White House orders halt to controversial salvage logging

WASHINGTON — Bowing to conserva-tionists, the Clinton administration Friday ordered an early halt to salvage logging that was to continue on national forests through Dec. 31 under a courte-versal waiter of laws proteining fish and wildlife. Agriculture Undersecretary James Lyons signed a directive probabing any additional timber sales the rest of the year under the "salvage timber nider," according to a copy of the document obtained by The Associated Press.

Environmentalists claim abuses abound

"Effective at the close of business Friday, December 13, 1996, the Forest Service should not advertise any further imber sales under the salvage provision, Lyons wrote in the directive to Acting Forest Service Chief Dave Unger.

Lyons said in the memo that salvage sales already being advertised for bid could continue and that he would consider any additional "extraordinary circumstances" that would warrant allowing additional logging.

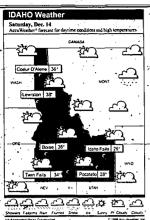

Lyons said in a telephone interview late Friday that any unadvertised sales would be postponed until the first of the year "inther than have to deal with the perception that there is some kind of Christmas rush."

He said the agency already had made good on its promise to come within 25 percent of the 4.5 billion board feet of salvage citypher sales ordered by Congress, hitting the 4.1 billion mark on Nov. 30.

As Richardson was speaking, there was a crash and those in the first row of the auditorium looked up to see Daley falling toward them.

He landed between two seated reporters his head hitting one; people leaned forward and a Secret Service agent asked, "Are you all right?"
Daley grimaced and rubbed his hands on his head, appearing dazed. He got to his feet and the president walked over, put his hand on Daley's shoulder and helped guide him to a side door. "I think he fainted; I think he's fine; we'll give you a report in a minute." Clinton said.

About 10 minutes later Daley structed, apparently unaffected by his fall.

"Welcome back," Clinton said. FAA asked to protect plane's fuel tanks down TWA Flight 800.

Investigators have been unable to figure out what sparked the catastrophic explosion in the center fuel tank, but leading theories include static electricity, faulty wiring or a spark from the tank's fuel pump.

Logging

"Apparently the administration feels it necessary to appease the environmental extremists, said Doug Grandall, timber supply manager for the American Forest & Paper Association.

Several conservation groups had organized a mass telephone campaign for Monday to try to persuade President Clinton to cancel all remaining salvage sales.

"Our national forests have been spared from this end of year assault by the timber industry;" Bill Meadows, president of The Wilderness Society, said in prais-ing I yous action.

Bill Meadows, president of The Wilderness Society, shid in praising Lyons' action.

"By stopping this Christmas rush, the administration has put to an end one of the worst environmental policies ever passed by Congress. It means that once again, the timber industry, like every other American, will have to obey the laws that protect our forests," he said.

Effective Jan. 1, citizen appeals of timber saies will be allowed to resume and the usual environmental impact statements and other reviews will be required as they were before the rider was implemented.

Until then, the Forest Service had intended to continue offering salvage sales through an expedited bidding process free from the usual citizen appeals.

As recently as Wednesay, Forest Service officials had said hundreds of millions of board feet of timber across thousands of acres might still be sold before the end of the year under the waiver, mostly in the Pacific Northwest and Northern Rocky Mountains.

Mountains.

The biggest complaint from The biggest complaint from environmentalists was that the rider temporarily ended the right of citizens to challenge the logging through administrative appeals and limited their ability to block the harvests in court.

Lyons also pointed to a recur federal interagency report that found some live green trees were being out upder the salvage recorner.

intragency expat the found same his green trees were being at under the salvage program.

Under pressure from environmentalists, Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman in July ordered new restrictions on the salvage operations that resulted in about 150 proposed sales — in roadless areas exceeding 5,000 acres and in areas with but-of live trees being at least temporarily withdrawn.

Environmental critics argued arrively are unforter 150 sales should have been pulled.

mother 150 sales should have been pulled. Industry, leaders say Glickman's directive slowed the process and was partly to blame for the glbt of sales that were scheduled to proceed in the final days of December. "They already have spent thousands and thousands of manhours and appropriated monoy for the sales that, because of political pressure, Glickman put the brakes to," said Chris West, vice president of the Northwest Forestry Association in Portland, Ore.

Crandall said the sales that were being suspended "already passed through Secretary Glickman's rigorous environmental requirements that he established a few months ago."

"They have survived more intense scrutiny than any other sales that have passed through the Forest Service and yet that is not enough," he said. Son. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., and Rep. Elizabeth Furs, D-Ore, were among members of Congress who had been pressing Clinton to cancel remaining salvage sales.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Almost 30 million acre feet of water once flowed into the Colorado River delta, supporting native fish, fowl and Indian tribes, as well as the fisheries beyond in the Gulf California.

of California.

But now, not a single drop of fresh water reaches the delta most years — and the situation will only get worse as seven states and Mexico use up their legal allocations, says a study released Friday.

"More water has been promised in the future than the river can deliver," said Sandra Postel of the Global Water Policy Project, one of the authors. "We haven't hit the real crunch yet, but it's coming very soon."

hit the real crunch yet, but it's coming very soon."
California has used more than its legal allocation of Colorado River water in three of the last eight years. Nevada estimates it will reach its limit in a decade. Arizona once projected it wouldn't need its full allocation until 2025 or 2030. But problems with the state's central water project could force growers to use up the river allocation much sooner, says Jason Morrison of the Pacific Institute, the study's principal author. Seventy-five years ago, the lower Colorado was or ich in wildlife naturalist Aldo Leopold called it "a milk and honey wilderness."

During a 1922 canoe trip down the river he described deer, qualt, racons, bobcats and flocks of water fowl wading in erren lacoons.

"But now it's salt flats and desiccated landscapes," said Postel. The lack of fresh water entering the lower river has allowed salt water from the Gulf of California to flow up into the river bed. Some species of fish that once thrived in the river, including the big 6-foot steel-blue tototabe, are close to extinction. Catches in the Gulf of California are also dropping.

"Now their numbers have dwindled down to 40 or 50 families," said Postel. "Their basic way of life — fishing and farming — is no longer viable. There's basically no clean water running past. It has to be rucked in."

Scientists aren't certain how much water would be needed to restore a natural coopystem to the delta region. But achieving a token 500,000 acre feet annually through the delta — only 1 or 2 percent of the original flow — "is doable," Postel said.

Officials announce plans to expand LAX

Officials announce plans to expand LAX

LOS ANGELES — The city has decided it must expand Los Angeles International Airport, at a cost that could reach $12 billion, so it can accommodate up to 60 percent more travelers by the year 2015.

Four proposals being formally announced today for consideration by the Airport Commission and City Council call for new passenger terminals and runways, and expanded cargo facilities. One option would annex a nearby general aviation airport and turn it into a commuter airline base.

The airport, popularly known as LAX, is the world's second-busiest air cargo airport and the third-busiest passenger airport. It is supposed to handle 40 million travelers annually but will be used by about 58 million this year.

Communities around LAX — already annoyed by jet noise the smell of fuel and traffic — are expected to put up fierce resistance to the expansion.

Media objects to sealed documents in case

DENVER.— The public's right to attend a criminal trial doesn't mean much if other portions of the case are kept secret, say media attorneys seeking to have documents unscaled in the Oklahoma City bombing case.

The appeals brief filed Thursday by The Associated Press and 32 other news organizations said the sealed documents are a violation of the First Amendment.

The brief was filed with the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Clinton's economic team: Steady as she goes; Rubin at helm

WASHINGTON — Bill Clinton, reelected on a strong economy, isn't about to make any radical moves.

His second-term policy team will be dominated by Robert Rabin, leading a camious, centrist approach designed to play well on Wall Street.

President Clinton made the formal amountement of Rubin's return as treasury secretary Friday along with his choices for commerce secretary, trade negotiator and head of his National Economic Comercil.

Citing Rubin's performance, Clinton called him "the captain of our economic tram for four years."

While some other members of that team are departing, Rubin, who gave up a hig Wall Street salary to join the administration, is staying and by all accounts is more firmly in control than ever.

"The wesident's economic team in a the president and Bob Rubin," said David Jones, chief economist at Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. in New York, echoing the view of many on Wall Street.

Widely viewed as a political babe in the wilderness when he came to Washington, the 58+year-old Rubin's political sar at the moment could not be higher, reflecting the fact that Clinton sailed to re-election on the momentum provided by a strong economy.
Rubin is seen as the chief architect of the policies that belped to provide that economic performance — namely an insistence that Clinton switch course in 1993 and emphasize deficit reduction rather than the investment spending and ijneked to humor bond traders.

Rubin and fellow deficit hawks carried the day in internal debates against administration liberals who grumbled that Clinton's presidency was being hijacked to humor bond traders.

The carping quieted, however, as falling interest rates beloed sput higher economic growth and the creation of 11 million jobs in Cliaton's first term. Rubin also was influential in the types of campaign promises Clinton made this year, defeating arguments by political consultant Dick Morris that Clinton should offer voters hefty tax cuts to counter Bob Dole's 15 percent across-the-board promise.

Commise.

Instead, Clinton campaigned on a hodgepodge of education and child care credits that were much less costly than Dole's proposals.

Those tax cut proposals and other small-hore campaign promises in such areas as tax incentives to inner city neighborhoods will be part of the budget Clinton sends Congress in February. While Clinton has pledged to make a balanced budget the top priority of his second term, he is giving few hints on how he will accomplish that balance. Administration officials are hinting that an advisory commission proposal last week to trim the consumer price index could be part of a final agreement with the Republican-controlled Congress, but so far an internal administration debate over whether Clinton should take the lead on this issue is unresolved.

should take the lead on this issue controlled.

Negotiating a budget deal with Congress, most certainly will be the major economic test faced by Rubin and the other members of Clinton's team in a second term.

Concerns have already begun to surface. Some of the recent stock market runnoil has been attributed to investor a quick budget compromise was unwar-ranted.

And Clinton's second term team will have a noticeable lack of congressional negotiating experience. New White House budger director Frankim Raine-insists that the fact that he was not-involved in last year's bitter budget ba-ttle will prove to be a plus not a negative, but others are skeptical.

"Clinton's new team shows continuity in terms of policy but it is limited in terms of having important ties with peo-ple in Congress. That will be a big ques-tion mark," said Lawrence Chimerine, chief economist at the Economic Strategy Institute in Washington. Given the reconst market volatility, it may be a question the administration will want to clear up quickly.

All laughs when stars joke of double wedding

CHICAGO (AP) — A double wedding for Madonna and Carlos, and Oprah and Stedman? Sensing the conversation was turning to her baby's father, Carlos Leon, Madonna turned the tables on talk show host Oprah Winfrey by bringing up her longtime beau, Stedman Graham.

"I was just wondering, When are you and Stedman going to get married?" Madonna asked.

"About the same time you and Carlos do, "Winfrey replied.

JERUSALEM (AP) — A day after Bethlehem officials said they lacked the money to celebrate Christmas properly this year, Finland announced Wednesday that it was sending a 40-foot Christmas tree and Santa Claus to the West Bank town.

Wyoming officials refine comeback plan to allow for 45 roaming wolves

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — In an effort to restore wolf populations, state officials are refining a management proposal that would allow approximately 45 wolves to range freely within zones established outside Wyoming's national parks, officials said.

Game and Fish Deputy Director Bill Wichers said the draft plan is designed to guide state management of wolves until the animals are removed-from the Endangered Species list, the Casper Star Tribune reports in a copyright story.

Casper Star Tribune reports in a copyright story.
The proposal would establish wolves in three recovery zones in Northwest Wyoming.
Officials started developing the plan in fall of 1994. It's main components were outlined for the Legislature's Agriculture Committee last August. Since then, the department has revised the number of wolves the state wants to see in the management zones from 60 to 45.

The plan is currently being reviewed by the governor's office. To take effect, it must win approval from the state Legislature and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Once the northern Rockies wolf population is removed from the Endangered Species list, the state will issue hunding permits to regulate wolf numbers, the plan states.

Until that time, state and federal, wildlife managers would be given the authority to trap and relocate wolves that leave the management areas for more than 29 consecutive days. Scientific estimates suggest that six packs — totalling 45 wolves — likely would kill about 450 elk, 108 deer, nine bison and three bighom sheep each year. Since state law currently allows killing of wolves without restriction, the plan also urges the Wyoming Legislature to reclassify wolves from predators to trophy game animals, enabling ranchers who lose livestock to wolves to collect damages from the Game and Fish Department.

Government might pay Indian claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department has several options under consideration for settling Indian claims that they were shorted royalty payments, believing that is the best way to resolve the dispute.

In a report, the department cited the possibility of setting up an economic development fund to underwrite new tribal businesses or just giving $300 million directly to tribes and putting another $300 million in a federal development bank for Indians.

The government could be liable for up to $575 million of $2.4 billion in transactions over the past 20 years involving money from mineral royalties and other Indian-land income. The money isn't necessarily missing, but documents cannot be found to show where it came from or where it was paid, auditors say. The $575 million is the amount of undocumented disbursements in which tribes could have been shorted.

In a letter that accompanied the report to Congress, Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt said a "settlement is the most effective, expeditious, economical and couitable way to go."

Babbitt said he would make final recommendations in April. Congress would have to approve any settlement.

Senare Indian Affairs Chairman Jolin McCain said Thursday he expects specific recommendations from Babbitt.

"I remain upset about the soaring cost burdens on the American taxpayers who will be called on once again to bail out federal officials for how badly they have bungled their jobs," the Arizona Republican said.

Meth labs pose environmental threat

BOISE – The growing number of methamphetamine labs in Idaho has the state Department of Law Enforcement looking for help cleaning up hazardous chemicals used in making the drug. Talks have started with the state Division of Environmental Quality about possibly assuming authority to dispose of the toxic and cancer-causing witch's brew conocoted by drug traffickers looking for a quick buck.

"The bottom line is we're police officers. We're not experts in these environmental hazards, and we need help in determining if there's a problem out there that we're leaving behind, "said Ed Rankin, special agent in charge of Law Enforcement's Criminal Investigation Bureau.

"Box labs," or equipment and chemicals stored in moving boxes, is the term law officers use when methamphetamine cooks, in their attempts to dodge law enforcement, pack up their gear and move to another location.

Three of the five Magic Valley labs discovered this year were box labs. The rest were working labs, which required law officers to don protective suits and respirators before entering the homes. Working labs were found in Hailey and Twin Falls, Rollins said.

A cheap powdered substance that gives a long-lasting high - and causes paranoid, often violent behavior - methamphetamine is the most serious drug problem facing Idaho.

Batt supports concept of CSI property tax relief

TWIN FALLS - Gov. Phil Batt supports property tax relief for Twin Falls and Jerome counties, in concept.

"I think it's likely something will go forward next year," said spokesman Frank Lockwood, "The governor isn't announcing any numbers yet."
Legislators from the Magic Valley plan to ask for 51 million a year for two years for the College of Southern Idaho. In exchánge, the college would pass on 51 million a year in property tax cuts for Twin Falls and Jerome county residents. The counties are the only two in the state to support CSI through property texes.

Their proposal also includes $1 mil-lion for North Idaho College, supported by Kootenai County property taxes. —Local lawmakers are waiting to see whether Batt is on board. They believed the was last year, when they presented the Legislature with a different property tax relief proposal, but at the last mittee killed it.

If Batt doesn't endorse the idea of using money from the state's general fund, then Sen. Clint Stennett of Ketchum said he'll make another proposal.

Twin Falls could impose a city sales tax, he said, and send the proceeds to the college.

Residents of the eight-county area numbers of students they send to the numbers of students they coulege.

Such an idea could run into problems in Kootenai County, which already has its own sales tax. It would also anger merchants, whose goods are already taxed at 5 percent.

But attempts last year to tax soda pop, to tap into the general fund and to increase the liquor surcharge failed.

"Politically, they'll never got a statewide sin tax on anything," Stennett said.

Auto dealer upset about flag warning

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Sixty business owners have received letters from this northern Utah city warning them they are in violation of the local sign ordinance. But Jeff Parker, a Logan automobile dealer, may be the angiest of them all: He sees the letter as an affront to his patriotism.

There will be hell to pay if I "There will be hell to pay if I have to take down the American flag," said Parker, whose lot is decorated with flags, pennants and a flashing sign. "I'd rather go to jail than take down those flags."

The Logan Department of Community Development letter listed as illegal all unapproved portable signs, banners, streamers, pennants or anything hung in a state or city right of way.—even American Hags.

"The ordinance tends to be black and white," said Eric Toll, director of community development. "The council makes the laws, and we, as employes, do not have the ability to shine it on."

According to Toll, the Logan Municipal Council recently took arip throughout Logan to look at temporary signs and banners. After the trip, the council instructed Toll and his staff to enforce with corously the 43-page, 1969 sign ordinance, which allows each bus research which allows each bus treet will eventually receive Toll's letters.

Toll, however, both defended the city's enforcement of the sign ordinance was simply too complex to enforce properly.

Forest Service rejects request to ease jetboat restrictions

LEWISTON (AP) — Jetboat operators have been notified a proposed ban will remain in effect against their motorized craft in the Hells Canyon National Recreation Area during certain periods of the summer, the Forest Service has announced.

Richard Ferraro, deputy regional forester, ruled against requests that he erase the management guidelines prohibiting jetboats from 21 miles of the Snake River for three days at a time each summer. Ferraro did throw jetboaters a bone. He agreed the no-motors window should not apply to the July 4th holiday. That means the no-motors rule will apply six weeks some summers and seven others.

The ruling addressed 53 appeals filed by private citizens, groups and governments, who sought to overtum the no-motors period.

Safe lifted out of courthouse into museum

BURLEY – Spectators pondered the weight of an antique safe as they warched a crane hoist it through a window Friday in the Cassia County Courthouse.

I The crane heaved the hefty relic out of the recorder's office, through a temporary hole in the side of the courthouse. A window was removed for the project. The safe is being replaced, because it doesn't have much holding capacity and is failing mechanically, Deputy County Recorder Barbara Mai said. Three interior clocks must be wound each time the safe is closed, and the safe unlock once the time expires, she said. If two of the clocks conce the time expires, she said. According to Kent Hale, Oakley's resident historian, the Oakley's treate Bank was built in 1905 and went broke in the mid-1920s.

The safe's age is unknown, but folks watching its removal from the courthouse Friday speculated it's a product of the turn of the century.

It took more than an hour for a four-man crew from Advanced Welding Technology in Burley to secure the safe free window, the top of the creaked gagins the frame, but shown the county is donating the safe to the Cassia County Historical Museum. Pisurski said the possibilities could include federal funding or some type of joint arrangement between his agency and Law Enforcement.
Since 1989 Law Enforcement has had primary responsibility for assessing drug labs and paying to clean them up. The U.S. Drug Enforcement Adminstration provided the initial training, and idaho has 24 people trained to gather evidence at the labs.
"We set up the program knowing that local law enforcement wouldn't have the budgets to do this, and we felt the responsibility may rest better on the Department of Law Enforcement," Rankin said. "Many of these cleanup costs would break the bank of some smaller agencies."

That's especially true as labs become more numerous and investigators get better at find-ing them. In recent years meth cooks who had been operating primarily in California, Oregon and Washington have been serting up shop in more rural states for a few hundred dollars or less. "People who deal in meth, they like to get out of the way of the communities with more sophisticated law enforcement agencies," Ada County Sheriff Vaughn Killeen said. "You can rent a house out anywhere and put a meth lab in it, make a tom of money and then just move."

Cooks also have learned number of shortcust in what has become a relatively simple, inexpensive manufacturing process. They have found substitutes for chemical ingredients that officials have made more difficultinget, so a drug market once convolled largely by outlaw mottorycle gangs reaches into all levels of the society.

Overwhelming results

Overwhelming results

Everyone has heard of the Shriner's Crippled Children's hospitals and burn centers. In November of each year, Shriners from southern Idaho collect donations from residents of Magic Valley and take them to the Intermountain Unit Crippled Children's Hospital in Salt Lake, as we have done for 43 years.

The results were overwhelming and totaled more than $7,000 in cash and food donations.

The since it is often referred to as the triple that Shriners are also Masons. In hos past five years, we have sent 815 crippled children from southern Idaho to the Salt Lake hospital. Nine were admitted this past September, regardless of race, creed or religion. But the success of this fund-raising event could not have happened without your love and support for those little ones who are less fortunate.

A big thanks to Magic Valley from the Shriners. You're great!

Honest people can still be found

Recently, I was shopping at a local grocery store and, because I was in a hurry didn't notice I had left my purse in the grocery cart until I got home. I rushed back to the store, but didn't hold much hope the purse would be there. As I drove by where the cart was, I could see it was gone. I went inside and, to my surprise, someone had turned my purse in to customer service. I did not have a lot of money in my purse, but there was some and credit cards, family pic-some and credit caras, same, rures, etc.

To the person who found it and the tree it in I would like to say a bing thank you. You proved once again that there are many good, honest people in this-world, and you are one of them. Thank you again. Have a wonderful Christmas and a blessed No.

Bruin boys' basketball blasts Borah to improve to 2-0

TWIN FALLS - The Borah Lions built a house of bricks in the first half Friday, and the Bruins brought its roof down in a 60-49 boys basketball victory. From the opening tip-off, Twin Falls looked less like a team of transfers and inexperienced youth and more like a seasoned squa'd of team players, executing the give-and-go to perfection while building a 12-4 lead.

"The kids made the commitment to work as a team, and J think it's showing," said Bruin coach Dan Vogt, "We would not be this successful if they werent." For the second straight game, the visiting team struggled from the field, missing four of its first five shots and eight of its first 10. The Lions never saw the lead throughout the 32 minutes.

Borah opened the second quarter with an 11.4 run to cut the lead to 23-21 as Billy Sandoval scored nine of his feam's 11 second-quarter points, all in the first two minutes.

All of the things that had carried CSI to a 104 record and the No. 7 national ranking came up short Friday — the outside shot, the inside shot, the drive — everything but the defense.

"We didn't make anything happen," CSI head coach Jim Thrash said. "We didn't play with any passion on offense, that's for sure."

Thrash said before the game that a winning score in the 50s would be to CSI's liking, but the home team couldn't generate enough offense against Eastern Utah's matchup zone to get the job done, even with the Eagle D holding the opposition to 45 points below its season average.

Heisman winner honored today

NEW YORK (AP) – Danny Wuerffel has been the postseason awards champion so far. Today, Florida's All-American quarerback and three other finalists find out who wins college football's bigses prize of all—the Heisman Trophy.

Wuerffel is considered the front-more to capture the 62nd Heisman, presented by the Downtown Athletic Club in lower Manhattan. The other finalists are lown State running back-troy Davis, Arizona State quarterback Jake Phanimer and Ohio State left tackle Orlando Pace.

"If it happens, that'll be fine," said Wuerffel, the most accurate passer in NCAA history. "If it doesn't, that'll be fine, too."

GRAMBLING, La. (AP) – Eddie GRAMBLING, La. (AP) – Eddie Robinson will get one more year as football coach at Grambling, a chance to add to his 405 career victories and to erase the sting of consecutive losing seasons.

On Friday, university president Raymond Hicks ended a week of rumors that Robinson, college football's winningest coach, was being forced out. After Louisiana's governor and the state's board of regents came to Robinson's defense, the popular coach was asked for another year. As an alumni of Grambling and the current president, I must honor that request, said Hicks, who had wanted

Jones, NFL dismiss dueling lawsuits
DALLAS (AP) – The NFL finally gave Cowboys owner Jerry Jones the response he wanted for his deal with Nike: Just do it.
The NFL and Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones on Friday settled their dueling lawsuits over licensing and marketing doels.
The league filed a $300 million lawsuit against Jones in September 1995, claiming he had entered into Biomenia and sponsorship arrangements that violated the league's revenue-sharing policies, including deals with Persi, Nike, Dr Perper, American Express and AT&T.

The NFL alleged the deals violated a trust agreement the dols signed in 1982 authorizing the NFL to negotiate commercial uses of the team's name, helmet, uniform and slogues, Jones responded with a 5700 million countersuit in federal court in New York, accusing the league of blocking teams from conducting their own marketing business.

Mag's mascot ideas poke fun at Utah culture

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - So what would you like to see emblazoned across advertisements and displays as the name of the 2002 Winter Games' mascot? Outside magazine has a few suggestions. How about, "Salty," Brigham the Busy Bee," or even with at weak of the abstinence prized in predominantly Mormon Utah "Tommy in Tanumy Teetotal?"
The magazine's January 1997 edition also illustrates the suggestions with drawings of a skating saltshaker, a skiting bee and our-looking pioneer couple waving a pistol and a rolling pin.
A decision on an image is expected from the Salt Lake Organizing Committee early next year. The mascot, which will be selected later, will make its debut at the closing ceremonies of the 1998 Winter Games in Nagano, Japan.

Committee spokesman Mike Korologos took the magazine's ideas in good humor.
"I'm sure some people in the state might get offended, but you just have to take it with a grain of salt. We can't get excited about this kind of stuff. I'm sure there's going to be more." Korologos said. Outside has had fun at Utah's expense before, Just a few monthaback, the magazine took aim at the International Olympic Committee's visits to Salt Lake City.
That story stated the city had "a van full of booze" follow IOC members around whenever they came to Utah, a comment attributed to Korologos – but one that he denied ever making. The latest story proposes "Salt of the Earth" as a theme, complete with a saltshaker mascot, Salty, and "since Salt Lake's friendly folk are truly the salt of the earth, they'll prove it by dressing up like Salty, as saltshakers." Or "Bee-Utah-Ful Utah!" with Brigham the Busy Bee and the release of a million worker bees during opening ceremonies from a bechive-shaped ice arena called the Hive. And, of course, women in bechive hairdos. "Make Mine Mormonism!" is also suggested as a theme by the magazine. "It's a religion, it's a creed, it's a way of life – and it's Utah's very own. So why not wrap the Games in a package that says Mormon?"

The magazine envisions the U.S. Olympic team outfitted in white shirts and blue serge suits, and "ubiquitous loudspeakers blasting the Mormon Tabernacle Choir's stirring rendition of the catchy official song, No? "No smoking, no drinking, no sacrileous thinking, no sacrileous thinking, no sacrileous thinking, No sloth, no lust, no greed; So lay down that demon rum and weed."
In the same edition, the Utah Travel Council has an ad featuring a snowboarder carving a fresh slice of powder in the Greatest Snow On Earth. The ad includes the new slogan, "Just one visit and you'll be converted."

There was no reprimand in her voice, only the tired resignation of one who has spent too many months praying for her father's life to be preserved, even while she fervently wished to see his suffering end.

She was right, of course. And yet, something about it still bothered me. Christmas is a season of miracles, replete with extraordinary gifts of life and love. It isn't a good time to die or to watch a loved one die.

But it is a good time to serve, and that's what I saw happening as I watched the tender ministrations of Mark's family. It was there in the determined way Annette's husband, Lynn, scoured the care center in search of Mark's few precious belongings. I head it in the loving, sensitive way Amette spoke to her father, even though there wasn't much evidence that he was actually hearing anything she said. And I felt in the gentle way Annette's brother, Scott, sat next to his father in the back seat of the car, his arm draped comfortably around Mark's shoulders, as his father's head rested on his own shoulder.

Scott supervised as we transported Mark from Lynn's car to the bed that had been prepared for him at his home. I was touched by the way Scott worried about his father's comfort, draping a robe around his shoulders to protect him from the cool evening breeze and fussing with his slippers. He pushed the wheelchair and almost single-handedly lifted Mark into the bed.

It wasn't until Mark was comfortably.

It wasn't until Mark was comfortably situated, with a warm blanket tucked under his chin, that Lynn noticed that his father-in-law wasn't breathing. And just like that, he was gone. It was as if he had been working so hard to stay alive at the care center so he could be home, surrounded by his family, when he died.

Those weren't idle words, and I knew it. I had just spent an hour watching that love in action, manifest in a dozen or more little moments of benevolence. As I stood there quietly at the foot of Mark's bed, I was awed and inspired by the very real human drama that was being played out before me. And tonight, just hours after Mark's death, those images remain with me.

DALLAS — It's the Christmas story from the Bible, but probably not the way you remember it.

In this version, three girls — daughters of the Wise Men — want to reach the stable where Jesus is born. They want to warn their dads about King Horod's plot to kill the bably Jesus.

Along the way, they bump into other lost of the way, they bump into other lost of the stable when on their quest, including the son of a centurion, a shephera boy, and the children of an innkeeper.

In the end, the girls get word to their fathers and foil Herod's set iplan.

That plot is from "A Way to the Manger," a holiday radio program for kids and the first installment of "Ancient Heroes Christmas Chronicles." "It's like an old-time radio program," said Terry Brown, owner of Youth Life Creations, the company that developed Ancient Heroes — a line of trading cards, coloring books and, now, radio programs featuring Bible heroes and vilains. "At the holiday season families can sit around the radio and listen to the programs together. I think it's a good positive alternative to turning on the television."

The USA Radio Network serves more than 1,300 stations, Sala said.

And, despite the name, the programs won't end when the Christmas season is over. Sala and Brown say there are plans to put together chronicles for Easter and other holidays.

The Ancient Heroes line of products began in 1993 when Brown, a mother of three and retired registered surse from Muncie, Ind., came up with the idea. Her sons asked her to buy them superhero trading cards, but when she saw them, she didn't like them.
"They were violent-looking and I think a little bit demeaning toward women," she said.

The answer was no. After searching, the only thing Brown could find that ame close was a deck of cards featuring Bible characters. They weren't very exciting, in Brown's opinion, so she decided to make her own.

after Mark's death, those images remain with me.

As I recall the events of the day, I'm not overwhelmed by feelings or memories of sadness and grief. Rather, I remember the powerful service that was rendered in quiet, simple ways by loving family members who filled Mark's final bours with sweet devotion and profound respect.

Their example fills me with determination to do likewise and to reach out to those I love in truly meaningful ways.

So often during the holidays, we offort and money on showing our love to family and friends through the things we purchase. With 1,500 members, mostly in their 20s and 30s, the Manhattan-church boasts the nation's largest Unitarian congregation, where such historic figures as writer Herman Melwille, poet William Cullen Bryant and printmaker Nahaniel Currier once worshiped. Church, 48, is the son of the late Sen. Frank Church of Idaho, the liberal Democratic chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and an outspoken opponence of the Vietnam War. He grew up in the nation's capital and in Boise, Idaho.

"I spent half of every year in Idaho and half here because the Senate was not a year-around proposition then," he recalled. "The school here was more advanced, so I was brilliant in Idaho and marginal in suburban Maryland." His turn to public service brought him to a New York institution where half the members participate in at least one of 30 outroop for homeless children, and AIDS ministry, a soup kitchen and tutoring at a Harlem school. He stresses that salvation lies in the "Hielines" that bind us to our neighbor.

His new book, "Life Lines:

appeal for humility and compassion.

"I do find the essence of every great religious tradition in what Jesus said is the second great com-mandment – to love your neigh-bor as yourself," Church said. "However, your neighbor is not the person who looks like you, but is standing next to you – or the per-son who has his hand nearby, It is not the hand we choose."

Looking at contemporary culture, Church criticized the "selfhelp bromides" and especially "the unhealthy dimension to the notion of sovereign individualism: I

Church added, "If we do that, all we do is isolate ourselves and harden our hearts."

He believes strongly that humili-ty can unite us because it is some-thing we all live with. We all suffer and we all fail, he said. Church also emphasized that we cannot control what happens in life.

"When the ceiling falls, we often ask, Why, why me, shy anow?" he said. "But 'why' is the serung question. The question you can sak and get an answer to is, Where do we go frum here?" If the answer leads us closer to others, then whatever has happened to us will be of some value."

Looking for proof of the Bible in stones buried in the earth

He takes nothing in the Bible on faith.

Yet, standing in a trench on a hot, barren mountainside, he strares into the fire-blackened stone and sees an army destroying the Cananatic city of Hazor 3,200 years ago.

Just as it says in the Book of Joshua.

"Hazor was destroyed by fire" when the invading Israelites claimed their Promised Land, Ben Tor says. "Nobody can prove to me the story in Joshua is entirely fiction."

From the Northern-Hills of Israel to the desert of Yemen, a string of recent archaeological discoveries have provided the first hard evidence for a number of Biblical figures and events, many of which had been widely dismissed as myths and moral tales.

Individually, the discoveries are important. Together, they are shaking the field of biblical archaeology and buttressing words believers have taken on faith.

They also have political implications in a region where Jewish and Palestinian claims to the land rest in part on events dating back to the time of Abraham. In this volatile mix of archaeology, religion and politics, the most important of the new discoveries is evidence for the existence of King David. The Bible suys the child David slayed the Phillistine giant Goliath and went on to found Jerusalem, which this year is celebring its 3,000th anniversary at the City of David.

Students find that learning about other religions helps some keep their faith

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Teen talk about religion is rare, but at one private school, some young women say learning about different religions helps them keep the faith. At Presentation High School, an all-girls Catholic school in San Jose, about 40 juniors and

At Presentation High School, an all-girls Catholic school in San Jose, about 40 juniors and Jose, about 40 juniors and Seniors are, chosen to become peer ministers, a covered role. Peer ministers work with three adult campus ministers to provide spiritual activities such as student Masses and retreats. Becoming a peer minister, however, isn't easy, for most, it means taking a serious look at their own beliefs and learning how to tell others about it.

"As a freshman, I didn't want to be a practing Catholic artil," says Meghan Eagleson, 18, now a peer ministry leader. "It resented my father for making me, But it's my faith in front of other stuff in ny life. Different instances in my life have helped me do it, like, learning about other religions, being a peer minister and a few freaky acidents have reinforced my beliefs."

A faith journey, no matter what religion, often starts with rebellion, school officials say. As students mature, however, faith students mature, however, faith-becomes stronger.

"There certainly is a trend to question faith among this genera-tion's students," says Peggy Schrader, a campus minister at the school. "Some are jaded because they've seen a whole lot and experienced a lot more than many adults. Others have been raised in a religion that was spoon-fed to them. There is less taking parents (at) their word. Many of our young women take a good look at their faith, whatever it may be, and come to terms with how it should fit for them in their own lives."

differently in everyday life, says Gallup.
Many of the ideas in Frazee's test came from a Gallup book called "The Saints Among Us," with how much their behavior showed tolerance, ethics and charity.

Frazee says counting members is one of the most common ways churches measure their success. But in five to 10 years, people could be saying things like, You're a Baptist. Where are you on self control?"

Plaque for Rose Kennedy dedicated at Boston church

BOSTON (AP) — Rose Firgerald Kennedy was baprized at St. Stephen's Church in the North End. When she died more than a century later, hundreds of mourners paid tribute to her at that same church. Now, a plaque on the church Rose, and about 40 other family members, parightimers and admirest deficient the brunne plaque. "Of all the many bonors and recognition my mother has received, I think that none would please her more than this simple, eloquent plaque," Kennedy said. "It symbolizes both her deep religious faith and her lifelong love for this church and this community where she was born and raised."

Mrs. Kennedy was baptized at the church in the city's North End in 1890. Her family remembered her there after her death nearly two years ago at age 104.

The test focuses on actions, beliefs and feelings. "I willingly perform tasks that appear humiliating" is one statement test takers rank themselves on with a six-point scale that ranges from strongly agree." To "strongly disagree." Another statement says, "I feel forgiven and accepted by God."

Sunday soccer troubles church leaders

GLASSBORO, N.J. (AP) — It's either pray or play for some kids in New Jersey.

A shortage of playing facilities and overcrowded schedules in many towns in Gloucester County are forcing some youth sports programs to schedule games on Sunday morning and early afternoon.

make a decision. They have to make a decision between good and best," said Rev. Bill O'Connell, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Glassboro. "I feel for the kids."

Adele Riiff, supervisor for Washington Township's Parks and Recreation Department, disagrees.

She said the schedule makers are not ignoring church, but are trying to accommodate a large number of kids with just a few fields and a shortage of playing time.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

"An optimist is a driver who thinks that that empty space at the curb won't have a hydrant be-side it."

-- "Changing Times"

An optimist will have small chance to make today's game. He will play for every trick possible and his result will be down one. A pessimist, seeing nothing, but black clouds ahead, plays very carefully to cinch nine winners. The optimist gains confidence when he wins a free heart finesse at trick one. Swittly, he cashes dummy's top clubs, intending to concede a club for four club winners. Unluckly, the suit splits 41 and he cannot afford to continue clubs. So he switches to diamonds, a finesse to his to losing to West's, jack. West continues in hearts to dummy's ace, and South takes another losing diamond in esse. West knocks out South is last heart stopper, and all rests with a 3-3 diamond break. It doesn't come and South goes one down.

The pessimist is unfazed by his luck at trick one. He knows it's a signal that the rest of the hand will go sour. So, at trick two, he plays a low club from both hands — his suits don't break 3-2. Now the defense is finished. East leads a third heart to youth's king, but South is safe. He wins three clubs instead of only two and has no need to risk a diamond finesse.

TOMORROW'S LEWON? TODAY'S CHERRY,

Today it's your dream car. Tomorrow it could be your nightmare. Because if you buy a used car from a private party, or many car dealers, and the transmission suddenly gives up the ghost, you're on your own. But at "Your Good Friend" Dealer", most all used cars and trucks come with a 30 day, 1000 mile powertrain warranty. So, if you don't want to be stuck looking for "lemon aid", get a used car with a warranty...
