Land application of dairy waste lacks supervision

By N.S. Nokkervent Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — There are more than 130,000 dairy cows in the Magic Valley, and each one generates as much waste as 20 humans.

Much of that waste is spread on local fields, but no one is making sure it's being done correctly.

Last year the responsibility for inspecting dairy waste management was turned over to the state Department of Agriculture. That responsibility includes the land application of dairy waste.

"There is a potential for environmental contamination and public health problems," said Mike McMasters of the Twin Falls office of the state Division of Environmental Quality. And the potential for trouble increases with the size of the operation, he said.

Leaks from dairy waste lagoons is easy to catch. The DEQ's main concern is what happens after the waste leaves the dairy, he said. It must be spread according to soil types and what the crops can take up, so it doesn't run off the fields or soak into the groundwater.

"To my knowledge, nobody's checking that," McMasters said.

Farmers are not supposed to spread the liquid or solid manure on frozen ground or during heavy rains, said Mary Patten, chief of the dairy bureau at the Agriculture Department. But nobody is checking that these guidelines are being followed.

"We are not out testing fields," Patten said.

McMasters said the Magic Valley has enough farmland for the waste generated at local dairies, if it's managed properly. And the manure with its organic content can improve the soil quality.

If too much waste is applied in an area, or if it's applied under the wrong conditions, bacteria, viruses and nitrates could contaminate water supplies, he said.

So far tests have shown nitrate and bacteria levels are below national drinking-water standards, McMasters said.

But restrictions on land application of dairy manure and all farm chemicals soon may tighten. A federal judge has given the state of Idaho five years to come up with plans to control the amounts of nutrients and other pollutants that run into Idaho streams.

Farmers long have tried to exempt themselves from complying with environmental regulations, said Mike Medberry of the Idaho Conservation League. That has continued because

Shoppers launch annual quest early around Twin Falls

By Pat Marcantonio Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — J.C. Orender sipped coffee and wondered about the whereabouts of his wife.

"My wife's here somewhere," said the Jerome man, his eyes searching the Target store at 7:15 a.m. Friday.

The couple already had hit Kmart and ShopKo.

"We're going to get down to Payless now," Orender said, "if I can find my wife."

In Twin Falls, the unofficial opening day of shopping season got off to a cold-yet brisk — start. Customers were out before dawn to take advantage of early

Retail sales: Hear them jingling

Total retail sales, November 1995: Statewide — $2.6 billion; Twin Falls County — $77.6 million; Hinkokota County — $39.5 million; Cassia County — $29 million; Blaine County — $28.4 million; Jerome County — $13.7 million; Lincoln County — $13.3 million; Camas County — $580,733.

Of course, not all sales are Christmas-related. And if a business has stores in more than one location, they may report the sales in the county of its choice, according to the Idaho State Tax Commission.

And while clerks waited on customers, others like Orender simply waited.

The day got off to an early start. Some stores opened at 6 a.m. Friday — some 90 minutes before the morning sky began to brighten.

700 plastic bags full of treats and coupons. Before the sun rose, shoppers lined up in the parking lot.

"I opened the door and after 12 minutes they were gone," said Target Manager Jene Yoder.

"We were all the way at the back of the line," said Lila Perdomo of Twin Falls.

"All the way down," added Victoria Martinez.

Shoppers smiled and waved to friends while pushing carts or sipping up sales to the tune of endless Christmas music.

"They're always happy early in the season," Yoder said. "Their faces change around Christmas Eve."

"Being out shopping gets you more in the mood," said Rhonda Wallace of Jerome, taking a break in the store cafeteria.

Judy Devine of Shoshone wasn't so happy.

Hero dog wakes, saves family from fire as they nap in apartment

Rescued from pound, he repays debt

SEATTLE — Ivan has been like a second child to Taj Brumleve since she rescued him as a 9-week-old puppy from an animal shelter.

Wednesday, he became her hero.

The Labrador retriever-Siberian husky mix awoke her as fire broke out in her Redmond, Wash., apartment and spread through her daughter's bedroom.

Ivan also rushed to the 3-year-old girl and tugged on her sleeve, leading her to the front door.

"He's the hero," Brumleve said from her room at the Westin Hotel in Seattle, where her family is staying with Ivan and their kitten, Orca.

Brumleve, who is legally deaf, has been training Ivan to alert her when the phone rings or someone is at the door, but she had not yet taught him how to react in emergencies.

"I didn't know he would do something like this," said Brumleve, 24, a homemaker, who takes Ivan with her everywhere, even to movies, where he typically has his own seat. "I think he just loves us."

Brumleve's husband, Michael, assistant housekeeping manager at the Westin, was at work Wednesday afternoon when the fire started.

Brumleve said she had put her daughter, Alexandra, down for a nap and then went downstairs and fell asleep on the couch.

Brumleve said she knew something was wrong because Ivan jumped on her chest despite his training to never display aggressive behavior toward her.

"When I sat up, the house was filled with smoke and he (Ivan) had Alexandra with him," she said. "Once he woke me up, he had her by the sleeve."

'Vampire cult' teens held in 2 murders

Sheriff's investigators photograph evidence at the home of Richard and Naomi Wendorf near Eustis, Fla. They were apparently slain by members of a teen-age 'vampire cult.'

BATON ROUGE, La. — Heather Wendorf wore purple hair and a dog chain around her neck, and told friends she was former demon who had talked with spirits during human blood-drinking rituals.

With her parents found slain and Ms. Wendorf missing, authorities feared she had been kidnapped by the killers. Then they began to suspect her.

Ms. Wendorf, an ex-boyfriend and three other teen-agers believed to be in a "vampire cult" in Kentucky were in jail Friday, tracked to Louisiana with the help of one teen's mother.

Roderick Ferrell, 16, and Dana Cooper, 19, both of Murray, Ky., and Scott Anderson, 16, of Mayfield, Ky., were arrested on murder warrants Thursday night, along with Ms. Wendorf, 15. She is a granddaughter of James Wendorf, a retired lawyer for the Billy Graham organization.

Charity Keese, 16, of Murray was charged with being an accessory to murder after the fact.

All are wanted in the murders of Richard Wendorf, 49, and his wife, Naomi Ruth Wendorf, 53, who were bludgeoned to death Monday night in their Eustis, Fla., home about 20 miles northwest of Orlando.

Tough negotiations ahead before any tax cut

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Despite gushy talk of bipartisanship, it won't be easy for congressional Republicans and President Clinton to agree on how to cut taxes and how to pay for it.

"Their appetite will exceed the available money," said Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee. "We really believe there needs to be a net reduction in tax revenue so there will be more money in people's pockets."

breaks for higher education.

They especially disagree on how to pay for new tax reductions, with Republicans favoring reliance on spending cuts and Democrats looking to pare existing breaks for businesses.

"We're going to be looking very carefully at that," said Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee. "We really believe there needs to be a net reduction in tax revenue so there will be more money in people's pockets."

Archer said he's not averse to scrapping outdated tax breaks, but Congress already reduced or eliminated the most lucrative breaks to finance health insurance reform and small-business tax relief.

Snow plasters Rockies as rain sweeps across Plains

The Associated Press

Rain and freezing drizzle swept into the Plains Friday while snow fell on the Rocky Mountains.

It was cold in the East and clear in the Pacific Northwest.

Rain pushed into the mid-Atlantic and Gulf Coast states, after leaving more than an inch in parts of Oklahoma. It was 24 degrees in Wilmington, N.C., breaking a record set in 1901.

Snow fell on the Rocky Mountains from Arizona to Montana, where up to 4 feet has fallen on the Blackfoot Indian Reservation in the last 10 days. Up to 9 inches was expected in Wyoming's Wind River range by early today.

The snow was expected to spread to the Plains, pushed by winds gusting to 40 mph. Rain and thunderstorms were expected in the Southwest.

In Spokane, Wash., about 7,000 homes and businesses remained without power because of an ice storm this week. More rain and snow were expected across the Pacific Northwest by today.

In Idaho, winds were brisk in the southwest and lower Snake River Valley with speeds of near 20 mph causing wind chill indexes in the single digits from Twin Falls to Pocatello during the morning.

Conditions improved somewhat during the afternoon under sunny skies but the day was still chilly.

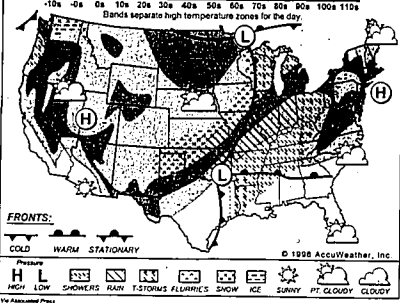

The warmest temperatures at midafternoon were reported at Caldwell, Mountain Home and Lewiston with 41 degrees. The coldest spot was Soda Springs, 28.

Skies over the Magic Valley cleared during the morning as pre-dawn clouds moved to the east. The nation's lowest wind chill Friday was minus 11 in Wheaton, Minn.

She didn't get a plastic Target bag. "I guess we were seven minutes late," Devine said.

While some people assume the Friday after Thanksgiving is the busiest shopping day of the year, it isn't, said Twin Falls Kmart manager Michael Lordin.

Dec. 23 and Christmas Eve are bigger because of the last-minute shoppers, he said. On the day after Thanksgiving, however, more than 200 people were waiting at Kmart's door.

"All the hustle and bustle has started," employee Sharon Perkins told a customer at about 8:30 a.m. "It's a beautiful day."

Looking at jewelry, Traci Perron of Dietrich said she's just permutating a family tradition.

"The men go hunting. The women go shopping. It's a different sport," she added with a laugh.

About 10 a.m., Sondra Hill of Filer browsed racks of sweaters at Roper's. "I always come downtown before I go to the mall," she said. "I usually find what I want. I love downtown."

In another part of the store, Bliss teenager LaNecce Jensen showed her father, DeVert, what T-shirts she wants for Christmas. It saves her father guessing.

"He'll kick me out of the store and then buy it," she added.

"We've been busy all morning," said Tom Ashenbrenner at Price Hardware. He expects more crowds, especially because people have one less week to shop for Christmas. "It compresses the season."

Near noon at the Magic Valley Mall, Bev Margardo of Wendell and visiting relative Gloria Lawrence struggled with large bags full of toys.

"We waited longer to buy them than to find the toy," Margardo said.

Former Buhl resident Dennis Eggleston rested in front of ShopKo. Now living in Las Vegas, he enjoyed shopping for old friends.

"Sometimes, I see people I haven't seen in a while," Eggleston said.

agricultural interests have convinced the Legislature that agriculture is not the problem.

But the federal court order may end voluntary compliance. Pollution sources will be identified and quantified, along with the river's ability to absorb pollutants, to determine how much waste can be allowed to run into a particular stream, Medberry said.

Agriculture is the biggest polluter in the state; it is the primary source of excess nutrients, sediments, eroded streambanks, pesticides and bacteria, he said.

And the way dairy waste is applied can be a problem, Medberry said.

But dairies and farms using waste from dairies aren't the only ones who may be spreading too much fertilizer on fields, Patten said.

All contributors to water-quality problems will be identified - including feedlots, cities, factories, irrigated agriculture and farmers who use commercial fertilizer, Patten said.

"It might there are a lot of abuses out there," he said.

Convicted abortion clinic murderer dead in jail cell

WALPOLE, Mass. (AP) — John C. Salvi III told the world he wanted to be executed for shooting two abortion clinic workers to death.

Massachusetts has no death penalty, so he was sentenced to prison for life.

Early Friday, Salvi carried out his own death sentence.

Guards found Salvi, 24, under his bed at the state's maximum-security prison with a plastic trash bag from a wastebasket tied around his head. He was alone in his cell and left no note.

In a preliminary report, the state medical examiner said the death was a suicide apparently caused by asphyxiation.

Salvi's death was the final chapter of the violent story that began Dec. 30, 1994, when he walked into two abortion clinics in the Boston area and began shooting with a rifle, killing two receptionists and wounding five others. It was the worst anti-abortion violence in U.S. history.

"He was a bad boy who grew up to be a bad man. God have mercy on his soul," said Ruth Nichols. Her daughter, Lee Ann Nichols, was shot 10 times as she begged Salvi for mercy.

"I've always wondered what my daughter's last thoughts were when he killed her. And I wonder what John Salvi's last thoughts were after bringing so much grief, pain and sorrow to so many people," Mrs. Nichols said from her home in North Olmsted, Ohio.

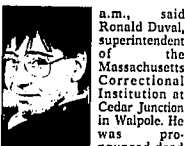

Salvi was sentenced to two consecutive life terms March 18 after jurors rejected claims that he was insane and convicted him of killing Nichols and Shannon Lowmyer.

The daytime shootings happened about 15 minutes apart at clinics on the same street in suburban Brookline.

Salvi was last seen alive during a routine cell check at about 5 a.m., said Ronald Duval, superintendent of the Massachusetts Correctional Institution at Cedar Junction in Walpole. He was pronounced dead at 6:55 a.m. after prison personnel could not revive him. The trash bags line wastebaskets in the prison cells, Duval said.

Salvi's mother, Ann Marie Salvi, said her son suffered from paranoid schizophrenia and belonged in a psychiatric hospital, not a prison.

"My young John is gone but there are others who will suffer in prison instead of a mental hospital where they belong," Mrs. Salvi said from her Naples, Fla., home.

Duval acknowledged that Salvi's mother had expressed concern within the last two weeks about her son's behavior. But Salvi was not under a suicide watch, nor was he receiving any mental health treatment.

"There was no indication that Mr. Salvi was mentally ill or in need of intervention," said Anthony Carnevale, a Department of Correction spokesman.

Salvi was the sixth state inmate to die at his own hands since July 1995. His lawyers said he twice had tried to commit suicide in jail, which authorities have denied.

During a competency hearing in May 1995, Salvi distributed a rambling statement in which he said he wanted the death penalty if convicted.

Justice rejects probe into Dem campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department on Friday turned down a third request to appoint an independent counsel to investigate Democratic fund-raising and from people with links to wealthy foreigners.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., who had made the request, called the decision "further proof" of the need for congressional hearings.

White House spokesman Mike McCurry, noting the decision, said officials would continue to "answer questions related to financial contributions forthcoming, as the president has directed."

The Justice Department rejected the Oct. 29 request from McCain and four congressmen because it found no "specific, credible evidence at this time that any individual covered by the provision of the Independent Counsel Act has committed any federal crime," wrote Mark Richard, deputy assistant attorney general for the criminal division.

The decision does not preclude the department from taking steps in the future to appoint an independent counsel. A Justice Department task force already is conducting a wide-ranging review of political fund-raising in the 1996 election.

In the letter to McCain, Richard noted the task force was exploring "the range of allegations and issues that have been raised... I give you my assurance that the allegations referenced in your letter and the points you raise will be carefully reviewed and considered."

McCain had asked the Justice Department to look into a $250,000 contribution the Democrats returned to a Korean corporation, into a Democratic fund-raiser at a Buddhist temple in California and into the activities of Democratic fund-raiser John Huang, a central figure in the controversy over foreign-linked contributions.

McCain also asked whether the Clinton administration had given

Sen. John McCain

Indonesia's Lippo Group banking and real estate conglomerate any special treatment where they belong," Mrs. Salvi said from her Naples, Fla., home.

Duval acknowledged that Salvi's mother had expressed concern within the last two weeks

McCain had made one earlier request for the appointment of an independent counsel, and the nonpartisan watchdog group Common Cause had made another.

House Rules Committee chairman Gerald B. Solomon of New York said the decision left the Republican-controlled Congress "no alternative but to pursue hearings that will get to the bottom of these very serious allegations."

At the White House, McCurry said: "The Justice Department has made its decision for the reasons indicated. The White House will continue to answer questions related to financial contributions forthcoming, as the president has directed."

The Justice Department said there were eight allegations, including one involving President Clinton and Vice President Al Gore. But the agency said it found no grounds for a prosecutor to look into their actions.

Gephardt adjusts to new role, sizes up Dem strength

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ask Democratic leader Dick Gephardt whether he'd rather be speaker of the House or president and he laughs.

"It isn't important what I am or what job I'm in," says the man who has reached for both offices and thus far come up short. "What's important is that we fight for the things that we think are needed in the country now."

His most recent fight was to topple the House Republican majority at the polls. He and his party lost when the GOP renewed its control for the first time in more than 60 years.

But Democrats, backed by a costly campaign by organized labor, chopped the Republican majority nearly in half, and Gephardt has decided to proclaim it a triumph.

"I think the president won a great victory and I think we won a great victory," the Missouri Democrat said in an interview in his Capitol office. "We're halfway toward the goal."

Grand fights on legislative principle are still months in the future. For now, Gephardt is trying to prepare the ground for the next election.

He's single-mindedly trying to discount the importance of the "six-year itch," the historical pattern in which the party in power in the White House loses seats in Congress in the sixth year of an administration. "I don't believe that (in) 1998 ... the president is going to have some great effect on us."

After reviewing the election results carefully, he's trying to avoid some of the shortcomings of the last two years. At a leadership meeting several days ago, he said he wants to know by June which Democrats plan to retire, so that operatives can recruit good candidates early next year and help them organize their campaigns effectively.

Two years ago, many Democrats retired in the months following the loss of the House — despite Gephardt's pleas to run again — and Republicans won a number of those seats.

At a closed-door caucus where

he was re-elected party leader earlier this month, Gephardt also appealed for all Democrats to make $1,000 contributions to two Democrats in run-offs later in December in Texas, Rep. Kent Bentsen seeking re-election, and Nick Lampson, trying to unseat GOP freshman Steve Stockman.

As of last week, each had received more than $100,000 from Democratic colleagues. Contributions of this type have not always been a strong suit for Democrats. In contrast, when Republican freshmen were clamoring for television commercials to answer organized labor last summer, members of the GOP leadership wrote checks for $250,000 and aggressively solicited smaller donations from the rank-and-file.

Gephardt is taking a page from the Republicans' book in another respect, appointing Rep. Rosa DeLauro of Connecticut to help out with "incumbent protection" — efforts to help the 41 first-term Democrats establish themselves politically back home. Ms. DeLauro met with the incoming Democratic freshmen last week to discuss how she was able to "take 55 percent of the vote and turn it into 72 percent over three elections," said one aide.

Says another strategist, "fund-raising will be priority one" for the newcomers.

The same thing was true two years ago when the 73-member GOP freshman class swept into office, and it helped many of them win re-election.

Over the next two years, Gephardt says Democrats will try to place themselves in the middle politically.

"If Republicans come to the middle great. We'll get a lot done. If they don't, we'll stay in the middle," he said.

He sidestepped a related question, though. With Speaker Newt Gingrich and Clinton both pledging to work together, where does that leave House Democrats?

"What's important is the doing, not the saying," he said. "I think a lot of Republicans are still on their extreme agenda, no matter what the speaker says or anyone else says."

House members want official's clearance restored

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sixteen House members have asked President Clinton to reinstate the security clearance of a State Department official who exposed a paid CIA agent's coverup of two murders in Guatemala.

One of the victims was an American citizen.

Richard Nuccio, a former top administration aide on Cuba and Guatemala, was stripped of his security clearance after he notified a member of Congress in March 1995 of the activities of the CIA operative, Julio Roberto Alprez, a Guatemalan colonel.

The CIA blamed Nuccio for the subsequent public disclosure of the agent's identity. The CIA places the highest priority on keeping secret the identity of its agents on grounds that public disclosure could lead to reprisals, including assassination.

A letter to Clinton sent by former House International Relations Committee Chairman Leo Hamilton, D-Ind., and 15 other lawmakers praised Nuccio and said his punishment was undeserved.

Ship hits light tower

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — The crew of an 800-foot container ship was ordered to undergo drug and alcohol tests after it crashed into a light tower in the Atlantic off the coast of Georgia.

The ship destroyed the tower and spilled 70 large drums of paint, two containers of corrosives and two of flammable liquids overboard, the U.S. Coast Guard said Thursday.

Clinton mum on Cabinet

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's payback time.

Women strongly backed President Clinton's re-election and now their advocates are looking for reward.

The president, who promised to make his first administration "look like America," appointed women to a quarter of the jobs that require Senate confirmation over the past four years, a White House record.

Clinton also brought more blacks and Hispanics into his Cabinet and other high posts compared to previous presidents. Oval Office occupants.

Now, many of those women and minorities are leaving and it remains an open question whether Clinton will repeat his comprehensive but, as it turned out, messy effort to ensure sexual and racial balance in his administration.

"I think a fair share of powerful women has to be a goal," said Patricia Ireland, president of the National Organization for Women. "And I don't think we're there yet. But I think they've made some good progress."

Some activists had expressed disappointment that few women's names had appeared in speculation to fill top vacancies, but they seemed more optimistic after several meetings with Vice President Al Gore.

"They broke all records in the first term," said Anita Perez Ferguson, president of the National Women's Political Caucus. "Even duplicating that effort is going to be good."

"But my sense is they're dedicated to going even further in a second term."

Administration personnel officials have also met a group of minority representatives, including Rainbow Coalition leader Jesse Jackson.

So far, Clinton has only said he wants to broaden his Cabinet to include a Republican. "I don't see a conflict between excellence and diversity," he said after the Nov. 5 election. "But I would extend that diversity to Republicans as well."

At least half the Cabinet is leaving. The seven confirmed departures include Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary, who is black, and Hispanic-Americans Federico Pena, Transportation chief, and Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros.

Other high profile losses include Deval L. Patrick, the black assistant attorney general credited with helping to persuade Clinton to stick with affirmative action.

The Cabinet lost two blacks earlier, with the death of Commerce Secretary Ron Brown in a plane crash and the resignation of Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy under an ethical cloud.

Clinton, musing Cabinet possibilities at Camp David this weekend, has not been quick to fill the coming vacancies.

But the White House hopes to avoid a replay of stumbles after the 1992 election, when the first two women put forward for attorney general ran into problems with their background and Clinton got other headaches from his diversity-driven process.

Travelers under 21 must have chaperon

MIAMI (AP) — The carnival's over for youthful cruisers.

Starting with the new year, Carnival Cruise Line will ban passengers under 21 unless they are accompanied by someone over-25. The world's largest cruise company said other passengers complained of drunk, rowdy kids.

Travel agents were briefed on the policy change during the inaugural cruise aboard Destiny, Carnival's newest ship and the world's biggest.

Astronauts could try spacewalk tonight

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA pored over documents and photos Friday to see whether Columbia's astronauts could do anything more to open a stuck hatch and proceed with a spacewalk considered crucial practice for station construction.

The earliest Tamara Jernigan and Thomas Jones could attempt a spacewalk is Saturday night. That's when they should have been floating out for spacewalk No. 2, which is now up in the air like everything else on the mission.

Jernigan and Jones pushed as hard as they could Thursday night — upside down, right-side up, with their hands and with their feet — but could not rotate the handle on the hatch leading out into the open cargo bay.

The handle barely moved, the hatch remained sealed and the spacewalk was canceled.

Flight directors considered having the two astronauts try again Friday night, but decided to wait until Saturday to give engineers more time to figure out what might be wrong.

It is the first time a hatch has jammed in 15 years of space shuttle flight. Engineers studying video beamed down by the crew saw nothing obstructing the six latches on the hatch.

NASA flight director Rob Kelso admitted there's little the astronauts can do. The drive mechanism for the latches is on the exterior of the hatch, beyond the crew's reach.

If there is no feasible way for the astronauts to force open the hatch, both spacewalks will be canceled.

Jernigan and Jones were supposed to test a 17 1/2-foot crane and other new tools.

F-117s to stay in Kuwait as long as needed, Perry says

DOHA, QATAR (AP) — Defense Secretary William Perry ordered eight F-117 stealth fighters to remain in Kuwait "as long as they are needed," as part of a potent U.S. military force in the Persian Gulf designed to deter both Iraq and Iran.

"We can never turn our backs on these threats. We can never relax," Perry said Friday while in Kuwait on the first stop of a four-nation swing through the region.

He stopped in this tiny emirate briefly to confer with its leaders and visit a site where U.S. Army tanks and other heavy weapons are stored.

U.S. Defense Secretary William Perry, left, visits with the Emir of Qatar Sheikh Hamad bin Khalifa Al Thani on Friday. Perry said the U.S. is closely watching Iraq's Saddam Hussein and will keep radar-evasive F-117 stealth fighters in Kuwait.

By keeping the F-117s in Kuwait, they remain within striking distance of Saddam Hussein's capital of Baghdad and any major military site in the country. The aircraft, which can fly nearly undetected by radar, are capable of delivering precision-guided munitions on specific targets or dropping 2,000-pound bombs that can bore deep into targets buried underground.

The aircraft had been rushed to the Persian Gulf in September following attacks on Kurdish minorities in northern Iraq by Saddam's forces. Shortly thereafter, President Clinton extended the range of the "no-fly" zone over southern Iraq, and American warships and planes launched 44 cruise missiles against the Iraqi air defense system.

During Operation Desert Storm, after Iraqi forces invaded Kuwait, the F-117s flew more than 3,000 missions over Baghdad "and not a single airplane was hit," Perry said.

During a brief visit to the aircraft carrier USS Kitty Hawk sailing off Kuwait's shores, Perry told hundreds of sailors gathered on the hangar deck, "There's nothing more intimidating than an aircraft carrier battle group."

"That's your task — intimidate Iran and Iran!" Perry told the young sailors, adding "It's a hell of a lot better to deter war than to fight one."

And he said maintaining an intimidating U.S. military force in the Gulf was the best way to accomplish the mission of protecting two-thirds of the world's oil resources.

The carrier, its home port in San Diego, is newly arrived in the Persian Gulf as the lead ship in a fleet of some 40 U.S. and allied vessels.

"This is one of the most powerful naval forces in the world," Perry said, adding that it is backed up by more than 200 U.S. and allied aircraft operating out of Kuwait and Saudi Arabia as they monitor the skies over Iraq and the Gulf region.

Perry's visit is to assure Gulf nations of continued U.S. support in the second Clinton administration as well as to visit with service men and women posted here this holiday weekend.

He lavished praise on them all, thanking them for serving their country while many of their families celebrated back home.

Zairian rebels' fire herds refugees

SAKE, Zaire (AP) — Prodded by the gunfire of Zairian rebels, tens of thousands of Rwandan refugees fled steadily out of eastern Zaire on Friday on their weary march home.

Refugee accounts over the past two weeks indicate the gunfire is part of a pattern.

The rebels fire warning shots to herd refugees toward Rwanda and restrict aid workers' access to the area.

Rwandans who reached Sake, a town nine miles west of the border, said the rebels fired assault weapons to force more than 40,000 people onto the road. Some said they saw bodies along the road, while others said no one was injured.

"They started shooting early this morning and told us to start walking to Rwanda," said one refugee who was too frightened to give his name.

He said tens of thousands of refugees had started down from the surrounding hills. They fled there five weeks ago to escape fighting between rebels and former Hutu soldiers at the U.N. camps where they have lived for 2 1/2 years.

They were among hundreds of thousands of Rwandan Hutus who fled to Zaire in 1994 because they feared retaliation for a Hutu-led massacre of minority Tutsis in Rwanda.

The Zairian rebels, who want to oust President Mobutu Sese Seko, began fighting Rwandan Hutu extremists and Zairian soldiers five weeks ago.

Doctors say Mother Teresa will recover

CALCUTTA, India (AP) — Mother Teresa was near death after a heart attack a week ago, but doctors who removed blockages from her arteries on Friday said the 86-year-old nun will recover and be able to return to work.

One surgeon said Mother Teresa had a weak heart but astonishing "spiritual strength." "I've seen her near death at least on four occasions, and her recovery has always amazed me," said Dr. Patricia Aubanel.

Aubanel helped perform artery surgery known as angioplasty Friday on Mother Teresa, as well as in 1991 and 1993.

Speaking to reporters two hours after the surgery, Aubanel also revealed for the first time that Mother Teresa had suffered a mild heart attack last Friday. She had been hospitalized since then with chest pain and breathing difficulties.

Aubanel said Mother Teresa's survival was in doubt after the heart attack. Doctors had delayed an angiogram, a delicate test that revealed blockages in two arteries, because of concerns about her age and poor condition. They performed the angioplasty immediately after the angiogram Friday.

"Mother could not have lived had we not been able to accomplish this," said an upbeat Aubanel, flanked by the other six members of the medical team.

Mother Teresa was sleeping comfortably by midnight, after dining on chicken soup and toast, the hospital said. She was weak but in stable condition, and expected to remain in the hospital several more days regaining strength after the operation. Doctors also would be using drugs to treat an irregular heart beat first detected three months ago.

One-time logging center turns Green Party hothouse

Nature, laid-back ways take precedence in community

ARCATA, Calif. (AP) — Once called the "white city by the bay" for its tidy rows of gleaming Victorian homes and shops, this former lumber town is turning Green.

In a town where voters cast more ballots for Green party presidential candidate Ralph Nader than for Republican Bob Dole — 1,333 to 1,007 — party leaders say they are the first U.S. city with Greens running city hall.

"It's almost unthinkable that such a thing happened. But it did," says Robin Arkley, a 50-year resident and retired sawmill owner. He and his wife, Lois, proudly identify themselves as two of the remaining "conservatives" in this coastal town of 16,000 nestled amid redwood forests and green pastures 300 miles north of San Francisco.

Long gone, they say, are the days when the barber was the mayor and lumber workers at more than 40 area lumber mills outnumbered students at Humboldt State University.

Most of the mills are closed, leading to government regulations protecting wildlife habitat.

Now, students and faculty are more than half the population in a town known as much for funky VW vans and bicycle commuters as for "hemp festivals" and a love for social causes.

About 15 percent of Arcata voters are registered Greens.

"Even the Democrats are in shock. My gosh. The Green votes do count," says Melanie Williams, a longtime local Green party organizer and a lecturer in public science and women's studies at Humboldt State.

The top council vote-getter was a Democrat, 30-year-old Connie Stewart, a professor at Humboldt State and the first African American to hold an office in Arcata.

But two Greens also won, joining incumbent Jason Kirkpatrick, 28, a food co-op employee, for a majority on the nominally nonpartisan five-member council. They are Jennifer Hanan, the 29-year-old manager of a store selling environmentally friendly products; and "Bad" Bob Ornelas, 43, a former council member who runs a microbrewery.

Ornelas has long hair and flashes the occasional peace sign, and neither Hanan nor Kirkpatrick own a car, instead choosing to ride bikes and walk. But that aside, there are no neon signs that flash "green" when you meet them.

Still, when talking about the German-born Green philosophy, some longtime residents express concern over the party's far-left philosophy, calling it scary and socialist.

Arkley says he's put up with "hippie kids" from San Francisco, Los Angeles and elsewhere staking claim to his town. Now, he says, those kids have the power — and the ability to raise his taxes.

"You see a hippie kid outside a city council meeting and ask, 'Where do you live, kid?' Arcata." "How long have you been here?" "Three hours." "You've got to have a sense of humor to live here," Arkley says. "If you were a grin, upright sort, you'd hate it."

"But Green goals don't sound outrageous. They want to strengthen the local economy by attracting businesses that don't use local resources like fish or timber; address homelessness; take a teen center and skateboard park; and institute campaign spending limits.

"Protecting the environment is also high on their list. They want the city to grow most of its own food, fix up existing housing instead of building new homes and add bike lanes on all city streets.

"In Arcata, I have a feeling that Green is not so different. It doesn't have to be weird," Hanan says. "We're all taking our stuff to the same recycling center."

Still, the impact of the students — many of whom voted Green — makes some longtime residents feel they've lost control.

"It all started, they say, in 1972, when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that college students could vote where they attend school.

In the 20 years that followed, environmentalism faced the timber industry and led to an organized Green party in Arcata, not long before the first Green party candidate showed up on a California ballot in 1992.

"It used to be that the students adapted to the town. Now the town adjusts to the students," says Nancy Barnes. She's lived in Arcata for 32 years, but says the election left her planning to move, even if it's only as far as neighboring Eureka.

"I'd scare you to death," Barnes says. "You've got anarchists and socialists in this town."

Green party members, however, see the students as an asset.

"Some say this town would be a ghost town without the university," Kirkpatrick says.

"You've got to have a sense of humor to live here."

County tries out creative financing

JUNCTION, Utah (AP) — The first sign that Piute County had outgrown its brick courthouse came about 50 years ago when the hardwood floor of the second-story courtroom buckled and sagged during a standing-room-only murder trial.

Court was immediately moved to a nearby church.

Then there were the cracks in the plaster around the stairwell that grew longer every time there was a tremor.

Finally there was the pigeon incident last April. The bell tower floor, with 93 years accumulation of bird droppings, collapsed, crashing down on the ceiling of the signature extension agent's office, showering him with... fertilizer.

"A week later we broke ground for the new courthouse," Valdeen Brown, Piute County's clerk and auditor says while casting a wary gaze at a flock of blue pigeons congregated on the roof of the old courthouse in Junction, about 210 miles from Salt Lake City in south central Utah.

"Needless to say, there's no bell tower on the new courthouse. But that's about the only thing lacking in the new $2.1 million courthouse, a 20,000-square-foot source of community pride in Piute County, which consistently has the lowest assessed property valuation — about $35 million — of any county in the state. Property taxes yield an annual county budget of just $600,000, and raising taxes to fund a new courthouse was not an option.

"The state wanted us to raise taxes but we said it would not fly in a minute so just forget it," said County Commissioner Don Julander of Marysville told The Salt Lake Tribune. "The mines have closed, the railroad's gone and people here just can't afford higher taxes."

So county officials got creative. By bringing virtually every local government service — the U.S. Post Office, Department of Motor Vehicles, state courts, county offices, Health Department, Travel Council, state Social Services, Sheriff's Department and superintendent of schools — into the new courthouse, Piute County will collect enough rent to pay off an $850,000 revenue bond.

Also, after several pleas to the state Community Impact Board, the county received a $1 million grant for the new courthouse. The balance of the price tag will be paid for with county reserves and income from the sale of the old courthouse.

Construction costs were cut wherever possible, with the county road crew doing the earthwork on land donated by the school district. County employees collect construction debris from the site regularly to save on costs and a county backhoe has been stationed at the project.

"This is really the only way a county our size could build something like a new courthouse," said Shane Millet, county recorder and treasurer. "We ran out of space a long time ago, but it's going to be a little sad to leave this old courthouse. There's a lot of history here."

Finished in 1903, the 5,000-square-foot Piute County courthouse is considered a local landmark and is dubbed the county's "most famous" feature in the Utah Travel Council's state travel guide. Although the single courtroom has no jury box or judge's chambers, the hand-carved judicial bench is a work of art, complete with a thumb-sized black dent in the mahogany where "hizzoner" rested his cigar.

Before deciding to build a new courthouse, county commissioners hired consultants to study the possibility of renovating the old hall of justice.

"Of course, we all love that old courthouse, but the foundation is cracked bad and has water seeping in the basement, there are cracks in the wall from the (1992) Zion earthquake and we just could not keep up with the maintenance costs," said retired county Commissioner Afton Blood of Antimony, who launched a drive for the new building a decade ago.

Ogden police nab suspect in rash of storage burglaries

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Police have arrested a suspect in more than 100 storage-unit burglaries along northern Utah's Wasatch Front.

The 40-year-old Ogden man was arrested at the conclusion of a cooperative investigation by city police and the Weber County Sheriff's Department, said Ogden Detective Sgt. Mike Ashment.

He was booked into Weber County Jail for investigation of 10 counts of burglary, four counts of theft, two counts of possession of stolen property and one count of possessing burglary tools. Bail was set at $85,000.

During the man's arrest on Wednesday, a moving van stuffed with $50,000 in stolen merchandise was recovered, police said.

Police said the man had set up a shop in Ogden selling "repaired" appliances. Police said also recovered about $50,000 worth of merchandise at that shop and a nearby storage unit.

Most of the stolen goods were sold at flea markets in the Salt Lake City area, authorities said. Ashment said the man allegedly would first rent a storage unit in a secure storage unit lot, thus gaining access to the lot during the day. Then he purportedly would rent a small moving van, get to the lot during the day, cut the lock off someone else's storage unit and load up.

After he was done, the man allegedly would put another lock on the bonded unit and drive off. Ashment said it was believed the man was selling the stolen goods for drugs.

Boise girl dies in Gooding following I-84 car crash

GOODING - A 15-year-old Boise girl died in a Gooding hospital Friday morning after a single-vehicle crash on Interstate 84.

Merideth Davidson was fatally injured when a car driven east by her father went out of control at about 8:30 a.m. and rolled several times in the median. The wreck was near mile 151 in Gooding County, Idaho State Police Cpl. Larry Sterling said.

He said the cause of the crash, which also severely injured Richard Davidson, 47, of Boise, was not determined Friday afternoon.

Merideth Davidson, who may not have been wearing a seat belt, was partially ejected from the vehicle, he said.

Both victims were taken to Gooding County Memorial Hospital, where Merideth Davidson died a short while later, Sterling said. Richard Davidson, who was wearing a seat belt, was flown to St. Alphonsus Medical Center in Boise at about noon. He was listed in serious condition.

Idaho Power Jerome office closes for the final time

JEROME - The Idaho Power Co. office in Jerome was closed Friday because customers weren't using it very often, a company official said.

"For the most part, people do business with us by telephone. We didn't see any need to send someone (to Jerome) every day when people can just as easily get service from their own homes," said spokesman Dennis Lopez.

The office, at 148 W. Main, closed its doors for good at 5 p.m. Friday. Lopez said only one customer service representative, who has been moved to another office, worked there.

The Jerome closure is part of a move by the company to centralize its customer service in Boise, he said. Service offices in Shoshone and Fairfield also closed recently.

Customers now can get service and report problems by calling 1-800-488-6151.

The service representative at that number will have the exact same information on their computer screen that the person in Jerome had," Lopez said.

What little use the Jerome office was getting was from people stopping in to drop off payments, he said. People still can leave their power bill payments at a pay station in the Paul's Footdown store on South Lincoln Avenue.

Local bars distribute free condoms for World AIDS Day

TWIN FALLS - Free condoms will be distributed in the bathrooms of local bars as part of World AIDS Day events this weekend.

The distribution of condoms and information about testing for the AIDS virus started Friday and will continue through the weekend at bars in Twin Falls. The event is sponsored by The South Central Idaho HIV Prevention Coalition. Coalition members also will distribute red ribbons and a letter to church congregations asking they remember the people who died as a result of the acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

The College of Social Justice to Student Health Committee and Student Senate Diversity Council will sponsor an AIDS Ribbon Tree. The tree will be decorated at 8 a.m. Monday in the Eagle's Nest in the CSI administration building.

There also will be an information table available throughout the day.

As of June 1995 in southcentral Idaho, 65 people with AIDS or human immunodeficiency virus, the AIDS virus, were reported to the state health office, according to the South Central District Health Department. Of that number, 23 have died.

Man suffers minor injuries in collision Friday

TWIN FALLS - Two cars were totaled and one person suffered minor injuries in a three-vehicle collision Friday afternoon near the Magic Valley Mall.

Police said Jerrod Featherston of Twin Falls was northbound on North Locust Street at about 12:30 p.m. when he tried to cut through traffic on Pole Line Road. His Honda Accord was hit on the right side by a luxury sedan driven by Lisa Fox of Declo.

The collision drove both cars into the front end of a Toyota pickup driven by Gregory Griggs of Twin Falls, who was attempting to leave the mall parking lot.

A juvenile male had to be extricated from the back seat of Featherston's car and was taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center for observation.

Both the sedan and the Honda were totaled in the crash, police said.

Growing old gracefully at New West's growth pains

By William Brock
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Rick Just has seen the good, the bad and the ugly side of tourism in Idaho, which is only natural, given his position as communications director for the state Department of Parks and Recreation.

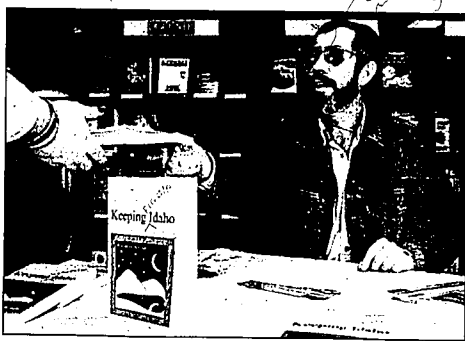

A born storyteller, Just captured his wry observations in a new novel that pokes fun at Idaho's "growing pains" as a popular tourist destination. The book, "Keeping Idaho Private," is on sale at major bookstores around the state.

Just was in town Friday afternoon, signing copies at Barnes and Noble bookstore and swapping suggestions on the best way to solve Idaho's "tourist problem" - also a $1.5 billion-a-year business.

His book is peopled by disgruntled loggers, miners, ranchers and farmers, and a fed-up state commerce official who can't abide his agency's philosophy of "more-tourists-at-all-costs." Rounding out the cast of characters are a thoroughly modern Indian woman and an ageless, wily trickster, known as "coyotes," who pops up in several different guises.

All the blue-collar characters blame tourism or growth for major changes in their lives, Just said. A central theme is the question of who was here first.

"The mayhem starts out mild, with ride notes tucked beneath the windshield wipers of out-of-state vehicles, then escalates to bumper stickers depicting tourists as targets. Potato guns feature prominently and there's even a touch of malicious food poisoning.

Author Rick Just signs copies of his novel, "Keeping Private Idaho," Friday at the Barnes & Noble bookstore in Twin Falls.

"It starts small but, like so many things that start small, it gets way out of hand," he said.

Though he's quick to call it satire, Just said his book can be a starting point for serious discussion about the oft-francorous metamorphosis from Old West into New West.

He should know, being a native Idahoan who has made his peace with the inevitability of change. It's a trait that evidently runs in the family because his older brother, Kent, is executive vice president of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce.

Unbridled change can become a bitterly divisive issue, as Kent Just can attest. Less than two years ago, someone riddled his office with gunfire to protest the chamber's ardent courtship of a 3,500-job factory that Micron Technology Inc. wanted to build.

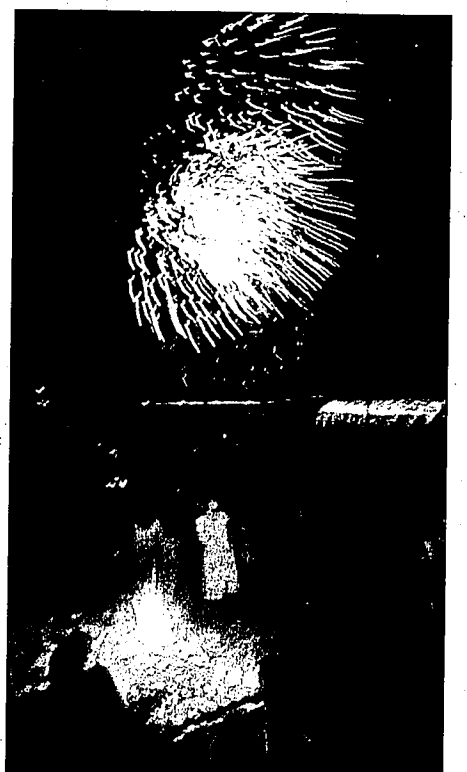

No one was hurt in the shooting, but Micron opted to build its factory in Utah.

Like his brother, Rick Just is blessed with a quick wit and an easygoing manner. He grew up on a ranch near Firth, then moved to the small eastern Idaho town when he was 10, after his dad died.

A stint with the U.S. Marine Corps gave way to a string of radio jobs throughout southern Idaho and Gillette, Wyo. Along the way, Just found time to earn a bachelor's degree in communications and English at Boise State University.

"Keeping Private Idaho" took about a year to write, he said, but the work really boiled down to a solid month of writing. The work didn't end there because Just, doing business as Cedar Creek Press, published the book himself.

Blaine County hospital debate continues

The Associated Press

HAILEY - When Blaine County voters last May endorsed the merger of Wood River Medical Center with St. Luke's Regional Medical Center, Boise, many people thought the valley's "hospital wars" were over.

But that expectation might be misplaced. With the recent decision by the Wood River hospital's officials to close the Hailey birthing facility and consolidate obstetrics services in Sun Valley, the arguments have started over again.

Except for Ketchum and Carey, every governmental agency in the county within the last two weeks has taken a position on the consolidation. The Wood River hospital's board and administration have been criticized for the decision to close the Hailey facility and the way it was made.

St. Luke's has offered a "limited management consulting engagement" to the Blaine County hospital in hopes of finding common ground.

Officials hope the squabbling won't hurt efforts to raise $12 million by the end of next year to build a new hospital.

People who live in the southern part of the county might be even less likely to contribute to the fund-raising drive if the Hailey facility is closed to all but emergency services.

Local controversies have become serious enough that St. Luke's President Ed Dahlberg said a St. Luke official will start attending meetings of the Wood River Medical Center board.

But Dahlberg declined a request by Wood River hospital staff members to take over management on an interim basis.

He said St. Luke's does not have the authority, ability or interest to take over.

Idaho voters Nov. 5 approved a constitutional amendment designed to clear the way for mergers between public and private medical facilities.

People opposed to consolidation have urged a go-slow approach until more detailed plans are available for public inspection.

Marijuana found in jail cell of drug trafficking suspect

By Kevin Miller
Times-News writer

BURLEY - Investigators are looking into how a marijuana cigarette was smuggled last week into the jail cell of an accused drug trafficker.

Responding to a tip taken over the telephone last Thursday, jailers found a marijuana joint in Gilbert Rodriguez's cell at the Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center, according to a jail report.

The unit cigarette was discovered under the bed of Rodriguez's cellmate, Joseph Gerhardt Sr.

Investigators are not sure who the illegal package belonged to, or how it was smuggled in.

"I don't know if we'll ever find that out," jail administrator Dennis Dexter said. "We have our suspicions."

Normally, possession of a small amount of marijuana is a misdemeanor. But in jail, possession of any controlled substance is a felony, Dexter said.

Dennis Dexter, jail administrator. Criminal charges are pending the outcome of the investigation, which is continuing.

Rodriguez was arrested Nov. 18 on five drug-related charges, including three counts of delivery of methamphetamine or amphetamine. If convicted, he faces three life sentences.

Gilbert Rodriguez

Rodriguez's name also has been linked to the April 10 murder of Blake Morgan Jr. in Rupert. A former inmate of one of the two men charged with murdering Morgan's executive vice president, Gerhardt is in jail on a felony forgery charge. His extensive criminal history indicates a long alcohol problem, but little drug use. In 1994 he was charged with possessing drug paraphernalia, and in 1991 was charged with possession of a controlled substance.

The shake-down at the Burley jail happened around 3:30 p.m. Nov. 21, following a phone call tipping jailers of the presence of marijuana in Rodriguez's cell block. Jailers searched six rooms and inmates in the block, Dexter said.

A drug-detecting dog was brought in to sniff for drugs, he said.

An inmate told jailers where to find the marijuana, the report said. The inmate also said the cigarette did not belong to Rodriguez.

Drug use in the jail is a constant concern, but it's rare to find drugs in the jail, Sgt. Lamar Hurst said.

New EPA air quality rules shouldn't affect Magic Valley

By N.S. Nokkented
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - On a clear day you can see that most days in the Magic Valley are clear.

"We have excellent air quality here," said Steve VanZandt, air quality science officer with the local office of the state Division of Environmental Quality.

So new federal air quality standards, announced this week by the federal Environmental Protection Agency, are not likely to affect the Magic Valley, he said.

Those new standards focus on tiny particles that are 2.5 microns or less in diameter.

A micron is one millionth of a meter. A typical human hair is 100 to 200 microns thick. There are 25,400 microns in an inch. Studies have shown that minute particles relate more closely to disease and death than previously thought.

The new standard also would lower the standard for ozone.

Until 1994, there was no permanent air quality monitoring in the Magic Valley, VanZandt said, but since monitoring started, air quality has met federal guidelines, he said.

Most particles in the air in Twin Falls in the winter are from wood stoves. But during other parts of the

New EMS building preserves Jerome history

By Dikla Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

JEROME - The Mel Grindstaff Emergency Medical Services Building commemorates a little Jerome County history.

It incorporates the frame of a building that once housed the Grindstaff family business - the old Texaco gas station that stood on the lot. The soon-to-be-completed EMS building, an urban renewal project on West Main Street in Jerome.

Blueprints show the old brick gas station has been refurbished to contain three ambulance garages, the administrative office and a secretary's office.

The elder Grindstaff addition to the building houses men's and women's living quarters, a training room and a kitchen. The combined structure measures 54 feet by 71 feet.

Gary Bond Construction of Twin Falls was awarded the $254,500 contract in September. Construction started Sept. 30 and is scheduled to be completed by Feb. 1.

The walls are up, the roof is on, the rooms are framed and the parking lot is finished. The floor of the building is littered with bits of insulation, boards, drills, blueprints, pipe, wire, ladders and sawdust. Workers install wire in conduit pipe, pound nails and trim insulation.

In addition to the ambulance service, plans for the building include possible classes in first aid and CPR, and the training area can double as a community meeting room.

The new building's namesake was a Jerome County commissioner from 1976 to 1982, and was active in children's projects. Mel Grindstaff's family owned and operated the Texaco station on the site.

Inmates escape maximum security prison

BOISE (AP) - Two inmates at the state's Maximum Security Prison, including a murderer, escaped early Friday.

Joy Dean Schneider, 32, and Murray Allen Wachholz, 35, were found missing at a 4 a.m. bed check.

The inmates were held in the C-Block, which is close security. They cut through a metal window security panel in their cell, then pried open a second panel to gain access to the yard.

Officials said the men squeezed through an 8-by-11 inch opening to escape.

That prompted a review of all of the 252 windows in the Maximum Security facility.

Two perimeter fences were cut. There is a security system that is supposed to signal movement on the outside fence, and officials say tests shortly after the escapes were discovered showed it is working. But it did not sound an alarm.

The escapees apparently cut through near a fence post to minimize movement of the fence.

Prison spokesman Mark Carnopis said Friday afternoon a truck was stolen a few miles from the prison and later was found abandoned near Baker, Ore. Oregon authorities used an airplane to scan area highways, believing the men were headed toward Lewiston in northern Idaho, but no leads were found.

Man jailed for filing false health claims

BOISE — Thomas G. Westall, 50,

Mountain Home, has been sent to jail for six months and ordered to pay $29,000 in restitution for making false health care claims.

U.S. Attorney Betty Richardson said Westall was found guilty after a jury trial on the government's 43 counts of mail fraud and submitting false statements to a government agency.

Westall also will be on supervised probation for four years after his release and must serve six months' home detention.

Between 1988 and 1995, Westall owned and operated New Life Counseling Center in Boise. Richardson said Westall submitted false claims that produced $250,000 from three insurance companies: First Health, an insurance company funded by the Department of Defense and Blue Cross of Idaho.

Chief U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge admonished Westall for not accepting responsibility for the offense, saying, "It was a tragedy that the defendant asked good people to believe that

FBI made robber called 'Hollywood' No.1 priority

SEATTLE (AP) — Careful study of bank heists staged by a robber the FBI called "Hollywood" helped a police task force respond quickly when the bandit struck this week, an FBI agent said Friday.

After a chase, about and nearly 24 hours on the run, agents say "Hollywood" killed himself as police closed in.

William Scott Scurlock, who died of a gunshot wound to the head Thursday in a 10-foot camper parked in a back yard, had been charged by warrant with Wednesday's $1 million robbery of a Seafirst Bank branch in north Seattle.

The FBI said Friday that Scurlock, nicknamed "Hollywood" because of his fondness for heavy punka make-up and disguises, was responsible for 15 heistings in the Seattle area and another two in the Portland, Ore., area over four years.

Wednesday's million-dollar heist — all recovered after police chased and captured two of Scurlock's accused accomplices Wednesday — added to the robber's "considerable" career bankroll, FBI regional chief Burden Pasenelli said Friday.

She refused to put a figure on the total haul but declared the number of robberies and amounts taken made him "one of the most prolific bank robbers in the history of the United States."

His success also made him a top priority with the Puget Sound Violent Crimes Task Force.

"Why was he the No. 1 priority? Because of the amount of money that had been stolen and the great threat that he represented to the public — namely the people inside those banks — and the police officers," Pasenelli told a news conference.

"We looked at every single robbery that Hollywood had committed, we looked at the banks that were involved, the time of the day, all the vehicles that he used and put together all the information that we had," Pasenelli said.

What emerged was a pattern that indicated that Hollywood would strike on a Wednesday, Thursday or Friday in the northeast part of Seattle, she said. He generally favored Seafirst, U.S. Bank and First Interstate branches.

In August, Seattle police, the FBI and task force members began sacking on the target areas.

Their efforts paid off when Scurlock, 41, and two other men showed up shortly before closing time Wednesday at the Seafirst branch. A bank employee recognized one of the robbers as "Hollywood" from photographs taken during previous heists, Pasenelli said. The employee activated a silent alarm — twice.

Seattle police and task force members were within several miles of the bank and responded quickly enough to chase the robbers.

After police attempted to stop the vehicle, the white van pulled into a north Seattle yard and three men jumped out. Two exchanged gunfire with police and were wounded and captured. The third man — Scurlock — escaped on foot and eluded a police search.

The robbery loot, several automatic weapons, masks and disguises were recovered from the van.

On Thursday afternoon, two brothers visiting their 85-year-old mother for Thanksgiving Dinner went to check the camper in her back yard because she was concerned about the search for the robber. They spotted a man inside and called police.

Most power restored in Spokane

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — The deprivations of Ice Storm '96 began to fade Friday, as many residents emerged from a week of foul weather and foul moods to begin Christmas shopping.

About 6,200 homes and businesses remained without power in the Spokane and northern Idaho areas Friday. Utility officials said most of those would require going door-to-door to make repairs.

In a sign of the improving situation, Washington Water Power Co. was asking those customers without electricity to call.

"We're updating our list of those still without power," spokeswoman Anne Marie Arworthy said.

Previously, WWP had been concentrating on repairing main feeder lines that served many customers, and had asked that individual customers not call to report outages.

The Washington Utilities and Transportation Commission has formally requested a report from WWP on its performance during the outage.

"Such an inquiry is standard for the commission after significant weather-related outages for regulated utilities," the commission said, adding it would also include a public hearing for customers.

Grindstaff as a high-school kid.

"Grindstaff was low-key, patient, helpful and a hard worker," Tolson said. "He was not just a supervisor, but a friend who genuinely liked the rowdy kids who bought gas there. He was supportive of school activities, made donations to school fund drives and gave time off from work for special events at school. If Grindstaff ever got angry at any of the workers at the gas station, I never knew it."

Commissioner Roy Prescott said of Grindstaff, "Al was very civic-minded, active in Scouts and other youth causes. He was the only Democrat I'd ever vote for."

He was what every county commissioner should be like. He put the county first and politics second. He wasn't flashy and didn't try to grab a lot of credit for everything. He was just there and quietly did the work that was necessary. Grindstaff was instrumental in the creation of the recreation district and the highway district."

Jerome needs a home for its ambulances, Prescott said, and the new building will be "an asset to the community and a nice tribute to a great county commissioner."

"The ambulance building has been on the drawing board for the past three years," Prescott said. "In the past year and a half the ambulances have been housed in three different locations. Last January when it was so cold one of the ambulances wouldn't start because it was parked outside and had a dead battery. We had to jump-start the battery before we could send the ambulance out on a call. We were lucky it was not a life-or-death kind of call."

Air

year, VanZandt finds particles from field burning, agriculture and forest and road fires. It's hard to identify the specific source of particles. But chemical analysis can point a finger at the possible sources, VanZandt said.

In Twin Falls, however, the easiest way is to smell the filters in the air quality monitors. "You can smell wood smoke on them in the winter," VanZandt said.

An air quality monitor traps particles in the air. The monitor's filter is weighed to determine the weight of the particles — measured in millionths of a gram or micrograms — divided by the amount of air that passed through the monitor. Air samples in Twin Falls during 1995 averaged 24.1 micrograms per cubic meter of air. The national standard is 50. In Rupert the number is 22.3 and in Ketchum it was 18.6. Boise, by comparison registered 35.2.

VanZandt hopes to install two monitors that would trap and measure particles 2.5 microns and smaller. But he doesn't anticipate any restrictions based on air quality.

Jarbridge, Nev., has some of the cleanest air in the country, and Twin Falls is only 90 miles from Jarbridge, VanZandt said. "We are in very good shape," he said.

IDAHO

Schools grow for 'at risk' students

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The only sure trend with alternative schools in Idaho is that they are growing by at least three a year.

There were 12 alternative schools in the state when the Legislature began funding them in 1989. Now there are 31.

One of the common denominators is that they cater to "at-risk" students, those that might otherwise have been expelled. They usually have a different schedule than the district's other high schools.

Some schools, like Westview High School in the Idaho Falls School District, offer night classes.

Other than that, they are all over the map, said Tom Farley, the chief of the Bureau of Instruction at the state Department of Education.

There are night schools that are on the same site as the mainstream high school, day schools that are in old army reserve buildings and several kinds of class schedules, including two-week, six-week and eight-week block programs where students take three or less classes at a time.

"We're seeing that they are making a difference in the number of students enrolled in our schools," said Farley. It's difficult to pinpoint a specific number because there are so many types of alternative schools graduating students at different times throughout the year.

Farley said the schools are a recognition that each and every child is unique, and learns in a different way.

"The trend in our area is that we are finding more and more students each day who are discontented in the regular system," said Jerold Crittenden, director of Madison County's alternative school, Central High School.

Joel LaPray, principal at Westview High School, agrees. "I think we're finding a growing number of kids who thrive in a different setting. For every 10 kids, you've got 10 different reasons they want to come here."

But whether Idaho is ahead or behind in its growing number of alternative schools is not clear.

"There are a lot of different schools popping up around the country for a lot of different reasons," said Denise Alston, senior policy analyst at the National Education Association. There are charter schools, magnet schools and community schools. There are schools for gifted students, troubled students and special schools for students who want to learn at home.

Keep an eye out for rare trumpeter swans

BOISE (AP) — Trumpeter swans which have been transplanted in eastern Idaho may show up anywhere in the lower part of the state and hunters must be careful not to shoot them, Fish and Game officials say.

Waterfowl hunters must distinguish the huge white birds from snow geese or other huntable species. Trumpeters are often larger than the more common tundra swans. Both swans are nearly pure white with white wingtips.

Snow geese are much smaller and have black wingtips. The trumpeter swan has become relatively rare in the Intermountain West. Most of the remnant population lived in or near Yellowstone Park until trapping and transplanting began in 1988 to disperse its growing numbers.

Biologists were worried trumpeters were vulnerable if a disaster such as a harsh winter struck that area.

Trumpeters are usually trapped during the dark of the moon in the fall and winter. Recently, 34 were taken from Harriman State Park and released on the Bear River near Preston. More will be trapped in December if conditions are right.

Trumpeters have been trapped in the Island Park area and freed in other parts of Idaho, Oregon, Wyoming and Utah.

More than 1,400 swans have been moved and have been seen in the West, western Canada and Mexico.

Biologists still want to know more about their dispersal and are asking for help from wildlife observers.

Transplanted trumpeters have been neck-banded and some marked with pink dye. Each band carries a unique letter-number code and can be colored green, red, yellow or white.

Anyone seeing a band should record it carefully, along with time and location, and report it to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Pocatello.

Public asked for input on foothill flood control plans

BOISE (AP) — Flood control experts say dams must be built in drainages in the foothills north of Boise to reduce the possibility of flood damage in the event of heavy rain.

The Eighth Street Fire in August burned 15,300 acres in the steep foothills above the city. Flood control efforts, which are expected to cost up to $10 million, have been under way since then.

Experts predict that if the area gets rainfall approaching .40 of an inch in an hour, flooding is likely because fire-damaged slopes will be unable to hold the moisture.

Many public buildings in the Capitol Mall below the foothills have been sandbagged against the possibility of flooding, and homeowners have been urged to take precautions. Sandbags are in readiness around the Statehouse.

Boise will hold a meeting Dec. 9 to hear what flood control measures should be undertaken.

Some sort of dams are necessary, said assistant city engineer

Ron Redmond. "We're going to allow the public to provide us their comments and input on what they think good solutions are for flood control in the foothills," he said.

Redmond said nothing has been ruled out, but dams in Cottonwood, Stuart, Hulla and Crane gulches probably are the only way to prevent heavy flooding in north Boise.

Dams could cost $5.5 million, 75 percent covered by the National Resources Conservation Agency.

A dam in Cottonwood Gulch has the support of St. Luke's Regional Medical Center. In October, President Ed Dahlberg pledged $25,000 toward flood control efforts. Bill Bodnar, vice president of corporate relations, said the hospital has spent about $100,000 on barriers to protect buildings.

Flood control recommendations are to be turned over to the city Planning and Zoning Commission at a meeting tentatively scheduled for Jan. 15.

IDAHO IN BRIEF

Judge drops charge to manslaughter

ARCO — Clayton Patrick Carnahan will face reduced charges of voluntary manslaughter in the stabbing death of a Butte County man.

After a 12-hour preliminary hearing, 7th District Magistrate Charles Ross reduced the second-degree murder charge against Carnahan.

Carnahan, 34, was arrested in March in the death of Joseph Lynn Schlechter, 45, after Schlechter tried to break up a fight between Carnahan and Carnahan's wife.

"Judge Ross felt that the state's case was lacking evidence to prove malice and a forethought," Butte County Sheriff Cary Van Erten said.

Police officers injured in explosion

BOISE — Two Boise Police officers were injured in an explosion that occurred while they were searching a truck late Thanksgiving night.

Lt. Tim Rosenswald said Officer Christopher Ware suffered a hand injury and both he and Officer David Pogue were hit by pyrotechnics. Their injuries were not believed to be life-threatening.

The incident occurred about 11:40 p.m. Thursday night in a North Curtis Road parking lot. The driver of the truck involved was taken into custody, but was not identified. Police said he was charged with driving without privileges. While the officers were securing his pickup truck, they handled a small box in the truck's bed. It exploded.

Hunters offer livestock reward

POCATELLO — Hunters know they often are blamed when people shoot livestock, so they are starting a reward fund for the conviction of the persons responsible for killing six cows on a ranch near Georgetown last month.

"The reason is, it's generally hunters who get blamed for these types of things," said Bill Davidson, secretary for the Region 5 Wildlife Council. "We don't believe hunters did this. People who did this are casting a bad shadow on hunters. We want them caught."

Rancher Lonnie Wood suffered the loss. Still, Wood will continue allowing people to hunt on his land if they ask permission first and treat his property with respect.

Oregon business faces Idaho sales tax

ONTARIO, Ore. — Oregon businessmen have been advised that if they continue doing business across the border in Idaho, they might have to collect Idaho's 5 percent sales tax on property delivered or serviced in the state.

At a meeting this week, Michael Southcombe, chairman of the State Tax Commission, told about 50 business people they must determine their own level of tax exposure, but if they continue doing business in Idaho, they will need to follow Idaho tax law.

Man held in slaying of Meridian woman

BOISE (AP) — An autopsy on Friday determined that a 35-year-old Meridian woman was strangled, and police arrested a man in the case.

The body of Angela Michelle Eggers was found Wednesday in her pickup truck southwest of Boise. The woman was last seen Monday night at a truck stop where she worked as a cashier.

Police said Noel Jay Whiteley, 20, Boise, was charged with first-degree murder and was being held in the Ada County Jail.

Students participate as national leaders

RUPERT - Minico High School students Emily Neibaur, Kalissa Copeland, Sara Johnson and Cassie Tundag recently returned from the National Young Leaders Conference in Washington, D.C.

The conference is a leadership development program for high school students who have demonstrated leadership potential and scholastic merit. The Minico students were among 350 outstanding national scholars from across America.

The conference theme was "The Leaders of Tomorrow Meeting the Leaders of Today." Students interacted with key leaders and newsmakers from the three branches of government, the media and the diplomatic corps. Highlights included welcoming remarks from the U.S. House of Representatives and a panel discussion with prominent journalists at the National Press Club. Scholars visited foreign embassies and received policy briefings from senior government officials. Minico students met with their senators and representatives or an appointed staff member to discuss important issues facing Minidoka County and the nation.

Special meetings and briefings were complemented with a number of leadership skill-building activities, such as role-playing. Culminating the conference was the "Model Congress," where scholars assumed the roles of U.S. Representatives by debating, amending and voting on proposed legislation for an official language and immigration reform.

Yarber leaves Vandals for Las Vegas

MOSCOW - Former University of Idaho receiver Eric Yarber, an assistant football coach for the Vandals, has accepted a job at Nevada-Las Vegas.

"Eric's a great Vandal," Idaho coach Chris Tormey said. "It's hard to lose him."
As the receivers coach, Yarber returns to the position he played at Idaho. "It was an opportunity I couldn't pass up," he said. "I'm going to the WAC, back to the side of the ball where I'm more comfortable. It is equally difficult for Yarber to leave."

"I'll always have a warm spot in my heart for the University of Idaho, for all the UF faculty, the coaches, the players, my teammates. Coming here gave me an opportunity to play pro ball and to get my degree," he said.

During his career at Idaho, Yarber set a Kibbie Dome record for receptions in a game with 12. He was the Big Sky Conference's leading receiver in 1985 when he caught 75 passes for 1,103 yards.

Yarber was drafted by the Washington Redskins and played on their 1988 Super Bowl championship team.

Tormey has hired former Washington State cornerback Greg Burns to replace Yarber. Burns was a four-year letterman.

"He's a good fit," Tormey said. "He's right here, ready to go."

Irvan's crew chief shifts to Earnhardt

Larry McReynolds, rated among the very best crew chiefs in NASCAR, will prepare Chevrolets for Dale Earnhardt in 1997.

McReynolds confirmed Friday that he has resigned from Robert Yates Racing, which fields Ford's for driver Ernie Irvan, to join Earnhardt and team owner Richard Childress.

"The decision to leave is one of the toughest I've ever had to make," said McReynolds, who has been a crew chief at NASCAR's top level since 1986. "Every member of Robert Yates Racing is very special to me. I wish them and the team the best."

McReynolds will go to work for the Richard Childress Racing operation, based in Welcome, N.C., on Dec. 16.

WBO champ: He's gotten life together

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. - WBO junior bantamweight champion Johnny Tapia says he has rid himself of the personal demons that so often have invaded his unblemished boxing career.

Tapia (38-0, 23 KOs) in the past has battled cocaine, alcohol and a domestic abuse charge. He makes his ninth title defense Saturday against Nicaraguan Adonis Cruz (25-21, 13 KOs), the Caribbean Boxing Federation champion at 115 pounds.

Life, says Tapia, never has been better inside or out of the ring. "My mind is clear," he said. "There are so many things in my life that are going bigger and better than ever."

'Shaq Daddy' immersed in fatherhood

LOS ANGELES - Throughout his four years in Orlando, Shaquille O'Neal found that being the center of attention could get tiring. The scrutiny grew really intense when word got out that his girlfriend was pregnant and O'Neal had not imminent plans to marry her. "I was in a big, they didn't really worry about stuff like that," O'Neal said. "That's how the world goes today. I know I'm not married, I know it's against the norm to have a baby out of wedlock. But it's all about being responsible, taking care of my child, love my child."

"They also try to say, well, he was born out of wedlock he's trying to do the same thing his biological father did," said O'Neal, who was raised by his mother and stepfather after his father abandoned the family.

"It was different. I'll never take it off. When my daughter gets older, you can ask her who her father is, she's going to have a smile cart now and say, 'My daddy is Shaq.' If she could talk now, she'd say that too."

His daughter, Tahirah, was born July 19, the day after he signed his contract with the Lakers. O'Neal has immersed himself in fatherhood, right down to changing the diapers.

"I do it all," O'Neal said. "I'm Daddy. Shaq Daddy does it all."

Bayou-based team preps for Montana

Nicholls State head coach Darren Barber has been trying to get his Louisiana team ready to play in western Missouri, Mont., but he's not sure that proper attire will be enough.

"What I've been doing is making a bunch of phone calls," said the head coach of the Nicholls State Cougars. "Trying to find out what they wear up there for games."

"Our goal is to look, they don't really wear that kind of stuff on our team," general manager Isiah Thomas said. "John has the ability to help give our team the perspective it needs to successfully make it through the long NBA season."

Long, a graduate of the University of Detroit, played nine seasons with the Detroit Pistons, three with the Indiana Pacers and one with the Atlanta Hawks. He averaged 13.9 points and was an 86 per cent free-throw shooter.

The New York Times reported on Friday that the suit filed in Manhattan Federal District Court also seeks Solig to produce documents relating to his role in the departure of the last commissioner, Ray Vincent.

Vincent resigned under fire in 1992, setting the stage for the baseball labor war that resulted in two strikes-shortened seasons and cancellation of the 1994 World Series.

13-year NBA veteran Long joins Raptors

TORONTO - John Long, who has spent four years playing exhibition basketball games with Magic Johnson's all-star team, has joined the Toronto Raptors.

The 40-year-old, who spent 13 seasons in the NBA, signed a free-agent contract Friday. Terms were not disclosed.

"I believe that experience was a missing ingredient on our team," general manager Isiah Thomas said. "John has the ability to help give our team the perspective it needs to successfully make it through the long NBA season."

Selig target of suit by Miami group

NEW YORK - Acting baseball commissioner Bud Selig has been sued over the makeup of an arbitration board that must decide how much the Florida Marlins must pay for displacing a minor league team when the expansion franchise was added to the major leagues four years ago.

Davidson's D doesn't deny Deacons

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) - It took more than 20 minutes, but No. 3 Wake Forest finally found a solution to Davidson's pesky defense, using a 17-0 run in the second half and coasting to a 69-45 victory Friday night.

Tim Duncan scored five of his 20 points during the decisive run in which Wake Forest pushed its 32-28 lead to 49-32 with 8:27 left, finally getting Davidson into a running game and out of its deliberate tempo.

Tony Rutland's 3-pointer with 4:11 remaining gave Wake Forest a 20-point lead and some breathing room down the stretch.

Duncan also had 13 rebounds and four assists, while Loren Woods added 15 points and eight rebounds in 20 minutes.

The Demon Deacons (3-0), playing their third game in six days, have beaten the Wildcats (2-1) 17 straight times and have won 21 straight at Joel Coliseum.

The Golden Hurricane (3-1) managed the win despite making just four field goals over the game's final 16 1/2 minutes. Two of those baskets came in the final 1:16 — Jonnie Gendron's reverse layup when he rebounded an airtight 3-point attempt by Steve Seals to make it 48-45 and Eric Colney's breakaway dunk with three seconds to play that made it 55-48.

Fellow golfers have nothing but praise for Tiger Woods

LA QUINTA, Calif. (AP) - John Daly thanked him. Tom Watson teased him. Fred Couples said he deserves all the good things happening to him.

Tiger Woods is very popular, even with the guys he'll be trying to beat out of hundreds of thousands of dollars in his Skins Game debut this weekend.

Much as he did for the PGA Tour over the past three months, the 20-year-old Woods has revitalized the Skins Game, which had been fading with age.

The made-for-TV event, which sank to its lowest ratings ever in 1995, is abuzz this year, with the two-day match expected to attract one of golf's largest television audiences in history.

Requests for media credentials are at four times the normal rate, at "40 and rising," a tournament official said Friday. And tickets, limited to a sale of 10,000, have gone briskly.

The "other three" players in the foursome for the "Tiger Skins," do not appear resentful for being squeezed into the wings while Woods is center stage.

"It's great. It's wonderful what he can do with a golf ball," said Daly, who still officially the longest hitter on the tour (280.8 yards per drive this year) only because Woods (302.8 yards) didn't play enough tournaments to qualify for that distinction.

Watson, 47, who said he was going to be a spectator this time, hitting off the tee then watching Woods' drive drives past him, then turned serious, looking Woods in the eye and saying, "Tiger, you've got the world in front of you."

Couples, who won $270,000 in the Skins Game last year with a birdie on the fifth playoff hole, said Woods has lived up to his billing.

"Tiger obviously is great for the Tour," Couples said.

"The scoring was low because of the soft, percussive greens," said Jones, who had rounds of 67 and 71.

Montgomerie, paired with hometown favorite Eriq, complained that the crowds were partisan.

"It's difficult to keep my concentration," he said. "Every time Ernie sunk a putt, the people would all move away from the green and I was left with trying to hole out with a lot of noise and walking going on."

Montgomerie leads halfway through Million Dollar

SUN CITY, South Africa (AP) - Colin Montgomerie of Scotland completed the mid-delayed first round in 7-under-par 65 Friday, then fired a 1-under 71 for a one-shot lead in the Million Dollar Challenge.

The 12 players vying for the richest first prize in golf — $1 million — were tightly bunched at the halfway mark, with only six strokes separating Montgomerie and last year's champion Tom Lehman of the United States.

The British Open champion and U.S. PGA player of the year.

Jan Woosnam of Wales and South African Ernie Els were tied for second at 137, one stroke in front of Nick Price of Zimbabwe and the U.S. trio of Steve Stricker, U.S. Open champion Steve Jones and U.S. PGA champion Mark Brooks.

For the first time in the 16-year history of the tournament, heavy rain in the usually arid hills of northern South Africa forced play to be suspended Thursday after a few holes.

Friday, players started early to complete the first round, then turned around for another 18 holes in the afternoon.

Jazz roll to ninth in a row; Rockets blast Celtics Goalie duel ends in tie

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — John Stockton scored 28 points on 12-of-13 shooting and Jeff Hornacek scored 19, reaching the 12,000-point mark for his career as the Utah Jazz won their ninth straight night, 111-94 over the Los Angeles Clippers on Friday night.

Karl Malone added 19 points despite sitting out the fourth quarter.

Darriek Martin, in his first start of the year, led the Clippers with 18 points. Malik Sealy added 13 and Footh Richardson 12 as the Clippers lost their fifth straight game.

The Jazz outscored the Clippers 15-2 in the first 4:09 of the third quarter, with Stockton scoring seven, to lead 67-51.

The Clippers got back within 11 points, 77-66 on a jumper by Rodney Rogers, but Utah got a three-point play by Greg Oden and a 3-pointer by Howard Eisley in the last 1:23 of the quarter to extend their lead to 83-68.

A baseline jumper by Chris Morris 54 seconds into the fourth period gave Utah a 20-point lead, its largest, and the Clippers did not come closer than 14 the rest of the way.

Rockets 120, Celtics 94 BOSTON — Matt Maloney and Charles Barkley scored 18 points each Friday night as the Houston Rockets ran their record to 14-1 by beating the Boston Celtics 120-94.

Houston never trailed and placed seven players in double figures. Hakeem Olajuwon scored 17 points and pulled down 13 rebounds while Mario Elie had eight assists to go along with 10 points.

Mutombo also grabbed 15 rebounds, blocked five shots and had two steals, dominating his matchup against 7-foot-7 Washington center George Mursien. Blaylock scored 25 points and was 7-of-11 beyond the arc, falling one short of the team record for 3-pointers in a game.

Lakers 84, Pistons 76 AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Shaquille O'Neal scored 27 points and Eddie Jones added 20 as Los Angeles defeated cold-shooting Detroit.

The Pistons twice worked the defense down to five points, the last time on a free throw by Long with 1:03 remaining, but the Lakers, who had only one basket — a 3-pointer by Jones — the rest of the way, closed it out with two free throws by O'Neal and three by Jones.

Pacers 104, Grizzlies 94 INDIANAPOLIS — Reggie Miller scored 25 points and three Pacers reserves scored in double figures as Indiana won the rubber match.

The Timberwolves had lost to the Nuggets 12 straight times dating back to Jan. 5, 1994. They had dropped 10 consecutive games in Denver, last being a 116-97 victory over the Dallas Mavericks and George Lynch on March 31, 1991.

SuperSonics 105, Suns 92 SEATTLE — Gary Payton scored 10 of his 26 points in the fourth quarter and Shawn Kemp added 20 points and 13 rebounds Friday night as the Seattle SuperSonics won the 13th time in 14 games, 105-92 over Phoenix.

MIAMI (AP) — In a battle of division leaders and hot goal-tenders, Hartford's Keith Primeau scored a third-period goal and Florida Panthers goaltender John Vanbiesbroeck made three sparkling saves with- in the last 1:13 of regulation to preserve a 1-1 tie Friday night.

Vanbiesbroeck, who entered the game second in the league in save percentage, and Hartford goalie Sean Burke, who has only one loss in his last nine starts, both had 29 saves.

The only puck to get past Burke was a first-period score by Scott Mellanby. Florida, 4-0-1 in its last five games and 1-1-1 to overcome this season, improved its NHL-leading point total after the Atlantic Division to 36. The Whalers, 0-2-2 in their last four, took over sole possession of first place in the Northeast Division.

The Whalers, who outlasted the Panthers 4-0 in overtime, are 1-0-5 in overtime.

Stars 2, Lightning 1 TAMPA, Fla. — Arturs Irbe stopped 29 shots in his comeback game as the Dallas Stars beat the Tampa Bay Lightning 2-1.

Irbe, who missed six games with a groin strain, was making his first appearance since Nov. 8.

Islanders 2, Capitals 0 LANDOVER, Md. — Tommy Salo stopped 23 shots in his first NHL shutout and Zigmund Palffy scored two goals as the New York Islanders beat the Washington Capitals 2-0.

It was the second straight victory for the Islanders, who have six wins this season — including three against Philadelphia and two against Washington.

Palffy scored a shorthanded goal in the second period and got his team-high 16th of the season with 10:38 left in the game. Salo had his best work in the second when the Capitals took over the last three shots during a 5-on-3 but couldn't get the puck past the 25-year-old Swede. Salo preserved the shutout with 40:2 to go by stopping Kelly Miller on a breakaway.

Davidson's D doesn't deny Deacons

Yarber leaves Vandals for Las Vegas

MOSCOW - Former University of Idaho receiver Eric Yarber, an assistant football coach for the Vandals, has accepted a job at Nevada-Las Vegas.

"Eric's a great Vandal," Idaho coach Chris Torney said. "It's hard to lose him." Yarber returns to the position he played at Idaho. "It was an opportunity I couldn't pass up," he said. "I'm going to the WAC, back to the side of the ball where I'm more comfortable." It is equally difficult for Yarber to leave. "I'll always have a warm spot in my heart for the University of Idaho, for all the UI faculty, the coaches, the players, my teammates. Coming here gave me an opportunity to play pro ball and to get my degree," he said.

During his career at Idaho, Yarber set a Kibbie Dome record for receptions in a game with 12. He was the Big Sky Conference's leading receiver in 1985 when he caught 75 passes for 1,103 yards. Yarber was drafted by the Washington Redskins and played on their 1988 Super Bowl championship team.

Torney has hired former Washington State cornerback Greg Burns to replace Yarber. Burns was a four-year starter at Washington.

"He's a good fit," Torney said. "He's right there, ready to go."

Irvan's crew chief shifts to Earnhardt

Larry McReynolds, rated among the very best crew chiefs in NASCAR, will prepare Chevrolets for Dale Earnhardt in 1997.

McReynolds confirmed Friday that he has resigned from Robert Yates Racing, which fields Ford's for driver Ernie Irvan, to join Earnhardt and team owner Richard Childress.

"The decision to leave is one of the toughest I've ever had to make," said McReynolds, who has been a crew chief at NASCAR's top level since 1986. "Every member of Robert Yates Racing is very special to me. I wish them and the team the best."

McReynolds will go to work for the Richard Childress Racing operation, based in Welcome, N.C., on Dec. 16.

WBO champ: He's gotten life together

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. - WBO junior bantamweight champion Julio Tapia says he has rid himself of the personal demons that so often have invaded his mind before boxing matches.

Tapia (38-2, 23 KO's) in the past has battled cocaine, alcohol and a domestic abuse charge. He makes his ninth title defense Saturday against Nicaraguan Adonis Cruz (25-21, 13 KO's), the Caribbean Boxing Federation champion at 115 pounds.

"My mind is clear," he said. "There are so many things in my life that are going bigger and better than ever."

'Shaq Daddy' immersed in fatherhood

LOS ANGELES - Throughout his four years in Orlando, Shaquille O'Neal found that being the center of attention could get tiring. The scrutiny grew really intense when word got out that his girlfriend was pregnant and O'Neal had no imminent plans to marry her.

"It's big in a city, they don't really worry about stuff like that," O'Neal said. "That's how the world goes today. I know I'm not married, I know it's not the norm to have a baby out of wedlock. But it's all about being responsible, taking care of my child, love my child."

"They also try to say, well, he was born out of wedlock he's trying to do the same thing his biological father did," said O'Neal, who was raised by his mother and stepfather after his father abandoned the family.

"I was different. I'll never take off. When my daughter gets older, you can see her when her father is close to going to have a smile, ear-to-ear and say, 'My daddy is Shaq.' If she could talk now, she'd say that now."

His daughter, Tashina, was born July 19, the day after he signed his contract with the Lakers. O'Neal has immersed himself in fatherhood, right down to changing the diapers.

"I do it all," O'Neal said. "I'm Daddy. Shaq-Daddy does it all."

Bayou-based team preps for Montana

Nicholls State head coach Darren Barbier has been trying to get his Louisiana team ready to play in wintry Missouri, Mont., but he's not sure that prep work is the answer.

"What I've been doing is making a bunch of phone calls," said the head coach of the Nicholls State Colonels. "Trying to find out what they wear up there for games."

"Our goal is to look identical to them (Montana). Whatever they're wearing, we'll be wearing. I'm trying to tell the kids it doesn't make a difference what you're wearing, it's all mental."

"I'm trying to take the weather out of this," Barbier told The Billings (Mont.) Gazette.

The Colonels face the defending national champion Montana Grizzlies on today in the first round of the NCAA Division I-AA football playoffs.

Nicholls State is located in the Louisiana bayou, south of New Orleans. Barbier said the temperature has been in the 40s and 50s all week.

13-year NBA veteran Long joins Raptors

TORONTO - John Long, who has spent four years playing exhibition basketball games with Magic Johnson's all-star team, has joined the Toronto Raptors.

The 40-year-old, who spent 13 seasons in the NBA, signed a free-agent contract Friday. Terms were not disclosed.

"I believe that experience was a missing ingredient on our team," general manager Isiah Thomas said. "John has the ability to help give our team that perspective it needs to successfully make it through the long NBA season."

Long, a graduate of the University of Detroit, played nine seasons with the Detroit Pistons, three with the Indiana Pacers and one with the Atlanta Hawks. He averaged 13.9 points and was an 86 per cent free-throw shooter.

Selig target of suit by Miami group

NEW YORK - Acting baseball commissioner Bud Selig has been sued by a 12-member group of an arbitration board that must decide how much the Florida Marlins must pay for displacing a minor league team when the expansion franchise was added to the major leagues four years ago.

The New York Times reported on Friday that the suit filed in Manhattan Federal District Court also asks Selig to produce documents relating to his role in the departure of the last commissioner, Fay Vincent.

Vincent resigned last year in 1992, securing the stage for the baseball labor war that resulted in two strike-shortened seasons and cancellation of the 1994 World Series.

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) - It took more than 20 minutes, but No. 3 Wake Forest finally found a solution to Davidson's pesky defense, using a 17-run in the second half and coasting to a 69-45 victory Friday night.

Tim Duncan scored five of his 20 points during the decisive run in which Wake Forest pushed its 32-28 lead to 49-32 with 8:27 left, finally getting Davidson into a running game and out of its deliberate tempo.

Tony Rutland's 3-pointer with 4:11 remaining gave Wake Forest a 20-point lead and some breathing room down the stretch.

Duncan also had 13 rebounds and four assists, while Loren Duncan added 15 points and eight rebounds in 20 minutes.

The Demon Deacons (3-0), playing their third game in six days, have beaten the Wildcats (2-1) 17 straight times and have won 21 straight at Joel Coliseum.

Davidson, which shot 29 percent in the second half, was led by Mark Donnelly's 17 points.

No. 10 Clemson, 78, Delaware 71

CAGMAS, Puerto Rico - Merl Coker scored 19 points, and No. 10 Clemson used a late 100-run to hold off surprisingly tough Delaware for a 78-71 victory Friday night in the San Juan Shootout.

Harold Jamison added 15 points and six rebounds for the Tigers (3-0), who led just 62-59 before the Blue Devils (2-1) went scoreless for three minutes. The final broke through, but were effectively out of the game, trailing 72-61.

The Blue Heats, who got 31 points from forward Arnie Fice, spent most of the game erasing Clemson leads approaching double figures, but were unable to keep up with the Tigers' fast-paced attack in the second half.

No. 12 Syracuse 85, Maine 65

ANCHORAGE, Alaska - Todd Burgan scored 18 points, including three 3-pointers, to lead No. 12 Syracuse over Maine 85-65 Friday in the Great Alaska Shootout's second round.

NEW YORK - Andrae Patterson, the hero of Indiana's semifinal victory, scored a career-high 39 points Friday night to lead the 20th-ranked Hoosiers over No. 6 Duke 85-69 in the championship of the Preseason NT.

The 6-foot-8 junior had 20 points in the semifinal over Evansville, including the game-winning shot at the buzzer. He scored from inside and out throughout Friday's game, and at one point scored 15 straight

The Orangermen (2-1) made a team-record 13 3-pointers a day after going 1-for-11 from long range in an 87-53 loss to No. 8 Kentucky.

No. 14 North Carolina 82, Pittsburgh 61

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. - Antawn Jamison led a one-man attack on Pittsburgh in the second half and finished with a career-high 30 points to guide No. 14 North Carolina to an 82-61 victory.

Jamison scored the most points of any Tar Heel to play in the DuSable Smith Center since it opened in January 1986. Lionel Simmons of LaSalle holds the building record, scoring 37 points in a game on Jan. 9, 1988.

No. 22 Tulsa 55, Evansville 51

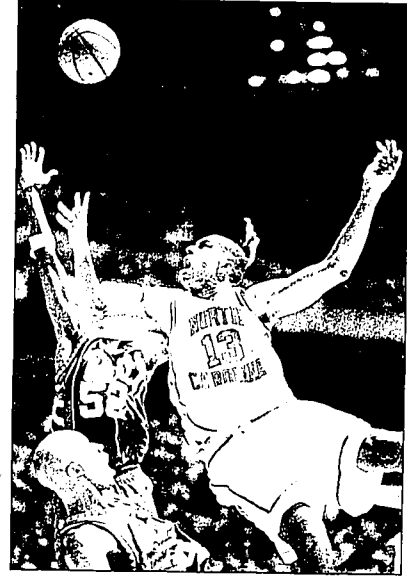

NEW YORK - Michael Ruffin had 10 points, 12 rebounds and five blocked shots Friday night to lead No. 22 Tulsa to a 55-51 victory over Evansville in the third-place game of the Preseason NT.

The Golden Hurricane (3-1) managed the win despite making just four field goals over the game's final 16 minutes. Two of those baskets came in the final 1:15 - Jamie Grant's reverse layup when he rebounded an airball 3-point attempt by Eric Seals to make it 48-45 and Shea Colley's breakaway shot in the three seconds to play that made it 55-48.

No. 20 Indiana 85, No. 6 Duke 69

In addition to Patterson, Duke couldn't overcome its problems from 3-point range and the foul line. The Blue Devils, who beat No. 22 Tulsa in the semifinals, were 6-for-

No. 5 Villanova 68, American U, P.R. 62

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico - Dominique Canby scored 17 of her 20 points in the first half, and fourth-ranked Alabama advanced to the championship of the San Juan Shootout with a 88-32 rout Friday night of Puerto Rico-Mayaguez.

The victory puts the Crimson Tide into the championship game Sunday against No. 13 North Carolina State. The Wolfpack advanced by beating the Puerto Rican national team 108-64 earlier Friday.

Alabama (1-1) also got 14 points from Pam Duncan. Benibel Carrion led the Puerto Rican team with 11 points.

Top-ranked Stanford hounds Houston; Irish down Ohio

HONOLULU (AP) - Kate Starbird scored 20 points, and top-ranked Stanford took advantage of poor ball-handling by Houston for an 83-51 victory Friday in an opening-round game at the Rainbow Wahine Classic.

The taller Cardinal (4-0) moved to a 45-20 halftime lead, going on a 19-0 run in a 4-minute span, while forcing the 19 Houston turnovers in the first 20 minutes.

For the game, Stanford forced the Cougars (1-1) into 31 turnovers and limited Houston to 16-of-47 shooting. The Cardinal also outrebounded Houston, 51-35, with 24 coming off the offensive boards.

Olympia Scott added 13 points for Stanford.

Miranda Serna and Alicia Rodriguez scored 11 points apiece for Houston.

By winning, the Fighting Irish (5-1) advanced to the championship game of the Comfort Inn Downtown Classic. They will play host Georgia Tech (2-0) in the championship game Saturday.

Beth Morgan added 25 points for Notre Dame, which had its greatest offensive output since a 95-67 victory over Duquesne in 1993.

Notre Dame trailed Ohio, playing its first game, by as many as six points in the first half and was down 47-46 at the break after Marlene Stollings hit a 3-pointer with three seconds left. Stollings finished with 26 points for Ohio, which was 10-for-20 from beyond the 3-point line.

Christie Smith had 11 points for the Ladybugs and Yolanda Harris added 10.

In addition to forcing 22 turnovers, the Ladybugs (3-0) held the Redskins (1-1) to 14 of 46 from the floor and controlled the boards, 47-35.

Shawn Mann led Miami with 13 points.

No. 6 Louisiana Tech 87, E. Kentucky 46

SHREVEPORT, La. - Alisa Burras scored 20 points, and Amanda Wilson had 16 and a game-high 10 rebounds Friday night to lead No. 6 Louisiana Tech over Eastern Kentucky 87-46 in the opening round of the Shreveport Shootout.

Fellow golfers have nothing but praise for Tiger Woods

LA QUINTA, Calif. (AP) - John Daly thanked him, Tom Watson thanked him, Fred Couples said he deserves all the good things happening to him.

Tiger Woods is very popular, even with the guys he'll be trying to beat out of hundreds of thousands of dollars in his Skins Game debut this weekend.

Much as he did for the PGA Tour over the 20-year-old Woods has revitalized the Skins Game, which had been fading with age, which the made-for-TV event, which is down to its lowest ratings ever in 1995, is back in its year, with the two-day match expected to attract one of golf's largest television audiences in history.

Requests for media credentials are four times the normal rate, at "140 and rising," a tournament official said Friday. And tickets, limited to a sale of 10,000, have gone quickly.

The "other three" players in the foursome for the "Tiger Skins," do not appear resentful for being squeezed into the wings while Woods is center stage.

"It's great. It's wonderful what he can do with a golf ball," said Daly, who's still officially the longest hitter on the tour (288.8 yards per drive this year) only because Woods (302.8 yards) didn't play enough tournaments to qualify for that distinction.

Watson, 47, who said he was going to be a spectator this time, hitting off the tee then watching Woods blow drives past him, then turned serious, looking Woods in the eye and saying, "Tiger, you've got the world in front of you."

Montgomery leads halfway through Million Dollar

SUN CITY, South Africa (AP) - Colin Montgomerie of Scotland completed the rain-delayed first round in 7-under-par 65 Friday, then fired a 1-under-71 for a one-shot lead in the Million Dollar Challenge.

The 32-year-old Scot led for the richest first prize in golf, $1 million - won tightly bunched at the halfway mark, with only six strokes separating Montgomerie and last-place Tom Lehman of the United States, the British Open champion and U.S. PGA player of the year.

Ian Woosnam of Wales and South Africa's Ernie Els were tied for second at 137, one stroke in front of Nick Price of Zimbabwe and the U.S. trio of Steve Stricker, U.S. Open champion Steve Jones and U.S. PGA champion Mark Brooks.

For the first time in the 16-year history of the tournament, heavy rain in the usually arid hills of northern South Africa forced play to be suspended Thursday after a few holes.

On Friday, players started early to complete the first round, then turned around for another 18 holes in the afternoon.

Virginia Tech downs Virginia, 26-9

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Jim Druckenmiller threw two touchdown passes and completed a 72-yarder to set up another score as No. 17 Virginia Tech kept its Bowl Alliance hopes alive with a 26-9 victory Friday over No. 20 Virginia.

The Hokies (10-1) can gain the alliance berth from the Big East if No. 23 Miami beats No. 16 Syracuse on Saturday. Otherwise, Virginia Tech would likely play No. 13 North Carolina (9-2) in the Gator Bowl on Jan. 1.

Tiki Barber ran for 162 yards to pass Terry Kirby as the Cavaliers' career rushing leader, but Virginia (7-4) had few other highlights. Even the Cavaliers' NCAA record streak of 39 games with an interception ended.

Druckenmiller, whose 32-yard pass with 47 seconds left beat Virginia a year ago, did not have as long this time. He threw a 16-yard TD pass to Brian Edmonds in the first half and a 21-yarder to Michael Stuewe 2:17 after the break.

Virginia Tech quarterback Jim Druckenmiller (16) is sacked by Virginia defenders Duane Ashman (94) and Tony Digio during the first half Friday at Lane Stadium in Charlottesville, Va.

Tigers tame Razorbacks, 17-7

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — LSU's Herb Tyler was so efficient that third-and-16 and third-and-10 looked like third-and-inches.

He converted four straight long-yardage situations with his passes, and the defense gave up only three first downs in the first half as the 19th-ranked Tigers beat Arkansas 17-7 Friday.

Tyler turned third-and-16, third-and-seven, third-and-10 into first downs and threw a 35-yard touchdown pass on second-and-12 as the Tigers (9-2, 6-2 Southeastern Conference) scored TDs during their first two possessions. Tyler completed five of six for 112 yards during the two drives despite a steady rain.

Arkansas coach Danny Ford said LSU's third-down success was devastating.

"Our defense has to learn to get off the field on third down," he said.

Tyler completed 11-of-19 for 191 yards, but was 9-of-13 for 164 yards in the first half.

Arkansas (4-7, 2-2) made 81 yards in the first half, and crossed midfield only once in the first 41 minutes.

Ford said the Razorbacks were very nonchalant in the first half.

"We took their licks and just stood around," he said. "It looked like a junior high team against a high school team."

The Tigers, 16-6-1 in two years under Gerry DiNardo, gained a share of the SEC Western Division title with Alabama and will play in their second straight bowl game next month. The Tigers won a total of 16 games during the four years prior to DiNardo's arrival.

"I thought that in the nine games we won this year, we were fairly evenly matched with each team," DiNardo said. "Much like last year, this is going to give us momentum going into the post-season."

Arkansas, winner of the Western Division title last year, is 22-23-1 in four years under Ford. LSU covered 72 yards in 12 plays for its first touchdown, and running back Kevin Faulk made 46 of them on seven runs. Tyler made an important first down when he converted the play and ran the option for 5 yards on third-and-2.

Tyler, given plenty of time, found David LaFleur on a deep crossing pattern for 21 yards on third-and-16. Faulk, the No. 2 rusher in the SEC, covered the final 8 yards in two tries.

The Tigers started their second possession from their 9, and quickly faced third-and-7. Tyler threw to a wide-open Larry Foster for 11 yards. On third-and-10, Tyler gave ground and then floated a pass toward Faulk, who slipped out of the backfield, grabbed the ball with his left hand and turned up the sidelines for 39 yards.

On second-and-12 from the 35, Foster drove hard at Marcus Campbell and then turned back to take Tyler's pass at the 20. Campbell fell down and Foster jogged into the end zone.

Longhorns spear A&M, 51-15, to win 4th straight

AUSTIN (AP) — After opening the season 3-4 and making a habit of losing fourth-quarter leads, the Texas Longhorns finally are playing the kind of football expected of them.

The Longhorns (7-4, 6-2) finished the regular season with their fourth straight victory, a 51-15 triumph over rival Texas A&M Friday that gave them the Big 12 South title and a berth in the league championship game.

"It was a long, hard year and to not have given up and be rewarded like this is a great feeling," offensive guard Dan Neil said.

James Brown threw for four touchdowns, two to Mike Adams, as the Longhorns made it two straight over the Aggies (6-6, 4-4), who were eliminated from bowl contention and endured their first non-winning season since going 5-5-1 in 1983.

It was the most lopsided victory by either team in the 103-game series since Texas beat A&M 46 in 1981.

"It's been a frustrating year for everyone connected with A&M football," Aggies coach R.C. Slocum said. "But I think you have to make it into a positive. We have some rebuilding to do. We've got to work at recruiting and re-focus all aspects of the program."

Texas, which rolled up 594 yards, took control early in the third quarter after stopping a fake punt by A&M at the Aggies' 39 and scoring eight plays later on a 2-yard TD pass from Brown to Derrick Scott for a 24-9 lead.

"That was a big play because that would have given them some momentum and maybe an opportunity to strike," Texas coach John Mackovic said. "From there, we began riling."

Adams then caught TD passes of 14 and 16 yards, putting Texas up 37-9 with 2:42 left in the third quarter. Adams, who finished with six receptions for 153 yards, set a school record for career TD catches with 16, passing Lovell Pinkney who had 15 from 1992-94.

Brown was 18-of-30 for 336 yards. His longest TD pass was a 53-yarder to Wane McGarity in the second quarter.

"I don't know if James took it a little personally that he wasn't named to one of the all-conference teams," Mackovic said. "We thought he was clearly one of the top quarterbacks in the conference, and he showed that today."

"This is the type of performance we needed in a big game," Brown said, returning to losses in which fourth-quarter leads slipped away against Notre Dame, Oklahoma and Colorado.

Priest Holmes had TD runs of 4 and 2 yards, while Phil Dawson kicked a 44-yard field goal for the Longhorns.

Ricky Williams, who carried 22 times for 145 yards, scored on a 55-yard run in the fourth quarter for Texas.

"In the third quarter, we couldn't be stopped," Williams said. "It seemed like we scored on every possession."

Manning at quarterback: Then and now

The Associated Press

In the late 1960s, America was in the midst of social unrest, caught up in a divisive war abroad and an invasive drug culture at home. It was a troublesome, challenging time, especially on college campuses where dissent was the order of the day.

In that time of turmoil, Archie Manning arrived at the University of Mississippi destined to become a star quarterback, marry the homecoming queen, be drafted in the first round by the NFL and wind up in his school's Hall of Fame.

His was the ultimate All-American story.

me think players aren't thinking. "In college, there are so many temptations, people pulling you different ways. I have people pulling me different ways a lot, wanting me to get into wrong-type situations.

But you have to recognize what's important to you. I don't see why anyone would want to risk their career in college football for something that's not important."

Still, it happens.

"Maybe they're not playing a whole lot or people aren't paying attention to them," Peyton Manning said. "They just fade away and somebody buddies up to them and pulls them in the wrong direction."

"Times change," Archie Manning said. "The game has changed. The players have changed."

Archie Manning does not suggest that he and his Ole Miss teammates were angels.

"I had fun in college," he said. "I got in places a time or two where I shouldn't have been. There was drinking. With football players, it's a macho thing. You get to drinking, you're asking for trouble. There was trouble then. There were minute things that may be late for curfew, stuff like that. There was never stuff like beating up women. I don't understand beating up people. I don't get it. I don't know where that came from."

During Peyton Manning's time at Tennessee, players have been disciplined for telephone credit card fraud, public drunkenness, rape and most recently, misdemeanor assault.

Last March, wide receiver Greg Kyler and linebacker Anthony Hampton were ordered to perform 100 hours of community service after pleading guilty to beating up a university trainer.

Kyler was suspended for spring practice and one game. He returned to catch three passes, then was suspended again — for an unspecified violation of team rules. Hampton was suspended for the entire season.

"Obviously, I don't know everything that happens in a certain situation," Peyton Manning said. "But here in Tennessee we've had some troubled situations. It just makes

Don't take blessings for granted

It didn't take much to make the Pilgrims feel thankful that first Thanksgiving — a few ripe pumpkins, a bushel of corn, a wild turkey that someone wandered within rifle range. Historians know, but it is that when the Native Americans next door brought squash to the feast, the Pilgrims were actually grateful to receive it.

And (shudder) eat it. We aren't so easily impressed these days. Most Americans (not all, unfortunately, but most) will have plenty to eat on Thanksgiving — and every other day of the year, for that matter.

VALUESPEAK
Joseph Walker

Life's necessities — food, shelter, clothing and chocolate (not necessarily in that order) — are often taken for granted, leaving us to yearn only for those comparatively few things that we'd really, really, really, like to have. Even though we don't really, really, really, need them.

But every once in a while, something happens to shake us up a bit and help us realize how much we are blessed. Often, that "something" is tragic or, at the very least, controversial — like so many of the experiences we've had this year. And when no one would ever say that we are glad such things happen, we can at least be thankful for lessons learned and for renewed appreciation of life's simple bounties.

Take water, for example. Aside from oxygen, there is nothing more critical to human survival. Nor is there anything so necessary to us as most of the time. But sometimes, hurricanes make clean, safe water a precious commodity in storm-ravaged areas.

While some of the rest of us are thoughtlessly over-watering our lawns and gardens, hurricane victims are learning the hard way that water is a resource to be savored, not squandered. And something tells me that on some tables this Thanksgiving, generously filled water glasses will be regarded with as much grateful appreciation as the turkey, the dressing and the candied yams.

Especially the candied yams. Peace should also be high on the list of things we have learned to cherish through difficult experience. During the past year, we have watched, horrified, as hostile factions have continued to terrorize and torture each other.

While it's true that we have experienced our share of hostility (racial tension during the O.J. Simpson trial) and terror (the Oklahoma City bombing), our crises have been short-lived and our confrontations — outside of the political arena, that is — relatively few.

Please don't misunderstand — I'm not saying we don't need to pray for peace at home and abroad. Those prayers should continue as long as there is cruelty, inhumanity and intolerance between people. But at least this year, we don't have to pray for a world poised on the brink of war. For that we can be thankful.

More than anything else, however, I hope this Thanksgiving finds you a little more inclined to give thanks for, if not with, your family — wherever your family may be.

We keep hearing a lot of discussion about families and "family values" — some of it hurtful and divisive, if not downright destructive. Nothing could be more inappropriate, because nothing should be more unifying than a family.

While we may well disagree as to exactly what "family values" are, none of us can doubt the significance of our own families in our lives.

Regardless of our family situation — whether we're old or young, single or married, childless by choice or proudly parental — we are part of a family. And we belong.

And if that sounds like a line straight out of "Friends" or something ... well, I'm sorry.

It's been a long year, and you can't help but pick up an extra thought here and there.

Not to mention something else to be thankful for.

Open house

A series of holiday open house gatherings will be held for people to come and find out more about Scott Westermann's work.

An open house will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. Dec. 14 and 7 to 9 p.m. Dec. 15. Another open house is set for 2 to 4 p.m. Dec. 16 and 7 to 9 p.m. Dec. 17.

Guests are invited to a brown bag lunch from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Dec. 18. The open houses will be held at the Westermann home, 1553 E. Morfte Place, near Twin Falls High School.

Joe Bowry, a member of the Lutheran Bible Translators from Liberia, will be present at the gatherings. Call 734-1455 for more information or to RSVP.

TWIN FALLS — Twenty-seven years ago a baby boy was born in Twin Falls. His parents, Dale and Diana Westermann, named him Scott.

Like any youngster, Scott romped and played, studied and did chores. Growing to manhood, he became a jack-of-all trades, with no definite direction for his adult life.

This scenario seems quite ordinary. Then, as the Westermans tell it, God stepped in and selected Scott Westermann to be transported from Idaho to Africa — and put a stamp of approval on the work the young man was to accomplish.

Scott Westermann said, "I wasn't really good at anything. Then God led me to go to a missions conference in Urbana, Ill. There were missions of all types from flying planes, to agriculture to translating the Bible. It was like water gushing out from a fire hydrant hose. All I could do was to ask God, 'Why am I here?' Then it all started to make sense. I found out about surveying languages in, of all places Cameroon, Africa. It was the first job I ever ran across that fit me. It fit a lot of my characteristics."

The young man quickly started to prepare for his journey to the African region located on the western border of the country, where French is the national language but more than 260 different languages and dialects are spoken. He joined the Lutheran Bible Translators. He enrolled in the University of Northern Colorado and went to Dallas, Texas, to learn from the Wycliff Bible translators. He specialized in computer technology and speech communications, because he felt sure that God wanted him to teach Cameroonians how to use a computer in translating the Holy Bible into the many different native languages.

Westermann will soon be working in a print shop in the city of Ngaoundere, Please see AFRICA, Page C2

Poll: Family time more important than keeping Christ in Christmas

By David Briggs
The Associated Press

In "Jingle All the Way," the would-be Christmas blockbuster starring Arnold Schwarzenegger, the spirit of the season is tethered to a father getting his son a favorite toy.

The moral is that you can buy your way to a merry Christmas, and it plays out in a secular culture that depends on holiday gift-giving to keep the retail fires burning.

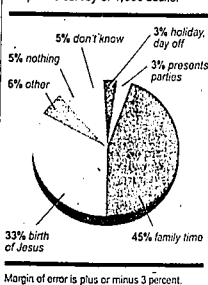

Now, just before the first Sunday of Advent, a poll has been released that confirms the fears of Christian clergy who long have found fertile sermon material in the difficulties of paying attention to the "reason for the season" — the birth of Christ.

Asked what makes Christmas important to them, only one-third of adults in the national survey said the birth of Jesus. Forty-four percent said family time is the most important part of one of the three most sacred days — along with Good Friday and Easter — on the Christian calendar.

"I guess it demonstrates what preachers have been writing their hands over for some time: Christ has been evacuated from Christmas," said the Rev. William Willimon, a theologian and Duke University chaplain. "It's good to know where we are. Christmas has been a co-opted holiday."

What makes Christmas an important day?

Only one-third of Americans said the birth of Jesus is what makes Christmas important for them. Results of a random telephone survey of 1,006 adults:

Source: Lutheran Hour Ministries

Still, the results surprised pollster George Barna, whose Barna Research Group Ltd. of Oxnard, Calif., conducted the survey for Lutheran Hour Ministries.

"Even all that I know about how secularized our culture has become, I would have thought that more people would say Christmas, the birth of Jesus," Barna said.

The random telephone survey of 1,006 adults was conducted in July, with a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percent.

Almost 9 in 10 Americans identify themselves as Christians. But even among that group, only 37 percent said the birth of Jesus — the Son of God sent from heaven to offer salvation to humanity, according to Christian teachings — was the most important aspect of Christmas Day for them.

Among respondents who held strict evangelical beliefs, more than three in four placed Jesus' birthday first. Those who described themselves as theological liberals were the least likely to place Jesus first, with only 24 percent saying the birth of Christ was what made Christmas an important day for them.

There also were significant age differences, with 26 percent of respondents ages 18 to 34 saying the birth of Jesus was the most important aspect of Christmas. That percentage rose to 39 percent among respondents 65 and older.

Mormons hand out anti-alcohol petitions

The Associated Press

LOGAN, Utah — Anti-alcohol petitions were circulated throughout Mormon Church chapels in Logan on Sunday urging the faithful to support strict limits on alcohol sales in the city.

The petitions, some circulated during church services, sought signatures from members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints as young as 8 years of age.

The petitions and letters from church officials referred to Monday night's public hearing on alcohol laws in Logan. The letters were generated by the Logan Area Multi Stake Council, which represents the seven Mormon stakes in Logan and five at Utah State University.

Church spokesman Don LeFevre in Salt Lake City said Tuesday in a written statement that "the petitions were a result of local initiative and were done without any direction from church headquarters."

Valley Christian Church welcomes renovation

By Laura Huber
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Esther D. Hatcher's dream finally came true.

Hatcher's dream, according to Valley Christian Church board member Loraine Stevens, was to turn the combined meeting place of Valley Christian/Our Savior Lutheran church into a place that could serve the Twin Falls community.

She was instrumental in raising the necessary funds to remodel the church.

"When I first came to the church in 1992, the church women were selling dishcloths to raise funds for the project," said Stevens. "I can remember many fund-raisers that she organized and helped with."

Recently, the renovations of the combined church were completed.

The contractor was Darren Hall, Stevens explained. The cost was more than $200,000. Church members helped by demolishing the old building, painting the interior and decorating and furnishing it.

One member of the church, Harlan Baker, has been at the church almost every day to help with the renovations, Stevens said.

Other members, such as the Christian Women's Fellowship, contributed more than $8,000 to the project. The women's group bought many of the furnishings, such as two new stoves, two refrigerators, a dishwasher, carpeting for the Fireside Room and blinds for the windows.

Stevens is especially proud of the Priests in Bethlehem declare blinking miracle

The Associated Press

BETHLEHEM, West Bank — Her hands clasped in prayer, a Palestinian seamstress stared intently at an icon of Jesus painted on a column in the Church of the Nativity, just above the grotto where tradition says Jesus was born.

"Look, look," Jesus' face was barely visible in the shadows of the candle-lit basilica. "He blinked. What a blessing."

Nadia Banoura is one of thousands of Christians to visit the centuries-old icon since Greek Orthodox priests said they saw Jesus blink six weeks ago and declared it a miracle.

"It's a message for people to come back to God and religion," said Father Anastasios, the senior Greek Orthodox clergyman in Bethlehem.

Coming during the Christmas season, the discovery could help Bethlehem's nativity business, which has been pummeled by years of political strife, including the Palestinians' 1987-1993 revolt against Israeli occupation.

Choir case goes before appeals court

The Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Officials at Utah's West High School failed to protect the First Amendment rights of a student who was required to sing Christian songs as part of an apella choir's curriculum, an attorney told a federal court last week.

The 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals heard the case of former West High student Rachel Baughman, who contends church pastor Richard Torgerson used his position to promote his Mormon beliefs.

Baughman, who is Jewish, filed suit against the school, alleging school officials did nothing to prevent Torgerson from including songs in the choir's program that promote religion. The lawsuit also seeks to prevent the West High choir from performing in churches.

Baughman, now a senior, is attending a private school this semester, according to her attorney, Andrew Hruska.

"It's the school district who should protect Rachel and lay down the law," Hruska told the court. "She is not asked to be a spokesman for religion and that's a substantial burden on her constitutional rights."

The two judges who heard arguments from Hruska and attorneys for the school district took the case under advisement. A third judge was ill and did not attend last week's hearing but will take part in the decision.

A federal judge dismissed Baughman's lawsuit in September 1995, but she went back to court this year to amend it. In May, that action was dismissed as well, so Baughman took her case to the 10th Circuit.

The school has denied that it or Torgerson did anything wrong. Assistant Utah Attorney General Dan Larsen, representing the school district, told the appeals court there never was any discussion in Torgerson's class of specific prayers or religion. He said the songs in question were mostly Christmas music.

"A song is not a prayer and not an overt religious exercise," Larsen said.

Torgerson was openly trying to promote his Mormon religious beliefs and that the school district condoned it.

"It doesn't take a great leap of faith to see that Mr. Torgerson and the government (school) are promoting religion," he said. In dismissing Baughman's lawsuit last spring, U.S. District Judge J. Thomas Greene said the alleged conduct of school officials did not constitute the establishment or endorsement of religion.

Greene also refused to bar the singing of religious songs at the school's 1995 graduation, and Baughman and her parents took the case to the 10th Circuit, which directed school administration to drop the songs from the program.

Distant students and some parents sang one of the songs anyway.

He has a target date of January 1997 for his departure from the United States. In preparation, he has been gaining support for his work.

"I'll need about $3,300 per month, plus special one-time expenses like computer upgrade and a 4-wheel drive vehicle," he said.

with their families and celebrate the birth of Christ," Meyer said. Willmon, however, said the residents show churches need to more actively teach the members the true meaning of Christmas, and help them avoid turning the birth of Jesus into "sentimental gawk."

"We're finding it important to say, 'You really don't know what Christmas is about, do you?'" Willmon said. "The studies show you really have no idea why we're singing 'Joy to the World.'"

Study examines 'end of world' beliefs

Chicago Tribune

"CHICAGO — Outside, no bearded prophets waved signs announcing the end of the world is at hand." But the two dozen theological scholars who gathered in a reassuring wood-paneled room with a fireplace at the University of Chicago this month did have a strong sense of impending deadlines.

Their theme was the apocalypse, which some groups around the world fear may come as soon as the end of January, 2000, bringing about a massive scourge of the Earth through violent earthquakes, falling stars, rolling seas, urban fires and considerable human carnage.

Before your papers are due by the end of January," warned Bernard McGinn, a professor in the university's Divinity School, addressing scholars at the three-day conference titled "Apocalypticism: On the Eve of the New Millennium."

The purpose of the event, which drew apocalypticists from as far afield as Switzerland and Los Angeles, was to help shape a scholarly overview of a topic that has intrigued humans for centuries. Their papers, 42 in all, will form a three-volume series that is due out in the next few months.

McGinn, fellow University of Chicago professor John Collins and Stephen Stein, professor of religious studies at Indiana University, are co-editors of the work in progress, the Encyclopedia of Apocalypticism, to be published by Continuum Press, a New York house of works of religious persuasion.

Caught between a bang and a whimper, as a poet once framed the choice, the apocalypticists at the Chicago conference were definitely bang people. But their tone during the reading of papers and an hourlong panel discussion was professional, alert, aware, sympathetic, unhurried and, considering the subject, almost calm.

"One general theme here seems to be, 'Don't get us wrong, none of us believes any of this,'" suggested McGinn, who presided at the Divinity School. However, he added, the aim, "as with all intellectual endeavors, should be not to laugh, not to cry, not to denounce, but to understand." Variations of the apocalypse have circled the globe.

"Suicide bombers focus on the end of the world. They talk of it constantly before they blow up a car or a bus station," said Stephen O'Leary, a religion professor at the University of Southern California.

Novadays, apocalyptic thinking is common on the Internet, O'Leary said. Web sites allow the like-minded to exchange dreams, dreads and tales of everything from neopagan rituals to alien abductions.

To some, the apocalypse will mean a complete stop, a global Big One, a cataclysm of the Richter scale. To others, it is a fulfillment, what the French call "a rectification of accounts."

For the fearful, McGinn had short-term, long-term good news. "The new millennium doesn't start until 2001," he observed, "since there is no year 0 in the A.D. calendar, and you have to count 2,000 of those until you get to the end of year 2000."

Also, he said, his publisher expected the work on apocalypticism to sell well — for years.

teaching people how to "trouble-shoot" problems they'll encounter with computers. He will have many different jobs, teaching people to fix things and traveling throughout the region to assist in surveying the words spoken to figure out how much people understand each other.

"With the language survey, it then makes sense to train the people over there to use the computers to translate the Scriptures," Westermann said.

"They'll be there a lot longer than any of us will, so they can get more done than we can."

Westermann's first assignment will be for about three years. While in Africa, Westermann will live in the city with a population of about 60,000 people. The population of the country is 12 million.

"Americans are more likely to correctly recall the significance of April 15 than they are to connect Christmas with the birth of Jesus. As America becomes increasingly anesthetized to Christian principles and practices, it seems only fitting that we have contracted acute amnesia regarding the spiritual significance of December 25," Barna said.

Dale Meyer, spokesman for Lutheran Hour Ministries, said the results also can be interpreted ed in a hopeful manner, since together family time and the birth of Christ were the most important aspects of Christmas for more than three-quarters of the population.

Only 3 percent said presents or parties were the most important part of Christmas, the same as in a survey conducted the past year. Several ward members who asked not to be identified told The Herald Journal they were offended that the petitions were available during meetings, including a service of worship and should not be used as a political platform, they said.

Jay Monson, chairman for public relations of the stake council, said no petition should have been signed during church services.

"If it happened, then it's inappropriate," Monson said. "No sacrament meeting should ever have any portion of any kind circulated in it."

Monson said some church members have been overexuberant. "We do not want that, of course. We're trying to build closeness in the community, not divide it."

Monson said the stake council intended for the petitions to originate from the local level.

encouraged to participate," said the letter. "Most 5- or 6-year-old children will not understand. If they do, let them understand with a little help."

The letter adds: "Children have the right to be heard."

Tom Kerr, stake public affairs director who signed the letter and had copies delivered to bishops, said Tuesday that some members signed petitions during church meetings Sunday.

He said petitions were in the church, and members arriving and leaving were encouraged to sign them. Others were signed when church volunteers went door to door, he said.

His letter told bishops: "Do whatever is possible toward meeting some specific, but arbitrary, goals." It adds: "It is appropriate to read whatever parts of this material you feel comfortable with during your ward business."

Frank Rea, president of a student stake at Utah State University, said petitions came hood kind of thing." But Monson later said petitions on the alcohol issue were available at the stake council level.

Monson said the church has not taken an official position on Logan alcohol laws, but the church preaches abstinence from alcohol.

Kerr, the Mount Logan Stake public affairs director who distributed the letter, said he believes there should be no alcohol sold anytime in Logan.

"If I had my choice, we wouldn't have alcohol because of the mayhem," he said Tuesday.

Kerr said police should station themselves outside every tavern, club and restaurant that sells alcohol and check all patrons as they leave for alcohol content.

"Any place that serves alcohol where anybody can have more than one drink," he said. "But we can't get that may police out there."

Kerr said he tries to avoid driving at night, on weekends and on holidays because of alcohol-impaired drivers.

"I know who's out there," he said, "but we made no visit to this place," said Father Athol, an adviser to the Roman Catholic patriarch.

"He moved his eyelid up and down several times," said Mrs. Banoura, who prayed for speedy recovery from leg operations, but she said a message from God that he is everywhere.

Christians — and even some Muslims — filed past the icon Wednesday. Some said they could see Jesus' blinks; others suggested bad lighting and peering past closed eyelids.

"Perhaps during intense meditation, some may feel that the eyes open and close," said Khalid

Jarallah, a Muslim who checked out the icon during a break from his job at the Logansport Armory, who was holding meetings in the church office upstairs.

The Roman Catholics — who control the basilica with Greek Orthodox and Armenians — ordered an investigation into the miracle claims. "We heard about

Hong Kong's Christians brace for life under Communist rule

The Associated Press

HONG KONG — Straining to speak over children singing hymns in Cantonese, the Rev. Gabriel Lejeune tells how Vietnam's victorious communists expelled him not once — but three times.

"I was expelled from the mountains of North Vietnam, from Hanoi and Saigon and from Saigon in 1976," he says, ticking them off with his fingers.

Now the French Catholic missionary wonders whether he'll survive his next encounter with communist authority — when Britain returns Hong Kong to Chinese rule on July 1.

He doesn't think the Chinese will throw out Western missionaries as they did in 1949, when the Chinese Communist Party took power.

"I am an optimist," he says. "The Chinese have changed since then."

Others aren't so sure, even though China has promised not to make Hong Kong communist. Under the Basic Law, the constitution that China has prepared for post-1997 Hong Kong, the territory is to keep the freedoms it enjoyed under British rule, including religious autonomy.

But Hong Kong's nearly 500,000 Christians — 8 percent of the population — are divided about whether to believe those promises. Some point to the Beijing government's intolerance toward those who question the party line.

Some of China's leading critics in Hong Kong are devout Christians — men like Martin Lee, a Roman Catholic who heads Hong Kong's largest political party, the Democrats.

Others claim they cannot trust each other because they have no common ground," says Beatrice

Rev. Gabriel Lejeune, who was expelled from three locations in Vietnam by the victorious Communists, is shown in his Hong Kong church on Sept. 12. Lejeune says he is cautiously optimistic about the future of Christianity in Hong Kong after it is handed over to China next year.

Leung, senior lecturer at Lingnan College and a nun in the locally based order of the Precious Blood.

The Chinese mentality is "religion serves politics, politics absorbs religion. But we don't want politics to absorb religion," she says.

Chinese interference in Tibet's religious hierarchy is not encouraging.

And in February, China disturbed many people when it sought to postpone a meeting in Hong Kong of the Lutheran World Federation next July. Beijing backtracked, saying it merely wanted to prevent a logistical clash between handover activities and the large-scale religious gathering just weeks later.

Hong Kong's churches, long accustomed to staying out of politics, are being forced to take sides. A fierce debate has arisen, for instance, over whether to accept China's invitation to join the 400-member committee that will select Hong Kong's post-1997 leader and legislature.

Some church members reportedly have applied to join, but as individuals, not as representatives of their churches.

For 150 years, the churches have played a major role in schooling, feeding and healing Hong Kong people. The Catholic Church alone runs 325 schools, a quarter of the total, educating about 300,000 of the colony's youth.

Leung, the nun, doubts China will allow that to continue.

Liver transplant laws prompt ethical debate

Knight-Ridder News Service

PHILADELPHIA — Who shall live, and who shall die? That is God's will, and how do we know?

Those issues are in the spotlight among experts on medical-religious ethics after a board of organ-donor experts earlier this month changed their rules on liver transplants. The board assigned top priority to dying patients with the best chance for survival.

The old policy put the sickest patients first in line, regardless of long-term prospects.

The United Network for Organ Sharing said the national policy change had been made on medical, not on lifestyle or moral, criteria. But it means a lower priority for most candidates who have alcoholic cirrhosis or hepatitis and whose overall recovery prospects are poor.

"Any time you make a decision on criteria about who will have access to treatment and who will not, there is a moral dimension to that," said Adele Stiles Resmer, a medical ethics expert at Lutheran Theological Seminary in Mount Airy, Pa. "To say it is strictly a medical decision is mistaken."

Rabbi Gerald Wolpe of Har Zion synagogue in Lower Merion, Pa., serves on ethics boards at several hospitals and medical schools. He said the recent policy change was part of a wider national debate on rationing. He said "downsizing" throughout the health-care industry means we will be hearing much more of this issue.

But those who stress the moral and religious side of medical decisions do not necessarily quarrel with the new rules if criteria are fairly and evenly applied.

"What you're looking at is the allocation of a rare resource," said the Rev. Kevin McMahon, profesor of moral theology and academic dean at St. Charles Borromeo Seminary for Catholic priests in Wynnewood, Pa. "The question becomes one of justice. As long as it is not based on unjust discrimination, it is legitimate."

McMahon likened the rationing of scarce resources or supplies to the medical triage standard of assessing who is in most urgent need and would most benefit. Such medical criteria, he said, meet the test of Catholic teaching.

Dr. Arthur Caplan, director of the University of Pennsylvania Center for Bioethics, said, "It is wrong to take sin to the bedside. On the other hand, these policies don't do that. The way bad habits come into play is, it's because people who do those things won't do as well in recovering."

The issue goes far beyond liver transplants to all organ transplants and rationed care, he said. The wishes of the donors — "and remember it is a gift, you do so in order to save lives" — should work in favor of those with the best recovery prospects.

But rationed care will not extend to bypassing surgery to those who eat meat or undergo treatment to those who smoke, he said.

"When you put sin into the equation, the next person caught in the net is you," he said, citing smoking, owning a swimming pool, eating dessert or not buckling your seatbelt as health sins. "If you want to save money in health care, just throw the sinners out of the hospitals. They'll be empty. All of us are sinners when it comes to our health, except maybe two nuns and a Mormon deacon somewhere."

Religious leaders surveyed about the new rules note that Catholic, Jewish and mainstream Protestant denominations permit, and encourage, organ donation.

A rosary by any other name...

Ogden man uses bowling balls instead of beads

The Associated Press

OGDEN, Utah — George Garcia says he felt the spirit of the Blessed Virgin Mary weighing heavily on him. He responded by piecing together a giant rosary made from half a ton of bowling balls.

"I feel the Blessed Mother planted that idea in my mind," said Garcia, 60, a retired water company employee. His homemade rosary makes it easy to count the prayer beads. 59 bowling balls attached to a crucifix made of four-by-fours. It weighs 948 pounds and measures 32 feet long, possibly making it the mother of all rosaries.

"She probably said, 'George, build a rosary and people will come and pray at your house,'" he said. "I don't care if you are (Mormon), Catholic or whatever, the message is to pray."

The press office at Guinness Book of World Records doesn't have a current record for a rosary, and is interested in Garcia's intent to submit his. But Garcia, a member of the Holy Family Catholic Parish in South Ogden, says he didn't construct the giant rosary solely to set a record.

Garcia isn't a bowler, but about a year ago, as he was praying, he noted his beads looked a little like tiny bowling balls.

With religious fervor, Garcia started collecting used bowling balls from garage sales and second-hand stores. He paid from 50 cents to $5 for each. He drilled holes in the balls and hooked them together with gold metal links.

As the chain of balls grew, he was forced to move the furniture from his basement, which is now filled with the rosary surrounded by roses bushes.

"Roses were the Blessed Mother's favorite," he said. Garcia will call his garden "Maria's Garden of the Most George Garcia of Ogden, Utah, a parishioner of Holy Name Catholic Church of Ogden, sits in the basement of his home Nov. 20 with his 948-pound rosary he created out of bowling balls. Garcia, a devout Catholic, also created a shrine to the Blessed Virgin Mary where he and his friends come to pray.

cial roses.

Eventually, Garcia wants to move his creation to an outdoor garden — one ball at a time, mind you — where he plans a statue of Mary surrounded by rose bushes.

"Roses were the Blessed Mother's favorite," he said. Garcia will call his garden "Maria's Garden of the Most Holy Rosary." Garcia would love to have his rosary blessed by the pope, but he concedes that probably won't happen.

Faith-based counseling becoming popular

The Baltimore Sun

BALTIMORE — In a suburban office with honey pillows and a poster about the importance of being a father, social worker Ken Zeigler helps those who have lost their jobs, their marriages and sometimes even their belief that God loves them.

He uses his clinical skills to guide clients through their painful confessions and angry tales of betrayal. But he also keeps a Bible near his chair should they want to discuss passages of Scriptures. And he will pray with them should the occasion merit it.

Zeigler is a Christian psychotherapist, one of a growing number of clinically trained mental-health professionals who believe that allowing clients to explore and express their spirituality during treatment will help them get better.

Although he and other counselors at Wellspring Counseling Services in Greenspring Station treat clients who do not want to discuss religion, they also find that many clients insist upon therapists who share their religious values. They want to ensure that any solution to a problem is constructed upon the foundation of their beliefs.

"My job is not to proselytize," says Zeigler, who holds a master's degree in social work from the University of Maryland and is a member of Central Presbyterian Church in Towson. "I don't want to say that Jesus is your answer and will get you through your problems. We approach therapy by saying that Christ is your answer, that as a solution framework that helps us through anything we will go through."

Over the past 20 years, psychotherapists have begun to drop their long-standing indifference — or in some cases antipathy — to religion. Many now use their clients' faith in Christianity, Judaism or some other set of religious beliefs to help them improve their lives.

People who seek faith-based therapy struggle to honor God while they confront difficult and uncertain situations, says Russell Lingle, a psychotherapist who counsels couples at Liberty Christian Counseling Services in Sykesville. The treatment must incorporate a pre-existing set of ethical standards. The "right" course of action for a client does not merely depend upon what best fulfills his or her personal needs.

However, some remain uncomfortable with blending worlds they believe are better separated. Some religious leaders worry that psychotherapy may lead Christians toward a godless self-centeredness. Some psychotherapists fear that faith-based treatment may undermine or mask the need for work based on clinical principles.

But even the most secular psychotherapists have had to acknowledge the success of 12-step programs such as Alcoholics Anonymous, which require participants to seek help from a higher power to transform their lives.

"Back in the 1950s and 1960s, the head of almost every psychiatric department in the country was a Freudian analyst," says psychiatrist Paul Meier, a co-founder of Minirth Meier New Life Clinics. "Psychiatrists thought religion was crazy, and Christians thought psychiatrists wanted to take away their faith."

Many Christians resisted any form of counseling, Meier says, because they believed if only they were "good" Christians, they would be happy and fulfilled. Their pastors persuaded them that they could find any answer they needed in the Scriptures.

Now many pastors are referring congregants to counseling programs. Minirth Meier New Life Clinics, which offers a Christian approach to mental-health care, has opened 100 clinics throughout the United States during the past 10 years.

Dozens of seminaries have introduced graduate programs in psychology and counseling.

Horses think camels stink

Q. In the jargon of alcoholism, what's a "dry drunk"?

A. A temporary spate of nervous tension, disordered emotion, and sometimes unreasonable thought in a former drinker.

Can you refute the claim that horses so dislike the smell of camels they won't stay with them in the same stable, corral, even pasture?

'This is sociopathic': Christmas-shopping rush kicks off

The Associated Press

After a dismal Christmas a year ago, shoppers packed the nation's stores and malls Friday, driven by a healthier economy, a shorter shopping season, early openings and deep discounts.

For the uninitiated to this post-Thanksgiving rite, the official kickoff of the Christmas shopping season wasn't necessarily fun.

"This is sociopathic," said Loraine Hoffmann, who headed to Wal-Mart in West Windsor, N.J., with a friend. "This is our first time doing this, and we're scared."

At Grandy's discount store in St. Louis, more than 100 people stood in line before the store opened at 5 a.m. Some shoppers already were loading their cars with their buys by 9:30 a.m. at the Kirkwood Mall in Bismarck, N.D.

"This is our big day. It's all or nothing," said Iralene Crisden of Pierce, Neb., who spent her day shopping in Omaha.

Last year, a shaky economy and low consumer confidence left merchants with depressed sales for the holidays, which historically accounts for about half of retailers' annual sales and profits.

Retailers this year are more upbeat about consumer spending, thanks to a rebounding economy and high levels of

'Tis the season for frenzied Christmas shopping, as this early-morning crowd discovered at Filene's Basement in downtown Boston Friday. The store opened its doors at 7 a.m. on the day after Thanksgiving, one of the busiest shopping days of the year, to give shoppers a head start.

consumer confidence. According to an Associated Press poll, most Americans say they will spend as much or more on gifts this Christmas season than in recent years. Fifty-five percent of those polled said spending will stay about the same and 14 percent say they will spend more.

Shoppers converged on the Value City department store in Lansing, Mich., eager to be one of first 200 to enter and receive a gift certificate or 20 percent off coupon from the discount retailer. Others, too, used gimmicks to attract shoppers, like complimentary gift bags and food giveaways.

"I'll tell you when they opened the doors they were just running," said Helen Bailey, who was astonished by the 7 a.m. rush to enter the Frandor Mall in nearby East Lansing.

Toys topped many gift lists, with some hot new products on the market.

Shoppers fought off one another in the Target discount store in Columbia, S.C., for the prized "Tickle Me Elmo" doll, made by Tyco Toys. The store sold out of 150 dolls within 15 minutes of opening.

The same was true at Software Etc. in New Jersey's Menlo Park Mall where manager Vaughn Sandor spent much of the day telling shoppers he was out of the Nintendo 64 video game console.

Also selling well were clothes, a big boon to apparel retailers who have struggled in recent years, and jewelry and sporting goods.

In another post-Thanksgiving tradition, anti-fur protesters converged on upscale stores to discourage customers. In New York, police used generator-powered vans to restrain protesters who chained themselves together on Fifth Avenue.

"You don't look glamorous! You look like an animal!" a woman, one of about 60 protesters in front of Revillon Inc. furriers, yelled at a passerby in a fur coat.

Police did not immediately know how many demonstrators were arrested.

While stores and malls were crowded, the amount of merchandise sold wasn't easily determined. In addition, the first weekend of the holiday season isn't necessarily a gauge of how the remaining weeks till Christmas will go.

The day after Thanksgiving, considered the biggest shopping day of the year, didn't even rank in the top five busiest days in 1995. Shoppers last year made most of their purchases in the weeks before Christmas.

And anecdotal evidence from shoppers Friday indicated that buying was up this year, especially with five fewer shopping days between Thanksgiving and Christmas.

"There is a real sense of urgency to shopping this year, so the shopping will be more concentrated," said Jennifer Welsh, marketing director of Cleveland's Galleria shopping center. "I think people are waking up the day after Thanksgiving and realizing they have less than a month."

Rebound in consumer spending raises hopes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer spending rebounded by a bigger-than-expected 0.5 percent in October, a hopeful sign that Americans are ready to spend during the Christmas season after a summer lull.

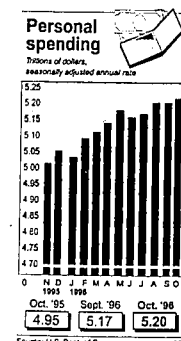

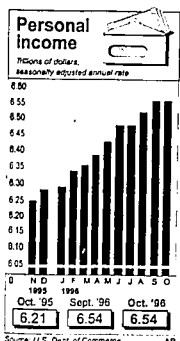

The Commerce Department said Friday that the rise in personal consumption spending — which accounts for two-thirds of total economic activity — was led by a big jump in demand for personal services such as transportation, housing and recreation.

The big rise in spending was not accompanied by a similar increase in incomes, which were unchanged during the month. Still, analysts said this was not unexpected given that wages and other forms of incomes had posted strong gains of 0.6 percent in both August and September.

But analysts said the October rise in spending provided evidence that the consumer was simply taking a breather and was preparing to resume purchasing.

Many economists had anticipated an October increase in consumer spending of about 0.3 percent. Consumer spending had eked out a 0.1 percent in September.

The rise in consumer spending totaled $27.5 billion, at an annual year, hope that forecast proves accurate, given that they ring up half their sales during this time of year.

Overall economic growth, as measured by the gross domestic product, was cut by more than half during the summer to a moderate 2 percent pace because of a sharp slowdown in consumer spending, which turned in its poorest performance in five years.

But analysts said the October rise in spending provided evidence that the consumer was simply taking a breather and was preparing to resume purchasing.

Many economists had anticipated an October increase in consumer spending of about 0.3 percent. Consumer spending had eked out a 0.1 percent in September.

The rise in consumer spending totaled $27.5 billion, at an annual rate, in October with three-fourths of that strength coming in purchases of services, which rose by 0.7 percent.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 22.36 Friday to close at 6,521.70. For all of November, the Dow gained 492.32, or nearly 8.2 percent, as investors became satisfied that the economy was slowing enough to convince the Federal Reserve that higher interest rates were not needed to fight inflation.

The unchanged performance for personal incomes in October was the weakest showing since it also showed no gain in July.

Private wages and salaries actually decreased at an annual rate of 5.8 percent in October, following a gain of 5.28 percent in September. The October drop led to a deficit in average weekly hours, which more than offset an increase of employment during the month.

Disposable incomes, the money left after taxes, was also unchanged in October after a 0.6 percent September increase. Real disposable incomes, which adjusted for inflation, fell by 0.3 percent in October, the first drop since a 0.2 percent drop in July.

Hecla sees brighter days ahead

COEUR d'ALENE (AP) — After a $35.7 million loss this month on two failed mining projects, Hecla Mining Co. executives figure they can only look up.

"With the write-downs on Grouse Creek and American Girl behind us, our remaining operations should be profitable even at today's low metal prices," said Vicki Veltkamp, Hecla's corporate communications chief.

"That's the silver lining." The company posted a $38.8 million third-quarter loss this month, and 1996 will no doubt produce a sixth straight year of deficits.

During the last five years, Hecla's losses have totaled about $235 million.

The Grouse Creek gold mine north of Stanley contributed a lot to that loss. Combined with a $97 million write-down in the third quarter of 1995, it has cost Hecla $124.8 million. Gold reserves fell far short of expectations.

However, this month's $27.8 million write-down includes all costs associated with Grouse Creek and should be the last financial upset there, Veltkamp said.

Veltkamp declined to say what price gold must reach to reopen the mine, but that it would be a significant upward swing.

"We don't want people to be too optimistic that we will reopen the mine, but there might be a slight possibility that it will reopen," she said.

Hecla will continue to mine its Sunbeam pit there until the second quarter of 1997, but the effort will merely break even, she said.

While the company may have its mining disappointments behind it for the year, the conclusion of a $20 million judgment pending against Hecla is expected before year's end.

It awaits an Idaho Court of Appeals decision on the Star-Phoenix case. Two years ago, a 1st District Court jury ruled against Hecla in a suit over its termination of a lease on the Star Mine near Wallace.

If the judgment is upheld, Hecla will have to come up with $10 million, plus interest, to add to the $10 million in U.S. Treasury securities it posted on bond against the ruling. That money would come from bank financing or selling assets, company reports say.

Hecla is still optimistic about its future, Veltkamp said. Over the next three years, it plans to quadruple its annual silver production to about 8 million ounces, through the Greens Creek mine in Alaska and the Gold Butte project near its Lucky Friday Mine in Idaho.

It also intends to start production at its joint-venture Rosebud gold mine in Nevada in 1997.

Computer-savvy criminals often leave bytes of evidence

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — That crucial piece of evidence in a criminal case isn't always hidden behind a computer screen, tucked under a drawer or buried in the back yard.

More and more evidence can be stuffed into a misidentified computer file, protected by an unknown password or buried in an obscure file directory. Police have found transactions detailing drug deals, child pornography and even confessions on computers.

So too do Colorado Springs Police Department employees now work to dig evidence out of computer hard drives.

Robert Elsner, a former police lieutenant, and Robert Macez, a longtime system specialist, go along with police officers executing search warrants in homes. While the rest of the team typically searches for drugs or weapons, the computer specialists secure any computer equipment they suspect has been used in a crime.

The more sophisticated the criminal element becomes, the more sophisticated we need to become," Macez said as he worked to pull files off a confiscated computer.

Local police learned that about five years ago.

Narcotics officers raided a home in Black Forest and found computer components strung together haphazardly. They had no idea if the mess of disk drives and wires had evidence on it.

They called the department's computer services unit, which maintains department computers but had little to do with investigating at the time. They got stumped. "They said, 'What's on it?'"

Elsner said. "At that point, no one ever had to handle electronic evidence.

They fumbled around with the computer a bit but had no idea what would be evidence and didn't find anything.

Macez and Elsner since have attended several courses put on by federal law enforcement computer experts and trained themselves on how to gather evidence from computers.

They have worked less than a dozen cases in the past five years, but half of those have come in the last six months. "They expect the pace to increase as more criminals become computer-savvy."

One of the first things they do to secure a computer is unplug phone lines. In training with the FBI and other federal agencies, they've heard of cases where a suspect was dialing into the computer and deleting crucial information as officers helplessly watched.

Then there are the sophisticated criminals who install magnetic grids around the doorway of a computer room. When a computer is carried out of the room, the magnetic field wipes the hard drive clean.

"So you carry a compass in with you," Elsner said. If the compass needs pegs east and west, you've got a problem.

Macez and Macez never actually search the hard drive or floppy disks they seize. Instead, they use software written by the Department of the Treasury to copy the contents of those disks.

They can then search for information without the risk of altering the original evidence.

Despite the high-tech procedures and gadgets they use, law-tech pitfalls are everywhere. A floppy next to a phone or speaker, for example, and the magnets in them could alter the disk's contents.

Computers themselves hold vast amounts of information. Macez, who fits searching the machines in with his other duties, has spent months going through computer files looking for evidence.

A boy, for instance, might tell police he was shown a pornographic photo in which a couch in the background had purple flowers. Macez must search through hundreds of image files looking for a couch with purple flowers to tie it to the case.

"It's almost embarrassing to go through some of these files," he said.

But the methodical approach is important if police officers ever hope to get evidence they find admitted in court.

By their nature, computers are easy to tamper with. A few keystrokes will save or delete files. A defense attorney could ask,

"Could you have changed the date on that file?" Elsner said. "The answer is yes. Did I do it? No. But he's not going to ask that."

It's straightforward for an officer to test that the furniture gun under a table in the living room at the house at such and such address. Juries can understand that.

It's not so straightforward for drugs to test if they are the same as a gun is easy to make," said John Maska, a local defense attorney. "They're solid, tangible objects. Data is less tangible."

So it could be tough for Elsner to testify he found a file containing an image of child pornography on such and such a computer. If Elsner can't explain the painstaking processes he used in his other duties, he's confused the jury and, maybe, lost the case.

"Confusion is to the defense's benefit," Elsner said.

None of the cases Elsner and Macez have worked on has come to trial, although subpoenas are pending in one.

Most of the cases Colorado Springs has seen deal with pornography. That's the national trend, too. Adults use pornography pulled from the Internet to entice teens into their homes.

The latest is the case of Randall Kizza, a 43-year-old man who was arrested last month on suspicion of posting pornographic images taken from his computer in a field frequently used as a shortcut by children. Kizza had a sophisticated computer system that he used to post the images.

"There's been no court challenges (here) yet," Elsner said. "We don't know if the process we've embarked upon is correct."

"The more sophisticated the criminal element becomes, the more sophisticated we need to become."

Safety board recalls dangerous bunk beds

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 100,000 wooden bunk beds are being recalled because a child's head could get caught in the frame, the government said Wednesday.

The recall was announced Wednesday by five bunk bed makers and the U.S. Consumer Safety Commission.

The bunk beds have openings in the top bunk that are large enough for a child's body to pass through but small enough to entrap the child's head.

Since November 1994, the safety board has worked with 26 bed makers to recall more than 411,000 wooden bunk beds with similar hazards.

At least 32 children, all but one under age 3, have died since 1990 after becoming caught in bunk beds with similar spaces in the top bunk, the safety board said.

The bed makers participating in this recall are Bedder Bunk Co. of Winlock, Wash.; Oakland Wood Shop Manufacturing of Oakland, Calif.; P.J. Sleep Shop of Portland, Ore.; Stoney Creek of Redmond, Wash.; and Wholesale Importers and Exporters of Los Angeles.

American adding defibrillators

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — American Airlines will become the first U.S. carrier to equip its planes with shock paddles to revive heart attack victims.

American announced its plans earlier this week with the American Heart Association, which is pushing to have defibrillators on all passenger planes, in government buildings and sports arenas.

The airline plans to put the defibrillators first on international flights once crew members are trained.

Australian carrier Qantas, London-based Virgin Atlantic and Air Zimbabwe already carry defibrillators, while several U.S. airlines are reviewing whether to add them. The Federal Aviation Administration said this month it was considering if they should be added to airline medical kits.

Defibrillators can restart a heart that has stopped or correct abnormal heart rhythms that prevent proper blood flow to the rest of the body.

The Food and Drug Administration this month approved a portable defibrillator for use on U.S. airlines by Heartstream Inc., of Seattle. The 4-pound device, the size of a hardcover book, can be used by anyone with proper training. It costs about $3,600 to $4,000.

Under federal rules, airline medical kits now contain devices to measure blood pressure, a stethoscope and several medications for chest pain, circulatory collapse, allergic reactions and diabetes.
