"Trying to stop (chemica) weapons' spread by ourselves would be like trying to stop the wind that helps carry their poison to its target," Clinton said.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R.N.C., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and a staunch opponent, has nonetheless decided to stand in its way no longer. He will hold a hearing on the treaty on Tuesday — its 14th congressional hearing since first Helms is negociating with the administration on legislation that would separately address, concerns on monitoring and enforcing the treaty as well as its effects on the U.S. chemical industry.

While Majority Leader Trent Lott has promised to bring up the treaty before it takes effect, Clinton would still need a two-thirds majority in the Senate for ratification.

Don't wait for whenever

It hit me during lunch the other day. I was sitting there, looking at what I'd ordered – a couple of Big Macs, a large order of fries, a chocolate sundae and a diet soft drink – and I'm suddenly wondering if anyone else can see the inconsistency in front of me. I'm about to consume about 23 baillion grams of fat, and then I'm going to wash it down with a diet soda.

What can I say? I'm trying to lose some weight.

Unfortunately, I'm doing stuff like that all the time, which is probably why all the time, which is probably why all only. The fact, the rate at which I'm dovely. In fact, the rate at which I'm losting weight is so slow and gradual. I'm actually gaining weight they, if Congress can play numbers games with the national debt, I can do it with my weight. I spend a half hour on the treadmill, and I reward myself with some nachos and bean dip. I decide to eliminate seconds, so I help myself to enough firsts to feed as small Caribbean nation. I make it all the way through the day doing everything right, and then at bedtime "just one chip won't hur" truns into "where did that entire bag of potato chips go?" Think of it as negative weight loss. And don't tell Richard Simmons.

Of course, there have been times when I've done pretty well with my weight loss program. During one stretch, I put together almost two "weeks of eating moderately and exercising regularly. I was starting to feel a difference. My clothes fit more comfortably. I could be not or could make it inference. My clothes fit more comfortably. I could be not or could make it had not been or the top of the stairs without having to eit down to eath my breath. I don't think anyone else could see the difference, but it didn't really matter because I felt better – and I feit better about myself.

But just as my new-found discipline was about to become a habit, I entered a period of long, late nights filled with demanding deadlines. Lat in front of iny word processor until the early hours of morning after morning, inunching on snacks and guzzling sugary sods to help me stay awake.

Within just a few days, the habit of sensible eating and exercise was a memory.

Unfortunate, but understandable. I was too title to get on the treadmill.

Within just a few days, the habit of sensible eating and exercise was a large to the sensible of the color o thing else to do, in which case I would start the next night. Or the next. Or ... whenever.

And have you ever noticed how infrequently "whenever rolls around?

Carrying a heavy spiritual burden

Seminars use faith to help people lose extra pounds

By H. R. Welxel

BUHL -- Losing weight while gaining spiritual wealth is the proposed outcome of the Weigh-Down seminars.

"We are not intended by God to be enslaved to food," said Sharon Rosenbaum, co-coordinator of the 12-week program scheduled to begin next week at the First Christian Church in

"I lost 25 pounds and I'm not dieting," said Linda Au/derhelde, who has attended two Weigh-Down programs at the Twin Falls Reformed Church. "It's a wonderful spiritual program. Losing weight is a bonus."
The Reformed church has sponsored this program for almost two years. Tami
Au/derheide coordinates it.

In Jerome, a group has completed the 12-week course and liked it so well they are continuing a second time, according to that group's coordinator linen Myers.

"In never saw anything like it," she said. "The changes that are made personally are worth more than the weight loss. You study Scripture and learn what God said about our weight and food. One person in our group lost 30 pounds and another said she lost 10 pounds, but felt that was the equivalent of 20 pounds because usually, over the holidays, she gains (an extra) 10 pounds. With what you learn from the Scriptures, when you find yourself in froat of the refrig, you quiety close the door, get down on your knees and ralk to God."

Videos, audio tapes and a discussion guide are included in the program at a cost of $103 for the 12-week session. An advanced course is held at a cost of $555.
"If you used Slim Fast for a month, it would cost you that much," Myers said.

Dahl opposes future annexation. She said the city has adequate sewer and water facilities, but it will be questionable whether the city can keep up with other services, such as city personnel, upkeep of downtown and additional water and sewer demands.

Government decides to barge at least half of chinook smolts

WASHINGTON (AP)
Despite opposition, federal efficials decided Friday to barge at least half the Snake River chinook salmon smolts downriver this spring, the same number barged last year on the Snake and Columbia Rivers.

The Clinton administration's Salmon Executive Committee, and Columbia River tribes to barge no more than 42 percent when the smolts start migrating this month.

A National Marine Fisheries Service spokesman said the agency still is studying which method of getting young salmon to sea works best, and didn't without more data.

"In spite of what people may say, there is not yet any scientific evidence that we are comfortable with that says unequivocally that barging is the best thing to do for this moder and the same should be successful to the same should be successful that barging is the best thing to do for this moder all crumstances," said NMFFS spokesman Richa Corman.

The four Columbia River tribes and the state of Idaho wanted the migrating fish to take advantage of this year's unusually high nowmelt runoff, which would flush them to sea. They argued that similar river conditions in percent of smolts migrated downwier, contributed to high return numbers two to three years later. fall, but not as much as it might have.

It has scaled back its proposed record-high 13 percent increase to 10 percent in a recommendation that goes to the state Board of Education. Under the proposal, fees will rike from $877 to 9387 per semester.

Student health insurance, which is optional, will increase $5 to $160. Out-of-state tuition will increase 10 percent to $5.880 for students starting in the fall. Room and board, which ranges from $3,100 to $3,721, will remain the same.

The 13 percent increase was based on Gov. Phil Bart's budget, which stripped $250,000 for Boise States engineering school and increases to accommodate additional students.

Army engineer corps to repair Weiser levee

BOISE — The Army Corps of Engineers has dropped its opposi-tion to the project and will repair the Smith-Green levee in Weiser. The federal government will put up $400,000 to fix the levee that was breached during January's flooding, and the other $150,000 will be put up by the state or local officials. The corps had originally said the repair would cost more than it was worth, but it re-evaluated the project after members of the Idaho congressional delegation intervened.

officials say the repair will not only protect key farm land but will emit repair of irrigation canals.

State wins delay of environmental assessment

LEWISTON (AP) — State officials are pressing ahead with their strategy to undermine grizdly bear reintroduction in the Bitterroot Mountains with delaying tactics. But one of the architects of compromise approach believes the state is only hurring itself.

At the urging of Fish and Game Director Steve Mealley, the Interagency Grizzly Bear Committee has agreed to wait until-after meeting with Gov. Phil Batt on April 21 To release its environmental evaluation of the reintroduction proposal. The evaluation was to have been released last week.

Mealey, the former supervisor of the Boise National Forest and a grizzly specialist, advised state offi-cials early this year that if they want to block reintroduction as Bart has said the best course is to block release of the evaluation and

But Bill Mulligan, the president of Three Rivers Timber in Kamiah and an author of the compromise plan, said delays are likely to hurt the state more than help it. "74 like to sed us bring closure to this issue as quickly as we can," Mulligan said.

While Batt and other state offi-cials want no reintroduction and environmentalists want 13 million acres set aside for natural grizzly resurgence, the compromise citizen management proposal advanced by the timber industry and wildlife groups trades grizzly release for less stringent protections for the animals and more local control. Environmentalists contend their plan has broader support and would rely on a scientific committee rather than one appointed by a governor like Batt, who is openly hostile to grizzly recovery.

NEW YORK — U.S. stocks got a much-needed relief rally, after a hiref numble Friday morning field on negative knee-jerk reaction over March's employment data.

Some bargain-hunting in the last hour of trading brought stocks to close on higher ground, analysts said. Amid the fairly across-the-board strength, airlines, securities firms, semiconductors and personal-computer makers had outperformed the rest of the market. Even banking stocks managed to eke out modest gains amid the unfirendly interestrate environment.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average finished up 48 at 6526, surging at the last minute with help from program

The technology-heavy NASDAQ composite index Elimbed 22.94, or 1.88 percent, to closs at 1236.71; recouping a small portion of its losses from its recent fall.

Other broader indexes also ended strongly, with the 8&P 500 up 7.58 ref. 757.90, and the NYSE composite up 3.62 at 398.02.

"This rally in the past hour has all the entmarks of a program trading flurry," said Dirk van Dijk, equity strategist at C.H. Dean & Associates in Dayton, Ohio, which oversees $4 billion in assets. "You certainly have to count it as encouraging."

Phone firms: Plan would lower fees

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an unusual alliance, Arket, Bell-Atlantic and Nynex are sending federal regulators a plan they say would cut monthly telephone bills for businesses and residences $400 million annually.

Their proposal comes as the Federal Communications Commission considers revamping two areas of phone regulation: a subsidy program that keeps local phone service affordable in high-cost areas and for low-income customers, and $20 billion in annual access. Nynex, which provides local phone service in the Northeast; Bell Atlantic, a provider of local service in the mid-Atlantic states; and long-distance giant AT&T were filing the plan with the FCC on Friday. The agency would have to approve the plan before it could take effect July 1, as planned.

could take effect July 1, as planned.

The proposal would increase some charges to residential and business customers but would neithem $400 million in savings; mostly from reductions in access fees long-distance companies pay local companies to route calls, the companies said.

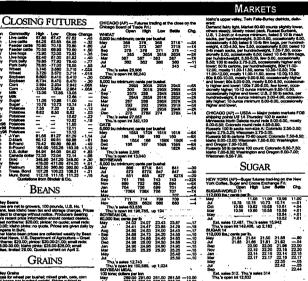

The companies suggest the FCC cut access fees nationwide by $2.5 billion a year. Long-distance companies would save $1.8 billion annually and the rest would go to keeping local phone service affordable. It's assumed long-distance companies would pass their savinge onto customers. But the plan also would assess customers $1.4 billion in mew charges for such things as discounted telecons militages.

Johnson misses 1st start to be with son

The Associated Press

SEATTILE – The long-awaited return of Randy Johnson was pushed back to Saturday night after his 1-jear-old son-was hospitalized with a viral respiratory infection.

Johnson, the 1995 AL Cy Young Award-winner, had been scheduled-to-start Friday night against the Boston Red Sox. He is recovering from back surgery and hasa't started since last May.

Johnson spent the night at a hospital with his son, Tanner, whose first birthday is Saturday. The boy was admitted to a Seattle hospital on Thursday, was in good condition Friday. He probably will be released today.

The 33-year-old was 5-0 in eight starts last season before going on the disabled list in May. The 6-font-10 left-hander underwent surgery Sept 12 to repair a bulging disc in his lower back.

Johnson was 18-2 with a 2-48 ERA in 1995 as the Mariners won the AL West.

Seattle manager Lou Piniella had to use Scort Sanders in place of Jamie Moyer in Seattle's second game of the season. Moyer went on the 15-day disabled list after injuring his left forearm, and the Yankees routed the Mariners 162. "Truthfully, if I had hy druthers, he wouldn't have pitched against the Yankees," said Piniella of Sanders, pointing out how well the Yankees hit right-handers. "But I didn't have any choice."

Defending champ says this year's windy conditions similar to last year

NEW ORLEANS - Defending champion Scott McCarron and Latry Rinker pulled away from the field in the Freeport-McDermott Classic on Friday, shooting 3-under par 68 in windy conditions to reach 10-under 134. "I putted very well again today," Rinker said. 'I made a lot of par-asving puts, and then was able to birdle three of the last five holes and got it up and down at 18. On a day like today, you've got to be able to get the ball up and down because nobody's going to hit 15 or 16 preens."

With winds of 15 to 25 mph and gusts over 30, the course was dry and the greens hard.

a student might go to Second Chance High School.
Dropping out of traditional high school is one. Or behavioral problems. Some Second Chance, students are repeating a grade level.
Cesar Herrera has chosen to come here because he wants to spend time with his wife and 7-month-old son, Issac.
Tensor Herrera, 17, said. "And I want him to grow up knowing his mom and dad."
Tom Daley dropped out of traditional high-school for a year. Not because it was too hard—he had a 3.5 grade point average—but because didn't feel like he fit the mold.

"His goals were to get his high school equivalence y certificate, "get married and scrape by."
Since enrolling at Second Chance, Daley's become more ambitious. He wants to enroll in the National Guard and go to college to study robotic.

Second Chance counselor Jeri Lester said Daley and Herrera are typical students at her

"They've made different choices and learned different lessons," Lester said. "People look down on them for coming here, but they work harder than anyone."
Public perception is Second Chance's biggest problem, Lester said.

Second Chance does block scheduling. Students take one class for five hours each day for two weeks.

This works well for students like Carol Barber, who has a 15-month-old daughter, Shanna.

"I'm able to get A's and B's and at Blackfoot High! got C's, D's and F's," Barber, 18, said.

Having one class all day means there usually isn't any homework. "I don't have to worry about raking care of her and saying, Oops, I have a test in-the morning," Barber said. "Without this, I probably would have dropped out. I wouldn't have been able to make it."

The school's free day-care center is one of its best features, students say, because it means parents can be near their children and don't have child-care expenses.

The center has two adult staff members and several students who fulfill consumer science requirements by working at the center.

"It's read important to me to spend time with him," said Rosalee Rivas, 18, holding her 14-month-old son Antonio on her hip.

Pittsburgh officials prepare city for Klan rally

Reight-Ridder News Service

PITTSBURGH — Authorities plan to deploy more than 200 police officers, many in riot gear and others on horseback, to keep order, when the Ku Kluor Klan rallies in Pittsburgh on Saturday.

In Pittsbu

met by a much-larger contingent of counterdemonstrators, who have scheduled rullies across the street from the Klan and at other places around the city. City officials have undertaken their most extensive security planning in more than a year — since they prepared for a possible Steelers Super Bowl victory — as racial tensions simmer over the Jonny Gammage

Case.

Gammage was a black motorist who died of suffocation after being stopped by six white officers from suburban police departments in 1995. Three officers were charged ients in 1995. Three otticers were charged rith involuntary manslaughter; one was cquitted and two await retrial. Authorities are closing downtown streets and erecting chain link fences along sidewalks to help keep order Saturday. But confusion reigned Friday over some sepects of he security plans.

The city expects all spectators, nor and anti-Klan, to pass through metal detectors before entering a single, fenced viewing area about 200 feet from the speakers.

Ouestions immediately arose about the wisdom of placing opposed, potentially volatile demonstrators within the same enclosure.

David Millstein, the ACLU attorney representing the Klan, said be was first told that those entering the "bullpen" would be frisked and made to give their names and addresses to police. But police told Foster, the grand dragon, on Thursday that Klan supporters and opponents would be sepa-

There is so much information, distifica-mation and misinformation floating around that we don't know what the hell's going on," Millestein said Friday. Margaret McCarmide Burron, a spokes-woman for Mayor Tom Muribay, said she could not discuss the details of the security plan but pledged that safety would be maintained.

Separating pro- and anti-Klan demonstrators would be impossible — they don't wear uniforms, she said. Police have propared for any disturbance that may occur within the viewing area.
The planned demonstration has dominated the news in Pittsburgh this week.

'Passion, prejudice' swayed jury, Simpson defense claims

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — O.J. Simpson's lawyers demanded a new civil trial Friday, arguing the judge wrongly allowed domestic violence testimony that helped inflame the jury into a destructive stationary of the control of the co

The defense left few possible points of appeal untouched in the brief, which asks Judge Hiroshi Fujisadi to overturn the verdicts before an actual motion of appeal is filed. "Im looking for fairness," Simpson said when contacted at home about the legal maneuverings. "A decision has been made. I don't agree with the decision, but the award is so unfair."

Simpson arrotters Daniel Legard and Simpson arrotters Daniel Legard and Simpson arrotters Daniel Legard and the state of the same and the same hander to that agree with the development of the award is so unfair. Skinpson attorneys Daniel Leonard and Phillip Baker also agued in the filing that the method by which juros survived at compensatory, damages (or plaintiff Fred Goldman was "by chance." The lawyers, said their jury consultant found out in post-trial interviews that jurors each wrote on a fill pof paper an amount they thought was proper compensation to Göldman for the loss of his son. The jurors then divided the total by 12 and came up with the total of $8.5 million, the brief said.

What resulted was an "overkill" judgment, they said.

The filing said Simpson is unable to pay anything close to what he has been assessed and that jurors were misted by wimesses who told them he would make millions of dollars from the sale of his likeness and name.

ness and name.

The lengthy brief protested the use of evidence about domestic problems in the Simpson household, which the attorneys called irrelevant and prejudicial. Accounts of physical and mental abuse of Ms. Simpson were offered "simply to inflame the jury and to attempt to prove that Simpson was a bad'person," the filing said. The defense also objected to the use of testimony from a battered woment's shelter worker about a telephone call over a worker about a telephone call for the worker about a subjection call for the subjection call for a woman named Nicole which was never authenticated as coming from Ms. Simpson; the use of an undated letter writ-ten by Ms. Simpson describing an alleged beating; and use of a journal entry in which she suggested Simpson threatened to turn her in to the Internal Revenue Service.

East's comments may have had the taste of sour grapes: Few enjoy being the victim of a swin-dle. How did South manage to pull off his con job?

In a team game, both South players declared the spade game-against the same opening lead. Both ducked the first heart, won the second, and cashed the ace and king of trumps. Then they are the second of the second of the second of the second can be second. The first declarer played on diamonds, hoping to find the suit 3.
