Rock Creek slaying suspect remains at large, officers say

Slaying suspect

South Hills holiday activities should be unaffected

By Greg Hahn Times-News writer
ROCK CREEK - The lone suspect in the brutal killing of a 70-year-old camper was still at large Friday night, but local officials said the homicide shouldn't deter Memorial Day weekend visitors to the South Hills.

The body of a still-identified California man was found Thursday afternoon about half a mile downstream from the recreational vehicle where he and another man had been staying at Schipper campground. Cassia County Sheriff Billy

Crystal said the victim had been hit several times in the head with what was probably a tire iron. Police are looking for a white male, in his 50s, with a dark complexion. Other campers described him as 5 feet 7 inches or 5 feet 8 inches tall, 170 to 180 pounds. Please see SLAYING, Page A2

Student faces year's suspension

Filer farm youth runs afoul federal school gun ban

By Liz Wright Times-News writer
FILER - A Filer High School student faces a year's suspension under a federal "zero tolerance" weapons policy, and local school officials who once supported the weapons policy now are having second thoughts.

School officials expect the student will be suspended at the end of the school year because they found an empty .22-caliber pistol in his truck last week. Officials declined to reveal the student's name. The Times-News has learned the student's name is Matt Billington, 17. Billington, who uses his father's gun to hunt squirrels and rockchucks, has yet to have an appeal hearing, but administrators say the student will probably miss his senior year of high school.

The gun was empty, and no bullets were anywhere nearby in the truck when school officials acted on a tip last week and discovered the gun, "but it still violates the law," said Joseph Hendrickson, Filer High School principal.

The school policy - based on a federal law called the Gun Free Schools Act of 1994 - requires at least an automatic one-year suspension from school, and allows little room for explanations, except for students with disabilities. "It's one of those honest mistakes," Hendrickson said.

Hendrickson said the student "was definitely not a discipline problem," and he said he can relate to his predicament, "growing up in the West, with easy access to guns and rifles."

Hendrickson said he likes the new federal law's tougher stance. In the past, he had to discipline a student with a weapon on campus at another school, and that school's penalty was weaker. Now, Hendrickson said he has "mixed emotions."

"If (the gun) is there, then there is the possibility of someone else getting it," Hendrickson said. "On the other side of the coin, it is hard to accept such a simple mistake."

"I just feel bad for the kid, I really do," Hendrickson said. "And I'm hoping other students will learn that it's just not good to bring (guns) to school. We don't shoot rockchucks at school."

According to Filer Middle School principal Greg Lanting, a high school student told a middle school student about Billington's gun. The middle school student, concerned about weapons because of the school's campaign against them, reported it to Lanting. Lanting, in turn, contacted the high school.

"We asked our students if they see a Please see GUN, Page A2

SWING YOUR PARTNER

Second-graders Ashley Fritz and partner Kenneth Fettersy do-a-do along during a square dancing performance at Horizon Elementary School in Jerome. Seven classes of second- and third-graders showed off their coordination and fancy footwork Friday for family and friends. Teacher Chris Johns said the students have been learning the steps for about a month, and the initial apprehension of dancing soon melted away as they began to enjoy the group activity.

DOE pays fine, may face another in fall

The Associated Press
BOISE - The Energy Department is paying off the nearly $1 million fine assessed by the state for missing cleanup deadlines at the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory, Gov. Phil Batt said Friday.

And Batt said his administration is prepared to assess another if the government fails to meet a Sept. 30 deadline for getting cleanup of the Pit 9 area at INEEL back on track.

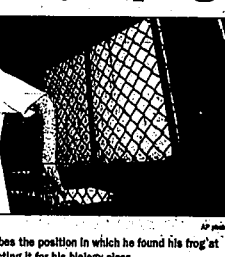

Both the governor and Assistant Energy Secretary Al Alm expressed confidence the project, now mired in a contractual dispute with Lockheed Martin Idaho Technologies Co., can be brought back on track.

Ribetong death scenes keep biology students jumping

The Associated Press
LOS ANGELES - The frogs are - DOA - in Christine Karlberg's class.

Her students' task is to find out why they croaked. Mrs. Karlberg tries to make frog dissection more interesting and educational for her students by placing the dead, preserved frogs in miniature "crime scenes" and assigning the seventh-graders to solve the whodunit. The approach has delighted students and offended animal-rights activists.

The frogs are posed in doll furniture and given toe tags. Stray hairs, fake blood, footprints, fingerprints and other evidence are left at the scene. The late D. Frog, for example, was found dead in a bathtub. The erstwhile T. Tadpollan bought the farm in bed. A certain K. C. Amphibious was a stab wound inflicted by some pond scum.

Robert Washington, 13, describes the position in which he found his frog at the "crime scene" before dissecting it for his biology class.

Star McVeigh witness changes story on stand

The Associated Press
DENVER - Timothy McVeigh's star witness backflipped on the defense Friday, changing her story in a way that hurt him, disclosing she spent half her life in mental institutions and admitting "I don't recall much."

"You can tell me one thing one week and I would forget the next week," said Oklahoma City bombing survivor Daina Bradley. "Ms. Bradley, who lost two children, her mother and a leg in the April 19, 1995, explosion, previously said she saw a Ryder truck park in front of the federal building just before the blast and a lone man get out - a man with olive skin who bore no resemblance to McVeigh."

Friday, jumping into court on her pro-theistic limb, Ms. Bradley altered her account to say two men emerged from the truck - the olive-skinned man and a light-skinned man, whom she could not rule out as being McVeigh. "The 21-year-old woman even wavered on that recollection, citing the toll of years of taking medication for mental disorders and the trauma of the bombing. She was trapped under rubble in the building's Social Security office for five hours and was only freed after rescuers cut off her leg."

McVeigh attorney Cheryl Ramsey took Ms. Bradley through several pretrial interviews in which she never mentioned the light-skinned man. "I don't remember half the things I said," Ms. Bradley said. McVeigh lead attorney Stephen Jones had made Ms. Bradley one of the defense's most important witnesses, even leading off his opening statement by saying she would describe a man who bore no resemblance to McVeigh getting out of the Ryder truck moments before the bombing that killed 168 people.

ACROSS THE NATION

Showers spread across Pacific Northwest, Gulf Coast
 The Associated Press
 Thunderstorms and showers fell along the Gulf Coast and the Pacific Northwest Friday.
 In contrast, skies were clear in the East.
 A strong upper-level low pressure system moving through the Pacific Northwest spread clouds and rain showers across Washington, Oregon and Northern California. Rain also fell in Idaho, Montana and Utah.
 A moist air mass in the Plains brought showers and thunderstorms from Texas to North Dakota. Hail, damaging winds and tornadoes were possible, while up to 2 inches of rain were expected.
 A stationary front that has settled over the Gulf Coast weakened, but widespread thunderstorms struck during the afternoon and early evening.
 Moderate to heavy rain fell over southern Texas, the coastal areas of Louisiana and southern Alabama.
 High pressure settled across much of the East, bringing clear skies and light winds. More record lows were set overnight, including 35 in Parkersburg, W.Va., breaking the record of 38 set in 1895; and Lynchburg, Va., where a low of 38 broke the 1941 record of 41.
 The Southwest remained warm and dry. Fresno, Calif., and Greenville, Maine, had a 21-degree wind chill.
 In Idaho, thunderstorms developed from the eastern Magic Valley to the upper Snake Highlands Friday. Lightning and small hail also was reported in the highlands.
 Afternoon temperatures were in the 60s at most lower valley locations in the south and north, although there were a few 70s. Readings ranged down into the 50s in the north.
 Winds were mostly in the 10 to 15 mph range.

Flinn says she will ask for waiver to fly for Air Force Reserve, Guard

(MINOT AIR FORCE BASE, N.D.) — First Lt. Kelly Flinn said Friday she hopes to fly for the military again and may ask for a waiver so she can fly for the Air Force Reserve and National Guard.

"After some rest and relaxation, I will begin to review my options, including the possibility of returning to flight status with the Air Force Reserve," she said in a statement Friday.

The nation's first female bomber pilot accepted a general discharge on Thursday, avoiding a court-martial on charges of adultery, lying and disobeying an order and ending her Air Force career.

In rejecting Flinn's request for an honorable discharge, Air Force Secretary Sheila Widnall said Flinn would not be allowed to fly in the Reserve.

Flinn's attorney, Frank B. Winters, said Friday that she discharged last Friday "in the case of Pit 9" and that she would like to ask the Air Force for a waiver so she can fly for the military again. He said she also planned to ask the Air Force to upgrade her general discharge to an honorable discharge.

"The Air Force has lost a pioneer," Winters said. "And at what a price."
 Flinn's resignation takes effect in about 10 days. Spinner said the 26-year-old pilot probably would not return to Minot Air Force Base. Her family said she plans to join them in Georgia and start her new life there.

In her resignation letter, dated May 19 but released Friday, Flinn apologized to the Air Force and begged for forgiveness.
 "More than anything, I wish that you would accept my apology and give me a second chance," Flinn wrote in the letter that accompanied her request for an honorable discharge.
 "This is the hardest decision I have made in my life and it feels like part of me has died," Flinn wrote.

"I just want a chance to reconcile this situation and perhaps have the opportunity to redeem myself in the eyes of the Air Force."
 Flinn was accused of having an affair with a married civilian, lying about it to investigators and disobeying an order to end it.

Part of the Schipper camp ground will remain closed throughout the weekend, Ramsey said, but only two of three camping sites will be affected.

 uate on whether the dispute would wind up in court or the government would dump as much as another $159 million into the project.
 "We still have a contract, we still have a schedule, and we're in the process of handling the contract dispute," Al said. "We're willing to consider some adjustments. We're not willing to change the terms of the contract."
 Al reiterated the government's commitment to keep its part of the unprecedented 1995 nuclear waste deal it cut with Batt, pointing out that except in the case of Pit 9, the Energy Department and its contractor are either on time or ahead of schedule in meeting deadlines.

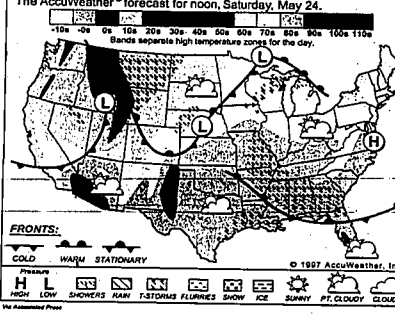

But U.S. Sen. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., has asked Deputy Energy Inspector General John Layton to investigate the project's financing.
 Pit 9, which is covered by a 1991 agreement that is incorporated into the 1995 pact, is a landfill the size of a football field filled with plutonium-contaminated barrels and boxes of trash generated at nuclear bomb plants during the 1960s.
 The excavation and treatment of about 150,000 cubic feet of waste is intended to provide information and technology that would help clean up other pits at the INEEL.
 But none of that waste has been brought above ground up to this time.

 In Huntington, Matt's mother, said her son had the gun in his truck because he uses it to hunt after he works and on the farm where he school.
 But she said he had been keeping the gun in his truck for several days, and forgot it was there.
 "He's a farm kid, he grew up on a farm, that's what he's kind of a natural extension of himself," Jennie Billington said.
 Matt Billington will have a chance to explain the predicament before a "hearing officer"

In a meeting tentatively set for Tuesday, she said.
 But school authorities are telling her not to get her hopes up.
 "Unfortunately, it seems like he's going to be a victim of his own not knowing," she said.
 "It wasn't anything premeditated, he forgot about it," she said. She declined to allow her son to be interviewed by The Times-News.
 Filer High School student Brock Coon, 18, also a junior, said he felt sorry for his classmate. The school has been heavily campaigning for the past several years against weapons, drugs and crime.

 "I don't know if we're going to step up patrols there," he said. But there will be a lot of people there, if they watch for anyone fitting the description they'll be OK.
 Tom Ramsey of the Sawtooth National Forest's Twin Falls District office said the agency planned to keep an eye on the area, but doesn't expect any trouble from the bombing.
 "I tried to share the responsibility of patrolling the land along the county roads."
 "We'll step that up a little this weekend," he said. "We'll try to create a soothing visible presence."

story last week after a meeting with prosecutors, they decided to call her to the stand anyway because her description of the olive-skinned man — with curly hair under a baseball cap — fits that of the mysterious John Doe 2. It also fits in with earlier defense testimony that a second man was seen at the Ryder rental agency and the motel where McVeigh stayed days before the bombing.
 As her testimony wore on, she became quieter and sat with her head slumped over.
 "Are you doing OK?" U.S. Attorney Patrick Byrnes asked when he began cross-examination. "I need to talk to my lawyer," she said. The judge called a 20-minute break.

 Ms. Bradley said, for instance, that the truck was parked in the wrong direction on a one-way street.
 Ms. Bradley also recalled being heavily medicated when she was in a mental health facility from the age of 7 to 15.
 "It caused me to lose memory of who I was and people around me," she said.

Overwhelming budget approval masks conflicts

WASHINGTON (AP) — With impressive bipartisan muscle, the Senate on Friday approved a blueprint of the accord between President Clinton and members of Congress for balancing the budget and cutting taxes by 2002.

But anguishing political strife over coming tax and spending legislation, final approval of the measure will have to await lawmakers' return from their Memorial Day recess in early June, thanks to a partisan blowout over a separate disaster relief bill.

Senators approved the fiscal road map by a lopsided 78-22 margin amid handshakes and embraces among rival party leaders who usually fight bitterly over budget issues. With both parties seeing the agreement as a political victory, 41 Republicans and 37 Democrats supported the measure. Fourteen Republicans and eight Democrats cast "no" votes.

The American people asked us to work together," said Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., the longtime deficit warrior who waved a copy of the vote tally in the air. "And I think what we just held up is evidence that we understood them."

Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., said, "Democrats and Republicans alike should take a great deal of pride in what we've done today."

The House easily approved a nearly identical measure on Wednesday. Leaders say they will move a compromise through Congress after the recess, but in some ways it was as if the budget pact existed in a peaceful cocoon surrounded by a political storm.

Moments after the measure was approved, Democrats and Republicans were lambasting each other over the slowness with which the Senate has confirmed judges. And stalemate persisted over an $8.4 billion measure providing aid to flood victims and others, to which Republicans attached a mechanism for preventing federal shutdowns and other provisions Clinton opposes.

As lawmakers began a break that lasts until June 3, Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-

Miss., said solving the standoff over emergency aid "will get to focus on it" after the recess.

But the fight over the emergency bill is in part a battle for leverage later this year, when Congress translates the budget deal's broad guidelines into 15 individual tax and spending measures. And Democrats showed that they were deeper than those in Congress about using that process to draw contrasts with the GOP.

"They abolished, in the vote here, the 'Contract With America,'" said Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., referring to budget reductions Republicans sought when they first captured Congress in 1995 that were deeper than those in the agreement with Clinton. "Those radical views are gone."

The measure approved Friday charts the way to erasing federal deficits for the first time since President Johnson's income-tax surcharge, designed to finance the Vietnam War, ended up producing a $3 billion surplus in 1969.

NATION IN BRIEF

Prosecutors drop charges in sex abuse case

EDENTON, N.C. — Prosecutors dropped all charges Friday against the last two defendants in the Little Rascals scandal — one of most lurid cases of mass child-molestation of the 1980s and the latest to fall apart.

Assistant District Attorney Nancy Lamb said prosecutors decided not to retry Robert F. Kelly, Jr., 48, and Kathryn Dawn Wilson, 31, in order to "allow wounds to heal." She said parents were reluctant to let their children testify again.

Kelly and Wilson were among seven people originally charged with molesting 29 children who attended the Little Rascals Day Care Center in this small town on Albemarle Sound.

Massachusetts will show anti-smoking ads

BOSTON — The newest preview playing at the movie theater has no explosions, romance or mystery. But it hopes to kick a lot of butts.

Massachusetts is showing 30-second anti-tobacco messages before movies, becoming the first state to take its campaign against cigarettes to the big screen.

This month, moviegoers are seeing a takeoff of the Marlboro Man: A cool cowboy riding his horse through the Wild West lights a cigarette, drops it in his lap and sees his pants on fire.

President names lawyer, economist to FCC

WASHINGTON — The chief lawyer for the Federal Communications Commission and an economist for a House committee were nominated by President Clinton Friday to seats on the FCC.

Clinton nominated FCC General Counsel Bill Kennard to a Democratic seat that will become open in June. Harold Furchtgott-Roth, the House Commerce Committee's chief economist, was appointed to a Republican seat that has been vacant for more than a year.

Of the FCC's five seats, three now are designated to be held by Democrats.

Clinton picks Social Security commissioner

WASHINGTON — President Clinton nominated one of his top budget experts, Kenneth S. Apfel, to lead the Social Security Administration.

Apfel has served since 1995 in the White House Office of Management and Budget as director of human resources. His responsibilities have included reviewing for the president the budgets, policy and management of numerous federal social programs including Social Security.

During Clinton's first term, Apfel was chief financial officer of the Department of Health and Human Services. For part of that time, Social Security was run by HHS. It was made an independent agency in 1995.

Farm Service Agency names new director

WASHINGTON — Keith Kelly, director of the Arizona Department of Agriculture, has been named head of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Farm Service Agency.

Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman, announcing the appointment at a news conference today, said Kelly "has the stature to deal with the problems" confronting the agency, including downsizing, reorganization and charges of racial discrimination.

Kelly, a native of Red Lodge, Mont., also served as deputy director and director of the Montana Department of Agriculture. He has a masters degree in agricultural economics.

Albright cautions Kabila on human rights

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Madeleine Albright registered concern Friday over massacres and other human rights abuses in Congo and the slow pace of installing democracy in the African country.

Even after rebel leader Laurent Kabila's ouster of longtime dictator Mobutu Sese Seko, the situation "remains of serious concern," Albright said at a news conference.

She called on Kabila to deal with massacres of refugees from Rwanda in eastern Congo, which reports have linked to rebel soldiers.

Kabila Thursday announced partial formation of a government that places most power in his own hands and eliminates the post of prime minister.

Compiled from wire reports.

Newly naturalized to lose citizenship

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government will move to strip the citizenship of nearly 5,000 people who were wrongly naturalized during last year's citizenship rush, immigration officials said Friday.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service has been under heavy fire for sloppy citizenship procedures that allowed some 180,000 foreigners to become Americans last year without complete criminal background checks.

An audit whose findings were released to Congress on Friday found that 16,400 of the new citizens had at least one felony arrest.

Arrest or conviction, even for a felony, is not an automatic bar to citizenship. But the audit, which is nearly complete, found 4,946 cases in which a criminal arrest should have resulted in a denial of citizenship or where the applicant misrepresented their criminal history.

Rep. Lamar Smith, R-Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee on immigration, who has been a persistent critic of the INS citizenship program, applauded the agency for "making good progress" in tracking down those who were wrongly naturalized.

"The big question is, 'Is the INS going to be successful in correcting their mistakes, are they going to be successful in denaturalizing those roughly 5,000 individuals who were wrongly made citizens?" he asked.

Of the 4,946 cases, 296 were convicted felons and 2,507 lied about their criminal history and may have had a felony arrest or conviction that would have disqualified them from citizenship.

Ironically, for the remaining 2,143 individuals, INS will initiate citizenship revocation procedures not because of a past arrest but because the applicants lied when asked if they had ever been arrested. Had they answered honestly, their citizenship wouldn't be in question.

"We believe that we are on firm ground in proceeding on administrative revocations where somebody has factually made a misrepresentation," he said.

Administration — officials stressed that the proper naturalizations represent a fraction of the 1 million people granted citizenship last year.

Smith had little patience for that argument. "One convicted felon who is given the honor of becoming a citizen is one too many," he said.

Senate passes arms ban bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate approved without debate Friday a bill implementing provisions of the global Chemical Weapons Convention, which bans development, production, transfer and stockpiling of all chemical weapons.

The Senate ratified the treaty on April 25 and it took effect four days later. Legislation was required to govern inspections by foreigners on U.S. soil.

The implementing legislation was approved on a voice vote. It is intended to protect the legal rights of companies subject to inspections and to protect confidential business information.

In a written statement, Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, called the implementing legislation a "reasonable effort to protect the constitutional rights of our citizens against unwieldy inspections under the treaty."

Scientist demands royalties

NEW YORK (AP) — More than a decade ago, Dr. Mark Bogart made an important discovery that contributed to the development of a screening test for Down syndrome.

Now he wants what he says is due him.

Bogart has launched a campaign to collect a royalty each time the widely used prenatal test is performed. If he succeeds, the test's cost will rise significantly, and some diagnostic laboratories say they will no longer be able to provide it.

The triple blood screen test can warn a woman that there is a good chance her baby will have Down syndrome, a genetic defect that causes retardation.

Bogart made his contribution to the test's development while working at the University of California at San Diego in 1986, when he discovered that if a woman's fetus had Down syndrome her blood would contain extremely high levels of a hormone known as human chorionic gonadotropin, or HCG. He patented the discovery in 1989, claiming rights to any diagnostic test that used the hormone to detect Down syndrome or related birth defects.

U.S. Memorial Day observance changes over years

Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — Barbara Vaughn fondly remembers those days as a child, when, for one day, the entire town of Birmingham, Ala., would erupt for "the biggest parade in the whole world."

The celebration was for Armistice Day. When Vaughn was growing up in the 1950s, the memory of World War II was still vivid, and most people had a father or relative who had served. Vaughn's mother worked for a military contractor, and her father's best friend won the Medal of Honor.

These direct — and personal — links to the military have weakened since then. Armistice Day, now known as Veterans Day, is a dim concept for many Americans, and although there's still a big parade every November in Birmingham, even the city's spokeswoman isn't sure what the day signifies.

Meanwhile, Memorial Day, which can be traced to a tribute to the Civil War dead, is more closely associated with the start of summer and the Indianapolis 500.

"Most people don't know what Memorial Day is for," said Charles Moskos, military sociologist at Northwestern University. "It should be a day of respect for our veterans, but for most, it's just a long weekend."

This troubles Moskos and others who argue that, no matter what a person may think of the military, it's important to recognize its role in American life and to offset negative portrayals of the military in movies, TV and popular culture. Memorial Day should be the one day when those notions are challenged, he says.

Though polls show the military is respected, Moskos and other

City of Ottumwa, Iowa, employee Preston Miller carries extra U.S. flags in his back pocket while decorating the gravestone of a World War I veteran Thursday, in preparation for Memorial Day.

Researchers believe the distance is growing between average Americans and the military, making the institution "alien and invisible." As a result, most people are apathetic about military issues, and defense policy is created with little public input. David Segal, director of the Center of Research on Military Organization at the University of Maryland, said that when people are asked in polls for their opinion, they support such actions as peacekeeping. But Congress seems to think there's no public backing for such policies.

A generation ago, almost everyone, like Vaughn, who now lives in Charleston, S.C., had a relative or acquaintance who fought in a war. The familiarity spilled over to Congress, where the vast majority of members were veterans.

Simple math tells the story. The number of active and civilian personnel in the armed forces has steadily declined from a peak of 14 million in 1945, to 4.2 million during the height of Vietnam, to 2.2 million today.

The average World War II veteran now is more than 70 years old. And the percentage of veterans in Congress has declined over the last six years from 41 percent to 52 percent in the House, and from 60 percent to 48 percent in the Senate. Only about 20 current members of Congress have seen combat.

The same is true for the military itself, where only a limited number of soldiers have fought in a war. Gen. as retired Lt. Col. James DeLoach of Columbia, S.C., says, "We don't have very many general officers who've actually smelled gunsmoke."

That's not all bad. It confirms that the world is generally a peaceful place. With the Cold War won and no imminent threat facing the United States, the military has continued to shrink.

But that shrinkage has allowed the military to recede from everyday life. When the military is noticed these days, it's often for such non-military reasons as sexual harassment, gay rights and gender equality.

Years ago, people would go to cemeteries and put flags on the graves of veterans on Memorial Day. That rarely happens today. Where there are events, they usually are intended for soldiers and their families and often are held within a base.

It's become such a concern that Congress and civic groups are working to "put the memorial back into Memorial Day." Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., has sponsored a resolution proclaiming a nationwide moment of remembrance. Amtrak has instructed its engineers to blow train whistles at 3 p.m. on

The school's lacrosse team was returning from a match in New Jersey when it stopped to eat at a rest area on the New Jersey Turnpike. While team members were casually dressed, the school's official representative was a captain dressed in the Army's Class B uniform.

When the captain tried to pay for his meal, the cashier told him it was free. When asked why there was no charge, she replied: "The bus driver always get a free meal."

Twenty-five years ago, the sight of a soldier in uniform was a common sight even in large cities. The sightings began to diminish during the Vietnam War, when veterans wanted to avoid drawing attention to themselves.

During Vietnam, the military ingrained in the custom of not traveling around in uniform," Segal said. "You can walk the streets of Washington today and see a lot of people you suspect might be in the military because they have short hair. But you won't see many uniforms."

That is even true in the militarized South.

In Charleston, where Vaughn works as the city's communications director, Memorial Day has lost some of its punch since the city's sprawling Navy base was ordered closed in 1993.

Observations of Memorial Day for most residents slides by unnoticed, and even Charleston Air Force Base considers it "more of a day-off" than anything else, according to a spokeswoman.

But if you want a Memorial Day celebration, head to the sand hills of North Carolina, home to the famed military outposts Fort Bragg and Camp Lejeune. "You're still going to have great military parades in Fayetteville, N.C.," Segal says.

'Most people don't know what Memorial Day is for. It should be a day of respect for our veterans, but for most, it's just a long weekend.'

— Charles Moskos, military sociologist

Memorial Day to jog people's memories about the war.

But few believe that will change the public's attitudes. Segal and others theorize that the military has literally become out of sight, out of mind, as more than 100 bases have been closed over the last decade. The remaining bases are mostly in the South or in isolated areas.

"You can go through huge swaths of this country and you won't find a military installation," said John Grady, director of communications for the Association of the United States Army.

"As recently as the 1970s, most people had first-hand contact with the military," Segal said. "But today, an Army uniform is essentially foreign. People don't recognize it."

Segal illustrates the point with an incident that occurred while he was a visiting professor at West Point.

Korean War Memorial to be repaired in time for holiday

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Officials of the troubled Korean War Veterans Memorial have promised that the fountain will flow and the walkway will be open for the country's official observance of Memorial Day on Monday.

The two-year-old monument, located near the Lincoln Memorial, was partially closed in September when the fountain broke, walkway paving stones buckled and 40 dead sludge trees were removed. Since then, various federal agencies and private contractors involved with the memorial have argued over who will pay for the repairs.

Some of the work is being done under warranty, said American Battle Monuments Commission spokesman Joe Furka. The commission built the memorial and has agreed to fund $100,000 in repairs until liability is determined.

Purka said the commission, founded in 1923, has responsibility for maintaining 24 American military cemeteries in foreign lands and 27 memorials here and in other countries. He said the commission took the money for emergency repairs to the Korean War Veterans Memorial from a general fund that is to be reimbursed.

Last week, Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, a Korean War hero and a sponsor of the memorial, sent a strongly worded letter to the commission, the Army Corps of Engineers as general contractor and the National Park Service following news accounts of the memorial's condition. In the May 13 letters, he said he wanted the memorial fixed promptly.

"It is disrespectful to our Korean War veterans to see the national memorial to their service in such disrepair," he wrote. "I would hesitate to take a visitor to this memorial, which I supported and worked for over several years."

"Furka said Glenn's letters may have added a little impetus in getting repairs under way. On Thursday, water flowed through the fountain again, and two ducks paddled around the circular pool. Nearby a grader pushed fine, crushed gravel into the walkway area. Both the pool and the walkway were closed off with yellow tape and orange cones.

Purka said the 40 linden trees can't be replaced until next year. John LeGault, 65, a Korean War veteran visiting from Montrose, Colo., said Wednesday he wasn't surprised to see the memorial torn up.

"Who cares?" he asked. "That was the forgotten war and this is the forgotten memorial. Considering how long it took to build it, it will take another 20 to fix it."

Ex-Army clerk pleads guilty to espionage

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A former U.S. Army clerk accused of selling national secrets to the Soviet Union for $27,000 during the Vietnam War pleaded guilty Friday to an spy charge.

Robert Stephen Lipka, 51, a coin collector and gambler from Millersville, Pa., cried as he entered his plea to one count of conspiracy to commit espionage before U.S. District Judge Charles R. Weiner. He could be sentenced to up to 18 years in prison.

Lipka was arrested in February 1996 on charges of selling U.S. secrets in the mid-1960s while working in the mailroom of the super-secret National Security Agency at Fort Meade, Md.

He was accused of photographing secret documents with a special camera provided by the Soviets and smuggling other documents out of the building in his clothing. The documents included reports for the White House and U.S. troop-movement data during the Vietnam War.

The FBI said Lipka told an unidentified witness in the late 1960s that he was selling NSA materials to the Soviets.

Irked over salmon, British Columbia closes test range to U.S.

TORONTO (AP) — Blaming the United States for the breakdown of Pacific salmon talks, British Columbia said Friday it will cancel a lease allowing U.S. warships to test weapons in Canadian waters.

Premier Glen Clark said the province is giving 30 days notice of its plan to cancel a license for use of the seabed at Vancouver Island's Nanos Bay naval testing facility.

British Columbia officials claim the U.S. Navy has saved more than $1.5 billion U.S. in the 32 years it has tested torpedoes at Nanos Bay because of distinctive geographic features that allow easy recovery of the torpedoes.

The United States and Canada sign an agreement on the use of the facility every 10 years. The last agreement expired last year and has not been renewed.

British Columbia's action, taken without approval of Canada's federal government, follows this week's collapse of Canada-U.S. talks on how to divide the Pacific salmon catch.

The Canadian delegation angrily halted the talks when informed that the top U.S. negotiator didn't have a mandate to complete a deal.

British Columbia's fisheries minister, Corley Evans, said cancellation of the Nanos Bay lease was intended to signal federal officials in Canada as well as in Washington, D.C., that the impasse must be broken. He urged Prime Minister Jean Chretien to intervene directly with President Clinton.

"I hope tomorrow morning the United States will wake up and say, 'These people are serious about the salmon treaty,'" Evans said. "And I hope Ottawa wakes up from their lethargy."

Canada's foreign minister, Lloyd Axworthy, said he would contact Secretary of State Madeleine Albright and ask that the U.S. negotiator be sent back to the bargaining table with a mandate to reach agreement.

In Washington, D.C., Albright also said she intended to talk with Axworthy.

"We have obviously wanted these talks to go forward in a way that the stakeholders (groups with an economic interest in the salmon) there would feel that their rights have been looked at properly," she said.

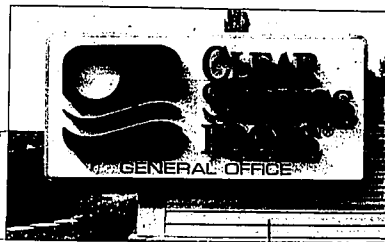

The talks were held in Seattle under the auspices of the Pacific

Salmon Commission, a bilateral organization which administers the U.S.-Canada salmon treaty when its terms are in force. The treaty has not been renewed since 1994.

Yves Fortier, the chief Canadian negotiator, said negotiations stalled Tuesday when his U.S.

counterpart, Mary Beth West, revealed that she lacked the power to compromise over a critical issue involving two salmon stocks — U.S.-bound coho migrating past Vancouver Island and sockeye swimming through U.S. waters south of the island to the Fraser River in Canada.

Firefighters watch as electric lines spark and a warehouse is engulfed in flames in Portland, Ore., Friday. One teenage cleaning worker was injured.

4-alarm blaze forces Portland evacuations

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A fire that began in a trash container swept through an abandoned warehouse Friday, injuring a teenage cleaning worker and forcing nearby residents to evacuate.

Smoke was pouring from nearly every window when firefighters arrived at the four-story brick structure in the northeast part of the city. Flames shot from the roof.

Two workers helping clean out the building escaped when the fire broke out about 9:30 a.m., but a third, a 17-year-old boy, was trapped for at least 15 minutes in an elevator. Fire Bureau spokesman Rob Ware said. Firefighters had to pry the elevator door open while others kept the flames at bay.

"It was getting pretty nasty," Ware said. "He was definitely a happy camper" as he was rushed out of the building. The boy was treated at a hospital for smoke inhalation.

Businesses and an apartment complex in the area were evacuated.

James Crowe, 20, one of the workers, said the fire spread quickly through cleaning solvents, cardboard, paper, clothing and other merchandise stored inside.

"It was a matter of seconds. It was just boom, boom, boom," Crowe said.

Mail carrier Mark Ellis said he called 911 after discovering the trash bin on fire, then was asked by police to evacuate nearby apartments.

Residents at first didn't answer when he knocked, he said. But "they started opening doors when I yelled, 'Fire!'"

Scientists gather in Kansas for major wheat conference

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — After seven years of planning, more than 300 scientists from around the world have converged for what is being billed as the largest, most comprehensive conference on wheat quality.

"It's the first-ever of its kind," said Steve Graham, assistant to the dean of agriculture and director of the Agricultural Experiment Station at Kansas State University.

Graham said dialogue and shared information among international scientists have become increasingly important as the world population soars and developing countries improve their diets, driving up demand for wheat.

Scientists from 34 countries — including Russia and China — are attending the conference on topics ranging from wheat genetics and breeding to grain storage, flour milling and bread baking. James L. Steele, one of the conference co-chairs, said the event has been in the works since 1990, requiring nearly superhuman planning efforts.

Steele and his conference co-chair, Okkyung Kim Chung, both work in the federal Agricultural Research Service Grain Marketing Production and Research Center, which is sponsoring the event along with Kansas State and The American Institute of Baking.

Kansas State is the only university in the United States with undergraduate degree programs in milling science, feed science and baking science. It draws students from all over the world.

So it was only natural that the conference would be held in Manhattan, said Franklin Baxter, a wheat researcher from Athens, Ga. "Manhattan is a great big player in wheat research, the biggest in the United States, maybe the biggest in the world."

Also headquartered in Manhattan are the Kansas Wheat Commission, International Grains Program, Kansas Association of Wheat Growers and the Kansas Crop Improvement Association.

Load of pottng soil crushes man to death

PARKERSBURG, W.Va. (AP) — A man was crushed to death by a 2,400-pound load of potting soil that slid off a truck and went through the windshield of his pickup.

Floyd Thomas Barker, 25, of Mineral Wells, was pinned beneath 60 bags of dirt, 40 pounds each.

A pallet stacked with the soil tumbled off a truck as it went around a curve Thursday. No charges were filed against the driver.

A passenger in Barker's pickup, Michelle Dennis, 19, was listed in fair condition.

Iranians vote in record numbers for president

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Faced with a choice of looser or tighter restrictions on daily life, Iranians turned out in record numbers Friday to elect a new president in a showdown between hard-liners and moderates inside the ruling Muslim clergy.

The front runners were the ardent conservative Ali Akbar Nateq-Nouri and the more moderate Mohammad Khatami. The winner will replace President Hashemi Rafsanjani, who by law must step down in August after two terms.

The candidates, both 54-year-old clerics, have decidedly different visions of the Islamic Republic's future. And their election battle has generated more interest among Iranians than any other race since the 1979 Islamic revolution that overthrew the U.S.-backed shah.

Two other candidates are also running, but they are not expected to be a factor. Iranians living in some foreign countries voted overwhelmingly for Khatami, according to the official Islamic Republic News Agency. In China, Khatami won 713 of the 211-vote cast, and in Malaysia, he captured 152 of the 206 ballots, it said.

In Iran, the state-run radio broadcast patriotic songs and — in a sign of Iran's animosity to the United States — used Washington as a prod to get out the vote.

"Every vote is like a bullet in the heart of the United States," said the announcers.

So many people turned out that voting was extended two hours at the nation's 33,440 polling stations. Every Iranian older than 15 — or 18 million people — were eligible to cast ballots and the Iranian news agency expected 25 million to do so.

Initial results are expected Saturday night and final results Sunday. If no candidate wins a majority, a runoff between the top two vote-getters will be held a week later.

Presidential candidate Mohammad Khatami, former Iranian minister of culture, casts his vote at a polling station in Tehran, during the Iranian presidential election Friday. Iranians, urged to vote or answer to God, cast ballots for a new president in a showdown between hard-liners and moderates.

Khatami for outshines Nateq-Nouri in popularity. But Nateq-Nouri has powerful backers: the Shiite Muslim clerical establishment, the army and the Bazaris — Tehran's influential merchants.

In northern Tehran, hundreds of people mobbed Khatami when he arrived to vote Friday. One man pushed away Khatami's bodyguards, grabbed the candidate and kissed him on both cheeks.

The enthusiasm generated by the election spilled out into the street at the Hossainiyeh Ershad, a mosque in northern Tehran, causing a traffic jam.

Additional ballots had to be rushed to some booths that ran out less than three hours after polls opened. Elsewhere, buses were brought in to serve as mobile voting booths after crowds overwhelmed the original stations.

For the first time since the 1979 revolution, the major election issue did not appear to be the economy, which suffers high unemployment and more 24 percent inflation.

This time, the issue was personal freedoms.

Pilot rests up for final, dangerous leg of Amelia Earhart's journey

HONOLULU (AP) — A millionaire tracing the path of famed aviator Amelia Earhart is resting up for the last, longest and most "dangerous" leg of her around-the-world flight.

Linda Finch, a Texas businesswoman, is near the end of her 1/2-month flight in the same model airplane that Earhart used in 1937 when she made an ill-fated attempt to fly around the world at its widest point — the equator.

Finch said takeoff is critical. "The gear is not designed to take off with that much weight," she said. "The airplane will have to be going 100 mph before we get off the runway."

"It is dangerous. We'll be pushing the parameters of the plane so outrageously. But as long as we manage it, well, ... we'll be fine."

— Linda Finch

Wind will also be a critical factor in the flight, which will take her almost halfway across the Pacific Ocean non-stop.

If the wind is too strong, Finch said, she will have to delay her departure. If the winds change in the middle of the flight, she will have to turn back. "We'll be watching the weather and removing every ounce of weight that we don't absolutely have to have on the airplane," she said.

Finch's re-creation of Earhart's trip 60 years after Earhart's mysterious disappearance is almost exact, right down to taking off from the same hangar in the same model plane — a refurbished twin-engine Lockheed Electra 10-E.

Others have retraced the flight, but this is the first attempt in the same model aircraft.

Finch has flown across five continents and through 16 countries. If plans are successful, she will have flown 26,000 miles.

Earhart vanished near Howland Island, a 1-square-mile bit of U.S. territory north of American Samoa. The aviation pioneer was about 7,000 miles short of her goal when she disappeared July 2, 1937. Her disappearance still remains a mystery.

China establishes rules for Hong Kong elections

BEIJING (AP) — Hong Kong will have considerable leeway in organizing its elections when it returns to Chinese sovereignty, the territory's leader-in-waiting promised Friday.

The assurance was seen as a boost to Hong Kong's efforts to secure the high degree of autonomy it has been promised by China after the July 1 handover.

A Chinese appointed committee discussed election rules for Hong Kong during a two-day meeting in Beijing that concluded Friday. Hong Kong's future leader, Tung Chee-chung, said the committee "gave Hong Kong a lot of flexibility, a lot of space."

"It's a good thing for Hong Kong. It also demonstrates that we Hong Kong people genuinely are our own masters. We can make the final decision on what direction we take," Tung told reporters.

Kong's current legislature was elected under rules it did not agree to, and will disband it on July 1.

The legislature is to be replaced by a provisional, China-backed body that will function until fresh elections are held, under new rules.

Tung said he wanted the elections held "in as soon as practicable" as the second quarter of 1998 and hoped to announce a date later this year.

During the two-day meeting, the China-appointed Preparatory Committee drew up guidelines for the 1998 elections.

The elections will either use proportional representation or a single-vote system with 20 districts. Another 30 seats will be chosen by professional groups, while the remaining 10 seats in the 60-member legislature will be chosen by an election committee.

Hong Kong's pro-democracy parties fear they may lose seats under the new system.

CHESS CHAMPIONS

Garrett Reynolds, right, of Twin Falls and Ian Jameson of Boise have become Idaho State Scholastic Chess Co-Champions for 1997. The Idaho State Scholastic Chess Tournament was held April 13 at the Community School in Sun Valley. The tournament, open to all public, private and home-schooled students enrolled in grades kindergarten through 12th grade, attracted 87 competitors. Following five rounds of competition, Reynolds and Jameson were the only two students who retained perfect 5-0 scores. Reynolds is a student at Robert Stuart Junior High.

Candidates get in last jabs across France

French Prime Minister Alain Juppé, right, inaugurates a gardening fair in Bordeaux, southwestern France, Friday, in one of his last public appearances before Sunday's first round of legislative elections.

PARIS (AP) — Politicians on the right and left wooed France's large undecided vote Friday as the last day of campaigning for the nation's first-round parliamentary elections.

While unlikely to unseat the ruling conservatives, the election will determine the strength of President Jacques Chirac's public mandate to carry out painful free-market reforms in France's government and economy.

Prime Minister Alain Juppé, the left's favorite target of Sunday's vote, insisted he's not yet decided whether to keep his job after the June 1 runoff. He accused the left of having no real plans for governing if it did win power.

Meanwhile, far right leader Jean-Marie Le Pen, the potential spoiler against the mainstream right, attacked what he said were the outdated policies of Chirac, calling France "Chirassic Park."

In an outbreak of violence rare in French campaigns, bodyguards of Le Pen's National Front clashed with human rights activists in a southern town controlled by his anti-immigrant party.

France's 40 million voters are being asked to choose between keeping Chirac's conservative coalition or giving the left a chance of ending 12.8 percent unemployment. French law forbids campaigning the day before the balloting.

Chirac called the vote 10 months early in a gamble that his coalition stands a better chance of winning election now — ahead of expected tough new austerity measures aimed at qualifying for Europe's single currency planned for 1999.

But France's bars publication of election polls in the week before voting has kept undecided voters willing to let the conservatives keep a majority in Parliament. Currently, Chirac's coalition holds 464 of the 577 seats.

In some polls, voters showed a third of eligible voters were undecided or plan not to vote. That was the bloc being romanced Friday.

Leftists led by Socialist Lionel Jospin attacked Juppé's austerity policies and inability to cut unemployment, urging voters to pick the left just to get rid of Juppé.

But Juppé insisted Friday he would not be an automatic candidate for his own succession — apparently a last-minute offer to sacrifice his own career for the sake of the conservative cause. He suggested Jospin "already sees himself in Matignon," the official residence of French premiers.

Juppé pounded at the left's positions as "contradicted and modified," referring in part to Jospin's wavering on just how soft he'll be on sticking to the tough budget criteria for the euro currency.

Good weather helps climbers ascend Everest

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Taking advantage of sunny skies and no wind, two Americans, descendant of the first Sherpa to conquer Mount Everest and 19 other climbers reached the top of the world's highest mountain Friday.

Among them was a team from Malaysia, the first from that country to climb Everest. The others accomplishing the grueling ascent up the 29,028-foot summit include two Canadians and members of teams from New Zealand and Mexico.

Thirteen Sherpas went with them, including Tashi Wangchuk Norgay Tenzing, the grandson of Tenzing Norgay, who climbed Everest with Sir Edmund Hillary in the mountain's first conquest in 1953.

All the mountaineers traipsed up the South Col, the traditional southern route from Nepal that is drawing more expeditions every year. They were among more than 40 climbers on the mountain Friday.

Gun accident kills 2 German soldiers in Bosnia

RAJLOVAC, Bosnia-Herzegovina — An armored vehicle belonging to the NATO-led peacekeeping force accidentally fired its cannon on another vehicle on Friday, killing two German soldiers.

The accident occurred as the two armored personnel carriers were proceeding to go on patrol in Rajlovac, a suburb of Sarajevo, NATO spokesman Maj. Tom Whelan said. "The APCs were lined up one behind the other," he said. "The rear APC's weapon, which is a 20 mm cannon, went off. We don't know why."

Two rounds penetrated the lead vehicle, wounding its three-man crew, White said. Two of the soldiers died later.

Philippines seek U.S. role in dispute

MANILA, Philippines — The Philippine military chief said Friday he hopes the United States will come to his country's aid if a "superior force" threatens islands it claims in the South China Sea.

The United States, however, takes a neutral stance toward the conflicting claims of the six nations, including the Philippines and China, to the Spratly Islands. Gen. Armulfo Acedera called Friday for an addendum to the Philippines' Mutual Defense Treaty with the United States to cover conflict in the Spratlys.

Manila claims and occupies eight islands in the chain of atolls and reefs believed to be rich in oil and natural gas. China, Taiwan and Vietnam claim all of the islands, while Malaysia and Brunei claim some.

Striking guards shut Louvre for 2nd day

PARIS — Striking night watchmen blocked entrances to the Louvre museum Friday, turning away thousands of visitors for the second straight day.

About 20 watchmen, protesting working conditions, blocked the entrance to the glass pyramid rising in the Louvre's main courtyard. Other issues under discussion include job cuts, uniforms and vacation time to compensate for night shifts.

Louvre spokeswoman Patricia Mounier said management "had made significant progress" but that the 100 striking watchmen were holding out on the question of time off. About 18,000 visitors were turned away Thursday. Mounier said she did not know when France's largest museum would reopen.

Greek police recover stolen works by Picasso

ATHENS, Greece — Police recovered 38 works by Pablo Picasso, Joan Miro and other artists Friday, three years after the artwork was stolen from an unguarded Paris foundation.

Authorities arrested Grigoris Rousopoulos, 45, who is accused of hiding the works in an apartment in the center of Athens. The works, including 12 lithographs by Picasso and three each by Miro and Alberto Giacometti, were stolen from the Goulandris-Horn Foundation. Police did not say how much the works were worth.

The pieces were part of an exhibition loaned to the private foundation by the Teriade Museum on the island of Lesvos.

Afghanistan mutineers declare holy war

KABUL, Afghanistan — Mutineers fighting northern warlord Rashid Dostum declared a holy war against their former commander on Friday, vowing allegiance to the Taliban Islamic army.

Dostum is fighting a rebellion in six of his eight provinces, the last region yet to be conquered by the religious militia. His defeat would complete the Taliban's three-year campaign to rule all of Afghanistan by its strict version of Islamic law.

Israel, Russia link pact to fight organized crime

JERUSALEM — Israel and Russia have agreed to fight organized crime and international terrorism.

Israel's police have long warned that the Russian mafia is flourishing in the Jewish state. They estimate that Russian mobsters have laundered billions of dollars in Israel.

Russian Interior Minister Anatoly Kulkov held a series of meetings with police officials during a visit to Israel this week on how to tackle the Russian mafia. On Thursday, he signed a crime-fighting agreement with Israeli Foreign Minister David Levy that includes efforts to halt international terrorism.

Albertson's CEO maintains chain is 'rock solid'

BOISE (AP) — Albertson's, the nation's fourth-largest food retailer, remains "rock solid" despite a disappointing quarter, Chief Executive Officer Gary Michael told shareholders Friday.

A day before, Albertson's, which operates 838 stores in 20 states, reported its first quarterly decline in earnings in at least two decades. The profit was down 2.8 percent, $109.3 million, which company officials attributed to its heavy investments in expansion and new programs to attract customers.

Michael, speaking to about 2,000 shareholders, said Albertson's remains the most profitable chain in the industry but that profits "were not where wanted to be."

"We have not provided a good return for our shareholders over the last year," he said. "We need to increase sales, no doubt about that."

Since announcing last fall that near-term financial performance would be lower than analysts had projected, the company has seen its stock price decline by more than a quarter from a high of $43 a share. It closed Thursday at $32.50 per share.

Michael said the company spent $733 million on expansion last year, plans to spend $650 million this year and has budgeted $2.8 billion in capital outlay through 2001.

"We are a great long-term investment and we are building on the future," he said.

The United Food and Commercial Workers International Union is engaged in a number of legal battles with the company. Michael said about 36,000 of its 50,000 employees are union members.

The union has backed a number of class-action lawsuits, claiming Albertson's forces a lot of its employees to work "off the clock" or unpaid hours.

Union representative Joe Peterson said Thursday the union has statements from several thousand former or current Albertson's employees that workers were forced or coerced into doing more work than they were paid for.

The union took out a full-page ad in the Idaho Statesman Friday morning urging shareholders to demand answers from the company. Albertson's also had a full-page ad in the same edition, singling out 18 employees for exceptional service.

Peterson said the shareholder meeting, and others passed out a 22-page brochure outlining its complaints against Albertson, although many shareholders refused to accept them.

But when it came time in the shareholder meeting for questions from the floor, the union said nothing.

Among the union's allegations were claims that store directors or managers have been told that if any workers' compensation claims come from their store, they will forfeit their bonuses, which generally are at least several thousand dollars.

"That is absolutely not company policy," Michael told reporters in a meeting after the shareholder session. He said Albertson's pays millions of dollars yearly for insurance and claims.

Michael denied flatly, both to shareholders and to reporters, that there's any policy trying to get unpaid work out of employees.

Albertson's has a long-standing policy against forcing employees to work off the clock," he said. "We will vigorously defend ourselves against those lawsuits. There's absolutely no effort to exploit our employees."

Michael noted that two large Western competitors, Fred Meyer and Smith's, are combining. "We are going to see a lot more of that," he said.

In the United States, he said, the top six food retailers have 31 percent of the market. In the United Kingdom, he said, the top six control 72 percent of the market.

But in response to a question, Michael disputed that Albertson's has grown too much. He said Albertson's must grow to "build muscle" to demand attractive prices from suppliers.

Michael said the company wants details from the union on the statements it has collected on unpaid work. Peterson said the union will not give them to Albertson's for fear the employees involved will suffer retaliation or be fired.

"We have not and we would not do that," Michael said. "We are anxious for them to share that information."

He described Albertson's as a company that has good relations with its unions and employees, with strikes or work stoppages a rarity.

"We are pro employee," he said. "If they want to join a union, we support that."

Batt split votes on gambling committee to guarantee full-scale policy debate

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Phil Batt said Friday he purposely split the 12 votes on his gambling committee between advocates and critics of gambling to force a full-scale debate on Idaho's policy.

Batt realizes that there will be no unanimous recommendations on the core issues from a panel with such a sharply divided membership.

"But while some may say that guarantees stalemate, I think it's going to guarantee some useful discussion of the whole matter."

But he said the addition of another member would upset the balance he had tried to create on the panel and since the Shoshone-Paiutes have no gambling, "the gaming ques-

The governor told the tribes he has not re-ordered that results he wants the committee to produce by November.

But, he said "I'm looking for a bright line for Idaho. I have seen in the other states a leapfrogging."

He said Oregon recently agreed to let one tribe conduct all the gambling activities that are legal in Nevada.

"I don't think we want that in Idaho," the governor said. "That's why we need to look at where we want to go."

He cited the Coeur d'Alene's recent announcement of an expansion of their casino and entertainment complex that will include off-track betting, which is allowed under the gaming compact with the state.

But Batt predicted that once the tribe begins taking off-track bets, non-Indians will want the same opportunity. Now, any off-track betting operation off a reservation must be linked with live racing.

Zarate also told the governor that while the expansion contemplates an off-track-betting operation, there is no plan for that in the near future.

But for all the governor's explaining, Nez Perce Tribal Executive Committee Member Julia Davis was blunt about what can be expected — the state Lottery, that generates $20 million for public works projects each year, and tribal casinos that continue operating or they will not.

"But while some may say that guarantees stalemate, I think it's going to guarantee some useful discussion of the whole matter."

— Phil Batt, Idaho governor expressed concerns about the committee makeup in a letter to the governor, and Batt told his representative, Marjorie Zarate, that he did his best to balance the panel's membership.

The voting members of the committee include representatives of the four tribes already conducting gambling operations that have generated millions of dollars in profits and hundreds of new jobs for their struggling reservation economies.

They are balanced by four state gambling critics. And the final four members appear to have less strident positions but are again split two for and two against.

In his first meetings with tribal leaders this year, Batt was quickly asked by officials of the tion is not as critical to you."

He promised to advise the committee that while the tribes would not have a vote, they should otherwise be allowed to fully participate in the deliberations.

The first of what will probably be six meetings will be held in early June by the committee that was the result of an unsuccessful — and at the end ill-fated — attack on the use of electronic pull-tab machines in tribal casinos. The tribes claim they are legal. The state says they are not.

While an opponent of gambling in general, Batt's initial opposition to the machines softened to the point that he suggested the panel might find some way to make existing tribal operations legal under state law.

Her comments prompted one radio station to put together a box stuffed with listening-donated items, including 15 pounds of balloons, that is being sent to Chenoweth's Washington office.

Inside is a rag reading, "Dear Helen Chenoweth: You're full of baloney. Respectfully, The Citizens of Delaware County."

Chenoweth recently issued a statement in which she defended her comments, saying that she missed the point she was trying to make — that the legislation they were at odds on was targeted to help the West and Boehlert should not have butted in.

And nothing r a n k l e s upstate New Yorkers more than an outsider lumping them together with New York City.

Chenoweth and Boehlert are on opposite sides of a contentious environmental issue — a proposal to exempt flood-damaged levees repair from endangered species requirements.

Delhi, N.Y. (AP) — Folks in a rural upstate New York county think Idaho Rep. Helen Chenoweth is so full of baloney they are sending her a 15-pound hunt of the lunch meat.

The conservative Republican caused a riff when she said central New York Congressman Sherwood Boehlert, a fellow Republican, was from a "mostly concrete district" where floods do not measure up to the ones out West.

Officials in Delaware County were quick to point out that last year their area was devastated by floods that claimed several lives.

9 more students allege sexual misconduct

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — More Hillcrest High School students allege former school resource officer Derris Dean Anderson tried to engage in sexual activity with them, but no new charges have been filed.

Nine more girls have accused Anderson of sexual misconduct,

Bonneville County sheriff's spokesman Karl Caspersen said Thursday.

Anderson was arrested May 12 and charged with two counts of sexual battery of a minor and one count of sexual abuse of a minor. He is accused of taking nude photographs of one girl and pulling down the bras of others.

At the time of Anderson's arrest, Bonneville County Sheriff Byron Stommel indicated there were more victims.

"We have heard the names of other possible victims, and we're going to follow that up," he said.

Grand Canyon, Yellowstone, Yosemite rate poorly in park survey

PHOENIX (AP) — You fork over $20 to get in the park's gates only to sit in traffic and battle with other tourists for a parking space.

Although the view at the Grand Canyon may be stunning, a new survey of visitors rates the park a less-than-stellar rating.

The same goes for Yosemite and Yellowstone national parks.

Some 40,000 subscribers rate their experiences at national parks-in the June issue of Consumer Reports. And while the Grand Canyon, Yosemite and Yellowstone receive high marks for scenery, respondents were less thrilled with the overall experience.

The Grand Canyon ranked just 22nd, Yosemite was 26th and Yellowstone was 27th.

Glacier Bay National Park in Alaska pulled in the highest marks, followed by Arches in Utah, Carlsbad Caverns in New Mexico, Canyonlands in Utah and Mesa Verde in New Mexico. Western parks rounded out the top 10: Bryce Canyon, Utah; Hawaii Volcanoes, Hawaii; Olympic, Washington; Grand Teton, Wyoming; and Haleakala, Hawaii.

Survey respondents were dissatisfied with overcrowding, traffic and lack of parking at the Grand Canyon.

Mauraen Oltrogge, a spokeswoman for Grand Canyon National Park, wasn't surprised to hear that.

"Those issues the visitors are complaining about are the same things that we've been talking about for years," Oltrogge said.

The number of visitors at the Grand Canyon has skyrocketed in the last decade. In 1997, 3.5 million tourists flocked into the park, but this year officials expect nearly 5 million people.

The problem is the huge number of visitors, Oltrogge said. It's the number of vehicles.

On an average summer day, some 6,500 cars drive to the South Rim and fight it out for 2,400 parking spaces.

Overcrowding and traffic were complaints of Yosemite and Yellowstone national park visitors as well.

—More than a quarter of the survey respondents said Yellowstone was too crowded, and others complained of poor maintenance in the park.

Cheryl Matthews, a Yellowstone spokeswoman, said officials are aware how poor the roads are. She said workers are repairing roads as fast as they can get the money in.

Most of the park's roads were built over old wagon trails, making them windy and narrow. When the park opened 125 years ago, no one could imagine the droves of motor homes that now flood the parking lots around Old Faithful.

Kidnapped child, wounded mom reunite

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A toddler abducted and taken to Washington state by his father has been reunited in Austin with his mother.

Michael Kennedy of San Antonio said his daughter, Alison, was excited to see her 19-month-old son, Dylan.

The boy was rescued earlier this week in Spokane, Wash., after his father fatally shot himself during a standoff with police.

Austin authorities say Kevin Ronald Miller kidnapped Dylan on May 15 after shooting Alison Kennedy. Miller also had been charged with killing his mother-in-law in San Antonio.

Dylan's mom remains hospitalized in Austin, where doctors upgraded her condition to serious. However, they're uncertain whether she'll regain her ability to speak or use her right side.

Pena wants Rocky Flats security report

DENVER (AP) — Rocky Flats security officials have assured Energy Secretary Federico Pena that there is no security threat at the former nuclear weapons facility, a department spokeswoman says.

Carmen MacDougall said Pena takes seriously a published report earlier in the week that terrorists could steal plutonium from the site because of lax security. A guard commander and a former director of security said budget cuts and faulty maintenance had compromised security.

Pena asked for an update on Rocky Flats security in the next two weeks, MacDougall said. An earlier report found "major defects," department Quasight Manager Glenn Podonsky said, but they have generally been corrected.

The report was done in April, the same month that Rocky Flats Security Director David Ridenour quit because he could not ensure Denver's safety.

Utah accuses firm of fraud

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A company affiliated with Mark O. Haroldsen, author of "How to Wake Up the Financial Genius Inside You," has been cited by the state for allegedly violating the state's Consumer Sales Practices Act.

The Utah Division of Consumer Protection has handed Salt Lake County-based Financial Freedom Reports an 83-count administrative citation.

The state alleges speakers during home business seminars presented misrepresented profits consumers could make owning and operating gumball-style vending machines.

Francine Gianni, director of the Division of Consumer Protection, said the action is based on complaints from 18 Utah consumers. She said the company has 10 days to request a hearing.

Idaho's gas prices high for holiday weekend

BOISE - At Idaho pumps, you'll find gas prices rated the sixth-highest in the continental United States, according to a AAA Motor Club survey. . . . And it doesn't look like prices will drop anytime soon, said the American Automobile Association, a travel and business organization.

The average price for a gallon of self-serve unleaded gasoline is $1.34, up 2 cents from Easter and 16 cents higher than the most recent 10-year Memorial Day average, the survey found. Last year, however, gas prices peaked at $1.48 the third week in May.

The national average is $1.24 per gallon of self-serve unleaded gas.

Part of the reason for the fuel prices may be due to higher production and transportation costs in the West, said Dave Carlson, AAA Idaho spokesman. But Idaho's 26-cent state fuel tax also is higher than many other states. Connecticut is the highest at 35 cents.

Nevada, California, Connecticut, Montana and Arizona had higher pump prices than Idaho. Indiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Missouri and Georgia had the lowest prices in the continental United States.

State cheese production up 11% during 1996

TWIN FALLS - Idaho may be famous for its potatoes, but it's earning a reputation in cheese.

Idaho produced 432.8 million pounds of cheese last year, up 11 percent from the previous year.

Twin Falls-based Avonmore West said it accounted for a 40 percent chunk of that amount with more than 163 million pounds of cheese, the company said.

The Gem State accounted for about 6 percent of the nation's total cheese production last year, according to a recently released report by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Idaho remained the fifth-largest cheese-producing state behind Wisconsin, California, Minnesota and New York. But Wisconsin keeps its cheese crown with more than 2 billion pounds of product produced last year.

When it comes to jack cheese, Idaho is on top of the West.

In the "other American varieties" category, which includes Monterey and colby, the state produced almost 276 million pounds last year, a 14 percent gain over 1995, according to the report.

According to the federal report, Idaho had a 10 percent increase last year in the "American-type" cheese category. By producing 388 million pounds, Idaho ranked fourth in Wisconsin.

Avonmore West has plants in Twin Falls, Gooding and Richfield.

Thieves hit Cassia County School District office

BURLEY - Two videocassette recorders, a radio and a baseball glove are missing from the Cassia County School District Central Office.

Junior LaMont Hoskins, who was cleaning the building between 10:30 p.m. and 11:00 a.m., said the stolen items, valued at $915, were still in the offices of Kevin Bushman and Mike Hoopes when he cleaned them. He wasn't sure if the items were there when he left. The alarm was not triggered, but Hoskins said it was set when he left.

While cleaning, Hoskins found paper stuck in a doorjamb so the door wouldn't close and lock. Because of this, Bushman said he opened the burglary tool phase while Hoskins was in the building. As of Friday there were no suspects.

Twin Falls School District sponsors parenting courses

TWIN FALLS - The Twin Falls School District is sponsoring courses on how adults can strengthen family ties and raise responsible children.

The courses, called "Developing Capable People," were developed by H. Stephen Glass, a Sacramento, Calif., child psychologist, speaker and book author who claims hundreds of thousands of graduates of his family-nurturing program.

In the Magic Valley since 1996, Glass has led a train of 55 people to teach his classes. Classes run for five or ten weeks, once or twice weekly, from June to October.

Classes cost $50 and include materials. Scholarships of $25 are available for extremely needy families. Teachers may earn two university credits for an additional $70.

For meeting times, locations and registration information, call the district at 733-6900 or stop by the office at 201 Main Ave. W., Twin Falls.

Doctors donate to improve medical library

The Times-News
TWIN FALLS - The medical library at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center will be physically small.
"But we have access to whole world," Librarian Nola Higley said.
Not only do doctors and students use the library for research, but the public, patients and their families consult the materials to learn about medical conditions and their treatments.

Want to bone up on medical information?
By the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center medical library.
Open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.
Located across from the surgery waiting area on the main floor.
Free to public, but you can't check out materials unless you work at the hospital or are on the medical staff.

"You can look for a subject, and it will show a list of articles," Higley said.
There's information about the latest medical treatments and procedures at famous institutions such as the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., and updates about the newest drugs and their interaction with other medicines, said Larry Baxter, director of the hospital foundation.
On the computer is a drug database updated quarterly, a consumer health data system and access to the Internet.
Patients will often look up their diseases and procedures or other treatments for that illness.

Money donated by the doctors helps keep the information current, Baxter said. For example, the CD-ROMs system can cost more than $6,000 annually.
The foundation also has purchased computer equipment for the library.
The continuing-education fund helps hospital nurses maintain their skills or acquire new ones by bringing in speakers or sending them to educational programs, Baxter said.
Over the past seven years, the medical staff has donated more than $109,000 to the two funds as an organized group, he said. The amount does not include individual gifts to other programs and events sponsored by the foundation.
"They support us all year long," Baxter added.

THEIR FLAG WILL FLY

While washing windows at the antique shop he and wife Sally own in Bellevue, Richard Drake, a Korean War veteran, says he doesn't have big plans for Memorial Day, except for picking asparagus. The Drakes, who come from a long line of veterans, have flown a flag in front their business every day for the past 26 years. Washing others would do the same, Sally Drake added; "If our flag isn't out, people know we're not here."

Sprucing up downtown Jerome: Property owners to be polled on local improvement district taxes

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent
JEROME - Starting next week, petitions will go to Jerome's downtown property owners, to see if they're interested in paying taxes into a local improvement district to spruce up downtown.
The 60 or so property owners could wind up paying $360,000 on a project to add turning lanes and left turn signals, and widen streets downtown.

The project could cost more than $2 million. Federal and state funds would pick up about $1.1 million, Jerome's share of gas taxes would pay $540,000.
But for some local landowners who attended a Jerome Downtown Improvement Committee informational meeting Wednesday, the big concern is convenience.
"When they tear up the sidewalk and the streets, and there is no parking in front of a business it will drive off customers," said Bill Kersey, a downtown property owner. "Many of the businesses along the street are service oriented: barber shops, beauty shops and so forth. This will hurt the businesses.

"I'm blocked off and nobody can come through the door, I'm in trouble," said Oop Johnson, owner of Oop's T-shirt Market. "But if we don't do these improvements we are all in trouble."
But traffic would flow during the 60 to 90 days needed to finish the project, said Dale Riedesel, project engineer.
"We will work to alleviate the inconvenience as much as possible to the individual business and property owners," he said.

"The contractors will do the work however it will be. If we want the work to be done we will have to do the work after business hours they will do it."
Plans for the project include:
* New curbs, gutters, and sidewalks; widening the intersection on 112 acres of county land just north of Hailey on the west side of the Idaho Highway 75.
A missing traffic study was Thursday's snag.
Since Highway 75 already is congested

Burley resident pleads innocent in attempted murder

By Karen E. Nalazdek
Times-News writer
BURLEY - Marlan Lee Gonsonson looked frustrated after he pleaded innocent to charges of assault with the intent to commit murder in 5th District Court on Friday.
Gonsonson, 64, appeared to be having trouble hearing as he brought his hand to his ear several times while the judge was speaking to him. He also was hesitant in answering the judge's questions about his charges and his rights.
Arrested in April for aggravated battery and possession of a concealed weapon while intoxicated, Gonsonson was in court Friday to face the greater charge of attempted murder.
His arraignment started with confusion when District Court Judge George Granata Jr. asked him if he understood the charges against him.
Gonsonson answered: "No."
Granata looked irritated and told Gonsonson's attorney James Aniest that the case would be recalled later Friday because he had not yet explained the charges to his client.
But Gonsonson had only misunderstood the judge's question, so the arraignment proceeded without delay. Granata later apologized for getting upset.

Shoshone's new school gets under way

Shoshone School Board president Dean Brown speaks during a groundbreaking ceremony Friday for Shoshone's new school building.

By Karna M. Fitzgerald
Times-News correspondent
SHOSHONE - Shoshone students stood on their own piece of the rock Friday as district officials broke ground for the city's new school.
The new school will sit just south of the existing ball fields and fairgrounds on a site that is now lava rock and sagebrush, south and east of East D Street.
"The dream is becoming a reality," said Superintendent Max Excell.
Within a month, construction is scheduled to begin on the building for kindergarten through 12th graders. Students were bused to the construction site and stood in lines to form the outline of the new school.
Shoshone voters approved a $3.3 million bond in May 1996, after voting similar measures down twice before.
Excell said the building will cost more than $3.5 million. The extra money will come from the district budget.
It will be built on two levels to avoid blowing additional lava rock. Starr Corp. will manage the project.
Excell and other district officials say it won't be a building with all the amenities.

"This is a no-frills building," said School Board Chairman Dean Brown. "But this is a no-frills community. It's a hard-working community that comes together."
The new building is scheduled to open in the fall of 1998. But students say a new school is overdue.
"I think it's about time they got a new school," said Amanda Haught, who will be in the first graduating class in the new building. "The old school is well, old."
Haught and her friends described a junior/senior building in disrepair, cold in winter and hot in summer.
"When you're shivering in geometry it's hard to learn," said Anita Shafter, who just finished her sophomore year. "In one room the pipes clang so loud you can't hear the teacher."
Brown said the old elementary school will be likely be sold. The School Board is still trying to decide what to do with the junior/senior building, but hopes to save the gym for community use.

Batt hopes for state-tribal salmon recovery review

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Phil Batt told leaders of the Nez Perce Tribe Friday he hoped the rift in the federal salmon restoration review process can be repaired next month to keep the lines of communication between the tribes and state open.

leaders after a six-month hiatus. "Maybe it wasn't the best forum, but it was a forum," the governor said. "I just hope the whole process doesn't drop down into individual entities fighting among themselves."

The Nez Perce and other members of the Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission pulled out of the process a week ago, declaring it a sham. He claimed the panel formed to resolve disputes over federal salmon policy was acting in defense of federal hydropower and not the endangered salmon.

For common ground with the tribe on the salmon recovery question, he lashed out at a Nez Perce Executive Committee Member Julia Davis after she suggested that the Idaho governor had essentially ignored the tribes' concerns about the review process while his colleagues in Washington and Oregon had not.

Davis was that way wrong. "I don't think I'm surprised by anybody in meeting the concerns of the tribes," Batt shot back. "I guess I'm frustrated that the attitude comes to this table that I'm not addressing your issues."

Kaczynski's lawyers demand judge throw out evidence

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Unabomber suspect Theodore Kaczynski's defense attorneys, hoping to derail prosecutors' case at a single stroke, insisted Friday that a judge throw out all evidence taken from his Montana cabin.

Public defender Judy Clarke told U.S. District Judge G. Douglas Burrell Jr. that federal agents had lied and distorted information in order to get the search warrant for Kaczynski's remote, ramshackle cabin.

whether Blasier had signed on to the Kaczynski defense team, and he declined to comment as lawyers left the courtroom. Burrell did not immediately rule on the defense motion. He said he would have to review the arguments and documents again before ruling.

FBI agents seeking the warrant twisted the results of DNA testing and the chronology of events to bolster their case against Kaczynski, Clarke said.

"They lied to the judge, they misled the judge," she said. "There not only is no probable cause, there's hardly even a suspicion."

How easy such motions, while common, are rarely successful. Clarke argued that DNA samples cited in the FBI affidavit were based on a false assumption that they were comparing a sample from the Unabomber with a sample from Kaczynski.

Special U.S. Attorney J. Douglas Wilson, who only recently joined the government's prosecution team, defended the request for the warrant.

Kaczynski attended the hearing, the first time he has done so since shortly after the case was moved to Sacramento last summer. The 55-year-old former Berkeley math professor's hair and beard were neatly trimmed and he wore an open-necked white shirt and a sport coat.

Wilson said there was never any intention to mislead the judge who issued the warrant. Asked by Burrell whether dropping the DNA evidence would have made any difference, Wilson responded: "Probable cause is still overwhelmingly present."

Robert Blasier, a Sacramento attorney who handled DNA arguments for the defense in both the criminal and civil trials of O.J. Simpson, was seated at the defense table during the hearing.

Kaczynski smiled as he entered the courtroom and engaged his defense attorneys in conversation. He also smiled and waved to a woman in the courtroom. Her identity was not immediately known.

They are meaningless comparisons... between the Unabomber's writings and Kaczynski's writing in an essay and in letters to his family. "They are meaningless comparisons... between the Unabomber's writings and Kaczynski's writing in an essay and in letters to his family."

Kayakers try out Idaho river, say it just needs consistent water much water had flowed through the canyon. Kayakers and rafters from Idaho, Utah, Montana and Wyoming tried the stream out.

GRACE (AP) — Kayakers and rafters who ran an eight-mile whitewater stretch of the Bear River say all it needs to become a top recreation area is consistent water.

But less skilled boaters would find that much flow dangerous. Several boaters suggest PacificCorp vary flow rates over the course of a planned weekend recreational release, Fuld said.

About a dozen people ran Black Canyon during experimental water releases. They said if there's water available, the stretch could be a good recreation facility at least a few weekends a year.

PacificCorp operates a couple of hydroelectric generating facilities above and below the canyon, controlling waterflows by releases at Grace Dam.

Today's Lunch Special — Chicken, Caesar Salad $5.25

Usually there's little water in Black Canyon in summer months, as most of it runs through a 10-foot pipe used to operate the generating plants.

As part of an experiment, water was released at 700 cubic feet per second, 1,000 feet and 1,500 cubic feet. It was the first time in more than 10 years that "I wouldn't say there was a quantum difference between 700 and 1,000 cfs," Fuld said. "It was rockier and slower, but still runnable and still fun."

Slaying investigation forces canal shutdown in Jefferson County

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Dive teams searching for a critical piece of evidence in a Blackfoot murder case will get a short reprieve from high, fast-moving canal waters. At 4 a.m. today, the head-gate that directs water from the Snake River into the 130-mile Idaho Irrigation District canal system was closed for 12 hours. The canal district's board of directors voted unanimously Thursday night to shut off the water. The head-gates are about 10 miles north of Idaho Falls in Jefferson County. The decision is a critical one for police investigators and the water district's 1,400 patrons. The police need the help, but farmers need the water.

The project will extend two blocks each direction from the stop light in the center of town. "The project has been a long time coming," project coordinator Mike Pepper said. "Downtown is the heart of a community. Smaller communities than Jerome have turned their downtown around and now are thriving."

Continued from B1. Following his plea, Granata asked Gonness if he had any more questions. Instead of answering, Gonness looked angry as he piled up his papers and stared straight down at the table. "I guess not, sir," he said. "Your body language indicates that you have a question and this is the time to ask," Granata said. "I'm not trying to put you on the spot. I'm just trying to give you the opportunity. If you don't have a question that's fine, I'm not try-

Two men have been charged in the weekend slaying of 35-year-old Saul Olgun Villegas of Logan, Utah. Villegas was shot in a trailer home on the east side of Blackfoot. He died of multiple gunshot wounds to the chest, police said. Antonio Panteras Rodriguez, 26, and Hector Audilio Gonzalez, 24, were arrested Tuesday and charged with first-degree murder and conspiracy to commit murder. A witness told police that after the shooting at 2 a.m. Sunday, the murder suspects drove to Idaho Falls and tossed the gun in the canal. "This will be our one shot to find it, if we're going to find it," Blackfoot Police Chief Jim Richardson said. "I don't know what the odds are, but lowering it

Some downtown property owners wholeheartedly support the idea. "The streets are going to get torn up anyway whether we do this or not," said Leroy Craig, of Prescott Craig Insurance, a downtown property owner. "The downtown sidewalks are in poor shape. When we get done with this project we will have a downtown that we can be proud of." Downtown revitalization is more than just curbs, gutters, and sidewalks, said City Councilman Dennis Moore, a downtown property owner. "It is a change in attitude." He said the improvements will ing to pressure you." Gonness did not speak, and Granata suggested he consult some more with his lawyer. Gonness was arrested on April 23 following an emergency call by Alice Adelia Guild. When police arrived, 80-year-old Guild told them Gonness had pushed her down for no reason, shoved a handkerchief in her mouth, placed his hand over it and told her she was going to die, according to a police report. Gonness was carrying two pistols, one concealed, the report

Sho-Ban students' experiment to blast off

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Six Shoshone-Bannock High School students will soon begin their science experiment where few high school science experiments have gone before. Their gadget, which tests the ability to perform chemical processes in space, will be aboard a space shuttle mission scheduled for late August or early September. The students presented their experiment to a group of Lockheed Martin Idaho Technologies Co. scientists and city officials Thursday in conjunction with Lockheed's first celebration of Space Day. The experiment is housed in a rectangular shaped box and contains sprinkler parts, a small model airplane battery, an IV bag, a filter and phosphate ore from Fort Hall. It is designed to develop a method for extracting phosphate ore in space. With the flip of a switch, the phosphate filters through a bluish water mixture dribbled through the IV bag. The product is phosphate liquid that could be used for fertilizer in space stations. Last month, the Sho-Ban students were the only high school students in the country to participate in NASA's two-week Reduced Gravity Student Flight Opportunities pilot program in Houston. The 25 other teams participating were from universities and colleges. Ed Galindo, the Sho-Ban science teacher and project leader who accompanied the students to Houston, heard about the NASA experiment at a conference a few years ago. It was advertised as a program for colleges and universities, but Galindo filled out the application packet anyway. The Fort Hall students received two semester technical credits from the University of Idaho for their participation in the NASA experiment. In Houston, three of the students flew two days conducting experiments in zero gravity on a NASA Boeing KC-135A airplane that simulates the weightlessness of a space shuttle in orbit. "It's something else," student Nuli Titus said. "The only way I could really explain it is like if you were the bottom of a 10-foot deep pool and you were floating up." The students also took their experiment on the "Vomit Comet." During that flight, it did not work. So the team switched from an $80 high-tech filter to a 59-cent coffee filter with a larger weave, making it easier for the phosphate to filter. On the second day, the experiment worked fine. "That's what science is about," Galindo said. "It's about proving only what will work."

WWII aircraft debuts at aerospace museum

HILL AIR FORCE BASE, Utah (AP) — Hill Aerospace Museum will dedicate its newest aircraft — a Lockheed P-38 Lightning — during its 10th anniversary today. The P-38 crashed on Buldir Island in Alaska's Aleutian Islands during World War II. It was recovered three years ago by volunteers from Hill Air Force Base and the museum's founders and restored by Kull-Aero of San Diego. With twin-supercharged engines, the P-38 was one of the war's fastest fighters. Heber Butler, of Garland, who flew P-38s during World War II as a pilot in the Korean and Vietnam wars, recalled one mission over the Mediterranean when he was jumped by two German ME-109 fighters. He put his Lightning in a steep dive and I just outran them. I was clocking 420 miles per hour and they just fell back. Butler said he and a German fighter shot up one of his engines during a mission to bomb Palermo, Sicily, but his other engine was able to get him back to North Africa. He flew 64 combat missions during World War II and was never shot down. "I don't know, maybe I zigged in the right direction, but it always got me back," said Butler, who was invited by the museum to be its final war airplane series speaker this spring. By the time he retired in 1973, Butler was just a few hours shy of 5,000 hours of flying time. "It was a great job. They let me fly as often as I wanted and besides that I got paid for it," he said. The P-38 was the only U.S. twin-engine fighter produced in significant numbers — 9,842 by the end of World War II. It was the first fighter to use turbochargers, power-assisted controls and a tricycle landing gear. It also had a steering wheel instead of the stick.

Sheriff got what he wanted, panel members say

He was dead set on a "bricks-and-morar" solution, they claim. BOISE (AP) — Some former advisory committee members contend Ada County Sheriff Vaughn Killeen never seriously considered jail alternatives when he gathered a panel to advise him on a rising inmate population. A panel of 49 people formed in 1991 had dwindled to just four by the time the group voted in January to seek voter approval of a $13 million bond issue to finance a jail addition. Some panel members left because they believed Killeen was dead set on a "bricks-and-morar" solution. "The committee is that small because they can't find that many people who agree with them," former committee member Emil Loya Jr. said. "I was one that didn't want it and they didn't ask me back." Killeen conceded that when he called the group together in 1991, he had a jail expansion in mind. Voters followed the committee's recommendation then and approved a $9.4 million bond in 1992. He said he had the same motive in gathering 12 members of the original group in January 1996. The sheriff said he believed the county is making full use of all jail alternatives, including community service, work release and probation. "I work in the business day in and day out," Killeen said. "I had a pretty good idea what was needed from the get-go." But in a campaign flyer and speeches promoting the bond, Killeen and other bond propo-

Church

Continued from B1. ITD had all the information it needed to consider traffic issues. Planning official Deborah Vignes pointed to an April 7 letter to Lyle Anderson, a church official and contractor. In the letter, the ITD said it needed the same information packet on the church that is in front of the planning commission. Some planning commissioners have argued the project is too big for the district and county residential zone, but have said they don't have the legal grounds to turn it down.

Bowman said Thursday he didn't want the church's application to linger in the county planning committee. Church leaders, meanwhile, have already spent $1.4 million on the land for the proposed church. The church has not identified the donors behind the project. Three Bellevue residents started the church three years ago, and the church is a part of the parish of 250. Kremer has said the current site in downtown Halley is cramped.

Busy signals: Don't blame the Internet

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Busy telephone signals have Internet service providers and phone companies each blaming the other. The Information Technology Commission tried to get an answer on Thursday as to why local phone calls have become so hard to complete in some metro areas in the past few months. U.S. West, the Utah Coalition of Internet Service Providers and a state regulator tried to explain, but there was no consensus on an exact cause. Internet providers said they have been blamed for a problem that most say is the other. Facilities and new local phone companies using U.S. West lines to get started in business. "I worry sometimes that there's just a perception that we have this one phone number ... and 20,000 people all calling. We do pay for our phone lines and expect to be able to use them," said Steve Ashdown, coalition founder and business manager of Xmission. "This is just a side discussion." But Ted Smith, head of U.S. West's Utah operations pointed to a two-week study of calls coming into the main Salt Lake switching site, indicating that Ogden Internet users wait about 30 percent of the lines during peak busy hours. The calls were being forwarded through the Kaysville toll calling area, which overages into Salt Lake City and Ogden, bypassing normal toll charges. Studies by the regional Baby Bells also show that voice calls average about four minutes. "I don't think any of us would question the fact that the Internet has exploded," Smith said. "All you have to do is look at the cover of Time magazine and our newspapers. I absolutely agree that Internet users are over the only issue, but it's one issue." Smith acknowledged that U.S. West's Enterprise Networking services are an active Utah Internet provider. Ashdown said all the numbers generated by the phone companies are suspect and designed to prove their case for more overwhelming local lines. The phone companies have petitioned federal regulators to add an extra service charge for Internet providers. High-speed digital services and separate dedicated lines already are available from U.S. West and could help solve the problem, but Internet users fear more use by Internet providers, she said. Public Service Commission Chairman Steve Mecham said both sides are right to some extent. "Some of the numbers are very well by the way the system is being used compared to the way the system was engineered to be used," he said. "We haven't reached the conclusion that the Internet service providers are the source of the problem."

Bonner County again eliminates building department as way to reduce taxes.

SANDPOINT (AP) - Their first attempt was struck down by a judge.
But Bonner County commissioners have again eliminated the county building department, saying it imposes an unnecessary burden on taxpayers.
"One of my goals is to get government back into its rightful place," Commissioner Larry Allen said Thursday. A building department "interferes with private property rights, and as long as I'm in office, I'm not going to do anything about it."

the building department, fire its eight employees and eliminate the requirement to follow the Uniform Building Code. But 1st District Judge James Michael ruled May 15 that the action violated the state's Open Meeting Law because the public notice was insufficient.
The new ordinance includes several changes from the one adopted in January. One restores the requirement for building location permits, but stipulates that they are not to be used.

Supporters applauded the move, saying the department was only served to add a layer of bureaucracy and confusion to the building process. But opponents questioned the need to close a self-sufficient department aimed at ensuring safe construction.
"We had a department that worked, that made money and was self-sufficient," said the president, Jeff Bond said. "I'm not sure what the reason for getting rid of it."

Hanford workers could have avoided explosion

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) - Hanford workers should have known the chemicals inside a plutonium plant tank could explode, U.S. Department of Energy investigator said Friday.
"Monitoring of the tank's contents mysteriously ended last October, despite the danger, Ron Gerton said.
"The next phase of the investigation is why was it allowed to happen?" Gerton said. "What systems broke down that made us not aware of the potential hazard to the tank until it was too late?"

The Hanford nuclear reservation, located near the Tri-Cities, for four decades made plutonium for nuclear weapons and now contains the nation's largest collection of weapons-grade plutonium.
Investigators are now certain that a mixture of hydroxylamine nitrate and nitric acid placed inside the tank in 1983 was allowed to dry out on the floor where it became unstable and exploded, Gerton said.

Finding a good long-distance phone plan requires research

With more than 500 long-distance phone companies offering more than 1,000 different monthly rate plans, even the most dedicated comparison shopper can find the choices overwhelming.

"It's very complicated. There are tons of plans and tons of structures of those plans," said Aaron Golub, research associate for the nonprofit Telecommunications Research and Action Center in Washington. But Golub contends that with good research and savvy negotiating, long-distance consumers — even low-volume users — can save lots of money.

Golub's organization, TRAC, for short, has been following long-distance phone rates since 1984, when the breakup of AT&T opened the door for long-distance service competition. Every six months, TRAC publishes an interstate long-distance comparison rate chart. The latest edition was released in March.

"There were tons of changes," Golub said of the report. That's one reason he encourages people to evaluate their long-distance service every three to six months to see whether they are getting the best rate.

But two out of three long-distance consumers aren't taking Golub's advice. A recent study by the Yankee Group research firm in Boston showed that most long-

NEW YORK — U.S. share prices ended sharply higher Friday, but traders questioned whether the gains were a true reflection of the mood of the market since many players were out early with the start of the long Memorial Day weekend. The Dow Jones Industrial Average ended up 87 points at a record 7345.

The prices of shares Friday were largely determined by the moves on the stock index futures markets, where big, wide-reaching moves are easier to generate than on the share market, particularly on days where participation is light.

Many investors left at mid-session Friday to start the Memorial Day weekend early, leaving the market thinly traded and fairly illiquid.

The Dow set new closing and intraday highs Friday — and peaked at 7362 — but traders were wary of predicting a continuation of gains next week.

"I think there's a pretty strong chance here to be a reversal," said Andrew M. Brooks, vice president in charge of equity trading at T. Rowe Price Associates in Baltimore.

"The rest had left the party preholiday session. People were just picking up stocks indiscriminately."

The Dow futures prices are bid up aggressively, the gains are quickly translated into higher share prices, the result of sophisticated trading strategies generated by powerful computers. On the minds of many investors now is whether the market is poised for a "summer rally," officially measured as the difference between the lowest close in May or June and the highest close in July, August or September.

Stock market historian Yale Hirsch says summer rallies usually become the topic of conversation when the market is disappointing in the first-four or five months of the year.

Lenders toughen standards for borrowing

WASHINGTON — Banks wary of rising personal bankruptcies and increasing credit-card delinquencies are toughening standards for consumer lending. But some are relaxing terms on business loans, the Federal Reserve said Friday.

Twenty-two of 48 large banks surveyed this month by the Fed said they had tightened standards for issuing credit cards over the past three months, extending a trend that began early last year. The rest had left their standards basically unchanged.

Forty percent of the banks lowered credit limits and about 15 percent increased the spread between interest rates charged on the cards and their cost of obtaining money.

Eighty of 82 banks reported tightening standards for other consumer loans, while only one reported easing standards.

Meanwhile, the domestic banks are maintaining about the same standards for making business loans, they're relaxing the terms.

Then start shopping around. Even if you ultimately don't carry, what you learn could save you money with your current company, Golub said.

"Customers have told us that when they want a long-distance plan, they are looking for a rate plan that charges 15 cents a minute 24 hours a day. But even that price can be beat by the company's 'One Rate Plus' plan, which is 10 cents a minute with a recurring charge fee of $4.95.

MCI is also offering a single-rate plan, said company spokesman Brad Bruns. That plan is 12 cents a minute if you make more than $25 worth of long-distance calls a month or 15 cents a minute if the monthly total falls below $25.

"What seem simple enough are the dial-around services. Using one requires first dialing a five-digit access code. To help you remember, the services provide stickers to put on your phone.

Advertisements for Long Distance International, which offers "68 percent off," and Dime Line, which advertises a rate of 10 cents a minute, appeared in Northeast Ohio mailboxes last week.

"But '68 percent off' is based on the most expensive monthly rate offered by AT&T, MCI and Sprint. By comparison, AT&T's lowest-priced plan costs about 31 percent less than its highest-priced plan.

"It also has the most fine print." So line was the print of two dial-around services, Verizon Telecom, Inc. of Texas and Telco Communications Group of Virginia — that AT&T has sued them for alleged deceptive advertising. Telco has responded, claiming that AT&T impugned the company's reputation.

Golub said consumers should carefully examine dial-around offers before using an access number. Some dial-around services have a monthly minimum charge. One company charges $5 a month whether you use the dial-around one time or 100 times.

Another dial-around company has a minimum-duration requirement. In other words, a call may require 10 cents a minute, but every call has to be at least three minutes long. So a one-minute, dime-a-minute-call will really cost you 30 cents.

Wedding bell blues

Inflation may be running at a moderate rate for most goods and services, but if you're talking about the cost of putting on an upscale New York wedding, it's galloping. The people who make Moor & Chandon champagne annually survey the prices for a number of wedding essentials, and one overall biggie in the city will cost nearly 8 percent more this June than a year ago. The biggest price increase, 31.7 percent, came on wedding rings from the Fifth Avenue Jeweler's 15 Steers. A photo package went up 10.6 percent and a tuxedo rental cost 10.5 percent more. Prices were stable on several items: a wedding gown by Priscilla of Boston, the bridal bouquet, the cake and birdseed. And the license still costs $30.

laid-off workers find new jobs. Challenger Gray says the number of discharged executives and managers who expect to start their own firms dropped 5.1 percent in the first quarter of this year from 12.9 percent in the second quarter of 1996. In 1989, one out of five people seeking new jobs started his or her own business. Challenger Gray says the majority of people looking for work are uneasy about taking risks, and many start their own firm as a last resort.

Our house

If you're in the market for a seven-bedroom, 8,700-square-foot home but haven't found one that really works for you, perhaps you should consider a Green Lake, Wis., house that goes on the auction block next month. The auctioneer, Sheldon Goo & Co., reports that besides the entertainment centers, built-in bars and wood paneling you've come to expect from luxury homes, this one also has a pavilion near the outdoor pool and an underground fallout shelter that's been turned into a fitness center and gallery. It also has a gently used potter's studio complete with wheel, kiln and hand extruder. It's expected to sell for several million dollars.

IN BRIEF

6th District high school rodeo finals' May 30-31

RUPERT — The 6th District High School Rodeo Finals will be held at 8 p.m. Friday, May 30, and 7 p.m. Saturday, May 31, at the Rupert Fairgrounds.

Some of the participating high schools are Minico, Burley, Onkley, Raft River, Declo, Twin Falls, Castelford, and American Falls. Competitors will ride in the finals to qualify for state competition.

The Rupert Lions Club sponsors the event every year as a fund-raiser for community projects. Tickets cost $5 for adults, $4 for students and children 8 and under are admitted free.

Minico coaches plan youth baseball camp June 2-4

RUPERT — A baseball camp for girls and boys ages 6-12 will be held at Minico High School June 2-4.

The camp will be put on by Minico's coaching staff and players. Cost is $30 and includes a shirt. The three-day camp will begin 9 a.m. all noon.

To register send name, address, age and return size along with a check payable to Minico Baseball Camp to the high school at 76 West 100 North in Rupert, 83350. Registration will be taken until June 1, and walk-ins will be taken for an additional $5.

For more information contact Minico coach Russ Wright at 436-4721 or 436-6875.

FILER — Slow and steady aren't the first two things in the bareback rider's "How To" manual, but that's how one Buhl senior vaulted his way to the forefront Friday night.

Troy Wetstein, who has been riding bareback for five years, won his third straight bareback event at the District 6 high school rodeo at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds, taking over first place in the points standings in the process.

"This rodeo's just like any other," Wetstein said after his score of 54 was the lone score of the event. He beat a field that included Minico's Shawn Robinson, whom he trailed in the points standings before edging the Spartan twice in Oakley last weekend and again Friday night.

"It all goes back to practice and working out. I might have won if a couple of other guys had rode, or I might not have won," Wetstein said.

The top six scorers in each event after next weekend's district rodeo in Rupert advance to the state competition. Wetstein is all but assured a spot at state, but has loftier goals.

"My main goal is the state championship," he said. "I'm always thinking I have to get by the horses this weekend, but then I think I still have to get by the horses at state, so I just do the best I can do every weekend."

Another Buhl team member, freshman bull rider Ben Kimball, led off the event's second section with a 68 after all but one rider in the first section failed to record a score.

"I just watch everybody. I don't care who rides or who wins," said Kimball of the first section. "I just go my own pace."

Jazz Rockets' plan, can't stop it

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — The Utah Jazz had no trouble figuring out the Houston Rockets' strategy. They just couldn't stop it.

The Rockets pounded the ball inside to Hakeem Olajuwon, who scored 27 points, and Eddie Johnson, came off the bench for 31 points on 5-of-8 shooting from 3-point range, giving the Rockets a 116-110 victory Friday night in Game 3 of the Western Conference finals.

"Throw it in to Hakeem when they focus," Jazz guard Jeff Hornacek said. "That was it. You have to make a decision to keep Hakeem from shooting those 5-foot jump hooks and make them beat you with their outside shots."

"Tonight they made them." The Jazz missed a chance to put the Rockets within one game of elimination from the playoffs and they appeared ready to do it when they took a 31-18 lead at the end of the first quarter, punctuated by a 41-foot jumper by Karl Malone for the final basket.

"I don't know what happened (after the first quarter)," Jazz guard John Stockton said. "It was probably a combination of things. We weren't running our offense the way we should and we weren't playing defense the way we should."

The Rockets pulled even at halftime, 51-51, led 80-72 to start the fourth quarter and took an 88-74 lead with 9:37 to play.

Houston Rockets' Kevin Willis (42) is double teamed by Utah's Greg Foster (44) and Antoine Carr as he drives to the basket during Game 3 of the Western Conference Finals Friday in Houston.

at halftime, 51-51, led 80-72 to start the fourth quarter and took an 88-74 lead with 9:37 to play.

"We started off this game as well as we can start," Malone said. "Then we started just going through the motions. It's just one game. We can't get our heads down. We can't allow Hakeem and Charles (Barkley) to get that deep in the post or we are their mercy."

Utah center Greg Oesterga fouled out with 1:41 left in the game after having a rough time trying to contain Olajuwon. But he still wasn't giving Olajuwon much credit.

Olajuwon made 12 of 19 shots and had seven rebounds and three blocked shots.

"He gets his shots but he gets away with a lot, too," Oesterga said. "He travels a lot but that's Olajuwon. He's been doing that for 12 years and they're not going to call it on him."

Hornacek, however, credited Olajuwon with a huge game.

"You've got to give Hakeem credit, he was making moves and making shots and making them easy," Hornacek said. "We'd run at him when he looked like he was going to shoot and he'd throw it out."

That's where Johnson came in. He had 14 points in the second quarter to get the Rockets started.

"Eddie had not a good game but a great game," Malone said. "We're going to look at some film on him and make some adjustments. The shots he got were wide open. He was due. He's a pro. He got those same looks at Salt Lake City but he just didn't make the shots."

Tension climbs at Latham preliminaries

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Now the real fun begins.

With the chipping and putting contests out of the way, the ninth annual Latham's Chrysler Invitational Match Play golf tournament gets down to serious business today when the opening round starts at 8 a.m. at Twin Falls Municipal golf course.

Defending champion Terry Spackman of Burley knows he has a tough draw in an opening-round opponent less than half his age.

High school players, like two-time state champion Mike Cozaks of Jerome, have been playing in the uncertain spring weather for months, and they are at the top of their game coming off the state tournament last weekend, Spackman said.

"This is really the climax of the season for them," said Spackman, 45. "Guys like us that have jobs don't really get going until July."

Spackman and Cozaks will tee off at 1 p.m.

The match play format pits golfers head-to-head with players plying up a point for each hole. They advance through a single-elimination championship bracket, with losers dropping into the consolation bracket.

It doesn't allow golfers to rebound from a bad round, and the format — along with the $50,000 total prize purse — intensifies the competition between playing partners, Spackman said.

Faxon, Frost, Goydos share Colonial lead

The Associated Press

FORT WORTH, Texas — David Faxon rode aizzling putter to a 7-under-par 65 Friday and grabbed a share of the second-round lead at the MasterCard Colonial with Brad Faxon and Paul Goydos.

But Tiger Woods, battling a balky putter all day, slashed five strokes from par for a 30 on the back nine and his 65 moved him within three shots of the leaders.

Frost's bogey-free performance propelled him into first place with Faxon, the first-round leader who shot a 66 Friday, and Goydos, who followed an opening 64 with a 65.

That put the trio at 11-under 129 heading into the weekend showdowns.

Justin Leonard (57), Jim Furyk (57) and Bob Pvey (66) were two off the lead at 131.

Woods missed several short putts in matching par 35 on the front side and at that point was eight strokes behind the leaders. But birdies on Nos. 10 and 11 got him rolling and he birdied three of his closing five holes.

Despite his solid 65, Faxon took a mild swipe at Woods, joking, "I didn't have my 'A' game today. It was a C-minus."

Woods used such terms to describe his stunning victory last month at the Masters and his less spectacular triumph at the Byron Nelson Classic last week.

With another massive gallery cheering him on, Woods still loomed as the man to beat.

A Colonial-rifle on Sunday would give the 21-year-old sensation victories in three consecutive starts, which has not occurred on the PGA Tour since Nick Price did it in 1993.

Paul Goydos of Long Beach, Calif., blasts from the sand on the 18th hole at the Colonial in Fort Worth, Texas Friday. Goydos finished the second round at 11 under par.

More allegations against Plummer

The Associated Press

TEMPE, Ariz. — A fourth woman has come forward with allegations that Arizona Cardinals draft pick Jake Plummer groped her while dancing at a Tempe club in March.

Earlier Thursday, a lawyer for the other three women said his clients had reached a civil settlement with Plummer and no longer wanted to pursue criminal charges against the former Arizona State star quarterback who led the Sun Devils to the Rose Bowl last season.

Maricopa County Rick Romley said the alleged fourth victim is not acquainted with the other three but came forward a couple weeks ago and made allegations against Plummer "that were very similar."

Plummer's attorney said the civil settlement has no bearing on whether he will continue to pursue the investigation.

Utah State leads in track

IRVINE, Calif. (AP) — Utah State led the men's and women's division Friday in the Big West Conference track and field championships.

Utah State's women, the four-time defending champions, had 45 points. Boise State was second with 33 and UC Santa Barbara third with 19. UC Irvine, Idaho and Nevada were tied for fourth with 17 points.

Utah State's men, the three-time defending champions, led with 58 points. Idaho was second at 56 and Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo third with 50.12.

Jennifer Homer of Utah State won the discus with a toss of 153.7 feet, 1 inch.

Boise State picked up victories by Abigail Ferguson in the long jump (19.9) and Casey Fischer in the javelin (167.5).

Idaho had three winners among the men. Frank Bruder won the 3,000-meter steeplechase in 8:44.49. Niels Kruller won the long jump (24.7) and Oscar Duncanson won the javelin (232.2).

Utah State's Justin DeSantis won the hammer throw (197.7). Jason Hinkin of Long Beach State won the pole vault at 18.01.7. Boise State's Jared Rouse won the discus (183.9) and UC Santa Barbara's Brad Glosser won the 10,000 meters in 30:25.24.

three up on Hovey. Julie Carr was the unquestioned winner of the $175 first prize in the chipping contest, holding in her shot. Sara Barron chipped to within 2 feet, 1 inch for second place, with Doris Ellingham third at 10.6.

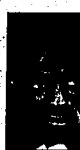

In the men's division, Dave Sloten's shot to within 11 inches of the pin was good enough for first place, ahead of Jim Lathrop (1-10) and Billy Cook (2-6).

Gary Jenkins won the seniors division by getting within 6 feet, 6 inches. Rick Carr was second (9-10), followed by Bruce Cameron (9-10).

Seattle unlikely to trade Kemp

SEATTLE (AP) — In the aftermath of Seattle's disappointing playoff performance, the SuperSonics aren't about to panic and unload unhappy forward Shawn Kemp.

Shawn Kemp

from competing for a championship," general manager Wally Walker said Friday. "It'd be hard pressed to see — and I haven't seen it yet — any major changes."

Rodeo

Kimbal's pace lifted him over his two neck-and-neck rivals in the event — Kurt Mason and Spencer Stanger of the Murghugh-Hansen squad.

Murghugh-Hansen scored a 62 while Spencer won the goat-ripping event with a time of 8.5 seconds, beating Murghugh-Hansen's Sara Cameron and Western Conference semifinals but Kemp played well despite his contract problems.

"Shawn's a great player and it's hard to find great players," Walker said. "I don't know where you find a player like him who makes your team better."

Walker would like to sit down with Kemp to try to help come up with a solution to his contract woes.

"It would have to have that discussion," Walker said.

Although Kemp played superbly in the playoffs, he held out of training camp for 22 days and then went into a funk in the second half of the season when he missed plays and practices.

Kleinkopf took Parton, 39, to a playoff hole after 18 before setting for the $150 reserved for semifinals.

Being the older player, Parton joked that he was "prone to get weak in the late stretches" but managed to hold on.

Junior hits 21 to rally M's; Sox drop Yanks

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Ken Griffey Jr. hit two home runs and pitched six innings to lead the Seattle Mariners to a 4-1 victory over the New York Yankees on Friday night.

Randy Johnson (6-1) won for the 23rd time in 24 starts, allowing all four runs and eight hits in seven innings. He struck out 10 — his 72nd game with double-digit strikeouts.

Griffey hit a two-run homer in the ninth, giving him a major-league-leading 57 RBIs. Bumgarner's three-run homer off Tim Lincecum (5-5) capped a four-run fifth inning that put Seattle ahead 6-4. Kansas City has lost seven straight.

Indians 6, Orioles 1

CLEVELAND — Cmd Ogas (5-3) pitched a two-hitter with a career-high nine strikeouts, sending Tim Lincecum (8-1) to his first loss of the season. Cleveland won a season-high sixth straight and ended Baltimore's season-high streak at five games. Key, who came in with a league-low 1.00 ERA, was rocked for six runs and 10 hits, including three homers, in 4-1/3 innings, his shortest outing this season.

Red Sox 9, Yankees 3

NEW YORK — Pinch-hitter Mike Stanley lined a tiebreaking three-run homer in the eighth inning and led the Red Sox to a three-run win in the ninth. New York's first win in five straight, matching its season high. The Red Sox rallied for four runs against three pitchers in the eighth.

Cubbies win again

CINCINNATI (AP) — Sammy Sosa homered and Terry Mulholland allowed only five hits in eight innings to help the resurgent Chicago Cubs move farther ahead of the Cincinnati Reds with a 3-1 victory.

Since opening the season with a National League-record 14 losses, the Cubs have surged past the Reds by going 17-14. Cincinnati has the worst record in the major leagues at 14-31 and trails the Cubs by three games, its biggest gap of the season.

Reds manager Jerry Franconi benched starter Ray Knight as he finished his three-game suspension for an outburst at umpire Jerry Layton. Cincinnati won 1-2 during his absence, extending the club's worst start in 47 years.

Expos 4, Pirates 1

MONTREAL — Pedro Martinez pitched six innings to lead the Expos to a season-high 12 strikeouts in improving to a 4-1 record 8-0. Martinez was dominant from the outset, striking out nine of the first 13 batters he faced. The right-hander did not allow a walk in his third complete game of the season.

Steve Cooke (3-6) gave two runs and five hits in 6-23 innings. Pirates manager Alvin Karpis won 1-2 in the Pirates run with an RBI double in the sixth.

Phillies 2, Mets 1

PHILADELPHIA — Rookie Garrett Stephenson allowed one run and three hits in six innings as Philadelphia handed New York only its fourth loss in 13 games.

Stephenson (2-0), making only his third major-league start, gave up Bernard Gilkey's leadoff homer in the second. Right-hander, who has a 1.35 ERA, struck out four and walked three.

Dave Micki (0-4), winless in 15

Anahelm Angles first baseman Darin Erstad (27) loses his helmet as he files in to score past Toronto Blue Jays catcher Benito Santiago during first-inning action in Toronto Friday.

Cordero's RBI single made it 3-all and Stanley hit his second three-run homer in two days against his former team.

Aaron Sele (5-3) allowed two earned runs and five hits in seven innings. Jeff Nelson (1-4) was the loser.

Tigers 7, Rangers 1

DETROIT — Rookie Brian Moehler (3-3) scattered seven hits in eight strong innings and struck out a career-high nine. He fanned AL MVP Juan Gonzalez four times.

Graf finally beats Coetzer

STRASBOURG, France (AP) — Stefan Graf, still struggling with her game, beat Amanda Coetzer for the first time in three tries this year, 4-6, 7-5, 7-6 (7-4) in the semifinals of the Strasbourg Open Friday.

Coetzer beat Graf 6-0, 6-1 a week ago in the German Open, the worst loss of the German's career. Coetzer also defeated Graf at the Australian Open. Those were Graf's only losses this year.

In Saturday's final, Graf will play 15-year-old Mirjana Lucic of Croatia, a 7-5, 6-7 (8-10), 7-6 (7-5) winner over Judith Wiesner. Graf missed a match point in the third set at 5-4 and Coetzer forced the match into a tiebreaker.

"In the third set, I was concentrating on every point," Graf said. "It was a test of will. In Berlin, that was not a normal match for me."

Top-seeded Seles to face Novotna in Madrid final

MADRID, Spain — Top-seeded Monica Seles struggled early before regaining her form to beat Argentina's Florencia Labat 6-7 (3-7), 6-1, 6-2 in the semifinals of the Madrid Open Friday.

In Saturday's final, Seles will face defending champion and No. 2 seed Jana Novotna, a 6-4, 6-4 winner over Spain's Arantxa Sanchez Vicario.

Australia clinches place in World Team Cup final

DUESSELDORF, Germany — Australia gained a place in the final of the World Team Cup by eliminating Croatia 3-0 Friday, and will play the winner of Saturday's Netherlands-Spain match.

The Czech Republic beat the United States 2-1, with Petr Korda rallying to defeat Alex O'Brien 3-6, 7-6 (7-4), 6-3 and the Czechs taking the doubles after Michael Chang had beaten Bohdan Ulihrach 6-3, 7-6 (7-3).

Melvin Nieves and Tony Clark both homered for Detroit. Darren Oliver (2-5) lost for the third time in four decisions; giving up four runs and nine hits in 7-1/3 innings.

Angles 12, Blue Jays 3

TORONTO — Dennis Springer (3-1) pitched a seven-hitter for his first complete game since last Sept. 29, and Tim Salmon went 4-for-5 as Anaheim Angels took advantage of three errors by pitcher Juan Guzman.

Gary DiSaracina hit a three-run homer, Luis Altona added a two-run drive and Jim Leyritz connected on a solo homer as the Angels won their third straight and 10th in 11 games.

Guzman (3-4) made three errors that led to six unearned runs.

Brewers 4, White Sox 1

CHICAGO — Scott Karl (2-5) allowed three hits over eight and three runs to stop Chicago's six-game winning streak.

Loretta hit a two-run homer off Matt Karchner in the ninth. Doug Jones then finished for his 11th save in as many chances.

Wilson Alvarez (3-5) allowed two runs and seven hits in seven innings.

Athletics 8, Twins 4

MINNEAPOLIS — Steve Karsay (1-3) won for the first time since April 9, 1994, giving up three runs and six hits in 7-2/3 innings.

Jason Giambi, who hit his first career grand slam in Thursday's 10-7 loss at Texas, highlighted a four-run fifth inning with a two-run double and also had a sacrifice fly.

Paul Molitor tied his career high with five hits, the fifth time he's done it in his career. The rest of the Twins had just four hits.

German Steffi Graf jubilates Friday after her victory over South African Amanda Coetzer in the semi-finals of the Strasbourg Open.

Sampiras to face Santoro in 1st round of French Open

PARIS — Pete Sampiras will need to be sharp from the start as he bids for the only title missing from his Grand Slam collection.

Winless on clay this year and coming off a thigh injury, Sampiras drew a challenging first-round opponent Friday for the French Open.

The top seed was paired against Fabrice Santoro, a French baseliner who has been one of the top clay-court players this season.

On clay this year, Sampiras lost his opening matches at Monte Carlo and Rome, and retired in the third set of a match Monday at the World Team Cup in Dusseldorf, Germany with a muscle strain.

He pulled out of the rest of the event to safeguard his chances for the French Open, which begins Monday.

Lindros pounds Rangers

NEW YORK (AP) — Eric Lindros again took advantage of the battered New York Rangers, breaking a 2-2 tie with seven seconds to give Friday night to give the Philadelphia Flyers a 3-2 victory.

Game 4 victory and a commanding lead in the Eastern Conference finale.

The Flyers lead the best-of-7 series 3-1 and New York could be eliminated in Game 5 Sunday in Philadelphia.

Lindros, who scored his first playoff hat trick in the Flyers' 6-3 victory Tuesday night, backhanded a blind backhand pass from John LeClair from the left circle on a power play with goaltender Mike Richter out of position.

New York's Brian Leetch, whose sprained wrist had kept him offensively weak Tuesday and for most of Friday's game, tied the game 2-2 with 2:08 remaining on a behind-the-net feed from Wayne Gretzky.

A shorthanded goal by Esa Tikkanen, consistently one of the best — and healthiest — Rangers in the playoffs, tied the game 1-1 1:41 into the third period. With JH Samuelsen serving a penalty for roughing, Tikkanen took a pass from Doug Lidster and faked two Flyers defenders for a clean shot on goalie Ron Hextall.

Philadelphia pulled ahead again at 16:47 as Kjell Samuelson beats Rangers defenseman Bruce Driver at the blue line and rushed in to fire a slap shot that Richter failed to block.

In the first period when the rebound, his first goal of the playoffs, off to make it 2-1.

Just as in Tuesday's game, the Flyers held New York scoreless through two periods, this time relying more on Hextall as the Rangers were markedly more aggressive, but still disorganized.

New York in turn relied on Richter, who held the 2-2 tie with two sprawling saves in the last minute of regulation. His goaltending was especially important in the first period when the Rangers repeatedly turned over the puck in their own zone and took five penalties to the Flyers' two.

Foreigners dominate NCAA men's tennis

LOS ANGELES — Southern California's George Bastl defeated No. 2 Fredric Niemeyer of Middle Tennessee State 6-1, 7-6 (7-3) Friday in the quarterfinals of the NCAA Division I men's tennis championship, leaving two seeded players in the singles competition.

Bastl, a junior from Switzerland, beat Matthieu Ballay of Mississippi State 6-0, 6-1 in a third-round match earlier Friday.

In Saturday's semifinals, Bastl will play Frenchman Sebastian DeChaves of Mississippi, who took out the lone remaining American-born player, No. 7 Ryan Walters of Stanford, 7-6 (7-4), 6-3.

UNLV's Luke Smith of Australia will play Frenchman Olivier Tauva of Virginia Commonwealth in the other semifinal at the Los Angeles Tennis Center.

Giants' Bonds heads bone marrow drive

SAN FRANCISCO — Giants outfielder Barry Bonds, touched by the plight of a teenager battling leukemia, will announce plans this weekend for a two-year campaign aimed at raising awareness and money for families troubled by blood diseases.

Bonds recently visited 13-year-old Anthony Lee Franklin in a Bay area hospital after reading about the youngster's affliction in the Oakland Tribune and learning he may need a bone marrow transplant.

Reinsdorf: Bulls' fine no message to owner

CHICAGO — Chicago Bulls chairman Jerry Reinsdorf reiterated Friday that he didn't think the team's refusal to speak with the media, an action that resulted in a $50,000 fine, was aimed as a message to him.

The Chicago Tribune, citing team sources, reported that the costly silence was planned to show the team's general displeasure, particularly concerning the future of coach Phil Jackson.

Bulls players are annoyed with Reinsdorf's perceived disinterest in resigning Jackson and keeping the defending NBA champions together.

"I don't think that's what it was. I really don't," Reinsdorf said Friday before a Chicago White Sox game at Comiskey Park.

Tirade costs Avalanche coach $10,000

DENVER — Colorado Avalanche coach Marc Crawford was reprimanded and apologetic for his Game 4 tirade that resulted in a $10,000 fine by the NHL on Friday.

The fine was assessed after Crawford berated Detroit coach Scotty Bowman and attempted to get to the Red Wings' bench during his team's 6-0 loss in the Western Conference finals Thursday night.

Tyson ends physical doubts for rematch

LAS VEGAS (AP) — It didn't take long Friday for Mike Tyson to put to rest doubts about his physical shape with only five weeks left before his scheduled rematch with Evander Holyfield.

All that remained was for Tyson to explain how he'll get mentally prepared to meet a fighter who knocked him out the first time they got together in the ring.

"My confidence is never shaken by anything," Tyson insisted. "I'm going to go in there and fight him like I knocked him out the first time."

Tyson worked out before the media Friday for the first time since Holyfield beat him last November. He said he had patiently answered questions about how he was preparing for the fight that could likely define his boxing career.

But Tyson, who turns 31 two days after the fight, said it was a fight he had to win.

Indy breaks tradition, adds extra practice

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — For a place that thrives on tradition, the Indianapolis Motor Speedway keeps changing things.

Four cars will be allowed on the track for a special practice session Saturday, the day before the 81st Indy 500.

Jim Guthrie, Sam Schmidt and Claude Bourbonnais of Team Blueprint Racing were cleared for the extra 15-minute session after blown engines kept their cars in the garage during practice Thursday, usually the last time the track is open until the race.

Robby Gordon of Team Sabco also will be allowed to practice again on the 2.12-mile oval because he ran six laps with a top speed of just 135 mph before blowing his engine on Thursday.

"It's more of a safety check than anything," Guthrie said. "It would be stupid for one little fitting to be loose and take out seven cars in the first turn."

Guthrie's backup engine arrived Friday from Chicago. Schmidt was expected late in the day and Bourbonnais was hoping to get his by Saturday morning.

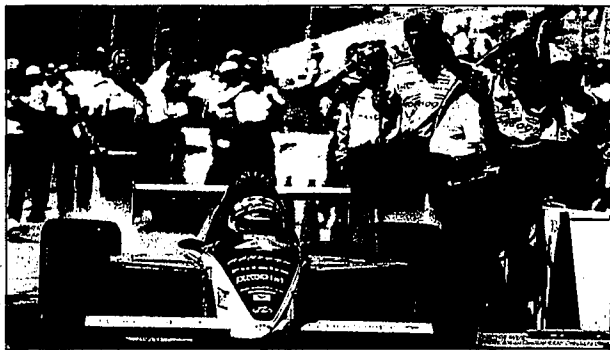

Gordon had planned to be in Charlotte, N.C., on Saturday to practice for the Coca-Cola 600, a NASCAR race he'll run after finishing the 500 on Sunday.

But Ken Anderson, Indy's chief engineer, said Gordon will stay in Indianapolis and let someone else test his stock car.

"Tradition is a great thing, but there's no point in getting too stuck in it," Anderson said. "There's no point in having somebody just because of tradition."

The extra practice session is the latest in a series of changes at the speedway in the past two years. The track has been the new Indy Racing League and Championship Auto Racing

In 1965, the race was delayed six days because of rain and there was a closed practice session the day before.

Princeton, Syracuse on collision course

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Princeton and Syracuse, the best college lacrosse teams in the 1990s, are on course for an anticipated showdown in Monday's NCAA championship game.

Duke and Maryland have other ideas.

For unbeaten Princeton and six-time champion Syracuse to meet in the title game, both must fulfill their roles as heavy favorites in Saturday's semifinals.

Defending champion Princeton faces Duke and Syracuse plays Maryland in a doubleheader at Byrd Stadium.

Princeton has won three titles since 1990. So has Syracuse. But the teams have met only once for the championship this decade.

Princeton posted a memorable 10-5 double-overtime victory in 1992.

The top-seeded Tigers (13-0), looking to become the first repeat champion during the 1990s, must first beat fifth-seed Duke (12-3).

The Blue Devils qualified for their first Final Four appearance with a surprising 12-11 overtime winner over perennial power Johns Hopkins.

Duke rallied from a two-goal deficit in the final minute of regulation.

Before this year, Duke had won only one NCAA tournament game.

Princeton hasn't lost since.

Princeton's Kurt Lunkenheimer, right, and Matt Doyle, of Syracuse, go for the loose ball in the NCAA Men's Lacrosse semifinals in College Park, Md., May 25, 1996. Princeton and Syracuse are again on course for an anticipated showdown in Monday's NCAA championship game.

March 9, 1995, and this season allowed an average of only 6.7 goals per game.

Princeton coach Bill Tierney, meanwhile, is certain his players will win.

Syracuse (11-2), playing in its 15th consecutive semifinal game, is the only team to appear in every Final Four.

The Orangemen have won seven straight since losing to Brown 20-12 March 29, advancing to the semifinals with a 13-12 win over Loyola-Baltimore.

"It's nice to be back," said coach Roy Simmons Jr., who owns a 279-92 record in 27 seasons at Syracuse. "We have a tradition to uphold."

Redman takes 1-shot lead

CORNING, N.Y. (AP) — Michele Redman shot a 3-under-par 69 Friday and took a one-stroke lead over three others after two rounds of the $650,000 LPGA Corning Classic.

Redman, still looking for a tournament win in her six-year career, had an eagle on No. 2 and birdied her final hole in moving to 4-under 140 for the two rounds.

Redman had missed the cut in four of her previous five tournaments this season.

When HJ Koch had moved to 5-under when her tee shot stopped inches from the hole on No. 7, a 152-yard uphill par-3. But Koch finished the round with a bogey on her final two holes to fall into a second-place tie with defending champion Rosie Jones and Thammie Green.

Weather conditions along the hilly, 6,062-yard course at Corning Country Club were much more suited for low scores

Friday than the 25 mph winds and low temperatures on Thursday, when only seven players broke par and the average score was 76.

Jones had a bogey-free round and was solid from start to finish. She chipped in from 25 feet on No. 11 to stay in contention going into the weekend.

Green was at 4-under before par putting led to two bogeys.

Mardi Lunn, who shared the first-round lead with Allison Nicholas, had five bogeys and a double-bogey in a 74. She tied with Patty Sheehan, Joan Pitcock and Karen Haas at 142.

Sarah Wehn had two eagles, including one on the 13th, and a birdie on the 13th when she holed a 3-iron from 181 yards. She started the day at 2-over and moved into the lead at 4-under before making consecutive bogeys on her final two holes and settling for a 68, her best round this season.

Darcy, Clarke share 1st-round lead

VIRGINIA WATER, England (AP) — Nick Faldo, trying to earn his way onto the European Ryder Cup team instead of using a captain's pick, closed with two birdies for a 70, four strokes behind leaders Eamonn Darcy and Darren Clarke after Friday's first round of the Volvo PGA Championship.

"I pulled three drives, which was a bit weird because I've not been doing that, and my putting was nothing great," Faldo said after playing competitively in Britain for the first time this year.

"But those two birdies oned the pain," he said. "It was good to get them back, but I've got something to work on."

Faldo is trying for a record fifth PGA European championship behind the leaders was a group of six including three-time winner Bernhard Langer of Germany and Westman Ian Woosnam, who made his second eagle of the day on the 18th with a 54-foot putt.

"They're not that good," Woosnam said about the greens. "They are seeding and the ball is bouncing a lot. It's the first time I've seen them like that here."

Two strokes further back sharing ninth place at three-under 69 were Scotland's Colin Montgomerie and South African Ernie Els.

Volunteers need moral convictions

President Clinton's summit on volunteerism was a smoke screen to draw our attention away from the dangerous cuts being made in our culture system.

That was so obvious that the least informed among us could see President Clinton's ploy. But there was a deeper flaw in the summit that only the very well-informed would be likely to detect.

This week Jim Wallis, editor and founder of Sojourners magazine and founder of the Call to Renewal, says the problem with the summit was that it only asked for volunteers. The summit didn't call for a certain kind of volunteer, that is, people with moral principles. It just asked for volunteers.

FAITH TODAY
Clark Morphew

The summit almost entirely bypassed the religious community. In fact, the planners discovered about a month before the summit that no religious leaders had been invited. So they threw together a list of names and waved the invitations in their faces. But most of the leaders were booked solid and decided to snub the whole thing.

Not only were church leaders absent but also the religious professionals who work with children in the poorest neighborhoods in the nation. Wallis says those voices must be heard if poor children are going to have a chance.

The problem, Wallis insists, is not that children have refused to accept our moral principles. Rather, the problem is that they have picked up our values.

Wallis quotes Mahatma Gandhi, who said the seven deadly sins were "politics without principle, wealth without work, commerce without morality, pleasure without conscience, education without character, science without humanity, and worship without sacrifice."

Those seven deadly sins simply blew me away. I read them a second and a third time. They constitute an indictment of the kind of people we have become.

I'm not qualified to comment on six of those sins, but the last one, worship without sacrifice, got my attention very quickly. I've been saying for years that religion in this country is changing dramatically. Many people resent any religion that asks them to serve and sacrifice. We want our religion but without toil.

I once watched a skilled preacher ask his congregation to volunteer for a new project he wanted to accomplish in an inner-city neighborhood. The people surged forward after the service, signing their names on the dotted line. But that was 15 years ago. I wonder what would happen today.

There is a proliferation these days of congregations that ask nothing of parishioners. Members come to worship, drink a cup of coffee, chat with friends and then head out to a local restaurant for brunch. Worship is more tied up with brunch than it is with sacrifice.

There are some congregations that never ask their people to serve, even if the service is only to dig dandelions out of the church lawn. All of that is done by hired help. The work the people do, some pastors will tell you, is the worship on Sunday morning.

Even more serious is the squishy worship of groups in the so-called New Age movement, many of which were created as entirely selfish religions. The devotees indulge themselves in a bit of meditation designed to make them feel better and then they go off on their personal agenda for the rest of the week.

That's not worship, that's self-indulgence. Children pick up on those things. If Mom and Dad live only for themselves, so will their children. They also pick up on the actions of corrupt politicians, immoral industrialists and teachers who never set an example for them.

Wallis is absolutely correct: We don't need volunteers as much as we need principled people willing to become role models for children. Maybe that's what the president had in mind. But somehow the message got lost in the ballyhoo.

Wallis wonders where we will go from the Philadelphia Summit. I say we should look back and do it right this time including the voices of religious people who make a commitment to poor children every day.

Jerome couples celebrate marriages that last a lifetime

By H.R. Welzel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME - Eight Jerome couples, members of the First Christian Church, have been married for more than 50 years. They were honored at a recent celebration.

"They have been married for 448 years, if you add up all the years," said church pastor, Gary Shoemaker.

Married for 64 years, Ray and Marguerite Forsyth, scored the highest number of years as man and wife. They agreed that the first 40 years were the easiest, but "every year was good."

For quarts Forsyth's father, a judge, performed her wedding ceremony in Howard, Kan.

"We moved to Jerome in the early '40s, her two boys and just had a good life," the 85-year-old wife said.

Her 86-year-old husband added, "You could say that, between the two of us,

When Jerome's First Christian Church honored couples who have been married for 50 years or more, five of eight eligible couples attended the festivities. They are (left to right), Ray and Marguerite Forsyth, Clifford and Ellen Hancock, Harold and Mary Otto, Melvin and Jean Newlan and Elvin and Jane Bolch. We've been married for 128 years." Harold and Mary Otto, Jerome natives, were honored for their 58 years as husband and wife. They said to stay together for that long, "you have to work at it, but our marriage has just been great."

Harold Otto is a retired Jerome businessman in charge of his church's property. His wife taught children's Sunday School classes for many years and was church youth director for 35 years.

"Time goes by so fast," said Glen and Katherine Rolfe, as they reminisced about their 58 years of marriage. "Our church has helped a lot."

The Rolfes have "always" lived on their farm east of Jerome High School. They're still farming, and they say they love it.

After a hall room in Nebraska, Elvin and Jane Bolch moved to Idaho in 1947. They are a happy farming couple who have been married 57 years.

"Married like we are has meant a lot of good times and a lot of togetherness," said Jane Bolch.

Mac and Dorothy Ambrose have been married 56 years.

"Sure there have been some rough spots," Dorothy Ambrose said. "Mac was in the service during World War II; he worked in the shipyards; we had four children. But even with the rough times,

Building up faith Nazarenes join in Trinidad to erect church

By H.R. Welzel
Times-News Correspondent

TWIN FALLS - A vision orbited from the island of Trinidad and spread down to the city of Twin Falls - and a group of Magic Valley Nazarenes traveled to the island to help make a vision a reality.

Building a church that would seat 1,000 people was the vision of about 50 Trinidad residents and their pastor, Lealand Henry. However, the church had no money, the economy on the island was at its lowest point and a 17-percent unemployment rate meant many parishioners had no jobs.

But the people had a vision, and a hope that God would send materials and people to construct the church building. When the congregation at the Church of the Nazarene in Twin Falls heard about the people on the island off the coast of Venezuela, they prayed, packed their bags and took off to be a part of God's plan. Before they left, they raked up $10,000 to purchase building materials.

The $10,000 became $60,000. "The exchange rate in Trinidad increased the fund's value."

"That's just how God works," said

John Devine, of Devine Homes in Twin Falls, is in charge of the hammer in Trinidad.

Twin Falls Nazarene Pastor Jerry Kester.

Accompanying the pastor on the work trip were Phil and Laveta Younger, Ron Christie, Beverly Beam, John and Rose Devine, Randy Bernhard, Calvin Whitley, Gene and Betty Heimgartner and Dr. Barr Adrian.

"We were quite a group," Kester said. "We had a teacher, music director, pediatrician, accountant, president of a business, securities and bond person, some were retired and one was only 21 years old. It was a real blessing to see the money we had dropped in the plate at our church end up in concrete blocks and cement."

Bernhard, of Twin Falls, said he went to Trinidad because he had gone on a similar trip in 1981 and got such a blessing out of it.

"We all gave of our time and money,

Man's ancestor faced hardships with strength

People set stock by Revelation

By Mary Otto Knight-Ricker News Service
WASHINGTON — From a studio that resembles a broadcast newsroom, Michigan evangelist Jack Van Impe happily ticks off his weekly prophecies, many from the book of Revelation.

It's all there at the end of the Bible, in the most confounding book of all, Revelation. With a hazy array of numbers and symbols, a huge and surrealistic cast of characters, Revelation has been fodder for centuries of debate. Many Christians read it as an allegory. But there are also those who believe the book offers a literal guide to coming events.

And Satan is bound: It is then that Christ reigns for a thousand years. Generations of Christians, in search of true meaning, have held the book of Revelation up to their worlds. Billy Graham sets great stock by Revelation. David Koresh saw himself in it, and so did Heavens Gate leader Marshall Applewhite. And now, at the cusp of two millennia, more people seem to be speculating that Revelation's code will be cracked in this lifetime.

Mother Teresa: Thou shalt not profit from 'nun bun'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A cinnamon bun bearing the likeness of Mother Teresa may be a miracle for the local coffeehouse merchandising it, but the world's most famous nun finds it in poor taste.

In a personally signed letter from Calcutta, India, Mother Teresa asked Bongo Java coffeehouse to stop merchandising its now-famous 'nun bun.'

"My legal counsel... has written asking you to stop, and now I am personally asking you to stop," she wrote in a letter dated March 25 and received just this week by coffeehouse owner Bob Bernstein.

But Bernstein said Wednesday that he has no plans to shelve Nashville's latest pop icon.

Professor to priest, this friar does it all

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — It's not yet dawn, so the rest of the neighborhood sleeps as Augustine Thompson opens the front door of his home and ushers in the young man who has come to assist him.

The visitor dons a beige robe over his Levis, then follows Thompson into a small room bathed in bright light. A crucified Christ looks down from a painting — the reproduction of a 13th-century icon — that hangs above a compact altar.

The Mass begins, but no English is spoken. Only Latin.

"Kyrie eleison" (Lord have mercy), Thompson says.

For 30 minutes, the spoken liturgy wends a relentless, melodic course. As he says the words, Thompson kneels, stands, kneels again. He consecrates water and wine, takes communion, recites the Lord's Prayer.

There are no congregants, only a priest and his server. But they are not alone.

"Dominicans," Thompson likes to say, "believe the angels are always with us, listening."

Augustine Thompson doesn't wear his cleric's collar to work because Oregon law prohibits it. But he makes a point of letting his students at the University of Oregon, where he is chairman of the Religious Studies Department, know he's a Catholic priest, a Dominican monk.

A highly regarded historian and scholar, Thompson has one foot firmly planted in the hurly-burly world of academia, the other in the sequestered world of a religious order.

But far from feeling disoriented, Thompson, 42, thrives as both priest and professor. They are his callings — plural.

The eclectic Thompson is equally comfortable rhapsodizing about 13th-century heretics, Gilbert and Sullivan operas or the theological implications of sipping a diet Coke. He's fluent in Italian and Latin, and can read French, Greek, Spanish, German and Dutch.

He grew up as Craig Thompson in Hastings-on-Hudson outside New York City in a less than devout family. His father, a phone company employee who never attended college, was raised Catholic. His mother, who died when he was in high school, converted from Lutheranism. A sister now works in retail in Pennsylvania.

Thompson knew by middle school that he was fascinated by the Middle Ages. By his Professor Augustine Thompson poses a question about early Greek religious history to one of his students at the University of Oregon in Eugene, Ore., earlier this spring. A Dominican monk and Catholic priest as well as head of the Religious Studies program at the university, Thompson moves easily between campus and the sequestered world of prayer.

mid-20s, he had a master's degree in medieval history and was studying philosophy at the University of California at Berkeley.

There, Thompson found a group of doctoral students deeply committed to Catholicism. One, now a monk in France, took Thompson to a Dominican Mass at a local parish.

A short time later, Thompson underwent a religious conversion he describes as both highly emotional and intellectual. While reading the autobiography of Thomas of Lisieux, a 19th-century French nun, Thompson says he became "extraordinarily aware of my total dependence on God and the absolutely unconditional nature of God's love."

"Eight years of theological study followed. Upon ordination, Thompson expected to be assigned to parish work.

Instead, his priory superior suggested he finish his doctoral studies in medieval history. So three days after ordination, Thompson found himself unexpectedly bound for Bologna.

He spent two years in Italy, preaching at retreats and completing research on revival preachers and politics in 13th-century Italy. He later expanded his work into a book that so impressed religious scholars that it was recently published in Italian.

As a Dominican, Thompson belongs to an order that originated in southern France in the early 1200s. There are about 6,000 Dominicans worldwide, including nearly 900 in the United States.

Technically speaking, Thompson and his brothers are friars, not monks, since they aren't cloistered in a monastery. But they take their vows just as seriously, and Thompson dutifully turns his $39,000 annual salary over to the Dominicans.

Study: Celibacy makes youth hesitant to join priesthood

The Associated Press

Celibacy stands atop the list of reasons Catholic youth hesitate to consider vocations, but church officials say they should not gloss over the rule when recruiting priests, sisters and brothers.

In a survey of active Catholic youth, young people who are contemplating religious life were most likely to say having a sense of mission and making a personal sacrifice for God are appealing aspects of a vocation. And celibacy — a priestly requirement Pope John Paul II has made clear will not be changed during his papacy — needs to be presented in that light, said the Center for Applied Research in the Apostolate, which conducted the study for the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

"If you present celibacy in a honest and challenging manner, it appeals to the idealism of young people," said Bishop Paul Loverde, chairman of the bishops' Committee on Vocations. "Celibacy is a sacrifice, but one that has a profound meaning and has made a difference in people's lives."

In the February survey of Catholics active in youth programs, the Georgetown University-based research center received responses from 749 youths in 39 parishes in 25 dioceses. The response rate of approximately 50 percent produced a margin of error of around plus or minus 4 percent for Catholic youth most involved in church life.

Overall, these Catholic youth think highly of the priests they know.

More than nine in 10 respondents said the priest, brother or sister they knew best was enthusiastic, prayerful and dedicated. But only 6 percent said they were seriously considering a church vocation.

Respondents reported feeling more positive about the professions of law, medicine, business and education than the religious life.

The two biggest reasons even the most involved Catholic youth hesitate to pursue vocations have to do with celibacy: 88 percent said they wanted to marry when they were older and 85 percent said they wanted to have children.

Among the youth who have seriously considered a vocation, however, church officials did see some signs that celibacy would not be an overwhelming obstacle.

Seventy-six percent of that group, compared to 61 percent of the respondents who had not seriously considered a vocation, said one of the most appealing aspects of the lives of priests and nuns is the personal sacrifice to serve God and others.

What do Catholic youth think will help increase vocations under the present system?

The best things the church can do, they said, is to have priests, sisters and brother share their personal stories with youth, to offer vocation retreats at confirmation and to give youths the opportunity to meet young adults pursuing a vocation.

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The Times-News will be publishing a medical guide/directory to distribute to customers in June. The directory will include health and fitness stories, in addition to lists of health providers and agencies. Area support groups will also be listed. Anyone who wants a support group included is invited to send the name of the group, a short description of the group, meeting times and a contact person's phone number to Denise Turner, The Times-News, P.O. Box 548, Twin Falls, Idaho 83303-0548. Information must be received by June 1. For questions, call 733-0991, Ext. 245.

Hundreds of churches are abandoned or crumbling

DETROIT (AP) — St. Albertus is a sacred place for Theresa Manning, the place where she prayed as a little girl, her son was baptized and her mother had her wedding and funeral.

But St. Albertus is a church no more. The Detroit diocese closed it in 1989 because of a shrinking congregation.

"I figured once they consecrated a church it would be there forever and ever... until it brought itself down," Manning says inside the empty church.

Rows of pews that could seat 1,200 sit empty before what used to be the church altar. A vestal that held the relics of saints is barren. A faulty boiler gives the church a wintry chill. Gritty chunks of plaster have fallen from the spiraling, Gothic ceiling.

So Manning and other former church members are trying to preserve the 112-year-old building. They gather weekly to board up windows in the school, clean and paint the church and rectory, and make sure the church's old boiler is still running.

St. Albertus is one of many religious buildings that went up during the U.S. population booms of the late 19th and early 20th centuries, when construction materials were cheap and abundant.

The result was a flowering of structures, often built to mimic some of the radiant structures of Europe. Many were bedecked with elegant sculpture, marble floors, fine paintings and brilliant stained glass.

"These are the creme de la creme of buildings because people invested their souls into them and spared no expense," said A. Robert Jaeger, co-director of Partners for Sacred Places, a Philadelphia preservation group.

But many of the buildings were left behind as people fled cities for the suburbs. In some cases, new faithful may revitalize an abandoned church or synagogue. Others are no better-equipped than their predecessors to handle building upkeep. Some aging church buildings are beyond repair. At Temple of the Good Samaritan in Detroit, a former pastor split the church in half when he built a false ceiling to save heating costs.

As Manning and her group work to preserve the St. Albertus building, there's talk of converting the rectory into a hospice and using the church as a religious museum or as space for concerts or for the diocese. But for now, group members hold a monthly Mass, give tours, occasionally rent out the space and raise money to maintain the building.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"There are some frauds so stupidly not to be deceived by them."

— Charles Caleb Colton

Take a good look at all four hands of today's deal. What South's chances of making his no-trump game after West leads the spade king?

Not good? True, but Bobby Goldman, an original member of the Aces, made it look easy. Here's how he swindled his way to success.

With routine play, if South refuses to win West's spade king (Bath Coup), West will switch. The most likely switch is to clubs, and when East encourages, East's clubs are established while he still has the diamond king. And when South takes the diamond finesse, the game goes two down.

How did Bobby make his game? He had a plan of the spade tray was his second-highest card (Foster Echo), and Bobby had cleverly hidden the deuce. So West led another spade, expecting Bobby to have started with the A-J doubleton.

Big surprise! Bobby won his spade ace and lost the diamond finesse, but East has no spade to lead. This gave Bobby time to win his nine tricks to score his vulnerable game.

Note that Bobby's play could cost little. With the diamond finesse outside, Bobby could always win nine tricks. With the diamond finesse offside and East holding a third spade, the defense would win only three spades and a diamond, ensuring Bobby of his nine winners.
