Hopes evaporate for river protection

Only 2 survive on 'outstanding' list

By William Brock
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - What began as a request to protect 68 of Idaho's cleanest rivers and streams has been whittled down to two, and a Ketchum lawmaker is fighting to add five more names to a bill that's bobbing around in the state Legislature.

The Middle Fork of the Salmon and the Selway rivers already are flowing toward protection as "outstanding resource waters," but five of their tributary creeks have been dammed up in the Senate Resources and Environment Committee.

The Idaho Legislature has never protected a river, stream or lake as an outstanding resource water. The designation limits pollution from agriculture, logging, mining and other land-disturbing activities.

Sen. Clint Stennett, D-Ketchum, is asking his colleagues on the Resources and Environment Committee to include the other creeks - all of which were recommended by the state Health and Welfare Board.

Clint Stennett

Specifically, Stennett is seeking to include two Middle Fork tributaries - Loon and Wilson creeks - as well as Bear, White Cap and Running creeks on the Selway. With the exception of the lower reaches of Running Creek, all of the five disputed tributaries lie within formally protected wilderness areas.

"If we're serious about protecting outstanding waters, then streams running through wilderness areas ought to be a no-brainer," Stennett said. "All the wilderness streams should be given, and then we fight over the others."

"I'm not optimistic it's going to happen," said committee Chairman Sen. Jesse see RIVER, Page A2.

STANDOFF SITE

Walt Smith heard gunshots coming from inside this - his neighbor's - apartment Wednesday afternoon and called police. The tenant, 40-year-old Bryon Terrace Myers, held police at bay for more than 12 hours and was arrested at about 6 a.m. Thursday morning, police said.

Shot-punctuated Twin Falls standoff produces 7 felony charges against man

By Kent McClary
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A man involved in a 12-hour standoff with Twin Falls police that lasted into Thursday morning faces seven felony charges.

Twin Falls police forced Bryon Terrace Myers, 40, out of his apartment with tear gas and arrested him at about 6:07 a.m. Thursday, police reports said.

Police were called to 1906 Kimberly Road, Apartment 3, Wednesday afternoon on a report of shots fired. And when Myers refused to come out of his apartment and continued shooting, police called in their Special Operations Unit, police reported.

The heavily armed and armored team took cover close to the building and attempted to talk to Myers over a police car loudspeaker.

The attempts at negotiation continued through the night, but drew only obscenities in reply from Myers, said Twin Falls police Sgt. Bill Hanchey. Myers fired six more shots at about 11:40 p.m. Wednesday, Hanchey said.

Those shots drew the seven charges of felony aggravated assault on a police officer.

"At some point he (Myers) stopped shooting inside the house, and started shooting outside the house at the officers that were trying to negotiate with him," deputy county prosecutor Grant Loebis said.

Myers is to be arraigned today. He was being held without bail, but bail likely will be set at his arraignment.

A neighbor in the former motel, Walt Smith, said he heard gunshots from Myers' room Wednesday afternoon and called police.

"They got here about 5:15 and asked if I was sure it was gunshots," Smith said. "I've been around guns all my life. So I asked them to come in. They came in, and just a few minutes later he shot off the gun about four times. They said, 'That was gunshots.' Then they got excited."

Smith said he counted 23 bullet holes

Girl's miraculous survival amazes family, doctors

PHOENIX - Five-year-old Desiree Ferguson didn't ask for a place in medical history books.

Doctors and family are astonished that the little Phoenix girl survived what is usually a lethal rupture in a major artery.

"Physicians who treated Desiree say they know of no other people who have survived a tear in the basilar artery, which is at the base of the brain."

"This is truly a remarkable case," said Dr. Harold Reikate, pediatric neurosurgeon at St. Joseph's Hospital and Medical Center.

Stacy Ferguson, Desiree's mother, believes something more powerful than medicine may explain her daughter's survival and recovery, which began last month when her skull was crushed by a tractor.

"The Lord took her under his wing. I was always confident she would recover," Ferguson said. "It's truly a miracle."

Ruptured artery is usually fatal

Desiree, her family and her doctors met with reporters Thursday to discuss the six-hour surgery that saved the girl's life. Doctors showed a short videotape of part of the operation.

The little girl, who was released from the hospital Monday, held her grandmother's hand as she looked out at the television cameras and lights. Her lip quivered as reporters began questioning the family, and she said only she felt "great" and she wanted to visit Disneyland.

"I think she is kind of shy," her mother explained.

Desiree's once-long brown hair was close-cropped and a scar runs from her left temple to her ear. She has no movement in her left eye, and doctors don't know if it will return. Otherwise, she has made a full recovery from the accident and the surgery, which was astonished on Feb. 6.

A team of 20 doctors, nurses and assistants repaired the damaged artery by stopping Desiree's heart and brain functions for 42 minutes by significantly cooling her body. By stopping the blood flow, doctors could see and reach the ruptured artery. They closed it with three small clamps that will never be removed.

"Desiree had no blood flow, no respiration and no pulse," said Dr. Robert F. Spetzler, who performed the surgery.

Desiree Ferguson, 5, holds a place in the medical history books. Her mother, Stacy, appeared with her at a press conference at a Phoenix, Ariz., hospital Thursday.

Heavy rain brings flood threats, deaths to Texas. Oklahoma

The Associated Press
Thunderstorms developed over north Texas and southern Oklahoma in the afternoon, producing signs of tornadoes on radar. No twister was spotted.
The rain was good news for farmers who had not had much relief from the droughts of last season. Meanwhile, the eastern United States was tranquil as a high-pressure front pushed temperatures across the region to as much as 5 to 10 degrees above normal for this time of year.
Much of the West was calm, with just a few scattered light showers across Washington, Idaho, Montana, northern Colorado, and eastern Utah. The higher elevations in the area got light snow.
In Salt Lake City, an inch of snow fell overnight, with as much as 10 inches falling on the surrounding mountains.
The lowest wind chill was 19 below zero at Moosnee, Wis.

Hubbell, Huang will invoke 5th Amendment, House lawyer says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Clinton administration official Webster Hubbell and Democratic fund-raiser John Huang told Congress Thursday they will claim a Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination and refuse to turn over subpoenaed documents, a House counsel confirmed.

Two of the key figures in the Democratic fund-raising controversy, Hubbell and Huang informed the House Government Reform and Oversight Committee by letter, said Barbara Comstock, the panel's chief investigative counsel.

The two had been ordered in the subpoenas to produce the documents by Thursday.

Two other figures in the fund-raising controversy, presidential friend Charles Yuh Lin Tzie and Thai businesswoman Pauline Kanchanalak, have instructed their lawyer not to accept service of Senate subpoenas for business records, Senate sources said Thursday.

Hubbell refused to produce any documents, Comstock said. Huang produced some documents and declined to turn over others on the advice of his attorney. Huang's letter, however, suggested he would consider turning over more documents if he were given limited immunity for the document production, she said.

Comstock declined to say how the panel will respond to the refusal to produce documents.

But Joseph DiGenova, a former U.S. attorney, said the Fifth Amendment claim would not hold up in court and appeared to be made simply to delay the panel's investigation.

"Generally speaking, there is no (Fifth Amendment) privilege for financial records, records kept in the ordinary course of business, daybooks, even diaries," DiGenova said.

"What they are trying to do is lead the way for congressional immunity" for testimony Huang and Hubbell might give.

Thursday morning in the roof over Myers' apartment. One bullet chip is visible in the masonry side of the Six States Distributing building, facing the apartment.

Myers is an aluminum siding contractor, Smith said. He had lived in the apartment for about a year.

"He was definitely weird," said building owner James Meyers. Meyers said she had recently gotten in an argument with Myers over rent.

Police believe Myers had been drinking and had been involved in a disturbance in a bar earlier in the day, Hanchey said.

The officers called to the scene phoned Myers and asked him to come outside, but Myers said, "No way, Hanchey said. From the sound and rapidity of the shots, officers guessed Myers had a semiautomatic 9 mm pistol, and they chose not to try approaching the room, Hanchey said.

Smith said police told him to leave at about 5:50 p.m. and his wife, Telitha, spent the night in a motel.

The apartments have five residents, including Myers, said Meyers-Smith said he was the only one home when the shooting started.

When the Smiths got back home, at about 9 a.m., they could smell the noxious tear gas in their apartment.

"About 6 a.m. officers got a whiff of it. We kicked the doors open and it doesn't seem to be too bad," he said.

The SOU teams slashed tires on Myers' two cars to prevent him from escaping, and they stayed on guard all night trying to wait Myers out.

Members of special operations units from the Twin Falls police and sheriff's departments and Idaho State Police traded shifts throughout the night to keep officers on the lines fresh — and warm — Hanchey said.

About 6 a.m. officers put tear gas canisters into the apartment through two windows to force Myers out, Hanchey said.

Twin Falls Police Capt. Jim Munn said he decided to force Myers out because neighboring businesses were beginning to open up.

Meyers said he was in there for 20 minutes with the gas before he went out, Meyers said.

Myers came out of the apartment and officers talked him into lying down and surrendering, Hanchey said.

He did not know whether Myers carried a gun outside with him but said several weapons were found inside.

About 40 police officers from the three agencies were involved in the standoff, including six members of the police special operations team, 10 members of the sheriff's department SWAT team, four negotiators, Munn and sheriff's Lt. Dan Hall.

Officers used Haines Auto Electric, across the street from the standstill for a command post and also used Six States Distributors.

River

Lidell Noh, R-Kimberly. "It's kind of like pulling teeth to get even the main stems designated."

A single "no" vote from any of the committee's 12 members would sink Stennett's request.

"This isn't right for something that has gone through the hearing process and has all this energy and effort behind it," Stennett said Thursday.

"If it could be a majority vote, I think I could get it out of there. But when it takes only one person to kill it, well, that's a little more difficult," he said.

The debate over outstanding resource waters began in May, when the Idaho Conservation League proposed 68 creeks and rivers to the state Health and Welfare Board. In mid-September, the board winnowed the list to 18 — all in the Middle Fork and Selway watersheds — then conducted four public hearings around the state.

After that, the list was pared to seven and formally submitted to the Legislature.

"We felt all of these streams were important," said Bob Barlow, a Health and Welfare Board member from Pocatello. "We'd like to see those other five included because they are major streams and truly are outstanding resource waters."

That's the way it's supposed to work, said Mike Medberry, the Idaho Conservation League staffer who originally proposed the 68 rivers and streams.

"There shouldn't be any controversy over these, but there seems to be a lot of fear of additional regulations," Medberry said. "At this point, let's get the Selway and Middle Fork established and prove it didn't hurt."

Protection for clean rivers and streams is a contentious issue in Idaho, Noh said. He said he called the Health and Welfare list to minimize dissent and get to the two most obvious candidate rivers approved this year.

"We have so little time and we've failed on ORWs in the past," Noh said Thursday.

Even so, Noh said he has "run into a little static" from the timber industry over protection for the lower reaches of the Selway.

One veteran river conservationist said she's baffled what all the fuss is about.

"Why there is so much controversy over five little tributaries in wilderness areas is beyond me," said Wendy Wilson, executive director of Idaho Rivers United.

"A lot of good streams fell out of this process early on," Wilson said. "It's discouraging that Idaho only wants to protect wilderness rivers — and it doesn't want to designate any more wilderness."

ing U.S. Rep. Mike Crapo and U.S. Sens. Larry Craig and Dirk Kempthorne.

They cast their activity in Congress as a battle for freedom against forces who, as Crapo said, "want to go back to business as usual."

They pushed their agenda, including a balanced budget amendment, reform of the endangered species act, tax reform and reform of agencies such as the Bureau of Land Management — to enthusiastic applause.

Kempthorne, up for re-election next year, gave the keynote address.

Now working on the endangered species act reform, he said the responsibility for gauging the impact of a development project on endangered species would move from individuals to the federal government and provide balance.

"The greatest environmentalists I have ever met are the farmers and ranchers of Idaho," he said Thursday.

Earlier Thursday, Craig, Kempthorne and Crapo attended a GOP fund-raising luncheon at the Burley Best Western Inn.

Craig criticized the Clinton administration's "open hostility to the Idaho way of life" and cavalier attitude.

Kempthorne said he visited Good Creek Reservoir near Oley, where local officials are preparing for possible flooding.

Crapo said Congress will begin evaluating how to revamp the federal tax code, making it simpler and less costly to taxpayers while still allowing the federal budget to be balanced.

The freed but still dangerous convict: A puzzle for society

WASHINGTON (AP) — His hands stained with the blood of the woman he just killed, Lawrence Singleton is confronting America with a predicament: What to do about criminals who pay the price society imposes but still remain a danger.

The Supreme Court is asking the question, too. It was voiced in everyday terms by Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist two months ago: "What is the state supposed to do? Just wait until he goes out and does it again?"

In that case, "he" was Leroy Hendricks, an admitted pedophile, convicted five times of child molesting, his 10-year term now served. He has said there is no guarantee he won't commit new crimes against children.

The state of Kansas wants to keep Hendricks confined on the grounds he has a mental abnormality, although he has been found not to be mentally ill. The high court will rule soon.

Rehnquist's question is raised anew by the case of Singleton, accused of a gory killing in Florida and personifying the problem of what to do with repeat violent offenders who have served their time.

Singleton served eight years in California for raping a teenage hitchhiker and chopping off her arms. Californians raised a ruckus to get him out of their neighborhoods. He finally returned home to Florida and lived quietly for a year.

Neighbors in Tampa learned of his grisly past just weeks ago. When arrested Wednesday for stabbing a prostitute to death, he said, "I framed me the first time, but this time I did it."

Such incidents are all too common. In Georgia, a rapist sentenced to five life terms but released in 1983 after 14 years raped again in 1992. In Rochester, N.Y., Arthur Shawcross, who had killed two children 18 years earlier, was arrested in 1990 and convicted of strangling 11 women.

According to Princeton University professor John DeLallo, almost half of the country's 671,000 parolees and probationers are caught committing serious new offenses within three years.

Lawyer David Kuzneski has considered Rehnquist's question for years. Kuzneski has seen the criminal justice system from many sides: as a policeman, a prison guard, director of Massachusetts' police academy, now a criminal defense counsel and professor of criminal justice.

"No simplistic answer," he says. If society wants to protect itself from the violent sexual criminals, the best it can do is lock them up until they are over 30 years of age. As people age, they tend to control their rage. Singleton proved an exception, he's 69.

"Let them get old," Kuzneski said. "Essentially that's the answer. I am not aware of any treatment that has been particularly successful."

Counseling can work, but chiefly with children, before their criminal lives start, Kuzneski said. He notes a study that found that schoolyard bullies are more likely than other children to become violent criminals.

In search of a sure answer, 22 states and the federal government enacted three-strikes-and-you're-out laws. But a study by the Campaign for an Effective Crime Policy, made up of criminal justice officials who want more emphasis on crime prevention, questions the effectiveness.

It found no deterrent effect and said such laws may induce violence — causing a suspect to kill a policeman, for instance, to avoid incarceration on a third crime that could mean a life sentence.

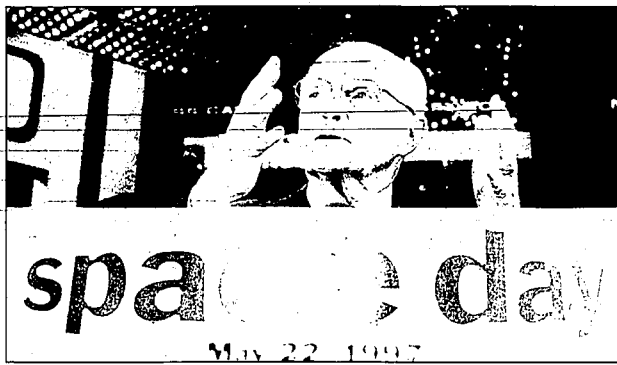

Another answer was "Megan's law," named after a 7-year-old New Jersey girl killed by a twice-convicted child molester. Such laws require sex offenders to identify themselves to law officers when they move into a neighborhood. In New Jersey, 3,500 have been registered.

The answer, says psychologist James Clark who runs the Mental Health Clinic for Socio-Legal Services in Monroe County, N.Y., is for society to spend more money than it's been willing.

Ask citizens if they'd rather see the potholes on their streets fixed or give mental treatment to prisoners, and they'll opt for fixing potholes, he said.

He's particularly harsh on plea bargaining, "a byproduct of the effort to contain costs." It results in light sentencing, he said. Short terms for first offenders, he insists, only invite repeat criminality.

"Hammer them hard up front," he advised. "We let people get away with too much misbehavior before we clonk them."

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, addresses students in the Challenger Learning Center at Jefferson Junior High School in Washington, D.C., Thursday on the 35th anniversary of his becoming the first American to orbit the Earth. Glenn, who will not seek a fifth term in the Senate, also announced plans for a nationwide Space Day on May 22, 1997.

Glenn announces this will be his last term in Senate

NEW CONCORD, Ohio (AP) — Thirty-five years to the day after becoming the first American in orbit, John Glenn announced Thursday he would not seek a fifth term in the U.S. Senate.

At a college chapel in the town where he grew up, the 75-year-old Democrat told supporters and students that although he wanted to continue to serve, "there is still no cure for the common birthday."

While some of his congressional colleagues have chosen to retire, Glenn said his initial reaction was to stay and fight.

"(But) although my health remains excellent ... another term in the senate would take me at the end of that term to the age of 83," he said. "For that reason and for that reason alone ... I have decided I will not be a candidate for re-election to the senate."

He briefly mentioned his three historic orbits and his military history but spent most of the hour-long speech urging the students to take an active role in government and society.

"As we enter a new century, we can ill afford the freedom-lovers of democracy — the selfish, self-absorbed political wolves who are content to carp, complain, criticize and destroy without offering any constructive help or ideas," he said.

Glenn was elected to the Senate in 1974 on a wave of popularity that followed his historic space mission. He has served four consecutive six-year terms.

He chose to return to New Concord to make the announcement.

"...there is still no cure for the common birthday."

— Sen. John Glenn

before a crowd of about 500 people at Muskingum College, as family and friends sat nearby. There were tears in the eyes of Glenn and his wife, Annie, after the speech.

Gov. George Voinovich, a Republican running for Glenn's seat, called him a "genuine American hero who has dedicated his life to serving our state and nation."

White House press secretary Mike McCurry, who worked for Glenn's failed 1984 presidential campaign, described him as "truly a fine person as well as an American hero and an American patriot."

It was Feb. 20, 1962, when Glenn circled the globe three times to allow the United States to catch up in the space race with the Soviets.

Glenn has said he yearns for another space flight but understands why that is unlikely.

"We're not around to the point yet where you just take people up for rides in space. It has to have a good scientific base and I back that," he said.

Before becoming an astronaut, Glenn not only learned to fly, but in 1957 broke the transcontinental air speed record, proving that jets could endure stress when pushed to maximum speeds over long distances.

In New York, he got a hero's welcome — a precursor to the massive ticker-tape parade to come after the 4-hour, 55-minute flight of "Friendship 7."

Glenn ran for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination, but the best he did was second-place in Alabama, and he was one of the first of that year's hopefuls to drop out.

In the Senate, Glenn has specialized in the nitty-gritty of how the government does — or botches — its work.

He counts among his proudest achievements a law that for the first time put a chief financial officer in every federal department. He also became an expert on nuclear weaponry and the military, and has been the Senate's most dogged advocate of nuclear non-proliferation.

Convicted rapist arrested for murder; communities respond, "I told you so"

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A neighbor walked over to Lawrence Singleton's door and saw precisely what Californians feared 10 years ago when they drove Singleton out of town.

There was Singleton, his face and chest covered with blood, a naked woman dead on the living room floor.

Singleton, 69, was arrested on murder charges Wednesday, a decade after being released from a California prison for raping a teenage hitchhiker and hacking her forearms off with an axe.

Back in California, people responded with a collective "I-told-you-so." In Florida, officials said they were angry that Singleton was out on their streets but said there was little they could have done to monitor him.

"It's a sad commentary on our criminal justice system that a person of this notoriety who has committed a crime this heinous is out on the streets," Sheriff L. David Cee said.

Singleton had registered as a felon when he moved to Tampa in 1988 and had been arrested three times on shoplifting charges. But keeping track of him would have been difficult, Cee said.

Singleton was paroled in 1987 after serving nearly 8 1/2 years of a 14-year sentence for the rape and dismemberment. His sentence had been reduced by good behavior and a claim that his eyes were overexposed. At the time, California officials said that under the law, they had little choice but to release him.

Lawrence Singleton, who served eight years in prison for the rape and mutilation of a teenage hitchhiker, is arrested in Tampa, Fla., Wednesday after the discovery of a bloodied body in his home.

He retreated to his home state of Florida after being driven from several Northern California communities where residents were angry and fearful at his release. After his arrival in Florida, neighbors protested and a car dealer offered him $5,000 to leave the state.

BLM challenges story about horses

WASHINGTON (AP) — A report that thousands of wild horses end up in slaughterhouses each year after adoption through a federal program is being denied by the Bureau of Land Management.

The agency, which administers the Interior Department program, said only about 350 horses from federally managed programs are sent to slaughterhouses each year.

The bureau's report, issued Wednesday, criticized an investigation of the horse-adoption program by The Associated Press.

"While any wild horse being sent to slaughter is regrettable, it is obvious that this is occurring to a far, far lesser degree than was alleged," said Bob Armstrong, an assistant interior secretary.

The agency said Wednesday it began investigating claims of widespread slaughter after the AP reported that about 90 percent of the horses rounded up — several thousand each year — go to slaughter.

The BLM also challenged a claim that its employees were among those profiting from the slaughter.

William E. Ahearn, vice president and executive editor, said the AP stands by its report.

An AP computer analysis found more than 200 current BLM employees who adopted more than 600 wild horses and burros. Several of these employees, when contacted, acknowledged their horses were sent to meatpacking plants.

But the Bureau of Land Management said its review of records found only one bureau employee in the last two years who sold a horse that ultimately went to a slaughterhouse. It said it found no evidence of unethical behavior or that the employee profited.

"Our employees who adopt wild horses and burros do so because they love the animals, and I can say with confidence that they represent some of our very best adopters," said Sylvia Baca, the BLM interim director.

Air Force settles into Saudi desert

Terrorism still poses real threat

PRINCE SULTAN AIR BASE, Saudi Arabia (AP) — The U.S. Air Force is hunkering down behind 64 miles of 8-foot fence, tons of barbed wire and a long stretch of scorpion-and-snake desert to escape the threat of terrorism in Saudi Arabia.

Eight months after 19 of their comrades were killed in the bombing of high-rise apartments in eastern Saudi Arabia, more than 4,000 Air Force men and women are settled into a gritty, "dusty city" of 700 tan-colored tents where security may be tighter than at any military base in the world.

Even the latrines get "security" handling. Sewage tank trucks from outside are not allowed to penetrate the base perimeter, so on-base tankers must empty the latrines and transfer their contents to civilian trucks miles away at the fence.

Incoming fuel and water are handled the same way because of the fear of truck bombs, tying up dozens of trucks and scores of Air Force security police who escort them.

"We don't do anything for convenience or efficiency," base commander Brig. Gen. Daniel M. Dick said.

In fact, despite the cable TV and the Burger King trailer, the base operation could hardly be more inconvenient.

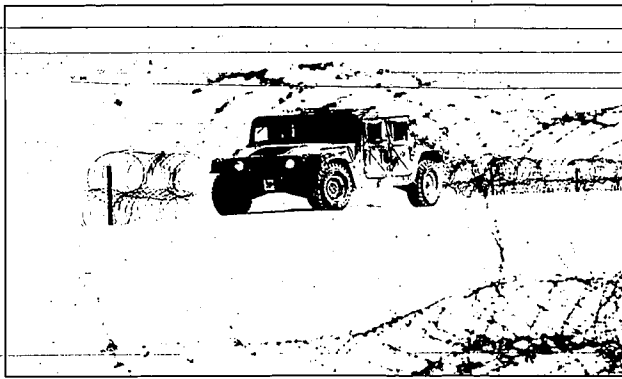

Airmen are assigned for short, three-month tours of hardship duty, depriving Dick of anything but a tiny cadre of experienced "Prince Sultan hands." And then, about 10 percent of the personnel are dedicated full-time to security, a force multiplied by fake defense positions, dummy patrol vehicles and a platoon of bomb-sniffing dogs.

"The cocoon is reassuring to many."

"I'm concerned, but more for my family than for myself. I see the security that's here, but they don't," said Staff Sgt. John McCarthy, 27, of Elmira, N.Y.

McCarthy, on his fourth Saudi tour, thinks that's true every day. He was injured in last June's blast at the Khobar Towers high rise.

"It was hard to explain to my 6-year-old boy why I was going back. All he knows is that 'Daddy' is going to Saudi again," McCarthy said.

The June bombing, evidently bent on driving the U.S. military from Saudi Arabia, remains unsolved. Within two months, the Air Force was mounting a 45-day emergency move in which 78 aircraft and 25,000 tons of equipment were consolidated here from two air bases — at Dhahran, near Khobar, and at the Saudi Capital, Riyadh.

The move cost the United States $150 million. This air base covers one-tenth of the area of a barely developed 250-square-mile Saudi military site, 80 miles south of Riyadh. Near the edge of the forbidding Empty Quarter desert, the air-conditioned tents will be challenged by summer temperatures climbing to 118 degrees.

The F-15s, F-16s and other planes in Dick's Air Wing, the 4404th Provisional, fly 200 sorties every day over southern Iraq, enforcing the "no-fly zone" ban on Iraqi war planes in the region.

But Dick, an energetic, compactly built F-16 pilot, places another mission at the top of his agenda here.

"Force protection — it's obviously 'job one' for us," he said. An initial Pentagon investigation of the Khobar blast suggested Dick's predecessor had not given "force protection" sufficient priority. The attackers were able to park their bombladen truck too close to the air force quarters. Here, the complex's outer fence lies no closer than three miles to the inner perimeter encircling the American-manned air base.

In a guard tower overlooking that tabletop stretch of sand,

'I'm concerned, but more for my family than for myself. I see the security that's here, but they don't.'

— Staff Sgt. John McCarthy, 27, of Elmira, N.Y.

Above, a U.S. Air Force vehicle drives toward the highly secured entrance of the Prince Sultan Air Base in Al Khafj, Saudi Arabia, Tuesday. Because of the threat of terrorism, the Air Force has lined the base with 30 miles of concertina wire and employed sophisticated security systems to protect the more than 4,400 military personnel based there. They were moved to this isolated base following last June's terrorist attack in Khobar, which killed 19 Americans. At left, a U.S. Air Force security police officer scans the Saudi Arabian desert outside the Prince Sultan Air Base at Al Khafj Tuesday.

Airman 1st Class Vince Flango told a reporter that after the desert sun drops, all he picks up with his night-vision equipment is mice and wild dogs scampering over the windswept landscape.

"Terrorists are cowards," said the Williamsburg, Va., native. "They're not going to attack a well-secured area."

Dick agreed. "I honestly believe that every day we're not attacked we're closer to the next attack. But I don't think it will be here."

He acknowledged, however, that his standoff space still leaves his troops vulnerable to attack by the kind of battlefield rockets that Lebanese guerrillas use to terrorize northern Israel.

"It is always a potential," he said — if such rockets can be smuggled into Saudi Arabia. Asked whether the air base has any way to detect and warn of such an attack, the general replied matter-of-factly in the affirmative: "When the first one lands."

NATION IN BRIEF

AFL-CIO wants to boost regional councils

LOS ANGELES — The AFL-CIO launched a program Thursday designed to increase the community involvement of regional and local labor councils while expanding grass-roots recruiting.

The labor union's executive council also approved a pilot program to burnish labor's public image with television ads targeted at cities where grass-roots organizing is at its strongest.

The "Union Cities" plan provides an eight-step program to increase the role of the 600 state and local federation councils, which in many cases have become bureaucracies with minimal contact with rank-and-file union members.

Judge won't throw out testimony

DENVER — A federal judge Thursday refused to throw out eyewitness testimony in the Oklahoma City bombing case, saying questions over why they changed their stories over the last two years should be left to a jury.

Defense attorneys had asked that key witnesses be excluded from the trial, or limited in their testimony. The witnesses included the two men who rented out a Ryder truck used in the April 1995 bombing.

"Nothing here says it's unfair to say to 12 jurors, 'Tell us what you think,'" U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch said.

The decision followed three days of testimony from FBI agents and six eyewitnesses, who claim they saw Terry Nichols and Timothy McVeigh in the months leading up to the bombing. McVeigh's trial is set to begin March 31.

Diplomat charged in crash surrenders

WASHINGTON — A Georgian diplomat surrendered to police Thursday and was charged with involuntary manslaughter for the high-speed car crash last month that killed a 16-year-old girl.

Georgui Malkharadze, 35, the second-ranking diplomat at the Republic of Georgia's embassy in Washington, also was charged with four counts of aggravated assault in the five-car accident on a busy downtown street Jan. 3.

The government of the former Soviet republic notified the State Department last week that it was waiving diplomatic immunity in the case. But Georgian officials may ask that he be allowed to serve any jail sentence in his homeland.

NEA: Pay kept up with inflation

WASHINGTON — Teachers earned an average salary of $37,685 in 1995-1996, keeping slightly ahead of overall inflation, a national teachers' union said Thursday.

The salary was 3 percent higher than in 1994-1995, while inflation was 2.7 percent, the National Education Association said. Despite the average increase, salaries fell in North Carolina by 1.2 percent and in Hawaii by 7 percent.

Salaries fell in Hawaii because of an early retirement program that reduced the number of older, more highly paid teachers. The report did not explain the drop in North Carolina salaries.

Salaries rose 5.1 percent over the decade, after accounting for inflation, the report said. However, pay rose faster than inflation in 34 states over that period but fell in 16 states and the District of Columbia when adjusted for inflation.

Panel: Study medicinal marijuana

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — Sparse but promising evidence indicates smoking marijuana may ease the suffering of some seriously ill patients, but more study is needed before the drug's medical value is understood, a panel of experts said Thursday.

At a news conference interrupted repeatedly by pro-marijuana demonstrators, the experts assembled by the National Institutes of Health spoke of intriguing hints that marijuana smoking helps some patients with cancer, AIDS or glaucoma. But they cautioned there is little hard scientific evidence.

Although a final committee report is not complete, "the general mood was that for some indications, there is a rationale for looking further into the therapeutic effects of marijuana," said Dr. William T. Beaver, a professor of pharmacology at Georgetown University School of Medicine and the panel's chairman.

The eight-member committee appeared at a news conference after two days of hearings during which members reviewed the scientific literature on medical use of smoked marijuana and heard from other experts.

Dr. Alan Leshner, head of the National Institute of Drug Abuse, organized the meeting after California and Arizona enacted state laws that allow medical uses of marijuana.

Those state laws also prompted White House drug czar Barry McCaffrey to issue a warning that doctors who prescribe marijuana could lose their federal authority to prescribe medicine.

Judge sentences men in black church fires

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Two former Ku Klux Klansmen were sentenced to nearly 20 years in prison Thursday for burning down two black churches.

U.S. District Judge David Norton sentenced Gary Christopher Cox, 23, to 19 years and Timothy Adam Welch, 24, to 18 years. They had pleaded guilty to civil rights violations in the June 1995 fires.

The men used a cigarette lighter to set items on fire at the Mount Zion A.M.E. Church in Greeleyville. The next day, they ignited gasoline and oil on the floor of the Macedonia Baptist Church in Bloomville.

Albright pushes expansion

MOSCOW (AP) — Secretary of State Madeleine Albright tried to convince Russian leaders Thursday expansion of NATO eastward in the next two years would pose no threat to Moscow.

"We established a working relationship," she said after seeing Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin and Foreign Minister Yevgeny Primakov. A meeting with President Boris Yeltsin was scheduled Friday.

Albright also outlined proposals for linking Russia to NATO with a charter and reducing ceilings imposed under a 1990 treaty on Western tanks and other weaponry deployed in Europe. She also has proposed a joint Russian-NATO military brigade.

In an exchange with reporters, Albright declined to criticize Russia's response to the conciliatory package.

But Russia's deputy national security adviser, Boris Beresnevsky, in a magazine article, said the planned NATO expansion would put the Western allies on the verge of a second major geopolitical disaster of the century. He likened it to the West's failure to support Russia's attempted political reform in the World War I era and the resulting lurch to communism.

Former-Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, writing in the Italian newspaper La Stampa, warned that NATO expansion would endanger security in all Europe.

The implementation of NATO's expansion will antagonize Russian society and set it against the West once again," Gorbachev said.

And Gennady Seleznyov, speaker of the Russian Parliament, said "NATO is a remnant of the Cold War." His remarks were carried by the Interfax news agency.

During the two-day trip to Moscow, the sixth stop in an nine-country around the world trip, Albright also planned to appeal for approval by the Russian Parliament of the START II treaty, which sharply reduces long-range U.S. and Russian nuclear missiles.

Hong Kong to hang on to old administration

HONG KONG (AP) — Hong Kong received a powerful confidence boost Thursday with the announcement that virtually all its top civil servants will stay in office after China takes over on July 1.

Although unconnected with the death Wednesday of Deng Xiaoping, the announcement is a timely one. It is likely to have a calming effect on those in Hong Kong who fear instability now that Deng, architect of Hong Kong's return to China, is dead.

The fate of the 23 top officials in the outgoing British colonial administration had aroused intense guesswork and fears that those seen as out of step with Beijing's thinking would be fired.

Hong Kong's future leader, Tung Chee-hwa, visited Beijing on Wednesday to seek its endorsement of his chances, and the list he disclosed showed only two departures: Attorney General Jeremy Mathews and Michael Leung, head of the Independent Commission Against Corruption.

Ex-enemies find common ground

TUZLA, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Defying leaders who want to entrench Bosnia's ethnic divisions, some Muslim, Croat and Serb refugee groups are pursuing a common goal together: go home.

More than a year after the Dayton peace accord was signed, few of the hundreds of thousands of refugees have been able to return to their homes. Often, resentment by other refugees would make them a minority in their hometowns.

Many who tried to go home have been physically blocked and intimidated. Some have been attacked and had their houses burned.

The Coalition for Return, established by nearly 50 refugee groups in late November, is the first attempt to bypass authorities and develop a grassroots organization that cuts across ethnic lines.

"This was just people who deep down in their heart want to return home," said Haridza Hren, president of the Tuza-based Women of Srebrenica refugee group. She attended the first meeting of the coalition in Mostar, the second is scheduled to be held in Tuza from Saturday through Tuesday.

"Before, I could not even think of talking to Serbs from across the border," she said. "But now, if we want to go home, we need to talk, to build trust. The politicians have to realize that the civilians can agree."

At the coalition's first local and regional meetings, refugees from opposite sides of the front lines "were not talking to each other," said Ismet Sehalic of the Sarajevo-based Justice Displaced Persons Association.

The coalition was the brainchild of Carl Bildt, the international official in charge of implementing civilian aspects of the peace accord. He has been frustrated by the refusal to let people return to their homes.

Higher ed picks up extra cash

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's universities and Lewis-Clark State College, long an afterthought when state aid is being doled out, picked up extra cash Thursday in a rare departure from penny-pinching legislative budget writers.

The Joint Finance Appropriations Committee approved state support of $178.6 million for the current year's budget, but that was slashed to $173.5 million more than Gov. Phil Batt proposed in his bare-bones spending blueprint but still nearly $14 million less than the state Board of Education requested.

Lawmakers originally earmarked just over $178 million for higher education in the current year's budget, but that was slashed to $173.5 million to keep the state out of the red.

"This is a little bit kinder to the universities. But even with this, we're still falling behind in funding higher education," Democratic Rep. Ken Robison of Boise said. "It's still basically no increase."

The recommendation, which still faces votes in the full House and Senate, also is $500,000 higher than the budget target legislative leaders set. That was part of their crusade to trim at least $10 million from the $1.43 billion general tax budget Batt proposed, based on what they fear is an overly optimistic revenue forecast.

"We just dropped half a million dollars into the hole," Senate Finance Chairman Artwell Perry of Melba said. "But we'll pick that up in the capital budget" for state construction. Those are the final spending decisions the committee makes.

The budget committee also added $200,000 to Batt's proposal for the University of Idaho approval cultural extension and research program to cover critical needs in the aftermath of three consecutive years of severe cutbacks.

Within less than an hour, the 20-member panel did slash $2.9 million for technological improvements from a Health and Welfare Department program aimed at helping the developmentally and mentally disabled become self-sufficient.

That cash, however, instead was earmarked for the state's share of a major federal safe drinking water delivery loan program. Over six years the state will put up about $20 million and get $100 million in federal funds to underwrite water system improvements throughout the state.

Endorsement of the above-target support package for higher education came a day after the Board of Education authorized the University of Idaho, Idaho State University, Boise State University and Lewis-Clark State to seek student fee increases of up to 15 percent.

"They definitely have a major problem and we need to help them solve it," Superintendent of Public Instruction Anne Fox said. Declining state support and increasing student demands have fueled the need to raise more cash from students. In the last 20 years, the four schools' share of general tax receipts has plunged from more than 19 percent to barely 12 percent.

Meanwhile, budget writers jettisoned Batt's proposal for more than $1.1 million to help close the gap between Idaho faculty salaries and those in other states. They earlier eliminated all state employee pay increases from the 1998 budget at a total savings of some $10 million in general tax funds.

But the panel approved $1.5 million for special higher education projects, another $1.2 million for schools before tax cuts would enrollment increases and 25 percent more money than the governor recommended for classroom renovation and improvements.

U.S. drug czar Barry McCaffrey visits Pioneer Community Center in Boise. He talks with 5-year-old Sarah Greeley of Boise about what she has learned about drugs at the center.

Drug chief praises mayors' control plan

BOISE (AP) — The director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy on Thursday called a U.S. Conference of Mayors drug plan "tremendously helpful, no-nonsense, focused on the real problems."

Retired Army Gen. Barry McCaffrey said the draft plan developed by a task force led by Boise Mayor Brent Coles and Gary, Ind., Mayor Scott King mirrors his own emphasis on attacking the problem of young people on drugs.

McCaffrey met with Coles and representatives of King and Chicago Mayor Richard Daley, president of the Conference of Mayors, after visiting local community drug prevention programs on Wednesday.

He applauded the mayors' National Action Plan to Control Drugs, and said it would take their leadership and local programs focused on education and treatment to make the Clinton administration's own campaign work.

"We are committed completely to a non-drugged America. But I think at the end of the day it's not going to be solved in Washington, D.C. It's going to be solved in Gary, Indiana, in Boise and Chicago," McCaffrey said. "The mayors can't hide. They have to deal with this issue."

Even with 3.6 million Americans addicted to drugs, McCaffrey said the nation has made major strides overall in the past decade. "But all this will be washed away if we don't focus on our children."

Among eighth-graders alone, drug abuse has nearly tripled in recent years, he said, making it critical for the federal government and local leaders to get behind programs like those he saw in Boise.

He touted the administration's request for a 5-percent increase in funding for drug control efforts, including a 2.2-percent hike in the amount allocated for youth drug programs. And while more than half the anti-drug money now is spent on law enforcement and prisons, "we're going to have to put more money where the priorities are," including treatment and prevention.

On Wednesday, McCaffrey toured the Pioneer Neighborhood Center, which is used by 150 children for recreation and houses Boise's Community-Oriented Police program. The center is sponsored by the city and the Departments of Justice and Housing and Urban Development.

He also visited a Parents and Youth Against Drug Abuse class. The education program for elementary school students and their parents is sponsored by local law enforcement agencies.

"This is an astonishing local commitment to addressing the problem," McCaffrey said. "It will pay off, but it takes time."

The seven-point Conference of Mayors plan is expected to be finalized this spring. It calls for preventing drug use among youths, expanding treatment availability, strengthening enforcement measures, paying more attention to the threat of methamphetamine, expanding the private sector's role in drug abuse prevention, improving cooperation between government agencies and declining illegal drugs a major foreign policy concern.

Local option proposal not killed, but wounded

BOISE (AP) — The House tax committee did not kill a proposal for five cities local option taxing authority, but it might as well have.

The Revenue and Taxation Committee listened Thursday to Scott McDonald, executive director for the Association of Idaho Cities, explained a plan to allow cities to levy a sales tax up to 1 percent.

He seemed to have little support on the committee, but members could not bring themselves to kill the proposal. Instead, they voted 12-8 to delay action until several other local option bills also have been heard.

Rep. Dolores Crow, R-Nampa, was among those objecting to the move.

"We have heard them. We are just delaying the agony," she said. "If you hold these for two weeks, you are effectively killing them anyway."

Thursday was the 46th day of the legislative session. Leaders hope to adjourn March 14 — just eight days after Revenue and Taxation would take up the local option bill under the action proposed by Rep. Mark Stubbs, R-Twin Falls.

Idaho's cities and counties have come to the Legislature for more than 20 years seeking more authority to levy taxes, but have gotten very little backing from lawmakers. McDonald passed out a report Thursday showing local ranks last among the states in discretionary local authority.

The cities' bill would have required support from 60 percent of the schools before tax could be imposed, and it would have been in effect for no more than 10 years.

McDonald said at least half the new revenue would be dedicated to reducing property taxes. But opponents argued that it actually would be only a tax shift.

"Our members adamantly oppose local option taxes," said Pete Skamser, lobbyist for the National Federation of Independent Businesses. "This is the wrong direction for you to go."

Rep. Tim Ridinger, R-Shoshone, asked Skamser if his members wanted property taxes cut.

"Yes, as long as it is not just a shift," Skamser said. "The only real property tax reduction is a smaller government."

Draft report for Yellowstone winter use due out in March

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — Snowmobiling and other winter use issues in Yellowstone and Grand Teton national parks will be included in a draft report due out next month, according to Yellowstone chief planner John Sacklin.

The report is a response, in part, to unanticipated growth of automobile use in the parks in the late 1980s. Yellowstone figures show snowmobiling was responsible for 70,000 visitor use days in 1994. That more than doubled to 143,000 visitor use days in 1994-95.

In response to the increased use, planners launched a coordinated effort with six surrounding national forests in 1994 to review long-term goals for winter visitor use. The total area covers 12.5 million acres.

Planners and snowmobilers agree that limited use of the park will result in increased snowmobiling in adjacent forests.

Sacklin said the report will analyze those issues as they affect the parks and six surrounding forests, and the analysis will be released for public comment. Then, he said, recommendations or possible changes will be proposed.

One possibility is a recommendation for limited use. "We all recognize there's a limit on the number of people who can enjoy the park at one time," Sacklin said.

Neighbors snap up Fuhrman's book

SANDPOINT (AP) — A book by their infamous neighbor has become a best-seller here.

Within two hours, the shelves at Tom Vandorf's two bookstores here were stripped of Mark Fuhrman's new book. "The movers can't hide. They have to deal with this issue."

Even with 3.6 million Americans addicted to drugs, McCaffrey said the nation has made major strides overall in the past decade. "But all this will be washed away if we don't focus on our children."

Among eighth-graders alone, drug abuse has nearly tripled in recent years, he said, making it critical for the federal government and promptly ordered another 140 books.

"We got calls as soon as we opened, and everything on the shelves was spoken for by 11 a.m.," Vandorf said.

"It's the earliest I've ever sold out of a book. We thought it would be a good seller but were a bit surprised it went that fast."

"I think a lot of people are interested because he lives here," Vandorf said. "There has been so much publicity about Mark and a lot felt he was crucified by the press, so they are real curious to see what he has to say."

"He has kept silent and this book is his chance to tell his story. Of those who have come into the store, almost everyone has been very pro-Mark Fuhrman."

Fuhrman was labeled a racist cop during Simpson's criminal trial after a tape was played of him using racial slurs. It was the detective who found the bloody glove at Simpson's estate and later was accused of planting evidence to frame Simpson.

Fuhrman quit the Los Angeles police force and moved to Sandpoint, where he has worked as an apprentice electrician while writing his book.

All sides gather to study ways to protect, restore aquatic ecosystems

PHOENIX (AP) — To botanist Duncan Patten, enough is enough. The West's insatiable consumption of water for irrigation, industry and drinking has altered the course of many rivers and watersheds for decades with dams and canals.

Yet this unfettered use is killing off the native animals and plants that depend on natural river flows, jeopardizing the water's quality and usefulness for future generations.

"We need to start operating our dams and channels to mimic the natural systems as much as possible," said Patten, a professor at Montana State University. "The bottom line here is clean water. It's time that we concern ourselves with the other passengers on this planet."

Although Patten's feelings are nothing new, there is a growing consensus among environmentalists, scientists and government officials that the West's current water-use policies are destroying the region's aquatic ecosystems and setting the stage for economic and ecological reckoning.

Patten was one of several experts who participated Monday and Tuesday in a symposium at Arizona State University, bringing together all sides to examine the growing problem and figure out possible solutions.

The symposium was sponsored by the Western Water Policy Review Advisory Commission, which Congress created in 1995 to perform a comprehensive review of federal laws and activities in 19 western states. The commission, looking to streamline a hodgepodge of water management policies, will issue a report to the Clinton administration in October.

"There is a direct connection between water quality and water quantity," said Donald Glaser, the commission's executive director. "Yet they are managed separately in the West."

But Glaser noted that "there is trend among government agencies toward collective decision making."

Western states until the last decade viewed water as an unlimited commodity to be tamed and exploited to provide the booming region with cheap electricity and water for crops.

Dennis Fort, an associate professor of law at the University of Mexico Law School and the commission's chairwoman, said federal and state laws, or the lack thereof, have intensified the problem. "The lack of appropriate land-use policies can be traced to the lack of regulations," she said.

But that way of thinking has begun to change, perhaps manifested in the passage of the federal Endangered Species Act and other landmark laws or in concerns about the degradation of the ecosystem in the highly altered lower Colorado River system.

"The question is whether we can maintain natural environments and native species and at the same time sustain development in the foreseeable future," said W.L. Minckley, a professor of zoology at ASU and the symposium's coordinator. "We're talking about grand kids and great-grand kids."

Maintaining a healthy aquatic ecosystem is seen as a frontline defense in ensuring proper water quality and usefulness.

Patten said the root systems of trees and vegetation along river banks help control soil erosion and filter pollutants such as fertilizer or animal waste runoff.

Nutrient pollution from nitrogen, or waste runoff, causes massive algae blooms, which use up oxygen needed by plants and fish and block sunlight that underwaters grasses must have to grow.

"You get a shift in the composition," said Patten. "Exotic species come in and the native ones die off. We have to be concerned about these critters."

Federal and state officials agree that their departments can do more, but they say hundreds of millions of dollars are already being spent each year to protect and restore aquatic ecosystems.

"There is a lot of pragmatism involved," said Bob Walsh, a spokesman with the Bureau of Reclamation's Lower Colorado

Regional Office. "We are waking up to the realization that we need to protect our water."

Duane Shroufe, director of Arizona Game and Fish Department, presented a report to the symposium noting that his state has several programs to protect and restore aquatic plant and animal life. He said several native fish such as the razorback sucker and the bonytail have been reintroduced to the Colorado River.

What about solutions? Shroufe and others want cooperative watershed planning.

"By understanding and respecting the interests of all entities we are better able to make tradeoffs and are more likely to reach an implementable solution," Shroufe said.

Dan Beard, senior vice president of the National Audubon Society and former commissioner of the Bureau of Reclamation, said the solution is money to perhaps "retrofit" the existing system of dams and canals.

"We built these systems and we built them wrong," he said. "There is substantial support to go back and correct what we destroyed."

Mud and pollutants pour into the lower Boise River from Mason Creek near Caldwell.

Man rewarded for tuning in Yellowstone poacher

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — A Salt Lake City taxidermist has received a $7,500 reward for turning in the poacher who killed a well-known elk in Yellowstone National Park over three years ago.

Park Superintendent Michael Finley said most of the money is from the $10,000 in restitution the poacher was ordered to pay for taking the eight-by-six-point bull known as Charger.

Chad Beus, 24, of Salt Lake City was convicted of killing the elk near Norris Junction in mid-September 1993.

"He hacked out the animal's skullcap and antlers and left the carcass on the bank of the Gibbon River," Finley said. Norman Joe Shafer contacted investigators after Beus brought the elk's antlers to Shafer to have them mounted. Finley said Shafer recognized the antlers from a magazine article.

Beus was convicted of misdemeanor poaching and felony witness tampering in U.S. District Court two years ago. He was fined $20,000 in addition to the $10,000 in restitution.

"The tampering charge involved his attempt to bribe his companion to take responsibility for killing the animal."

Finley said the rest of the reward money was donated by several organizations and individuals.

Man charged in wife's drug overdose death

WALLA WALLA, Wash. (AP) — A College Place man has been charged with controlled substance homicide for allegedly giving his wife methamphetamine last month.

Robert J. Middleworth, 51, was charged Tuesday in Walla Walla County Superior Court. Bail was set at $50,000.

Joylee L. Middleworth, 29, became ill on Jan. 5, allegedly after the two split about a quarter gram of methamphetamine.

Middleworth called 911 when his wife complained of a severe headache and she was rushed to Walla Walla General Hospital.

Prosecutors say Middleworth told medical personnel and police that the couple injected some "crystal meth."

Woman injured when car hits patch of ice

GOODING - A Twin Falls woman was injured when her 1994 car was out of control and wrecked Thursday morning. Idaho State Police say Ruth Young, 53, was driving north on Highway 46 at about 10:20 a.m. when she crashed. Young's Jeep crashed a hill about three miles south of the Camas County line, hit a patch of ice, went out of control and rolled, the police report said. Young was taken to Gooding County Memorial Hospital, treated for injuries and released Thursday afternoon. The report said Young was wearing a seat belt.

Students encouraged to sign up for annual award

TWIN FALLS - This year's Idaho Congressional Awards ceremony is over, but students are encouraged to sign up now for the program for next year's festivities, program organizers say. Politicians, parents and school officials honored 19 Twin Falls area students Wednesday during a glittery ceremony at Vera C. O'Leary Junior High School.

This year's recipients of bronze medals are Kim Zigich, Rachel Webb, Laura Wells, Nicole Chestnut, Angela Katona, Jana Newbury, Toni Christensen, Lindsey Wagner and Jennifer Moore, all students of Vera C. O'Leary Junior High School; and Alec Rupp-Smith, Kristina Sorensen, Rachel Jenny, Courtney Fisher, Natalie Hobbs, Haley Hodges, Erin Micink, Erin Whitney and Shelby Sommer, all students of Twin Falls High School. Meredith Taylor, a Kimberly High School student, won a silver medal.

To qualify for a bronze medal, students age 14 to 24 must complete at least 100 hours of community service, an overnight exploration, 50 hours of fitness work and 50 hours of personal achievement. Higher goals are required for the silver and gold medals.

Interested students may call Willey Dobbs, Vera C. O'Leary Junior High School principal, at 733-2155. Or write to Idaho Congressional Awards, P.O. Box 663, Boise, Idaho 83701.

Mix 103 and McDonald's set French fry festivities

TWIN FALLS - Mix 103 and McDonald's will give away a ton of French fries at 1:30 a.m. Saturday at the McDonald's store on the corner of Blue Lakes boulevard-North and Pole Line Road. Two-pound bags of fries will be given to the first 1,000 people.

Mix 103 has been following the reports of profits at Lamb's location and Simpson this week. Wednesday morning, the disc jockeys said that if everyone would eat a few more French fries, it might help some people get back to work. The response was overwhelming - from potato farmers and workers in the processing industry and from listeners logging to eat a few extra fries this week. Businesses have called to offer special promotions to boost French fry sales, a news release said.

LabMont Summers of Mix 103 said listeners told the station that an increase in consumption ultimately helps food processors and potato farmers.

For more information, call Summers at Mix 103 at 324-8181.

Neighbors file appeal against dairy approval

JEROME - Two neighbors of a proposed dairy north of Jerome have decided to take their case against the dairy to Jerome County commissioners. Frances Deahl and Tom and Carmen Logan filed an appeal Thursday against the county planning and zoning commission's decision to support the plans of dairy farmer area Franco.

Planning and Zoning Administrator Art Brown approved the dairy last year and contends that Franco's plans meet all local zoning requirements.

But Deahl and the Logans filed an appeal against Brown's decision in November 1996. The matter was brought before the planning commission for a hearing last month. The planning commission ruled to uphold Brown's approval of a 40-acre dairy with a 2,500-cow maximum proposed by Franco.

The county commission will set another hearing, and both Franco and the protestors will again have a chance to tell their side of the story, Brown said. However, either party can introduce evidence that wasn't used in the first hearing, he said.

If either party is dissatisfied with the county commission's decision, the matter can be taken to district court, Brown said.

Stradley faces charges of lewd conduct

By Kent McCleary
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A Twin Falls man once acquitted of murdering a child by abuse now faces charges of lewd and lascivious conduct with children.

Donnell "Bud" Stradley, 33, was indicted Feb. 13 by a Twin Falls County grand jury on two counts of lewd and lascivious conduct, and was arrested that night, said Twin Falls County

'Bud' Stradley

Prosecutor Rich Bevan. The charge carries a maximum penalty of life in prison. The charges against Stradley relate to his conduct with two girls, ages 6 and 9, whom he baby-sat, Bevan said. Twin Falls police started investigating Stradley on the allegations in November, Bevan said.

Stradley was arraigned Monday, but the hearing has been continued until March 8 at the request of his attorney, public defender John Olson, for time to review the charges. "We asked for two weeks to get a transcript of the grand jury proceedings," Olson said. "He'll want to go through that transcript with a fine-tooth comb," Bevan said. "He asked for two weeks, but it's been taking six weeks, so it could be longer until Stradley is arraigned." Meanwhile, Stradley is being held in Twin Falls County jail on $25,000 bond. Olson said it's too early to say how Stradley might plead. "We're just investigating the case now. We're still in an early stage." Stradley was charged with first-degree murder in the Jan. 20, 1992, death of 2-year-old Amanda Hostetter. # Airport unveils artist's mural in progress

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - "Art in Progress," reads the sign attached to the mural Gary Stone is painting at the Twin Falls airport. It refers to Stone's Magic Valley Mural Project, but it's really the theme of Stone's life.

The celebrated Kimberly artist began working on his current project in January 1996. He would paint airplanes on the airport ceiling, and a cedar-and-acrylic mural along a 42-foot wall of the new terminal building. He expected to complete the project last summer.

"That's the way these things go," said Stone Thursday, as he pointed to unfinished areas of his art in progress. "I think I'll just say I don't know when it will be done."

The mural, 9 feet high with wood-cut, three-dimensional mountains, is a project that would have cost more than $40,000 in normal commission fees, Stone said. But when he decided to fund the project with community support - and without taxpayer money or grants - he ended up donating a sizable chunk of his time and talent.

For a fee, he has been painting family and business names into the mural. He's also painting in people, events and sites - hidden or in full view, depending on the fee.

When he began his work at the airport, he was doing most of his painting on his back, Michelangelo-style. After he finished painting the acrylic airplanes on the ceiling (everything from helicopters to crop dusters to a B2 Bomber), he was able to start working right side up.

Stone still is adding to the Magic Valley mural which fills a 42-foot wall inside the airport's terminal.

Want to know more?
For more information about being included in the Magic Valley Mural Project? Call 423-4355 or 1-800-743-8193.

But that doesn't mean the work itself is right side up.

"I purposely painted the Snake River Canyon going in the wrong direction and other things grouped together, but kind of mixed up," Stone said. "I want it to be Magic Valley all one and happy - not one thing over here and one thing over there."

He added with a smile, "It's my own little statement."

The theme of the mural is "The History of Transportation in the Magic Valley," with an emphasis on early-day history.

There are Stanley and Sun Valley, the City of Rocks, Shoshone, Jerome, Rock Creek, Glenns Ferry and Three Island Crossing. There are Indians along the Oregon Trail, and even a little Jackpot, Nev.

"I think I'm the first to define boundaries in the Magic Valley," said Stone, chuckling.

Burley and Rupert are yet to come. Right now, Stone is hiding bears in hillsides. He's also adding a little portrait of himself in a tree trunk - a trademark of sorts.

He will soon put more people into his scenes, "to make them come alive." Eventually, there will be a booklet explaining the history of the Magic Valley.

Meanwhile, visitors seem content to view Stone's art in progress.

Last week, on a day when several charter planes were due to leave for Sun Valley, Stone turned around and was startled to see about 250 people behind him, watching his every brushstroke.

Shortly before that, he got actor Bruce Willis "all signed up," so that Willis' newly purchased Soldier Mountain can be part of the mural.

Gary Stone has put heart and soul into the mural at the Twin Falls airport - his profile is there, as well.

In between stints at the airport, Stone and his wife, Bev, are involved in an interpretive center under construction at Montpelier. The couple's Oregon Trail books are being used as a theme for the center.

Then someday, when Stone's mural is no longer in progress, he will move on to mural project stage two.

"This is the first mural of a series of mural to be done for the Chamber of Commerce in the Twin Falls area," said Stone, noting that a number of artists will paint historical murals on the sides of Magic Valley buildings.

But that comes later - and Stone isn't being impatient.

"Right now," he said, picking up his paintbrush, "I'm mostly just having fun."

Longtime staff member gets top ISDB job

The Associated Press

BOISE - Ronald Darcy, interim superintendent since James Rainier died of a heart attack last summer, has been appointed superintendent of the Idaho State School for the Deaf and Blind in Gooding.

The state Board of Education voted unanimously Thursday to appoint Darcy to the $69,000-a-year job. He was chosen from among five finalists interviewed this week after a nationwide search.

"We're very enthusiastic about the job Mr. Darcy has done as interim superintendent at the school," board President Carole McWilliam of Postlelone said. "We were also impressed by his excellent track record as an administrator and the strong support for him among those served by the school."

Besides serving hearing and visually impaired students on the Gooding campus, the school also conducts an outreach program that provides assistance to public schools throughout Idaho.

Before being named interim superintendent, Darcy had been the school's director of outreach programs since 1980. During the 1970s he worked at the Montana School for the Deaf and Blind, first as a teacher and then as an administrator and principal.

Early in his career he held several teaching and coaching positions in Montana high schools.

The other finalists were Terry Hostin, principal of the Phoenix, Ariz., Day School for the Deaf; Victoria Tripodi, principal of the New York State Institute for Special Education; Charles B. Boyer, executive director for the Lions Center for the Blind in Oakland, Calif.; and Ivan Terzief, superintendent of the Arkansas School for the Blind.

Crapo looks beyond request for easement

The Associated Press

BOISE - President Clinton wants the U.S. Forest Service to get $1.8 million to buy scenic lands in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area, but U.S. Rep. Mike Crapo wants more.

Clinton has asked Congress to appropriate $1.8 million to purchase easements on private land around the Sawtooths that is threatened by development. Crapo wrote House Appropriations Chairman Robert Livingston a letter supporting Clinton's request but going even further.

"We need more than that over time to protect all the land susceptible to development," the Idaho Republican said.

Clinton's request was based on a Forest Service plan for protecting the scenic area in central Idaho. It would use money from the Land and Water

Conservation Fund, a $900 million federal trust bankrolled with oil and gas royalties

The Associated Press

The three-tier plan targets parcels of land in the Sawtooth and Stanley basins that remain in a pastoral setting but may become housing developments.

The $1.8 million would allow the first phase of land acquisition to take place involving nine large land parcels.

To complete the plan, the Forest Service said it would need $9.2 million. Getting all the money in one year would save the federal government over the long term since land prices continue to rise. But getting that at a time when the budget is shrinking will be difficult, Crapo said.

"There are many other projects in the country competing for those dollars," he said. "It's going to be an uphill battle."

Batt crusades for Argonne as budget-cutters eye lab

By The Times-News and The Associated Press

IDAHO FALLS - Critics say it is unnecessary, expensive and violates national nuclear nonproliferation policy.

But Gov. Phil Batt wants Congress to separate a nuclear fuel processing program at the INEL that he says is key to the government keeping its obligations to Idaho.

In January, Rep. John Kasich, R-Ohio, included the Argonne National Laboratory West's "pyroprocessing" program on a list of the federal government's 12 most wasteful "corporate welfare" programs.

The program uses technology designed to recycle nuclear reactor fuel to prepare spent fuel for disposal.

Killing the project would mean the Energy Department may miss deadlines of its 1995 agreement with Idaho, Batt said. The agreement requires the federal government to remove waste from the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory over the next 40 years - pyroprocessing is necessary to do so, Batt said.

Utah bill killing term limits makes headway

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - A proposal to repeal term limits for state lawmakers and other elected officials got a hearty nod from the Utah House, where not one legislator spoke against the bill.

Rep. John Arrington, D-Ged, also refused to answer a single query from colleagues. Two lawmakers asked if he would yield to a question, and both times Arrington refused.

"It's a clear cut issue. There's no reason for questions as you found out," Arrington told his colleagues on Thursday.

Former jailer charged with kidnaping

By Kent McCreary Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A former Twin Falls county jailer is charged with second-degree kidnaping and with eluding police officers after police say he tried to kidnap a woman Saturday morning.

John Duane Hopper, 57, was arrested Sunday by Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies. He was in the hospital Thursday and is waiting to be arraigned. A preliminary hearing is scheduled Feb. 28.

Hopper was being treated for injuries at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center and was listed in good condition. The 6-foot, 260-pound Hopper crashed his car while trying to flee police, but managed to evade officers on road, police reports say.

Hopper worked as a detention officer at the Twin Falls County jail for at least four years, and up until about nine months ago, said Twin Falls County Sheriff Wayne Tousey.

Deputies have a warrant to hold Hopper on $20,000 bail on suspicion of violating a civil protection order.

Twin Falls sheriff's reports say Hopper apparently broke into the home of his wife at about 1:30 a.m. Saturday. The woman, who has a restraining order against Hopper, told police she looked out her front door and saw Hopper leaning over the trunk of her car, police reported.

The woman told police she locked the door, got a pistol and tried to call police, but the phone did not work. Police later found phone lines had been cut, the report said.

The woman told police she forced Hopper to leave the house. She said Hopper took the gun from her, then handcuffed her and tied her to the bed boards. Hopper also tried to handcuff another woman in the house, police say, but was unsuccessful. That woman managed to flee the house and call police, the report said.

The woman told officers Hopper came back, cut her loose and forced her, still handcuffed, outside the house and into the car, police reported. The back of the car had been made into a bed, with clothing and sleeping bags. The woman told police; the car light had been taped over to dim it.

The woman told police she told Hopper the door was still open. When he went back to close it, she said, she managed to get out of the car, run to a ditch and hide.

Hopper tried to search for the woman with a flashlight and then car headlights, the woman told police. He fled in the car about 2:13 a.m. when a police car appeared on the road, the report said.

An Idaho State Police trooper was the first officer on the scene. He reported seeing Hopper leave the house in the car, driving westbound on 3800 North at over 90 mph.

The car ran a stop sign at 3800 North and U.S. Highway 93, and continued westbound at up to 105 mph, the trooper reported. Hopper lost control of his car and crashed it at 2050 E. 3800 N., police said.

Hopper fled the car after crashing and managed to evade police officers, the report said. Sheriff's deputies searched the area, but were unable to locate Hopper, the report said.

Hopper was spotted after the initial search, but officers were again unable to locate him, the report said. Police say a pistol was found in the car. Sunday, sheriff's deputies arrested Hopper at his saddle shop in his home at 3821 N. 2600 E., police say.

Panel kills plan for heavier loads

BOISE (AP) - After hearing nearly four hours of testimony, a House committee killed a proposal to increase truck weight limits on state highways.

Thursday's vote in the House Transportation Committee was 7-6 after Chairman Jim Kempton, R-Albion, broke a 6 tie.

The measure would have allowed trucks to have a gross weight of 123,000 pounds on interstate highways, up from the current 105,500-pound limit. But trucks could not have traveled at the higher limit on interstate highways because the federal government still has a 105,500-pound limit.

Speakers for many of Idaho's producers asked for higher weight limits to cut their transportation costs. But others said that would allow trucks to tear up state highways.

Jim Ross, chief engineer for the Idaho Department of Transportation, said the heavier trucks would be within allowable limits on bridges, but the extra tonnage would shorten the bridges' life span.

Darwin Oldberg, representing grain growers and other producers, said growers need competitive transportation rates that heavier trucks would allow.

Officials discourage feeding elk in winter

By Julie Casey Lynn
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM - It's not a good idea for private citizens to feed wintering elk - that was the general consensus during an Environmental Resource Center discussion this week.

But it's just too difficult, to say no to hungry animals, a local woman said.

Representatives from the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, U.S. Forest Service, citizen wildlife advisory committees and local feeding groups convened Tuesday evening in the hope that constructive dialogue might mitigate some of the problems associated with elk feeding, and to educate the public about elk biology.

Each winter about 600 elk are privately fed in the Wood River Valley, where an estimated population of 1,200 elk seems to be thriving, Fish and Game surveys say. The elk population has increased to the point that Fish and Game is asking for an increase in the number of hunting permits each fall.

Fish and Game argues that big game population should be maintained under natural conditions and by naturally available forage. Winter food is a major limiting factor which determines the size of the population, and must be maintained if the animals are to prosper and propagate, Fish and Game says. To maintain these winter ranges, big game numbers must be controlled through adequate harvest. The agency, therefore, doesn't sanction any widespread supplemental feeding program.

"We have to learn to cohabitate or in 300 to 500 years we're not going to have any more elk."

-Randy Ackers, veterinarian grams. Fish and Game says it will step in and feed animals if extreme weather warrants.

In a slide presentation, a Fish and Game wildlife biologist said elk have evolved for thousands of years to survive harsh winters. The animals feed in the summer and all then go into "maintenance mode" to conserve energy. Elk are programmed to lose weight during the winter.

Fish and Game says problems associated with feeding programs include:

- Health risks to the herd increase.
- Elk concentrated at a feeding site deplete private and public lands.
- Concentrating game animals at feed sites makes survival of the fittest even more a factor than under natural conditions. Older animals out-compete younger animals.
- Elk have difficulty adapting to human-provided foods.
- Expense is extremely high in feeding operations compared to the relatively few animals they may help. The cost to sportsmen was more than $300,000 in 1989 while fewer than 5 percent of the state's elk and deer are fed in most years.

It is difficult for people to witness animals starving and not feeding. More animals have come into bottom lands because of heavy snows, and many residents like having the animals close by.

"I really do understand the sides of the emotional sides of the issue," said Marilyn Wankler. "We're feeding them because when you've had a winter like this with so much snow, they do have a responsibility as humans to help these creatures. It seems to me that we could come up with a program to satisfy both of those needs. I just can't see feeding because Fish and Game says they have to make it on their own."

Wankler said she has become attached to the elk near her Eagle Creek residence north of Ketchum and has named her elk. When Waldo, Wilson, Winslow, Junior and Willy are waiting for dinner, it's difficult for Wankler to say no. She said it would be helpful if Fish and Game developed a program to help private feeders cope with the elk, rather than everyone doing their own thing.

Local veterinarian Randy Ackers has a different view than Fish and Game, saying more effort should be made to help the animals exist with humans.

"We have to learn to cohabitate or in 300 to 500 years we're not going to have any more elk," Ackers said. He said that with the exponential explosion in human population, accommodations will have to be made for animals in human habitats.

Private residents are feeding about half of the elk in the valley. That means the elk are each being fed about 62 pounds of dry daily.

"That is an expensive proposition. You can't feed them garbage. They need high-quality hay," said Mike Todd, a regional Fish and Game conservation officer. Fish and Game feeds condensed alfalfa pellets that are expensive but have a longer shelf life. Fish and Game has one feed site in the area, west of Ketchum near Frenchman's Bend.

The meeting's message: If you are a private citizen planning to start feeding elk, take some time to learn about elk and how they survive the winter.

"We've been remiss in getting the word out to public about the hazards of feeding big game. We hope that programs like this will help people understand and not start feeding when it's not in the best interest of the elk and their long-term survival," said Lee Frost, a local Fish and Game conservation officer.

after Stradley tossed her toward a water bed and she landed on the corner bed post.

A Twin Falls County district court jury heard Stradley of first-degree murder and involuntary manslaughter charges after his lawyers raised doubts about how far the child had been thrown and character witnesses testified that Stradley never intentionally harmed a child.

The long and controversial case included disqualification of a judge and formal sanction of Stradley's defense lawyer by the trial judge.

Stradley's girlfriend at the time, Julie Ann Hostetler, who was the girl's mother, pleaded guilty in May 1992 to felony injury to a child. She was sentenced to three to five years in prison.

Under a plea bargain with then-Twin Falls County Prosecuting Attorney K. Ellen Baxter, Hostetler would have served two years' probation and a suspended prison term. But District Judge J. William Hart rejected that agreement and in August 1992 sentenced Hostetler to three to five years in prison.

She appealed the sentence, but in August 1993 the Idaho Court of Appeals upheld the sentence. The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare had interviewed Hostetler several times after receiving complaints that she was abusing and neglecting Amanda.

A group of private citizens calling itself "Friends of Amanda" formed after the death and pressured the department to review the way it handled child abuse investigations.

Stradley said the murder trial shouldn't have much effect on this case.

"Some of that would be admissible in this case. I don't think it makes the case in front of the jury any different," he said.

established in 1972. It includes most of the Sawtooth, Boulder and White Cloud mountain ranges and the valleys of mostly ranches surrounding them. More than 1.3 million people visit the area each year.

Congress approved $800,000 for land acquisition in 1997 after several landowners threatened to subdivide their ranches.

Olson said shadows of the old case still could have an impact. "If the public attention is negative, it may make it harder to get a fair trial," he said.

Baxter is now in private practice in Hailey. She referred to the Stradley and Hostetler cases as being "my other life."

Baxter said she worked on the cases against Stradley and Hostetler for most of a year, her last year in office. The trial and preparation required numerous accounts of help from doctors and police detectives who investigated Amanda's death, she said.

The verdict that Stradley was innocent was difficult to accept, Baxter said, but the new charges aren't necessarily vindication.

"I thought it was appropriate to take to trial, and I accept the verdict. My experience in criminal justice is that people continue to commit crimes, and that's sad."

Hearing postponed in case of fatal crash

The Times-News

GOODING - A preliminary hearing for Gooding man facing two felony charges in connection with a fatal 1996 auto crash has been postponed because of a conflict with the Gooding magistrate court judges' schedule, court documents say.

Dale Langford, 29, was scheduled to appear in magistrate court Wednesday, but the hearing has been rescheduled for April 2, court documents say. Langford was not seriously injured, Idaho State Police reported.

driving in connection with the Oct. 6, 1996, crash that killed Christina Joy Carter, 21, of Gooding and seriously injured Jackie Fletcher, 35, of Bend, Ore.

Police claim Langford had a blood alcohol content of 12 percent when he was driving along Idaho Highway 46 near Wendell with Carter and Fletcher as passengers. The state's legal limit is 10 percent.

The car went over an embankment and rolled about one and a half miles north of Wendell, and Langford was not seriously injured, Idaho State Police reported.

Investigators discover violations in state agency

BOISE (AP) - State investigators found violations of department policy and state personnel regulations in the performance of Juvenile Corrections Director Michael Johnson and two former employees.

The extensively edited report on the inquiry, finally released by Gov. Phil Batt late Thursday although it had been prepared on Jan. 28, indicated that:

- Political pressure was apparently exerted to get one of the employees hired.
- Employees at a Rexburg facility under contract with the state to care for juvenile delinquents were repeated intimidated by Johnson's representatives.

That same facility was coerced by Johnson's staff into giving one of its former employees a letter of recommendation.

The department seriously and generally violated hiring regulations.

The department acted in an inefficiently and carelessly manner in conducting the contract with the Rexburg facility after Ken Benfield, a friend of Johnson's regional manager, Roger Clark, was suspended.

Johnson authorized his resignation to Batt last week, effective March 1.

Argonne

and make sure they follow the procedures they set out in the agreement," he said.

Dropping the project would save taxpayers $250 million over the next five years, critics say. There is no pressing environmental or safety reason to test the spent fuel, and decisions on spent fuel treatment should wait until the requirements of a disposal site are known.

Meanwhile, there would plenty of time to develop a more benign treatment, critics say.

But Batt not only defends the project; he also disputes the cost figures at Argonne West, which Attorney General Al Lantse sent a letter to Kasich this week, asking him to reconsider his opposition to continued funding of a program they say would cost $25 million a year.

"We respectfully advise you that we will do all within our ability to see that the federal government meets the terms of the agreement in which it is legally bound," they wrote.

"We view the continued development and demonstration of treatment technologies such as (pyroprocessing), as essential for meeting the federal government's court-enforceable obligation to remove all spent nuclear fuel from Idaho."

But the program would not violate the settlement agreement, so the state would not take immediate legal action, Batt said. But the likelihood of a missed deadline in the future would increase. Batt and Lance told Kasich they are fiscal conservatives like him, but that some programs are necessary for the government to meet its obligations.

Kasich's press secretary Bruce Cathers said the lawmakers plans to move ahead with legislation regarding each of the 12 items on his list.

It was compiled at Kasich's request through the consensus of 11 public-interest groups, ranging from Americans for Tax Reform to Citizens Against Government Waste. The discussions also included Public Interest Research Group, which traditionally has opposed nuclear research.

Pyroprocessing accounts for at least one-quarter of the annual budget at Argonne West, which employs about 750 people. It also came under attack by environmental groups that included in their "Green Scissors" list of environmentally destructive subsidies.

Spent fuel from the Argonne's Experimental Breeder Reactor-II contains sodium metal and can not be buried at a national repository, Batt said. Pyroprocessing separates radioactive waste from the sodium, and is necessary to get the waste out of Idaho.

But pyroprocessing also yields nuclear bomb material.

By a quirk of nature, the process separates uranium-235 - the kind of uranium used in the "Little Boy" bomb dropped on Hiroshima in August 1945 - from the rest of the waste.

Once extracted from the spent fuel, the uranium is blended with a non-explosive form of uranium to make it unusable as bomb material.

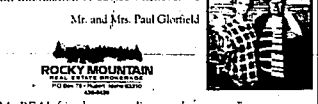

But extracting weapons grade uranium from spent fuel violates the nation's nuclear non-proliferation policy, says Dan Horner of the Nuclear Control Institute, a group concerned about the control of the spread of nuclear weapons.

Jerome Recreation District plans bike paths, tennis courts

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Planners are taking the first steps on a bike and hiking trail system in the Magic Valley. The project, under development will extend from 100 East and East 20th St., south on 100 East to 100 South Road, west to 100 Lincoln, then south to Interstate 84.

The first phase of construction began last fall, and asphalt will be put in this spring, as weather permits, said Mike Pepper, Jerome Recreation District's director.

The district has applied for Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation grants, to complete the stretch from Idaho Highway 25 and 100 East to the Blvd Farm at 100 East and 100 South then west to South Lincoln. At the end of January, the response from Parks and Recreation has been favorable.

Construction will proceed as money comes available, said the Jerome School District, Jerome County, the city of Jerome city and the Jerome Highway District have applied for Parks and Recreation grants.

The district formally adopted its portion of the Jerome County Comprehensive Plan, which includes the path system.

The recreation district, the Jerome Tennis Association, and the city of Jerome will renovate downtown city park and tennis courts.

"The tennis association will contribute $5,000, the recreation district will contribute $12,000 and the city of Jerome will contribute $12,000 plus contribute some of the labor to help remove the asphalt, remove the gravel and compact the base, and then replace everything," Pepper said.

"The courts will also get new nets."

Jerome City Councilman Dennis Moore had questioned whether the city could participate in the project, since it was based on 2-year-old plans. However, he said the city would participate after all.

The recreation district has approached Idaho Power about the possibility of developing hiking trails and overlooks on the north side of the Snake River Canyon rim, east of the Perrine Bridge, Pepper said. Most of this land belongs to the federal Bureau of Land Management.

This idea is in the planning stage, but early reception has been positive, he said.

In order to reach more people, the Recreation District is printing its activities guide quarterly, and is printing 8,000 copies, instead of 3,000.

It distributes guides as fliers in local newspapers, and in local schools.

Jerome council approves hiring new firefighters

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — The Jerome City Council Tuesday approved hiring five new firefighters.

When the property tax limiting One Percent Initiative was on the ballot, the Jerome fire department reduced its paid out firefighters to 20.

Fire Chief Jim An-Claire has interviewed candidates, and done background checks, and Tuesday recommended five candidates to the council.

On-call firefighters are paid only when they go out on a call.

In other council business:

- The council held second reading on a uniform housing code, building conservation code and a code to get rid of dangerous buildings.
- The ordinance removes legal penalties for the city of Jerome for the repair, removal and demolition of buildings deemed unsafe, dangerous, or a nuisance.
- It sets minimum standards and provides procedures to correct substandard living conditions. It also allows for continued use of existing buildings which meet structural and safety standards but may not fit the modified to meet the standard building and code.

The council held first reading of a bill authorizing changes for using 100 cubic feet of wastewater, and increasing the fee monthly fee for wastewater treatment system users.

A consulting firm from Wisconsin analyzed the Jerome wastewater system recently, Jerome City Administrator Jon Cecil said. The firm found wastewater income was not adequate to cover costs.

The basic rate is $11 per month plus $8.00 or $26.62 for each 100 cubic feet of sewer used.

The ordinance would change the basic rate to $11.50 per month. The amount of wastewater charged would be based on metered usage during the summer, and consumption in the winter months.

This means the city will not charge residents who sprinkle lawns and gardens with extra water this year during the summer.

"The wastewater rates have not changed in our five years. We can't operate in the red,"

Councilman Dennis Moore said Cecil said the City Council kept the irrigation water assessments for city residents the same as last year.

Max Carey, who lives on I Street near Fillmore, asked the council to consider reinstating the four way stop signs at H Street and Fillmore.

"Since the north and south stop signs were removed cars are often traveling 45 mph when they reach I Street," Corey said. "Children walking to Liberty Christian Academy cross the intersection of H and Fillmore going to and from school. ... A group of children is going to get hit one of these days if something isn't done."

Jim Wiegley of First Security Bank presented alternate choices for getting money out of the 1992 sewer bonds.

The council could refinance the 1992 bonds. The best interest rates would come from selling the bonds to the public rather than to banks or financial institutions.

Wiegley said the council could also borrow against its debt service reserve fund.

Ivan Stone was approved to the Jerome Historic Preservation Commission for a three-year term to end in February 2000.

JUMP Company rediscovers the '40s in winter musical

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Dennis McCracken thought he was in big trouble when he asked cast members of the Junior Musical Playhouse Company's winter show if any of them knew who Frank Sinatra is.

McCracken is, after all, co-directing a show about the big-band and swing music of the 1940s.

"Nobody knew Sinatra," McCracken said. "But when I asked the kids if any of them knew whose song 'Thanks for the Memories' was, one kid said, 'I know! Bob Hope.'"

"I felt a lot better." "No wonder," McCracken said. "Thanks for the Memories: A Frolic Through the '40s," is the title of the JUMP Company production that will be staged Friday, Feb. 28, and Saturday, March 1, in the Roper Auditorium.

Co-director Carol Bounous said I thought this theme would be a good idea for this show, and we took it to the board," McCracken said. "They were pretty enthusiastic about the idea, but I didn't know what the kids would do."

For the most part, the 125 young cast

Shows start next week

The Junior Musical Playhouse Company will present "Thanks for the Memories: A Frolic Through the '40s," on Friday, Feb. 28, and Saturday, March 1, in the Roper Auditorium. Curtain time is 7:30 p.m. both nights. members didn't know Duke Ellington from Duke Nukem.

"We started from scratch, just giving the kids the music and letting them learn it," McCracken said.

"Thanks for the Memories," which takes the place of the JUMP Company's traditional Christmas musical, consists of two acts in two different archetypal settings—a hotel-ballroom that's host to a mythical radio show, and a USO canteen.

In addition to the songs — "Moonlight Serenade," "Serenade in Blue," "String of Pearls" and the like — the musical is interspersed with takes on classic radio comedies of the era, such as Fibber Magee and Molly and Abbott and Costello.

There's also "Advice for the Loveless" from Dorothy Dix, patter between Hedda Hopper and Art Linkletter — even that icon of the Great Depression year, the marathon dance. "It's been a lot of fun," McCracken added. "I think people will be pleasantly surprised how well these kids do this music."

Chiropractor from Fairfield chronicles adventures

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Wade Brackenbury may have grown up looking at Soldier Creek out his back window, but his gaze carried considerably farther.

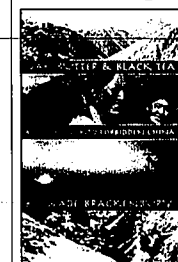

"When I was a kid, I was fascinated by adventures," said Brackenbury in a telephone interview from his chiropractic office in Springville, Utah. "While I was climbing the garage, I thought about discovering someplace that no one else had before."

It was good practice. The Jerome native has spent much of his 32 years on the shady side of the last place on earth. His most daring high-wire act, a traverse of a forbidden corner of Tibet, is chronicled in "Yak Butter and Black Tea," just published by Algonquin Books.

"After high school, I went climbing in New Zealand and walked across Papua New Guinea, living with the tribesmen I met along the way," he said. "So Tibet was just the next adventure."

A meeting with a shadowy French photographer and adventurer named Pascal Szepan convinced Brackenbury that a theretofore undiscovered people, the Drung, was waiting to be found along the upper reaches of the Iransadiy River in southeastern Tibet. A range of four-mile-high mountains and Chinese soldiers with live ammunition were all that stood in their way.

Author will sign books tonight

Wade Brackenbury will sign copies of his book, "Yak Butter and Black Tea," and show slides tonight from 7 to 9 at Barnes & Noble Bookstores, 1239-A Pole Line Road. The book sells for $19.95.

"The Chinese, who control Tibet very much against the will of the Tibetan people, are sensitive about outsiders making contact with people, so much of the country is closed," Brackenbury said. "But they're also concerned about somebody getting hurt or killed in that wild country. If something happens to you, it's a long way to help, and you could die."

An abortive attempt to reach the valley of the Drung in 1991 led to a second try two years later, with the help of Sappu and a translator named Sophi. But only Brackenbury ended up making it across the towering Nu Mountains, an epic that makes Indiana Jones look like a weekend warrior.

Yet what he finally found in the valley of the Drung is the book's real surprise.

"I'm going back to Tibet, if I can't, but I may have trouble getting in this time," Brackenbury said. "It used to be that you could get arrested by the authorities, released, and get arrested 20 miles down the road and nobody knew you'd been arrested before. Now they're getting computers."

Brackenbury, who grew up in Fairfield and graduated from Damas County High School in 1982, spends about three months a year away from his chiropractic practice, most recently a journey into the rather remote regions of the west African nation of Ghana. "It's hard for me to stay here (in Utah) for any length of time," he said. "I get anxious to go see someplace new."

His fondness for faraway places with strange-sounding names almost ended before it started when he suffered a severe back injury during a high school football game that left him in a body cast for four months.

"By the time I really started thinking about traveling to exotic places," he said. "By the time I got out of that cast, I was ready to go."

Between motorcycle trips across Central America and an LDS mission in South Korea, Brackenbury attended Ricks College and Brigham Young University and graduated from Life Chiropractic West. He picked up Mandarin Chinese from a girlfriend while living in the Bay Area.

"I went to see Pascal when I was in Paris on the way to Africa, but he's kind of disappeared," Brackenbury said. "But I've heard about this other area of Tibet, the Anemanchin Mountains, where no Westerner is supposed to have been before . . ."

Ex-hometown boy spins cowboy wisdom in Twin Falls

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

Baxter Black will perform at the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Center tonight at 8 p.m. Reserved seating tickets are $15 for adults and $7.50 for children. General admission is $12 for adults and $6 for children. Proceeds go to the CSI Ag Club. Tickets are available at all locations of the Lonesome Cowboy, Corral West in Burley, the Hermet Center for the Arts and Sciences on the CSI campus, Larry's Quik Service in Buhl, Vickers Western Store in Twin Falls and Dino's in Jerome.

TWIN FALLS — Baxter Black could tell you stories.

Matter of fact, he will — tonight in the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Center auditorium.

"Most of my material comes from just talkin' to people," Black said in a telephone interview from his Colorado home. "Stories they tell me, or observations they make, or observations I make about them."

"They come up to me, shake my hand and say, 'I'll bet ol' Baxter would like to hear this.'"

"Dood, he does. The man once referred to as 'Will Rogers' weird grandchild' is a connoisseur of the twice-told tale."

"I think Will Rogers set the standard for cowboy poets and comedians and storytellers," he said. "There are a lot of folks doin' good work out there today, but nobody's at Will's level."

Like Rogers, Black — a 51-year-old retired veterinarian who lived for awhile in Twin Falls — got into the cowboy poetry biz because he had stories he just had to tell someone.

"Most of the material in my show goes worked out first in my newspaper column," Black said. "That's where I sort it out until it's ready to be told."

Black's weekly column is carried by 130 papers nationwide, including AG Weekly, the Times-News' sister publication. He does 90 shows a year, mostly for ag groups. "I find cowboy poets everywhere I go," he said. "Most of 'em just haven't got up the courage yet to read their poems in public."

Black said he values the clear wisdom of good Western-themed writing. Besides Rogers, his favorites are Bangs Patterson, author of "The Man from Snowy River," and Robert Service, who wrote "The Cremation of Sam McGee."

"In 100 years, their work will still be remembered," he said. "That's something to shoot for if you're a writer."

Guthrie's world-wide tour stops for 2 nights in Hailey

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

HAILEY — If you look in the dictionary under "folk singer," you won't find a picture of Arlo Guthrie.

No, that's Bob Dylan. But that doesn't mean that Guthrie, who will perform concerts Monday and Tuesday nights at the Liberty Theater here, isn't the touchstone of three generations of the music of the disposable.

The son of Woody Guthrie, Arlo's music teachers in his youth were Leadbelly and Pete Seeger. His 1967 ballad "Alice's Restaurant" became the anthem for hippies and yuppies. And his bestselling recording of Steve Goodman's "City of New Orleans" in 1972 may have rescued folk music by separating it decisively from mushy folk-rock.

That's a lot to squeeze into the first 25 years of his life.

So what becomes a legend in

Tickets on sale
Arlo Guthrie will perform concerts Monday and Tuesday at Hailey's Liberty Theater. Doors open at 6:30 p.m., and the show starts at 7. Tickets, which are $17, are available at the door, or at The Mint Bar, the Video Depot and the Sound Socket in Hailey or Magic Mountain Music, and Twist and Trout in Ketchum.

his second quarter century? Raising hell, of course, only this time in CD. "My parents were both people who believed in serving humanity," Guthrie said. "You've got to do something; my dad did, my mom did. We just grew up that way. My kids are being brought up that way. You have to give back, especially when so many wonderful things happen to you."

Three of Guthrie's albums, "Running Down the Road,"

"Washington County" and "Arlo Guthrie" are being re-released in CD. He's in the middle of a worldwide tour, runs his own record company, has his own mail order catalog, and, of course, the obligatory website (www.clark.net/pub/dowin/cgi-bin/arlonet.html).

At age 49, Guthrie operates this folksy empire out of the church in Great Barrington, Mass., that was the centerpiece of Arthur Penn's 1969 "Alice's Restaurant" movie. Guthrie also continues to write and record. His latest album, "Mystic Journey," was released last year, co-produced by his son, Abe.

"This album sort of developed organically," Guthrie said. "It wasn't a pre-conceived unit. It just a group of individual songs that I thought fit together fairly well. It's just another Arlo album; I don't want to make too much more of it."

Now that's hype.

NBC makes TV history Sunday

By Ed Bark
The Dallas Morning News

NBC and ABC trade places and sensibilities Sunday night in Round 2 of a bout pitting Velocita against Brie in the last big showdown of the February sweeps.

A week ago, NBC chastely aimed "Astrocat" at Dallas and the earth at large while ABC presented the thoroughly esteemed Meryl Streep in "... first do no harm."

Now it's ABC courting disaster — "Volcano: Fire on the Mountain" supposedly will "blow you away" — while NBC presents the network TV premiere of Steven Spielberg's universally acclaimed "Schindler's List."

Enough about "Volcano," which is exactly the junk you'd expect. "Schindler's List," winner of the 1993 Oscar for best picture, is the place to be on Sunday night. Viewers can be a part of TV history as well. Here are some of the ways:

"Schindler's List" will air without commercials and virtually intact, save for what NBC Enterprises president John Agolgia calls "strictly minimal adjustments." Spielberg is making "probably less than a minute" of cuts, but "anyone who has seen the film in a theater and is familiar with it probably will not be aware of them," Agolgia says.

Because of its profanity, nudity and graphic depictions of Nazi atrocities, the black-and-white film will be the first commercial network television program to be rated TV-M (may be unsuitable for children under 17).

The only interruptions will be two 90-second intermissions in which a "Schindler's List" title card and a small Ford Motor Company logo will be accompanied by music from the movie. Ford, the sole sponsor, has "given back" six of the eight minutes of advertising time it purchased, Agolgia says. One-minute Ford commercials, both "institutional" in nature, will be shown before and after the film. Spielberg is introducing the movie, which has had only limited cable exposure on the STARZ cable channel.

Some have noted the "irony" of Ford sponsoring "Schindler's List" in light of company founder Henry Ford's since-documented anti-Semitic views.

"I have no comment on that," Agolgia says. "NBC made a deal to air 'Schindler's List' while it was obtaining the commercial TV rights to Spielberg's 'Jurassic Park.'"

The network has a relationship with the director dating to his 1985 anthology series "Amazing Stories." "I don't think it hurt us at all" in negotiations, Agolgia says.

NBC's handling of "Schindler's List" will be remembered as a bonafide breakthrough on network television. But it's not the first Oscar-winning, R-rated film to air virtually untouched on broadcast stations.

In the early 1980s, an ad-hoc group of independent stations aired "The Deer Hunter" in uncut form.

Kim Delaney of TV's "NYPD Blue" got engaged Valentine's Day to movie producer Alan Barnette.

Timothy Dalton, 49, and current live-in, Ukrainian actress Oksana Grigorieva, 26, are pregnant. They met when she did roles in his two James Bond movies, "The Living Daylights" and "Licence to Kill." She moved into his West London digs last year. No wedding plans.

The new man in Vanessa Williams' life is screenwriter Chris Solimine. Demi Moore and Bruce Willis repaired to the civility of their limo Tuesday night outside Manhattan's Carnegie Hall and left the whupping of a photog — who tried to shoot them with his camera — to their bodyguard. Said a witness: "The bodyguard reacted like he was coming after them with a gun." The lensman, Erik Pendick, filed a complaint with the cops. The acting duo caught Tony Bennett's act.

The principals aren't talking but the marriage of model Carol Alt and hockey player Ron Greschner appears in trouble. She has her Greenwich, Conn., spread on the market for $4 mil.

'Total Control.' World of high-flying finance

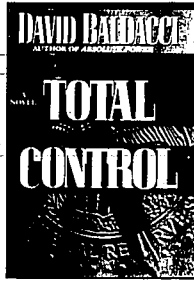

By Ann Hellmuth
The Orlando Sentinel

A plane crashes. On board are the chairman of the Federal Reserve and, according to the passenger list, Jason Archer, a brilliant executive at Triton, the world's leading technology conglomerate.

Only Archer isn't aboard. He changed flights at the last minute, apparently swapping identities with an unnamed man.

Obviously, Archer is up to no good, or so it appears as David Baldacci launches his latest nail-biting thriller. Like his first novel, "Absolute Power," it moves at the pace of a flying bullet and is probably destined for the big screen.

"Total Control" (Warner Books, $25) has more plots and subplots, red-herrings, dastardly evil is fun rather than confusion.

You have to admire plotting that is so detailed that even a bumper sticker on a car has relevance 400 pages later.

Grieving widow Sidney Archer, a savvy lawyer who just happens to be representing Triton Global in a sticky takeover deal, is in despair.

But her problems are only just beginning. Federal investigators discover that the flight was sabotaged and that the missing Jason Archer was not on the plane, making him their No. 1 suspect. Then a mechanic thought to have tampered with the plane's wing is shot to death.

As the plot thickens, Sidney learns that her husband is suspected of trying to sell Triton takeover secrets to the firm's biggest rival. Sidney has an important ally in her search for the truth — veteran FBI Agent

Lee Sawyer, for whom life consists of work and little else.

Wary of each other at first, the two eventually find themselves sharing information — what Sidney, also suspect of betraying Triton's secrets, is fired. Not that all is above board at the law firm, but thereby hangs another tale.

It wouldn't be fair to give away too much of the plot; just about every chapter contains more revelations. Plucky Sidney lands herself in some tight situations as she tries to prove her husband's innocence and discover what he really was up to the morning he disappeared, saying he was going to Los Angeles for a job interview.

The evil shadows behind all the scheming aren't hard to spot, but even that knowledge can't detract from the final shootout during which justice is well and truly dispensed.

Mia Farrow began writing about her life in 1992 during her struggle to protect her children in a custody battle initiated by Woody Allen.

Farrow's memoir light on dirt, heavy on angst

By Brenda Cronin
Knight-Ridder News Service

Actress Mia Farrow gets a disclaimer out to readers early on in her memoir "What Falls Away" (Doubleday, $25). On the page-one account of her ninth birthday party, Farrow notes, "I had a feeling that had become familiar to me ... that I was losing everything from a great distance."

She sustains that remote in this haze chronicle of her juggernaut from Beverly Hills baby and Hollywood starlet to mother, accomplished actress and victor in one of the most public custody disputes since the battle over Gloria Vanderbilt.

Farrow moves swiftly through the highlights and traumas since her birth in 1945.

After scrapping childhood fancies of becoming a Carmelite nun, she built a career, married and divorced Frank Sinatra and Andre Previn, raised 14 children, and launched a personal and professional relationship with Woody Allen. But to public memory of her performances on Broadway and in films such as "Rosemary's Baby," "The Great Gatsby," and "Broadway Danny Rose" were eclipsed by the 1992 melodrama that began when she discovered Allen was sleeping with her teen-age daughter Soon-Yi.

As if that were not enough, Farrow began to suspect Allen of sexually abusing their adopted seven-year-old daughter Dylan. Shortly after these charges came out, Allen took Farrow to court, demanding custody of Dylan, their five-year-old son Satchel

Updike novel out in paperback

Orlando Sentinel

"In the Beauty of the Lilies" by John Updike (Fawcett Columbine, $12.95): From the moment a New Jersey minister loses his faith in 1910 and finds glory at the local nickelodeon, the movies become the main metaphor for Updike's panoramas and novel. Spanning four generations and 80 something years, the novel charts one family's relationship with God, a four-lever played out against a backdrop of 20th-century history, from mill strikes to cult configurations, World Series to world wars. Although the ending is too schematic, the novel offers vivid characters, Updike's scintillating observations, his polished, quicksilver prose. Don't wait for the movie.

Author draws ideas from readers

Knight-Ridder News Service

Diana Gabaldon's books take her so long to write, she posts excerpts from them on the Internet while the work is in progress, so her readers don't have to do without her completely.

"I just want people to read what I've written, and then come back with suggestions. Sometimes people suggest interesting things based on the excerpts," said the author of the recently released "Drums of Autumn" (Delacorte, $24.95).

"After reading an excerpt of "Drums" which takes place partly in 18th-century Charleston, S.C. a reader wrote that Gabaldon had described the town perfectly.

"She said, 'I really feel like I'm walking down East Bay Street but what about the bugs?' I hadn't even thought of bugs." In the published version of the book, there are bugs.

It's fitting that fans can access Gabaldon on the Net. That's where a portion of her first book, "Outlander," made its debut. A professor at Arizona State University at the time, Gabaldon was writing historical fiction just as an exercise, when she got into a discussion in an online literary group and ended up posting part of what she'd written as a means of illustrating a point.

The other members of the group encouraged her to post more; eventually, "Outlander" was published.

She tells the story of Claire Randall, an English nurse taking a well-deserved vacation with her husband in Scotland after the end of World War II. Looking for plants to collect, she walks into a circle of prehistoric standing stones and disappears.

Claire finds herself in the 18th century, caught up in the intrigues of Highland clan rivalries and the tensions of conflict with the English, including the villainous ancestor of her 20th-century husband. She also finds the true love of her life, a courageous young, laird named Jamie Fraser.

Two sequels after "Outlander" follow Claire and Jamie through the Battle of Culloden in 1745,

Responses over the Internet sometimes end up in book and its aftermath, including a 20-year separation after Jamie forces Claire to return to the 20th century to save her life and that of their unborn child. When they meet again in the third book, they're middle-aged but no less mad for each other.

"Drums of Autumn" picks up the story with the characters in the New World, and Gabaldon says it's the first of a second trilogy.

"When I was writing the fourth book," she said, "I eventually realized I was trying to pour 5 pounds of sugar into a 4-pound bag. I thought, 'There's way too much story to put in here.'"

As she worked, Gabaldon said, "It became fairly obvious to me that what I got here is a double trilogy. 'Drums of Autumn' is the first book of a New World trilogy. It just fell very neatly into that shape."

WEEKEND

Age hasn't slowed comedienne Diller, who plans return to Jackpot

The Times-News

JACKPOT — Phyllis Diller will turn 80 in July.

Often called the leading female stand-up comic in the world, she has starred on television, in movies and on stage and has headlined in six countries. But she didn't start her show business career until she was 37.

At the time, she was an Ohio homemaker and mother of five, employed as a publicist at radio station KSFO in San Francisco.

Urged by her husband, Sherwood Diller, she prepared a night club act and was booked for two weeks at San Francisco's Purple Onion. She stayed on for 89 weeks.

Then she went on tour.

Soon she was making guest appearances on top-rated TV shows like "Jack Parr," and she was costarring with Bob Hope in films like "Boyz! Did I Get a Wrong Number."

She accompanied Hope on one of his Christmas jaunts to Vietnam, too, where Hope told reporters the war would have been over in three days if Phyllis had cooked for the enemy.

Diller's gigs at concert halls include appearances at Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas and the Waldorf Astoria in Manhattan. She's also performed in Canada, England, Bermuda, Monte Carlo and Australia.

She played Dolly Gallagher in the Broadway production of "Hello Dolly!" and has performed as a piano soloist with 100 symphony orchestras in the United States and Canada. She has written four best-selling books for Doubleday, including "Phyllis Diller's Housekeeping Hints."

On stage, Diller pokes fun at her mythical husband, Fang, and at her own dress and appearance. Off stage, she has one of the largest and most expensive wardrobes in the world and has received several humanitarian awards.

She studied music at the Sherwood Music Conservatory in Chicago and at Bluffton College in Bluffton, Ohio.

Today, she lives in a large, English-style home in Brentwood (O.J. Simpson's neighborhood in Los Angeles), where three secretaries handle her correspondence, travel arrangements and requests from fans.

Utah dance troupe plans Twin Falls performance

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The Utah Contemporary Dance Theater will perform at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Center auditorium.

The professional jazz/ballet company is made up of dancers who have the ability to cross over to any style of dance including ballet, jazz, tap and even the popular funk/hip-hop.

This year's season will consist of an exciting collection of new dances, pieces, and ballets. The opening number will be a 25-minute, world-premiere choreographed piece, "Move, Dance, Be Born, which offers styles that range from jazz to ballet and beyond.

The second piece, "Mantodca," is a choreographic tour-de-force based on the peculiar mating habits of the female praying mantis.

The next piece is a world-premiere called "Juicy" with hip-hop dancing.

Artistic Director Darryl Yeager is a 20-year veteran of Broadway, film, choreographer of "Utah" and former Ballet West principal dancer.

The closing piece, "Haun's Mill," is dedicated to the sesquicentennial anniversary of the Mormon Pioneers arriving in the Salt Lake Valley.

ballet presents the Haun's Mill Massacre at the catalyst that began the series of events that eventually led the Mormons to leave the eastern United States and move to the Salt Lake Valley.

"We would like to honor the descendants of those who were involved in this awful tragedy and let them know that the sacrifice of their ancestors has not been forgotten," said Deryll

Yeager, choreographer and artistic director of the UCDDT.

"This piece is something that I have been thinking about for a long time and finally this year seemed the perfect time with the sesquicentennial."

Haun's Massacre descendants can get tickets to the show and arrange to receive their awards by calling Yeager at (801) 224-9912.

Celebration of Basque traditions includes visit from noted official

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Basque government's senior representative to emigre Basque communities will be here Saturday for a reception at the Herrett Center for the Arts and Sciences at the College of Southern Idaho.

Inaki Aguirre, director of relations with Basque communities in the Basque government, is scheduled to attend a reception at the Herrett in honor of the current exhibit, "Amerikanauk! Basques in the High Desert."

He'll be joined by William Douglass, coordinator of the Basque Studies Program at the University of Nevada, Reno, and one of the leading scholars on Basques in North America.

"The exhibit opened in November, but this happened to be the date we could get for these folks to attend," said Bill Studebaker, the CSI Honors Program director who is spokesman for the Herrett. "We're honored that they can be here."

The "Amerikanauk" exhibit, which will be at the Herrett through Aug. 15, tells the story of how Basques who fled Spain settled in the high desert of the American West, taking jobs as shepherds and cattlemen.

There are thousands of Idahoans of Basque ancestry; by one estimate, one Idahoan in 20 has some Basque blood.

Aguirre, a 39-year-old Belgian by birth and international trader by training, has worked for the Basque government since 1995. Although the Basque region is part of Spain and France, the Basques have considerable autonomy in running their own affairs. He'll be at the Herrett from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m. to answer questions and visit with guests.

Douglass, who holds a doctorate in anthropology from the University of Chicago, will speak at 11:30 on "Becoming Basque American: From Immigration to Virtual Ethnicity."

The Boise-based Oinkari Dancers are scheduled to perform at 11 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Famed Basque musician Jim Jausoro will perform with his group at 1:30 p.m.

There will be Basque food available throughout the day, prepared and catered by the Basque Kitchen in Twin Falls.

The "Amerikanauk" exhibit was produced by the National Association of Basque Organizations, the High Desert Museum in Bend, Ore., and the National Endowment for the Humanities. Its appearance at CSI was paid for in part by the college, First Security Bank of Idaho, the Idaho Humanities Council and the Idaho Humanities Foundation.

The Gooding Basque Association and the Basque Museum of Boise helped arrange Saturday's reception.

Officer by any other name is being treated with disrespect

DEAR ABBY
Abigail VanBuren

DEAR ABBY: I must take exception to the letters from Joseph Murray and Emily Maheu about rank in the military.

I was with my husband during 29 years of military life, and during that time I realized that acknowledgment of military rank is nothing more than respect for position and achievement. Let's face it, without such acknowledgment our society would be mediocre and achieve less than its full potential.

Our children should be taught to recognize success, achievement and experience. They can do that by addressing adults by the proper title, even if it is nothing more than "Sir" and "Ma'am." If our children can address a doctor as "Doctor," they can address our military by rank, an expression of acknowledgment and respect. Your first response was more to the point.

—HELEN A. FOWKES, PUNTA GORDA, FLA.
DEAR HELEN: From the mail I received from people formerly and presently in the military, you and I are in the minority, and only now am I receiving letters from people like you who agreed with my answer. Thanks for your support.

DEAR ABBY: One more word, please, on whether children should address military personnel by their rank.

Your correspondent, Joseph J. Murray, wrote that a 12-year-old girl shouldn't be expected to know the level of military ranks. She does not have to. She can call a lieutenant "Lieutenant" without knowing whether he outranks a captain.

The wife of a retired officer didn't want her children to "feel that one person deserves more respect than another just because of rank," so she did not teach her children to address their parents' friends by their rank. Using the same reasoning, I assume she taught her children to call a doctor "Mister." After all, calling him "Doctor" might give him too much respect.

The fact is, it is just as wrong to address someone in the military as "Mr." or "Ms." as it is to call a physician "Mr. Jones." Those honorifics are applicable only to civilians. The only exceptions are warrant officers and certain junior naval officers, who are properly addressed as "Mr." Parents who object to the proper use of titles are passing their ignorance along to their children.

—WALTER H. ENGE, LT. COL., USAF (RET.), ATLANTA

DEAR ABBY: I have a question that may be of interest to your other readers.

Why do newspapers publish notices that state that on a particular day and between certain hours, the police will crack down on speeders along a specified highway in a special effort?

In my opinion, the disclosure defeats the purpose of the special effort.

—CARL THOMPSON, CHULA VISTA, CALIF.

DEAR CARL: It depends on how you interpret the purpose of the special effort. Look at it this way: The crackdowns are usually announced at holiday time when highway traffic is particularly heavy and many of the drivers have been partying with alcohol. Police warnings cause many drivers to slow down and pay closer attention to the road because they know the police are out in force and looking for "speeders." The benefit is fewer out-of-control drivers who could cause an end, and let's hope, fewer accidents and tragedies.

Vinyl revival: Danceclub scene, nostalgia help miniboom in LPs

The Washington Post

Time was, those vinyl albums now gathering dust in your basement were the best that music had to offer.

Unlike the audio cassette or chunky eight-track tape, the long-playing record catered to the picky: You could hear any song, again and again, by dropping the needle in the right track. Hundreds could stack on a shelf, their artwork big and splashy, and if a record got scratched or warped, it made a vicious Frisbee.

Then along came the compact disc, or CD, a digitized, plastic coaster that debuted in 1981 and would, industry leaders predicted, write vinyl's epitaph.

It nearly did. Major music chains dropped the format entirely, and albums were relegated to the oldies bin of used-record stores.

But the LP and its runt cousin, the "45" single, are making a healthy, albeit small, comeback. Vinyl stores are cropping up, and you can now find a limited selection of LPs at some retail outlets.

In 1993 only 1.2 million vinyl records were sold in the United States, according to the Recording Industry Association of America. By comparison, 495 million compact discs were sold that year.

However, the number of vinyl albums sold nearly doubled to 2.2 million in 1995, the most recent year figures are available. Turntables also are doing a brisk, though limited, business. Gene Hass, a salesman at the Best Buy store in Rockville, Md.,

Some music comes out early in vinyl

Vinyl has gotten a recent boost from contemporary groups such as Hootie & the Blowfish and Pearl Jam, which have paid tribute to the format by releasing vinyl versions of their recordings a week before distributing compact discs and cassettes.

It's a way for the bands to help keep the format alive, they say, and still feel a lot of nostalgia for them, said Jim Meris, a spokesman for Geffen Records.

Meris said many record companies have begun pressing 10,000 to 20,000 vinyl versions of new releases, which "usually sell out immediately. Hard-core fans consider them collectible items. For that reason alone, I think vinyl is here to stay." The owner of Vinyl Inc., a new and used-record store in Silver Spring, Md., opened his shop seven years ago, convinced that "the LP and compact disc could peacefully coexist." So far, he said, they have: Among his 6,000 CDs and 4,000 records, sales are almost evenly split.

like baseball cards.

More than 100,000 albums and seven-inch singles are squeezed into Groff's store, where "Wonderful Day," a collection of Doris Day's finest, sits side by side with Pearl Jam's latest hits.

For years, Groff said, his store was less a hot by aging baby boomers who refused to adopt the latest music technology.

"A lot of people were sick of the next big thing," Groff said. "First it was the eight-track, then the cassette, now the CD. ... They'd rather stay loyal to the turntable they bought when they were in college."

'Empire,' 'Shine' reach local theaters

Combined wine services

Movies playing in south-central Idaho this weekend. Opinions are by Los Angeles Times and Knight-Ridder Newspapers reviewers. Ratings by the Motion Picture Association of America are: (G) for general audiences; (PG) parental guidance urged because of material possibly unsuitable for children; (PG-13) parents are strongly cautioned to give guidance for attendance of children younger than 13; (R) restricted, younger than 17 admitted only with parent or adult guardian; (NC-17) no one younger than 17 admitted.

• "Absolute Power" — Clint Eastwood plays a cat burglar accidentally intertwined with official Washington in this sleek, and satisfying entertainment, a twisty tale of coincidence and deceit that serves as a tribute to that increasingly endangered species, Hollywood professionalism. (R, for violence, sexuality and language.) (Mall Cinema, Jerome Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley, Magic Lantern Cinema of Ketchum)

• "The Beautician and the Beast" — Fran Drescher is a Queens' cosmetologist who gives a Stalinist dictator a makeover. It's an old story with a side of schmaltz, but the script is smartly funny and Drescher is a hoot. With Timothy Dalton. (PG, for some mild language and sensuality.)

ty.) (Jerome Cinema, Liberty Theater of Hailey, Ace Theater of Wendell)

• "Dante's Peak" — Can a bucolic small town in the Pacific Northwest possibly be in danger from a long-dormant volcano? Volcanologist Pierce Brosnan thinks so, but no one in authority wants to listen. Guess who has the last laugh. (PG-13, for disaster-related peril and gore.) (Twin Cinema, Jerome Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley, Ace Theater of Wendell, Sun Valley Opera House)

• "The Empire Strikes Back" — This second-movie-in-the-"Star Wars" trilogy, newly reedited by creator George Lucas, features Yoda, Han Solo and Princess Leia's romance blooms, and our first glimpse of Darth Vader's raspberry-ripple head. (Twin Cinema, Ski Time 4 Cinemas of Ketchum)

• "The English Patient" — A mesmerizing romantic epic-taken from a prize-winning novel and starring Ralph Fiennes, Juliette Binoche and Kristin Scott Thomas in parallel World War II love stories that illustrate the theorem that "the heart is an organ of fire." Poetic, elusive, evanescent. (R, for sexuality, some violence and language.) (Jerome Cinema)

New movies

• "Evita" — Despite all the hoopla and Madonna's perfect fit for the title role, director Alan Parker and company can do no more than provide a cinematic copy of the stage play. It looks great but feels distant and devoid of emotional involvement. (PG, thematic elements, images of violence, and for some sexuality and language.) (Twin Cinema)

• "Fools Rush In" — This beguiling winner is in the best tradition of Hollywood love stories, romantic and amusing, yet possessed of depth and in touch with reality and with charismatic stars in well-written roles. Filling the bill delightfully are Matthew Perry as a Manhattan WASP and Salma Hayek as a Mexican-American beauty who meet in Las Vegas. (PG-13, for sensuality and brief language.) (Twin Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley, Ski Time 4 Cinemas of Ketchum)

• "Jerry Maguire" — A satisfying and personal romantic comedy that fulfills the promise of writer-director Cameron Crowe and gives Tom Cruise a chance to expand within his range as a sports agent whose life falls apart. Pleasingly idiosyncratic, with terrific supporting work by Renee Zellweger, Cuba Gooding Jr. and numerous other actors

sionate FBI agent Lonnie Hawkins; and Renée Russo, as Gibson's wife. (Burley Theater)

• "Scream" — Wes Craven and his writer, Kevin Williamson, spoof horror pictures, especially those aimed at teens, while generating plenty of thrills and chills. It's gleefully subversive as it explores the relationship between gory movies and their audience. With Neve Campbell, Skeet Ulrich, Courteney Cox, David Arquette, Drew Barrymore, Henry Winkler. (R, for strong graphic horror violence and gore and for language.) (Twin Cinema)

• "Secrets & Lies" — Wondrously British director Mike Leigh's story of the love and chaos created by a young black woman's search for her birth mother won the Palme d'Or at Cannes and the best actress award for star Brenda Blethyn. A completely accessible work that will go straight to the hearts of audiences. (R, for language.) (Twin Cinema, Gooding Cinema)

• "Shine" — Based on the true story of a young pianist caught between genius and madness, this Australian film is a throwback to the best of old-fashioned Hollywood movies, able to move an audience without insulting it in the process. Popular filmmaking at its smartest and most persuasive. (PG-13, for nudity/sensuality and intense thematic elements.) (Twin Cinema, Ski Time 4 Cinemas)

• "Star Trek: First Contact" — You'll love this film if you're already a fan of the series, but if you aren't, you'll feel like you're at a reunion of somebody else's family. (Twin Cinema)

• "Star Wars" — Forget the added footage; only the fanatics will even notice. The point about the reissue of the beloved George

Lucas classic is not that it's new and improved, but that it's just as good as it ever was — which is saying a lot. With Harrison Ford, Carrie Fisher and Mark Hamill, as always. (PG, for sci-fi violence and brief mild language.) (Twin Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley, Ski Time 4 Cinemas of Ketchum)

• "That Dam Cat" — It's by and large an image reworking of Disney's beloved 1959 release, but Christina Ricci, as a 15-year-old bored with her small-town existence, and Bess Armstrong, as her amusingly prissy and obtuse mother, make good impressions. With Doug E. Doug. (PG, for mild thematic elements.) (Twin Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley)

• "Vegas Vacation" — The fourth and worst episode of National Lampoon's "Vacation" series finds the Griswolds in Las Vegas facing various crises of temptation. With Chevy Chase, Beverly D'Angelo and Randy Quaid. Directed by Stephen Herek. (PG, for sensuality, language and thematic elements.)

(Twin Cinema, Century Cinema of Burley, Ski Time 4 Cinemas of Ketchum)

• "Zeus and Roxanne" — The title characters are a dog and a dolphin who strike up a friendship, which helps propel Zeus' owner (Steve Gattberg) and the marine biologist studying Roxanne (Kathleen Quinlan), single parents both, into a romance. The result is a harmless if sticky coarctance you wouldn't want to see unless accompanied by a small child. (PG, for mild thematic elements.) (Liberty Theater of Hailey)

'Infinity' reaches local video stores

The Washington Post

New videos in Twin Falls stores this week:
 • "House Arrest" (PG) — What can a kid do to prevent his parents' trial separation? In this fresh, effective comedy, high school sophomore Grover Beindorf (Kyle Howard) opts for the iffy strategy of locking Mom and Dad (Jamie Lee Curtis and Kevin Pollak) in the basement until they make up.

New videos

A few of Grover's pals decide incarceration might help their parents' marriages. Soon, two couples and a single mom have been forced downstairs with the squabbling Beindorfs. Upstairs, four teen-agers and three preteens hold a marathon party until Grover unites jailbirds and prisoners in a group therapy session, conducted via video linkups. It's a sitcom-quality story line, but clever writing (by Michael Hitchcock) and ingratiating performances give "House Arrest" lots of oomph. One quibble: The happy ending offers a pat solution to the problem of divorce. Kids 9 and up should enjoy this; a few mildly raunchy jokes give it the PG rating.

• "Infinity" (PG) — Matthew Broderick's directorial debut (scripted by his mother, Patricia Broderick) is about the moral evolution of physicist Richard Feynman (played by Broderick), who was awarded the Nobel Prize in 1958. In this film, freely adapted from two chapters in Feynman's books, Broderick's disarming personality puts an appealing spin on Feynman as a wide-eyed innocent and genius.

It starts with the precocious 6-year-old Feynman (played by Jeffrey Fore) asking his father (Peter Riegert) questions about inertia and concludes with the young adult (Broderick) helping to create the atomic bomb while commuting 100 miles to the bedside-of-his-siling-wife, Arline (Patricia Arquette). In between, we see the development of a great mind that has to deal with the dawning of the nuclear age and the physical disintegration of his trust love. Contains tastefully handled sexual situations.

• "Last Man Standing" (R) — Walter Hill's modernized take on Akira Kurosawa's 1961 classic, "Yojimbo," spares no effort to be violently and aesthetically entertaining. With willy-nilly references to Clint Eastwood westerns, "The Wild Bunch" and various prohibition-era gangster flicks, the movie's an energetic round of shoot-'em-ups, interspersed with central performer Bruce Willis' tight-lipped, tough-guy chatter.

But the movie, in which Willis pits two liquor-running gangs against each other, is disarmingly empty.

This Billy Bob made it big with best-actor Oscar nomination

Knight-Ridder News Service

A few weeks ago, Billy Bob Thornton, the director, writer and Oscar-nominated star of the acclaimed new drama "Sling Blade," needed career advice of the sort you can't really get from a manager, an agent or even a fellow actor.

But he followed up his award-winning performance as the mentally retarded ex-convict Karl Childers in "Sling Blade" with the much-coveted role of the snaky, J a m e s C a m e l l e - l i k e neo-noir drama "The Man in the Hat" in which he played a manager in the film version of the novel "The Usual Suspects" by Stephen King, in which a Bill Clinton-like character has Clinton-like misadventures on the campaign trail.

"So I just called him," says Thornton. "Him" would be the president of the United States, with whom Thornton shares a home state, Arkansas, and some mutual friends, Harry and Susan Thomason, producers of the "Hearst Action" TV series in which Thornton co-starred.

According to Hollywood gossip, Tom Hanks bowed out of the lead role out of respect for the president — John Travolta is currently set to play the part — but Thornton says Clinton gave him the presidential seal of approval.

"He told me to go for it," says Thornton. "Said it sounded like a real good opportunity."

In his Arkansas drawl, Thornton makes both the opportunity to star in a Mike Nichols movie and the conversation with the chief executive sound like something everyday. ("I figured I better take advantage because I might not be that good of friends with the next president," he jokes.) But Thornton understands that what is happening to him is something way out of the ordinary.

"I am overwhelmed," he says. "Never, ever thought it would happen like this."

Thornton has been nominated as best actor by both the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences and Screen Actors Guild for his performance in "Sling Blade," and the entire primary cast has been nominated by the latter as best ensemble. This is especially gratifying because Thornton wrote most of the characters, including the gay Dollar Store manager played by John Ritter and the abusive, alcoholic god of beer played by Dwight Yoakam.

If his uncanny portrayal of Karl, the thick-voiced child-man who returns to the little Arkansas town where he killed his mother and her lover two decades earlier, does get honored, says Thornton, it will be only "because I've had plenty of time to work on it."

He first came up with Karl's distinctively dopey look and throat-clearer of a voice 15 years ago after becoming frustrated on the set of a TV remake of "I Was a Fugitive on a Chain Gang" in which he had about four lines. Thornton thought the director was asking him to overact. Dressed in an itchy, old-fashioned railroad conductor's outfit, he was disgusted that he had placed himself in such a demeaning position.

"So I was back in my dressing room, making faces at myself in the mirror, my collar all buttoned up, and I just looked like such an idiot. And all of a sudden, this voice came out, and I just did that whole opening monologue, just like you hear it in the movie. I didn't really write it; it just came out of me. I swear it did."

The monologue has Karl, head bowed, eyes on the floor, matter-of-factly telling a high school newspaper reporter how he came to find his mama and the neighborhood bully all tangled up in each other, and knowing from the Bible reading his daddy gave him, how wrong that was, how he took this old knife, a sling blade, and killed them. And how he's been in this institution for 20 years now and isn't unhappy with that, but how he reduces he has to leave and go somewhere else on account of the doctors say he's fine.

Improving CSI men hope to take another step up

By Brad Boslin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Now that the question of whether the College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team will qualify for the post-season has been all but answered, the Eagles enter the final regular-season weekend with loftier goals.

"I feel good about our chances of winning the tournament," CSI head coach Jim Thrash said Thursday, referring to the Region 18 tourney March 5-8.

CSI, currently in eighth place in the 10-team Scenic West Athletic Conference, will qualify for the tournament with a win or a Treasure Valley loss over the final three games.

Thrash hopes that will come tonight when CSI hosts the Dixie Rebels at 8 p.m.

Once that hurdle is cleared, three victories are all that separate the Eagles from a trip to the national tournament.

High hopes for a team that has lost twice as many league games as it has won?

Maybe, but Thrash's optimism seems well-founded when considering the Eagles' recent performance.

After a clunker against Ricks here two weeks ago, CSI beat league title contenders North Idaho and Utah Valley before slipping to a hot Salt Lake team last Saturday.

Even in that game, CSI managed 72 points and a had a chance to win in the late going despite a sub-par showing.

"I think we've improved in some areas," Thrash said. "We're getting better play from some of the guys off the bench. We're still practicing hard, with good enthusiasm."
CSI has averaged 78 points over the last three games — almost nine points above its season average.

The main reason? Defense, Thrash said.

"Defensively, we've been creating turnovers," that have created easy scoring opportunities, he said.

Point guard Tony Heard and the rest of the Eagles have been pressuring opposing defenses, too, with a more up-tempo attack.

"We want to push the ball up the floor and take the break when it's there," Thrash said. "We don't want it to just be a halfcourt game."

It almost certainly won't be against Dixie, which brings the league's second-highest scoring average (92.3) and highest average points allowed (85.5).

The Rebels spanked CSI, 85-71, in St. George last month after the Eagles ruled from 26 points down to within six.

The league's leading scorer, guard Aaron Henderson, scored 28 in that game. He averages 19.

In addition to controlling Henderson, CSI will need to continue improving its rebounding. Freshman forward Floyd Farrow is pulling down 6.6 per game and has increased his scoring average to 10.1 per league game. That gives the Eagles four double-digit scorers (Broadway, 15.9; Mullanoh 13; Heard 10.5) in Scenic West play.

Injury report: Farrow went down in practice Wednesday when he was bumped on the left knee. He has been battling buritis in the knee since mid-season. —Francis Junger also went down in practice, injuring his knee Thursday. His status will be evaluated today.

TIME STANDS STILL

After hitting the game-winning free throw with no time left on the clock against Bonners Ferry, Marcel Jensen of Buhl, right, leaps into the arms of Jana Watson while Angie Schroeder celebrates the A-2 state first-round victory on her own.

MERIDIAN — Shooting less than 50 percent from the free-throw line during the regular season, Buhl's Marcel Jensen saved it at the basket in disbelief that she could win the Indians' first-round A-2 state championship game with Bonners Ferry in just one shot.

The odds were in favor of the senior to put in the game winner with no time on the clock and the game tied at 44.

Jensen drew a vicious foul from Becky Bateman 25 feet away from the basket as time expired, giving her three chances at the line to break the tie.

She only needed the one for the 45-44 win.

"It took a lot of guts to call that," said Buhl coach Joe Shepard, admitting he was thinking overtime when the Indians got the ball back with less than seven seconds left in the game.

Once the Indians stop celebrating, they need to get ready for Preston. Buhl faces the state runners-up from last year after the Indians upset third-ranked Bishop Kelly 52-48.

Game time is 8 p.m. at Centennial High School. The winner of that game will face the winner of American Falls and Middleton, also winners in the first round, for the state title.

Jensen could have avoided some of the pressure, and heretics, if the Indians had withstood the Badgers' frantic fourth quarter pressure.

Hagerman upends Murtaugh in A-4

It was set up perfectly.

The top four-ranked Class A-4 girls' basketball teams in the state could meet in the semifinals of the Idaho state championships. And with that show the dominance of Districts 2 and 4.

According to plan, the clashes were supposed to be District 4 champion Murtaugh vs. District 2 runner-up Kendrick and District 2 champion Troy vs. District 4 runner-up Dietrich. But somebody forgot to tell Hagerman.

The No. 5 seed out of District 4 stunned Murtaugh 41-38 Thursday in the second round to advance to a semifinal bout with Kendrick, who defeated Greenleaf Friends in the nightcap.

Dietrich withstood a fourth-quarter Nampa Christian press to defeat the Trojans 33-30 and set up a rematch of last year's championship game with Troy who beat Rockland earlier Thursday.

After losing the first day, both Richfield and Ruff River came away with wins. The Tigers defeated Rimrock 68-55, while the Trojans smothered Kootenai 57-28.

That sets up a District 4 contest in the loser's bracket semifinals today at 11:45 a.m. in Middleton. The winner advances to the consolation championship.

In other games North Gem beat Cambridge 46-44 and Garden Valley defeated Lakeside 61-56 in overtime. Both were loser-out games.

Gibson's 35 lead Spartans past Burley

RUPERT — Home was finally where the heart was Thursday night at Burley-Minico.

Lance Gibson scored 35 points for the Spartans, who beat the Bobcats for the second time in the A-1 Region III boys' basketball tournament, ending Burley's season with a punishing 85-56 defeat.

"Lance Gibson did not want to play his last game tonight," said Burley coach Matt Harr. "He did everything he wanted to do tonight, offensively and defensively, the whole game. They did a good job of getting him the ball."

It was the first time in the teams' four meetings this season that the home team prevailed. In the first round of the tournament, the fourth-seeded Spartans (11-12) beat third seed Burley (11-12), before falling to Highland.

The win puts Minico one game away from the regional championship, starting with Saturday's match against Highland.

"If we can play 32 minutes like we played tonight, we'll be hard to beat," said Minico coach Mike Chatterton. "The kids understood this was the district championship and if they lost tonight, their season would be over. And they weren't ready for the season to be over."

Burley fans sat helplessly as they saw a frightening start akin to the girls' team's 18-0 first quarter lapse to Nampa last Saturday. The Spartans scored the first 10 points of the game, and led 19-2 with 12:30 left to play in the first quarter.

"I don't know if we were tight, or nervous, or whatever," Harr said. "We talked about being aggressive, but it looked like everyone was waiting for someone else to step up and be aggressive tonight."

Burley's Tyler Carson and Ty Jones hit 3-pointers and Scott Gerratt hit a lay-in at the buzzer to cut the lead to 10. The Bobcats then tried a half-court press in the second quarter and were

Which Magic Valley boys' basketball teams will be going to the state tournament March 5-8? Here's who's in ...

- Class A-4
  - Shoshone, Carey, Hagerman and Oakley
  - Thanks to the 16-team format, last year's local representatives are already in.
- And who's on the bubble ...
- Class A-2
  - Minico — needs three more district tournament wins, or one win and an inter-district playoff victory.
- Class A-3
  - Jerome and Wood River. The Tigers need just one win.
- Class A-3
  - Declo OR Wendell. Monday's winner will be within one victory. The grab will need a backdoor run. Glenns Ferry and Gooding are still alive.
- Class A-2
  - Dietrich and Murtaugh. Ranked third in the state, the Blue Devils now need a playoff win to sneak into the 16-team tournament.

Nuggets make 3 trades on last day

Hornets, Pacers cut 2 deals each

The Associated Press

The NBA trading deadline passed Thursday with a flurry of movement that many had expected, but six deals went through involving 15 players and four draft picks.

The Denver Nuggets were the busiest team, making two deals with Indiana and one with Charlotte.

The Hornets made two trades and the New Jersey Nets, who spoke to 21 of the other 28 NBA teams, made just one deal.

The biggest trade, in terms of volume, sent Mark Jackson and LaSalle Thompson to Denver back to their former team, the Indiana Pacers. In return, the Pacers sent Vincent Askew and Eddie Johnson to the Nuggets along with two second-round draft choices.

The Los Angeles Lakers acquired a sharpshooting small forward to fill in for injured Robert Horry, getting George McCloud from New Jersey for center Joe Kleine, a 1997 first-round draft pick and a conditional second-round pick.

McCloud was one of nine players involved in Monday's stunning trade between the Nets and Dallas Mavericks.

The Nuggets were involved in two other trades in the deal with Indiana, Denver sent rookie forward Darvin Ham to the Pacers in exchange for second-year point guard Jerome Allen.

Denver also acquired veteran guard Ricky Pierce to the Charlotte Hornets for guard Anthony Goldwire and center George Zidek.

The Hornets made one other deal, sending swingman Scott Burrell to the Golden State Warriors for forward Donald Royal. Toronto and Milwaukee also made a minor deal shortly before the 6 p.m. EST deadline. The Raptors sent center Akeem to the Bucks for guard Shawn Respert.

The biggest surprise was the absence of trades for Tim Jackson, Chris Mullin, Derek Harper, Clarence Weatherspoon and Dominique Wilkins. Jackson, Mullin and Weatherspoon had been mentioned in trade rumors for weeks, and Harper and Wilkins had been prominent in more recent speculation.

Harper, who wanted to be traded to Houston, vetoed a deal that would have sent him to the Utah Jazz, sources said.

The Nets had a plethora of offers for the players they received from Dallas.

"Jim Jackson and Chris Gattage drew a lot of attention. George McCloud drew a lot of attention. Teams also expressed an interest in Sam Cassell and Eric Montross," general manager John Nash said.

"It was like I anticipated, it was very hectic. It was a mad race because teams were all calling the same time. There were other opportunities presented, none of which we thought were that attractive. So we sat through the day and sifted through the opportunities and determined we'd like to look at these fellows through the balance of the season."

In terms of filling a need, the Lakers and Pacers came out the biggest winners. Los Angeles was in need of help at small forward since Horry is out for at least two weeks with a sprained knee. In McCloud, they get a shooter who averaged career highs of 18.9 points, 4.8 rebounds and 2.7 assists for the Mavericks last season and ranked second in the NBA in 3-pointers made with 257.

The Pacers had struggled this season with Travis Best at point guard. In Jackson, they get back the player who helped them reach the conference finals in 1994 and 1995.

"This was shocking to me to some degree," said Jackson, who was wearing a leftover Pacers hat with his No. 13 on the front during a press conference before Thursday's Indiana-Denver game. "I didn't know where I would wind up or who was calling."

"But I never would have imagined being back here," just because of egos and different things."

Former Denver Nuggets LaSalle Thompson, left, and Mark Jackson are greeted by a well-wisher Thursday at the Indiana Pacers' office in Indianapolis. The Pacers sent Vincent Askew and Eddie Johnson to Denver for Thompson and Jackson, who both played previously for the Pacers.

PAST BATTERED AND BEATEN, Tim Rutherford spelled the debut of the new-look New Jersey Nets by scoring 35 points to lead the Miami Heat on their season-high 97-point win, 97-87 Thursday night.

The game was the Nets' first since Monday's debacle in which the player trade that sent Chris Gatling, Jimmy Jackson, Eric Montross, Sam Cassell and George McCloud from Dallas to New Jersey.

The new Nets were an audacious team as they battled Miami for almost three quarters before succumbing to Rutherford's 23 second-half points and the Miami defense. The Heat limited the Jersey to 5-of-22 shooting in the fourth quarter.

Alonso Mourning added 16 points and former New F.J. Brown had 11 points and a career-high tying 17 rebounds for Miami.

Tim Ellis had 25 points and 10 rebounds and Aronis McDougal had 17 points and nine rebounds for the rebuilding Nuggets, who shot 30 percent overall and put 23-25 from 3-point range.

Cal Ripken arrived for spring training at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and talked for the first time about Baltimore's plan to move him from shortstop to third base.

"Maybe some of us need a challenge toward the end of our careers," he said. "I look at it in a positive way. I'm looking at it as a new beginning."

"We got a chance to relearn the position again and maybe extend my career. I have no problems with moving to third base. Never have."

White Sox
Albert Belle worked out with Chicago for the first time, fouled off pitches on his first two swings of the spring and then did what his new team expects: drove a ball over the fence.

Belle's volatile temper was discussed during a question-and-answer session.

"I can't control that. I'm not worried about that. As long as I get an opportunity to go out and hit home runs, drive in some runs, steal a few bases, make a couple of great catches," Belle said. "That's all I'm concerned about. I guess the image part will take care of itself."

Padres
Rickey Henderson, who probably will be traded during spring training, arrived in camp at Peoria, Ariz.

Bonds again at top of baseball's salary chart

The Associated Press

Barry Bonds is back on top as the player with baseball's highest average salary. Danny Tarabull, meanwhile, is happy to just have a team.

Bonds agreed Thursday to a $42.5 million, six-year deal he signed as a free agent in December 1992. The extension calls for $9.7 million in 1999 and $10.7 million in 2000.

San Francisco has a $10.3 million option for 2001 and must pay a $2.5 million buyout if it doesn't exercise it.

"Arguably, it could be his last contract. Obviously, it's a big commitment on the part of the franchise," Giants general manager Brian Sabean said after the deal was completed in Scottsdale, Ariz. "There were some heated feelings. Both sides got some things off their chests."

Bonds had been unhappy since five players leaping from him in average salary.

Tarabull, coming off a $20.5 million, five-year contract, was unhappy when just two teams made offers. He has rejected Philadelphia's offer as too low, then agreed Thursday to a $2.3 million, one-year contract.

Tarabull hit .254 for the Chicago White Sox last season with 27 homers and 101 RBIs.

Mariners
Dennis Martinez will be given a chance in spring training to earn a job in Seattle's starting rotation.

Martinez, 42, agreed Thursday to a minor-league contract and will join the Mariners on Friday. He would get a $250,000, one-year contract if he makes the team and the chance to earn performance bonuses.

"He's a veteran who could very well make the club," general manager Woody Woodward said. "He certainly brings a lot of experience and knowledge of how to pitch."

Gooding, Glens Ferry stay alive in A-3 boys' basketball tournament

By John News Times-News

GODDING - Gooding and Glens Ferry, the two hottest seeds, playing their third straight game in four days, each seem close to stay alive in the A-3 District 4 Canyon Conference boys' basketball tournament Thursday.

The Senators led the first three throws when it mattered to defeat the Valley Vikings 47-45 in overtime while the Pilgrims outlasted the Filer Gladiators 68-66 in the late game.

Gooding and Glens Ferry will battle in another lower-cut game Monday at 6:35 following the Wendell and Declo in a battle of underdogs.

Gooding 47, Valley 46 0T. Ray Infanger must have ice in his veins. The Gooding senior guard could score his teams last seven points of the game.

"I knew I made them because at practice today I hit 35 in a row," Infanger, who had a game-high 14 points after strong second half, said.

"Everyone has been working hard and the guards have stepped up. We just want a shot."

Valley looked as they would run the ball for the last minute, but the shot at the buzzer went off the rim.

"I felt a little bit of pressure, but I didn't want this to be our last game," said Infanger.

Kadi Smith led all scorers with 22 points while Tackett paced Filer with 22 points.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): What was locked up should remain so for period of time. By exposing information too early, it could lose its impact. Message clear. Leo, Aquarius persons play roles.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23): Parental interference could thwart love relationship. Be diplomatic, but let it be known you're not being intimidated. Relationship is fulfilled — exciting!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do your homework. Means prepared for barrage of questions. You get popular vote, but there are misgivings. Taurus and another Scorpio express resentment, could cause trouble.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Lunar aspect highlights philosophy, retrieval related to exciting assignment. Remember: Takes two to tango. Means don't permit petty argument to stifle career prospects.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Release from obligation comes early — get promise in written form. Questions arise concerning financial background, possible inheritance. You'll discover hiding place — disillusionment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You're accused of hiding your wealth. Protect precious privacy, don't get bogged into "telling all." Spotlight on legal agreements, partnership and marriage. Virgo involved.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): What begins as onerous task will ultimately be pleasant, profitable. Key is organization, confidence, contacts with power. Beware: Clash of ideas lends stimulation to exciting scenario.

Valerie Bertinelli uncovers 'Night Sins'

It has elements she's tackled before in dramatic trends, including children in peril and romance in a time of crisis.

However, the continuing appeal that combination holds for longtime TV fixture Valerie Bertinelli accounts for her starring role in "Night Sins," Sun-day and Tuesday's CBS miniseries based on Tami Hoag's best-selling novel. She plays a newly arrived State Bureau of Investigation agent in a Washington State town, where she joins the local police chief (Harry Hamlin) — who lost his wife and son to a killer — in the search for an abducted youngster, the child of a local doctor. Steered by taunts from the boy's kidnapper, the two investigators eventually become involved romantically, to the distinct displeasure of a reporter (Mariska Hargitay, of next week's new NBC series "Prince Street") who's an ex-girlfriend of Hamlin's character. Martin Donovon also appears in the drama, which was directed by Robert Allan Ackerman and adapted for television by John Lockley.

"It's great that in a way that I'm not the mother this time," Bertinelli says of making another tale in which a parent apologizes over a missing child. She's had such roles in the TV-movie "Rockyback" and the miniseries "In a Child's Name," and she allows that in doing "Night Sins," she "felt so bad for Karen (Sillas), watching her do those gut-wrenching crying scenes, though she does them brilliantly. I would look at the dailies and think, 'Thank goodness that's not me. I don't have to rip my heart out in this picture like I do in so many others.'"

Though she and her rock-star husband Eddie Van Halen are the parents of a youngster (Wolfgang, or as she calls him, "Wolfie") who turns six in March, Bertinelli claims that "Night Sins" and its theme "didn't affect me in the same way as any of the other (child-abduction tales) I've done, because it's such a true story. It's from a book that's a really fun read, so I could take myself out of it and think, 'This didn't happen to me.'"

"I'm not sure that's the dreadful things like it don't happen in this world, but I was able to go whole-hog with it without going home afterward thinking, 'That poor child!'

Indeed, Bertinelli recalls that filming the custody-case-related "In a Child's Name" was "so hard on me, because I knew (the real woman portrayed in it).

"She'd come to the set, so it was really tough. This one isn't your run-of-the-mill missing-child story, though. It's staged and filmed in an offset, off-center way, even though I don't like to compare it to other things, it's more like 'Fargo,' which happened to be my favorite movie last year. You don't completely there somehow," Bertinelli concedes that a project like "Night Sins" is "not something I usually like to do things that really hit me deeply, and that I feel better the world in some way, and this doesn't do anything to me, except entertain you. It's done in a very artistic way, though. The creative team made this very different for me, and once [Ackerman] signed on as director, I knew we were going to get amazing actors you normally wouldn't see in a television movie."

with a blond wig.

Q: You continue to see all of the principals from O.J. Simpson's criminal trial on TV, but prosecutor Marcia Clark seems to have disappeared. What happened to her?

A: Like every one else on both sides of the case, Clark, 43, has been writing a book, but her publishers "taking much longer than those of her colleagues and adversaries, and was pushed back from last fall to this spring.

She's also been

No commercials during 'Schindler's List' on NBC

For a commercial TV network to show a program without ads, it would have to be a special project indeed.

"Schindler's List" certainly qualifies, and director Steven Spielberg's Oscar-winning Holocaust drama makes its broadcast-television debut Sunday on NBC, in an evening-long presentation that will have advertisements only before the movie begins and after it ends. In screenwriter Steven Zaillian's adaptation of Thomas Keneally's fact-based novel (filmed almost entirely in black-and-white, with two intermissions also planned for the telecast), it is the title role as Oskar Schindler, a German industrialist who used his business dealings to save more than 1000 Jews from certain death in Polish concentration camps.

Overseen largely by his accountant (Ben Kingsley), Schindler's final list comprises a number of names of those who otherwise would be earmarked for extermination by one of his Nazi acquaintances, the charismatic, yet patently evil Commandant as many movies certainly are, but he does put in an appearance from time to time.

Next up is a small part in the USA Network adaptation of the Herman Melville classic "Moby Dick," to be filmed in Australia with Patrick Stewart as Captain Ahab.

If you're a fan, you'll remember that in the 1956 film of "Moby Dick," Peck was Ahab. Now he'll play Father Magpie, the canno role originally played by Orson Welles.

Steven Spielberg

Liam Neeson leads in this heart-wrenching film with his sensitivity and generosity.

... comes to represent Eric Beck, as Schindler ultimately refuses to using the producer's made: from war supplies to rescue as many Jews as he possibly can. Even then, though, he agrees on the belief that he could do more.

"For this picture, it is very important for it to be seen without any commercials," says Branko Lustig, a filmmaking veteran who co-produced "Schindler's List" Best Director and Best Adapted Screenplay with Spielberg and Gerald K. Molen.

Celebrity Gossip

Q: That is Rod Stewart in a dress in his video "If We Fall in Love Tonight," isn't it? What's going on?

A: Like many British men, Stewart, 52, thinks it's a lark to occasionally dress in drag and, in fact, belongs to a soccer team that once a year puts on ladies' gear for a night out together. (Stewart borrows his outfits from wife Rachel Hunter.) Their video is along dressed as men.

As it happens, the day of their night out was also the day of the video shoot, so you see him in his outfit, a black dress and heels, along

ALL MY CHILDREN

Edmund asked Maria to return to their bedroom. After retrieving a remnant of Skye's letter, Erica found articles on genetic blood disorders in Maria's case. Later, when Skye told her to ask Dimitri for the truth, Erica deduced he'd fathered Maria's baby. Tanner got Rósa to tell him about Hayley's past. He later stole a piece of cake from Adam and arranged for Laura to be blamed. Adam and Lisa finally kissed. Janet heard Trevor tell Amanda she's her mother. Tanner told Hayley he cares too much for Matteo to act on his feelings for her. Next Week: Erica makes a decision about Dimitri.

ANOTHER WORLD

Gabe was fatally shot. Cindy's statement to the police caused Joe to suspect Grant framed Jake for the bombing. As Bobby and Carl rushed Nicky to the hospital, he told Carl she's seeing Ryan. Rachel told Amanda she still loves Carl and believes he should know about her pregnancy. Sofia and Nick cared for Kirkland and Steven, unaware they faced being disowned. Carl visited Jake in jail with news that Nicky was alive. Amanda watched as the two plotted against Grant. Next Week: Grant shores up his defenses.

AS THE WORLD TURNS

After his wedding to Lily, Diego was shot dead. Lily was happy to see Lucinda alive, and shocked to see Holden with Lily. Lily later was jailed as a suspect. Margo had a FTS episode as she searched for her missing gun. Meanwhile, Emily aimed an imaginary gun at a photo of Diego. Connor and Mike wondered why Mark — who was nowhere to be found — hadn't given the security tape to the police. At the funeral home, Mike heard Pilar talking to Diego, and was stunned to hear Diego reply. Next Week: Holden's optimism for Lily may be premature.

BOLD AND BEAUTIFUL

Eric was upset over Lauren's decision to keep her distance. After urging Stephanie to tell Eric how she feels about him, Lauren managed to make Eric believe Clark was her man. Clark later learned of Lauren's plan to have Brooke sign over control of Forester to him. Thorne was upset when Taylor rejected his bid for a Tahiti trip. Ridge saw the papers Connor drew up for Grant. Meanwhile, the police realized Ridge would be late for his date with Taylor. Next Week: Horror hits Taylor's home.

THE CITY

Carla couldn't stop Tracy's wedding to Gino. Meanwhile, Tess and Buck married on the day before her surgery. Tony's fantasy of marrying Ally ended when she told him to get over with his life. Tracy's plan to thwart Gino's wedding night ardor by feigning a measles attack fizzled when he returned unexpectedly to find her "spotless." Nick got Zoey and Richard to admit their feelings for each other. Danny asked Ally for a date. Jacob had a surprise for Angie about the surrogate. Next Week: Buck and Tess prepare to face their future.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES

Bo admitted the videotape of him pocketing the money put him under King's control. Kristen intercepted a call about "Kristen" being in labor, and rushed to see Susan in the hospital. Abe warned Bo reuniting with Hope could ruin the undercover set-up. Marlena was too late to stop John marrying Kristen (actually Susan) before she delivers. Later, in her nurse's disguise, Kristen panicked when the doctor said Susan might need to have a C-section. How would Kristen expect to John the absence of a scar? Later, Laura urged Marlena to tell John the truth about Kristen. Jack prepared to go off to prison. Next Week: Hope and Billie unknowingly endanger Bo's life.

GENERAL HOSPITAL

Lois left town with her daughter. Alan's romantic overtures overcame Monica's fears of rejection because of her long-ago affair with Ned. Sonny's attempt to protect Brenda was thwarted by Taggart. Meanwhile, Harry prepared to disrupt Brenda's wedding. Bobbie and Nikolas unleashed their emotions on Laura. Carly was uneasy about the new closeness between Bobbie and Tony. Katherine told Stefan if Luke isn't cleared of the shooting, she'll name Stefan as the culprit. Next Week: Laura faces a new crisis.

GUIDING LIGHT

Blake and the twins were injured in a car accident, forcing Rick to make a confession as he prepared to operate on baby Kevin. Meanwhile, Jenna realized she must soon tell Buzz the truth about little Coop. Roger warned Amanda his family is the most important thing in his life. After realizing Ross now knew everything, Blake told Annie she no longer has any hold on her. Abigail reacted angrily to Rick's confession. J and Michelle took a step closer to each other. Next Week: Rev's search for her sibling takes her on a new path.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE

In Rio, Cassie and Kevin took a file from Farinaho's desk and found R.J.'s letter regarding powers of attorney over Carlo's accounts. Later as they shared a romantic moment, someone holding a gun watched from the shadows. The Bishop led to Maggie about having no knowledge of Eleanor's missing locket. Todd and Blair learned Starr had a rare blood disease with no known cure. Next Week: Kevin and Cassie face a new obstacle.

SUNSET BEACH

Gregory urged Ben to stop trying to clear Annie of murdering Del. Bette and Olivia realized Del stole the Deschanel jewels. Cole learned about Elaine's love for Armando Deschanel. In Annie's cyber message telling Meg to leave Sunset Beach backfired when Meg rushed to Ben's house to find Annie very much alive: Eddie kidnapped Paula. Next Week: Ricardo makes a devastating discovery.

YOUNG AND RESTLESS

Sharon told Grace of her fears of losing another child. After seeing Victor and Nikki kissing, Nick and Sharon learned a placental problem had developed, which meant she had to stay in bed for the duration of her pregnancy. Victoria told Cole and Victor she's leaving town to get some perspective on her life. During lunch with Kurt, Ashley's curiosity was piqued when someone recognized him. Next Week: Diane gets an unexpected dinner bid.

Scott Reeves:
What's in a name?

Scott Reeves, who plays Ryan McNeil on "The Young and the Restless," stars in the CBS film, "When the Cradle Falls," airing on March 4. "The film co-stars Martha Byrne (Lily), "As The World Turns," Linda Gray, and Cathy Lee Crosby. "I play a man who takes his life for granted until his child is kidnapped, and his whole world collapses around him," Reeves said. "He realizes that everything has changed and nothing will ever be the same for him and his wife, again."

Scott Reeves
Ryan on "TYAR"

Kidnapping a child has been called the most brutal crime committed by the most cowardly criminals.

Scott, who has a daughter with his wife, Melissa Reeves, said, "I can tell you that as a father, just the thought of it is devastating. I can only imagine the horror of discovering your child has been taken from you."

Asked if he was able to keep from thinking about his own youngster while making the movie, Reeves said, "No. Not really. As a matter of fact, she was on my mind all the time, and as it turned out, I feel this helped me with the character; it gave me something to draw on."

Reeves also has a new country music video called "Too Little, Too Late," in which he co-stars with the talented young country star, Nike.

ki Nelson. It's expected to be released in a few months.

"It's kind of a video within a video," Scott says. "You see me watching her make a video. I'm her director. I'm also her love interest. I'm an opportunist; a womanizer; a sleaze bag; always looking for what other people have to offer."

Back in 1991, when Scott introduced Ryan McNeil to "The Young and the Restless," McNeil was very much the opportunist and womanizer, and latter-day Yuppie, who saw Newman Enterprises as his field of dreams. He wooed and won the boss's daughter, Victoria (Heather Tom). He also wooed and later won the wealthy Nina Webster Chancellor Kimble (Tricia Cust), and settled into happy domesticity with her. But in recent months, life with the lovely Nina has been a little unsettling to say the least.

Top stars get mileage out of compact roles in sitcoms

Everything, they say, is relative — and on prime-time network TV these days, being a relative is one of the best gigs you can get.

Take Mary Tyler Moore, for example. Last season, the lady who charmed all of America in "The Dick Van Dyke Show" and "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" was poised for a major TV comeback, as star of a new season 5 series called "New York News."

But the series — part drama, part comedy and all wful — was a total dud, and not even TV's tenured sweetheart could carry that load on her shoulders.

But now, all of a sudden she's showing up on NBC's "The Naked Truth" as the high-strung mother of Tea Leoni's Nora. This time it's Leoni, as the star, who shoulders the pressures. Moore is there only for a handful of recurring guest spots — but with her workload reduced, she has found the perfect vehicle with which to swim in the TV mainstream of the '90s.

For the last two weeks she has been an absolute riot as Nora's mom, getting as many laughs from her expressions, timing and body language as from the scripted lines.

And George Segal, as her husband on "The Naked Truth," is another showbiz veteran who has made the most of this small but key opportunity.

It's a brilliant tactic, really. Big stars returning in high-risk vehicles, like Bill Cosby in "Cosby" and Michael J. Fox in "Spin City," are taking big chances (which, in both those cases, have paid off). If their new shows succeed, their power base is increased; if not, it's substantially eroded.

Seeing is believing...
