Idaho will get hot Tennessee waste

Shipments allowed under Batt's accord

By N.S. Nokkentved

TWIN FALLS - Highly radioactive waste from Tennessee would come to Idaho as part of Gov. Phil Batt's nuclear waste agreement with the federal government.

of Gov. Pml Bart's nuclear waste agreement with the federal government. Bart had said in a news release Friday that the 15 waste shipments are prohibited by his nuclear waste agreement. But that's not true, says the Department of Energy.

The waste will come, and the Batt agreement only keeps the department from ending the waste to Idaho had of schedule.

Under the governor's agreement, 15 truck-loads of highly radiacative spent reactor fleel, now stored at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory, is slated to be shipped to Idaho in 2004, Energy Department spokesman Brad Bugger said Monday.

The Energy Department had suggested starting the shipments next year as part of a program that could reduce employee radiation exposure and save about 5500,000 annually, according to the draft of a 10-year planning document for the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

I DAHO WEATHER SUMMARY

Idaho was under the influence of high pressure Monday afternoon, which brought mostly sunny skies, warmer temperatures and lighter winds to the state.

In the morning, however, readings were low enough to produce frost in varying degree across much of the Magic Valley, Readings were below freezing in the valleys and well down into the 20s or even the teens at higher elevations. There were a few marks in the teens at some valley locations as well. Spencer had the lowest wind chill in the nation Monday — the equivalent of zero.

Low temperatures were expected to be much below normal once again but high temperatures today are expected to be warmer. High pressure system over Idaho will move toward the East and a trough of low, pressure from the northwest will approach the state today.

The warmers reported locations at midalternoon were Burley, Caldwell and Mountain Home at 64 degrees. The copiest reported location was Mullan Pass in the Month continues at these context reported in the context of the Heavy rain, hail pummel Midwest as storm system inches east

Thunderstorms rattled parts of the Plains and Midwest with large hail and intense rain Monday, while temperatures chilled to record lows along the northern Rockies.

The storms on the Plains developed around a low pressure area that was centered over south-entral Kansas and moving slowly toward the east.

A line of severe thunderstorms rolled across Kansas and Missouri, kicking up wind gusts to 70 mph and dropping hail as large as billiard balls. Radar indicated some areas near the Lake of the Ozarks in central Missouri collected 3 to 4 inches of rain from 7 a.m. to early alternoon. Flash flood warnings were posted for several towns in the area, and more heavy rain was forecast in the state overnight, heavy rain was forecast in the sta National Weather Service said.

WASHINGTON — When it comes to Medicare, what Bill Clinton and Bob Dole aren't telling you could cost you. Neither candidate for president has a plan to deal with Medicare's basic problem: it's too expensive to keep earing for the elderly and disabled under 1960-style insurance that puts were structions on patient choice. Mechanical failure theory gaining steam SMITHTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — The possibility some kind of catalogue malinuction brought down TWA Flight 800 suddenly seems more plausible to some investigators now that the already shaky bomb theory has been weakened. Officially, investigators still say it could be a bomb, a missile or a mechanical problem behind the July 17 crash that killed all 230 people abourd. But the bomb theory was dealt a weeks before the crash could account for the chemical traces, found on the wreckage.

Gaining more candence to National Transportation Safety Board investigators is the chance that copipotes failure caused the Boeing 747's continued to explode.

Some NTSB investigators are so convinced of a malfunction that they expect the FBI to end its criminal probe soon, an NTSB source said.

But FBI spokesman JO Valiquetter responded: "Anybody who thinks the FBI is pulling out before we determine which of the three theories is the correct one obviously does not know what they are talking about."

The NTSB searches for mechanical problems, while the FBI is responsi-

If DARE doesn't do the job, what else can?

DARE, the much praised anti-drug education program that's in more than half of the nation's schools, turns 13 this year, and it's finding adolescence difficult.

this year, and it's inding adolescence difficult.
Seattle and Spokane are dumping Drug Abuse Resistance Education, saying it doesn't work. Oakland, Calif, did the same last year, amid evidence that too many of the fifth and sixth-graders that it taught to say no to drugs were turning into junior high school-aged pot smokers and junkles. The program, begun by former Los Angeles Police Chief Darrell Gates in 1983, is popular in the Magic Valley, and it's still expanding nationwide. But its critics have a compelling case. Studies by the University of Kentucky and the Research Triangle Institute of North Carolina found that DARE did not reduce drug use among program graduates.

And the federal Department of Health and Human Services reports that monthly drug use among 12- to 17-year-olds – of marijuana, cocaine and LSD and other hallucinogens – rose from 5.3 percent in 1992 to 10.9 percent in 1995.

ercent in 1995. It's a safe bet that a fair percentage of nose youngsters were DARE alumni. How can so many kids who've been it's a sate bet that a lair percentage of those youngsters were DARE alumni. How can so many kids who've been through 17 weeks of intensive DARE training reject its lessons so quickly? Maybe the problem is the message. The program is predicated on the assumption that kids need to be taught the dangers of drugs and techniques for resisting peer pressure when they're young. It seems to work- for a while. Talk with a fifth-grader who's been through DARE, and you'll find a youngster who's informed. But there's a light-year's worth of difference between an 11-year-old and a 14-year old. By that age, teen-agers tend to reject many of the attitudes, beliefs and 14-year old.

By that age, teen-agers tend to reject many of the attitudes, beliefs and ideas they held as kids. It's part of the process of growing up.

Too many eighth- and ninth-graders regard DARE's approach as pedantic, simplistic and naive. To make matters worse, pressure on young adolescents to be accepted is intense – and for a 13-year-old, a friend is a lot more persuasive than the friendly cop from whom he learned anti-drug lessons a couple of years earlier.

The Kentucky and North Carolina studies suggest that most DARE programs are lacking three crucial elements.

ments:

• Follow-up. Kids, and the pressures they face, change quickly. DARE needs to be more nimble about addressing those issues among graduates of the regret.

other program.

Spokane is replacing DARE by putting 30 patrol officers in the schools part time, visiting classrooms from kindergarten to eighth grade.

Most children don't encounter anyone whose speciality is drug-abuse prevention once they have graduated from the program.

• One-on-one counseling. Too little drug-abuse prevention is done face to face by an adult who can ask intelligent questions and offer real-world advice.

Neither teachers nor police are vice. Neither teachers nor police are equipped to do that effectively, but organizations such as the Boys and Girls Club are. Maybe some of that DARE money could be spent on training adult volunteers who would each spend a few hours a week at school—tutoring, helping out with clubs and sports, or just talking to kids after school.

• There's no place like home. DARE.

• There's no place like home. DARE doesn't attempt to reinforce the place where the anti-drug message is delivered most effectively.

For all its emphasis on kids, the program also needs to be about teaching parents how to raise children who can say no.

parents how to take asy no.

That's the only truly effective means of preventing drug abuse.

Why don't the politicians tackle any real problems?

ce, just six weeks to go until Election Day, and you can feel the excitement sweeping the nation. BobDole – whose wife calls him BobDole and who calls himself BobDole – created a thrill the other day by pitching off a dais, fortunately without hurring himself. But so far, that's been it for electric moments. I'm waiting for President Clinton to smash a guitar on-stage to get our attention.

The electric moments. I'm waiting for President Clinton to smash a guitar on-stage to get our attention.

The electric moments. I'm waiting for President Clinton seems to be having a salutary effect on members of Congress, they ve just rushed to require health insurers to pay for at least a 48-hour hospital stay for new mothers and their babies. And Houss Speaker Newt Gingrich, who is always whining about Clinton's stealing Republican ideas, has come out foursquare against allowing those convicted of spousal abuse to buy guns—one of Clinton's Chicago proposals.

And of course we're all sleeping more soundly at night since the Defense of Mariage Act (sponsored by Rep. Bob Barr, who is himself in or with his first wide) was passed, forbidding marriage between those of the same sex. God only knows what that might have led to—maybe people getting married more than once.

On the negative side, the House, where hybricians are still somewhat scarce, decided to go into medical practice in order to oudaw late arem abortions. Members put their numerous years of medicane the health and lie and the search of the read o land grab in history.

Excuse me, but whose land are we talking about here? As it happens, the land in question belongs to the people of the United States. We own it. It is not owned by the foreign mining companies that want to turn it into a giant coal pit. OK, if we can't find a burning domestic issue, how about foreign involvements? Anyone understand why we've been bombing Iraq again? On a scale of 1 to 10, how much hope have we got for Bosnia? These are ripe and juty growth of the state of

commission to reform campaign financing. But almost immediately, the two fell out after Clinton released a draft proposal to the public. This caused Gingrich's office to have a cow. Anybody knows you don't do a deal like that in public (I guess because it's none of the public's business), and Clinton was just doing a cheap publicity stunt, and Gingrich could not be expected to deal with someone who worked in bad faith like that. And that was the end of that chapter.

Personally, I believe in the revolutionary principle that the American people are not fools. It has not actually escaped our notice that corporate special-interest money is pouring into the presidential ampaigns like Niagarn through the back door known as "soft money." And as this "soft money" piles up, so do the favors owed by our politicians to such generous senefactors as Archer-Daules-Midland, the trial lawyers, the insurance companies, the banks, Wall Street, the steel industry, the auto manufacturers, the sugar growers, etc., and nauseam.

What's really sickening is that we get ripped off for so much by these pennyante contributions. Oh, I grant you that it looks like a lot of dough when you look at it in the aggregate – something like $330 million in soft of money this year alone.

But look what the special interests get in return: They give millions, but they get back billions. Billions of dollars in tariff pretections and price supports.

And, of course, every billion dollars some corporate donar gets away with in tax relief and corporate welfare leaves the rest of us with an additional billion to pay in taxes so we can build schools, pay teachers, repair bridges and roads, keep health clinics open, provide Read Start for poor kids, and soon. The politicians get millions for their campaigns, and we get stuck with billions in taxes. It's actual It's actually worth getting excited about.

Clinton-bashing unjustified

Clinton-bashing unjustified

I think The Times-News editorial department took a cheap shot at President Clinton on Sept. 3. This is one of many it has done since Bill Clinton took office. I think The Times-News has joined the Republican Parry in ridiculing Bill Clinton.

The Republicans in Congress, including Bill Clinton.

The Republicans in Congress, including Idaho's Republican lelegation, spent 30 million taxpayers' dollars trying to discredit Bill Clinton, trying to dig up dirt from 10 to 15 years ago.

After all that flap, they couldn't find anything wrong. In fact, they made him look much better; the people can see through this Republican trash.

Bill Clinton has been a good president and deserves another four-year term. He got the rich people, the ones who should be, taxed properly and has brought the deficit down 50 percent. Also, I might add he has saved Medicare and Social Security for all the senior citizens and others alike. Medicare and Social Security for all the senior Social Security for all the senior Social Security must be saved and the best way to do that is to re-elect Bill Clinton and a Democratic Congress.

The Sagebrush Rebellion is over. It died in a courtroom in Newda, so let the Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management continue to do their job, which they have done efficiently for years.

The best way to set things straight again is to dump Larry Craig, Helen Chenoweth and get rid of Crapo and let's send Walt Minnick, Dan Williams and John Seidl to Congress to work with Bill Clinton on Nov. 5 ROBERT W. IVERSON Twin Falls

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — City offi-cials say they'll inspect all old apartment buildings and possibly require sprinkler and alarm systems in the wake of Saturday's fatal fire at the Clay Apartments. Such older structures are typical-ly exempt from fire ordinances requiring such safety systems because they were built long before the current building and fire codes were implemented.

'Road' is over for Dorothy Lamour; former Bob Hope co-star dies at 81

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dorothy Lamour, the sarong-wearing, straight-faced foil to Rob Hope and Bing Crosby as they traveled the world in their "Road" pictures, is dead at 81.

Lamour died Sunday at St. Vincent's Medical Center, said hospital spokeswoman Carol Martinez. The cause of death was not disabored.

The cause of death was not disclosed.

In a statement, Hope called Miss.

In a statement, Hope called Miss,
and said he would remember her not just as a colose fired.

She was colleague, but as a close fired.

She was one of the grandest ladies on screen, in life, he said.

She was a lady of quality, beauty and class, which always made me look good.

At Hope's 90th birthday four years ago, Miss Lamour told the audience what it was like to work with the two legends.

If left like a wonderful sandwich, a slice of white bread between two slices of ham," she quipped.

Miss Lamour, wearing the wrap-

ST. GEORGE, Urah (AP) — The number of vandalism cases in rural

"Most of what we see in the outlying areas is people being stupid," said Sgt. Pete Kuhlmann of the Washington County Sheriff's Office,

Among areas that have been vandalized is a 40-acre site east of Washington, which the Anasazi

Batt, state prison officials approach compromise on proposed changes

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Phil Batt and state prison officials are nearing a compromise on Batt's demand that the Department of Correction bar violent exoffenders from working for the agency.

The governor's partial retreat comes three months after he demanded significant changes in hiring practices. That followed a published report that dozens of prison guards had criminal records. Batt's spokeswoman, Amy Kleiner, said the governor now recognizes that the Department of Correction needs some flexibility in its employment practices. But see said Batt remains committed in principle to his original stance. "In 99 percent of the cases, he believes that" violent ex-criminals should not be employed, 'Kleiner said.

Pocatello man gets prison term for bomb hoax

FOR DOMD HOAX

POCATELLO (AP) — Michael Kim has been sentenced to one to five years in prison for his role in an 'April 1995 bomb hoax at the Bannock County Courthouse. Sixth District Judge William Woodland said the sentence ordered Monday, part of a plea bargain agreement, will run concurrently with a federal prison term Kim is serving in California. Woodland also ordered Kim to pay $50,000 in restination, saying he might reduce that amount later when the state presents its restitution figures. The judge childed Bannock County Deputy Prosecutor Kay Lyon for the county's failure to have compiled restitution costs.

Woodland told Kim he will have to put aside plants for college or any other careet goals after being released from prison to pay the restitution. Kim will be on three years of supervised release or pronte after serving his federal prison term. Kim. 21, and Terry Ewing. 21, both pleaded guilty to felony charges of being principals to false reporting of an explosive device at a public or private building. Ewing is scheduled to be sentenced Oct. 7.

"When you start tearing down a building that's perfectly good that's a crime against the taxpayers," said Russell Strawn, a member of Fruitland's Save Our School Committee. "We can recycle the past." Strawn and about two dozen residents banded together and asked the Fruitland School Board to sell them the old school for $1 so they could make it a community center.

Batt particularly objected to the idea of employing people convicted of battery, sexual offenses and other crimes against individuals. At the time, he did not sugast that any exceptions be made. Since then, the state Personnel Commission has expressed some concerns about a bisnker policy, Kleiner said.

She said Batt believed the department needed some latinude because it otherwise might be faced with turning down a qualified job applicant convicted of a violent offense many years befure. "If you have a blanker policy, you have a pretty tight box to be in," she said.

Fed battles conflicting economic reports

Agency meets today to consider boosting interest rates job openings. But prices remain relatively stable, and for now, there are few signs of accelerating inflation. Here are some questions and answers about the economy, the markets and the Fed meeting.

Q. With low unemployment and low inflation, why would the Federal Reserve consider tinkering with the RESERVE CONSIDER THREFING WITH the conomy?

A. Because the Fed is more worried about tomorrow's inflation than today's, and many economists believe that low unemployment and rising wages will inevitably lead to higher prices.

Of Schartme?

inevitably lead to higher prices.

Q. Is that true?

A. It generally has been true in the past. As unemployment sank toward 5 percent in the late 1980s, inflation gradually accelerated; by 1990, inflation exceeded 6 percent. Only after the Federal Reserve raised interest rates—and slowed the economy—did inflation subside. But some economists argue that the old rules may no longer apply.

O Why not?

prices would take off once unemployment dipped below 6 percent. Unterployment has been below that level for two years, with few signs of accelerating inflation. So, some economists now argue that global compension makes it harder for businesses to raise-prices. And they note that businesses total costs of compensation are not rising as quickly as wages alone.

Q. What's wrong with inflation?

A. For starters, it erodes the value of cash and fixed-rate investments like bonds. Bondholders and other creditors don't like inflation because they are repaid in dollars that are worth less than those in their original investment.

For the broader economy, however, there's little wrong with the current level of inflation, which is estimated at 3 percent a year. Most economists think inflation is actually lower, because the government statistics don't account adequately for the way consumers change their buying patterns in response to higher prices. So the cost of living is probably increasing only about 2 percent a year.

As inflation accelerates, however, more people get nervous. There's ample evidence that very high inflation rates — greater than 10 percent, for example — reduce long-term economic growth by making it harder for businesses and consumers to plan spending and investment. And many economists believe that once the inflation rate starts creeping up, it becomes much harder to slow down. The Fed tries to avert these disruptions by raising interest rates to dow the economy.

Q. How can the Fed reduce inflation?

A. Not easily. The Fed's influence over the economy is very indirect, and resembles a Rube Goldberg cartoon more, than a switch. The basics work like this: The Fed controls the interest rate it charges banks for overnight loans, and, more importantly, the rate banks charge each other for these loans. When these rates go up, banks and other creditors generally increase the interest rates they charge for loans, credit cards and other dedit. As the costs of borrowing for mortgages, car loans and business loans increase, consumers and businesses reduce their spending.

X-rated exports: Explicit phone services go global

The Washington Post

There's a boom in exports under way in the poor tropical country of Guyana. Rather, make that X-ports, of a product the world can't seem to get enough of phone sex. This year, Guyana's lone telephone company could

New technology often has unforeseen consequences. But few business trends are as strange as what has resulted from the increasing ease and reliability of international calling:
Phone sex has gone global.

Americans who dial up numbers for sexual talk with strangers may be reaching halfway around the world, often without realizing it. This has sent lundreds-of-millions-of-dollareflowing out of the United States and other industrial countries.

flundreds-of-millions-of-dollars flowing out of the United States and other industrial countries, experts said, and into faceless experts said, and into faceless phone sex operations in places such as Guyana, the Philippines, Poland, the Netherlands Antilles islands and the tiny African coun-try of Sao Tome. For the smaller countries these telephone services have become an important source of foreign exchange. It's a huge business for Atlantic Tele-Network Inc., a U.S. company that bought 80 percent of Guyana's national phone company, Guyana Telephone & Telegraph, for $16.5 million in 1991.

In 1992 it becan making it and the control of th

Telegraph, for $16.5 million in 1991.
In 1992, it began making its circuits available to those offering "adult" chat, sports scores, weather, horoscopes and other audiotext services. ATN is incoprated in Delaware but has headquarters in the Virgin Islands, where it also operates that country's phone system. "When we bought the (Guyana) phone company, we planned to run it just like a regular old phone company, company spokesman Edwin Crouch said. Then, he said, "audiotext found us," referring to the dozers of service providers in the United States and elsewhere that look for offstore- places to handle. for offshore places to handle calls. "We started marketing it and treating it as a serious busi-

In 1991 Guyana was receiving no audiotext calls from abroad. In 1995 it logged 102 million min-utes of calling, according to ATN. That accounted for $91 million of Guyana Telephone & Telegraph's total revenue of $131 million. The figures continue to grow: The count had reached 60 million minutes of international audiotext by the first half of this year.

Estimates differ as to what proportion of international audiotext calls involve sex. The London-based International audiotext calls involve sex. The London-based International relemedia Association, an industry trade group, said only 35 percent, while Jason Kowal of Telegeography Inc., a Washington market research firm, said the figure is more than 90 percent.

Whatever the split, Guyananowi sited with the Netherlands' Antilles as the world leader in a $18 billion international market for all types of audiotext services, according to Telegeography. They are followed by the little-known vices, according to Telegeography. They are followed by the little known nations of Nipe in the South Pacific and Sao Tome.
The countries are playing to maximum effect an international payments system set upon payments system set up years ago that splits the cost of han-dling overseas calls. Under this system, the charges that an American pays for dialing Guyana, or any other country, are shared with that person's American long-

American long-distance com-pany and the foreign phone company that picks up the call and routes it to the recipi-ent. For the smaller countries, these telephone services have become an important source of foreign exchange.

many smaller countries have set high per-minute rates for incom-ing international calls, in hopes of maximizing the revenue they get from abroad. Sometimes, this turns out to be counterproduc-tive, because high rates mean that fewer people call the coun-try.

tive, because high rates mean that fewer people call the country.

But by setting up these chat lines, the economics change. Waves of new calls are generated into the country, placed by people who are willing to pay high per-minute charges. The country's phone company then turns around and shares a portion of that money with the operator of the sex lines.

In Guyana's case, U.S. long-distance companies pay Guyana Telephone & Telegraph 85 cents a minute for calls they send into the country, one of the highest rates in the Caribbean. The Guyana phone company, in turn, pays about 50 cents of that money to the audiotext service provider.

In Guyana, the phone company has taken steps to insulate the chal-line business from the country's population. Residents are blocked from calling any of the services, GT&T's Crouch said, and the company has a rule barring service providers from mentioning Guyana in advertisements.

ments.
Guyanese political and opinion leaders said residents are barely aware of the lucrative revenue stream that flows to the local stream that flows to the local phone company.

"There was some stir about it the year before last, but it soon blew over," said W. Henry Skerrett, editor of Kaieteur News, a weekly in the capital of Georgetown. Instead, he said, people are too concerned with deteriorating social conditions — rampant rime, job-lessness and political instability — to worry about the phone system.

ry — (6 worry about the phone system. Pamadath J. Menon, chairman of Guyana's Public Utilities Commission, said his main com-plaint is that GT&T has not used enough of the earnings from chat services to further upgrade the country's phone system. CT&T is fighting Menon's attempts to get the company to reserve 15 per-cent of its revenue for this pur-the company to reserve 15 percent of its revenue for this purpose.

"I'm unhappy that the large cash flows are not being reinvested for the benefit of the people of Guyana," he said. "It doesn't matter to us where the revenue comes from."
Crouch said the audiotext revcenues "have helped toward the expansion of Guyana's phone system. Guyana certainly has a far better telephone system today than it did five years ago, and audiotext is a significant part."
Few Guyanese are employed as sex chatters, experts in the industry said. One reason may be that many international services promise, but do not deliver, truly live conversations.

Radio station seeks reimbursement over fire

Felmbursement Over Tire

BURLEY - A Magic Valley radio station will have to wait to see whether the U.S. Forest Service finds Cassia County was negligent in starting a wildfire that knocked the station off the air.

Managers of Kat Kountry, KKMV FM 92.5, fave sought reimbursement from the county, saying an Aug. 26 wildfire forced the station off the air for four days, and left the station at less than full power for four more days. Foes of One Percent organize, advertise

TWIN FALLS - They want to bring the One Percent Initiative down.

Twin Falls lawmakers, educators and business people gathered at the College of Southern Idaho Monday to formally kick off an advertising campaign against the property-tax-cutting initiative.

"Hard times we can be sure are on the way if the One Percent Initiative should pass," said Sen Laird Noh, Rkimberly, who is leading the charge against it locally. It would hurt job and the economy, he said.

The initiative, Proposition One on the Nov. 5 ballot, limits property taxes to 1 percent of taxable value. That means the owner of a $100,000 home with a $50,000 property inx exemption would pay just $500 a year in property taxes. In some places, the property taxes in some places, the property tax bill is twice that or more.

On Monday, critics said the initiative had several pitfalls.

• It would strip CSI of one-third of its funding, said President Jerry Meyerhoeffer, funding, said President Jerry Meyerhoeffer, Ir would destabilize the state's tax structure and discourage businesses from investing in Idaho, said, I Kent Just, exec-utive director of the local chamber of commerce.

• It would hurt education and not help farmers, because their property values are stable, said Dave Fullmer, president of the Twin Falls County Farm Bureau.

But Ron Rankin of Coeur d'Alene, one of the parties driving the initiative, said the group has nothing new to say. "The message is still the same," he said. "Nobody believes the message. They can call this a lickoff if they warn, but it's the same thing they've been saying from the universities, from the board of education, from the cities, from the counties."

Opponents started their "avalanche of misinformation" in the spring, but the initiative's favorable rating has just gone up, Rankin said.

The group is spreading "distortions" and "eauguerations," Rankin said.

Strings say the state would have to a visual string the complete strong funding that comes from the property tax.

Ranking maintains that figure would only be $120 million.

• Critics say the money to pay for public schools would have to come from a sales tax hike of 2 cents or 2.5 cents per dollar. Rankin said just 1 cent increase would raise more than enough.

Initiative opponents are starting their campaign later than they did four years ago, when vices turned the measure down.

But they are not taking another victory for granted, Noh said, and two new players – the Farm Bureau and the Realtors Association – are speaking out against the One Percent.

"My sense is there will be a wider arms."

Cash for trash: County raises local landfill rates

TWIN FALLS – The county garbage landfill is running out of room, and trash haulers will pay more to pick up the shack. In order to build additional space at the Hub Butte site, county commissioners Monday morning approved a rate increase. Effective Oct. 1 it will cost $35 per ton, up from $528, to dump trash in the county land-fill.

The increase will pay for a $1.5 million expansion at the present site, as recommended by URS Consultants of Seattle. The dump will need additional space by August, and the county needs to generate the revenue, Commissioner Brent Reinke How the increase will affect county residents will depend in part on where they live. Brent White, of the Magic Valley Mall, asked commission-ers about furure increases. But commissioners assured him the next 10 years.

The rate biles, from $28 per ten to $35 a month, gives into effect Oct. 1.

The county site at Hub Butte will be good for another 50 to 70 years, Reinke said.

The commissioners also suggested recycling cardboard to reduce trash hauling bills at the mall. White said the mall was considering a baler for the cardboard.

Also Monday, council members hailed the return of Vice-Mayor Art Frantz, who has been recovering from an Aug. 8 stroke. The council also voted to break a six-year tradition with a local accounting firm and awarded the 1995-96 audit to a Boise firm that submitted a higher bid.

Councilman Lance Clow, a financial planner, also liked the idea of having a second opinion and the council unanimously approved the bid from Presnell Gage. The 1995-96 fiscal year ends Monday and the company will get to work later this fall.

OMI's operating contract weathered some tense moments before Frantz, Howard Allen, Gale Kleinkopf and Chris Talkington voted to renew the agreement. The new contract supplants the final year of OMI's old contract.

Council members Tom Mikesell, Clow and Mayor Jeff Gooding voted against the proposal. Mikesell said a rival sewer plant operator had promised a lower as wonderful track record in Twin Falls, but I think we should look at someone else," Mikesell said. "It's an option to save the people of Twin Falls some money."

OMI offered city leaders two options: A five-year renewal at the existing base rate of $1.85 million per year, or pay up to $2.85 million per year, or one wear, and solicit bids from other sewer plant operators that could reap substantial long-term savings. But Talkington warned that awarding a sewer plant contract "is not merely a budget exercise."

In years past, city leaders have been led astray by firms with good credentials that made promises which weren't kept, he said. The upshot was "a black mark next to the name of the city," Talkington said.

Specifically, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency fined the city for sloppy operations at the sewer plant and credibility with other regulatory agencies was also was shaky.

Planning and zoning hearings set tonight on mobile homes, billboards

Ed's Pizza Parlor in Twin Falls, is seeking permission to sell beer in a new pizza and burger restaurant at South Park Avenue and Ramage Street, just south of the Old Towne Bridge.

A bar already has been approved right next door to the restaurant, so city planners maintain that permission to sell beer would have a minimal effect of the neighborhood. The new restaurant would be open seven days a week, from 10 am. to midnight, Yarbrough said in a letter to the city. The restaurant would employ up to a dozen workers, he added.

Husband struggles with guilt while coping with invalid wife

DEAR ABBY: I am a 64-year-old married man. My wife and I' were childhood sweethearts and have been married for 46 years. Six years ago, she developed Alzheimer's disease and has been in a nursing home for the Abby, my guilt feelings have increased even though! I haven't changed my visiting routine to the nursing home. I would greatly appreciate your

Book blasts 'weight prejudice' in America

"The size of a woman's body is still a matter for public judgment and condemnation," said Goodman. "Fat women have very little privacy. Being fat is like being a celebrity. People feel they have the right to stare at you, to point at you and to yell at you." When Goodman ruined her scale, she also started to throw away all the societal messages she grew up with: fat is bad, thin is good, only women who are conventionally with: fat is bad, thin is good, only women who are conventionally attractive are worthy. Goodman stopped dieting, and instead focused on eating healthy foods. She started to exercise and soon saw that her obsession with food dimmed and her self-worth rose. "You can spend your whole life trying to be thin," said Goodman, who hasn't weighed herself since that eventful day. "I'm something better than thin. Thr fee."

Goodman's book is only the latest contribution to a burgeoning move-comments on my situation.

OLYMPIA, WASH.

BEAR TORN: I can understand your feelings of guilt. Fate has placed you entered a rock and hard place. You are a married man with an obsentee wife.

A psychianist, psychologist, grid counselor or clergyperson could help you absolve those feelings. If there is an Alzheimer's support group in your area, join it. There are thousand so fo support groups for caregivers of Alzheimer's patients, and the national office of the Alzheimer's Association (1-800-272-3900) will be happy to refer you. Incidentally, on Oct. 5 and 6 in more than 200 communities, the Alzheimer's Association will hold its 1996 Memory Walk, the only nationwide event for Alzheimer's disease, to raise funds for caregiver programs.

The San Francisco Bay area is the hub of the size acceptance movement, according to Aliced Ansfeld, who has published "Radiance: The Magazine for Calgand, Calif., home for 12 years. There are dozens of exercise and swim classes for people weighing more than 200 pounds and trainers who emphasize muscle tone overeight, said Ansfeld. There are so many boutiques specialing in large and super-sizes that women fly into the Bay Area from all over the country just to shop, she said. Her company even sets up tours and cruises — mostly to sunny places where the women are encouraged and super-sizes — mostly to sunny places where the women are encouraged and supported to don swimsuits.

aged and supported to don swin-sults.
Goodman is hoping that these voices crack America's over-obses-sion with weight and create room for people of all sizes. And the change isn't needed for large women alone, said Goodman. Even trim women obsess over their size and are jeered if they put on a few pounds.

response to some of life's challenges.

Depression, on the other hand, may or may not be related to a specific event and may persist for weeks or even months. In severe cases, it can immobilize a person. Depression is so common it is estimated at any given time. 10 percent of Americans suffer depression. Depression is also one of the most easily treated emotional problems. It is estimated that over 90 percent of those with depression can benefit from professional care.

A senior police official said the attack could have been planned for as early as Monday or Tuesday.

North Korean infiltration exposes defense holes

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) —
Whatever its mission, the North Korean submarine that ran aground off South Korea's east coast list week accomplished one thing.
It uncovered a flaw in the South's defenses.

South's defenses.
At the same time, it may have inadvertently strengthened the hand of a South Korean government worried that the United States is moving too fast to restore relations with its Korean Korea secure grounds to criticize, and hold in check, the U.S. policy toward North Korea," the daily Dong-A Ilbo of Seoul said in an editorial.

Dong-A Ilbo of Seoul said in an editorial.

The government took its case to the United Nations last week, and Foreign Minister Gong Rowyung is sure to raise it again this week when he meets Secretary of State Warren Christopher in New York and addresses the General Assembly. North Korea Proke its silence on the matter Monday, demagding the return of the sub and its compants, dead and the sub and its compants, dead and the foreign to the Norean waters after suffering engine rouble while on a routine training mission.

Seoul for fleeling crewmen of a North Korean submarine.

The message came via a radio report, the medium the Koreas most commonly use to communicate. South Korea has said it won't respond unless the North makes its request through official channels.

Seoul long has insisted that before any of its allies strengthen ties with Pyongyang, there first should be improvement in its own relationship with the North, which it holds solely responsible for the tense, icy atmosphere.

A 1953 armistice stopped the fighting, but the two Koreas technically remain at war. Persistently, Pyongyang has said it will discuss a permanent peace treaty only with the United States and not with South Korea, which it sees as a U.S. pupper. In recent years, Washington has inched toward closer relations with the North. It concluded a pact aimed at preventing North Korea from producting nuclear weapons and tentatively agreed to exchange liaison offices with Pyongyang.

weapons and tentatively agreed to exchange laison offices with Pyongyang.

Washington has also shown a greater willingness than Scoul to ship food aid to North Korea, now suffering from flood-induced food shortages bordering on famine. Pyongyang has responded, permitting the United States for the first time to send military teams to North Korea to search for the remains of Americans killed in the 1950-53 war.

The government in Scoul has openly worried that its communist rival may use those developments, plus a newly exhibited willingness to open its closed economy to foreign investment, as a means of further expanding its relations with Washington.

So Scoul viewed the submarine's incursion both as blessing and curse: as a wedge to keep North Korea's diplomatic door firmly shut, but also as an embarassment to its defense establishment.

Having slipped unseen past shore-based radar and South Korean patrol boats equipped with radar and sonar, the sub went undetected until it was spot-ted on a reef by a taxi driver.

Today's West got off to a great start. He made an aggressive pre-empt and found the best opening lead. Then he got too busy. In-stead of patiently waiting to score his doubleton trump queen, he tried a foolish and fulle play. West's heart jack went to East's ace and East made the ob-vious switch to diamonds. West took two diamonds for book, leav-ing him the huge favorite to score

East's ace and East made the obvious switch to diamonds. West took two diamonds for book, leaving him the huge favorite to score his trump queen for a one-trick set. Unfortunately, West blew his opportunity. Instead of exiting safely in hearts or clubs, West led a low diamond, which East ruffed and South overruffed.

Against a heart or club exit at trick four, South would surely have cashed dummy is trump king and passed the jack for a losing finesse (West's pre-empt). But what about West's unusual diamond play? Was it a double-cross by an expert, or was it a foolis attempt to promote an imaginary something in the trump suit?

Choosing the latter scenario, South overruffed the third diamond and dropped the doubleton trump queen, converting a sure minus to a gift-laden plus score. Suppose West had been a cagey expert player. Might he not have led a third diamond had he held a singleton small trump? This might entice South to try to play for the drop when East held Q-x-x in trumps. It wouldn't happen; an expert would not make that play. Instead of playing mind games, West would wait for South to make the percentage play of finessing against East.

When a declarer is going to go wm, don't do anything to get in

Bomb threat delays opening of stadium

opening of stadium
ATLANTA - A bomb threat delayed the opening of Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium before the Braves' final regular-season home game Monday night.

Jim Schultz, a team spokesman, said someone called the Braves' switchboard about 5 p.m., saying a bomb had been placed in the stadium.

Atlanta police, stadium security officers and a representative of the FBI searched the 52,000-sear facility and determined that the call was a heax. The gates, which normally open two hours before a 7:40 p.m. game, finally opened at Saidium security officers on a sphanned, and the first pitch by Greg lines outside the stadium, however, and thousands of fans in the sellout crowd were late getting inside.

The bomb threat touched a nerve in Atlanta, where a pipe bombing in Centennial Park killed a woman and injured more than 100 people during the Olympics.

starters, lost both starting outside linebackers on one play early in the game.

But it was the willingness of Indianapolis' quarterback to sacrifice his body that saved the evening as the Colts handed Jimmy Johnson his first loss as the Dolphins' coats.

Harbaugh's 1-yard TD toss to Ken Dilger at the end of a 90-yard drive that spanned nearly eight minutes of the first and second quarters, was the game's only touchdown.

But just as important was his dive into a pile of Miami defenders at his own 39 in the fourth quarter to grab a fumble by teammate Clif Groce that Miami appeared to have recovered. The officials ruled Harbaugh and Miami's Chris Singleton had simultaneous possession, giving the ball back to the Colts and Harbaugh trotted to the sidelines, resting for one play.

"He was so exhausted from holding onto the ball for so long. He wasn't hurt," Colts coach Lindy Infante said. "He was lying in that mass of humanity just trying not to lose the ball."

Otherwise, it was a day for the Indianapolis defense as the Colts (4-0) took over first place in the AFC East with Miami (3-1) and Buffalo each a game behind.

Still, it wasn't easy for Indianapolis, which was without running back Marshall Faulk and defensive end Tony Bennett, the most prominent injured starters entering the game. It showed on Miamis' first possession as Marino drove Miami 79 yards to the Indianapolis 6:

Playoff potential: Miami, Houston, New England.

The Colts keep claiming nobody gives them any respect. "Who? Not me. I think they're one of our most solid teams," asys John Butler, Butfalo's general manager.

Whatever, they're one of a half dozen teams that gives the AFC more depth than the NFC, if not as much strength at the top (Green Bay 42, San Diego 10 last week.) Put Indianapolis, Kansas City and Denver at the top for now.

Assuming Jim Harbough continues to play as he has for the last year, the Colts may be the favorite Karnesc City's deferee is better, but Steve Bon Isa't. The Chiefs may live or the edge during the regular second, but it's hard to survive that way for 19 games.

Denver?

It's hard to get excited about a defense lat's ...improved ... by ...adding ... Bill. Romanowski and Jumpy Geathers But it's certainly playing better and John Elway has the running game he never had - Terrell Davis has moved into the ellie class of running backs.

In fact, all the contenders have the problem the salary cap has created — one in jury (except in restlient Pittsburgh) and there's a major problem. The Bills survived the loss of Jim Kelly for one game because the defense's adrenaline flowed and the coaching staff installed a mistake-proof game plan for Todd Collins, but that cart it go on for any major part of a season.

Late in the third period, the Colts drove 89 yards to a first down at the Dolphins 1 with Marvin Harrison going 15 yards on a reverse and Zack Crockett 25 yards up the middle to set up first and goal.

But Trace Armstrong knocked Harbaugh down at the 3 on a first-down rollout, and Indianapolis ended, up settling for Cary Blanchard's 18-yard field goal on the second play of the fourth quarter.

Thomas Rengen, whose Mininy finshed first in the Eastern Conference with a league-best 20-12 nevent "It is a little dangerous." The rationale, of course, is money. Give the better team a weekend date and more time to promote its home games. After-drawing nearly 28 million fans, the league is looking to improve the average attendance of 17,417.

"It don't think it's a disadvan-rage," Kansas City Wiz coach Ron Newman said. "There's just no advantage."

Tampa goes into the playoffs as the favorite, as much as there can be one.

It begins its series Wednesday might against the Crew (115-17) in Columbus. The Crew, under new coach Tom Fitzgerald, won nine of their last 10 games to squeak into the playoffs. Columbus has the league's narrowest field (62 vards).

"They're certainly a team that's turned it around," said

Rongen, whose team has won is last six. "And especially on that postage-stam field, anything can happen."

The New York-New Jersey MetroStars (15-17) and Washington DC United (16-16) start the playoffs Tuesday night in Giants Stadium. Dallas (17-15) is at Kansas City (17-15) and Los Angeles (19-13) at San Jose (15-17) Thursday night in the other two series.

I am waxing existential, but Elliot's life holds meaning for us all. We are all endurance athletes of some sort. I like the Reebok ad that proclaims that there is an athlete in all of us. Some run, some bike, some six, some raise children, some work two jobs. Some choose to compete against others. Some don't. Regardless, we all need that reservoir of strength that comes from pursuing spirituality. My point is this: Challenge your totality. Look at whatmakes you who you are and why, that defines you. Run, go for a bike ride, walk to work or read Greek philosophers. Bake a cake or run a mararthon, but undertake an endeavor that will bring out the best in your self. And use that as your only quantification. And enjoy your self.
