Lockheed joins anti-initiative battle

INEL managers pitch in $10,000

By Karen Talkkinn Times-News writer

BOISE — You look at it, you frown. You raise your eyebrows briefly. What is this thing called LMFTCO, and why has it given a whopping $10,000 to defeat the nuclear waste initiative? After a moment, the connection dawns.

That acronym stands for Lockheed Martin Idaho Technologies, a branch of one of the nation's top defense contracting titans, and a company that manages nuclear waste at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory near Idaho Falls.

After originally vowing to stay out of the campaign against Proposition Three, Lockheed has joined a group of 10 big spending Idaho companies intent on sending the initiative down in flames.

The latest move follows on the heels of Lockheed's involvement with a group called Coalition for Ballot Integrity, which failed in August to get the Idaho Supreme Court to declare the initiative unconstitutional.

Lockheed's venture into Idaho politics has drawn mixed reviews. Some have welcomed the involvement of one of the state's largest employers, while others view their entrance with suspicion, stemming from reports of covered-up hazardous waste violations.

Sunshine reports filed Thursday with the Secretary of State's office show Lockheed donated $10,000 Sept. 30 to Get the Waste Out, a group fighting Proposition Three.

Lockheed was the third largest contributor, following the Eastern Idaho Economic Development Corporation, which gave $15,000, and the Soda Springs-based Monsanto Corporation, which gave $5,000 plus the loan of campaign manager Trent Clark, with a three-month salary of $19,500.

Collision kills Twin Falls, Utah truckers

Wreckage from a two-semi head-on collision lies strewn over Highway 50 near Hansen after a Yellow Freight Co. truck crossed the center line and struck a Circle A Construction beet truck at around 6:15 a.m. Friday. Both drivers died at the scene.

Rigs collide on Highway 50 near location of other fatalities

By Kent McCreary Times-News writer

HANSEN — A Twin Falls man and a Utah man died in a head-on collision early Friday between two tractor trucks pulling trailers.

Randy Barth, 40, of Twin Falls and Eldon Hair, 50, of West Valley, Utah, died at the scene.

The deaths are the third and fourth in virtually the same spot on State Highway 50 in the past five months. A neighbor says increased speed limits and a new potato storage collar have made the road very dangerous.

The 6:15 a.m. collision happened when Hair's westbound Yellow Freight Co. semi-truck crossed the center line of the road in front of the Fort Harry intersection and hit Barth's oncoming truck, Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department reports say.

The unladen beet truck Barth was driving was owned by Circle A Construction of Twin Falls.

Another sign of life on Mars

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — A NASA scientist has discovered what may be signs of life in a second meteorite from Mars.

Johnson Space Center researcher David S. McKay told "The CBS Evening News" that he spotted "possible cell structures" in at least one other meteorite.

The newest sign of life was found in a rock billions of years younger than the first, McKay said, noting that "Most of the lifetime of Mars is in this range between the two meteorites."

Scientists said the meteorite used to make the initial discovery is thought to have formed on Mars 4.5 billion years ago, when the solar system was forming.

U.S. students do better in math, science

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Students are earning slightly higher marks in science and math, but their reading and writing scores are virtually unchanged over the past decade or more, an analysis of the latest "Nation's Report Card" finds.

Graph lines depicting national achievement in math and science inch upward from the early 1980s, but are flat between 1992 and 1994, according to the study released Friday.

Reading scores have not changed much since the early 1970s, the report says. Writing scores in 1994 were either about the same or lower than in 1984.

"In reading, even though we've kind of performed at the same level, there is slight, turtle-level progress," said Pascal D. Forgione Jr., commissioner of the National Center for Education Statistics. "It's slow. You may not even notice it, but it's there."

Results from the 1994 report card, the most recent, were released in 1995 and earlier this year.

The center had not planned to release the long-term trend study of the results until later this year. But the center decided to issue a brief summary in response to allegations, including some from Bob Dole's presidential campaign, that it was being withheld.

The study comprises national representative samples totaling about 31,000 students. In science, math and reading, students were tested at ages 9, 13 and 17. In writing, students in grades four, eight and 11 were tested.

The study says:

- Students in all three age groups showed declines or only steady progress in science in the 1970s, but have since improved.

- Math scores that have been down or stable in the 1980s appear to be on an upward trend.

- Reading scores have changed only minimally since the early 1970s.
- The writing skills of fourth-graders have been stable since 1984 and the average score for 11th graders has declined slightly, but eighth-graders' scores dropped off sharply between 1992 and 1994.

Deputy Education Secretary Marshall S. Smith said the trend data covers a time when the poverty rate for children rose from 15 percent in 1970 to 21 percent in 1994, and the percentage of single-parent families doubled to 24 percent. Test results showed some improvement even though the support system for children has weakened, he said.

Strategy debate embroils Dole campaign staff

Ethics, California gamble key topics

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — On the eve of a strategy summit, Bob Dole's campaign was embroiled Friday in debates over whether to be more aggressive in challenging President Clinton's ethics and whether to gamble millions on a late push in California.

One adviser, former Education Secretary William Bennett, told reporters that the Dole campaign next week would release a lengthy report on Clinton administration ethical lapses. He said it would include material on the collection of FBI background files by the Clinton White House and legal work by Hillary Rodham Clinton that has come under scrutiny by Whitewater investigators.

"These are very serious charges and go to the issue of the public trust," said Bennett, one of several Republicans who has publicly urged Dole to turn a spotlight on Clinton's character and ethics. "Sunlight is the best disinfectant."

After listing several alleged Clinton administration ethical lapses, Bennett said, "If Bill Clinton is re-elected, these issues will become more and more serious... and we may go through something like we went through with Watergate."

When asked about Bennett's remarks, two top Dole aides initially said they knew of no plans to issue a report.

Later, one said Bennett was pushing the idea on the campaign, and that Dole had given it a qualified blessing by saying he had no objection to the campaign compiling such a report. But Dole was unlikely to personally take part in releasing it, this aide said.

Another idea being discussed was having the Republican National Committee pay for harder-edged advertising focusing on alleged administration ethical lapses, although senior Dole aides are divided over whether such an effort would be effective.

Dole communications director John Buckley said it made more sense to address the character issue by highlighting broken promises.

Republican candidate Bob Dole exchanges waves with the crowd while campaigning in Kettering, Ohio, Friday.

Mrs. Dole counts off her top reasons

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Elizabeth Dole returned to the late night talk show circuit Friday night, offering a David Letterman-like list of 10 reasons why Bob Dole should be elected president.

It was Mrs. Dole's second foray onto a talk show where her husband's campaign for the White House has been fodder for the host's monologue.

This time she came to Letterman's show with a list of "reasons why Bob Dole should be elected president."

Examples:

- "He'll cut your taxes 15 percent and cut your lawn, too."
- "Our dog Leader is much better at 'Stupid Pet Tricks' than Clinton's cat, Socks."

- Dole and Kemp are two top-four-letter words you can teach your children."
- "No more Big Macs at White House state dinners."

Aids quilt now stretches out nearly a mile

WASHINGTON (AP) — When it was first displayed in the nation's capital in 1988, the AIDS quilt was about a city block long. With eight more years of deaths from the epidemic, the colorful patchwork remembering the victims now stretches nearly a mile from the Washington Monument to the foot of the Capitol.

Even so, the full quilt — on display this weekend for the first time in four years — commemorates only about 11 percent of Americans who have died from AIDS.

"I have several friends who will be laid out in the panels," said Joe Wassam, a Takoma-Park, Md., volunteer helping put the quilt down on the grassy Mall. "This is a way of being back with them."

The quilt, bearing the names of more than 70,000 people on 38,000 panels, is the centerpiece of dozens of weekend events sponsored by several groups, designed to again focus attention on the epidemic.

Hundreds of thousands of people are expected to see the quilt over the long Columbus Day weekend.

Friendly crowds greeted President Clinton and his wife Hillary Rodham Clinton when they strolled, sometimes hand in hand, through sections of the sun-dappled quilt in late afternoon.

"This means a lot to us," someone shouted. "We love you," cried another.

Another volunteer thanked Clinton for being the first president to visit the quilt. When it was here in 1988, President Reagan was in office; in 1992, it was President Bush.

The Clintons, both with somber expressions, stopped for a minute or more to inspect several individual quilt panels. Returning briefly to campaign mode, Clinton waved to the crowd as he walked back to his car.

Earlier Friday, with throngs already crowding the black fabric walks between quilt panels, Vice President Al Gore and his wife, Tipper, joined poet Maya Angelou and others to read aloud some of the names displayed on the quilts.

"I just hope I was pronouncing them right," said Betsy Schissel, 16, of Ithaca N.Y., a volunteer reader.

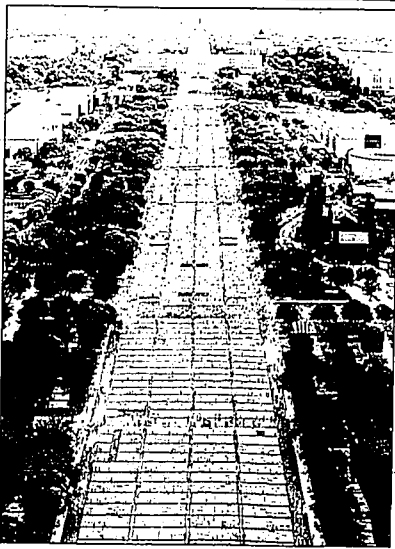

As with the nearby Vietnam War memorial, family and friends of the victims "touched" panels, wrote messages, prayed, cried or remembered them in their own way. Bouquets of flowers lay beside some panels, one with a cap signed "Love Always, Mom."

AIDS activists protested Friday that the combinations of AIDS drugs they must take cost tens of thousands of dollars. On Saturday, actress Elizabeth Taylor is expected to lead a candlelight march from the Capitol to the Lincoln Memorial.

In opposition to a gay activist group's "National Coming Out Day" on Friday, a group called Parents and Friends of Ex-Gays held a news conference to announce its message that homosexuals could become heterosexual.

Quilt organizers said they brought the full quilt here to remind Congress that the disease still has no cure, although new drugs for the first time give hope of better controlling it.

Cleve Jones, who came up with the idea for the quilt in 1985, said the United States "possessed the knowledge, the resources, the institutions and the people to find a cure for AIDS and there can be a cure if the president and Congress lead the way. They should get with the program."

Also on many people's minds was Congress' recent bill, signed into law by Clinton, that denies federal recognition to homosexual marriages.

The AIDS quilt panels, made by family and friends and given to the NAMES Project, are decorated with car keys, condoms, flags, merit badges, motorcycle jackets and photographs.

There are panels made for people known only to a few others and panels remembering such famous people as tennis star Arthur Ashe, actor Rock Hudson and MTV star Pedro Zamora.

Usually, the quilt is divided and travels the country, where organizers say it is seen by 1 million people each year. Organizers said this may be the last time it is displayed in its entirety. Some 4,000 new panels were presented to the project in the last few days.

For the Washington display, more than 12,000 volunteers helped assemble the 3-by-6-foot quilt panels and black landscape fabric walkways. Altogether, it weighs 42 tons.

According to statistics from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, AIDS is the leading cause of death among American men aged 25 to 44 and the third-leading killer among women the same age.

Between 40,000 and 80,000 Americans become infected with the AIDS virus each year.

Latinos rallying for 1st immigrant rights march

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of Latinos, spurred by the new welfare and immigration laws and what they see as a rising tide of anti-immigrant feeling, were rallying around the country and preparing to march Saturday in the capital.

The first march for Latino and immigrant rights calls for a streamlined citizenship process, extended immigrant amnesty and a 57-hour minimum wage. Organizers say they expect around 100,000 people for the pre-Columbus Day event.

"We have to cut the edge off the xenophobia that is being created in this country," said Juan Jose Bocanegra, a member of the coordinating committee, Coordinadora '96, who lives in Seattle. "We're not here to be bashed around like pinatas. We demand respect."

Bocanegra said marchers are expected from 39 states, with big groups coming from New York, Chicago, Phoenix, Los Angeles, San Antonio, Houston, Little Rock, Seattle and Portland, Ore.

At a rally in Tucson, Ariz., on Wednesday, Isabel Garcia, director of the Pima County legal defender's office, said, "We are going to introduce ourselves to our nation's capital. We are affirming our place in this country."

"This is the beginning of a campaign to change the hearts and minds of a public that has reacted in a negative way to my people out of fear and, I hate to say it, ignorance," said Garcia, who is a longtime Latino rights activist.

Also in the march's platform: human and constitutional rights for all, equal opportunities and affirmative action, free public education for all from kindergarten through university, expanded health services, citizen police review boards and labor law reform.

Landmark legislation to crack down on illegal immigration, including a doubling of the size of the Border Patrol, was passed in Congress' waning days recently. In negotiations with White House officials, Republican lawmakers agreed to limit the degree to which legal immigrants would be susceptible to losing certain benefits after a year on welfare.

March organizers said they were relieved that some of the harsher provisions were taken out but they remained concerned about the effect of the immigration law and the new welfare reform law on the Latino community.

The marchers will hear from numerous Latino leaders including AFL-CIO Vice President Linda Chavez-Thompson; Reps. Ed Pastor, D-Ariz., president of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus, and Luis Guterres, D-Ill.; and Roberto Maestas, executive director of El Centro de la Raza.

Clinton signs bills on intelligence funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton signed a bill Friday that boosts intelligence agency spending and another that makes theft of trade secrets a federal crime.

Clinton said he signed the 1997 Intelligence Authorization Act despite his objection to three of the bill's provisions, including one that establishes three new assistant directors of central intelligence under CIA Director John Deutch.

Although the nation's intelligence budget is an official secret, it is reported to total about $30 billion for the 1997 fiscal year, up 4.9 percent from 1996.

In a written statement issued at the White House, Clinton said he would support Deutch in asking the next Congress to repeal the provision that created assistant directors for intelligence collection, analysis and administration.

"I share his concern that those provisions will add another layer of positions requiring Senate confirmation" without a corresponding increase in the CIA director's authority to manage the intelligence agencies, Clinton said.

The bill:

- Gives the FBI power to subpoena local telephone records.
- Authorizes the CIA and the National Security Agency to collect data on foreign citizens abroad for U.S. investigations.
- Requires Senate confirmation of the CIA's general counsel, that is meant to prevent political influence over a position designed to block illegal operations.
- Prohibits federal employment of senior intelligence officials for three years after their departure from government.

It also prohibits the CIA from using American journalists as spies. But the restriction could be waived in extraordinary circumstances and the CIA could still have its own agents pose as journalists.

The bill would not prohibit journalists who choose to provide information from doing so, according to Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M., the primary author of the provision.

'Froggy' kicked out of Baltimore school libraries

TOWSON, Md. (AP) — Froggy's decadent lifestyle — the smoking, the criminal activity — got him kicked out of school.

The controversial illustrations in Kevin O'Malley's book "Froggy Went A-Courtin'" prompted officials to yank it from library shelves in Baltimore County.

Froggy is depicted as a 1930s gangster — burning money, robbing, smoking and toting a revolver as he speeds away from police, portrayed as cats.

O'Malley, 35, who has authored and illustrated 14 books, said the school district should have given him a chance to defend his work before banning it.

"I'm angry that they put me in this position without being heard," he said in Friday's editions of The (Baltimore) Sun.

School library coordinator Della Curtis said the ban isn't censorship, but "selection" — although she acknowledged that she couldn't remember the school district doing such a thing previously in her 27 years there.

7 arrested in FBI bombing plot

Undercover agent given center plans

CLARKSBURG, W.Va. (AP) — Seven people connected with a right-wing militia were arrested Friday on charges of plotting to blow up the FBI's national fingerprint record center and two other federal buildings in West Virginia.

Agents began making the arrests after Floyd Raymond Looker, the leader of the Mountaineer Militia, gave blueprints of the FBI complex to an undercover agent in exchange for $50,000, the FBI said. The agent was posing as a middleman for a fictitious international terrorist group.

The blueprints of the new $200-million FBI complex in Clarksburg were obtained by a Clarksburg firefighter who belonged to the militia, the FBI said. The fire department keeps the blueprints in case of a fire.

"There was a plot. It was ended before it could be consummated," said John P. O'Connor, agent in charge of the FBI's Pittsburgh-based division. "There were never any explosive devices constructed. There was no immediate threat to our facility."

O'Connor said the militia also targeted two other federal facilities in the state. He wouldn't identify the places. Law officers confiscated plastic explosives and detonators Friday at five places in West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

The arrests came after a 16-month investigation. The fingerprint complex is known as the FBI Criminal Justice Information Services Division. Opened last year, it contains fingerprint records that the FBI has collected from police departments nationwide. The identification division provides information to state and local police departments.

The fingerprint center eventually will use computer programs for converting fingerprints into electronic images. This will enable the FBI to perform fingerprint checks in a matter of hours instead of weeks or months. Automated criminal record-keeping will also be available for background checks, whether the person is seeking a job at a day-care center or trying to buy a gun.

The seven defendants were jailed without bail pending hearings next week.

The charges included conspiring to make bombs, transporting explosives across state lines and conspiring to place explosives near the FBI complex.

The conspiracy charges carry up to five years in prison and $250,000 in fines. The other counts carry up to 10 years and $250,000 in fines.

O'Connor said Looker, 56, of Stonewood and firefighter James Rogers, 40, of Jane Lew were members of the militia organization. Court papers identified

Economist dies 3 days after Nobel Prize win

NEW YORK — William Vickrey, who won the Nobel Prize in economics this week, died Friday after being found slumped over the wheel of his car. He was 82.

Vickrey, who had been traveling to an academic conference in Boston, was found by a passing motorist Thursday night, said Suzanne Trimel, a spokeswoman for Columbia University, where Vickrey was a professor emeritus. His car was on a parkway in Harrison, about 30 miles north of New York City, she said.

Vickrey, who had taught at Columbia for nearly 60 years, was pronounced dead on arrival at a hospital. At the family's request, the cause of death was not immediately released.

Congress authorizes King memorial

WASHINGTON — After 12 years of struggle, the nation's oldest and largest black fraternity has persuaded Congress to authorize construction of a memorial to slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. "I've gotten gray since it started," George H. Scales Jr., chairman of the effort for Alpha Phi Alpha said Friday. "A group of three or four of us in 1984 thought it would be appropriate for Martin Luther King to have some recognition for ... the legacy he had left, not only to the black community, but to the United States and the world."

A provision in a massive parks and public lands bill, passed just before Congress adjourned last week, authorizes construction of the monument on federal land in the District of Columbia. The Department of Interior will make the final site designation.

Study links abortion, cancer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Early this year, subway riders in Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington started to see anti-abortion billboards with an unsettling message: "Women Who Choose Abortion Suffer More & Die Earlier Breast Cancer."

Now a similar claim appears in a medical study that received widespread criticism as it was being released Friday.

The study's authors from Penn State's Milton S. Hershey Medical Center and Baruch College in New York City say that a woman who has an abortion is 30 percent more likely to develop breast cancer later in life. They blame abortion for some 5,000 cases of breast cancer each year.

Their study appears in October's Journal of Epidemiology and Community Health, a peer-reviewed publication of the British Medical Association.

"You do have to take it with caution," epidemiologist Vernon Chinchilli, one of the authors, said of the study's findings. "But if these numbers are real, it is of concern." Chinchilli and his co-author, who has written for anti-abortion newsletters, collected information from 23 studies involving 25,967 women with breast cancer and 34,972 without, then re-analyzed the old data to find out how many had had abortions.

The practice of combining various epidemiological studies into a single superstudy, known as meta-analysis, is often used by disease trackers to reveal an effect too subtle to show up consistently in the individual studies.

Clintons celebrate 21st anniversary

WASHINGTON (AP) — It wasn't as hectic as last year when the president's wife surprised her husband by inviting members of their wedding party to the White House for a 20th anniversary reunion.

Nor was there a head of state around to give the sort of anniversary toast that Mexican President Ernesto Zedillo offered to Bill and Hillary Clinton last year.

The White House was not divulging the nature of the anniversary present the president purchased for his wife at a Dayton, Ohio department store on Thursday during a break in a long campaign day.

But Neel Lattimore, the first lady's press secretary, said the Clintons spent part of the day together and planned to have dinner out in the town.

But in the afternoon, the president's motorcade rolled out of the White House gates and headed for a golf course.

'Witch' sentenced

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP)

A self-proclaimed witch was sentenced Friday to six years in prison for having sex with a 14-year-old boy who said she put him under a spell and sent him love letters signed in her blood.

Kerri Lynn Patavino, 28, also was ordered to serve five years' probation.

U.S., South Korea to bolster defenses against North

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The United States and South Korea agreed Friday to strengthen security and oppose any aggression from the North following the communist state's recent submarine infiltration.

The move was announced after Washington's top diplomat for Asia, Assistant Secretary of State Winston Lord, met with Foreign Minister Gong Ro-myung.

Lord and Gong discussed coordinating American and South Korean policies towards North Korea, said Yoo Myung-hwan, director general at the Foreign Ministry's office of American affairs.

"The two sides agreed to improve the joint South Korea-U.S. defense posture to repel any aggression from the North," Yoo said reporters. He did not elaborate.

The U.S. Embassy had an immediate comment on the talks. Lord was to hold a press conference before vinding up a three-day visit to Seoul on Saturday.

South Korean troops have been searching for North Korean agents believed on board a submarine that ran aground off South Korea's eastern coast on Sept. 18. Twenty-two of the 26 men on board have been killed or found dead. One was captured.

The North pledged a "thousandfold" retaliation for the killings. The South, accusing its communist neighbor of repaying its aid with armed provocation, cut off humanitarian and other assistance.

The South believes the submarine was on a spy mission, while the North maintains it ran aground by accident.

North Korea on Friday repeated its demand that Seoul return the submarine and its crew. It also charged that the bloodshed could have been avoided if Washington had agreed to peace talks.

The tensions have threatened one of the Clinton administration's major foreign policy achievements — a 1994 deal to freeze North Korea's nuclear program.

In Friday's talks, Washington emphasized the importance of implementing the nuclear deal, and the South agreed in principle while maintaining that the North must apologize for the sub's infiltration, officials said.

The agreement would provide two modern nuclear reactors to the North in return for freezing its nuclear program, suspected of bomb development.

South Korea had earlier indicated it might delay the deal as a way to punish the North, which might have prompted North Korea to abandon the deal.

The rival Koreas did not sign a peace treaty at the end of their 1950-53 conflict, and are still technically at war.

Also Friday, South Korean demonstrators demanded fighter South Korean jurisdiction over American troops in South Korea, following the slaying of a South Korean woman, allegedly by a U.S. serviceman.

Prosecutors delivered a letter Friday to the U.S. military command requesting that Pvt. Eric Munnich of Chicago be handed over to South Korean custody. It was the first time South Korean prosecutors have officially asked for custody of a U.S. soldier.

Munnich, 22, has confessed to strangling a 44-year-old South Korean prostitute in a dispute Sept. 7 over the price of her services, the U.S. military said.

He is the U.S. military detention under a 1956 treaty that allows American soldiers accused of crimes to remain in U.S. hands until appeals in South Korean courts have been exhausted.

Michael Jackson rocks Seoul but seats go empty in stadium

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — After years of controversy and opposition, Michael Jackson took his world "HIStory" tour to Seoul Friday.

It was a partial victory. Tens of thousands of fans screamed and cried, but KBS-television said only 36,000 of the Olympic Stadium's 60,000 tickets had been sold.

Seats were seen selling off tickets for less than their original prices.

"I love you Michael!" hundreds of fans shouted. Many waved huge banners or brightly colored cardboard signs.

In spite of fears, anti-Jackson protesters were not present. A collection of Christian, civic and consumer organizations had opposed the concert for months because of 1993 child molestation allegations against Jackson.

The first attempt to bring Jackson to Seoul in 1994 failed when the Culture Ministry refused approval.

Unidentified students hold a Michael Jackson poster during Jackson's concert at Olympic Stadium in Seoul Friday.

Timor activists win Nobel prize

OSLO, Norway (AP) — A Roman Catholic bishop and an exiled activist won the Nobel Peace Prize Friday for their work to end the conflict in East Timor, a former Portuguese colony annexed by Indonesia in 1975.

Indonesia expressed "regret" at the decision to honor Bishop Carlos Filipe Ximenes Belo and Jose Ramos Horta, accusing Ramos Horta of being "clearly involved in inciting and manipulating the people of East Timor."

The Nobel committee, for its part, accused Indonesia of persecuting the people of East Timor and said the prize was given in hopes it would "spur efforts to find a diplomatic solution to the conflict in East Timor based on the people's right to self-determination."

"It was about to become a forgotten conflict, and we wanted to contribute to maintaining momentum," committee chairman Francis Sejersted told reporters.

He said the committee was aware the prize award could trigger a crack-down on East Timor activists by the Indonesian government, a fear echoed by Amnesty International, a human rights group that won the peace prize in 1977.

"We're concerned about what happens next," Amnesty spokesman Rory Mungovan said in London. "There will be an outpouring, a celebration, on the ground. Our worry is that it will be met with repression."

The Vatican welcomed the news with "deepest satisfaction."

"It is my wish that this may contribute to concrete results that respect the rights of peoples," said Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro-Valls.

He said the prize recognized Belo's work as a "man of the Church characterized by an unending search for dialogue always directed at peaceful solutions."

Yeltsin takes to airwaves to show he's in charge

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin, taking to the airwaves to show that he remains in control despite health problems, promised Friday to crack down on tax evaders to remedy the country's financial crisis.

Speaking in a clear, measured tone, Yeltsin said Prime Minister Viktor Chomyrnin will head a special commission to enforce tax laws.

"Everybody will pay taxes and there will be no exceptions," he said during the seven-minute speech.

It was Yeltsin's second radio broadcast since he began to prepare for heart bypass surgery. He made the first of what aides said would be regular radio speeches on Oct. 3.

Pope's recovery from surgery continues

ROME — Pope John Paul II took short walks Friday and ate his first solid food since undergoing an appendectomy three days ago.

The 76-year-old pontiff has no stomach pains and his intestinal functions are working normally, according to a medical statement.

"He even had biscuits for breakfast," said Dr. Corrado Manni, chief anesthesiologist at Gemelli Polyclinic, where the pope has been hospitalized since Sunday.

John Paul has taken several strolls along the corridor of his 10th floor suite and has prayed and read at length, the doctors said.

John Paul is expected to leave the hospital early next week.

Netanyahu wants quick deal

HEBRON, West Bank (AP) — Israeli and Palestinian security chiefs toured the West Bank city of Hebron together Friday to get a closer look at the problems standing in the way of an Israeli troop withdrawal.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu wants to conclude a deal on Hebron as quickly as possible, said his spokesman, David Bar-Ilan.

The Haaretz daily newspaper said Israel hoped to reach a deal before the U.S. elections in November, but Bar-Ilan denied the U.S. vote was a factor.

Haaretz said a tentative date for redeployment had already been decided on, and President Clinton's Middle East coordinator, Dennis Ross, and Palestinian negotiators had been informed.

Netanyahu's office denied a date was set.

In Hebron, senior security officials from both sides toured the city Friday in an old, unmarked white van. The three men — the Palestinians Jibril Rajoub and Mohammed Dallan and Israel's Maj. Gen. Shaul Mofaz — dodged reporters trying to follow them.

The tour included visits to two hilltops that overlook Jewish enclaves in downtown Hebron. About 450 Jewish settlers live in Hebron, amid 94,000 Palestinians.

Israel is trying to negotiate better security arrangements for the settlers, and has insisted on changes in the agreement the Palestinians had worked out with Israel's previous government.

Under the initial accord, Israeli troops were to leave 80 percent of Hebron and only stay in the downtown area where the settlers live.

Israel now wants its troops to remain on hilltops overlooking the settler areas, and to enter Palestinian-controlled areas in pursuit of Palestinian suspects.

In a third demand, Israel wants Palestinian police to be armed only with pistols, not rifles.

Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erakat said he was doubtful an agreement could be reached soon, saying Israel's demands were tantamount to renegotiating the terms of redeployment.

Arafat has said he is willing to discuss minor changes in implementation, but would not start negotiations from scratch.

7 die from deadly Ebola virus in Gabon

BRAZZAVILLE, Congo (AP) — Seven people have died of the deadly Ebola virus in Gabon, the second outbreak in the central African nation this year, health officials said Friday.

Victims of the virus were treated in a hospital in Booue, 175 miles east of Gabon's seaside capital, Libreville, according to Dr. Andre Nkikuyez of the World Health Organization.

Nkikuyez, speaking from the WHO headquarters in neighboring Congo, said seven people had died of the hemorrhagic virus since Oct. 5.

He said it was not known how many other people were infected with the virus, but at least 27 people had come into contact with the victims.

Lake Coeur d'Alene dispute moves to high court

Tribes contests state ownership of northern lake

BOISE (AP) — Who owns Lake Coeur d'Alene is a question of government agreements, legal doctrines and the Constitution.

And for the Coeur d'Alene Tribe, it is a question of the heart.

"It's God's lake," tribal spokesman Bob Bostwick said. "But He put the Coeur d'Alene Tribe here to take care of it."

They take that charge so seriously that all seven members of the Coeur d'Alene Tribal Council will be in Washington, D.C., on Wednesday when the U.S. Supreme Court hears arguments on the tribe's claim to ownership of the northern Idaho lake widely considered one of the world's most beautiful.

In October 1991 the tribe sued members of the Idaho Land Board, the panel of five elected officials that oversees state property, claiming ownership of Lake Coeur d'Alene and several rivers within its Panhandle reservation. Tribal leaders contend President Ulysses S. Grant gave the Coeur d'Alene lake in an 1873 executive order establishing their reservation.

The state maintains Grant had no authority to cede the lake to the tribe without Congressional approval, and that the Constitution's equal footing doctrine means Idaho automatically assumed ownership of the beds and banks of all navigable waters within its borders at statehood in 1890.

"We are defending the public's ability to use and enjoy Lake Coeur d'Alene," Idaho Attorney General Alan Lance said.

But it was the 11th Amendment prohibition on federal lawsuits against states without their consent that convinced a judge to dismiss the tribe's case. Then the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed that decision, ruling that federal courts have the authority to require state officials to comply with federal law. The appellate court also said that since the Coeur d'Alenes' suit named individual Land Board members, the state itself would not be bound by the outcome.

Idaho appealed to the Supreme Court, which agreed in April to hear the case. A high court opinion involving the Seminole Tribe and the state of Florida the month before seemed to buttress Idaho's argument. And the Idaho attorney general's office called losing individual Land Board members "a ploy to circumvent the 11th Amendment."

"We disagree with the 9th Circuit ruling that only the officers would be bound by a decision," Lance said. "If the state's elected officers cannot regulate the lake, for all practical purposes the state cannot regulate the lake."

The Land Board includes the governor, attorney general, secretary of state, superintendent of public instruction and controller. The Coeur d'Alene Tribe contends these state officials and their predecessors in office have failed to regulate the 30-mile-long lake, doing far too little to clean up heavy-metal contamination throughout the basin from a century of hard-rock mining.

Bostwick said the Coeur d'Alene's ownership claim is justified in part because tribal members would do a far better job of caring for the lake. To them, it's personal.

"The stewardship of it has just been a failure, an absolute abysmal failure. And that's reason enough," Bostwick said. "But the most important reason in the legal argument is it always was the Coeur d'Alene Tribe's lake. It always has been and it always will be."

The federal government and the tribe have sued mining companies in the Silver Valley, demanding an estimated $1 billion to repair alleged environmental damages down the Coeur d'Alene River to Lake Coeur d'Alene. Lance and Gov. Phil Batt tried to avert the legal action, telling Attorney General Janet Reno it might undermine voluntary cleanup initiatives.

A separate lawsuit filed by the federal government seeking ownership of one-sixth of the lake on behalf of the Coeur d'Alene Tribe also is pending.

The state's 11th Amendment immunity does not apply in that case.

Bostwick said all the legal wrangling could have been avoided if the state had agreed years ago to negotiate with the tribe.

"The tribe didn't come with a lawyer and a hammer. The tribe came with a hand extended and some real concern about the lake, and the Land Board shut the door in their face," he said.

Light clouds grace the blue sky above Lake Coeur d'Alene Monday. Who owns the lake is a question of government agreements, legal doctrines and the Constitution.

NATION IN BRIEF

Man agrees to plea bargain in shooting death
 IDAHO FALLS — The man accused of killing Randy Raymond on May 15 at the home of Raymond's estranged wife has pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of voluntary manslaughter.

Ridge Noble, 43, had been charged with second-degree murder. Noble will be sentenced Dec. 6. Voluntary manslaughter carries a maximum penalty of 30 years in prison. The former charge of second-degree murder has a maximum penalty of life in prison.

Raymond, 40, was killed by Noble on the deck of Holly Raymond's home in Idaho Falls. Noble was dating Mrs. Raymond at the time of the slaying.

Justice Department awards money to Idaho

BOISE — The U.S. Department of Justice has awarded Idaho and nine other states $450,000 in grants to help teach local businesses and governments how to comply with the Americans with Disabilities Act.

The Idaho Task Force on the ADA received a small business education grant under the program, which funded similar projects in 16 states last year.

Small business education grants also went to organizations in Arkansas, Maryland, Minnesota, New Mexico and Wisconsin. Statewide information-sharing grants were awarded to groups in Iowa, Mississippi, Utah and Washington.

The Americans with Disabilities Act was passed in 1990 and prohibits discrimination against people with disabilities.

Documents over doctor's conduct sealed

BOISE — A 4th District judge has sealed public court documents involving the state Board of Medicine and a physician the panel wants out of the profession.

Judge Deborah Bail agreed to the board's request in a case involving a former Rexburg physician, Dr. Brent E. Woodfield.

Only months after he began work in Idaho in 1991, he was accused of drugging a married patient and taking her to a Montana motel for a sexual tryst.

Board attorney Jean Uranga said Thursday the regulators wanted the records sealed to protect patients' confidentiality, not the reputation of the board.

Police say they heard about more victims

BOISE — Prosecutors apparently knew of a dozen possible victims of Kerry S. Thomas in 1990 — not just five, when they negotiated a plea bargain allowing the Boise man to escape charges of knowingly spreading the AIDS virus.

Confronted at the time with evidence of his alleged crimes, Thomas blamed his accusers for failing to protect themselves, then said: "We all have to do something," according to Boise Police reports released Thursday.

The reports were made public nearly two weeks after Thomas, 32, was accused of committing the same crime earlier this year while on parole from prison. He has pleaded innocent to the charge.

In the police reports, an investigator in 1990 identified at least 12 women who said they had sex with Thomas at a time when he was suspected of carrying HIV. In the end, Ada County prosecutors filed charges involving only five.

Faint praise on forest chief's exit

LEWISTON (AP) — Jack Ward Thomas leaves his post as U.S. Forest Service chief with faint praise from environmentalists and kinder words from Idaho Republicans.

The role reversal of Thomas' allies and critics from the early days of his ascent to the agency's top spot in 1993 illustrates the agency's whirlpool politics.

"I think he came into office with great expectations from the conservation community," said Idaho's attorney general, Larry Craig, R-Idaho, said Thursday that Thomas' move did not come as a surprise to him, either.

Craig said he hoped the next appointment by the Clinton administration would be less politicized.

Thomas was a career Forest Service employee but had not followed the traditional route to the chief's office through Washington, D.C., before his selection by the Clinton administration.

Craig said there will be hearings on the potential appointees before his Senate subcommittee overseeing the Forest Service.

He stressed he was not opposed to Thomas' actions as much as the administration's meddling.

Cash flows in for initiatives' foes

BOISE (AP) — Cash poured in during the summer to underwrite forces fighting to defeat three major initiatives on November's Idaho ballot, according to campaign finance disclosure reports filed Thursday with the state.

Sen. John Peavey Gov. Phil Batt

Businesses and special interest organizations provided nearly 40 percent of the cash to finally get campaigns off the ground in support of Gov. Phil Batt's nuclear waste deal and against the One Percent Initiative to slash property taxes.

The Idaho Education Association, whose teachers underwrote much of the 1992 campaign that defeated a version of the property tax initiative, donated $30,000 at the end of August and the Hospital Association $20,000 a week earlier, accounting for 40 percent of the $170,000 raised. Both rely significantly on property tax revenues and fear they will be shorted if the state has to make up the cash lost if the initiative passes.

Opponents of the proposition banning spring bear hunting and bear hunting with hounds and bait raised another $175,000 this summer, pushing their total revenue to $450,000.

Initiative sponsor Idaho Coalition United for Bears raised another $30,000 to bring overall receipts for the campaign to nearly $95,000.

But while the Sportsmen's Heritage Defense Fund has maintained that the initiative is being pushed by out-of-state interests, a substantially greater share of its summer cash came from outside Idaho — $85,000 compared to just $8,500 for the coalition. An Ohio group donated $35,000 while one in Florida contributed $40,000 to the anti-initiative campaign.

At the same time, a third of the coalition's overall cash — $32,500 — has come from the Washington, D.C.-based Humane Society of the United States, which sportsmen claim is out to end recreational hunting. Another $10,000 was donated by a Sun Valley apartment owner.

While the sportsmen have already begun airing television advertisements against the bear hunting restrictions, there was no entry on the financial report through Sept. 30 showing how much the media drive was costing.

Businesses with interests in eastern Idaho and the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory along with the Nuclear Energy Institute in Washington, D.C., came up with nearly all of the $77,000 to begin fighting the initiative to void the agreement that trades resumption of radioactive dumping at INEL for a court-ordered moratorium on cleanup and removal of most waste there.

Monsanto Co., which mines and processes elemental phosphorus in southeastern Idaho, came up with $24,500 of the total. Nearly $20,000 of that is the salary of employee Trent Clark, who is now running the pro-agreement campaign.

Nevada GOP credited with killing Craig's nuclear dump bill

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The number-two Republican in the U.S. House of Representatives has credited two Nevada GOP lawmakers and a congressional hopeful with killing Idaho Republican Sen. Larry Craig's plan to temporarily dump the nation's nuclear waste in their state.

Sen. Larry Craig

House Majority Leader Dick Armye of Texas, in Boise Friday night to raise money for embattled Republican Rep. Helen Chenoweth, suggested the bill's chances were dim in the House once Craig was ousted through the Senate over a strident opposition from Nevada's two Democratic senators.

But he said Republican Reps. John Ensign and Barbara Vucanich of Nevada and GOP congressional candidate Jim Gibbons meet with Speaker Newt Gingrich and the other House leaders and convinced them to sidetrack the bill that has stirred strong criticism in the state.

"What I was amazed by is that these two senators were celebrated for trying and failing while you guys did the job under more difficult circumstances," Arnye said during a campaign stop on Thursday in Las Vegas. He admitted that if a vote had been allowed, he would have supported opening a temporary waste dump near Yucca Mountain.

Ensign told Gingrich and Arnye that allowing a vote in the House on Craig's bill would wipe out Nevada Republicans at the ballot box next month even though Democratic President Bill Clinton promised the state's Democratic governor and senators he would veto the plan if it ever reached his desk. Neither house had the votes to override a veto.

Hot autumn in Utah sets temperature records

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — An unusual autumn high-pressure weather system cooled Utah, but resulted in record temperatures Thursday throughout the state.

George's thermometers rose to 98 degrees, while Fillmore, in the southeastern part of the state, and Brigham City, to the north, reported 86s. Eastern Utah's Vernal had an 81.

for the month of October. Alta's highest-ever October temperature was 71 on Thursday. Delta made it to 91, while Coalville climbed to 86.

Even high-elevation areas were relatively balmy. Bryce Canyon reported 76 degrees and Park City, 78.

Meteorologist Bill Alder said the warm spell would continue today, with the predicted high at 84 degrees for Salt Lake. If the mercury indeed climbed that high, a record would be set for Oct. 11.

Yellowstone, Grand Teton fees may double

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — Entrance fees at Yellowstone and Grand Teton national parks could soon double with most of the new revenue earmarked for maintenance and operations at the parks.

National Park Service spokesman Dave Barna said both parks are almost certain to be included in a pilot fee program aimed at boosting budgets up to 25 percent.

The budget bill President Clinton signed last week could double the number of National Park Service sites included in the program to 100.

The program would allow involved parks to boost entrance fees and keep 80 percent of the new revenue.

Existing law allows parks to keep only 15 percent of the fees they collect with the rest going into the general treasury. "Part of the marketing or salesmanship is to show that the money will stay in the park," Barna said. "If it goes to a federal employee pay raise, or a ribbon-cutting somewhere else, then people are not going to view it very favorably."

But that name was too long, he decided. So he chopped off both ends. "Ver ITASCA put" wound up as Itasca, and everybody was pleased with the nice Indian name.

Q: What's the design of the King on a standard deck of playing cards based on any real king's portrait?

A. So it's said. On that of England's Charles I. Apart from minor alterations, that design hasn't changed in three centuries.
