopes to find a permanent place for the school, preferably through a lease-purchase plan.

Ninth graders said they were hardly capable of feeling sentimental Friday; before the move, they spent their last day taking geography tests.

"It was hard, we had tests this morning then we had to move stuff," said Paul Miller, 16, of Filer.

His friend Brian Harris, 15, drives 180 miles every day back and forth from Paul Miller, left, and Eric Williams move a desk from the basement of the First Presbyterian Church where Magic Valley High School had been holding classes for the past seven school years.

Mountain Home to attend the alternative school.

Harris said he left the public schools in Mountain Home because they were too violent.

"My mom wanted to get me out of trouble," Harris said.

But he and Miller said another semi-permanent move to another church seemed like a waste of energy.

"I wish they would get another building," Harris said.

"It seems like kind of pain in the butt having to (move) again," Miller said. "That's kind of dumb, but I don't make the rules."

Twin Falls Inn fire forces temporary evacuation

TWIN FALLS - A fire that apparently started from oil-soaked rags burned a laundry building at the Apollo Motor Inn Best Western Thursday night, forcing temporary evacuation of some hotel guests.

Twin Falls Fire Department reports the fire started about 10 p.m. and caused about $25,000 damage to the laundry building, which is separate from the hotel, at 296 Addison Ave. W.

Hotel officials said about 15 rooms were evacuated in case the fire spread. When the fire was controlled, the guests returned to their rooms.

Battalion Chief Ron Clark said the fire apparently started in rags soaked with linseed oil.

"We're thinking spontaneous combustion right now. Linseed oil has quite a propensity to self-ignite," Clark said.

The fire spread into the building's attic, making it difficult to extinguish, Clark said.

The fire department responded with three engines and 10 firefighters, and took about two hours to finish off the fire.

Guns missing from Twin Falls pawn shop following burglary

TWIN FALLS - Fourteen handguns are missing from a Twin Falls pawn shop after a Wednesday morning burglary.

Twin Falls police reports say the weapons, both revolvers and semiautomatic pistols, were taken when a burglar or burglars smashed a window at Snake River Pawn, 287 Washington St. N., at about 4:30 a.m. Wednesday. Display cases holding the guns also were smashed, the report said.

The list of stolen guns included three 9 mm semiautomatic pistols, five 38-caliber revolvers and two .22-caliber revolvers, the report said. A store manager said the guns were worth quite a bit of money, including one worth $600.

Twin Falls police Lt. Dennis Chambers said the guns' serial numbers are being entered in a nationwide law-enforcement computer network.

"That way if any of the guns turn up, or if anyone is picked up with one of the guns on them, the agency will be able to trace them," Chambers said.

Whether the guns will turn up locally is hard to say, he said.

Public is invited to city's Urban Renewal Agency meet

TWIN FALLS - Anyone with an interest in the city's Urban Renewal Agency may attend the agency's next meeting Tuesday.

The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. in the conference room of City Hall. It is open to the public.

Construction along Second Street South and a community center concept will be primary topics of discussion.

Republican women to see candidates at Monday meet

TWIN FALLS - Twin Falls County Republican women will meet the Republican candidates at their monthly meeting at 4 p.m. Monday at the Cassia County Courthouse.

About 50 women are expected. Candidates include U.S. Rep. Mike Crapo; state reps. Mark Stubbs, John Sandy and Laird Noh; county commissioners Brent Reinke and Marvin Hempleman; and sheriff candidate Gene Bolton.

Sugar beet buyout faces tough deadline

By John Thompson
Times-News writer

BURLEY - A lot of hurdles are left to close a deal to buy out Amalgamated Sugar Co. and form a sugar beet growers' co-op, but local bankers and organizers remain optimistic.

The $266 million buyout is scheduled to close Oct. 31. In the meantime banks have to process about 1,000 growers' loan applications. On top of that, farmers are in the middle of harvest and don't have much spare time to spend hashing over finances at the bank.

Adding to the intensity of the situation is the fact that farmers need to know what they will be planting next spring soon after fall harvest, in order to properly manage their farms and finances.

About 1,000 sugar beet growers in Idaho, Oregon and Washington have signed to join the Snake River Sugar Co.-co-op and buy Amalgamated factories in Paul, Twin Falls, Nampa and Nysa, Ore.

In doing so, growers have also agreed to raise about 223,000 acres of sugar beets each year.

Since then, though, original financing plan with AgriCredit Corp. fell through, so now local banks have agreed to finance growers who qualify.

Randon Wilson, legal counsel and Snake River Sugar co-op organizer, Friday explained several reasons behind the collapse of the AgriCredit financing deal.

First, the AgriCredit plan was unacceptable because it mandated every grower to borrow $400 per acre - including a $350-annuity loan to buy into the company - regardless of the grower's ability to pay.

Second, AgriCredit wanted $15 per acre for a reserve fund, which board members considered excessive, Wilson said. AgriCredit also wanted second liens on equipment and crops, which caused problems for farmers and their banks.

Now, an informal partnership has been formed between area banks, the co-op and traditional government farm programs. All the details haven't been worked out yet, but bankers have formed a task force and are working toward creating a pool to finance the buyout.

Buhl's new chief looking for intolerant residents

By Kent McClary
Times-News writer

BUHL - The city's new police chief has a new way for his department to do business. And he's looking for residents who won't tolerate crime to join him.

Buhl Police Chief Terry Tipton is training his officers in community policing, which he calls a better approach to fighting crime.

Tipton's community policing policy is simple. Officers won't only respond to a crime, make a report and try and find the perpetrator - they'll try to find a solution to the crime.

"Crimes against property are crimes of opportunity," Tipton said. "Our responsibility is to figure out how to take the opportunity away."

To reduce that opportunity, Tipton is collecting applications for Citizens On Patrol, a squad of people trained to assist officers in watching for crime.

To the police, the group will be extra sets of eyes and ears. To criminals, Tipton said, they'll be an added uncertainty.

"The good thing about it is, when the bad guys are out doing their crimes at night, they'll never know if the next set of headlights are police, or Citizens On Patrol," he said.

Participants ranged in age from 18 - the minimum - to 85, Tipton said. "We had a lady who was 85, who came into the office one day a week and ran the shredder or organized files," he said. Retirees were a good chunk of the group.

"A lot of these retirees have had hi tech jobs and a lot of training in their busy lives. It was great to put them to work."

Other community initiatives Tipton wants to implement include a Police Athletic League. The department and officers would sponsor activities and athletic leagues to provide positive activities for younger children.

Members must follow a manual of rules and will have no police powers.

"It's very rewarding. They can really make a difference in their neighborhood," Tipton said. "It's a way of showing the community it is not going to tolerate criminal activity."

Tipton, 41, started as Buhl's police chief in May, moving from the Meridian police department, where he served and ran the citizens' patrol program.

Democrats have trouble finding Stevenson foe

By Karen Tolkdnin
Times-News writer

RUPERT - A Democrat in Minidoka County must feel like a badminton player battling an entire football team.

Friday explained several reasons behind the collapse of the AgriCredit financing deal.

As Election Day hovers just 45 days away, Democrats are having trouble finding someone to replace Rupert teacher Michael Peck, who withdrew from the race for an open seat in the state House back in June.

"If you run, you're pretty much on your own," said George Suchan, who is running for an open seat on the county commission. "You're not obligated to anybody, but in state offices, it takes so much money to get the necessary exposure that it's hard to get somebody to take it on."

Democrats have until Oct. 24 to appoint someone to fill Peck's spot. If they don't, Republican John "Bert" Stevenson will claim the seat. Democrats say they don't mind that idea.

"I don't think we'll have a choice," said Minidoka County Democratic chairman Brent Tingey. "He's been very responsive in his dealings I've had with him."

Reshaping the legislative districts several years ago is partly responsible for the Republicans' death grip on the area, said Clarence Bellem, a former Democratic commissioner.

"We fought that stinking legislation," he said. "All they were concerned with was siphoning off the Democrat strength."

Restricting dividend of Heyburn, which he called a Democratic stronghold, in two. And that weakened the Democrats' power, he said.

"I think it has changed a little bit of the structure in the party," he said. "Democrats tend to be more the working class of people and you had a lot of those people living in the Heyburn area."

Suchan agreed.

"In any case, Suchan also predicts Stevenson would be a tolerable representative."

"He's a good man," he said. "I hate to say that about a Republican."

Hall said that without the district's support she would not have been able to earn her master's degree.

In other Kimberly School Board business Thursday:

Jean Shawver, Troy Palmer and Vickie Owing outlined the technology program's progress. They spoke of resources available through the sponsorship of the Twin Falls PTSO which was set up for the three schools. They said correct keyboard fingering will be taught to first-graders this year.

Garner announced that the food booth at the fair, under the sponsorship of the Twin Falls Moose Lodge, had earned $2,311 for the PTSO which was distributed among the rodeo club, cheerleaders, the junior and senior classes, the ecology group and the music department.

The board voted to include the baseball field in the school's insurance policy to relieve the Kimberly Youth Association of that expense. The addition won't change the district's cost but will save the KYA a sizeable amount.

Trustees agreed to hire Humbolt Engineering to develop plans for a sprinkler irrigation system for the ball field, the middle school and the old football field now used as a grade school playground. Presently, these areas are watered with city water, which in the future will be unaffordable.

Kimberly School District freezes 9 teachers' salaries

By Margaret Jones
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY - The Kimberly School District's new certified salary schedule - based on a state salary schedule - freezes nine teachers' salaries at their present level.

That initiated a lengthy discussion between the Kimberly School Board and faculty members during Thursday night's board meeting.

Acting as a group spokesman, tenured teacher George McAdams expressed his disappointment because the board will not recognize credits he received in his preparation for employment in law enforcement prior to getting his teaching degree.

David Emerson said his motivation for devotion to the school system had been destroyed.

Superintendent John Garner said the district does not receive state money for credits that teachers have earned in fields not related to teaching-certification requirements. So the district experiences a budget hardship if it pays teachers for these credits.

Credits earned by teachers after their certification are recognized by the Board.

With the new salary schedule, teachers will realize about a $2,000 increase at the top of their pay scale.

Teachers Debbie Klug, Sharon Meeks and Jan Hall thanked the board for its consideration of the faculty and said they felt the board decision was fair.

Batt says new federal plans would bring waste into Idaho

The Associated Press

BOISE - Gov. Phil Batt says his staff has uncovered two federal reports in the last week that would allow nuclear waste to be shipped to the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory - if the state didn't have an agreement in place that prevents it.

Gov. Phil Batt

Network, Prospective Shipments Module, proposes sending six shipments of spent nuclear fuel from universities to Idaho by next March. That also would be a direct violation of the Batt nuclear waste agreement.

Batt Friday cited a July 31 Department of Energy draft planning document titled "Idaho National Engineering Laboratory Environmental Management Ten Year Plan."

That plan proposes sending all spent nuclear fuel from the Oak Ridge National Laboratory in Tennessee to INEL starting next year.

A state panel told the Energy Department that these 15 truck loads of heavy metal fuel are prohibited under the contract Batt negotiated with the federal government nearly one year ago.

Another document, "DOE Transportation Information more nuclear waste from coming into Idaho.

"The DOE had plans to send unlimited quantities of waste to Idaho," he said. "My agreement, right now, is keeping waste out of Idaho."

He said that's something that the initiative's backers can't guarantee. "The only way to protect Idaho is to vote 'no' on Proposition 3," Batt said.

Batt said nine more boxcars carrying about 900 tons of radioactive contaminated soil will leave INEL this weekend and another 600 tons are scheduled to leave the following weekend. The material will be sent to Envirocare of Utah's permanent storage facility at Clive, Utah.

A year later, local residents are still on edge around Ligertown thought to have been accounted for, people still reporting seeing an African lion in the Lava Hot Springs area.

LAVA HOT SPRINGS (AP) - A year ago, armed officers and local residents were shooting 18 exotic cats that escaped from a rambunctious game farm in southeastern Idaho.

A week later the 19th was shot and killed as it wandered around the area near the Ligertown complex.

"Not a lot has changed," said Woney Peters, the man who shot the 19th lion as it walked about 150 yards from his house on Dempsey Creek a week after authorities thought the crisis had ended.

Twenty-seven lions and dozens of wild hybrids were rescued from the squalid surroundings, the operators convicted of animal cruelty and other violations although they have appealed and the complex has been razed.

Peters' children were playing in the back yard at the time, and he said it took months for them to overcome their fear about playing outside.

But the memories of the wild animals roaming the countryside remain vivid, and concern over safety is still high.

"We're still pretty protective around here," Peters said. "We watch our backs."

Although all the animals are officer, remembers well the night he and other agents combed the complex looking for stray cats. He was reaching inside a closet, brushing aside the clothes to see if a lion cub was inside, when he felt a lion's moist warm breath and thin stiff whiskers on his arm.

"I thought, My God, with my hand right next to a lion's mouth I could have lost my whole arm," he said.

But the male weighing about 400 pounds simply looked at Nagel with a bored expression that seemed to say, "Oh, it's you."

Sheriff's Office is still paying $1,500 a month for the care of 70 wolf hybrids, and the 27 lions are being kept at Wildlife Wagonstation, an animal refuge in southern California.

Judge says plaintiffs must be identified

POCATELLO (AP) - U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge says a lawsuit seeking to stop work on the new LDS Institute at Idaho State University will be dropped unless the plaintiffs are identified.

Advertisement for Falltime Festivities at Cactus Petes. Features 'BINGO!' text, 'WIN OVER $5,000!', and 'GALA SHOWROOM'.

Lodge ruled Thursday that work on the new facility, which started in July, can continue.

A lawsuit was filed in May against ISU President Richard Bowen, the state Board of Education, Pocatello Mayor Peter Angstad and Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints President Gordon Hinckley.

It claims that ISU, as a publicly funded university, is too closely linked with the LDS Church.

The plaintiffs have been identified only by pseudonyms. Lodge gave them until Nov. 20 to come forth.

"We are pleased with the judge's ruling because it is correct," said Don Loejk, attorney representing the university and the education board. "This is good for ISU."

"They are claiming they've been injured by this," Loejk said. "If that's their claim, they have to reveal who they are."

The land swap between the church and the university was approved by the state Board of Education in 1995. Under the deal, ISU received the LDS Institute building on Red Hill Road and 0.5 acres of land.

The church received the parking lot adjacent to the ISU Library and space on Bartz Field. The church plans to build a two-story building slightly larger than the existing institute. It will be used for religion classes and social gatherings.

Heyburn family finds beautification pays off in cash

By Ginger Kirk
Times-News correspondent

HEYBURN - Sometimes, it pays to beautify your yard - it pays cash.

To mark the end of the second year of Heyburn's beautification program, Councilwoman Flossie Kay awarded cash prizes to three city residents this week.

Brian and Anita Satterwhite, 2011 K St., won first prize, $150, for the most improved yard. Debbie King, 1850 16th St., won second prize, $100. Mark Hodge, 951 H St., won third prize, $50.

Last spring, residents interested in competing registered with the city; Kay took pictures of those yards in May and again in August to pick most-improved yards.

"It's really gratifying to see things improved," Kay said. "We're pleased with the response."

Since he took office four years ago, Mayor Glen Loveland has emphasized the need for community pride and a clean city.

"I would like to make it a big deal and involve more money," he said of the beautification program, and he hopes that more residents will become involved. "Like a fire, it will catch on."

He said the city was grateful to conscientious volunteers like Marilyn Moon, beautification committee chairwoman, who nurtured flower gardens scattered all over the town on city-owned parcels.

Brian Satterwhite and his wife, Anita, won a yard beautification contest sponsored by the Heyburn City Council.

"She's a marvel," he said. "She actually went out to farms and loaded manure into the trunk of her Cadillac."

Moon hauled water to some of the flower gardens with a bucket in the trunk of her car. But Loveland recognized her dedication, and now Moon has a city truck outfitted with two 50-gallon water tanks.

The Satterwhites have owned their landscaping company, Horizon Landscaping, for six years. Though they entered the contest, their win surprised them.

"It's physical therapy for us," Brian Satterwhite said.

When they moved into their home they had no lawn at all for the first year. Most of the landscaping has been done since last fall.

"Four years ago, we had nothing but weeds and dirt," Anita Satterwhite said.

Now they have surrounded their house and yard with white rock, created a corner display in the front yard and made a half-circle drive. The new brick path in the front yard was a Mother's Day gift from Brian Satterwhite to his wife.

He weeds, mows, fertilizes and sprays while Anita Satterwhite gardens and takes care of the trees and flowers. They are passing on their green thumbs to their children Brittany, 5, and Anastacia, 3. The older girl helps her mother pick dead leaves from the flowers and the lawn.

"My dad was really into gardening," Anita Satterwhite said. "I guess that's how I picked it up."

The beautification program is a pilot program funded equally by the state and the city. The city was awarded a $10,000 grant; although Heyburn must match state funds, it can match them in labor and materials as well as money.

Kay said several more projects are in progress. The city owns several small pieces of land along the corridor that passes through Heyburn between Burley and Rupert. A drip watering system will be put in along the railroad tracks coming into Heyburn, and grasses, wildflowers and trees will be planted.

Resident Mike Sandmann has developed a plan to beautify an area on the south side of the cemetery with birches, trees and a parking area. A memorial park is being created near the cemetery so that residents can donate a tree in memory of a loved one, Kay said. Plaques will memorialize the people for whom trees are donated.

RUPERT'S POTATO FEST CONTINUES

Local merchants and residents enjoyed fall weather and community camaraderie as they ate baked potatoes with all the toppings purchased at the Mincio Scorpini's spud bar at Rupert's Spud Fest Friday. Craft sales, sidewalk sales and a farmers' market will continue today from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. The spud bar will be open from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m.

Association to seek local option authority

LEWISTON (AP) - The Idaho Association of Counties will ask lawmakers to adopt legislation enabling a regional sales tax to provide local property tax relief.

County officials at the association's annual conference on Thursday adopted a resolution calling for local-option sales tax authority to be granted to groups of neighboring counties.

The proposal would allow counties in each region of Idaho to impose a sales tax of up to 1 percent, with the approval of voters.

Five local-option sales tax regions would be created. A majority of the counties in a region - including the county that is the region's economic hub - would be required to win voter approval to impose a tax.

The tax would not be collected in counties where voters rejected it. Revenues would be distributed based on the property tax base and population of each county, and would have to be spent on property tax relief.

Twin Falls County Commissioner Dennis Maughan said the proposal is a potential option to voter approval of the One Percent Initiative in the November election.

"This gives them some relief from people coming to your economic hub and using your roads, your sewer systems and your indigent care," he said.

Maughan said the measure grew out of discussions between commissioners in Jerome and Twin Falls counties and the mayor of Twin Falls in consultation with Gov. Phil Batt's office.

Enrollment at all WSU campuses tops 20,000

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) - Enrollment at Washington State University and its branch campuses topped 20,000 for the first time, school officials told the regents on Friday.

The number of students enrolled this fall was 20,169, compared with 19,598 last year, interim provost Geoffrey Gamble said.

There were record enrollments at branch campuses in Spokane and Vancouver, Gamble said. The numbers were:

WSU Spokane, up 15 percent to 405 students.

WSU Vancouver, up 13 percent to 1,089 students.

WSU Tri-Cities, up 6 percent to 1,296.

WSU Pullman, up 1.8 percent to 17,379.

The Pullman numbers include 469 students in the Extended Degree Program, in which students across the state are able to work towards degrees from remote locations far from Pullman, Gamble said.

While Wilson is encouraging growers to start their paperwork as soon as possible, Chuck Gunnerson, assistant manager of U.S. Bank in Burley, is telling his customers to wait until Oct. 1.

"There's no sense in paying interest on a loan when all the details aren't worked out yet," he said. "It stems on cash flow and if you can't afford the payment you don't do it."

Buyout

Growers will still have to pay $400 per acre, but the payback schedule will vary from bank to bank.

"The task force is trying to find creative ways to finance more marginal growers, Wilson said.

"It would be a mistake for a grower to think I'm not going to make this come together," he said. "I can't imagine that we can't figure a way to get things done."

Bankers are also optimistic about the buyout, but they're not sure about meeting the Oct. 31 deadline.

"We will do our best, but it will be a challenge for both the growers and the bankers," said Terry Hales, Idaho agriculture supervisor for First Security Bank in Boise. "Frankly the applications are just starting to come in and until we look at them we won't know how many people will need financial assistance."

Even if a pool of guaranteed funds is established, some growers won't qualify, Hales said.

"We will not make loans to people who cannot afford to repay even if they are guaranteed. But we will try to accommodate all of our customers," he said.

Scott Horsely, vice president and credit administrator for D.L. Evans Bank in Burley, said the timeframe is tight and the applications are being processed as fast as possible.

Mormon leaders break ground for BYU library extension

PROVO, Utah (AP) - Mormon church leaders gathered at Brigham Young University on Friday to break ground for a $47 million underground library extension.

"There is something sacred, I think, about a great library," said Gordon B. Hinckley, president of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. "It represents the preservation of the wisdom, learning and pondering of all the men and women of all the ages accumulated under one roof to which we can have access."

The 235,000 square-foot addition is estimated to cost just under $35 million, said Merrill J. Bateman, university president. Furnishing the new facility is estimated at $10 million to $12 million.

Construction is scheduled to begin Monday and is to be completed in December 1998. Additional remodeling in the library's main building is expected to last through 1999.

The library currently houses some 3 million books, said Paul Jordan, assistant librarian for technical services.

54-year-old Texas woman dies in accident in Yellowstone

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) - A 54-year-old Texas woman died in an automobile accident Thursday in Yellowstone National Park.

Carolyn M. Bennett of Crowley, Texas, was driving her sedan when the car collided with a recreational vehicle on U.S. Highway 191 in the northwest quadrant of the park, officials reported in a news release on Friday. Park officials said the vehicles were traveling in opposite directions, but were not immediately sure which vehicle crossed the dividing traffic line. Bennett, who was wearing a seat belt, was pronounced dead at the scene. The driver and a passenger in the recreational vehicle were not injured.

PEOPLE

Lucid eager for comforts of home

Family, sweets top wish list

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — She hasn't had a shower or bath, or any goody desserts, or any hot-off-the-press books since she left Earth on March 22.

Another few days and astronaut Shannon Lucid will be able to enjoy all those things and more.

"It will be really good to get home," America's space-endurance champion said Friday from the linked shuttle Atlantis and Russian station Mir.

Astronaut Shannon Lucid, left, discusses her experience on the Russian space station Mir Friday in this image from television. Beside her is John Blaha, who will replace Lucid on Mir after her record-breaking six-month stay.

"What has she missed most during her record-breaking six months in orbit?"

"Obviously I better say my family, because they would feel really bad if they thought they came in second to some real goody desserts," the married mother of three said in a TV interview, her first since Atlantis docked with Mir late Wednesday to bring her home.

Her youngest child, Michael, 21, a college student, hasn't felt neglected. He said his mother has quizzed him regularly from orbit about his homework and eating habits.

"Oh, she nags," he said. "She nags."

Atlantis is supposed to undock from Mir on Monday and bring Lucid and the five other shuttle crew members back to Earth on Thursday, her 188th day in space. Astronaut John Blaha, her replacement aboard Mir, will stay behind with two Russian cosmonauts for four months.

Wearing a fresh, striped shirt — she ditched her blue cosmonaut uniform as soon as she became a shuttle crew member Thursday — the 53-year-old Lucid said she feels great, just as she did when she rocketed into orbit. No other woman, or American, has spent so long in space.

She continued her orbital exercises Friday, running on a treadmill. The Russians, experts at long spaceflight, insist on frequent, intense workouts to slow the inevitable muscle and bone deterioration in weightlessness.

When Lucid gets back on Earth, she will be weak and wobbly, and it will be months before her body readapts completely to gravity.

Unlike her predecessor, Dr. Norman Thagard, the first American to live on Mir, Lucid said she did not lose much, if any, weight in orbit. She said that's unfortunate; she's a solid 5-foot-9 and 150 pounds.

While she enjoyed the Russian space food, especially the canned meat and potatoes, there were times she craved candy, potato chips and other junk food.

She has kept clean, so to speak, with sponge baths and gel shampoo that's worked into the hair and then wiped off with a towel. (She started pulling her hair back, tight, months ago.) The 10-year-old space station used to have a shower, but cosmonauts converted it into a sauna long ago; it's now used for storage. There is no shower on the shuttle, either.

As for her clothes, she simply threw them away when they got dirty.

Her Mir stay turned out to be 14 months longer than planned because of booster rocket problems and hurricanes that kept Atlantis grounded. She said she knew she'd get home sooner or later but admitted that after the first launch was scrubbed, "I never did start counting the days down again."

A voracious reader with a Ph.D. in biochemistry, Lucid said she never got bored because of her books. (Her favorite subject is American frontier history.) She can't wait to hit the bookstores once she's back home in Houston to check out the latest titles.

Her advice to Mir's new astronaut Blaha? "Just enjoy every day as it comes."

Beneficiaries of ATM glitch must return cash

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Remember the Monopoly game card that read, "Bank error in your favor, collect $200?"

It really happened here, in the city that inspired the board game.

An automated teller machine in a casino began spitting out $100 bills instead of $20s.

But authorities warned that those who keep the money might need a "Get out of jail free" card.

The PNC Bank machine at The Grand mistakenly surrendered an estimated $85,000 over several hours Thursday night and Friday morning.

Casino employees were among those cashing in. Hotel security finally shut down the machine.

How many people withdrew money and how the mistake occurred were not immediately known. But the machine will be able to provide a list of the people who got cash.

Stripper who spurred Monaco royal divorce bares all

PARIS (AP) — The romp that prompted a royal divorce suit was no set-up, according to the stripper caught on film with the husband of Princess Stephanie of Monaco.

Fili Houteman, the reigning Miss Nude Belgium, said she believes Daniel Ducruet loved her, but their tender, passionate relationship turned bitter when the scandal broke.

Photographs of the August tryst were splashed across European newspapers and magazines, sending Stephanie to her lawyer to seek a divorce, expected within five weeks.

Ms. Houteman, interviewed for the French television show "Tout Est Possible" (Anything Is Possible), denied a suggestion by the angry Ducruet that she set him up.

The two, who first met at an auto race for three days, got together again at his prompting at her friend's villa on the Cote d'Azur, she said, adding they were always surrounded by Ducruet's bodyguards.

Jean-Marc Morandini, the show's star, said Ms. Houteman took no money for the 90-minute interview in a Paris hotel. Excerpts were shown Thursday night from the interview earlier this week.

When the photos appeared, Ducruet called and demanded "Are you happy with what you did?" she said.

"I saw another side of his personality... violent, egotistical. He thought only of saving his situation," she said. "I think he was lost, ready to do anything to save himself."

Before that, Ducruet, 32, was a tender, attentive man, Ms. Houteman said, "a big child, in fact."

Asked if he loved her, she replied, "I think so, yes."

Ms. Houteman said she thought Ducruet saw her as an "escape hatch" to duck the constraints of royal life in the Riviera principality.

Ducruet, a former fishmonger, only grudgingly accepted by his royal in-laws, married Stephanie, 31, in July 1995 after the birth of their two children, Louis and Pauline.

Teacher uses CPR to revive 20 ducklings

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Ken Hurst doesn't mind a little mouth-to-beak contact — especially if it saves lives.

The fourth-grade teacher at Art City Elementary School revived 20 ducklings, who apparently stopped breathing after a downpour hit his Provo farm last week.

Hurst had feared the two-week-old Chinese Muscovies had drowned.

"They were lying all over their legs curled up just like they were dead, but they weren't breathing," Hurst said.

Disinayed, Hurst gathered the rare ducklings in a bucket and carried them from his "hobby farm" into his home.

Upon further examination, he noticed a spark of life in the eyes of one duckling. He gently pulled open its beak and blew four puffs of air into its tiny lungs. The duck stirred.

Encouraged, he tried repeating the process on the other ducklings.

Lois and Clark will finally tie the knot

NEW YORK (AP) — After near 60 years of on-again dating, Lois Lane and Clark Kent — alias Superman — are getting married next month.

The super-wedding will follow a reconciliation between Superman and Miss Lane, who began dating during the FBI administration (currently, Action Comics No. 1, in 1938). Tired of playing second fiddle to Superman's career, had dumped the Man of Steel back on Valentine's Day.

Wakefield in control as Boston beats Yanks 4-2

NEW YORK — Tim Wakefield pitched eight effective innings and the Boston Red Sox beat the AL East-leading New York Yankees 4-2 Friday night, tightening the wild-card race with their fifth straight victory. Despite the loss, the Yankees' magic number for clinching their first division title since 1961 was cut to six by Baltimore's 5-1 loss to Toronto. The Red Sox scored within three games of the Orioles for the wild-card spot. Boston, which had lost seven in a row at Yankee Stadium, tied it with two runs in the sixth against Dwight Gooden. The Red Sox then scored twice in the seventh, helped by shortstop Derek Jeter's throwing error.

Yankee shortstop Derek Jeter goes flying as Boston's John Valentin breaks up a double play, allowing two runs to score, in the seventh inning Friday. Valentin was injured on the play and left the game, which the Red Sox won 4-2.

Blue Jays 5, Orioles 1
BALTIMORE — Pat Hentgen shut out Baltimore for eight innings as the Toronto Blue Jays slowed the Orioles' push to the playoffs with a 5-1 victory.

The Orioles have lost three of four following a 5-1 streak. Baltimore remained four games behind the New York Yankees in the AL East and 11 games in front of Oakland in the wild-card race, pending the Mariners' Friday night game with Oakland. Boston won 4-2 at New York.

White Sox 7, Twins 3
CHICAGO — Frank Thomas hit his ninth homer in his last 10 games, a grand slam, to lead the Chicago White Sox to a 7-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Chicago began the night three games behind Baltimore in the bid for the AL wild-card spot and 1 1/2 behind Seattle. The White Sox, who won their second straight following a four-game losing streak, have seven games remaining.

Mariners 12, Athletics 2
SEATTLE — Ken Griffey Jr. hit his career-high 45th home run Friday night as the Seattle Mariners kept pressure on Texas in the AL West with their ninth straight win, 12-2 over the Oakland Athletics.

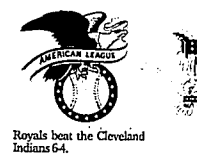

The Mariners moved within one game of the first-place Rangers, who blew a lead in the 10th inning for a 6-5 loss at California. Seattle, which trailed by nine games on Sept. 11, also exacted within one game of Baltimore in the wild-card race.

Angels 6, Rangers 5
ANAHEIM, Calif. — Texas blew it again.

The Rangers' lead in the AL West dropped to one game when Garret Anderson hit a two-run double off Mike Stanton in the 10th inning Friday night, giving the California Angels a 6-5 victory.

Texas, in search of its first postseason appearance, led the division by nine games on Sept. 11, but has lost five straight and nine of 10.

Royals 6, Indians 4
CLEVELAND — Rookie Brian Devito got his first big-league victory and handed Charles Nagy his first loss since Aug. 10 as the Kansas City in the eighth inning as the Atlanta Braves cut their magic number to four with a victory over the Montreal Expos. Atlanta, closing in on its fifth straight postseason appearance, has a six-game lead over Montreal in the NL East. The Expos dropped one game behind San Diego in the ML wild-card race.

Royals beat the Cleveland Indians 6-4.

Tigers 10, Brewers 1
MILWAUKEE — Melvin Nieves hit a three-run homer and Travis Fryman drove in three runs as the Detroit Tigers snuffed a season-high 12-game losing streak with a 10-1 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Padres 4, Dodgers 2
SAN DIEGO — Steve Finley homered twice off knuckleballer Tom Candiello and Ken Caminiti tied a Padres team record with his 38th home run as San Diego won 4-2 Friday night and pulled back within one-half game of first-place Los Angeles.

The Padres' win, before a sellout crowd of 51,217, evaded the four-game NL West showdown at one game wide and gave San Diego a one-game losing streak in the NL wild-card race. The Dodgers won Thursday's opener 7-0.

Giants 6, Rockies 2
SAN FRANCISCO — Barry Bonds hit his 42nd home run, one he hit off the Giants, as San Francisco beat Colorado 6-2 to all but officially eliminate the Rockies from the NL wild-card race.

Bonds, Rick Wilkins and Glennell Hill all homered off Mark Thompson (8-11) as the Rockies fell 7 games behind wild-card leader San Diego with seven to play.

Jordan's birdies lift him to B.C. lead

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) - With all the attention Tiger Woods...

With only a smattering of fans watching, Jordan shot a 7-under-par 64 on Friday...

"I've been struggling lately. I'm just trying to play solid and not do anything crazy."

"I shot 5-under and moved up the leader board. I'm in good position and that's all I can hope for."

Jordan, who has made the cut in only nine of 24 tournaments this year...

and made a 30-footer on No. 10 to move past Clear and Funk.

"Today was a different round. I really played well. Yesterday, I kind of scrapped around."

"This is a course where you have to keep it straight off the tee and that favors my game."

"I was ready to go when the delay came. So I ran down to the range to try to warm up again."

"I was lucky. I could have been two or three over real quick but I managed to play them even."

Patrick Burke was four back after a 67, while Australia's Craig Parry (67), Sam Randalph (65), Hugh Royce (66) and Jeff Summitan (67) followed at 136.

Pete Jordan just missed a birdie on hole 17 Friday during the second round of the B.C. Open. But he earlier sank five straight birdies to propel him into the lead.

Americans jump out to 5-3 lead in Solheim

CHEPSTOW, Wales (AP) - Beating Laura Davies, the top-ranked player in the world, is such always such a good idea, isn't it? The Americans learned in escaping with a 5-3 lead over Europe Friday in the opening day of the Solheim Cup.

"Obviously, we made Laura mad," American captain Judy Rankin said.

"Bad idea to stir up the biggest hater in women's golf," Davies and partner Alison Nicholas lost their morning foursomes (alternate shot) match 1 up to Americans Patty Sheehan and Rosie Jones.

The Americans are trying to retain the match-play Solheim Cup, the last of the four major international golf trophies held by the United States.

"We were having a very quiet lunch, all disappointed," Davies said. "Then (European player) Kathryn Marshall came in, put on a tape with loud music and all of a sudden the mood changed."

The big-hitting Briton, teaming with Trish Johnson in the first afternoon better ball match, had seven birdies in the first 13 holes to annihilate Americans Kelly Robbins and Pat Bradley 6 and 5.

"I don't think pure and simple the putting was the difference: I made a good one on the second and a good one on the third and I was up and running," Davies said. "I sure wanted to make up for the morning."

"I don't think any option that I might have had would have beaten Laura this afternoon," Rankin said. "Trish played well, but I'm not sure Laura wouldn't have won the match."

European pairs were also leading and threatening to undo the Americans' near-sweep in the morning.

"Absolutely, we saw the scores and knew we were down all around," said Dottie Pepper, the steady-eyed veteran whose play was pivotal in keeping the Americans afloat.

Pepper, playing in better ball with Bessy King, birdied the 11th to draw the pair even with the Swedish partnership of Liselotte Neumann and Cathrin Nilsmark.

"Dottie is the toughest competitor you can ever face," King said. "She may not necessarily have the most skill or hit like Laura (Davies), but I have never seen her waste a shot."

"In the third better-ball match, Annika Sorenstam and Kathryn Marshall won 1 up over Americans Val Skirvin and Jane Geddes. The final better-ball was halved when Beth Daniel, paired with Meg Mallon, dropped a 12-foot birdie putt on the 18th to match a birdie by Sweden's Helen Alfredson, who was teaming with Alison Nicholas.

The Americans also came from behind in the near-sweep of the morning alternate-shot matches, with the only halve coming to Michelle McGann rookie Rikina, the McGann drew with Sorenstam and Nilsmark.

"We had our backs against the wall both times today early on," Rankin said. "I we can deal with the rest nine, we can do a lot better."

The American played all 12 team members Friday. Europe played 10 and under Solheim rules must play the other two, JoAnne Rodgers and Lisa Hackley in one match on Saturday. Saturday's format is the same as Friday's with 12 singles matches set to end the event on Sunday.

Offenses figure to dominate in Florida-Tennessee game

By Chris Dufresne, Los Angeles Times

College football

Florida (20) at Tennessee (20)

Kickoff: 1:30 p.m., CBS. Storyline: It's the Hatfield-McCree rivalry of college football's an-golfing pals Philip Fulmer (Tennessee) and Steve Spurrier (Florida) lead their teams into a fray that has national championship, Heisman Trophy and bragging rights implications.

Florida Update: The Cougars under former Heisman Trophy winner coach Kim Helton are off to their best start since 1990. Senior quarterback Chuck Clements is for real, with nine touchdown passes and two interceptions.

Tennessee Update: After blowing out UNLV in the first round, 53-23, the Volunteers got a tougher-than-expected test against UCLA on Sept. 7, winning, 35-20. Manning could start in the NFL this season, but last yet to beat Florida. No one will be more motivated than the running back Jay Graham, whose fumbles on consecutive possessions last year allowed Florida to turn a 30-28, third-quarter deficit into a 10-3 lead.

Edge to Florida: Much as he might be despised, Spurrier is a great game coach whose eye lives for these kinds of moments. The Line: Tennessee by 3.

College football

Nebraska (10) at Arizona State (20)

Kickoff: 8:15 p.m., Prime Sports. Storyline: The Sun Devils crave respect after last year's 77-28 loss in Lincoln in a game that was 63-0 at the half.

Nebraska Update: The Cornhuskers won their 26th consecutive game by mashing Michigan State, 55-14, two weeks ago. It was dominated by Nebraska's defense and special teams. Highly touted transfer quarterback Scott Frost quietly threw for one touchdown and ran for another.

Arizona State Update: The Sun Devils won a squeaker at Washington in their opener and then routed North Texas, 52-7. Edge to Nebraska: Big edge. You might even want to throw in home field advantage, given the Cornhuskers won their second national championship last January at Sun Devil Stadium.

Florida Tech (20) at North Carolina (20) Kickoff: 1:30 p.m., pay-per-view on some cable systems. Storyline: Who would have thought? An important Atlantic Coast Conference game not involving Florida State or Virginia.

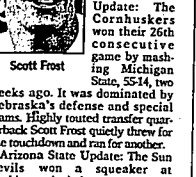

North Carolina Update: The story so far has been quarterback Chris Kiskadd, a junior college transfer. Syracuse gave Tar Heels the confidence they could beat anybody. Good thing, because next week they get Florida State.

Notre Dame (20) at Texas (20) Kickoff: 10 a.m., pay-per-view. Storyline: This is updated only by Florida at Tennessee this weekend, as Texas tries to avenge last year's 55-27 loss in South Bend, Ind.

Notre Dame Update: The Longhorns are rested and untested, with two wins since Aug. 31, over rollers Missouri (40-10) and New Mexico State (41-7).

Washington (1-1), 7:30 p.m. Sacramento State (0-2) at UC Davis (0-1), 8 p.m. Nebraska (1-0) at Arizona State (2-0), 8:15 p.m. Oklahoma State (1-1) at San Diego State (1-1), 8:30 p.m. Boise State (1-2) at Hawaii (0-3), 11 a.m. coordinator Bill Oliver to run his defense as the Tigers posted shutouts in their first two games. But the defense was a relative sieve in last week's 45-28 win over Mississippi.

Scott Frost

Louisiana State (10) at Auburn (20) Kickoff: 5:30 p.m., ESPN. Storyline: This has been a great series, especially since 1988, as five of the six games have been decided by six points or fewer.

LSU Update: The Tigers, highly touted coming in, barely won their opener, 35-34, against Houston. Sophomore tailback Kevin Faulk, who had his suspension lifted, rushed for school record 246 yards in 21 carries.

Auburn Update: Terry Bowden looked like a genius workout Alumba Dennis Franchione. Washington beat BYU, 29-17, last week, largely because of the Huskies' ability to get to Sarkisian. They sacked him eight times and had him on the run much of the game.

BYU has hurt us because sometimes the quarterback gets to stand back too long," Franchione said. "A four-man rush is sane, but it gives them a lot of time."

New Mexico has traditionally had trouble stopping BYU's offense, but the Lobos' have come close to outscoring the Cougars in recent years. New Mexico lost 34-31 in Albuquerque in 1993, when a game-winning field goal late in the game was ruled wide by the officials. The next season, BYU held on for a 49-47 win, despite a school record six touchdown passes from New Mexico quarterback Stoney Case.

Those near-misses and New Mexico's three wins this season have given the Lobos a measure of confidence heading to Provo, said Franchione. "We may go lay on an egg Saturday, but it won't be from lack of confidence," he said.

Unbeaten New Mexico prepares to tackle BYU

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) - With four interceptions in the first three games of the season, New Mexico's secondary already has exceeded its total for the entire 1995 season. It's a sure bet the Lobos will get plenty of chances Saturday to build on that number.

Unbeaten New Mexico (3-0) opens Western Athletic Conference play at Provo against Brigham Young, which has won the past 25 years but has been as successful at beating the Lobos as it has at throwing touchdown passes.

BYU (2-1) has won 15 straight against New Mexico and 23 of the last 24 games. New Mexico's only win in the past 24 years came in the 1980 season opener (25-21) and the Lobos haven't won in Provo since 1971.

If BYU quarterback Steve Sarkisian is on target, chances are good BYU's dominance will continue.

Sarkisian, the latest in the long line of pass-att'nd BYU quarterbacks, has proven he can hurt any defense. He threw six touchdown passes and for 536 yards in the Cougars' season-opening 41-37 win over Texas A&M. He has 12 TD passes and is third nationally in total offense with 394.3 yards a game.

Senior tight end Trala Mili (6-foot-4, 260 pounds) and Chad Lewis (6-8, 250) provide a pair of offensive linemen for Sarkisian. Mili is the nation's leader among tight ends with 16 catches.

New Mexico held Central Florida to 114 total yards last week in a 17-7 win, but the Lobos' defense was out of sync, and better to slow down Sarkisian, who has already thrown 103 passes and completed 72 of them.

"He hit 17 in a row against A&M," said New Mexico coach

Much-hyped Irish-Longhorns matchup has major implications

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - National championship dreams, winning and losing streaks, tradition, pride and possibly even Heisman hopes will be on the line Saturday when No. 6 Texas takes on No. 9 Notre Dame.

It's the biggest regular-season game at Texas in more than a decade, with tickets for the sellout being scaled for as much as $500. Authorities have warned locals not interested in the game to steer clear of campus and downtown before kickoff and after the game.

The 10th meeting of Texas (20) and Notre Dame (24) could rival classic matchups of the past: Darrell Royal versus Ara Parseghian in the 1970 and 1971 Cotton Bowls, and Eric Campbell against Joe Montana in the 1978 Cotton Bowl.

Texas won the 1970 matchup to clinch the 1969 national title. Notre Dame, which leads the series 7-2, toppled Texas from No. 1 with victories in the other two games.

"Usually, there are about 10 games a year that seem to have the most impact on what happens in the final rankings," Texas coach John Mackovic said. "Clearly this will be one of those games."

"The big game aura might be nothing new to Notre Dame, which is a 3-point favorite. But it is to Texas, which is trying to overcome a decade of decline and is in the Top 10 for only the third time in the past 12 years."

Texas did its fair share of fables in so-called big games before last year, when it beat Virginia on a last-second field goal and then knocked off Texas A&M in College Station. But the Longhorns lost to Virginia Tech in the Sugar Bowl and have a 1-6-1 mark against Top 10 opponents since 1990. "Some players say Texas still has to show it can win a big one... We need to prove to ourselves that we can beat a team like Notre Dame," said quarterback James Brown, who is 15-21 as a starter. "If we win, they'll put us on a pedestal." Texas cornerback Bryant Westbrook said, "If we lose, they'll say, 'Texas can't win the big games.'"

For the Fighting Irish, Texas represents the beginning of a three-game stretch that will busy or kill their national title hopes.

Push the envelope for growth

It wasn't that my first semester at college was a total waste academically. My roommate, Dave, and I learned a lot together. For example:

- we learned that if you're really careful, you can squirt an entire can of shaving cream into a large balloon and that one such balloon accurately dropped from a fifth-floor window is sufficient to cover a 1968 Volkswagen Beetle.

VALUESPEAK
Joseph Walker

...we learned that it takes two seconds for heavily amplified sound to travel a quarter of a mile (we conducted this experiment ourselves, using Dave's stereo, four speakers facing out our dorm window toward campus and the long stream from "Won't Get Fooled Again" by The Who; two seconds after we cranked it up, heads started turning on campus).

Unfortunately, I didn't take physics that semester, so I didn't get any research credit. Which is consistent, I guess, because I didn't get much credit in any of the classes I did take. Not that I wanted to fail. I studied - when there wasn't anything else to do. When I showed Dad my first collegiate grades, I expected a flash of anger and frustration.

He was, after all, footing the bill for what appeared to be a fairly bogus educational adventure.

"Dad, let me explain..." I said, opening a speech I had been practicing for days.

He held up a hand. "You don't need to explain anything," he said, calmly. "I know that the first semester of college can be tough. I just wasn't expecting it to be this tough."

I could see the disappointment in his eyes - eyes that had been filled with pride at every high school accomplishment and success.

"The thing that concerns me most," he said, "is the fact that you didn't even try. These grades don't tell me that you're not smart enough to succeed in college. They tell me that you didn't put forth any effort. And if you don't learn anything else from your first semester, you're going to be in a thing is worth doing at all, it's worth giving it your best effort. Anything less than that is a waste."

With that, he tossed my grade report in the garbage. He started to leave, then he turned to face me once more.

"You've got one semester to see what you can do when you really try," he said. "Aren't you curious to know how far your best effort can take you?"

As it turned out, I was. I didn't become a Rhodes Scholar, but I tried harder, and my grades improved. And every once in a while, I attacked a project with my whole heart and soul, and I found out that my best effort was usually pretty good, if I do say so myself.

Of course, I'm no different than anyone else that way.

Many of us try to cruise through life, expending only as much energy as needed to keep ourselves afloat. Only occasionally, when circumstances absolutely require our best effort, do we achieve the level of excellence of which we are capable.

We amaze ourselves with what we are able to accomplish when we really try. And then we slip back into calm waters and resume floating.

Life saves its greatest rewards for those who have the courage to escape the comfort zone.

They aren't necessarily more talented or more capable. They're just learned how to harness the best that is within them.

They refuse to settle for "adequate" when they are capable in "superb." And they understand that the only thing that's good half-done is a steak.

At least, that's what Dad used to say. And he was right.

"Do Your Best" isn't just a good motto for Scouts; it's a powerful philosophy for living. If you're going to do it, do your best. That doesn't mean you have to be the best there is - just the best you can be.

Even if that eliminates a few shaving cream balloon bombers.

CROP Walk

Volunteers plant seeds of giving in annual event

TWIN FALLS - Lee Lampe understands what it's like to be down on her luck, and then to have a helping hand extended to get her back on her feet.

Lampe was, at one time, living in her car, not knowing what to do or where to go. Since that time, she has become completely and joyfully self-sustaining, and one of the first to give support to others.

"I feel that, to help somebody, it is best to teach them to help themselves, and I'm willing to lend a hand," she said. "I've been there - and all I needed to turn my life around was that one good deed."

It is through Our Savior Lutheran Church that Lampe was introduced to the CROP Walk. She joined the international "walk for hunger" program as a volunteer.

"I really like what the organization does," she said. "They not only bring in food and medicine, but then they come back after the fact and teach them how to dig a well - so they won't drink contaminated water."

CROP (Christian Rural Overseas Program) provides funding for programs both at home and overseas, with walks taking place around the globe.

"Their business is to provide food for hunger around the world," explained Our Savior Lutheran

Walk set

The CROP Walk in Twin Falls will begin at 10 a.m. Sept. 28 at the CSI Armory. Refreshments will be served before, during and after the walk. Pledge sheets are available at St. Edward's Catholic Church and Parish, Twin Falls; United Methodist Church, Twin Falls; Presbyterian Church, Twin Falls; Lutheran Church, Episcopal Church of the Ascension, Valley Christian Church or by contacting Dan Gleba at Our Savior Lutheran Church, 733-3774. The CROP Walk in Burley will be held at 10 a.m. Sept. 28 at Fireman Park. Refreshments will be served after the walk, which will end at Emerald Lake Park. The walk is being sponsored by First Lutheran Church, Burley; First Christian Church, Rupert; United Methodist Church, LDS Sassa County stakes, LDS Minidoka County stakes, Rupert; First Baptist Church, Rupert; First Baptist Church, Christian Center Assembly of God and Mini-Cassia Episcopal Churches. Billy Graham still carries gospel Says he'll continue preaching until God stops him

Knight-Ridder News Service

MONTREAT, N.C. - Billy Graham's features endure, a miracle of regularity; that determined jaw, frank brow. Then those eyes, all these years with that same pale, steady fire. And the voice: unrelenting, persuasive.

The Lord's top salesman, going into his pitch, opening his case, and laying out... everlasting rock. Living water. Eternal life. A new heaven.

"I'm going to ask you to do something tonight..." he's told the multitudes gathered before him in the vast coliseums of the world.

Graham will be holding another crusade, Sept. 26-29 in his hometown, Charlotte, N.C. Some wonder if it will be his last. He's 77, fragile these days, living with Parkinson's. Graham says he will preach until God retires him.

"If you want, Christ tonight," he tells the multitudes, "you get up and come."

Yes, he got his start as a Fuller Broth man, right out of high school. Then he answered the call to preach. Started on street corners and bars in Charlotte and Tampa, Fla. Practically a lifetime ago.

His son Franklin, also an evangelist, is poised to take over the leadership of his vast ministerial empire, the Billy Graham Evangelical Association.

But there will never be another Billy Graham, never another such an author and product of this particular atomic, plastic, miraculous, shattering age. Never another with Billy Graham's own particular mix of ambition and humility, conservation and wonder. Prophecy and caution.

In Montreat, the road winds up to his place atop Little Piney Mountain in a series of hairpin turns. Trumpet vines, small pines, rhododendron raking close on one side, gorges plunging down on the other. Security fences. A stone gate. Motes of sunlight. Then his modest yet lordly place, a log house, with 150 acres and a view of the hazy Blue Ridge. A Turbed Yamada.

His doctor told him not to see anybody, Graham says, but he agreed to anyway. Still, stepping out the door of his house to face a group of reporters, mostly from Carolina papers and television stations, eager for news of him, he seems surprised, as he often seems surprised by attention.

"As a matter of fact I'd forgotten. I had it in my mind it was to be Thursday," he faltered gently on this still morning, a Thursday.

The demand for news of Billy Graham has been pent up because he's been sick and his wife, Ruth, has been sick. So Graham, obliging, settled into a wooden chair, beneath the gaudy wisteria, worn Bible in brown hand, the shadows playing on his face.

American history has been made by a long string of famous preachers, from Puritan Cotton Mather to fiery Aimee Semple McPherson, from demagogue Father Charles Coughlin to impassioned Martin Luther King Jr.

They've managed to define and embody the spirit of their

Clergy survey reveals view on ecology

The Times-News

The Partnership for Spirituality and Environment in Idaho has completed a survey of Southwest Idaho clergy regarding their views on ecology. Ninety percent of clergy respondents considered working to maintain and improve the health of the natural environment a requirement of their faith.

The partnership, a group of citizens studying the relationship between Judaeo-Christian spirituality and environmental philosophy in order to understand sources of conflict and grounds for cooperation, sent out 200 surveys and received 31 back. Faiths represented include Methodist, Episcopal, Presbyterian, Church of Christ, Mennonite, Roman Catholic, Mormon, Unitarian, Baptist, Assembly of God and Nazarene. Some respondents reside in the Twin Falls area.

Other findings:

- The most common choice of "optimum relationship between humankind and the earth" was "Humankind as Steward (Guide and Protector)." Nineteen percent felt there was equality between humankind and the earth.

- Preaching and prayer were the most common ways clergy used to express ecological values to the members of their faith. Some used newsletters and projects.

- Of specific ecological activities carried out by clergy, 60 percent cited recycling, 50 percent cited conscientious purchasing, 50 percent cited theological study of the issue and 35 percent cited water saving. Only 16 percent cited outreach to activist groups.

- Only 13 percent of clergy respondents felt "completely positive" about the activities of local environmental organizations. Twenty-three percent cited strongly negative feelings. One

Bits and pieces from the world of religion

By Tom Schaefer
Knight-Ridder News Service

Seventh-day Adventists, who believe in the imminent return of Jesus Christ and observe Saturday as the Sabbath, have a little bit on their hands.

The book "God's Answers to Your Questions," which many Adventists distribute door to door, still contains references to the papacy as the beast, an ally of Satan, mentioned in the Book of Revelation. According to an Associated Press story, Catholics and others are upset about the book and its linking of the office of the pope to the devil.

Actually, the linkage goes back at least to the 16th century when Martin Luther and other Protestant reformers blasted the papacy of Leo X. (At one point, Luther offered this as a "blessing" for his followers: "May the Lord fill you with his blessing and with hatred against the pope.")

But like other biblical stories that were "blessed" by various churches in the past—slavery and subordination of women, for example—writings can be righted. For example, at last year's meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention, those attending repented of their congregations' racist past. Two years ago, leaders of the largest Lutheran Church in America repudiated anti-Semitic statements of its founder.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Former church treasurer charged with larceny

CHESTER, Conn.— The former New England treasurer of the Evangelical Lutheran Church was arrested Thursday on charges he embezzled $800,000 and used some of it to pay his son's college tuition and keep two vacation homes.

George A. Patrick, treasurer from 1983 until December, was charged with larceny and money laundering and could get up to 30 years in prison.

Patrick, 55, resigned when auditors found money was missing at the church's New England Synod, which has 77,000 members in 200 congregations.

Prosecutors said the money went toward such things as tuition for his two sons at Yale University and Boston College, upkeep of homes in Cape Cod and Vermont, mortgage payments and $100,000 in credit card expenses.

The Evangelical Lutheran Church is a separate denomination from the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

In July, the former national treasurer of the Episcopal Church, Elton Cook, was sentenced to five years in prison for embezzling $1.5 million.

Scandal uncovered after Catholic bishop resigns

LONDON— A Roman Catholic bishop in Scotland who abruptly resigned after disappearing with a woman parishioner has a 15-year-old son by another woman, church officials said Thursday.

They confirmed Joanna Whibley's claim that the Most Rev. Roderick Wright, who was the bishop of Argyll and the Isles, was the father of her son, Kevin, born in 1981.

Miss Whibley said she had expected Wright, 56, to live with her and her son after his resignation, and she was unaware that Wright was apparently involved with another woman.

Wright returned home Monday after dropping from sight for a week, offered his resignation and apologized to his family, fellow clerics and the family of Kathleen Macphie, whom he had been counseling following her divorce.

Kevin Whibley said he has seen his father for about a total of two months during his life. Miss Whibley said she went public partly to help other women involved with priests.

"I would not want this trivialized, this publicized story. I would want it to serve some purpose," she said. "I am quite sure there are other women in relationships with priests who would want to end the secret lives."

Church of Wales votes to ordain women

LAMPETER, Wales— The governing body of the Church of Wales voted Thursday to join other Anglican churches in ordaining women as priests. The first ordinations are expected next year.

Other Anglican bodies in the United Kingdom—the Church of England, the Church of Ireland and the Episcopal Church in Scotland—already have women priests.

Bishops and lay delegates voted overwhelmingly for the change, but clergymen mustered just one more vote than the required two-thirds majority in favor. Each of the three groups had to concur in the change.

About 80 women deacons in Wales, some of them already in charge of parish churches, are eligible to be ordained as priests.

The Anglican Communion, which claims 80 million members worldwide, estimates that it has 3,000 women priests. Some of them are in the American Episcopal church.

ing prepared for the walk next Saturday by gathering contributions and keeping a good attitude.

"Last year was the first year I did it," said Bethany. "I do it because it's a good cause."

Bethany said it was a tough 6.1 miles last year, in part because the walkers are in full view of the Twin Falls 1st Ward chapel on Elizabeth Boulevard and it's kind of hard at first because it's so hot.

And if it rains? "If everyone else does it, I will," Bethany said. Bethany has been a volunteer at St. Edward's Soup Kitchen, and she said she feels the need to provide food for people who really need it. "You can help prepare, serve, clean up, set up tables or go around asking if they want more coffee or water—it was a really good experience," she said.

The other local charity receiving proceeds from the walk is the Neighbors in Need, an outreach of the Episcopal Church of the Ascension in Twin Falls.

Neighbors in Need provides financial assistance upon request and education for people who need to learn more about budgeting. It also keeps a pantry stocked with canned and boxed staples like milk, frozen foods and no-cook items in easy-open containers for transient families.

Program volunteers shared one success story about a local woman who moved to Twin Falls and that her new residence did not include water charges in the rent. Since she is on a fixed income, community food sources, such as food boxes from Neighbors in Need, help her stretch her limited budget to pay the water bill.

Graham

times, to change hearts, to change minds. Some have been saints and some charlatans, some have done more harm than good.

In this age of televangelism, of howie ministers yielding to the temptations of sex and money and going down in flames, Billy Graham, the best-known of them all, is faithful to his wife and keeps his account books clean.

Graham's conservative roots and his vast and skillful organization "laid the groundwork for the religious right," said William Martin, a Rice University religion and public-policy professor.

But Graham "could not be considered a legitimate part of the religious right today."

No, the movement has hardened, and Billy Graham has softened.

He's dressed in blue jeans and a worn denim jacket (given to him, he mentions with a quiet thrill, 20 years ago by singer Johnny Cash). He seems frazier, gaunter. Yet unchanged. His hair is now nearly male, thinning in suits and female staff in modest dresses, with stoneware pitchers of ice water and orange juice for his guests.

Graham speaks of his plans for his new crusades—next year, in San Antonio, San Francisco, San Jose and Oakland in California, and his health, which is good some days and bad on others. He speaks of his disease.

"I think God sent it to me at this age to show me I am totally dependent on him. And when I go into the pulpit to preach—I have to have a little help—but when I get there, I can sense the presence and the power of the Lord."

He speaks of his memoirs, which are being sent to his publisher. Of his hope for the future and Jesus' return.

"He'll rule and reign, and it will be an era of flawless and wonderful peace."

Sitting, stilling outside his house, Graham obliges those waiting to bring his words to the world. He speaks of drug abuse and sin. Of a hell that is real, and man's "rebellion against God." The preaching of his once-rebellious son Franklin, the ministry of his daughter Anne.

The work of his son Ned, "doing great work for God in China... He's made friends with the leadership of China."

In this tobacco state, in this election year, Graham said he keeps there are questions about the ethics of tobacco, new federal efforts to restrict tobacco marketing to young people.

But he said he doesn't dare to talk about them.

"There was an evangelist who came from Winston-Salem (N.C.) many years ago," he explains, when pressed. "He went in a tobacco warehouse for his meetings, and the first sermon was against the use of tobacco. His meeting closed in three or four days... The apostle Paul skirted some political issues, when he went to places like Rome... I've learned from the Scriptures... we have to be very diplomatic. We have to be all things to all men."

Of course, this is how he has maintained relationships with the last 10 presidents. How he stays friends with both Bill Clinton and Bob Dole and enters neither.

Of course, no one forgets the times Billy Graham has spoken out. His courageous moments, especially the way he denounced segregation back in the days of the Jim Crow South.

But there are people who will never forgive Graham for his silence on issues such as Vietnam. They say he opted for safety over prophesy.

"He's the most successful evangelist in Christian history." Some people might mention the Apostle Paul. But as Martin points out: "Paul just didn't have the numbers."

No, Paul couldn't begin to match the estimated 210 million people who have sat before Billy Graham in live audiences in more than 185 countries and territories.

Paul, in and out of Roman prisons for his preaching, was probably beheaded.

Those were different times, and he was no Billy Graham.

Emotional journey takes gospel far from Magic Valley churches

CHELIVABINSK, RUSSIA— Silver streaks of lightning split the dark sky overhead with instant and ear-splitting crashes of thunder that rumbled off in the distance, only to be followed by more bolts of lightning and thunder.

Into this setting we stepped, and as we left the trolley and started running at top speed toward the orphanage, located about 3/4 of a mile away. We were hoping to reach our destination before the torrent of rain started.

Reaching the tall building that housed Orphanage #2, we breathlessly pulled the heavy wood door open. Immediately we knew something was wrong.

The chair where the key lady always sat was empty. No little boys carrying heavy pots of hot water for tea.

The stairwells were silent, much different than the lively chatter and happy laughter we had experienced every time we came last year.

Determined to find somebody, we groped our way down the long and dark hallway that we knew led to the large dining hall where we had held classes with restored order. Everybody returned to their stools and asked for their favorite Bible stories—Jesus asking the children be brought to him, the Good Shepherd finding the lost sheep.

We even sang the chorus to "Jesus Loves Me, This I Know" (the only song we know in the Russian language).

Next came the giving of the gifts we had brought from people in the Magic Valley.

As little hands reached out for a toy, a pencil, a marker, a balloon or a ball, we couldn't help but know that folks from Twin Falls, Filer, Eden, and Jerome had reached halfway around the world and touched the life of a little child who needed to know somebody really cared.

During 1994 and 1995, H.R. Weixel of Jerome, along with her husband, the Rev. Erloy Weixel, served on a mission team in Russia and shared her experiences in a Times-News column. Earlier this month, the Weixels returned to the mission site for a short visit. H.R. Weixel is a Jerome County commissioner.

Survey

Twin Falls County clergyperson equated Earth Day with worshiping.

One-third of clergy respondents were not aware of discussions within religious organizations regarding the relationship between spirituality and environmental practice, but 70 percent said they would be interested in hearing more.

Partnership team members plan to include the survey results in a larger report at the end of the year. They will also seek to foster dialogues on the issue.

Matthew Shapiro of Boise heads up the partnership team. For more information on the group, call Shapiro at 384-9961.

Group works to turn synagogue into cultural center

BOSTON (AP) - The Beacon Hill Branch of the B'nai B'rith Cohens threw up had nothing to do with the shaded abodes of Louisbourg Square or the grand townhouses facing Boston Common.

Cohen lived on the other side of Beacon Hill, the north slope, where Jewish immigrants crowded into cold-water flats that overlooked still more immigrants in the doomed West End.

Here was a neighborhood of factory workers, shoemakers, tailors and grocers, as lively as it was poor.

"I thought I was rich," said Cohen, now 91. "I had enough to eat."

The reminders of that time are almost all gone now - all except the Vilna Shul, the synagogue where Cohen worshipped, one of dozens built in Boston by newcomers from Eastern Europe, still stands, empty since its last aged member died in 1985.

Preservationists here are gearing up their campaign to restore the long-neglected building and rededicate it as a Jewish cultural center and museum.

On Phillips Street near the Freedom Trail and on the Black Heritage Trail, the Vilna Shul provides a unique vantage point to survey the lives of turn-of-the-century Jewish immigrants.

"Our history is here," said Deborah Bogin Cohen, who chairs the restoration effort for the Vilna Center for Jewish Heritage Inc. "What a marvelous place to tell the story."

Since buying the building for $250,000 last year, the Vilna Center has spent $200,000 to replace the leaky roof and skylights.

Now the group must raise $2.5 million more to refurbish the interior and endow the museum.

The Vilna Shul - a shul is a place for worship and study - was typical of the dozens of small neighborhood synagogues built in Boston during the great wave of Jewish immigration that began in the 1880s.

After establishing their congregation in 1893 in a private West End home, the shul's founders moved to an old Beacon Hill church in 1906.

The existing synagogue was completed in 1920.

Liberal religious leaders take shots at Christian Coalition

Dallas Morning News

A panel of mostly liberal religious leaders spent a couple hours on a recent weekend tossing the usual verbal grenades at the Christian Coalition, religious broadcaster Pat Robertson's political operation.

It's trying to create a theocracy, they said. It has corrupted the word "Christian" by pushing a conservative political agenda and disparaging liberals, they said. It's a slick political operation masquerading as a religious group, they said.

It's a 900-pound gorilla that no one will deal with, they said. The panelists spoke before about 200 newspaper, magazine and television journalists attending the annual Religious Newswriters Association meeting in Evanston, Ill. During the weekend, journalists and speakers talked about how religion and politics will intersect this campaign season.

The panelists included a lot of heavy hitters: Dr. Martin Marty, the country's foremost religion scholar; the Rev. Thomas Reese, senior fellow at the Woodstock Theological Center in Washington; Dr. Joan Brown Campbell, general secretary of the National Council of Churches; Dr. Scott

Dr. Martin Marty

Applyby, director of the Cushman Center for the Study of American Catholicism at the University of Notre Dame; David Neff, executive editor of "Christianity Today"; A. James Rudin, director of interreligious activities for the American Jewish Committee; and Barry Lynn, director of Americans United for Separation of Church and State.

Neither Robertson nor Ralph Reed, the Christian Coalition's executive director, was there to respond. They'd sent Maureen Roselli, executive director of the Catholic Alliance, formed last year by the Coalition to woo conservative Catholics.

She tried, but couldn't say much in defense of an organization she doesn't actually head.

Then the Rev. James Wall rose to speak. Wall, editor of the liberal journal Christian Century, quipped the squabblers.

"Who created the 900-pound gorilla?" he asked. "My people died. Between the 1960s, when we had the great peak of our influence, and into the 1980s, we became so secular, so partisan and so arrogant in our role as the chaplains to the political leadership establishment, that we created a spiritual void into which the gorilla grew. We became so much a part of the Democratic Party and the radical liberal camp that we had nothing left to say on our own."

In 1964, Wall said, he was the editor of a Methodist church magazine. That year, he ran side-by-side in his publication the platform of the Democratic Party and the Methodist Church convention platform.

They matched closely, and he was proud.

"I now confess that was arrogant and secular activity," he said.

Of course, today everything has changed.

Today no mainline Protestant leader makes the cover of Time, or Newsweek, or even Christian Century. But Ralph Reed has been on the cover of Time and Christian Century this summer.

Journalists aren't all interested in quoting mainline leaders. The clergy aren't good at sound bites, Wall said. Their answers are ambiguous and all-too-often boring, he said.

"The mainline churches have lost the battle," he said.

BOOK "Hope Again: When Life Hurts and Dreams Fade," by Charles R. Swindoll (Word, $19.99).

The latest book by the popular and prolific Swindoll also deals with understanding a godly plan amid suffering and frustration.

What humans must rely on is God's assured hope, which Swindoll says is a gift that is "essential to our survival."

He uses the teaching of the Apostle Peter, who urged persecuted Christians to stand firm in the faith, to provide biblical reasons for hope even when there isn't much else.

Swindoll provides lists, prayers, anecdotes and his own enthusiastic style. -Terry Kelly

MAGAZINE U.S. News & World Report (Sept. 9) - Has a cover story asking "Can Churches Save America?"

Senior writer Joseph P. Shapiro cites studies showing that church-run, spiritually based social programs work better than anything else going.

This includes programs dealing with everything from drug addiction to divorce prevention. But Shapiro wonders whether the welfare needs of the poor far exceed the resources of churches.

The eight-page package includes an article on Marvin Olasky, a journalism teacher at the University of Texas at Austin. Olasky, a Christian, is "arguably the nation's most influential thinker on charities."

Evangelical-oriented schools want teachers to show active faith

Dallas Morning News

ROCKWALL, Texas - Marci Clark found what she was looking for in education when she sent her kindergarten to a Christian school: the freedom for her child to embrace the Holy Gospel inside the classroom.

"The character of Christ is evident" in the school, said Clark, whose daughter, 7-year-old Jordan, is now a second-grader at Heritage Christian Academy in Rockwall.

Clark is one of a growing number of parents who are turning to evangelical-oriented Christian schools in an effort to provide children with Scripture-based curriculum and spiritual nurturing.

Roman Catholic and other private schools historically have had a strong and steady enrollment, education experts point out.

In addition, they say, the evangelical Christian schools have experienced a growth spurt in the past five to 10 years. The Association of Christian Schools International claims 3,114 member schools in the United States.

Integration of academics and religion is part of what is bringing more parents to Christian schools, said Gary Waller, associate professor of administration at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth. He cited three main reasons why parents choose such schools: dissatisfaction with public schools, high-quality education and spiritual growth.

"We major in the Lord Jesus Christ and minor in everything else," said Mike Partain, headmaster at Heritage.

Partain and other administrators in the Dallas-Fort Worth area agree that one of the most critical ingredients for carrying out such principles is the careful selection of teachers who reflect the schools' values.

Teachers are required to demonstrate that they are knowledgeable about the Bible, the administrators said. In addition, they are expected to live their faith in the classroom - and in all other aspects of their lives.

Fort Worth Christian School puts prospective teachers through an exhaustive interview process. So does Trinity Christian Academy in the Dallas suburb of Addison.

School officials say they conduct in-depth reference checks and scrutinize applications. What they're looking for in terms of morals, they say, is evidence of a solid religious background and an active faith. Trinity and Heritage require teachers to sign a commitment

Missouri millionaire opens nondenominational Christian school

The Associated Press

LA BELLE, Mo. - As the sole financier of a new Christian school in rural northeast Missouri, Charles Sharpe doesn't expect to turn a profit any time soon.

At $3 million price tag so far, $5 million within the next few months, $50 million over the next 10 years. On the income side, 29 students, some of whom can't afford the $100 monthly tuition.

But Sharpe, who made a fortune in the insurance business, figures he can afford it.

"We don't intend to make money - that's not the point," said Sharpe, 69. "This nation's in trouble, and we're trying to do something about it."

The new Heartland Community School opened recently amid the corn fields along a dusty gravel road in a remote area of Shelby County.

"We don't intend to make money - that's not the point. This nation's in trouble, and we're trying to do something about it."

- Charles Sharpe, school founder

The nondenominational school will initially serve students in grades 1-10. Eventually, according to plan, it will add kindergarten and grades 11 and 12, with possibly a college or junior college on the same campus.

Sharpe expects 500 students within a few years. Even then, he has studied enough ledger lines to know it won't be profitable.

Sharpe's motivation doesn't come from money. He has earned millions as president and chairman of the local Ozark National Life Insurance Co. He splits time between Kansas City, where the insurance company is based, and his 10,000-acre cattle ranch near La Belle, his hometown. A landing strip on the ranch allows Sharpe to fly there.

Until four years ago, Sharpe wasn't even a regular churchgoer. But after his wife renewed her faith, "I said I'm not going to let her get ahead of me," he said. "I gave my life to the Lord."

It's a ready fit because Sharpe, with his exaggerated drawl and shock of thick white hair, looks and sounds the part of a fundamentalist preacher. In fact, he is. Sharpe built a church on his cattle ranch, where he serves as head pastor. About 100 people attend each Sunday.

But perhaps a more serious commitment was Sharpe's decision to spend some of his millions to help rehabilitate drug users, alcoholics and criminals in the very rural, mostly poor area around La Belle.

Such people make up about a third of the 60 workers at Sharpe's cattle ranch. Sharpe and Greg Bast, associate pastor at the church, try to help the men and women in turn their lives around through hard work, a structured lifestyle and heavy doses of the Bible.

Sharpe has similar goals for the students at his school. He expects many will come from abusive situations or broken families, though most of the first batch are simply from area families who want their children to get a Christian education.

The idea of bringing in troubled youths has scared some of his neighbors, Sharpe admits.

Lawn & Patio Planter

This whimsical-style lawn and patio planter features removable trays in three tiers that lift freely to cut blooms or potted plants and flowers. Which make it convenient to roll the planter into or out of sunshine or around the yard as desired. Easy and inexpensive, it's possible to build two or more planters over a single weekend. The finished project measures about 36 inches long by 20 inches wide by 30 inches tall.

The plan includes step-by-step instructions with photos, tracable patterns, exploded diagrams, a shopping list and a cutting diagram.

Lawn & Patio Planter plan (No. 318)... $6.95 Annual Planter Package (No. CW13) Includes three select planter plans... $16.95 Catalog features hundreds of projects... $3.95

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"One unable to dance blames the unevenness of the floor."
—Malay proverb

"Distribution did it to us," proclaimed East. "Had dummy not had a singleton heart, we would have had an easy seat."

"Distribution was on our side," replied West. "You didn't appreciate the true value of your trump holding."

South took his heart ace, ruffed a heart in dummy and led dummy's trump king. East impulsively took his ace and then wondered how to continue. It was too late. If he led a heart, dummy would ruff and South would cash his diamonds. After drawing trumps, he could claim two doubled overtricks. East's cashing two high clubs would have saved the overtricks, but South would still have scored the doubled game.

To maintain control, East should have refused to capture dummy's trump king. When East ducks, South is stuck in dummy and loses the timing to win 10 tricks.

If South crosses to his diamond ace to ruff his last heart, he forfeits any chance to run the diamonds. And if he doesn't ruff his last heart, East is sure to score a heart. This leaves and at least two clubs. This trumps South with only eight or nine winners and gains a plus score for the defense.

The trump ace is the most important card in the deck. One must not waste it impulsively, not even on the opposing trump king.
