INEL approves waste plant, scraps incinerator plan

Facility is part of '96 agreement with Idaho

TWIN FALLS - The federal Department of Energy Friday awarded a contract to the sub-sidiary of a Brirish company to build and opera-tic a treatment plant for plutonium-contami-nated waste at the Idaho National Energy Laboratory.

BNFL Inc., a subsidiary of British Nuclear in engineering and construction on the project.

The plant is a little publicized part of an October 1995 nuclear waste agreement Gov. Phil Bart signed with the federal government to the agreement allows the government to ship spent reactor fuel to Idaho for storage for 40 years in exchange for a promise to move the waste out by 2035.

"This project is an important part of the agreement to get nuclear waste out of Idaho," Bart said in a news release Friday.

The calling

Ever since 47-year-old Paul Gibson can remember, the Salvation Army has been a part of his life and his family. Back in the 1938, his mother and father used to hold meetings above Red's Trading Post for the soldiers of their charity and church. As a teen-ager, Gibson used to ring bells at Christmas for the Salvation Army. He didn't know it then, but the religion would become much more meaningful him when he became an adult. He has worked for the Salvation Army for six years.

When Gibson was young, his father left the church after a tiff with some of the soldiers. Gibson followed his father, but latter returned to work the Salvation Army. The job seems like farmly, and every part of his job underszores the religion, he said.

"I feel the Lord called me to do his work here and that's what I do," he said.

A House ethics subcommittee, two members from each party, has been investigating the tax-exempt financing of Gingrich's college course. Last September, the panel expanded the probe to include whether the speaker had given accurate statements to investigators.

He said he had followed a "longstanding practice of not commenting on the procedures of the ethics committee, and I'm going to honor that."

The ethics charges have hung over Gingrich for more than two years. Within the full House, they have served as a political flash point for Democrats seeking to discredit the Republicans, who gained power in 1994 for the first time in 40 years. The new Congress convenes on Jan. 7, and the first-day agenda includes election of a speaker. Gingrich has been nominated by his GOP caucus.

Peru rebels free more hostages; standoff drags another day

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Communist rebels freed 38 more hostages Friday, including three ambassadors, as diplomats worked feverishly to end a three-day standoff and win the release of more than 300 VIPs still held captive.

It was the largest group of hostages freed by the Tupac Amaru rebels since the early hours of the crisis Tuesday night, when two-duren robels stormed the embassy resi-dence during a birthday party.

As the tired and hungry hostages were driven in vehicles through police lines, hostage Javier Diez Canseco, a leftist con-gressman, read a statement.

"The main message is that there must be a dialogue. We're badly off," he shouted in fustration before being driven off. "We're upset and we're tense."

The statement urged the government to restore electricity, water and telephone service to the Japanese ambaşsador's residence in Liam, where two dozen rebels were holding the remaining hostages.

Batt wants emphasis on maintaining prosperity

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Phil Batt admits he let the nuclear waste debate get-under-his kin during the first half of his term. Not that he left other matters mattended, but waste decidedly was a consuming concern. He expects that to change now, though, so his administration and he public can concentrate on what he sees as the real challenge facing flasho. Minintaining prosperity with a cooling economy.

"While I expect there will be continued discussion of (nuclear waste), I don't think it'll be near-ly as dominant as it's been in the past," the governor said in an

Taking over in 1995 as the first Republican governor in 24 years, Batt imposed his fiscal conservatism when it was necessary to cope with the end of a nearly eight-year expansion that placed Idaho in the national forefront of economic growth. That growth paid for new programs, prisons and college buildings.

Batt used the last of the surpluses to cut property taxes tens of millions of dollars, then squeezed hundreds of jobs and hundreds of thousands of dollars in operating costs out of the state budget to realign the government's fiscal policy with a slow-ing common, which is a larget to the state of the stat

But Batt's greater concern seems to be those entering the labor force for the first time. "The young people, not only in Idaho but nationwide, are going to require the spotlight to be unred on their training because they're going to have to compete in a very rapidly changing job market," he said.

Medberry fears Batt may be more vindictive than his predecessor, Democrat Cecil-Andrus, who was legendary for remembering — and dealing with — his enemies as well as his friends. Medberry said the governor's pique has already been felt in the Land Board's refusal to consider seriously the league's mining reform proposals. The resolution of that and other environmental issues now seems to be hanging on Batt's temper, he said.

NEW YORK (AP) Researchers who put moths on tiny leashes and flapped oversized mechanical wings in the name of science have apparently solved the mystery of how insects can fly. The puzzle has been how those tiny flapping wings can get treatures of the ground. In Thursday's issue of the journal Nature, Cambridge University zoologist Charles P. Ellington and his colleagues came up with an answer insects create a whirding cylinder of air above their wings that provides in the control of the cont lift.

The finding is "as close as we've come to explaining it," said Ellington, who has studied insect flight for 25 years and whose findings were published in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature.

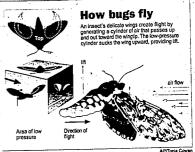

Nature.
To figure it out, Ellington's team studied hawkmoths with a wingspan of about 4 inches. Hawkmoths are big enough and beat their wings slowly enough that the researchers had a good chance of seeing what was going chance of seeing what was going on.

In one set of experiments, hawkmoths were snared in a loop of thread attached to a stiff wire to keep them in the breeze from a wind tunnel. The wind contained thin streams of smoke to show how the air flowed over the wings. The researchers took 1,000 pictures a second with a video-camera.

The telltale evidence appeared above and just behind the front edge of the wing when the moth flapped down.

Rather than just flowing overthe top, the layer of air curled up into a cylinder, like a window shade wrapping around its roller. That cylinder maintained low pressure that pulled the top of the wing upward, providing enough lift for flying.

Scientists may have solved

mystery of how insects fly

Most scientists had thought that such a "leading-edge vortex" was responsible for insect flight, but prior experiments had either failed to uncover one or found it was unexpectedly small, Ellington said.

The next step was to show how insects produce this air cylinder. To do that, Ellington and colleagues built a computer-conrolled mechanical moth with a 3 foot wingspan, using elastic dolth stretched over a framework of brass rubes.

It turned out that the answer would be familiar to anybody who has experimented with a paper airplane. If you tilt the wings so that the back edge lower enough than the front edge, you get great lift. for a moment.

Then your plane stalls and moment.

Then your plane stalls and drops like a-rock-The problem is that the rolled-up cylinder of air quickly grows until it breaks free of the wing.

Ellington and colleagues found that insects use the same strategy, but with a trick that prolongs the lift. The cylinder of air continuously slips toward the wingtip, which apparently keeps it from growing too big. The results should apply to insects in general, not just hawkmoth, Ellington said.

Ellington's work is "the best explanation for one particular problem, getting sufficient lift," said Steven Vogel, a Duke University zoology professor who studies the aerodynamics of living things. "There are other mysteries, such as how insects can maneuver and cope with winds." Airplanes with highly sweptback wings also get help from a leading-edge vortex. But airplanes generally get their lift from the flow of air over the wing than below, creating lower air pressure above the wing. That pressure difference supports the wing.

Propellers work in much the

Mrs. Clinton to donate book profits

WASHINGTON — Hillary Rodham Clinton says she'll donate profits from her book, "It Takes a Village," to children's hospitals and other programs that help young people — and she hopes other Americans will be inspired to help, too.

The first installment, about $750,000, will be divided among 15 hospitals and 23 other programs mentioned in the book, she said Friday.

Mrs. Clinton presented the money during a visit to the Children's National Medical Center. The first lady — accompanied by the White House cat, Socks — participated in the hospital's Christmas program for the third year.

"What I hope is that the announcement of these donations might encourage other people to become involved at whatever level," she said.

WASHINGTON — President Clinton said Friday it was "clearly inappropriate" that a Chinese weapons dealer was allowed to attend a White House reception with him.

But he said he had no recollection of meeting the man, whose company is implicated in arms smuggling.

Amid a widening Justice Department inquiry into Democratic campaign fund raising, the White House said the president had been host for a Feb. 6 reception attended by arms dealer Wang Jun. Wang's invitation was arranged by Democratic Party fund-raiser Clunter's Yah Lin Trie.

It was disclosed this week that Trie, a longtime friend of Clinton from Linto Rock, Art, brought two large manilla envelopes containing $460,000 to the legal defense fund of the president and first lady last March.

Man, turkey tangle on road

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Forgive Dale Ford if he's a little reluctant to eat turkey next Thanksgiving. The trucker from Apple Valley, Callif, found himself locked in a standoff with a wild gobbler for 3 1/2 hours after the big bird camerashing through his windshield Sunday on Interstate 79. "It scared the hell out of me," Ford said. "He was still alive. He must have had a rush of adrenalin. He was looking all around, and he stared at me for a while."

So the trooper left and Ford sat in the driver's seat for 3 1/2 hours, with the turkey remaining silent in the back as Ford waited for a tow truck.

In the back to truck repair garage, Ford again tried to dislodge the bird. Finally, it suddenly exited through the hole in the windshield and headed for the woods.

"He's on the loose in Pittsburgh someplace," Ford said.

U.S., Iraq face off as oil begins to flow

Critics fear money will go to bolster regime

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Saddam Hussein's gamble is on. After years of refuels, delays and negotiations, Iraq is exporting oil and making its first food purchases as part of a $Z$ billion deal with the United Nations. Apparently, the Iraqi leader is betting the food that will pour into his country will ease civilian hunger, boost his popularity and strengthen his rule.

The United States and its allies have other ideas, though, at least strengtnen ans rule. The United States and its allies have other ideas, though, at least in regard to Saddam's power. They want to keep him cornered and that means keeping sanctions against Iraq in place. They hope the tighty monitored dildor-food agreement will provide enough humanitarian relief to defleer pressure from the United Nations to lift the entire trade embargo. "For years, the United States as a trap for Saddam," said Patrick Clawson, a sentor research professor at the National Defense University in Washington.

Saddam took the bait in November, dropping objections to a deal that furner bailing which for years he discount of the work of Baghdad's first wheat deal under the U.N. agreement.

"Clearly, Saddam is hoping that this is the beginning of the end for sanctions," Clawson said. "The United States is hoping that this relieves the human suffering of the Iraqi people... and there-fore makes the sanctions sustain-who for the future."

of the Iraqi people ... and therefore makes the sanctions sustainable for the future."
The deal with the United Nations allows Iraq to sell 52 billion worth of oil in 180 days, after which the deal can be renewed. Iraq has indicated it plans to ack the United Nations for permission to sell more oil after the first period.

Washington has vowed to closely watch the oil sales and has said it will be looking for any directions of funds.

"Saddam's initial impulse will be that he has won a victory," Clawson said. "It will require skillful US. diplomacy to make it clear that after six months the limited oil sales could end." Iraq's relationship with U.N. arms monitors may serve as a guide for the kinds of arguments that will arise over the oil-foot-food deal. For years, Bughdad has played a cat-and-mouse game with the inspectors, hiding material from monitors and disclosing information when it was clear that it was about to get caught. The cost for Iraq has been high.

A mix that helps conquer prejudice ESL program attempts to bridge culture, language gap

Hood's attorney questions alibis

By Kevin Miller Times-News writer

RUPERT – Inconsistencies in the alibis of three people Corey Hood once implicated in a murder suggest they are fabricating their story, Hood's autorney continued to argue Friday.

In the second day of testimony Friday during the hearing to withdraw Hood's plea agreements in two deaths, defense attorney Mark Manweiler focused on witnesses inconsistencies in an atempt to develop a conspiracy theory.

But prosecutors who want to strip Hood of his two guilty pleas to voluntary manslaughter and charge him with first-degree murder in the deaths of Wendy Hunter and Mae Hood downplay the discrepancies.

"I think it's impossible for any person to give a statement, for instance in May, and give another statement four months later and expect them to be a perfect match," Minidoka County Deputy Prosecutor John Bradley said.

When Brian Mack, Shannah Reeves and Matthew Mines first told police what they did prior to going to Hood's home on May 16—the night Hunter was killed—they never mentioned meeting anyone at a grocery store.

But now the three say they met Barbara Stanton at Swensen's Market Rupert around 9:30 p.m. that night before going to Hood's house.

HALLEY - A cougar that reruised through a Hailey subdivision a couple of days ago showed up again Friday.

Local police and Idaho Department of Fish and Game-officers found the cat resting on the front step of a house south of Hailey late Wednesday. An effort to trap the cat in the garage failed, and the cat headed off across state Highway 15.

The cat had been reported earlier that day moving around between the highway and the foothills to the east, Fish and Game Conservation Officer Roger Olson said.

Acker gare it a shot of ambis-otics and one for worms, and he put some antiseptic on its wounds. Other than appearing malnourished, it didn't appear sick or in danger of dying, Olson said.

Fish and Game officers Friday evening were trying to find a place to keep the cat to feed it some meat for a few days before turning it loose in the wild somewhere.

Defending champ Montana faces frequent runner-up Marshall

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. — Today, Marshall becomes the first tream to play in six NCAA Division IAA title gaines. If the Thundering Herd lose to Montana, Marshall would leave a legacy of IAA championship game futility hard to surpass. Marshall, headed for Division IA next season, first lost in the 1988 final game to Northeast Louisiana 43-42. The Herd also lost in 1991, 1993 and 1995, winning only once, 31:28 over Youngstown State in 1992. Marshall's average margin of defeat 5.8 points.

89-49 victory over Wolford on Friday night.
Since losing to No. 16 Minnesons in the final of the San Juan Shootout on Nov. 30, the Tigers (9.1) have rolled past their five opponents, including Virginia and South Carolina, by an average of 24 points.
Against Wolford (3-5), in its second year of Division 1 ball, Buckner keyed Clemson's 30-6 run, which turned a close game into a runaway.

Buckner did the most damage. His steal and pass to Jamison gave the Tigers a 19-7 lead and Buckner scored seven of the next 10 points.

By the time Latron Jackson ended a seven-minute scoring drought, the Terriers trailed 41-15. Wolfford, shooting just 33 percent this season, scored only one basket dujing nearly nine minutes of the half. The Terriers showed some three-point range after the break as Seth Chadwick and Terrence Gilyard each hit two 3-pointers on four consecutive possessions. But that only cut Clemson's lead to 27 points. Chadwick finished with a teamhigh 13 points and Forbes had 11 for the Terriers.

Clemson's showed strength against all sorts of teams this month, especially on the road. The Tigers won by 10 points at Virginia two weeks ago, and on Tuesday night, beat state rivals South Carolina 58-39.

Their home wins have all been blowouts against lesser teams — $2.55 vs. Furman and 80-57 vs. Charleston Southern before the win over Wolford.

Connery-Irwin take 18-hole lead in Lexus

LA QUINTA, Calif. (AP) —
Helped by his 11 handicap, actor Sean Connery recorded seven bridies Friday in combining with Hale Invin for an 11-underpar 61 and a two-shot lead after the first round of the Lexus Challenge.
Former Miami Dolphins coach
Don Shula and Jim Colbert shot
30 on the Citrus course at La

Connery actually parred the seven holes for which he was the ball over 25 times in the final two periods as play got a little ratty.

With good movement away from the ball, Rigby was still able to score. Burley, on the other hand, shot 29.6 percent from the floor in the second half.
"If we don't play together as a team, things tend to come apart," Bobeat coach Mart Harr said.
Jensen gane his team a little spark in the third quarter, scoring a pair of basket off offensive rebounds to cut Rigby's lead under 20. Jensen finished with eight points.
Hitting four 3-pointers, Tyler Carson led Burley with 16 points.
Greg Reed of Rigby led all scorers with 19.

"I was a little nervous at the beginning," he said. "But Hale gave me such great reassurance that I relaxed and eliminated a lot of the camage." Irwin pointed to Connery's presence on the golf course.
"There's a confidence that just manifests itself," Irwin axid. "He has a nice touch and low to his game." Shula has a 19 handicap. He had a birdie on the eighth hole, which wound up as a net eagle. Five of his pars were scored as net birdies.

Five of his pars were scored as ret birdies.

"When you're coaching, you always have anxieties before the kickoff," Shulla said. "And it's the same way on the first hole. But the game is different because in football, you have the whole team that you're responsible for. On the golf course, it's just your ball and you."

Cycling's Armstrong gets good news

AUSTIN, Texas—Cycling star Lance Amstrong hopes to ride competitively in 1997 after tests showed there's no cancer in his body, the Austin American-Statesman reported Friday.

Doctors told Armstrong that he will not likely need more chemotherapy or surgery, the newspaper reported. Armstrong is the 1993 world road race champino, a two-time Tour de France stage winner and a two-time Tour DuPont ritlist.

In October, Armstrong, 25, had a cancerous testicle removed and was undergoing chemotherapy to light the disease that had spread to his stomach and lungs. He also underwent surgery to remove two small brain lesions.

U.S. Sen. Slade Gorton secured the promise after several meetings with team officials, who had announced the decision to sell last Saturday because they were frustrated with delays in a SB4 million project to build a new ballpark by opening day of the 1999 season.
The Mariners claim they lose about $20 million a

Ron Powlus Will Petum to Notre Dame
SOUTH BEND, Ind. – New coach, newly expanded stadium, same

Ron Powlus said Friday he'll take advantage of his fifth year of eligibility and return to Notre Dame next season. He made his announcement during a news conference in his hometown of Berwick, Pa.

If Lou Holtz hadn't stepped down after his 11th season, Powlus said he wouldn't have come back. Holtz was replaced by Bob Davie, the Irish defensive coordinator. Former Purdue coach Jim Colletto is Notre Dame's new offensive coordinator.
"I would have come here under coach Holtz and been a three-year starter. ... It would have been time for me to move on," he said.
"(Davie and Colletto) are people I want to work with.

NBA suspends Barkley, Drexler

NEW YORK - Charles Barkley was suspended for two games and Clyde Drexler for one, and both Rockets were fined Friday by the NBA-for-touching referee Jack Nies during Houston's game

Thursday night.

Barkley also was fined $7,500 for poking Nies' nose and drawing blood during an argument with $47 remaining in Houston's 115-101 lost to San Antonio. Dreader received a $5,000 fine for bumping Nies. Both also received automatic $1,000 fines for being ejected.

Our referees at physical risk, "said Rod Thorn, the league's director of basketball operations." If don't think that Barkley intentionally tried to injure the referee, but when a player is waving his arms in a referee's face — like Barkley did last night – he will be held responsible for the consequences."

Rockets spokesman Tim Frank said that Drexler planned to appeal but doesn't think Barkley will.

Gullikson again to head Davis Cup team

Gullikson again to head Davis Cup team
NEW YORK - Tom Gullikson, reappointed captain of the U.S.
Davis Cup team Friday, was saked to explain the drive to play tennis in that international setting.
"In an individual, sometimes selfish game, you play for your team and your country," he said. "To me, that validates an athlete."
The setting can be harrowing, though.
Andre Agassi, picked by Gullikson for the American team that will play the first round in Brazil Feb. 79, remembered his last Davis Cup action in South America.
"We had gun escorts to and from the court," he said. "I don't know the reason, but that stands out in my mind. It's a much different experience in South America, under those conditions."
Thomas Muster thought so, too. He led a walkout by the Austrian Davis Cup team in a protest over security at qualifying matches in Brazil in September. The Austrians defaulted the match, allowing Brazil to advance to the world group where it will face the United States.

Mets get Olerud from Toronto; Darrin Jackson signs with Giants

NEW YORK (AP) - The New York Mets acquired first base-man John Olerud from Toronto on Friday along with 55 million -a record cash amount in a base-ball trade - for hard-throwing pitcher Robert Person. New York will have to pay just $1.5 million in salary to Olerud, who is eligible for free agen-drer next season. After leading the American League with a 503 average in 1939, Olerud dropped to 297, 291 and 274 in the last three seasons.

The ten seasons.

"He's in his walk year," Mets general manager Joe McIlvaine said. "It's a good time to get a player, in the walk year of his contract, because he's got more to shoot for."

Person, a 27-year-old right-hander who throws 95 mph, was 45 with a 4.52 ERA in 13 starts and 14 relief appearances last season. "We traded several young pitchers in the deals we made, "Here was a chance to get one back. We had excellent reports on his season."

The teams settled on the Olerud-for-Person exchange Thesday, then spent three days reaching an agreement on the cash. Toronto originally offered to pay 53 million but eventually topped the previous record of $4,875,000, set Oct. 28 when Detroit sent Ruben Sierra to Cincinnati and agreed to pay almost all all but $625,000 of his Cincinnati and agreed to pay almost all all but $625,000 of his $5.5 million salary next season.

Because the amount was over $1 million, the Blue Jays had to seek approval from central baseball, and acting commissioner Bud Selig gave his permission Friday morning.

"This is an important deal for us because we've been searching for an experienced but in out incup," McDivaine said.

In the free agent market Friday, reliever Gregg Olson agreed to a minor-league contract with Minnesota, outileder Darrin Jackson returned from Japan and agreed to a minor-league contract with Minnesota, outileder Darrin Jackson returned to the Atlanta Braves for a $2 million, oneyear deal.

Olson, 30, started the 1996 season with the Cincinnati Reds' Triple-A farm team at Nashville before being traded to Detroit in April. He was 3-0 with a $5.00 million, and the first of the Tigers, then was dealt found from the Tigers, then was dealt for the Stross.

He would get a $400,000, one-year contract if he makes the Tigers, the Tige

Holidays are times to give and forgive

I'm having a great time this Christmas season anticipating the day when the entire family comes together for a few hours of gift giving, laughter and love.

The neat thing about our family is that we don't fight on holidays. On those special occasions, everybody seems to get along, and there is plenty of frivolity to go around.

around.

Now somebody is probably going to write to say that our lack of fighting is a sign of a dysfunctional family. Perhaps, but right now, I give thanks for any holiday that is screen.

The brown and the service of the service day that is screne.

The known some families who expect a big fight to erupt every time they get together. Memories are often dangerothings. Hurts from years before, bidden from view on most days, suddenly pool out at the dinner table, and the fight is on.

Sometimes those battles end up with somebody getting hurt, leaving the festivities and never returning for another Christmas. That's a pity, because there is one simple thing you can dut or ensure that those heated arguments do not escalate into lifelong separations. The secret is to enter into every family gathering promising yourself one thing; that you will forgive whoever hurts you.

thing: that you will forgive whoever hurts you.

I'm not saying that past hurts and resentments should not be talked about, but the time has to be right. The dinner table is not the place to discuss what your brother Fred said about you in 1978.

If those old resentments are to be talked about at all, the conversation ought to take place in a controlled situation when a third parry is present to mediate. And those difficult situations should be focused on compromise and reconciliation. You might reach a solution, but you're not going to win the entire family war.

It's very important to remember that you may never forget the incident — the dirty trick, the harsh words, the gossip that hurt you. But forgiving someone means never bringing it up again. When you forgive, you make a decision to carry the burden of the memory and never again make it a topic of conversation.

You say, I forgive myself. Then you are free, and every time those thoughts surface, you say it again.
And finally, you ask for help from the Almighty. Prayer is the glue that holds healed relationships together. My advice:
Because maintaining those relationships is a lifelong challenge, ask for strength.
Because of memories will always resurface, ask for serenity. Because past resentments are still in your heart, ask for the capacity to love.
After all the beatings Christmas has taken over the years, with department stores and malls replacing the wise men and the shepherds and the lowly manger, the wonder is that a spiritual emphasis exists at all.
We keep it alive in our relationships.
That is the miracle, that the Christ child still moves people to love and forgive.

At this Christmas time,
we often celebrate the birth of the Lord Jesus Christ
when he was born in

I guess the question before us is how we want the Lord Jesus to view us, and are we really ready for Dec. 25, 1996? The next to the last verse in the Bible is a quote from Jesus himself, "Yes, I am coming quick-to."

Former president shares living faith.
His sister, evangelist Ruth Carter Stapleton, put him on a path to regaining his faith, he said. "Ruth told me to forger

It was shortly after a long talk with her, he said, that "I accepted an invitation to go on a lay mission to Lock Haven, Pa, on a mission given to me by my church. I was literally transformed. It helped me to understand things. We (he and his missionary partner) found 100 families with no religious faith. We sited all 100 families. We go to know them, and in the process, my faith was restored."

In 1970, Carter was elected goven or of Georgia. And in 1976, he was elected president. The man who marked his first full day as president by pardoning thousands of Vietnamera draft evaders writes that forgiveness is a foundation of his faith. "Without the knowledge that I can be forgiven," he writes, "it would not be possible to face my own shortomings frankly."

He cited three religious thinkers as particularly influential to him. Reinhold Niebuhr, Karl Barth and Paul Tillich. He recalled that Tillich said, "Religion is a search."

"I'm still searching for

Since leaving the presidency, Carter has plunged into good works, including founding the Carter Center, a nonpartisan center that addresses national and international issues of public policy. His recent activities have included battling guinea worm and river bilindness in Africa and monitoring elections in war-torn and developing countries.

He and his wife, Rosalynn, have also worked with Habitat for Humanity, providing housing for the poor. He continues to teach an adult class at Maranatha Baptist Church in Plains, Ga. He has even been mentioned as a serious contender for the Nobel Peace Prize.

Vatican steps toward naming black saint

Vatican steps toward naming black saint
VATICAN CITY — The Vatican took another step this week toward declaring a Haitian-born slave the United States' first black saint.

The Vatican body which studies candidates for sainthood issued a decree recognizing that Pierre Toussaint "lived in an outstanding way, better than we do," said the Rev. Paolo Moliant; who is promoting Toussaint's sainthood.

Pope John Paul II strended a ceremony at the Vatican on Tuesday to present the decree declaring the "heroic virtues" of Toussaint. Decrees certifying marrydom or miracles were presented for other candidates.

"The decree means "Pierre Toussaint, more than any of us, lived ... in an outstanding Christian way," Molinari said Wednesday.

The process of declaring official sainthood is long and complex.
Candidates must first be beatified; and beatification requires a certified miracle. Molinari said several possible miracles attrib

LOS ANGELES — Leaders of Judaism's Reform movement handly rejected a proposal that would have encouraged rabbis to take part in interfaith marriages.
Rabbis should be left to decide the issue for themselves, said George Markley, vice chairman of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

Congregations.

"It was not a vote on whether rabbis should or should not officiate," Markley said after the vote Saturday. "I think it was a clear mandate that we feel that it is up to the rabbinate to determine what their official position should be."

About 180 trustees of the Hebrew congregations group voted in a thow of hands on the proposal to, in effect, encourage rabbis to preside over weddings of Jews to non-lews. Only about a dozen trustees voted in favor, observers said. The Reform movement is Judaism's largest branch.

Currently, rabbis decide on their own whether to officiate at such weddings even though the Central Conference of American Rabbis in 1973 issued a formal resolution stating their opposition to the practice.

Those opposed to the idea of encouraging rabbis to particular than arrivance.

Those opposed to the idea of encouraging rabbis to participate in interfaith marriages, including Markley, said such marriages weaken the Jewish community and shouldn't be sanctified by a rabbi.

But David Belin, the former chairman of the Commission on Reform Jewish Outreach, offered the proposal because, the said-having rabbis preside over interfaith marriages would actually increase the depleting Jewish population.

He said the current policy discourages interfaith couples from raising their children as Jews.

these shortened days: the loneliness and depression winter brings on for so many.

The cry of a newborn at such a time is the howling of our collective terror. An infant expresses our fragility, our dependence, our helplessness and hopelessness.

The infant Jesus is God, helpless-with-us. Samuel Beckett writes, "They give birth astride a grave—the light flickers for a moment—then it's night once more." Marp holds her baby, and even as the does, the nails are in his hands, the crown of thorns upon his head. Jesus has accepted life and its mortality. gift for the grieving. His birth means God's experience of death and thus God's ability to reach into the deaths we live.

The angels are shouting: "Hosanna in the highest!" But they are distant, and the way from the stable is as long as any way we must take.

To be alone and lonely during the Christmas season means to encounter this world much as Jesus did. For in loneliness and grief we recall the elemental terror of being helpless against our mortality and all it means.

The lonely and grieving among us are signs of the Christ child. Make room then. Make room Hold them as best you can while the days are short and the night the days draws on.

Federal Reserve expands bank underwriting powers

WASHINGTON — Banks will be able to move more vigorously into stock and bond underwriting under a rule adopted Friday by the Federal Reserve Board. Some analysts expect a new round of mergers between smaller banks and regional brokerages.

regional brokerages.
By a unanimous vote, the Fed agreed to let bank holding companies earn up to 25 percent of revenues from securities underwriting, up from the current 10 percent limit. The expansion comes after Congress failed again this year to pass a bank modernization bill.

"We hope the next move would be up to Congress to review this whole area," said Alice Rivlin, the Fed's vice chairman. The new rules will become effective in 60 days.

Larry LaRocco, managing director of the ABA Securities Association, said the Fed 'has begun chipping away at the antiquated barriers handicapping banks for years."

"This is a tremendous boost for banks that already underwrite securities and an incentive for banks considering this business," said LaRocco, whose group is affiliated with the American Bankers Association. Fed staff said that the expansion wouldn't threaten the safety or soundness of the banking system and that it would result in greater competition, convenience and efficiency for customers. Out of 42 public comments, the Fed said it received only eight letters opposing her ule.

Directly affected by the Fed's move will be 38 bank holding companies that were permitted to deal in stocks and bonds through separate affiliates insulated from the bank.

These affiliates were first created in 1997, when J.P. Morgan & Co. found a way around the Glass Steagall Act, the law passed in the Depression to separate banks and securities firms following more bank failures.

Glass Steagall forbids banks from owning or affiliating with a company that's "engaged principally" in underwriting or securities dealing. J.P. Morgan's lawyers successfully argued they could set up a securities arm that deals in securities only to a limited extent, generating only 5 perts of the company's revenues, thereby not violating the "engaged principally" test.

not violating the "engaged principally test.

Raphael Soifer, bank analyst for Brown Brothers Harriman & Co. in New York, said that "fareful loophole" was later broadened so banks could underwrite stocks and bring in 10 percent of their revenues from securities deals. Soifer said he expected the Fed's rule to trigger a new type of merger activity, with regional banks acquiring smaller, regional brokerage firms. Stock prices are too high now for combinations of the larger banks and brokerages, be added.

Soifer and many other economists believe banks can safely underwrite stocks and bonds without posing high risks, to the federal deposit insurance fund. In fact, stock underwriting it safer than some of the risky derivatives that backs sometimes buy and sell.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"The older I grow, the more I listen to people who don't say much."

— Germain G. Glidden

Today's East signaled partner at trick one, but he didn't say much. East intended his spade deuce to ask West to shift to another suit, but why bother? The bidding and dummy's spade holding made it lowious a spade continuation was futile. West led his spade ace to get a look at dummy, and he got an eye ful; dummy's imposing spades dictated a shift to a minor. Eager for a shift. East played his deuce to discourage a continuation. This misguided signal resulted in a club shift by West, and South escaped with game. South won his club ace, cashed his trump ace and crossed to dummy in trumps. Then he discarded two diamonds on dummy's spades to claim an overtrick.

East's playe of the spade douce.

Then he discarded two diamonds on dummy's spades to claim an overtrick.

East's play of the spade deuce at trick one was a blunder, in obvious situations, when it is apparent to both defenders that a shift is vital (today's example), East must do more than request a shift. He mast indicate which suil offers the better chance. The suit-preference signal serves this purpose. A low card shows interest in a shift to the lower-reasting side suit; a high card shows the opposite.

Today's East should have played his spade 10 at trick one. West would then have switched to his low diamond, and the defense would have collected four tricks to beat the game.
