ACROSS THE NATION

Storms create a wet and wild Memorial Day weekend

The Associated Press

Heavy rain fell from Nebraska to New Jersey on Sunday, washing out the Indianapolis 500 auto race, while tornadoes blew into Texas and Oklahoma. Strong winds and blowing rain swept the track.

Warnings of strong thunderstorms with torrential rain, large hail and tornadoes were posted across the central and southern Plains, especially for central and eastern Oklahoma and western Arkansas.

At least four tornadoes touched the ground in central Oklahoma, wrecking two mobile homes, destroying several brick homes and blowing eight empty rail cars off their track Sunday evening.

A mother and daughter escaped serious injury when their mobile home south of Purcell, Okla., was flipped off its foundation by one tornado.

About 7:30 p.m., a tornado touched down in Dye, Moind, Texas. Less than an hour later, several tornadoes were reported in the areas around Saint Jo and Muenster, all in northern Texas.

Moisture from the Gulf of Mexico helped create widespread showers and thunderstorms around the East Coast. Many counties in eastern Ohio and western Pennsylvania had enough rain — up to 4 inches in some areas — to cause flooding of roads and basements. At the Pittsburgh airport, 2.48 inches had fallen by evening, a record for any day in May. In Georgia and Florida, heavy rain combined with gusty wind.

Heavy rains flooded 40 homes in Potter, Neb., after 8 inches of rain sent Lodgepole Creek over its banks.

The rain postponed the Indianapolis 500 for the first time in 11 years. It was rescheduled for Monday, when the forecast called for a 40 percent chance of light rain. The final round of the Bell Atlantic Golf Classic in Malvern, Pa., was also washed out.

yet leaked out.

This is how Jimerson, owner of Four Corners Guide Service, makes his living — on the river, fishing.

"It worries his future is threatened by federal efforts to protect two endangered fish downstream, the Colorado squawfish and the razorback sucker.

The Endangered Species Act requires a program to help the warm-water Colorado River Basin native fish, whose population plummeted as dams altered river flows throughout the West.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service proposed helping the fish by mimicking the river's natural cycles before Navajo Dam started the seasonal flooding and low-water conditions. Biologists say both are important for the endangered species to reproduce.

The effort included a four-month test of lowering the water flow on the San Juan over the winter. The idea was to store heavy water in a reservoir over the winter so it could be released during the April-June spawning period.

An area designated as critical habitat for the endangered species lies near Shiprock, a 13,667-foot mountain on the river from the so-called quality fishing waters below Navajo Dam.

Rainbow and brown trout have been stocked below the dam since it was completed in the 1960s, and they thrive in the cold water flowing from the bottom of the dam. The 3 1/2 miles downstream from the spillway are so renowned for fly fishing that fishermen must truck back anything under 20 inches.

The low-flow test alarmed fishermen who worried that low water levels would reduce the number of the insects the trout eat. Insects have been so prolific that trout, from the quality waters are known locally as "football" for their small heads and fat bodies.

The Rio Grande chapter of Trout Unlimited and the San Juan Fly Fishing Federation sued over the low flow proposal. They asked the lawsuit last fall, and the four-month test went forward.

The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, which regulates the flow of water through the dam, east of Farmington, ended the test in March and increased water releases.

In early April, the bureau was releasing 1,700 cfs (feet per second). It cut back to 1,150 cfs April 9, and to 600 cfs April 13. That level was maintained until May 11. Then the level was to rise in daily increments until hitting 5,000 cfs on May 21. That will be maintained until June 9, when the bureau will start gradually dropping the flow back to 600 cfs by July 25.

During the low flow, biologists studied such angles as fish health and movements, trout food supply, water quality and angler surveys.

Cookie Seale of the bureau's Durango, Colo., office said the bureau expects to release a final report in late summer or early fall.

tions of kinship with the lizard and desert tortoise, also a traditional part of the "cuisine." Arrogant early whites disregarded the peaches, Chemeluevi, Quechan, Fort Mojave, Cocope and others as "diggers."

"This is where the almighty God put us thousands of years ago," Layton Barstow, chairman of the Fort Mojaves, said at a protest in February. "This is our ground. We're not going to have any kind of a dump put in this area at all."

The 1,000-acre site isn't on any reservation. The Bureau of Land Management oversees it, and Gov. Pete Wilson insists the federal government transfer the title to California so the dump can open.

The Interior Department has demanded further safety tests and has told the state to apply for permits for drilling and earth sampling. Baldrige said California already has all necessary permits.

"I don't get the strong sense that if we apply for new permits, they're not going to issue them," he said. The state plans to drill anyway.

"I don't hope they do," said Bradley Ayres, spokesman. "We will definitely be ready for them."

Dump opponents have been camping in the sand and sagebrush for about a year, promising to lay down in front of bulldozers if necessary.

Rallies have drawn hundreds of people to the nondescript spot west of Needles.

Environmentalists come from San Francisco, Indians from as far as Oklahoma and the Dakotas, demanding "environmentally sound" solutions.

To build and run the dump, the state has licensed U.S. Ecology, which operates a similar site at Hazard, W.Va. That is one of only three spots licensed to take low-level radioactive waste, and it doesn't take California's.

Clinton: NATO way to peace

Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — The continent is different, but President Clinton's message is the same.

This week, he's offering it in Europe, during a whirlwind, three-country tour that amplifies the administration's major foreign-policy thrust.

Much as Clinton has been preaching togetherness on the home front with appeals for racial tolerance, unionism and bipartisanship, he will be pushing for peace and togetherness in Europe.

Then, he will come home, and in a commencement address at the U.S. Military Academy, make the case that broadened NATO is a vital American interest as well.

Clinton takes off Monday on a mission to sell citizens on both continents that the best way to ensure a long century more peaceful than the last one is to open NATO to former satellites of the Soviet Union.

The selling of a bigger NATO will be one of Clinton's latest foreign-policy undertakings. The goal, according to national security adviser Samuel R. Berger, is nothing less than the creation of "a peaceful, undivided, democratic Europe for the first time in history."

To do that, Clinton argues, the 16-nation NATO alliance should open its doors for the first time since 1952 and admit at least three former Iron Curtain countries, Hungary, Poland and the Czech Republic as first in line, and could be admitted during a July NATO meeting in Madrid.

This week, Clinton will bear witness to the first victory in what is likely to be an arduous fight to sell NATO expansion at home and abroad.

On his first stop Tuesday in Paris, Clinton, Russian President Boris Yeltsin and 15 other European leaders will gather at the Elysee Palace to sign an agreement meant to assuage Russia's fears about a growing NATO. Yeltsin, who was invited to sented in mid-May to the NATO-Russia Founding Act, which gives Russia a voice, but not a veto, in alliance security issues.

Berger described the signing ceremony as "a truly historic event" because it shows that it is possible to strengthen the NATO alliance while finding a partnership with a new, military superpower: Russia. The agreement marks a major turning point in the relationship between two peoples who have been at odds for decades — for more than four decades, said one administration official.

fuel savings and cleaner air, Oberle said.

"We should see longer mainline greens, but only if the demand is there," Young said. On the other hand, "we won't be sitting at lights at midnight, waiting for them to change."

The old system relied on timers, but the new one will adjust itself to hold green lights on major thoroughfares as long as there's a steady "platoon" of traffic.

The stragglers will be cut off and stopped, and they'll become the leaders of the next platoon," Young said.

In a subtler vein, the new system will adjust itself up to four times an hour to account for varying traffic densities around town. Young describes it as "traffic responsiveness."

The new traffic signal system should reduce the number of accidents, Oberle said, "because if we can get (the lights) coordinated, we can get the driver stops on a trip through the city."

"If we can keep traffic moving, we should be able to reduce some of the rear-end accidents," he said.

Supreme Court ready to rule on Clinton cases

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton has good reason to keep a close eye on the Supreme Court these days. Three cases before the justices could have major impacts on his work and his personal life.

The court may decide soon whether to let Paula Jones proceed immediately with her sexual-harassment lawsuit against Clinton.

On Tuesday, the justices will hear arguments on whether to uphold a federal law that would make Clinton the first president empowered to reject specific items from spending bills, the so-called line-item veto.

And the White House is asking

Bill Clinton

the justices to reverse a lower court order giving White-White investigators access to government lawyers' notes from conversations with Hillary Rodham Clinton.

The cases are "immensely significant, both personally and otherwise," said Herman Schwartz, an American University law professor. "Each one raises fundamental questions about the power and role of the presidency."

The high court is no stranger to major cases involving presidents. Perhaps the biggest was its 1974 ruling that rejected President Nixon's claim of executive privilege and ordered him to surrender secretly recorded White House tapes. He resigned within weeks.

Of the three cases involving Clinton, Schwartz believes a ruling in the line-item veto dispute could wind up having the greatest long-term impact.

Many presidents have sought line-item veto authority from Congress, but Clinton was the first to get it. Under the law that took effect in January, the president could sign a spending bill, then reject specific parts of it within the ensuing five days.

A federal judge threw out the law in April on the ground that the Constitution bars Congress from shifting such power to the president. The judge said a line-item veto could be adopted only by constitutional amendment, not through law enacted by Congress.

The Clinton administration's appeal says a line-item veto is a "critical tool" to head off wasteful government spending. Members of Congress who sued to overturn the law said it upset the constitutional balance of power between lawmakers and the president.

6 die in plane crash; skydiver unhurt

MIAMI (AP) — A skydiving plane crashed in a field of sugar beets Sunday, killing a pilot and five skydivers. One skydiver jumped out before the crash and safely floated to the ground.

Daryl Martin, a pilot who was fishing nearby, looked up when he heard what he thought was a plane with engine trouble and saw an aircraft spiraling to the ground.

"One person jumped from the airplane before it went down," Martin told MSNBC. By the time he lost sight of the plane behind a tree line, "she was still floating to the ground."

Holiday may spur medal requests

WASHINGTON (AP) — They pin the medals to their chests for Memorial Day or Veterans' Day parades or proudly pass them to their grandchildren. They display them in shadow boxes. They lock them in boxes with other relics of a treasured past.

The popularity of military medals among veterans has been on the rise since the 1980s. And this year, as usual, the number of requests for unclaimed medals is likely to rise after Monday's Memorial Day observance.

"It just evokes memories, and the guys will try to get them," said Dennis Geiger of the Military Order of the Purple Heart of the United States of America, a veterans' service organization.

"You have a lot of the older World War II veterans who want to pass on a legacy," he said. "And Vietnam vets are coming to terms with the war, and they're now wanting their medals."

Many World War II veterans, in their 70s, want proof of what they did in the war to leave to their heirs, said Phil Budahn of the American Legion in Washington.

And sometimes it's the other way around.

Arthur Davidson, who as a seaman in World War II operated a landing cable on an aircraft carrier in the Pacific, said his son decided he should finally get his medals.

"It was just a question of sending away for them," Davidson, 71, of Fort Myers, Fla., said. "I think he originally was going to make some sort of shadow box and present it to me, but the medals were sent to me so that kind of blew that."

William E. Thayer headed the Army's Authorizations and Vietnam Marine veteran and military artifact collector Fred Baker, shown in his home outside Praterville, Ala., will be officially awarded the Silver Star for service performed in Vietnam during a ceremony June 7. Requests for unclaimed medals are expected to rise after this Memorial Day.

Flood-fighting Dakota seniors earn diplomas

GRAND FORKS, N.D. (AP) — They piled sandbags instead of studying for final exams. So Sunday's graduates were more reunion than farewell for high school seniors whose final year was cut short by the raging Red River.

"No class has missed more school, but perhaps no class has learned more this spring," said Superintendent Mark Sanford before Sunday's ceremonies.

Classes were canceled last month at the two public high schools as the city struggled to prevent the Red River from flooding homes and businesses. The students pitched in, filling sandbags and building dikes.

"They spent their spring serving their community, and each other. ... Not only is this graduation, it's homecoming," the superintendent said.

Red River High's 271 seniors draped in traditional gowns — red for young men, white for women — hurried about the University of North Dakota gymnasium Sunday as their parents and friends filled the wooden bleachers. Graduation for Central High's 260 seniors was next.

"We have coped with nature's fury and survived," senior Vinia Parikh said during the commencement. "We have learned to adapt to circumstances which are difficult to comprehend."

Government imposes autocratic will on Congo

KINSHASA, Congo (AP) — It can be as harmless as not paying the pennies it costs to ride a bus. Or as deadly as shooting a defenseless man in the back.

A week after welcoming Laurent Kabila's victorious rebel alliance into Kinshasa with cheers and palm fronds, residents of the capital cite increasing signs of the autocracy that chafed under Mobutu Sese Seko, the Zairian dictator Kabila ousted.

Raphael Ghenda, information minister of the newly-named Congo, announced a ban on demonstrations Saturday night, a few hours after soldiers broke up an opposition march and detained a few dozen protesters. They also took film and videotapes from journalists covering the march.

Some things are better, insisted two old men walking with plastic bags of knick-knacks purchased Sunday at the capital's Grand Market. The streets are safe now, one said, pointing to his pocket to show he can carry possessions without fear of bullying soldiers or street thieves.

But, they said, the new soldiers ride buses without paying, just like Mobutu's troops. The men started shaking their heads. And anyone caught stealing — especially anyone with a weapon — gets killed immediately.

When asked their names, the old men politely refused, a holdover from fears of ruthless reprisals meted out by Mobutu's regime — as well as a caution against the uncertainties Kabila poses.

Hailed as a liberator after Kinshasa fell to his Alliance of Democratic Forces for the Liberation of Congo (AFDL) May 17, enthusiasm dampened after Kabila grabbed the presidency and responsibility for defense — leaving no room for a prime minister or deputy president to check his control.

His well-known security obsession has done little to endear him to his new subjects. By Sunday, he had made only one public appearance — a stage-managed visit to a hospital on Saturday where he said for the first time that elections called for by opposition groups and Western powers would come only after a two-year transition period.

President flees after African coup

FREETOWN, Sierra Leone (AP) — Rebellious soldiers claimed control over this small west African country Sunday after seizing the legislature and burning the national treasury. The elected president reportedly fled to neighboring Guinea.

The mutineers took over the national assembly after clashing with Nigerian troops who were stationed in the capital Freetown to help defend the civilian government against rebels, witnesses said.

Stry fire, including rocket-propelled grenades and mortars, hit the U.S. Embassy, 200 yards from the assembly building, according to a Marine guard reached by telephone. The building suffered some damage but there were no casualties, said the guard speaking on condition of anonymity.

The State Department said two Americans were injured when their home was looted. There was no word on their names or extent of injuries.

Discrimination against mentally ill topic of meeting

TWIN FALLS - Ending discrimination against the mentally ill and emphasizing treatment are the topics of a panel discussion Wednesday.

The meeting will start at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday in room 108 of the Aspen Building at the College of Southern Idaho.

In addition to the educational side of the discussion, the purpose of the meeting is to start a Twin Falls chapter of the Idaho Alliance for the Mentally Ill, organizer Linda Palmer said. The alliance is a family support, education and advocacy organization for people with mental and brain disorders, from depression to dementia.

Sharon Clement of Boise, state chair of the Idaho Alliance; Ardia Johnson of Boise, a national representative of the National Organization for Mental Illness; and Lee Woodland with the Burley alliance chapter will be the panelists.

One goal is to improve the local mental health delivery system and link all community efforts, Palmer said. Community and elected leaders and health professionals have been invited.

"One in four people is going to be affected by a type of mental illness," she added.

Relatives of people suffering from mental illness or brain disorders are encouraged to meet with other families at 5:30 p.m.

For more information, call Palmer at 733-3467.

- Application of Dean Family Partnership/Ketchum Central Park to subdivide 135 and 139 Bird Drive into 18 condominium units located in the general residential density zone.
- Application of Sunbird Townhouse Association for an amendment to Section 24.2 of Zoning Ordinance No. 208 to allow 24 units on a residential lot.
- Continuation of the application of Thunder Spring Warehouse for conditional-use permits for a mixed-use planned unit development at 124 Saddle Road in the central residential high density zone.

The commission will determine what, if any, additional area beyond 300 feet from the proposed location for a proposed rezoning will require notice, written or otherwise.

The design review session includes:

$4.5 million sewer bond issue backs up to the polls

By Kristan Kennedy
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY - Hailey residents go to the polls Tuesday to vote on a $4.5 million bond issue to build a new $6.5 million sewer plant in Woodside, possibly ending a yearlong sewer crisis.

The bond issue requires a simple majority to pass.

If the issue wins the majority, the city's Riverside treatment plant will close. City officials contend sewer rates will drop, based on an equation which allows for 100 new hookups per year. If the votes fall, the rates could go higher, they say.

A $19 million bond issue was defeated soundly in May 1995.

If Tuesday's bond issue goes down, city officials say they will be forced to throw good money after bad by upgrading the Riverside facility to meet Environmental Protection Agency standards. The EPA imposed a moratorium on the plant last year for discharging excess levels of effluent into the Big Wood River.

Waste water manager Ray Hyde said

When to vote
The polls are open at 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the Valley Public Library meeting room.

protecting the Big Wood River should be the priority as voters go to the polls, not continuing the growth. The Riverside treatment facility had experienced two mishaps since February, one two weeks ago as flood waters threatened the Lawrence Heagle Park where the sewer plant sits.

Sewer users fees cost $20.25 per month. With a new sewer plant in place, city officials say 100 new users can hookup each year, providing $129,500 in future revenue.

That, coupled with a lower-annual operation cost - because only one plant will be operating - and a low 4.5-percent interest rate on the bond add up to a monthly increase of 50 cents per month, Hyde said.

However, officials maintain if the bond fails, Riverside and Woodside will have to be upgraded to meet the EPA requirements. Hyde said the city will use $1.85 million in the city's sewer connection fee account, plus borrow money. Hyde calculates the monthly increase to residents will be $1.50 if the bond election is unsuccessful.

Also on the ballot is a question about controlling Hailey's growth through city legislation.

The growth question is an advisory one city leaders say will guide them in directing a growth ordinance if passed. If the city limits the hookups to 100 per year, the growth rate in Hailey would average four percent annually.

High-tech data collection lowers flood risk

By Julie Casey Lynn
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM - At midnight, a computer in Boise makes a wakeup call to Galena Summit. The radio message booms off a gaseous meteor trail and finds an unmanned monitoring site at the summit. The site replies with a burst of weather data: maximum, minimum and average temperatures; snowfall; amount of water in the snow; and total accumulations of precipitation to date. Then the Boise computer tells the remote site to go back to sleep.

The whole exchange takes less than 50 milliseconds, or five one-hundredths of a second, according to Bill Patterson, an electrical technician for the National Resources Conservation Service.

Similar conversations go on throughout the night, as computers in Boise and Ogden, Utah, collect weather data from about 600

For the Big Wood and Little Wood rivers, the snowpack is 26 percent above normal. With 44 inches of snow left to melt, officials say the potential exists for another peak flow.

Burley man's display pays homage to POWs

By Jennifer Bunch
Times-News writer

BURLEY - In 1992, Luther Bennett built his own prisoner of war memorial in his front yard.

On special occasions, such as Memorial Day, he adorns the concrete monument with a display of American flags. Medals of honor hang in a homemade showcase. A statue of a bald eagle is burdened with a chain around its neck, symbolizing to Bennett what it's like to be a prisoner of war.

Bennett, 77, served in the U.S. Army's 13th Armored Division under Gen. George Patton Jr.

He also describes how he was starved by the Germans in a prison camp in Austria. He can describe how a bullet broke through his helmet, shattering it but not striking him. He can describe what it's like not knowing what he's shooting and wondering later who it might have been.

But he describes it best through his poetry.

For years, Bennett said he couldn't talk about his war experiences. He still has nightmares. Within the last 10 years he began writing poems as the only way to express his feelings.

His front-yard memorial is his tribute to the memory of fellow POWs and a way to educate people about their struggle during what he calls a "barbaric world after world."

"I believe that young people should have a better understanding of what it means to be a prisoner of war," Bennett said.

For Bennett, today's holiday means more than a day off from work. It is a

Stepfather saves 1 child in fire; another dies

LEWISTON (AP) — A stepfather saved the life of one child, but smoke and flames were too thick for anyone to reach another child who died in a Lewiston house fire early Saturday morning.

The body of 11-year-old Bradley G. Bake was found near the mattress in his upstairs bedroom, according to a police report. It appears the fire started in that room, Fire Chief Tom Tomberg said.

Delwin Ruddle, 43, Bradley's stepfather, hurt his arm while rescuing 9-year-old Kimberly Baker, who suffered smoke inhalation.

Shutting off water to canal helps police find suspected murder weapon

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — After 2 days of searching, volunteers pulled a pistol from an Idaho Falls canal that Blackfoot police hope will tie two suspects now in custody to the May 18 slaying of a Logan, Utah, man.

Just after noon, John Chappell, a volunteer, found the empty magazine to a semi-automatic pistol, wrapped in a waterproof mental detector and a cross country ski pole with a magnet attached to the end of it in his search efforts.

kill 35-year-old Saul Olguin Villegas, who died May 18 after suffering multiple gunshot wounds to the chest. Villegas was shot outside a Lawrence Lane trailer house in east Blackfoot.

To find the gun, water from the canal was drained. Earlier in the week, officers from the Bonneville County Sheriff's Department spent two days searching the canal without success.

Blackfoot officials on Friday requested the Eastern Idaho Irrigation District shut off the water flowing from the Snake River into its canals. They said draining the canal would increase the chances of finding the gun.

Police have arrested two men, Antonio Panteras Rodriguez and Hector Aurelio Gonzalez, and charged them with the murder of Villegas.

Dealing with death: Law officers forced to deal with taking lives; many are ill-prepared to cope with aftermath

COBUR DALENE (AP) — The gunman with the hollow, drunken eyes leapt through my defenses.

Rick raised to his shoulder, he hunted for the sheriff's deputy.

In the nearby shadows, Deputy Mike O'Brien froze. He watches as the gunman's rifle darted back and forth, then stopped as it found its target.

The deputy looked one last time into the eyes of his would-be killer.

"Death — that's all I could see in his face and eyes," O'Brien recalled. "A total vacancy of all humanity."

O'Brien pulled the trigger of his own gun and joined the ranks of officers who live with the ultimate burden, taking a human life.

They have killed to protect the public, to protect other officers and to protect themselves. While they're trained to carry out this duty with detached precision, little prepares them for the aftermath.

"People think we are without feelings and emotions," said Jeff Thomas, a Kootenai County sheriff's lieutenant who has shot and killed two people in the line of duty.

Instead, he said, these officers often suffer a private and profound grief. Struggling to reconcile their duty as protector with that of killer, they ride a rollercoaster of anger, tears, confusion, adrenaline and fear.

"Some turn to booze for comfort.

Others withdraw from friends and family. Some are plagued by nightmares and doubt. Some find a new appreciation for their own lives.

In Spokane and Kootenai counties, 20 officers have taken a life during the past 10 years.

O'Brien, once a distraught and violent Twin Lakes man in December, was the most recent until Spokane office Rick Dobrow shot an irate, knife-wielding man after responding to a report of a family fight.

"At first you're giddy with adrenaline. Then, within the space of a second, you realize what you've done and you're standing there going, 'Oh, my God,'" said Deputy Kevin Mumford, who killed a man during his second month of training.

"We are the only people on Earth who have to be a judge, a jury and an executioner all at once," said Lt. Nile Shirley. "And we have to do it in a split second."

In 1977, Larry House shot and killed a man, and then watched his own life unravel.

Cursing and shouting, David Gunter charged out of his Ashol, Idaho, home, pistol in hand. "I told him to put the gun down three times but he started to raise it," House said. "There was this noise screaming in my head, 'He's gonna shoot you, he's gonna shoot you!'"

As Gunter charged at the deputy, House fired his gun. "I could see the life go out of his eyes."

Twenty years later, House, now 53 and retired, still remembers how the wife of the dead man wailed at him. "I started bawling. I cried for two days," he said. It was the beginning of years of someone. This time, a suicidal woman armed with a handgun stepped outside of her home and took a deputy.

Both House and Lt. Jeff Thomas fired their weapons. For House the aftermath was difficult but different.

All involved, officers, 911 dispatchers, emergency workers, were taken to a hotel. Their husbands and wives were brought in. Counseling was offered.

"Most importantly, they were given support and encouraged to talk," House said. "People understand now that you're going to need some help," House said.

Charlotte Weaver is thankful for the officer who took her husband's life. She believes that she, and many more people, would have died in 1992 if Deputy Brad Maskell hadn't shot and killed her husband.

"Brad was an angel that God sent to me that day. He gave me my life," Maskell was on his way home on Sept. 25, 1992 when a domestic violence call came over his radio. He sped to the Hayden complex where Weaver had just jumped from a second-story balcony to escape the abusive husband holding her and a friend at gunpoint.

Maskell watched Robert Weaver dragged Tom Foutz from the building, a cocked revolver jammed to his head.

"He was yelling that this guy was going to die," Maskell said. "I knew I was going to have to do something."

"I was scared to death," he fired. Robert Weaver dropped dead.

Although he saved Foutz's life, questions began circling in Maskell's mind like sharks. "Did I see things correctly? Did I do the right thing?"

The deputy read newspaper articles about the two children he'd left fatherless. He saw photographs of the dead man's son and thought of his own young boy, "I was usually grieving for his family," Maskell said.

Then, the dead man's widow began asking to meet him.

"I was really concerned about him," Charlotte Weaver said. "I knew he had to be suffering and there was enough suffering already."

He had endured years of abuse and had no doubt his husband intended to kill her, Foutz and as many officers as he could that day.

"The day affected both Brad and me, but I think it was easier for me to come to terms because I knew Bob," Weaver said. "Brad didn't have that benefit."

Two years later, Maskell met with the widow.

"I walked through the door, the next thing I know this woman clutches me in a hug. I was kinda shocked. She's crying. I'm trying to hold back my own tears. It just blew me away," Weaver said. "I don't blame him. He'd done the right thing."

"We are the only people on Earth who have to be a judge, a jury and an executioner all at once."

depression. Back then, little was known about the psychological damage sown by brushes with violence. Cops weren't encouraged to admit they had feelings, much less discuss them.

The chief deputy at the time told House, "Aw, you'll get used to it where it won't bother you a bit."

He couldn't have been more wrong.

Although House believed he'd done the right thing, "I just felt dirty," he suffered severe mood swings. "I drank enough beer to fill Hayden Lake."

In 1993, House again had to shoot

States strategize to keep pedophiles from public schools

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Luke Elbert "Lee" Dalton, who recently pleaded guilty to one count of second-degree abuse, is likely to become the fifth Utah teacher this year to lose his license for sexual misconduct.

The Box Elder teacher was fired and asked to surrender his teaching certificate after he filed his plea in 1st District Court. The State Board of Education must vote before he officially loses his certificate.

Nationwide, more teachers lose their licenses for sexual abuse of a child than in any other single category, said Doug Bates, legal coordinator for the State Office of Education.

That's not surprising since pedophiles often seek employment where they can be near children, he said.

pedophiles moving from state to state, all 50 states have joined the National Association of State Directors of Professional Education and Certification.

That group keeps a database, updated monthly, of teachers who lose their licenses. It also includes British Columbia, Zealand, Guam, Puerto Rico, the Department of Defense schools and the Virgin Islands.

Practices Advisory Commission composed mostly of teachers, will consider a revocation request from the district even if the teacher's behavior does not result in criminal charges.

Although teachers can be reinstated, it's unlikely if they've been convicted of a sexual offense or if they lose their license because of sexual misconduct with a student, said Roger Mourison, the executive secretary of the Utah Professional Practices Advisory Commission.

Bates believes strongly pedophiles shouldn't be given a second chance to work with children.

"Some say, 'He's seen the light, it won't happen again,'" he said. "That rationale doesn't work. If you're a pedophile involved with children, it's an unpardonable sin as far as schools are concerned. They may be wined and dined, but they don't have to be in schools."

"The benefit of the doubt belongs to the child not the employee," Bates said. "It should be one strike and you're out."

Teachers do not have to be convicted of a crime to lose their certification, the Utah Professional Practices Advisory Commission composed mostly of teachers, will consider a revocation request from the district even if the teacher's behavior does not result in criminal charges.

Although teachers can be reinstated, it's unlikely if they've been convicted of a sexual offense or if they lose their license because of sexual misconduct with a student, said Roger Mourison, the executive secretary of the Utah Professional Practices Advisory Commission.

Bates believes strongly pedophiles shouldn't be given a second chance to work with children.

"Some say, 'He's seen the light, it won't happen again,'" he said. "That rationale doesn't work. If you're a pedophile involved with children, it's an unpardonable sin as far as schools are concerned. They may be wined and dined, but they don't have to be in schools."

"The benefit of the doubt belongs to the child not the employee," Bates said. "It should be one strike and you're out."

More Utah families choose cremation as burial alternative

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The percentage of Utah families choosing cremation rather than burial has increased to the point that the state no longer ranks among the bottom 10 states for the rate of cremation.

Utah, which had 1,549 cremations in 1995, was 17th among the states with low cremation rates. Fourteen percent of all Utah families opted for cremation instead of burial during 1995, the first year for which statistics are available. That was an increase of nearly 1 percent over a decade.

Jack Springer, executive director for the Cremation Association of North America, said Utah is particularly low when compared to other Western states, though. That includes Nevada, Montana and Washington are in the top five.

He attributes Utah's low rate to the state's predominant LDS population and its emphasis on traditional burials. The policy of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is that, generally, cremation is not encouraged unless it is required by law.

Utah has seven crematoriums, with five in Salt Lake City and two in Ogden. The Cremation Association of North America expects Utah's cremation rate to continue to increase and predicts it will rise to 17 percent by the year 2000 and to almost 23 percent by 2010.

Springer said simplicity and cost are the two main reasons people choose cremation. However, he said cremation isn't always that inexpensive, depending on the extras.

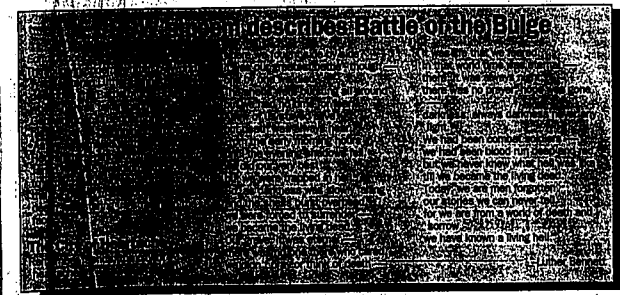

Many people choose to have funerals and viewings before the body is cremated.

In Europe and some other places, like Japan, the lack of burial space is among reasons for the high cremation rates. In Japan the rate is 98 percent. But in some countries the trend might be reversing.

Logan P. Ellis, president of the Utah Funeral Directors Association, said newspapers at the state have helped push the rate of cremation up.

Joan Simeros said her family chose cremation over burial when her brother-in-law died in the Seattle area.

sul conservation officer on high-water watch in his Hayden area. The network lets officials monitor precipitation and estimate the runoff from mountain watersheds.

"More than 70 percent of the West's water starts out as mountain snow," Roberts said.

"Farmers, hydroelectric power engineers, outdoor enthusiasts need to know how much water is in the snowpack."

Roberts' concern is the Big remote weather courses of the Big and Little Wood basins.

"They used to take the attitude of 'fill and spill' flood control, but with these remote sites, data is more readily available and flood control can begin earlier in the winter," Roberts said. "Snow depths have been measured in the same places for 50 years, making the information pretty reliable."

"It has to be in irrigators and dam operators are going to let water go early to control the spring runoff."

"Until about 20 years ago, most of the data was collected by close and personal, once a month. Information was collected via sleds, snow machines and helicopters.

"Then it was decided that the data needed to be collected in a more timely fashion," Roberts said.

The weather sites are typically placed in small meadows in the higher reaches of the watersheds. Many are accessible only by helicopter.

Each site has a flat steel "pill-log" with non-toxic antifreeze. As snowfall accumulates, the snow's weight pushes the antifreeze up a plastic tube, allowing measurement.

Meanwhile, gauges and recorders measure temperature and wind. A top antenna tower and a sun sensor panel provides the site's power.

The meteor-burst communication technique is made possible by a constant shower of sand-grained meteors. The meteors burn when they reach the earth's atmosphere, leaving a gaseous trail capable of reflecting a radio signal.

Because billions of tons of cosmic dust falls to the earth each year, a signal is assured of finding a short-lived trail for a quick ricochet.

In addition to the 600 automated sites, data from another 1,000 snow courses is manually collected once a month.

Occasionally, the automated sites need maintenance. Patterson was dispatched recently to repair the Galena Summit site. Equipped with a laptop computer, a spare radio and tools, Patterson started a 60-second pack on a 300-yard climb to the weather station.

The 12-foot-high shelter was still mostly buried in snow. Patterson climbed down into the shelter, wired his laptop to the solar panel and attached a communications cable. Running a systems test, Patterson discovered that the radio wasn't receiving any signal. He replaced it, checked again, and found the system working once more. He would take the old radio back to Boise for repairs.

Patterson said the automated sites, built in the late '60s, cost about $26,000 to install and use mostly off-the-shelf communications software.

"The cost of automated sites is considerably less than the cost of having people manually read the sites," he said.

State education department earns an F on math tests

From the Idaho Press-Tribune, Nampa
The state education department blundered when it administered a math test to students that covered material they had not yet been taught.

Oops.
It looks like some math test results are destined for the trash can — and with the Idaho Department of Education's blessing.

The Direct Mathematics Assessment tests was given to all fourth- and eighth-grade students for the second consecutive year.

A spokesperson for State Superintendent of Education Anne Fox said simply that her department had messed up. The department promises to correct it for next year.

No harm done?

Hardly.
There have been some questions among educators as to the appropriateness of state-assessed tests. Some argue that they take up valuable class time and sometimes give a skewed picture of student performance.

We believe the tests are worthwhile.

But the recent blunder is certainly no shining example.
The state wasted some valuable time and resources administering the test. The Legislature gave the education department $500,000 to conduct student testing this year, including the math test.

Then there's the time to write the test.

The tests apparently are rewritten each year to keep students from sharing answers.

But those paid to write the tests apparently didn't know all the academic facts. The tests included concepts that they had not yet been taught, but would learn before the end of the school year.

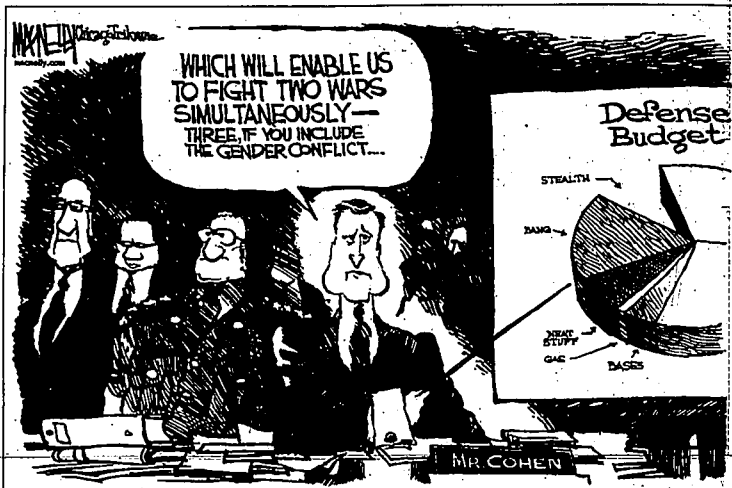

The problem?
The tests were conducted at the beginning or middle of the year. And an education department official admitted the state did not seek enough input from teachers and math experts when writing the tests.

This isn't the first time the education department — under Fox's control — has goofed. Miscommunication seems to be a common theme.

And the people getting caught in the net are the kids.

Chalk up another F for Fox's department. And yet one more loss of trust.

Non-graduates, don't be bitter

High school graduations are upon us; it's late May again. But what of the "dead"? The three in 10 who will not graduate, who have dropped out? Who are they? Who will they become? The marginalized, the losers, the rebels. Do they, too, dream of a better life? Souls whose passion will not fit the mold, will not be broken to harness.

Perhaps many of them are left-handed heroes, heroines?

Maybe I have failed as a parent. So far, all our children have graduated and gone on to universities. I did my best. I encouraged them to skip school every now and again, to get slightly lower grades, to question authority respectfully. They didn't listen very much.

So to all you non-graduates, rejoice! Do not be bitter, don't look at yourselves as losers, as having failed. Perhaps, just perhaps through the passion that burns within your heart, you hear the voice of God from a far-off land.

You are the darlings which society would pull, but in his eyes you are still a beautiful yellow flower worthy of a full life right amidst the grass.

Allow that same God to custom fit his harness on you, not so heavy as other harnesses.

So to Jason, Jeremy and Joe, may you seek your dream of a better life, a better world with all the passion God created in you and race with the wind! For in a very real sense, this, too, is your graduation.

You can't inherit homosexuality

Mr. Marv Bartlett is absolutely, positively and totally wrong in his assertion that homosexuality can be inherited from parents if parents were involved homosexuals. Furthermore, he knows nothing about human genetics and is wallowing in ignorance as regards to the causes of homosexuality.

Mr. Bartlett may pump himself up all he wants with his claims of special knowledge and abilities (he's a minister), but as far as I'm concerned, he deserves a big fat "F" for his knowledge.

Girls don't need to prove anything

To The Times-News, Dustin Calhoun and writer Rachel Denny:

What an interesting article in the May 16 edition regarding Dustin Calhoun's new business. I find it appalling, funny that Mr. Calhoun plans to lure "active women" from his establishment, considering his penchant for insulting their intelligence.

The quote that Rachel Denny (or her editor) chose to highlight from Mr. Calhoun's letter to you, incidentally, was meant to bolster "girls' self-confidence" in approaching the "boy's world" of computer technology. Mr. Calhoun's comments, however, can only be defined as backhanded at best.

To suggest that girls need to "prove their minds work equally well if not better"

(Better than what, I'm not sure) smacks of discrimination and perpetuates the stereotypes of women as mentally inferior.

Congratulations to Mercedes Opheim for stepping up to the plate to prove her equality to Mr. Calhoun and his Lost Boys. Her "go for it" attitude is helping to eliminate prevailing opinions of Idaho's women as ignorant and inferior. And I bet she thought she was just having fun.

Boise Cascade responds to story

In an Associated Press story which ran in your newspaper recently, the Idaho Sporting Congress, a preservationist group, alleges wrongdoing by Boise Cascade related to a federal timber sale in western Idaho. These allegations are absolutely untrue, and the story is inaccurate in many respects and extremely misleading in general.

The Grade-Dukes timber sale, located in the Payette National Forest, has been opposed by preservationists from its inception. After much planning by the U.S. Forest Service and extensive public comment and review, the sale was awarded to Boise Cascade in August 1994. To date, we have harvested roughly 25 percent of the sale. The remainder of the harvest is on hold pending the outcome of litigation brought by the preservationists.

Soon after the sale was awarded, we began preparing for the harvest. In a letter to the USES dated April 24, 1995, we submitted our operating plan for the timber harvest and asked the agency not to make public our operating plans, including our harvesting timetable. Our request was perfectly legal and appropriate in every respect, despite assertions to the contrary in the AP story. We felt compelled to make this request because of the likelihood that extremists, if given the information, might jeopardize the physical safety of our people and disrupt our operations, as they have during previous harvests.

The AP story erroneously implies that our letter asked that dam about old growth be withheld from the public. The Boise Cascade letter and the issues regarding old growth are completely unrelated. Our company had nothing to do with the old-growth information and learned only very recently of its existence.

Sadly, the AP story is the worst kind of journalism: based on allegations by a highly biased "source known" for spreading misleading information, combined with careless, inaccurate reporting. This kind of sloppy reporting does a disservice not only to the reputations of our company and employees, it misleads the public as well.

The Times-News can't relate

Regarding the Banana Bread Caper: You were absolutely right to say this incident was "lead bait" on the part of KSKI management and its morning hosts, but I don't like to see one error in judgment take away from the effort Ron Harrison and his staff put into their show every morning. Hopefully, they have learned a big lesson and an incident like this won't happen again.

However, your comment that this was just an example of the "falliness" going on with morning radio in the Magic Valley was a comment without merit.

The radio business in the Magic Valley over the last few years has changed drastically. With approximately 19 stations now serving the area, we all have to work harder than ever to maintain our share of the audience.

Some of the "falliness" you referred to starts at about 2 a.m. each weekday morning preparing shows, trying to stay one step ahead of the competition. Is every comedy bit you hear on Magic Valley morning radio funny? Probably not! But if someone in this market was funny every day they opened the mike, they'd probably be doing a morning show in New York, not in Burley, for example!

Competition breeds creativity, some good, some bad. When a morning show steps over the line, we usually hear about it and know it's time to red it in and if you want to maintain your audience, you red it in fast!

The Times-News might be able to better relate to the effort that goes into all the "falliness" in Magic Valley morning radio if there were 18 more newspapers in town.

Get used to it, Montana

From the Bozeman Daily Chronicle
Montana law enforcement officials had better get some thick skin.

An Arby's television commercial that makes light of Montana's lack of a numerical speed limit is giving Montana Highway Patrol Col. Craig Reap and Attorney General Joe Mazurek fits.

Inviting diners to buy five roast beef sandwiches for $5.55, the Arby's ad says, "We expect to see you as soon as the law allows... In Montana, I guess we'll see you a little sooner." The picture on the screen features a sign that says "no speed limit." In barely visible fine print flashed on the screen for an instant, a message apprises viewers of the state's "reasonable and prudent" speed limit.

"If a person doesn't take the time to ask and read the fine print, they're going to think there's no speed limit in Montana," Reap complained.

"It really does send the wrong public safety message," moaned Mazurek. "This just feeds the notion to the outside public that we have no speed limit."

You'd think these guys would be used to this by now.

Montana has been the butt of lead footed quips since the federally mandated 55 mph speed limit was lifted last year leaving nothing but the reasonable and prudent standard in its place.

And who could reasonably expect less. However, state lawmakers — or at least a majority of them — weren't bothered by all the ribbing. They chose not to impose a numerical limit despite urgings from Mazurek and Gov. Marc Racicot.

Now that we've chosen this course, we'd better get conditioned to the notion that Montana will be equated with lawless roads. The reasonable and prudent standard, while enforceable with some effort and a certain amount of arguing in court, sets Montana in a class by itself. And being in that kind of class invites the easy pathos. The fact that Montana is the only state to deliberately choose to go without a hard and fast speed limit should have told lawmakers something about the advisability of such a policy.

Dairy industry accusations mislead

Recently the dairy industry has come under close scrutiny. Many of the accusations aimed at the dairy industry have been misleading and not based on facts.

Comparing the dairy industry to Micron seems odd. Micron, whose Lehi, Utah, over many areas due to its population and ability to provide the necessary resources for the facility. How beneficial is the Micron facility to Lehi now that Micron has ceased construction, leaving many residents without jobs? Wouldn't it be a real problem if it had started construction in the Magic Valley and suddenly stopped? It may have been a blessing it decided not to come to the valley.

One author stated a single loaded semi puts wear and tear on our roads to the tune of 100,000 cars. A single loaded semi weighs 105,500 pounds. If a single loaded semi puts wear and tear on our roads to the tune of 100,000 cars, this must mean our cars weigh just over 1 pound a piece?

What did the following statement mean? "Nobody talks about their primarily unskilled labor force." These are very strong words aimed at people who depend on the income from dairies to feed their families. A dairy operation is very complex and requires many skills in order to produce a quality product.

By stating the labor force is unskilled and then going farther by implying their children are "a drain on special school" makes me wonder. What does the term "special school" imply? Do I sense a bias toward one specific group? This could be misinterpreted very easily. Our children are our future, and incurring any child puts "a drain" on our system is disheartening.

The lost children remain with Juvenile Corrections until they become emancipated or turn 18, the report said. The department keeps them in foster care to save money, but foster homes don't provide much rehabilitative care, it said.

Overton said the department is actively looking at low-cost residential programs, a stable residential setting where they could attend school and get a job.

Communication within the department has been fragmented and at times nonexistent. Groups affected by decisions often aren't told of the decision until action has been taken, and agency staffers don't believe their input is valued.

State providers, such as the Magic Hot Springs Youth Camp in southern Twin Falls County, contract to treat more than half of the juveniles in department custody. The department estimated the cost at $11.8 million for the 1997 budget year, but payments had exceeded $7.1 million over the first seven months of the budget year.

The department also has no way to compare the quality of care and rehabilitative programs offered by the various contractors and the state centers. Meanwhile, the department cannot track its own per-day cost of housing offenders.

The legislature has been forced to add money to the department's budget in 1996 and 1997, in part because no one had an accurate handle on the case-load.

The Legislature expected the department to handle 250 to 260 youth. But over the October 1995 and January 1996, more than 400 youths were placed with the department, Overton said.

The caseload changes daily, but averages 420 to 460, Overton said. One day last week, the department was handling 480 youths.

A dip on the state's juvenile caseload had been lifted, so the state is getting more offenders, the report said.

Low tax revenues mean the department will have to trim 10 staff positions.

"That puts an added burden on a new department to absorb those cuts, but the money's just not there," Overton said.

The court's role

The department also must improve its handling of the block grant program, the Division of Financial Management report said. Counties have little or no guidance on how to use the grants. The payment process and the reporting system both must be streamlined.

Funds are based on a county's juvenile population, and regional grants aren't available, the report said. That makes the program impractical for small counties, said Lincoln County Sheriff Steve Southwick.

Setting up the larger prevention programs Juvenile Corrections has in mind takes time, effort and paid staff, Southwick said.

A program's department is so small - two deputies - that its officers don't get paid overtime. Time officers take to work on juvenile programs, not to mention filling out grant applications, is precious-time-taken away from patrol and investigation, he said.

A program wouldn't be worth the time and effort unless it effectively served a large number of children, he said.

The most immediate need Southwick has is to supervise children temporarily taken from their homes.

"Most of the time they're taken out of their home because their parents can't control them," he said. "We usually have to bring them down to the office and sit with them while someone is set up for them, which can take hours."

A person trained to supervise juveniles, and working for several counties, would be a great help, he said.

District liaisons were supposed to help counties develop such programs, but instead spend three-quarters of their time managing offender cases, the report said. Social workers hired in fall 1996 helped ease the load, but the department still must develop a case management plan, it said.

Lincoln County arrested 12 juveniles last year. It has no detention facility, instead renting beds at the Snake River Juvenile Detention Center in Twin Falls, at $125 per night.

The county overran its budget for juvenile detention this year, Southwick said.

Reinke's goals

Reinke and Twin Falls County have taken advantage of the process to develop a full spectrum of juvenile services.

Gov. Phil Batt's office wouldn't say whether Reinke was appointed to state job to set an example to other counties. Reinke was simply the best person for the job, said spokesman Frank Lockwood.

It has taken Twin Falls County years, a lot of money and hard work to create its system.

Reinke serves at the pleasure of a governor who has less than two years left on his term. If Reinke was given the job to show other counties how to assemble juvenile systems, it's an open question how much time he'll have to do it.

Reinke says other counties can develop programs faster because the state system has evolved. In his new job, Reinke and a Twin Falls-based consultant hired by the Idaho Association of Counties surveyed county officials during a series of training sessions in April, and came up with a list of 10 priorities that echo concerns raised by the Division of Financial Management.

Reinke admits it's a long list, but a double one.

Reinke didn't want to discuss specifics about department changes before completing his assessment. Much of what will be happening will be through the district liaisons finding ways to do more prevention work, he said.

The Legislature is encouraging cooperation at the local level, Reinke said, between schools and counties. Volunteers are also going to be a key.

The department is handling more juveniles than it planned for, Reinke said, and will try to reduce those numbers through managing cases and shifting some cases back to the counties.

"It's going to take all of us working together, the judiciary, the schools, Health and Welfare, a large collaborative effort," he said.

Bi-polar disorder can destroy lives

In the form of a 1990 mental health classic — written by Frederick K. Goodwin and Jamison — there exists for consumption by lay persons and professionals alike a monumental endeavor and the most comprehensive and relevant resource to ever appear covering an illness little understood by the world.

Although Goodwin and Jamison's book is entitled "Manic-Depressive Illness," the authors themselves underscore that the emphasis in their book is on bi-polar disorder, a larger category of mood disorders that encompasses, but is not limited to, manic-depression.

Using Goodwin and Jamison's book as a major resource, here are a couple of facts and effects regarding bi-polar disorder that — because of its insidious nature — should be within the mental repertoire of every lay observer:

PSYCHOLOGY
Joan Larsen

- In classic form, manic-depressive illness produces "exaggerations of normal sadness and fatigue, joy and exuberance, sensuality and sexuality, irritability and rage, energy and creativity," and also bouts of crying between manic and depressive states that vary from individual to individual in intensity, duration, and frequency.

- Bi-polar disorder "occurs in multiple forms and degrees of severity ... and the cardinal features ... are distributed along a spectrum."

- Laymen in particular have difficulty distinguishing bi-polar illness because they view it through "cultural eyes," using teen-agers as an example.

- If adolescents won't out of bed; it's because they're lazy, or, if teens don't do well in school, it's because they are underachievers or unmotivated. Thus the biological causes of negative behaviors often go unrecognized, not viewed as a function of a progressive illness exacting its penalties and increasingly diminishing a person's ability to function.

- "The underdiagnosis of bi-polar disorder is ... a major problem," despite current psychiatric ability to treat the disease, "patients and their physicians often either fail to recognize it or are reluctant to acknowledge it."

- External stress appears to activate or precipitate some initial episodes of illness. However, eventually the illness occurs on a life of its own and will progressively ravage persons throughout their life spans. Intensive stress points may occur in early adolescence, initiating or progressing at such juncture points as puberty, junior high or high school, or initiations into college, marriage, or career.

- Although children — even young children and adolescents — may have bi-polar disorder, "often and tragically the illness goes unrecognized" and thus kids are profoundly disadvantaged in that "early recognition and immediate, vigorous treatment would be expected to reduce subsequent pathology." At the very least, early treatment would reduce the tragic psychological scarring caused by untreated illness.

- Bi-polar disorder in all forms and other mood disorders are killers, although the proliferation of suicide hot lines, prevention centers, and school-based educational programs are well-intentioned efforts to prevent suicide, they tend "to overlook, even to ignore, the presence of an affective disorder, especially manic depressive illness, is the single most important risk factor for actual completed suicide."

- Research involving adolescents highlights the frequent coexistence of drug and alcohol abuse with bi-polar disorder, reaching for such substances to self-treat their illnesses, adolescents adversely affect the course and treatment of bipolar disorder "by altering the same brain mechanisms that regulate mood."

- The psychological manifestations of bipolar disorder "can result in profound discord in family life and other social relationships," and, in many cases, complicating family life, the incidence of bi-polar disorder may occur in several family members.

Southern Idaho is awash in asthma, allergies this time of year

By Joan Bean
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — By the time she turned 3, Dakota Barton had been battling respiratory infections for three years. Then a medical emergency helped shed light on the nature of her problem.

"She was sleeping on the couch and I was in the kitchen, which is just a matter of feet, and she sat up and was totally purple," said Brenda Barton, the little girl's mother. "Actually, I thought she was getting sick to her stomach, but she wasn't breathing."

After a hurried trip to Asthma & Allergy of Idaho, Dakota was treated for

New medication helps asthmatics

By Joan Bean
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — There is a new medication for asthma called Accolate. About half of the people taking this medication experience improvement.

Dr. Richard Henry, a Twin Falls allergist, said his office hasn't switched over to the new medication as much as some doctors who are not allergists. He said he thinks this is because he and Dr. Gregory Kudles, both at Asthma & Allergy of Idaho, see the most severe asthmatics.

If a person is already well controlled with what he's on now, the two doctors don't see a need to switch.

"We have been supplementing with this (new medication) where it seems appropriate," Henry said, "but we haven't been radically altering our medication regimen."

What Henry's office gives for asthma depends on its severity. For mild asthmatics (symptoms once or twice a week), Henry prescribes a beta-agonist inhaler (bronchodilator) like Proventil, with the patient using one or two puffs as needed.

For severe cases and people who are limiting their activities and waking up at night with asthma symptoms, an inhaled steroid (corticosteroid) or Tilade (a bronchodilator) is usually prescribed for younger children.

Henry said most patients who have asthma do have a certain amount of exercise-induced asthma. A smaller number of people don't have asthma any other time except with exercise. These folks pre-medicate by using inhalers before exercise.

"Frequently, if the person has concurrent allergic rhinitis we have found that having them on one of the non-sedating antihistamines also helps their asthma," Henry said. "I stress non-sedating, because the over-the-counter antihistamines actually have a warning that says you don't take it if you have asthma. So with the newer generation of antihistamines, we don't have that as a problem."

what turned out to be an asthma attack. Barton said she chose to take Dakota, now 6, directly to an allergist, because she didn't want to go through weeks of visits to the emergency room. She had done that with her son.

Brandon, now 15, has had asthma since he was 3. He had a massive attack of coughing and wheezing when he was 12.

Eventually, Brandon was referred to an allergist, who looked over the medications he had been prescribed by other doctors, selected the ones he thought would work and increased the dosage. When Brandon's asthma was under control, he was tested for allergies.

Dakota's allergy tests have turned up dogs and dust mites, so far.

Although Brenda Barton has never been tested, her own allergy symptoms might mean that the kids inherited the problem from her.

Dr. Richard Henry, a Twin Falls allergist affiliated with Asthma & Allergy of Idaho, said there is a definite genetic predisposition to asthma. If one or both parents have it, there's a good chance the children will, too.

Henry said asthma is defined as a lung disease with the following characteristics:

- Airway obstruction that is reversible (but not completely so in some patients), either spontaneously or with treatment.
- Airway inflammation
- Increased airway responsiveness to a variety of stimuli

As to what causes asthma, Henry said

Asthma-related deaths on the rise

By Joan Bean
Times-News correspondents

TWIN FALLS — Deaths from asthma are on the increase, and have come under review in the last five years.

Dr. Richard Henry, a Twin Falls allergist, said the increase in deaths was first attributed to medication abuse — using too much of the beta-agonist inhalers, such as Proventil and Ventolin. He said some of this does seem to correlate with the increase in deaths, but there's more to it.

"It seems that, overall, asthma is becoming worse," Henry said. "It's becoming harder to treat, becoming more severe. And they speculate that this is because of increased allergen exposure — to dust mites, cockroach, indoor mold — it's more of an indoor city problem, actually, and the environment is playing a role as well with increased pollution."

In a life-threatening asthma flare, the person feels like he's breathing through a straw. He can't get a full breath of air. It's usually pumping. It is a medical emergency.

Henry said such a person would be given medications to inhale. Or, if the airway is extremely clamped down, shots would help open it.

"Most people don't allow their asthma to get to that point," Henry said. "Sometimes, in the inner city where there's a lot of socio-economic disadvantages, the people choose not to use their medicines, not to make any protective measures, and then, if they get exposed to certain triggers, they can have a life-threatening reaction."

Dakota Barton, 6, and her brother Brandon, 15, have battled allergies all their lives. Medication is providing relief from those things that make them ill.

Oprah's hairdresser shares tricks

Los Angeles Times

Nowhere in pop culture's neighborhood has the phenomenon of celebrity by association achieved more power than chez Oprah Winfrey.

When her cook and trainer shared the secrets of Winfrey's eating-and-exercise routines, their books shot to the top of best-seller lists faster than you could say, "I love her and I want to be just like her." Now her hairdresser, Andre Walker, offers style solutions and hair care tips in the inspirationally illustrated "Andre Talks Hair" (Simon & Schuster). The success of anything Oprah-related could be attributed to the hunger for her adoring fans for any information touched with her life-affirming stardust. But perhaps the books have also done well because Winfrey, a smart, thoughtful woman who can afford the best of everything, surrounds herself with experts.

The first thing you notice about Walker is his voice. You'd let him get his hands in your hair just to keep that soothing purr humming in your ear. His approach to hair care is as gentle as his tone. "Hair isn't as complicated as we like to make it," Walker, 40, said.

"I urge women to try to keep a simple attitude about it and use common sense in making decisions about it."

One of the perverse truisms of hair envy is that many people want what

HEALTH NOTES

Moody blues

If you're feeling down, women, maybe you're having a bad serotonin day. Women seem to manufacture far less of the key mood-regulating brain chemical than men, which could be why they're more likely to suffer from certain types of psychological problems such as depression. Canadian researchers report in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

Heart of communications

If you have an implanted cardiac defibrillator (ICD), there's no reason to have palpitations when you pass a cellular-phone antenna tower. The signals produced by the towers do not appear to adversely affect ICD sensing or pacing functions, says a study by Allegheny University's electrophysiologist Charles Gottlieb. He added that he expected tests on pacemakers would produce similar results.

Bursting cholesterol

A new generation of cholesterol-lowering drugs that are safer and more effective are newly available. But older persons who use them should understand their advantages. The new drugs are called statins. Those on the market include lovastatin, simvastatin, fluvastatin and pravastatin. They all work in the same way, by preventing the liver from transforming fats into cholesterol, the artery-clogging substance that increases the risk of heart diseases.

Arthritis? Just relax

Older people who continue to suffer the pain of arthritis despite taking medication and using other customary treatments should consider relaxation therapy. That recommendation may sound far-out but comes from a committee of experts appointed by the National Institutes of Health. The committee says that relaxation can reduce the pain of osteoarthritis, the most common form of the condition, because it slows the body's metabolic activity and relaxes muscle tension. Advice on relaxation therapy is available from the Arthritis Foundation, telephone 1-408-872-7100.

Live awhile without pain

News that improved medications and lifestyle changes can pay off comes from the National Long-Term Care Surveys, which reports a continuing decline in chronic disability in persons over the age of 65. In 1982, about one older person in every four had a chronic disability, which is defined as a condition that impairs daily activity to some extent. Today, only 21 percent of older persons have such a disability. The improvement is credited not only to better medical therapies, such as improved medicines for high blood pressure, but also changes in lifestyle.

Allergies

research is still going on. But for children, especially under age 6, asthma frequently has an infectious cause. As a child gets older, asthma is more likely due to allergies.

"And they have done some studies that showed just recently where bad allergies — the hay fever symptoms — can progress, if untreated, to asthma," Henry said. "This is something we had seen for years, but we didn't have any studies that actually tied the two together."

Allergies, Henry said, are caused by a form of protein (an allergen) that comes in contact with the nose, eyes and lungs. The person can then experience the release of chemical mediators that cause a major problem, continuing through the first hard frost.

In August, the air carries weed pollens. In late August and early September, sagebrush pollen causes a major problem, continuing through the first hard frost.

Henry said there are many different forms of therapy for allergies, the first one being to avoid what causes it as much as possible. He said most people figure out that if they are allergic to cats and they go to a house with a cat and start having symptoms, they should leave.

You might try a room air filter to decrease the amount of allergen, limit the dog or cat to one area of the house. Or if trees are pollinating right out outside the window, the individual should close the window and turn on the air conditioning.

If it's dust mites, pet castings on pillows and mattress. For severe dust mite allergy patients, Henry recommends removal of stuffed animals, rugs and curtains.

Henry said people who have had allergy symptoms should watch the commercial on TV and go to the drugstore and select over-the-counter medications to try. These would usually be antihistamines and decongestants. If the people continue to have problems after trying these medications, Henry said they generally pay a visit to their physician. Usually these people are given something like a non-sedating steroid spray, maybe eye-drops.

"But when you get into the more severe and severe allergic reactions, the ones where there are asthma symptoms along with it, and the ones where they have frequent sinus infections complicating it and they have frequent ear infections, they go in and see the doctor more often," Henry said.

"And that's when, frequently, we get the referral to see — OK, how allergic are they? What are they allergic to? What can be done to help control it?"

"And that's when, frequently, we get the referral to see — OK, how allergic are they? What are they allergic to? What can be done to help control it?"

Megan VanEaton Kelly, age 12, had chronic ear-infections from the time she was born, but her asthma wasn't diagnosed until she was past 2. Because her dad had asthma as a child, her mother suspected this could be Megan's trouble. So she sought help from an allergist.

"And when he saw her, he told me she was on her way out the door," said Charlene VanEaton. "It took him two months to treat her before he could even test her for the allergies. He had to get her well first."

It took about four years to restore the child to good health.

Because of this experience, when Megan's 4-year-old sister Morgan developed asthma, it was diagnosed in a more timely manner.

Morgan was hospitalized twice in her first year of life with RSV (respiratory syncytial virus), which set off her asthma. After that, any time she had an upper respiratory infection, she also had an asthma attack.

"She was put on allergy shots in October," VanEaton said. Henry explained that a true allergy is "IgE mediated." An allergen and a sensitivity in the person's immune system causes the reaction. IgE is the protein made by the body that is directly involved in the allergic reaction.

Henry said he generally sees allergies peak between ages 6 and 40, and ease up at puberty. In some cases, the allergies go away. But then, it may roar back in the mid-20s and mid-30s.

According to medical literature, allergies tend to burn out when the person gets into his 50s and 60s.

"However, I can tell you in my practice, I've got a small number of people who didn't develop allergies until their 60s," Henry said.

For allergic rhinitis, new medical therapies keep coming. There is a new antihistamine nasal spray called Astelin, and better eye-drops continue to be put on the market. The mainstay continues to be oral antihistamines and decongestants, with more severe patients requiring a nasal steroid spray.

Henry said there are high-dose steroid inhalers that recent studies have shown increase the risk of glaucoma. But without these, some people would be on oral steroids, with their own list of complications. The Food and Drug Administration is reviewing making an oral antihistamine called Sedant off the market. There is now an alternative medicine called Allegra, made by the same company, that does not have the same potential side effects. Sedant had been associated with some deaths from cardiac irregularities.

Henry said there are four types of nasal sprays for allergies. One is just salt water, which flushes out and makes the nose feel better. Then there are decongestant nasal sprays, such as Afrin, which can be used with colds (these are the ones people's noses get addicted to). Then there is what's called Nasal Chrome, a chromolyn nasal spray of limited benefit.

The fourth spray is a nasal steroid spray, like Rhinocort, a powerful anti-inflammatory medication that gets rid of swelling and inflammation and blocks the allergies. Henry said these sprays (if taken in recommended doses) have not been associated with increased systemic absorption or potential steroid side effects in any studies.

However, steroid medications are always under consideration.

essentially the amount of time and money a woman would have to commit to counter effectively her hair's natural tendencies. "I'm not saying you shouldn't make straight hair if that's the look you want, but you need to have the facts and decide if you're willing to do what it takes," he said.

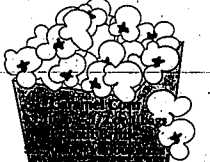

For women who don't have a hairdresser on the payroll, or a pro's skill, he suggests a good cut. His other favorite don't-fool-with-Mother-Nature idea is to flaunt gray hair. "If a woman has gray hair and feels good about it and knows how to carry herself, she can look wonderful," he said. One of the women photographed in the chapter on going naturally gray is Walker's own mother.

Walker's responsibilities have included shopping for winter clothes as well as tending her tresses. "She went through one wardrobe person after another, but no one really worked out," he said. "So I kind of filled in until they found somebody, and they never did. I like fashion, and I know what she likes and what looks good on her."

Walker concentrates on figure-flattering modern styles. "If something isn't tailored to her body, she can look larger than she really is. And people think because she's a black woman, she can wear any color. That isn't true."

He advises women to learn what colors and silhouettes work best for them, to buy early in the season — before sizes and styles have been picked over — and not to hesitate when they find something great. "Go for it. You'll always find somewhere to wear that dress," he said, his soft voice oozing the calm conviction that that's the essence of confident style.

Interesting cosmetics that don't cost a lot

DEAR PAULA: I want to look great at any cost, but I've learned from you and experience that cost-hesitation means when it comes to looking your best. I've been curious about the really inexpensive lines I've seen in drugstores. Only $1.50 for a lipstick? Can they really be any good?

PENNY, SALT LAKE CITY
DEAR PENNY: If you're passed by lines like Nat Robbins' as a Wet 'n' Wild, next time be sure you stop long enough to check out a handful of their extremely interesting products, particularly from Nat Robbins. I am the last person to be a snob about price when it comes to the cosmetics industry, but I was really surprised how much I liked several of these lip products, eyeshadows, and eyeliners. There are good and bad products here just like every other line so even though it's cheap don't buy just for the sake of buying.

Nat Robbins' Mechanical Definer Eyeshadow ($2.95) is a twist-up eyeliner pencil with a thick point. It goes on smoothly and easily with no drag. This is an excellent way to line the eyes. It would not be my choice for applying eyeshadow, but it could be a quick easy way to do touch-ups during the day. This is definitely a unique find for shaping the eyes, and one I will keep in my makeup bag. Cream Eyeshadow ($2.95) is a thick pencil that goes on smooth and creamy and blends out to a soft matte finish. Some of the colors are slightly shiny, and sharpening can be troublesome, but it is a clever option for creating a false eye design and competes with any I've seen at the department store.

Nat Robbins Cream to Powder Shadow Plus Base ($2.03) is just what it says: a cream-to-powder shadow. It goes on very sheer, leaving only a hint of color and a slight amount of shine. Once blended, it doesn't budge. This can create an especially soft look if you have a kink for controlling this kind of eyeshadow, but the shine will displace those with wrinkles.

Nat Robbins' Perfect Liquid Eyeliner ($2.49) isn't exactly perfect, but it is a very good liquid eyeliner that goes on evenly and doesn't chip or flake.

Nat Robbins' ColorMette Lipstick ($1.89) is an excellent soft matte lipstick. It goes on smooth, without feeling thick or heavy, and stays slightly creamy the entire time it's on. It didn't feather or bleed, and it has a strong stain; so the color lasts longer than most. What a find! Even testing Matte Lipstick ($2.95) is a lipstick in the form of a pencil, but it can be used either as a lip liner or a lipstick. It goes on smooth and creamy, with a soft matte finish, and stays that way for quite a while. If you didn't have to sharpen this one, I could see getting used to this. Color Matte Lipliner ($2.36) is a very good standard lip liner. Mechanical Definer Lipliner ($2.76) is an excellent standard lip liner that doesn't have to be sharpened.

Nat Robbins' Everlasting Moisture Rich LipColor SPF 15 ($1.89) is an extremely glossy lipstick with a stain. That helps keep the color around longer, but the greasy look is distracting. Mega Color Lipstick ($1.42) is an OK lipstick that is more glossy than creamy. It does have a stain, which helps keep the color around longer. Lip Lacquer ($2.32) is similar to the lip gloss, but with more pigment concentration. Color Wand Lip Gloss ($2.32) is a standard, extremely emollient gloss with shine.

Nat Robbins' Last Building Mascara ($2.32) doesn't build that much length, but it does build thickness without clumping. It isn't the best mascara I've ever tried, but it ranks up there with some of the good ones. (Nat Robbins also offers an assortment of brushes ($2.50 to $11), but they are all of poor quality and not recommended. The brushes are too stiff, the density too sparse, and the texture too floppy to offer much control or feel nice on the skin.)

It doesn't get any cheaper than this in the world of cosmetics. There are actually a few interesting products to consider in this small selection of products.

Wet 'n' Wild Oil-Free Makeup ($1.44) isn't the least bit oil-free, and the color selection is minimal. It tends to separate and doesn't blend well over the skin. Matte Finish Liquid Makeup ($1.44) isn't all that matte, and it becomes greasy rather quickly, which isn't surprising given the lanolin and oils in the ingredient list.

Wet 'n' Wild Coverall Stick ($1.07) is extremely greasy and easily creases under the eye.

Wet 'n' Wild Pressed Powder ($1.97) is a standard talc-based powder with a smooth, silky feel.

Wet 'n' Wild Silk Finish Shush ($1.89) is somewhat shiny and goes on streaky.

Wet 'n' Wild Eyeshadow Kit ($1.42) would be a consideration if only there were more matte colors, and the same is true for the Single Eyeshadows ($1.42).

Wet 'n' Wild Liquid Lip Colour ($1.27) is just a good standard, emollient gloss. Lip Tricks ($1.13) isn't much of a trick, just one of those mood lipsticks that turn a different color on the lips. It is just a gloss with a hint of color. Lipstick ($0.79) is more of a gloss than a lipstick, with a stain that helps keep the color around. If you are looking for a sheer look, the colors and textures are just fine. Creame Soft Lipliner Crayon ($0.76) is an excellent standard lip liner that goes on slightly dry but stays in place well.

Protein Mascara ($1.95) doesn't build any length or thickness, but it didn't smudge, which makes it fine if you are only looking for a little bit of lash definition. Megalash Mascara ($1.50) is an awful sticky mess that clumps and doesn't build much length or thickness.

A snap to improve health with moderate exercise

Newday

When John Anderson decided to get more exercise a few years back, he stumbled upon a circuit board at Otis Elevator Co. in Farmington, Conn., Anderson belongs to the company's fitness center, which is free to employees, but he says he rarely gets there. He commutes an hour each way from Danbury and he feels he doesn't have the time to hit the gym. But at lunch he often walks a two-mile path around the Otis campus with co-workers. In the office, he gets up and stretches in his work area when he thinks of it. When Anderson gets home in the evening, he might take a walk with his dog.

The 56-year-old says he's dropped about 10 pounds since he started walking, and he feels more energetic.

"But I wish I could feel even better if I did more exercise," he says.

And he might very well, but it's not clear whether more is always better. That's why the fitness establishment has embraced the golden mean of moderation big-time, with worksite programs aimed at making fitness happen in small bursts and a growing number of books aimed at helping time-challenged Americans squeeze exercise into their demanding days.

Last summer's landmark "Surgeon General's Report on Physical Activity and Health" added the country's leading physician's stamp of approval to the moderation trend. The report noted that while a solid, daily half-hour of moderate activity—walking, for example—has been shown to improve cardiovascular health, reduce stress and help in many other ways, shorter sessions that add up during the day may offer most of the same benefits. Thus, the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and the American College of Sports Medicine recommend adults "accumulate" 30 minutes or more of moderate activity a day.

But questions remain about getting one's workout in quick hits. No one is going to argue with the idea that a little exercise is better than none at all. A quarter of U.S. adults are in the "none at all" category and 60 percent are not doing nearly enough. Yet, some research suggests that more exercise is better. In the Jan. 27 issue of Archives of Internal Medicine, a study of male runners found that those who ran 40 miles or more each week had a 30 percent lower risk of coronary heart disease than those who ran less than 10 miles a week. (An editorial in the same issue warned that long-distance running also can be a recipe for injury and is certain not for everyone.)

It's also possible to overstate the impact of mild activity of short duration, according to Patricia Daly, an assistant director for corporate fitness at Marlborough, Conn.-based Corporate Health & Fitness, which provides employee health and exercise programs to 50 businesses in the northeast. Those short blasts can be great for some, she says, but people should stay realistic.

"It's not going to make you look like Arnold," she says.

Estate Shape

...straight talk on wills, trusts, probate & estate planning

EENEY, MEENEY, MINEY, MOE

QUESTION: I'm not sure which of my three children I want to name in my will as executor of my estate. I don't want to hurt anyone's feelings. Can I name all three?

Yes! But it's not advisable. Too many cooks can spoil the broth. Settling an estate under Idaho's streamlined probate system rarely requires more than one executor.

The decision of who to name as executor and whether to designate more than one person has several factors: make-up of estate assets, candidate strengths, and family dynamics.

An executor with good judgment and the ability to guide professionals can usually manage all types of estate assets. The real challenge is dealing with contentious heirs.

People skills are often the saving grace of a successful executor. Never name two executors simply to balance simmering feuds between warring factions.

Oftentimes a competent non-family member can cut to the chase and settle affairs quicker than a besieged family member.

CROHN'S DISEASE

is a serious inflammatory bowel disease that invades all layers of the intestinal walls. The disease may develop in both the small and large intestine. It is estimated that as many as 1,000,000 Americans are afflicted with Crohn's. Both males and females are affected equally and most cases are diagnosed before the age of 30.

controlling Crohn's, but at this time there is no cure for the disease. It's important for the patient to maintain good nutrition and health, with a balanced diet, adequate exercise and a positive, upbeat attitude.

SYMPTOMS

Abdominal pain and diarrhea associated with fever and rectal bleeding are some of the common symptoms as well as joint pain, lack of appetite, and weight loss. Other symptoms may include sores in the anal area, fissures (cracks) fistulas (abnormal openings from bowel-to-skin surface near the anus), and abscesses.

CAUSES

After many years of intense research, the cause of Crohn's disease still remains unknown.

TREATMENT

Several drugs are helpful in

COMPLICATIONS

The most common complication of this disease is obstruction of the intestine. The disease tends to thicken the bowel wall with swelling and fibrous scar tissue, narrowing the passage. The disease also may cause deep ulcer tracts - or fistulas. Malnutrition may also occur in some patients.

SUMMARY

With comprehensive medical treatment, the disease can be managed. For a few patients, the course of the disease can be more difficult and complicated, requiring intensive testing and therapy. Surgery sometimes is required. In all cases, follow-up care is essential to treat the disease and, hopefully, prevent or deal with complications that may arise.

HEALTH & FASHION

Is sanity a gender thing?

I believe that, in general, women are saner than men.

With men, males, there would be no sport as professional lawn mower racing.

Also, there would be a 100 percent decline in the annual number of deaths related to efforts to shoot beer cans off heads.

If women were in charge of all the world's nations there would be virtually no military conflicts, and when there WAS a military conflict, everybody involved would feel just awful and there would soon be a high level exchange of thoughtful notes written on greeting cards with flowers on the front, followed by a Peace Luncheon.

I sincerely believe that women are wiser than men, with the exception of one key area, and that area is: clothing sizes. In this particular area, women are insane.

When a man shops for clothes, his primary objective — follow me closely here — is to purchase clothes that fit. On this particular issue, a man will try on a pair of pants, and if those pants are too small, he'll try on a larger pair, and when he finds a pair that fits, he buys them. Most men do not spend a lot of time fretting about the size of their pants. Many men wear jeans with the size printed right on the back label, so that if you're standing behind a man in a supermarket line, you can read his waist and inseam size. A man would have, say, a 32-inch waist and a 30-inch inseam, and his label will proudly display this information, which is basically the same thing as the size tag on your clothing. My butt is the size of a Federal Express truck!"

The situation is very different with women. When a woman shops for clothes, her primary objective is not to find clothes that fit her particular body. She would like for that to be the case, but her primary objective is to purchase clothes that are the size she wears when she was 19 years old. This would be some arbitrary number such as "8" or "10." Does she wear "8" or "10" or "12"? That question has baffled scientists for centuries. All I know is that if a woman was a size 8 at age 19, she wants to be a size 8 now. If a size 8 outfit does not fit her, she will not move on to a larger size. She can't! Her size is 8, dammit! So she will keep trying on size 8 items, and unless they start fitting her, she will become extremely unhappy. She may take this unhappiness out on the man, because if he's writing patiently in the mall, perhaps browsing in the Sharper Image store, trying to think of how he could justify purchasing a pair of night-vision binoculars.

"Hi!" he'll say, when his wife finds him. "You know how sometimes the electricity goes out at night and..."

"Am I fat?" she'll ask, cutting him off.

"This is a very bad situation for the man, because if he answers 'yes,' she'll be angry because he's saying that she's fat, and if he answers 'no,' she'll be angry because he's obviously saying none of the size 8's fit her. There is no escape for the husband. I think a lot of unexplained disappearances occur because guys will see their wives unsuccessfully trying on outfits, and they realize their lives will be easier if, before their wives come out and demand to know where they're fat, the guys just run off and join a UFO cult.

The other day my wife, Michelle, was in a terrific mood, and you know why? Because she had successfully put on a size 6 outfit. She said this made her feel wonderful. She said, and this is a direct quote: "I wouldn't care if these pants were this big (here she held her arms far apart) as long as they have a '6' on them."

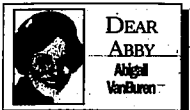

Memorial Day reminds us that freedom is not free

DEAR ABBY: I do not wish for my name to appear in your column as a contributor. I am only eager to impress on people what they owe the servicemen and women who have fought and died over the years protecting the freedom we enjoy. Not only the men and women who have died, but their wives, husbands, sweethearts, parents and children all paid a tremendous price for the freedom that many — especially the younger generation — take for granted.

We, whose loved ones survived these horrible holocausts of history, realize only too fully that "There but for the grace of God..."

We, whose loved ones survived these horrible holocausts of history, realize only too fully that "There but for the grace of God..."

While the memories of our fallen loved ones will always remain with the men and women who came back, they at least came back. For that they are forever grateful. They never forget their buddies who weren't so lucky. May the rest of the world also remember. I'm enclosing a poem that you may want to share with your readers, Abby.

DEAR ABBY

paid for the freedom many take for granted. Readers, today — Memorial Day — please take a moment to reflect on this poem, which was written as a tribute to our military who gave their ALL: FREEDOM IS NOT FREE

I watched the flag pass by one day.
It fluttered in the breeze.
A young Marine saluted it, and then
He stood at ease.
I looked at him in uniform
So young, so tall, so proud,
With hair our square and eyes alert.
He'd stand out in any crowd.
I thought how many men like him
Had fallen through the years.
How many died on foreign soil?
How many mothers' tears?
How many pilots' planes shot down?
How many died at sea?
How many foxholes were soldiers'

graves?
No, freedom is not free.
I heard the sound of taps one night.
When everything was still.
I listened to the bugler play.
And felt a sudden chill.
I wondered just how many times
That taps had meant "Amens."
When a flag had draped a coffin
Of a brother or a friend.
I thought of all the children,
Of the mothers and the wives,
Of fathers, sons and husbands
With interrupted lives.
I thought about a graveyard
At the bottom of the sea
Of unmarked graves in Arlington.
No, freedom is not free.

HUMOR
Dave Barry

Here's how you could get rich: Start a women's clothing store called "Size 2," in which all garments, including those that were originally intended to be restarored evenings, had labels with the words "Size 2." I bet you'd sell clothes like crazy. You'd probably get rich, and you could retire, maybe take up some philanthropic activity to benefit humanity. I'm thinking here of professional lawn mower racing.

Frost wins Colonial; Woods falters

The Associated Press

FORT WORTH, Texas — It was sudden, unexpected and a bit ugly, but Tiger Woods demonstrated Sunday that even superstars are not immune to the cruelties of golf.

The 21-year-old phenom struggled over the final 10 holes and allowed David Frost to overcome a three-shot deficit and escape with an unlikely victory in the MasterCard Colonial.

Frost quickly dedicated the championship to Ben Hogan, a five-time Colonial winner who gave the historic old Colonial course its nickname: “Hogan's Alley.”

“Ben Hogan really has been a big inspiration to my game since I came to America,” explained Frost, a native South African who makes his home in nearby Dallas.

“It was nice to win at home.” Frost, collecting his 10th PGA Tour victory, closed with a 3-under-par 67 and a winning total of 255, 15 under par, putting a decisive end to Woods' bid for a rare PGA “triple.”

After victories at the Masters last month and the Byron Nelson Classic last week, Woods saw his quest for a third consecutive triumph almost disappear in a watery gauge on No. 9 and brutally die with a double-bogey at 17.

David Frost of Dallas watches his drive from third tee during Sunday's Colonial in Fort Worth. He shot a 67 to win the tournament by 3 strokes.

“I didn't play well all day,” Woods said after stumbling in with a 2-over 72 that left him at 268, three shots off the lead and tied for fourth with Pan Goydos (71). “I was hitting a lot of long iron shots, over the green, and then I finally hit one short on 9 where there was water.”

Undhjem, Thompson meet in Latham final

By Damen Clow
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Kylie Peterson played the first six holes with a runny nose. Virginia Undhjem raced around Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course in a covered, heated cart.

At the end of a cold, rainy and windy second round of the Latham Invitational, after Peterson chipped to within inches of the cup from 20 yards out on No. 17, Undhjem lined up her shot, just inside of where Peterson's had rested moments before, and chipped in for eagle.

“It's hard to beat these kids,” Undhjem said of the rest of her semifinal foursome — three collegiate golfers: Peterson (Montana State), Sara Thompson (University of Idaho) and Sara Barron (at Mesa State next fall).

Undhjem took the semifinal match despite a gusty back nine from Peterson, and will face Thompson in today's championship (light final — “I know I had to make a tee on the last hole,” Undhjem said. “I tied the hole, I'd win the match. Then she puts that itty-bitty putt up there.”)

IN BRIEF

Teenager dies in middle of boxing fundraiser

ISSAQUAH, Wash. — A teenager died in a performance-enhancing boxing match in a home near this Seattle suburb, King County police said.

Joseph Bolger, 17, and an 18-year-old opponent both fell to the mat of the makeshift ring during the match late Saturday night, police spokeswoman Joanne Ellidge said.

Bolger got up, crossed the ring, called collapsed and could not be revived.

Ellidge said the bout was one of several boxing matches that were featured at a fund-raising event for the junior class at Eastlake High School. Some 60 to 80 teenagers were in attendance.

The boxing matches and the rest of the fund-raising event were not sanctioned by the school, but there was adult supervision, all boxers wore protective gear and there was no evidence of alcohol consumption, police said.

Slaney lashes out at track officials, vows innocence

EUGENE, Ore. — Mary Slaney says the nightmare of being suspected of using a performance-enhancing substance is the most painful thing she ever has endured in her injury-plagued running career.

In a tearful interview aired by CBS during the network's telecast of Sunday's Prefontaine Classic, Slaney repeated her denial that she had taken performance-enhancing substances.

“I have never taken anything that's banned,” she said. “That's absurd. I haven't done what I've been accused of doing.”

There also have been reports that 400-meter hurdler Sandra Farmer-Patrick tested positive for excessive testosterone.

ALL WET

Indy driver Stephan Gregoire's crew members try to keep the car dry before Monday's Indianapolis 500 race. Officials later postponed the race until today.

Weather delays Indy 500 running until today; crowds likely will be thinner

The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — In the old days, fans basked in the sun, drank beer and watched drivers like Al Unser Jr., Bobby Rahal and Michael Andretti battle it out at the Indianapolis 500.

On Sunday, fans huddled under umbrellas and overhangs in a downpour, waiting for Billy Boat, Jack “The Racing Dentist” Miller and the other unknowns to take the track.

They didn't and the Indy 500 was postponed a day — fitting for a race that's had problems all month.

Speedway officials will try to run the race again Monday, but a delay was the last thing the Indy 500 needed. It's already lost big-name drivers from Championship Auto Racing Teams.

Now, Arie Luyendyk is the most recognizable name at Indy.

The cars aren't going as fast, either. Speeds are down 20 mph because of new engines, whose reliability is still in question.

“Indy Lite” has turned off some fans, and crowds were down even before it rained.

“Every year it's gotten worse,” Eli Levi said, looking around at the empty seats in the stands and the vast patches of grass in an infield that's usually packed.

And the crowd isn't likely to grow magically overnight. If anything, it's going to be even smaller Monday. Many fans coped from out of town, making it hard for them to stick around and get home in time for work Tuesday.

Bridgestone/Firestone brought in 500 guests for the race, and only half are staying the extra day, said Trevor Hoskins, a senior vice president.

ABC Sports will broadcast the entire race today, keeping the same schedule it had planned for Sunday. But there will be some stiff competition. At 1:30 p.m. MDT today, NBC will air Game Four of the Eastern Conference final series between the Chicago Bulls and the Miami Heat.

Belle faces old mates in Chicago

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — A career subject still draws shrugs and headshakes and rolled eyes in the Cleveland Indians' clubhouse. In the days before the first meeting with their ex-teammate, it was as if Albert Belle never left.

“The White Sox? I don't care about the White Sox. I care about the Indians,” Cleveland designated hitter Julio Franco said today's anticipated (by some) meeting with Belle and the White Sox at Chicago. “I want to talk about the Indians. I mean, who cares about the White Sox?”

→ Sunday results — D3

Oh, surely Jim Thome has been looking forward to this two-game series against Belle, who left the Indians to sign a $55 million, five-year contract with Chicago, the team that is expected to battle Cleveland for the AL Central title. Thome batted third in front of Belle and scored on many of the 242 home runs the slugger hit for the Indians. “Because of the way he left, maybe a lot of people are bitter, but they shouldn't be,” Thome said. “It's over. It's in the past. We just need to concentrate on us.”

Baseball fans in Cleveland have been looking forward to this series for months. Thousands of them are expected to travel to Chicago and boo Belle, the slugger they used to cheer no matter what.

Orel Hershey, today's starter, wouldn't reveal how he's going to pitch Belle. He did offer a theory on why Belle doesn't seem to be a rallying point in the Indians' clubhouse: Four players in Cleveland's starting lineup — Marquis Grissom, David Justice, Matt Williams and Tony Fernandez — never played with Belle. “If Kenny Lofton was still around, I'm sure he'd be animated about it,” Hershey said. “He was getting fired-up for it even in spring training.”

Buzzer-beater ties West series

Johnson the hero again with a 3-pointer; Utah coach steamed

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — The weekend of Eddie Johnson is over, and the Houston Rockets came out of it with a renewed shot at an NBA championship.

Johnson was the hero for Houston once again Sunday, barely beating the final buzzer with a high-arching 3-point shot from 25 feet that gave the Rockets a dramatic 95-92 victory over the Utah Jazz to tie the Western Conference finals at two games apiece.

The 3-pointer was the only basket of the second half for Johnson, the hero of Game 3 when he came off the bench to score 31 points. Sunday's game-winning shot left his fingertips with just 0.2 seconds left, and he high-stepped to the other end of the court and was mobbed by his teammates after it swished through.

“How can you go off and doubleteam the ball and leave him open?”

— Utah coach Jerry Sloan, on his team's defense in the final seconds

“When it left my hand it felt good,” Johnson said. “I had a great look at the basket and my form was right there. So I knew I had a chance, and maybe halfway through the shot I said: ‘That baby's got a chance to go in.’ After that it's blurry.”

Utah coach Jerry Sloan was mad at his team for leaving Johnson open.

“I hope we now know who Eddie Johnson is,” Sloan said. “How can you go off and doubleteam the ball and leave him open? I don't understand how you teach a guy shooting the ball that well all alone. It was a tough shot, but he makes them.”

Johnson was 2-for-5 Sunday for seven points, a far cry from his 12-for-17 effort in Game 3.

“It's amazing. It's definitely the best situation I've been in and the biggest shot I've ever hit.”

Game 5 is Tuesday night in Salt Lake City, where the Jazz have won 21 straight games. They'll try to grab the momentum back from the Rockets, who are trying to come back from an 0-2 deficit for the third time in their history. The first two times they did it — 1994 and 1995 — they won NBA championships.

Flyers knock off Rangers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — First it was Mario Lemieux. Now Mark Messier has pointed Eric Lindros toward the Stanley Cup.

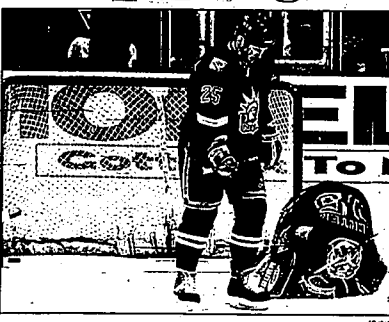

Lemieux told Lindros it was his turn after Lindros' Philadelphia Flyers beat Lemieux's Pittsburgh Penguins in the first round of the playoffs.

After the Flyers finished off Messier and the New York Rangers with a 4-2 victory Sunday, putting Philadelphia in the Cup finals for the first time in 10 years, Messier gave the 24-year-old Flyers captain a succinct instruction. "He just said, 'Go get it,'" Lindros said.

That makes two of hockey's greatest players who have advanced all the way to the game's next dominant player.

Burdened with high expectations since the Flyers traded six players, two drafted and $15 million to get him in 1992 before he'd even played as a pro, Lindros is within four wins of delivering the Cup team owner Ed Snider promised when he made the deal.

Lindros capped a marvelous series by scoring Philadelphia's first goal and assisting on Rod Brind'Amour's first, which put the Flyers ahead for good late in the first period.

New York Rangers goalie Mike Richter stamps on the ice, with teammate Alexander Karpovets nearby, after giving up a goal to Philadelphia's Ron Brind'Amour in the first period Sunday in Philadelphia.

Lindros recorded his first playoff hat trick in Game 3, scored the game-winner in Game 4 with seven seconds left to play and had three assists in the series opener. "He had a great series, right from the first game on," Messier said. "He was a factor everywhere." In contrast, Messier, Lindros' boyhood idol, was limited to a goal and three assists. Messier, 36, had an assist Sunday, but all his other points came in the Rangers' lone win, a 5-4 victory in Game 2.

field by one stroke after three rounds of back-and-forth. Frost's steady climb up the leader board.

But Frost birdied Nos. 6 and 7 with 3-fores to go 15-under and a deadly 18 on the closing hole.

Like Woods, he finished with a 72 and tied for second with Brad footer for birdie at 17 and was in the clubhouse when Woods and Ogren collapsed.

"I putted like a pig on the back nine," said Ogren, who shot him- self in the foot with three bogeys and a deadly 18 on the closing hole.

Like Woods, he finished with a 72 and tied for second with Brad Faxon at 13 under, two back. Faxon shot a closing 68, but did so with birdies at three of the four final holes and was never in contention.

Ogren said the huge, noisy Woods gallery didn't faze him. "Playing with Tiger was a thrill," he said.

"I've made three eagles in the last two weeks. Last year, I made three eagles the entire year," she continued.

In the men's championship flight Sunday, Tracy Frank defeated Mike Roy, 6-5, Preston Harer defeated Bert Elliott 4-3, Brex Ruyter defeated Terry Spenceman one up and Mickey Dugger defeated Jason Hunziker one up.

Rupert franks off with Dugger while Frank meets Harer in the semifinals today at 8:57 on No. 1. Thompson and Undheim tee off for the ladies' championship final at the same time on No. 10.

Peterson won the eighth and ninth holes to pull within one hole after the front nine, then birdied 12 and 13 to even the match. Undheim then took the 14th and 16th holes before eagle sealed the match at three holes with one to play.

Thompson won her semifinal match with Barron with a six-hole lead after No. 13.

"None of us played great today," Thompson said of the championship foursome. "I putted really well and that's what saved me. You really need a short game here."

It was the first time Thompson and Barron had competed with each other since their days in high school.

"Yesterday I wasn't nervous," Barron said. "But today, playing my friend, I was nervous. We'd always played together."

points for Houston, while Charles Barkley had 20 points and 16 rebounds and Clyde Drexler scored 16 points.

John Stockton and Karl Malone scored 22 points apiece for Utah, but the similarities between their performances ended their Stockton shot 9-of-12 from the field and had eight assists, while Malone was just 10-of-28 and made several mistakes over the final few minutes.

Malone, after missing four of his first five shots of the fourth quarter and committing two turnovers on his two previous touches, hit a turnaround jumper over Barkley to tie the game at 92 with 1:08 left.

Utah coach Greg Foster, who had been dominated all game by Olajuwon, then made his first good defensive play when he knocked the ball out of Olajuwon's hands.

Utah recovered the loose ball and ran the shot clock down, but Stockton missed an open 16-foot jumper and Foster missed two. Malone grabbed the offensive rebound and nearly threw it away again before the Jazz reset and sought to take the right corner for a 3-point attempt by Russell.

The shot was long, and Barkley rebounded with 6.7 seconds left to set up the final play.

Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said the final play was designed to go to Olajuwon, who had asked to make the shot in the timeout huddle preceding the play. "But Utah wasn't going to allow that because it's an automatic layup or two free throws," Johnson said.

Young's slam beats Expos, Bonilla powers Marlins past Padres

MONTREAL (AP) — Kevin Young's first career grand slam hit led to a five-run eighth inning that lifted Pittsburgh to an 8-6 victory over Montreal on Sunday.

With the Pirates trailing 4-3, Adrian Brown led off the eighth with an infield single off Omar Delgado (1-1), went to second on a groundout to a grounder and took third on a wild pitch.

Mark Johnson walked and Lee Smith relieved. Joe Randa's RBI single tied the game 4-4, and Jason Kendall was hit by a pitch. Young then hit Smith's first pitch over the wall in center for an 8-4 lead.

Marc Wilkins (4-0) pitched one inning for the win. Rich Loiselle pitched a perfect ninth for his fourth straight.

Mike Lansing hit two homers for Montreal, including a seventh-inning shot off Wilkins that put the Expos ahead 4-3.

Florida's John Werner safely steals second base as San Diego's Terry Shampert bobbles the ball during the first inning of Sunday's game in San Diego.

Reds 7, Cubs 5

CINCINNATI — Bret Boone's sacrifice fly snapped a tie and highlighted a four-run fifth inning that rallied the Cincinnati Reds to a victory over the Chicago Cubs.

The Cubs hit three homers off Pete Schalk (4-1) in the first two innings, but Scott Servais and Jose Hernandez in the fourth for a 4-2 lead. The Reds put together six runs in the seventh, including one off the glove of reliever Kent Bottenfield (1-1) — for the go-ahead run.

The Cubs put runners on second and third with one out in the ninth, but Jeff Shaw got the final two outs for his sixth save.

The Reds won two of three in the series between the major league's worst teams. Cincinnati has the worst record in the majors at 16-31, and trails Chicago (17-30) by one game.

Boone, who hadn't won since May 4 and had a 5.44 ERA in his last three starts, allowed five runs and nine hits in eight innings. Burks, Weiss and Andres Galaraga each drove in two runs for Colorado, while Burks and Darrin Biehn had three hits apiece.

Rocks 8, Astros 5

DENVER — Ellis Burks and Walt Weiss homered as the Colorado Rockies overcame an early 4-0 deficit to beat the Houston Astros.

Roger Bailey (5-4) survived a shaky start to end a personal three-game losing streak. Mike Munoz retired pinch-hitter Pat Lisitsch with the bases loaded in the ninth for his first save.

Bailey, who hadn't won since May 4 and had a 5.44 ERA in his last three starts, allowed five runs and nine hits in eight innings. Burks, Weiss and Andres Galaraga each drove in two runs for Colorado, while Burks and Darrin Biehn had three hits apiece.

Dodgers 2, Braves 0

LOS ANGELES — Imanuel Valdes allowed just three hits in seven innings and Billy Ashley's RBI single in the seventh broke a scoreless tie as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat Denny Neagle and the Atlanta Braves.

Neagle (7-1) was bidding to become the fourth pitcher in Braves history to start a season with eight straight wins.

The win was the second for the Dodgers after they had lost six in a row.

Eric Karros drew a walk to start the seventh and took third on Todd Zeile's hit-and-run single to right field. Ashley then singled to left to drive in Karros.

Valdes (3-5) walked none and struck out six.

He has given up fewer than two earned runs in seven of his 10 starts this season. Darren Hall retired the Braves in order in the eighth and Scott Worrel pitched a hideous ninth to earn his 13th save.

Marlins 6, Padres 2

SAN DIEGO — Benji Bonilla drove in three runs, including two on just his second home of the season, and Kevin Brown beat San Diego for the second time in three starts as the Florida Marlins beat the Padres.

Bonilla hit a two-run homer to right on the first pitch he saw from Pete Smith with two outs in the eighth. Edgar Renteria was aboard on a leadoff single, which extended his hitting streak to 10 games.

Bonilla went 2-for-4 to extend his hitting streak to seven games. He is 12 of 50 in 100 at-bats in his first five games against the Padres this year.

Brown (5-2), a 21-year veteran over the Padres on April 29, allowed 12 hits, struck out eight and walked none in his second complete game of the season.

Cardinals 9, Giants 3

SAN FRANCISCO — Todd Stottlemyre earned his 100th career victory, striking out eight in seven strong innings as the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the San Francisco Giants.

Stottlemyre (3-3) is 100-91 in 10 seasons with Toronto, Oakland and St. Louis. He allowed three runs and six hits, and struck out the side in the second and third innings.

Willie McGee, Ray Lankford, Royce Clayton and Jeff Blashoff hit home runs for the Cardinals, who were successful in six of their seven steal attempts. St. Louis won consecutive games for the first time since early May.

William Vandlandingham (2-3) struck out seven of his 10 starts this season. Darren Hall retired the Braves in order in the eighth and Scott Worrel pitched a hideous ninth to earn his 13th save.

VIRGINIA WATER, England — Nick Faldo three-putted the 17th, took two shots to get out of a fairway bunker at the 18th and remained two strokes behind Ian Woosnam in the Volvo PGA Championship Sunday.

Faldo salvaged his round by rolling in a 45-foot putt at the final hole.

STARKVILLE, Miss. — The Mississippi Bulldogs (45-19) set up a regional title showdown against the Huskies today with a 7-5 win over Washington (46-19) on Sunday night.

Hank Thoms (4-0) struck out seven in 4 2/3 innings of shutout relief to give Mississippi State its second win of the day. Earlier, the Bulldogs had a 1-0 win over Georgia Tech.

Against the Huskies, the Bulldogs scored all their runs in the second inning, highlighted by Travis Chapman's two-run double and Adam Pritt's two-run homer.

Eastwood weathers storm in Bell Atlantic

MALVERN, Pa. — While the rain poured down Sunday morning, Bruce Eastwood sat in the locker room at Chester Valley Golf Club, trying to stay mentally prepared to contend for his first championship on the Senior PGA Tour.

At 1:46 p.m. tour officials at Malvern canceled play for the day because of the rain and awarded the victory and $150,000 first-prize check to Eastwood, the leader after two rounds at 5-under-par 135.

Rain began as the first group teed off at 7:50 a.m. and kept falling. More than an inch had soaked the course when play was called at 1:50, before 12 players, including Eastwood, had begun.

Daly who made the tour after an angry outburst in March but is entered in next weekend's Memorial Tournament, was quiet but cordial while playing before 750 invitation-only spectators on an $18 million private course about 75 miles south of Pittsburgh.

Johnson cruises to 200 victory in tuneup

EUGENE, Ore. — In a routine tuneup for his million-dollar match race, Michael Johnson cruised to a 200-meter victory at the Prefontaine Classic track and field meet Sunday in 20.17 seconds.

Johnson, the meet's unchallenged headliner after Carl Lewis withdrew at the last minute, earned a starting berth in the 200-meter race on Saturday.

Super Bowl MVP criticizes Packers

MILWAUKEE — A letter to news media Sunday from Super Bowl MVP Desmond Howard criticizes the Green Bay Packers for failing to invite him to a White House ceremony honoring the NFL champions.

Howard says the Packers have informed him to expect his Super Bowl ring in the mail.

The slight but speedy Howard, a former Heisman trophy winner, joined the Packers as a free agent last weekend. Michael Johnson won the 200 meters at the Prefontaine Classic track and field meet Sunday in 20.17 seconds.

Witt gets 1st loss Tigers; Brewers crush Sox

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit handed Bobby Witt his first loss of the year after seven wins as Bobby Higginson hit a grand slam to help the Tigers defeat the Texas Rangers 13-5 Sunday.

Witt was bidding to become the fourth pitcher in the majors to start the season at 8-0, joining Roger Clemens, Jimmy Key and Pedro Martinez.

Instead, Witt lasted just 4 1/3 innings and gave up six runs on eight hits. Five of the hits were for extra bases, including two doubles by Melvin Nieves.

Higginson, who tied a career high with five RBIs, hit his second career grand slam and had four hits. Bob Hamelin homered and tied his career high with three hits for Detroit, which rallied from an early 3-0 deficit.

Warren Newson had the second two-homer game of his career for Texas. Will Clark also hit a home run for the Rangers, who have lost three of their last four.

Blue Jays 4, Angels 3, 11 Innings

TORONTO — Benito Santiago drew a bases-loaded walk with no outs in the bottom of the 11th inning, and the Toronto Blue Jays took advantage of a misplayed fly ball to beat the Anaheim Angels.

The Angels, who had won four in a row, tied the game at 3 with two outs in the ninth on reliever Mike Timlin's ball. But the Blue Jays came back for their third win this season on a bases-loaded walk in their final at-bat.

Ed Sprague became the Toronto 11th with a routine fly ball to right-center. Center fielder Jim Edmonds and right fielder Tim Salmon both called for it, but neither made a play and the ball bounced between them for a triple.

Carlos Delgado and Ruben Sierra were intentionally walked, and Santiago drew a walk on a 3-2 pitch from Rich DeLucia (4-2). Timlin (1-0) wound up with the win.

Royals 4, Mariners 3, 11 Innings

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Chili Davis led off the 11th inning with a home run, and the Kansas City Royals beat the Seattle Mariners despite Ken Griffey Jr.'s record-tying 22nd home run.

Davis hit an 0-1 pitch from reliever Bobby Ayala (3-2) over the right-field fence. It was the second time this season that Davis has won a game with a leadoff homer in extra innings.

Albert Belle extended his hitting streak to 20 games with a three-run homer in the first inning for the White Sox, who made five errors.

Jaha homered in the sixth, his 11th of the season. Cirillo hit a two-run double in the second and a two-run single in the fourth.

Milwaukee manager Phil Garner and infielder Jeff Huson were ejected in the third after Huson was called out on strikes. In the Milwaukee fourth, both benches emptied as bullpen manager Genard Williams, who was on second base, and Chicago starter James Baldwin started yelling at each other behind the pitching mound. No punches were thrown.

Brewers 11, White Sox 7

CHICAGO — John Jaha hit a two-run homer and Jeff Cirillo had four hits and four RBIs, leading the Milwaukee Brewers to a victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Jones wins 2nd straight Coming

CORNING, N.Y. (AP) — Rosie Jones waited for the last day to perform the improbable and the final hole for what appeared impossible in winning her second straight LPGA Corning Classic.

Jones shot a 7-under-par 65 Sunday and overcame a four-stroke deficit in the final round before nailing a 50-foot putt on the first playoff hole to defeat Tammie Green, becoming the first player to win twice at Corning in the tournament's 19-year history.

"It was just too cool that it went in," Jones said after raising her arms and jumping into the air. "I've never made putts like that to win. At about 5 or 6 feet, I knew it was good."

Jones made nine birdies and just two bogey Sunday to finish at 11-under 277, tied with Green, who had a two-shot lead going into the final round. The 65 was the lowest score during the $500,000 tournament and Jones' best this season.

Green shot a 69 but made a key bogey on No. 13 and was unable to make a birdie in the rest of the way. Green missed four birdie putts within 20 feet over the final five holes before her final putt slid right.

"Rosie is known to make putts like that," said Green, looking for her second victory this month. "I hit it in there close, and that happens. When somebody does something like (Jones), you wonder if they're blessed."

Helen Dobson shot a 67 and finished one shot out of the playoff at 278, her best performance

Rosie Jones sinks her birdie putt on the first playoff hole to win the LPGA Corning Classic Sunday in Corning, since 1993.

Jones nailed an 8-foot putt for birdie on No. 16 to pull into a tie with Green and Dobson at 11-under. Dobson fell a shot back moments later when she missed a 2-footer on 15, leaving Green and Jones in a two-way race.

Jones won $97,500 and moved from 62nd to seventh on the LPGA money list and surpassed $3 million in career earnings. She also improved her playoff record to 3-3.

Sorenstam earns skins title; Davies rebounds

FRISCO, Texas (AP) — First-day leader Annika Sorenstam converted a 6-foot putt worth $140,000 on the 14th hole and finished with $220,000 to win the title of the LPGA Skins Game Sunday.

Sorenstam, who won $80,000 during Saturday's opening nine holes, lipped out from seven feet at the 13th hole, a putt that would have been worth $100,000.

But she birdied the par-3 14th, giving her eight skins in the two-day made-for-TV event.

Defending champion Laura Davies, shut out over the opening nine holes, made a 12-footer worth $140,000 and five skins on Sunday's opening hole, the 10th. The $140,000 gave Davies second place and boosted her winnings to $620,000 in three Skins Game appearances, the most over the seven-year history of the event.

Skins Game rookie Karrie

Webb pocketed $100,000, including a skin worth $40,000 at the first extra hole. Dottie Pepper, who also failed to win money Saturday, finished with $80,000, but made it 7-6 and Robert Alonzo was intentionally walked to lead the bases.

Webb, who started the day with $20,000, converted a 4-foot par putt worth $40,000 at the 16th.

When there was no winner at the 18th hole after Davies and Webb made birdies, play continued to determine the skin and Webb won it with an 18-foot birdie putt at the first extra hole.

Pepper tapped in a 3-foot birdie putt at No. 15 for a $40,000 skin, but made a 4-footer for birdie at the par-3 17th for another $40,000.

The normally conservative Sorenstam played more aggressively under the go-for-broke Skins Game format.
