Jerome demolition derby lands on scrap heap

By Mark Helz
Times-News writer

JEROME - Demolition derbies don't happen by accident, so the Jerome County Fair Board has scrapped plans for its July 27 demolition derby event. Fair officials didn't have enough time to meet safety requirements and recruit drivers. So the fair board voted unanimously this week to take the derby off the schedule for the Jerome County Fair, which runs from July 26 to Aug. 2.

The logistics of the demolition derby left even Fairgrounds Manager Rob Lundgren a bit blindsided.

"I thought it was simply a matter of pulling the glass out and pulling some loose chrome off," Lundgren said Wednesday.

What he discovered is that cars and drivers must meet a long list of requirements to participate in a sanctioned derby.

The Jerome derby might have been salvaged, if prospective drivers had enough time to shop for and prepare junker cars. But since most of the Magic Valley's hardcore derby drivers are already booked to smash it up at the Twin Falls County Fair, there weren't enough would-be participants who could prepare for Jerome's fair on short notice, Lundgren said.

"We could not find enough people who wanted to modify their car to meet the liability requirements," he said.

PIGGIN' OUT

Sie Perkins and Kirby Pineman leave their teammate, Vern Perkins, face down in the mud, above, as they drop a pig in the barrel. It took teamwork with Josh Jensen, at rear, for the four to chase, wrestle and hoist their pig in the annual Lincoln County Fair Pig Wrestling competition in Shoshone Wednesday night.

Brandon Helms of Shoshone, at right, uses the always reliable hoof-and-headlock maneuver on his swine opponent.

Bosnia attack wounds U.S. liaison officer

The Washington Post

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — A U.S. soldier serving with the NATO-led peacekeeping force in Bosnia was slashed with a garden-size sickle Wednesday.

It was the latest in a series of attacks and threats since NATO's recent operation against Bosnian Serbs accused of war crimes.

The U.S. Army officer, who was not identified, was slightly wounded in the shoulder.

But the attack coincided with the third explosion directed against international monitors here since last Thursday, when British soldiers seized one prominent Bosnian Serb indicted for war crimes and killed another as he resisted capture.

The low-level attacks and reports of unusual harassment in the field have raised security concerns sharply among the international organizations working here to help enforce the November 1995 Dayton peace agreement, which ended Bosnia's 3 1/2-year ethnic conflict but left unresolved many of the issues that caused it to erupt.

The U.S. command said the soldier, a liaison officer to the Bosnian Serb forces, suffered a two- to three-inch gash in his left shoulder when an unknown attacker swiped at him with the sickle shortly before 2 a.m. at a village near Vlasenica, 25 miles southeast of U.S. headquarters near Tutu.

He was treated by Army medics and released, returning to duty Wednesday afternoon.

The attack marked the third time a U.S. soldier has been wounded by hostile action since American troops moved into Bosnia as peacekeepers early last year.

Ex-Twin Falls attorney in midst of debate over split court

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

BOISE - As a 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals judge, Thomas Nelson works as hard as he did when he was a Twin Falls attorney, but there was a key difference back then.

"The difference was I could always unload myself by not taking a case, and here, I don't have that choice," Nelson said.

As the paperwork continues piling up for 9th Circuit Court judges, Congress is again debating whether to break up the nation's largest appellate court and put California in a circuit apart from most other Western states.

A Senate panel Tuesday approved such a measure, citing work overloads and long backlogs in court decisions. But Circuit Court rulings in a number of environmental and other cases have angered Western Republicans.

Nelson, who lived and worked in the Twin Falls area for 22 years, rejects the idea that regional politics shape Circuit Court rulings. He points to an Alaska ruling against the U.S. Forest Service for an invalid timber sale, a decision that would seem "environmental-leaning" but for the fact it was decided by judges from traditionally conservative states - Idaho, Montana and Washington.

Philosophical and political leanings had nothing to do with the decision, which was based on merits alone, he said. "Philosophically I don't think that carries the day," Nelson said. "If that's the justification, it probably ought to fail."

There have been attempts to break up the Circuit Court for two decades, and the current effort still faces several hurdles. The circuit covers 11 states from Alaska, Arizona, California, Hawaii, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Oregon and Washington.

Woman kills activist sister, steals her identity

Body found in home ruins leads to suspect

The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. - Neighbors rallied around drug-fighting activist Stevie Allman when her home was firebombed. The governor offered a $50,000 reward to catch the vengeful dealers suspected in the attack.

Then a badly decomposed body was found in a freezer in the charred ruins. Wednesday, police positively identified the body as Ms. Allman's.

They suspect her sister, who had lived with her for 20 years, killed Ms. Allman and stole her identity, perhaps to cash her pension checks.

"This is the stuff of a Hollywood movie," Capt. Peter Dunbar said.

Sarah Allman, 47 - who is similar in height and build to her 52-year-old sister - was booked Wednesday for investigation of murder, forgery and giving a false name to police.

Dunbar said Ms. Allman died from a blow to the head.

After the July 1 firebombing, authorities reported that Stevie Allman had been hospitalized for burns. The speculation was that she was the victim of neighborhood drug pushers angry that she videotaped their deals and turned the evidence over to police.

After the fire, she was seen by the neighborhood as a hero who literally risked her skin to fight drugs. Gov. Pete Wilson offered a $50,000 award for the conviction of those involved in the burning, and the woman who said she was Stevie issued a statement blaming neighborhood dealers.

"I have no doubt they intended to murder me and burn the house down on top of me," the statement said. "Their warped minds thought the act would clear the way to do their dirty dealing ... and at the same time scare everyone else along 5th Avenue and beyond into a submissive terrified slave state."

"From the beginning, she's seemed like a crime victim" Dunbar said.

But police began to doubt the story last week, and reopened the case. On Tuesday, detectives aided by a search dog found the body in the freezer.

At that point, the woman claiming to be Stevie was brought in for questioning. After police told her they had her fingerprints from a 1971 prostitution arrest, the woman admitted she was Sarah, one of 11 Allman siblings.

Detectives said Sarah had apparently been using Stevie's identification for up to two years.

They speculated that it may have been Sarah, not Stevie, who provided the drug deal tapes, and they say they have determined it was Sarah, not Stevie, who was the one hospitalized for burns after the firebombing.

Police, FBI cast wide dragnet for suspect in slaying of designer

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)— Hundreds of FBI agents, some handing out photos in gay bars and hotels, blanketed south Florida Wednesday in the hunt for the alleged perpetrator in a fatal slaying of Gianni Versace.

As many as 400 FBI agents scoured a 250-mile stretch of Florida's Atlantic Coast. But authorities' contention they couldn't be sure if Cunanan was still in the state.

reedy South Beach section. The steps where the 50-year-old Versace died were covered with flowers, candles, cards and a silver cross.
The family's lawyer warned his family planned to fly to Italy Thursday with his remains for a private memorial in Milan, Italy.

Appeals court upholds police spanking investigation

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals refused to reinstate a suit by an Idaho woman who said her constitutional right to discipline her son was violated when police investigated her for repeatedly hitting him with a belt on school grounds.

They said the conclusion was necessary to keep children safe.
The court stopped short of defining a parent's right to administer corporal punishment in the ruling, but said it was not unlimited.

Crash

Pitz said it might take only a day or so for an experienced team to prepare a car for a demolition derby.
What really killed Jerome Cunanan's derby this year was a lack of good marketing, since drivers often make their plans months in advance, Pitz said.

Jerome's fair should recover.
Though he was scrambling Wednesday to book another event to fill the derby's time slot, Lundgren said he was able to pull most of the advertising for the derby before it got out to the public.
"Most of the publicity we had was word of mouth," he said.

Court

In a 1997-98 budget amendment offered by Sen. Judt Gregg, R-N.H., the 9th Circuit Court would be split into two: the 9th Circuit and a 12th Circuit.
California would be left in the 9th Circuit, along with Guam and the Northern Mariana Islands, Nevada and Hawaii could choose either circuit, and the rest of the West would be in the 12th Circuit.

Huang got secrets he could use to return China's favors, panel told

Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — A day after learning that Democratic fundraiser John Huang allegedly laundered an illegal campaign contribution from an Asian business, a Senate committee heard how Huang received government secrets that could have allowed him to return the favor.

Huang was given secret CIA briefings on Asian trade and business intelligence, even though his Commerce Department boss thought Huang was unqualified to handle Asian affairs, officials from the Commerce Department and the CIA testified Wednesday.

At the same time, he made frequent visits to a nearby business office where he could have privately faxed copies of classified information, said Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa. He made several visits to the Chinese embassy here, said Sen. Fred Thompson, R-Tenn., chairman of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

Huang has denied wrongdoing, but is refusing to testify unless granted immunity from criminal prosecution for at least some possible crimes.

The Justice Department has told the Senate it wants to keep the right to charge Huang with a crime, although it is unclear whether he would be charged with violating laws covering the money he brought into the Democratic Party or with any government information he might have given out.

After hearing testimony about how the Clinton administration gave Huang and others interim security clearances before they had full background investigations, Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, said it failed to prove that anyone tried to slip Huang into the Commerce Department so he could funnel secret information back to his former employer, the Lippo Group, an Indonesian conglomerate with business throughout Asia.

Jeffrey Garten, former Commerce Undersecretary for International Trade, testifies on Capitol Hill Wednesday before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee hearing on campaign fund raising.

A memo released Tuesday showed that Huang asked Lippo in 1992 to wire money to cover several expenses, including a $50,000 donation to the Democratic Party.

"We are trying to make something very mysterious about this ... trying to make him some sort of mysterious character that was placed for subversive reasons or some nefarious purpose," Glenn said.

"I've been through all the intelligence stuff and everything else. I just saw nothing sinister about the process that was used to put him in that position."

That drew a pointed response from Thompson, who all but accused Glenn of trying hurt the committee inquiry.

"It's easy to set up some kind of a grandiose theory and say that, if you don't prove that, then everything else is irrelevant," Thompson said.

"He clearly had access to information that would have been, theoretically, of interest to Lippo. And to say that because we haven't proved he's a spy yet — is totally missing the mark and totally an attempt to divert our attention off of serious procedural matters, substantive matters, trying to find out what actually happened in this last presidential campaign."

But Thompson and committee Republicans did appear to be building a case that suggested wrongdoing by Huang in the Commerce Department.

"He was totally unqualified in my judgment for the kind of Commerce Department we were establishing," said former Undersecretary Jeffrey Garten.

Nontraditional warrior may chair Joint Chiefs of Staff

WASHINGTON (AP) — Army Gen. Henry Shelton, President Clinton's choice to chair the Joint Chiefs of Staff, is a nontraditional warrior experienced in combating the terrorist threats and other "operations short of war" challenging U.S. security.

Clinton was expected to make the choice of his top military adviser public on today. Officials confirmed the selection Wednesday after Shelton met with Clinton and Defense Secretary William Cohen at the White House and later huddled along with the president. Senate confirmation will be required. Shelton, 55, a craggy-faced, 6-foot-5 general, heads the Special Operations Command, based in Florida.

Little known outside military circles, he has won praise among his peers for deftly managing the 1994 U.S. military operation in Haiti, which switched at the last minute from a combat-style invasion to a less hostile troop move. He was a commander of helicopter forces in Desert Storm and in special forces — once dubbed "Green Beret" — in Vietnam. Shelton is a nontraditional choice for the chairman. With a background in the Army's "light" infantry and multi-service Special Operations units, he is unlike the tankers, jet fighters or ship drivers who have served as Joint Chiefs chairmen in the past.

Instead, he is the four-star commander of elite troops who hail from the Army, Navy and Air Force. Designated to operate without fanfare, they respond to a variety of nonconventional threats — terrorism, insurgencies, sabotage — and work with foreign militaries and local populations in coordination with heavier forces.

The real Papa

Key West, Hemingway family present sharply differing views of famous writer

SANIBEL ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — Ernest Hemingway spent many a day roaming Key West in tattered boots and a rope belt, fishing, drinking and writing some of his most famous novels.

And for years the nation's southernmost community honored the author with a beer-soaked bash featuring arm wrestling, souvenir mugs, a short-story competition and a look-alike contest. But that isn't the way "Papa" should be remembered, say his descendants, so this year they decided to celebrate a more dignified version of the author.

"It's the family reclaiming Ernest Hemingway," said Hilary Hemingway, the author's niece, who led an effort to create a new festival on Sanibel Island, 150 miles up the coast from Key West.

"They make him the patron saint of beer," she said of Key West's Hemingway Days. "If you drank as much as everyone wants you to believe, how did he create so much work first thing in the morning?"

So Hemingway the family man, author and nature lover who committed suicide in 1961 will be honored by his descendants at a low-key three-day festival on Sanibel Island starting Friday.

Among the events will be a literary conference, golf, fishing, a children's arts camp and a large collection of Hemingway's personal papers.

Hemingway, the hard-drinking adventurer and macho spokesman of American folklore, will be honored July 24-27 at Key West's 16-year-old celebration. The Keys festival won't have its usual literary conference this year after uncertainty about whether that festival would be held.

Each of the rival festivals claims to present the real "Papa."

"The festival belongs to Key West," Joe Faber, co-owner of Captain Tony's Bar, which the author frequented, said recently. "It's not just the fact that we're going to lose business, but he was such a large part of Key West."

"My question is, what ties does Ernest Hemingway have to Sanibel Island?"

Not many. Sanibel Island is a Gulf Coast resort known for its seashells and Australian pines, and there's no evidence Hemingway ever set foot on the place. Some family members visited many years ago.

In Key West, Hemingway raised a family in the late 1920s and much of the 1930s, wrote essays, short stories, a play and several novels including portions of his two most famous works — "For Whom the Bell Tolls" and "A Farewell To Arms."

But where he actually lived is not the point; how he is remembered is, family members said.

"We don't have to get bogged down with where he slept, where he ate, where he petted his kitty cat," Ms. Hemingway said.

The new festival will be a non-profit affair focusing on an American family that is rich with artistic tradition and great expectations that sometimes carried a huge burden.

The Keys festival attracts more than 10,000 people and offers a profusion of unauthorized souvenir T-shirts and mugs sold for a quick buck. "It was a beer brawl on the streets," said Mina Hemingway Adams, the author's granddaughter.

But profit is why the Hemingways really pulled their support of the Key West festival, some said.

Lorian Hemingway, a novelist in Seattle and daughter of Hemingway's son Gregory, admitted artistic differences existed between the family and Key West. However, she said the split was caused for one reason: "The (Hemingway) brothers wanting to get a cut of the action."

Hemingway's three sons did seek a 10 percent cut of the Key West festival proceeds and demanded total control of marketing, forcing the original festival operator to pull out.

'It's the family reclaiming Ernest Hemingway.'

City hall gladly faces assault court

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A man who frequently visited City Hall to challenge Buffalo's environmental policies attacked a city employee with a hatchet, putting a one-inch gash in the victim's forehead, police said.

Vincent J. DiPasquale, 56, was arrested immediately, after calmly agreeing to accompany another city employee into a coffee break room. He was jailed on charges of assault and possession of a weapon.

"We don't know what state of mind he was in," Lt. Dunne Rizzo said. "All of the sudden he went totally bonkers and pulled a hatchet out of the backpack he had with him."

Anthony Lupplino, 47, a Planning Division employee, received stitches after the attack in his office Tuesday.

NATION IN BRIEF

Scientists discover more AIDS entry points

NEW YORK — Scientists have identified two more footholds the AIDS virus can use to infect cells, a finding that might mean it will be harder than once thought to block infection by covering up such entry points.

Researchers also found evidence that a cousin of HIV, called SIV, uses the footholds to infect monkeys. SIV is used in studies aimed at developing HIV vaccines and treatments, so the new work could help that effort.

The report brings to six the reported total of HIV "co-receptors," the footholds HIV uses to infect cells in conjunction with its main docking point.

Drug shows promise in arthritis treatment

BOSTON — A new drug that breaks the cycle of inflammation is showing promise against the crippling effects of rheumatoid arthritis.

Results of a study with the medicine, which blocks a natural substance known as tumor necrosis factor, were first reported last October.

More than 2 million Americans, mostly women, suffer from rheumatoid arthritis, a chronic inflammatory disease that causes pain, swelling, stiffness and loss of function in the joints. The disease also can result in eye problems and inflammation of the blood vessels, lungs and heart. There is no known cure.

Acting solicitor general to return to teaching

WASHINGTON — Acting Solicitor General Walter Dellinger, who argued more cases in one Supreme Court term than any predecessor in more than 20 years, announced Wednesday he will return to teaching in September.

Dellinger, 56, said he would conclude his work as overseer of the government's court appeals by appearing Aug. 11 before the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals to defend the Food and Drug Administration's proposed regulation of nicotine and tobacco products.

On Sept. 1, he will resume teaching law at Duke University, where he taught before joining the Clinton administration in 1993. His return had been expected because he has been commuting to North Carolina on weekends since August 1995. At that time, his wife, Anne, returned to her post as a professor of public law and government at the University of North Carolina.

FDA approves epilepsy controlling implant

WASHINGTON — Epilepsy patients won new hope to control severe seizures Wednesday as the government approved an implant to send pulses into the brain — the first alternative to drugs or surgery in 100 years.

Cyberonics Inc.'s implant is not a cure. But for thousands of patients who suffer frequent seizures despite taking epilepsy medications, it may significantly reduce attacks.

Patients had so anxiously awaited the NeuroCybernetic Prosthesis that Texas-based Cyberonics received its first order 15 minutes after the Food and Drug Administration approved the device. The order was for a patient who will undergo surgery Thursday at the University of Southern California.

Gore insists air-pollution standards attainable

WASHINGTON — Air-quality rules to protect children, the elderly and people with respiratory problems can be met without harming economic growth, Vice President Gore insisted Wednesday.

At a White House ceremony, Gore said he is confident "the twin goals of clean air and a stronger economy" can be attained so long as states and businesses have adequate time and flexibility to meet the new air-quality standards.

The new health standards for smog-causing ozone and soot require states and communities to ratchet up air pollution controls over the next decade. The goal is to ensure that air is cleaner and less harmful to people prone to breathing problems, including children with asthma.

Documents: U.S. banks used to hide Nazi gold

WASHINGTON — Portugal tried to hide the origin of looted gold it accepted from Nazi Germany by using Swiss accounts in U.S. and Canadian central banks, according to declassified intelligence documents.

"The (Portuguese) Bank's object is to get rid of gold purchased from the Reichsbank," Nazi Germany's financial institution, said one of the U.S. intelligence documents discovered by the World Jewish Congress.

The documents from the American Overseas Special Services, precursor of the Central Intelligence Agency, detail transactions between the Bank of Portugal and the Swiss National Bank during World War II.

"No actual gold moved across the Atlantic, but with a few strokes of a pen the bad guys won" by hiding looted assets, said Elan Steinberg, executive director of the World Jewish Congress. "The Portuguese swapped the looted Nazi gold and the Swiss got their commissions."

Mars rover crawls toward rock Scooby Doo

PASADENA, Calif. — The Sojourner rover, scooting toward the rock Scooby Doo, completed a 12-foot leg of its longest excursion yet while its mothership successfully relayed new data back to Earth, NASA said Wednesday.

The rover, which moves at about two feet a minute, had another 7 feet to 10 feet to go before reaching the flat, whitish rock tonight or early Friday, according to scientists and engineers at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

First, though, it will chemically analyze the soil between Scooby Doo and Yogi, the rock that was its last target. When it reaches Scooby Doo, the rover will make a 10-hour analysis using its alpha proton X-ray spectrometer.

Flight 800 mourning turns more private

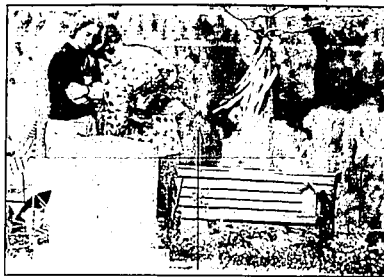

MONTOURSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — The signs of sorrow are no longer as stark as a teen-ager's funeral or a crowd of crying schoolmates.

One year after 16 high school students, a teacher and four chaperones from Montourville died in the explosion of TWA Flight 800 while on a French Club trip to Paris, the grief is more private, represented by such things as the stars strung from Monica Cox's bedroom ceiling and the soccer ball still in Will Rogers' dining room.

Townpeople still talk of the tragedy, but the mundane events of everyday life have begun to overshadow what many feel will always be the defining moment in this north-central Pennsylvania community of 5,000, situated 128 miles west of Philadelphia and 157 miles west of New York.

"I try to put it out of my mind," said Lou Hassler.

At the traditional gatherings — high school basketball games, church picnics, softball tournaments — the talk about Flight 800 grows less frequent, an encouraging sign to Mayor John Dorin.

"You can almost sense that normally returning," he said. "The community healing is coming at a very fast pace."

But, he added, "You don't see that with the families." Rogers, a paper-thin 44-year-old with sunken cheeks and a whisper of a voice, looks as if only hours, not months, have passed since he learned from CNN that his daughter, Kimberly, was dead at 17.

The decorations in his modest home in surrounding Fairfield Township memorialize his daughter. Photos cover every inch of the piano and mantel in the living room; Kimberly playing soccer, Kimberly at the prom. In the dining room her artwork hangs next to her soccer ball.

Kimberly was his shadow, a guardian angel who twice saved him from diabetic coma, a loyal daughter who always called to say where she was and where she was going.

He still cringes with regret over the off-the-cuff remark he made to his nervous daughter as they drove to meet the bus that would take them to the airport. He told her she had more of a chance dying in his Toyota than on the plane.

"There is no sunrise each day," he said. "It's a grim time. I try, but I can't let her go."

HMO use fluctuates with elderly

BOSTON (AP) — Some elderly people on Medicare HMOs when they are healthy, quit them when they fall sick then rejoin after they get better, a study shows.

The researchers say this pattern means HMOs often avoid paying for old folks' most expensive illnesses, and it undercuts a primary reason for promoting HMOs for the elderly: saving money.

Unlike people in ordinary HMOs, the elderly can quit Medicare HMOs with just a month's notice.

"I don't want to imply that everyone slips in and out. A lot of people go into HMOs and say there. But there is also a lot of movement," said Robert O. Morgan, a psychologist at the University of Miami, who was lead author of the study.

However, an industry trade group countered that turnover is actually small and that the overwhelming majority of elderly folks stick with their HMOs through sickness and health.

Medicare HMOs have advantages that make them attractive to reasonably healthy people. Payments are lower, and the plans usually cover prescription drugs, glasses and other benefits, such as fitness programs.

However, HMOs also restrict access to specialists, which may be troubling when people have serious illnesses.

Morgan's analysis was based on a review of Medicare data from 1990 through 1993 on nearly 448,000 beneficiaries in southern Florida. The results were published in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The researchers looked at the number of days these people spent in the hospital before they joined HMOs and after they left.

Like some other studies, this one found that people who join Medicare HMOs seem healthier than usual.

In the year before enrolling, they spent only two-thirds as many days in the hospital as is typical.

However, those who quit HMOs spend about twice as much time in the hospital as usual. And they eventually re-enroll when their hospital use gets down to the typical level.

U.S. soldiers on patrol in Bosnia: A relatively safe mission for America

The Associated Press

BRKA, Bosnia-Herzegovina — An eight-man U.S. Army patrol, winding slowly through the remnants of a bombed-out village, stops frequently to chat with returning inhabitants rebuilding their destroyed homes.

"So long as the Americans are here, everyone feels safe," said Zaim Avdic, a Muslim parking away from a group of neighbors helping him replace his pock-marked house's torched roof.

The soldiers agreed. "Everybody seems to be real glad to see us walking through. It can't help but make you feel good," said Sgt. John Faust, the patrol leader, whose men turn down repeated offers of coffee and sweets as they make their rounds.

Brka lies in the former non-military land of Brcko Corridor, the most savagely contested front line of the Bosnian war. U.S. troops mount regular patrols through peaceful farmland where Muslims peer across overgrown fields at Serb neighbors they haven't talked to in five years.

Soldiers interviewed recently at nearby Camp McGovern — nicknamed Camp MudGovern — said they would gladly adopt a more robust approach to help implement the Dayton agreement that ended the 3 1/2-year war.

"A lot of soldiers really want to do more real-life missions," said Capt. Charlie Reynolds, chaplain of this U.S. Army camp in northern Bosnia. "The vast majority feel this way."

Among them: helping Muslim refugees return to their former homes in Bosnia's Serb substrate and capturing wanted war criminals.

The Pentagon says no, fearing it would lead to bloodshed and disrupt the fragile peace.

The Dayton accords give responsibility for capturing war criminals to local authorities in Bosnia. NATO peacekeepers are barred under the rules of engagement from actively pursuing suspects, including former Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic and military commander Gen. Ratko Mladic. They have the authority to arrest suspects they encounter if the tactical situation permits.

NATO commanders said British troops were doing just this when they mounted a surprise, commando-type operation Thursday to snatch two indicted Serb war criminals. But they insisted the operation — in which one Serb was captured and the other died in a gunfight — represented no change in policy.

Americans provided logistical and technical support for the operation but did not actually participate in the raid.

Serb nationalists, who want to secede and join neighboring Serbia, welcome NATO's reluctance to do more than peace-keeping.

The Muslims, who want a reunited Bosnia, are looking for NATO help in relocating hundreds of thousands of refugees and warn that failure could trigger renewed combat once the peacekeepers withdraw.

Defense Secretary William Cohen has set a June 30, 1998, date for withdrawal of U.S. troops. The Senate in a nonbinding resolution told the administration to stick to that date.

U.S. soldier Pvt. Benjamin Pittila, left, from Miami, Fla., patrols with fellow troops near the Bosnian town of Klacanj, 20 miles south of Tuzla.

On Saturday, however, President Clinton suggested the U.S. mission might not be completed by the deadline. "I believe the present operation will have run its course by then, and we'll have to discuss what, if any, involvement the United States should have there," he told reporters at the end of an eight-day European trip.

Despite initial reservations about dangers U.S. troops would face in Bosnia, the uneventful Brka patrol has been typical of a mission that has been among the safest in the history of overseas U.S. military deployments. Total casualties so far: 6 deaths — none in combat — and 16 injuries among 8,500 troops.

"The Pentagon, by and large, wants two things: to limit the use of American forces and have them do as little as possible associated with the nonmilitary provisions of Dayton. And they want to get out," said Mort Abramowitz, former head of the Carnegie Foundation in Washington.

"But the issue is if we get out without a significantly greater effort to implement Dayton, hostilities will resume," he said. "So if we want to get out without leaving behind a war, we're going to have to do much better than we've been doing."

Pentagon opposition to what it describes as mission creep has sparked friction with the State Department, which worries that a do-nothing attitude on crucial elements of the peace agreement could lead to resumed war after American forces leave.

NATO allies in the 31,000-strong force have warned that efforts to ensure the return of refugees could result in clashes with the Serbs, a major worry for the administration. It fears that casualties among U.S. troops could lead to moves in Congress to terminate the mission immediately.

NATO commanders also are leery of losing the good will of the Serb military, without whose cooperation the complicated process of maintaining the peace would have been much harder.

This leaves the troops at Camp McGovern stuck with the non-eventful daily patrol routine.

When asked if he would prefer more challenging duty, Pvt. Eloy Ojeda, the patrol's machine gunner, grinned. "Oh yeah," he said, "I'd rather be doing that."

"Everybody seems to be real glad to see us walking through. It can't help but make you feel good."

Air Force should listen to training range critics

The U.S. Air Force needs to get its ears checked. Poor hearing could account for some of the problems behind the Air Force's latest attempt to land an electronic combat range in the desert west of Castleford.

For years, the Air Force has been trying to build a bomb training range in southwestern Idaho, but people keep saying it will ruin the area's tranquility. They have a point. The Air Force is talking about warplanes dropping dummy bombs, sometimes from as low as 500 feet, onto the Owyhee desert. Supersonic flight would be limited to more than 10,000 feet above the ground, but jet planes can generate a lot of noise even without sonic booms.

Air Force officials keep trying to sweep the noise issue under the carpet. After years of criticism about noise, their environmental impact statement still glosses over the prospect that military jets would make life miserable for native wildlife and human visitors.

It also could be mighty annoying for residents on the west end of the Magic Valley.

A recent news story reveals the Air Force's latest environmental impact statement as a prime target opportunity for critics, who will seize on its weaknesses as they have in the past.

The impact statement delves into peoples' tolerance for airport noise in Burbank, Calif.; railroad noise in Denmark; and street noise in Brussels, Belgium. What that has to do with warplanes streaking through the Owyhee country is beyond us.

Rather than admit to inadequate data, Air Force officials keep plowing ahead. The basic argument is that a lack of data supports the conclusion that jet planes won't disrupt the desert's solitude.

The Air Force uses a Forest Service study to dismiss high-speed, low-altitude planes as an infrequent occurrence. But the study also says high-speed, low-altitude planes are the most annoying ones you'll encounter.

Keep that in mind when you're enjoying the solitude along the BrunEAU, Jarbirds or Owyhee rivers.

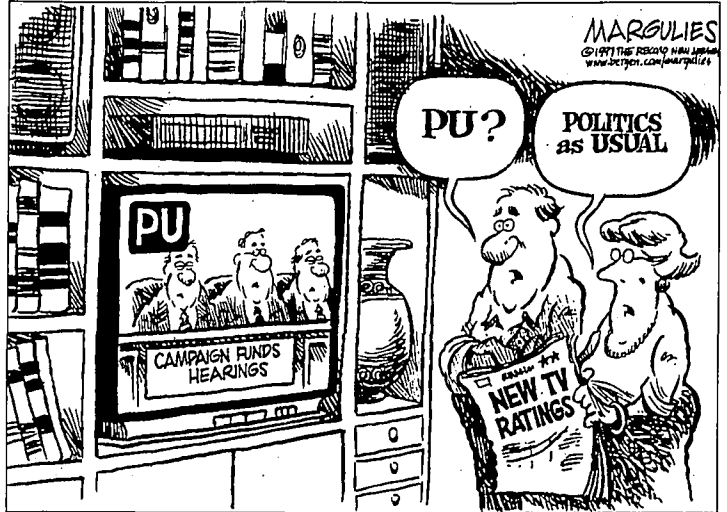

Also, Air Force officials can't guarantee their pilots won't stray into civilian territory. These are aggressive pilots trying to advance their careers by eluding defensive radar systems.

Unauthorized excursions near Castleford could occur. Sonic booms could occur. Property damage could occur.

The Castleford school gymnasium has a disturbingly large crack that got a lot bigger on or about March 20, 1996 - a day when Air Force planes were making sonic booms in the desert west of there.

The Air Force denies its planes were responsible, so the upshot is that Castleford school trustees will have to hold a bake sale or a bond issue if they want to repair the gym. We don't doubt that a state-of-the-art bomb training range would be nice for the Air Force. But the real question is this: Would it be nice for us?

Noise levels must be accurately assessed before Magic Valley residents will know the answer.

Taking a second look at Steve Forbes

The heat index soared past 100 degrees last week in Washington, caused in part by the hot air coming from Congress and the White House over taxes. But a whisper of a cold front was felt in a Wall Street Journal article by magazine publisher and former presidential candidate Steve Forbes in which he likened the tax code to the Berlin Wall and called for the code to be torn down.

In his presidential election cycle, Forbes seemed to some like a gaffly - a Ross Perot with a better haircut and minus the weirdness. While Perot has faded politically, Forbes continues to write and speak in ways that should command more serious attention.

In his journal column and in Forbes magazine, he lays out the case for abandoning the current tax code and creating an innovative one for a new century. He chastises the Republican congressional leadership and the White House for making the tax code more complicated than it already is, noting the "layman's overview" of tax cuts proposed by the House Ways and Means Committee runs 215 pages, the outline of the "tax-simplification provisions" runs 76 pages, and a description of the bill's "technical correction provisions" is 31 pages. That's 324 pages of explanation before you get to the proposed tax bill.

Under the agreement being worked out between Congress and the White House, notes Forbes, the tax code will become "more complex, more confusing and more corrupt." The Clinton-Gore rather than having it garnished by an increasingly bloated and unresponsive government.

A flat tax would mean a real choice for people who would prefer to stay at home with their children while their spouse works; money to underwrite private education for those who don't have the resources, like the Clintons, to send their children to private schools; increased retirement savings and investment, allowing people to take better care of themselves and rely less on government; a real economic boom fueled with a huge influx of more capital that would produce more jobs and higher tax revenue for government; a fairer tax system requiring you to pay more only if you made more; and the elimination of one of the most hated bureaucracies - the IRS.

Forbes has tried to broaden his appeal by reaching out to social conservatives. He paid for a series of radio ads in support of legislation that would have banned partial-birth abortions.

Congressional Republicans are making their case for tax reform based on a "best we can get with this president" strategy. What is needed is someone to speak to the heart of the problem, which is the tax code itself. With no one else emerging to claim leadership of the dispirited and directionless Republican Party, Forbes is positioning himself for that role. He deserves another look.

Rickards responds to Lance

It was sad to see Attorney General Lance continue Lockheiser's campaign of confusion on nuclear issues. He sounded like viewers of claiming my initiative "invalid" and simply a "wish." I did "wish" his friends from "Get the Waste Out" would ban the reburial of plutonium, but now it's up to you people.

When my initiative clearly steps the state from cooperating with the reburial of plutonium, Lance claims he doesn't know what plutonium I am talking about. When my initiative strengthens the present state quality permits to protect pregnant women, Lance claims he doesn't know how or what air-quality permits I mean. The state of Idaho is in a state of denial.

This is not a new tactic. The state lawyers and the Department of Energy previously called me "too unscientific to answer" when I pointed out their documents show the filters on their plutonium incinerator are leaking. Thank goodness the Centers for Disease Control's advisory panel I am on now has taken my documents seriously. We are presently setting up a workshop to design testing the filters. Our politicians want to speed up incineration, but the conservative thing to do would be test the filters first and ban reburial.

Yet another DOE final impact statement came out recently in May 1997. And, yes, every alternative had Idaho taking more than 1 million cubic feet of plutonium waste from above ground and dumping it in a new hole in Idaho! How many DOE documents do they need to see before they stop pretending they have no plans for the reburial of plutonium over our water supply?

Pit 9 plutonium has already leaked 240 feet deep. The governor brings he is fixing the DOE $10,000 a day, but he doesn't tell you the fine simply comes out of the DOE clean-up fund! No matter how important his deal is, this is still fixable. My initiative strengthens legal state powers, but I need your help. It's up to real people to protect our water and our pregnant women.

I am personally going to collect at least 2,400 signatures. That's one for every century that plutonium can cause cancer. If you could add your signature or even collect a few extra signatures, please send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Box 911, Twin Falls, ID 83303. Will our politicians' pride come before Idaho's fall? Not if you help.

Write to us

The Times-News welcomes letters from readers on subjects of public interest. To make sure your letter is published promptly, here are a few guidelines to remember:

- Each letter should include the writer's signature, mailing address and telephone number. Typewritten letters are preferred, because they allow faster handling with less chance of error.
- Letters may be brought to our Twin Falls office, mailed to P.O. Box 548, Twin Falls, ID 83303, or sent by fax to (208) 734-5538.

- Letters considered libelous, obscene or in bad taste will be rejected, as will material expressing racial, ethnic or religious bigotry.
- We do not publish verse or poetry, and we generally remove or limit quotations. Articles taken from other publications will not be reprinted.
- Because of space constraints, please limit letters to 400 words. Longer letters will be shortened. The Times-News reserves the right to edit all letters. We look forward to hearing from you!

Existing racial categories becoming obsolete

What do you call a Chinese-Peruvian-American woman? What do you call a German-Spanish-Mexican-American man?

Carla and Ron. What do you call their kids? Nothing, because they don't have any yet. But their's nothing unusual about young people who are a little bit of this and that, happy to claim all their ancestors. One in four California babies is of mixed race, it's no more stigmatized. Tiger Woods isn't the only "Californian" out there.

Last week, a federal task force recommended that people be allowed to check more than one race on government forms, including the Census. The task force rejected adding a "multiracial" box.

It's only been for the last 20 years that Americans have been required to pick a race - one race - when filling out government forms. You must be counted as white, black, Asian or Pacific Islander, Native American or the mysterious "other."

In Census Bureau studies, only about 1.7 percent of people prefer to be classified as "multiracial," though the number is growing.

Hispanic, counted as an ethnicity, is another line on the form. Most Hispanics would like to be counted as racially Hispanic, according to studies. Forced to pick a race, most check "white."

The old racial and ethnic categories are becoming obsolete. From 1970 to

Or he won't be counted at all. The numbers are used to implement race-based federal programs and draw lines in congressional districts that will help minorities win election. Minority groups fought the multiracial category, fearing it would sap their numbers and their clout.

Oddly, the task force warned that adding a multiracial category would "add to racial tensions and further fragmentation of our population."

Surely it's counting by race, and allocating government benefits by race, that leads to racial tension and fragmentation.

As our population becomes racially and ethnically mixed, it becomes harder to discriminate on the basis of race. Literally. If you can't figure out who's in what category, how do you discriminate?

Counting by race will go on for a while yet. But it can't be sustained for another generation. Not with more and more Cubinians and Chinese-Peruvian-German-Spanish-Mexicans around.

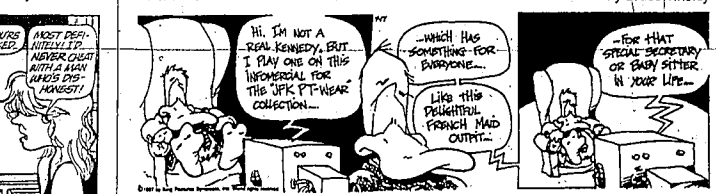

I am dubious about the ability of our president or our government to heal racial divisions. Excuse me, yes. Heal, no. I'll put my faith in the same process that led to Irish-Italian marriages, then to Catholic-Protestant marriages and now to Japanese-Jewish marriages. I believe in Tiger Woods.

Pollé dog belongs to Cassia County

As a handler of a narcotics detection/patrol police service dog (Danny), I am interested in K9 Quenne.

I love Danny; however, if I left the department and Danny had several years of service left, I would expect that he would get a new handler and continue serving the community, which is what he was bred and loves to do. I know Danny, and this dog lives to go to work. I would still be torn apart inside, as I understand Tony must be.

While I know that Quenne was happy with Tony and they worked well together, he's a working dog and can be trained to work with another handler. However, training is the key word here.

The dog and the handler have to receive proper training as a team. The handler and the dog have to bond. You must understand drives and character traits of dogs before you can train them. Depending on the rank drive of the dog, dominance may have to be established.

While I don't know why Quenne bit the new handler, it's not unusual for a K9 to turn on his new handler. A correction to the dog is a must. Police dogs must receive consistent corrections. Depending on how hard or soft the dog is would determine the severity of the correction.

Because a patrol K9 bites a person doesn't mean the dog is vicious. Let's not forget what these dogs do for a living. If you do not have and maintain the proper training, the dog is a major liability. You cannot be a K9 handler and be afraid of your dog.

In Idaho Falls and Bonneville County, there are a total of five K9s. In addition to almost nine weeks of training these teams spent at school and annual team certifications, they train together each Tuesday all day. You cannot hand over a police dog and say, "Here you go." You wouldn't let an officer go on duty with his gun until you were sure he knew how to use it.

Tony probably worked hard to get the grant that allowed the Cassia County sheriff's department to acquire Quenne. However, the dog belongs to the county. If it doesn't have the interest or funds to send the dog and new handler to the school, then it should sell the dog to Tony or to another department that is willing to do so.

Automobile Insurance is financial responsibility

In response to Joe Alves of Jerome:

Judge Borreson took the time to respond in a letter to me on the details of his sentencing decisions. For that, I thank him. It seems the prosecuting attorney plea bargained away the charges. Substitute the state and the prosecutor for Judge Borreson, and my letter stands as written.

Mr. Alves, I am not wanting anything made illegal that isn't already against the law. I want the insurance laws and driving without privileges in all its forms enforced and prosecuted fully.

I don't expect the legal system to right all wrongs, but I do expect the laws to be enforced rigorously. It's true that not having liability insurance is only an infraction, but it should be upgraded to something more serious.

The way it is now, someone who steals several thousand dollars is charged with a felony, but let them cause the same dollar amount with an uninsured car and it's only an infraction. A little unfair, don't you think?

In regard to the cost of liability insurance, one of my vehicles has only the required insurance and it costs less than my cable TV bill. Most people who say they can't afford insurance are paying high rates through their own actions; i.e., tickets, accidents, DUIs, driving without privileges, and I feel that it should be that way. So far, I have met no one with a good driving record who claimed that they couldn't afford liability insurance.

By the way, Idaho has had a mandatory insurance law for decades, and before that there was a financial responsibility law in regard to motor vehicles. Not having automotive liability insurance isn't an economic issue. It's a responsibility and legal issue. In other words, it's illegal and irresponsible to drive an uninsured vehicle.

Versace suspect is wanted in serial killings across the U.S.

Knigh-Riddler News Service

MIAMI — The many faces of suspected serial killer Andrew Phillip Cunanan peer out from mounted posters and Web pages across the nation:

The prep-school Cuban, boyish, grinning, with horn-rimmed glasses and carefully cropped hair.

The tuxedoed toast of San Diego's gay community, at home with ascots and fat cigars.

The paler, leaner version, cheek bones jutting, eyes narrowed.

He is a stylish scam artist, a self-proclaimed "party boy" and a sparkling conversationalist — who has left a trail of carnage in three states, federal authorities say.

And now, police say, the 27-year-old, whose own mother described him as a "high-class homosexual prostitute," is suspected of committing his fifth and most brazen killing. He is wanted for: the broad-daylight Ocean Drive slaying of famed designer Gianni Versace.

The brief links: a red Chevy pickup truck found near the scene of the South Beach murder and a reported sighting of Cunanan two weeks ago in West Palm Beach.

A truck matching that description disappeared from the scene of the last murder attributed to Cunanan, the May 9 shooting of a cemetery caretaker in Pensville, N.C.

Cunanan has a history, authorities say, of stealing the cars of his victims and then using them until his next burst of violence.

His bloody resume, according to the FBI:

- On April 27, a Minneapolis engineer named Jeffrey Trail, 28, was found beaten to death by a claw hammer in the apartment of one of Cunanan's former lovers, an architect named David Madsen.
- Madsen, 33, was found dead on May 3. The up-and-coming architect, who had lectured at Harvard, had been shot to death, his body left by a nearby lake just north of the Twin Cities. His Jeep had been stolen.
- The red Jeep wasn't seen again until a Chicago police officer noticed it accumulating parking tickets on a side street along the city's exclusive Gold Coast. The Jeep was parked one block from the home of a third victim, millionaire real estate developer Lee Miglin.
- Miglin, 72, and his wife, Marilyn, were among the city's social elite. His wife had been on a business trip when she returned May 4 to find her husband's body, wrapped like a mummy, under a car in the blood-splattered garage.
- An autopsy showed Miglin had been stabbed with a gardening saw and his throat slashed. His leather jacket, an expensive wristwatch and $2,000 in cash were missing. Police believe the killer may have spent the night before fleeing in Miglin's 1994 jade green Lexus.
- Police found the Lexus May 9, at Finn's Point National Cemetery in Pensville, along with the body of cemetery caretaker William Reese, 45. Reese had been shot with a .40 caliber pistol, which police believe may be the same weapon used on Madsen.
- Reese's red Chevrolet pickup truck was missing.

Since, then Cunanan has been the subject of a nationwide manhunt, with authorities particuly warning communities with large gay populations.

His picture and statistics — 5-10, 160 to 180 pounds, brown eyes and brown hair — have been circulated on Web sites and posters. The FBI has offered $10,000 for information leading to his arrest.

Tips have poured in from all over the country.

People say they have seen Cunanan in a laundry in Oklahoma City, knocking back a drink in a bar in Louisiana and lying low in a national park. A clerk in a Central Florida shopping mall reported seeing him loitering near a store entrance earlier this summer, the night after the suspected killer was featured on the television show, "America's Most Wanted."

Suspecting that Cunanan might head to South Florida's gay community, the FBI blanketed the area with fliers about a month ago, said Miami Special Agent in Charge Paul Phillip. The West Palm Beach sighting followed two weeks later, but agents were unable to confirm it.

The large number of sightings is attributable in part to the publicity the Cunanan manhunt has received.

But it also may stem from the Cunanan's nondescript appearance — medium height, medium build, brown hair and brown eyes.

He had no previous criminal record, so police have even less to work with in predicting his pattern of movement.

In San Diego, he loved to dance at hard-rock bars frequented by young professionals and off-duty military personnel. He told friends he was the heir to a family fortune and was in line for acting roles in television and movies.

Often using another name, Andy DeSilva, he was known to pick up the tab for expensive dinner parties several times a week.

Earprint helps convict killer

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — A jury convicted a man of killing his ex-wife's fiance in a trial that included the rare evidence of an earprint taken from the crime scene.

David Kunze, 46, was expressionless as the Clark County Superior Court jury convicted him Tuesday of aggravated first-degree murder and other felonies after 11 hours of deliberations.

Sentencing was scheduled for Aug. 12.

IN BRIEF

Canyon Springs sees pair of smooth shots

TWIN FALLS — It took 10 years of golfing, but through what one pro shop attendant called "perseverance and a love of the game," Norma Brown hit her first career hole-in-one Wednesday at Canyon Springs Golf Course.

Brown, whom the attendant sees "at least four days a week" on the links, chipped an 8-iron 101 yards on the par-3 No. 5.

The ace was the second big shot recorded at the Snake River golf course in as many days. On Tuesday, Larry Harding knocked down a double eagle, holing a 3-iron from a 196 yards out on the 493-yard, 14th hole. It was witnessed by his father-in-law, Gary Hill.

Golf pros face off next month to raise charity funds

TWIN FALLS — On Aug. 6, four area golf professionals — Jerome Country Club's John Peterson, Canyon Springs' Del Ericson, Blue Lakes' Rob Ellis and Twin Falls Municipal's Mike Hamblin — will tee off in support of local charities.

Pledges made by supporters will benefit the Heart Fund, Cancer Society, Junior Golf and Special Olympics. The golfers will play 72 holes in one day and funds will be raised by securing pledges for a minimum of five cents for a bogey, 10 cents for a par, 25 cents for a birdie and 50 cents for an eagle or better.

Pledge sheets can be found at all four pro shops and supporters can request special charities of their choice that they wish to benefit.

Amateurs break through in Carter Cup

Mooney, Rupert help lead state's best to 1st defeat of pros in 10 years

By Brad Boschin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It was there, wide open and ripe for the taking.

The 18th green at Blue Lakes Country Club, nestled in the crook of a benign-looking sandtrap hard against the clubhouse cart path, beckoned the final four some in Wednesday's Carter Cup, waiting for someone to claim the trophy waiting little more than a chip shot away.

It was here, on this rather ordinary-looking green, a bit of an anticlimax after the handful of spectacular holes scattered among the previous 17, that the 26th annual battle between the state's best amateurs and the top Snake River Chapter PGA professionals was decided.

"We all had our chances," said Twin Falls Municipal golf pro Mike Hamblin after he won his match-play duel with Tracy Frank, only to see the pros fall for the first time in 10 years, 31-5-23-5.

After 18 holes of Scotch play and 18 more of best ball on Tuesday, the amateurs carried a rare first-day lead — two points — into Wednesday's individual match-play round.

Ten pros were paired with 10 amateurs, each playing earning a point for the front nine, the back nine and the overall 18, meaning 30 points were up for grabs on Wednesday.

The first 17 holes proved that the amateurs weren't about to roll over as they have in recent years when given a shot at the Cup. Recently-crowned Idaho State Amateur champion Carson Mooney and Bret Rupert both chipped in eagles on the par-5 16th hole and went on to defeat their pro opponents, 2.5-0.5.

"That was really the turning point," said amateur team captain, Joe Malay. "The momentum really turned around on those shots."

One hole behind Rupert and Mooney, the final foursome wound its way along the sun-soaked fairways toward the decisive final hole.

There were plenty of bumps along the way Hamblin losing his ball in the rocks

Tracy Frank watches a drive off the fifth hole of Blue Lakes Country Club during Carter Cup play Wednesday morning. Frank lost his battle with Twin Falls pro Mike Hamblin, but the amateurs pulled out their first victory in 10 years.

Go No. 4, then rebounding with a 25-foot birdie putt on No. 6; Boise pro John Schoonover three-putting on No. 9 after missing his bid for birdie and handing the front-nine points to Payette amateur Scott Massingill.

An open for the ages

British classic shapes up as generational showdown

The Associated Press

TROON, Scotland — Moving cautiously beneath iron-gray clouds and playing careful shots through the relentless wind, two generations of golfers made their final tennets at Royal Troon on Wednesday for the British Open.

The forty-something crew of Greg Norman, Nick Faldo and Nick Price searched memory banks accumulated from a total of 57 British Opens and six victories and relied on experience culled from every kind of links golf condition.

The twentysomething gang of Tiger Woods, Ernie Els, Jim Furyk and Lee Westwood — with only 11 British Opens and no victories among them — trusted youthful enthusiasm and staggering new skills.

The 126th British Open begins Thursday and there is no more appropriate place than the world's oldest golf competition to stage what has the potential to be a tournament for the ages.

And if the baton is to pass this week from those who have dominated the game for more than two decades to a younger set, it may have to make a stop at the group in between — the thirtysomething crowd of defending champion Tom Lehman, hometown hopeful Colin Montgomerie and Steve Elkington.

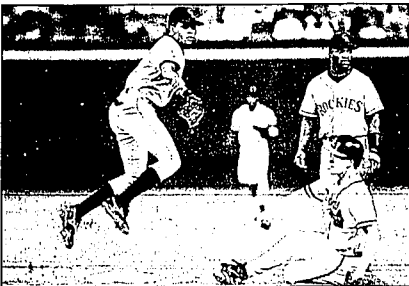

Britain's Nick Faldo lines up a putt during practice Wednesday for the British Open set to start today at Royal Troon golf club in Scotland.

Added to the mix is the fact that all of those mentioned are playing very well right now.

"Anytime you play the British Open or win the British Open you know you have beaten everybody," said Faldo, who turns 40 on Friday and played in his first British Open in 1976, before Woods had his first birthday. "That's why it is the Open."

Atlanta pitcher Tom Glavine slides into second as Colorado's Nell Peraz, left, throws out Jeff Blauser to turn a double play in the fifth inning Wednesday in Atlanta.

Glavine clamps down on Rockies as Braves win battle of slumpers

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Chipper Jones singled home the go-ahead run in the eighth inning and Tom Glavine went 1-0 for the fourth time in five decisions, leading the Atlanta Braves over the reeling Colorado Rockies 2-1 Wednesday night.

Colorado has lost five straight and 12 of 13, dropping to 44-51. Atlanta won for just the third time in seven games since the All-Star break. Larry Lundy went 1-for-4, dropping his major league leading average to .404.

Glavine (10-5) allowed five hits in eight innings, struck out five and walked three. Mark Wohlers finished with a perfect ninth for his 23rd save in 25 chances.

With the score 1-1, Michael Tucker doubled off Jerry Dipoto (3-2) in the eighth and Schoonover's putter betrayed him more than once on Wednesday, but it was his tee shot on No. 14 that sealed his fate. The 351-yard par-4 bends to the left, but Schoonover's shot didn't, settling instead beneath a shrub in the right rough.

"It took three shots and a frustrated growl to extricate the ball; it would take more than that to bring Schoonover back from his one-hole deficit to Massingill.

Meanwhile, Hamblin scrambled to keep pace with Frank, who birdied Nos. 10 and 14 to go two-up on the back nine and draw even in the race for the 18-hole point.

"It wasn't very pretty out there," Frank said. He struggled with his tee shot at times, relying on a marvelous short game to hail him out more than once. On No. 5, he missed the green on his approach shot, but chipped in for birdie from about 45 feet away.

"The second shot set it up," he joked. Frank, who is as full of humor and apparent nonchalance between holes as he is intense on them, lost the front half by two strokes before rallying. His luck threatened to take a turn for the worse on the same hole his amateur compatriots had used to take control minutes earlier.

Frank's tee shot on No. 16 landed in a divot, causing his second shot to sail into a tree just right of the fairway. Hamblin birdied to win the hole and pull within one, setting up the drama on 18.

All of the other golfers were finished, and they ringed the 18th green, doing mental calculations to determine if a final-hole comeback by the pros was possible.

As it turned out, Hamblin and Schoonover could have pulled the pros into a tie with victories on 18. Hamblin's third shot, a long putt from the edge of the green, slid an inch or two right of the cup. Schoonover's six-footer lipped out.

Frank then capped a banner day for the amateurs with a two-footer that set the others clapping.

"Malay, the clown prince of Idaho golf, turned magnanimous victor after the amateurs gathered to a team photo. "It's all in the spirit of the game. You don't play to win so much as you play for the competition," Malay said. "They're professionals and we're amateurs, but we're all friends."

Carroll looks to make Pats his own team

The Associated Press

SMITHFIELD, R.I. — Pete Carroll stood behind the podium, his hands stuffed casually in the pockets of his beige shorts. He was relaxed in front of a red, white and blue backdrop of the Patriots logo.

One statistic leaves little doubt he is the boss of the AFC division: in an 18-minute news conference Wednesday, the words "Bill Parcells" were mentioned just twice.

"We need to see how we can mold this team to really become a '97 team instead of a team from last year," Carroll said. "It's a new challenge for us."

For the first time in five years, New England opened training camp without the dominant presence of Parcells. His rift with Patriots owner Robert Kraft led to his departure after the Super Bowl loss to Green Bay.

Parcells now coaches the New York Jets.

scored on Jones' single up the middle. Colorado went ahead in the fourth when Quinton McCracker walked, took second on Walker's groundout and scored on Andres Galarraga's single to center.

Atlanta tied the score in the bottom half on Fred McGriff's double. Ryan Klesko's infield groundout and Andrew Jones' run-scoring single.

Colorado missed a scoring opportunity in the second when Dante Bichette doubled with one out and attempted to score on Kurt Manwaring's throw out single to center.

Jones' throw was up the first-base line but catcher Eddie Perez caught the ball and dived back to the plate to make the tag.

Woodson completes 3-year deal with 49ers

ROCKLIN, Calif. (AP) — Just in time for the opening of training camp, the San Francisco 49ers on Wednesday formally signed Rod Woodson in a deal that marked the end of his 10-year association with the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Woodson, a seven-time Pro Bowl selection and the NFL defensive player of the year in 1993, became a free agent following last season, when he returned from a career-threatening knee injury that had sidelined him for virtually all of 1995.

Woodson decided three weeks ago that he wanted to join the 49ers and team officials also knew then that they wanted the 32-year-old, but it took time to work out the contract details. Terms of the three-year deal weren't released.

"It's been a process but that's all in the past and now I'll be getting ready for the season," Woodson said at a Wednesday night news conference in Rocklin, where the 49ers opened training camp. The team, with new coach Steve Mariucci overseeing his first camp, will hold its initial practice for rookies and selected veterans and free agents on Thursday.

"Once Rod decided to come here, everything got on hold a little bit," said general manager Dwight Clark, who reworked the contract of linebacker Ken Norton Jr. to free up salary cap room for Woodson. "You need deadlines like this to get it done."

Woodson, who is expected to displace Tyrone Drakeford as San Francisco's starting left cornerback, had additional surgery Feb. 1 on his reconstructed right knee. Doctors removed a bone chip, and Woodson said his knee feels like the knee he once had injured it in the 1995 season-opener against Detroit.

"Last year, I was going on one leg a lot," he said. "This year, I have two legs."

Woodson said his harbors no bitterness about his parting from Pittsburgh and just wants to get a fresh start.

Former Pittsburgh Steelers all-pro cornerback Rod Woodson gets a bit of exercise Wednesday in Rocklin, Calif., after reporting to the San Francisco 49ers training camp.

Jeis. Carroll, after an offseason flood of questions about succeeding Parcels, is putting his own mark on the Patriots.

Twice daily practices start today. That's also when Carroll's first crisis of camp could come if Dave Meggett doesn't show up.

Carroll's situation is different. He wasn't with the Patriots last season. He was San Francisco's defensive coordinator the past two seasons.

"I've said that from the first day I was here and I'll keep saying that, because that's the way I'm running it," Carroll said. "I'm not backing off it now. I'm not going to be happy with something less."

Meggett missed a mandatory minicamp last month, an absence the Patriots assumed was for personal reasons. "Yet he was the only player who didn't show up for Wednesday's physicals and conditioning drills."

"There's a unique pressure," he said. "But there are some great similarities there as well in such a highly regarded coach that you're following as Bill Walsh and Bill Parcells."

For the first time in its history, the Carter Cup will be represented by a traveling trophy, which will spend its first year at the 1997 Golf Association headquarters in Boise.

Jerome Roping Club plans open event

JEROME — The Jerome Roping Club will host an open roping at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the Jerome County Fairgrounds. The roping is free for $5, up to 100 teams, progressive after one, capped at a No. 5. USTRC numbers will be used. For more information, call Krystal Schvaneveldt, 324-3152.

TWIN FALLS — The Above the Rim 5-on-5 basketball tournament will be held Aug. 1-2 at O'Leary Junior High School. Area high school teams encouraged to enter the double-elimination tournament. Players will receive a T-shirt.

An all-tourney team and a most valuable player will be selected, and stats will be kept. The entry fee is $150 per team. For more information, call 735-9438 and ask for Kenny.

Burley ballgames start Friday morning

BURLEY — The annual Burley All-Star Baseball Tournament will start at 8 a.m. Friday and Saturday. Games will be played at the softball and little league fields at Freedom Park and at the Heyburn Ball Park.

Thirty-four teams — 13 teams in the 9-10 and 12 teams in the 11-12 brackets — are expected to compete with a guarantee of three games each on Friday. The seeding for Saturday will be determined from the Friday results.

On Friday night, a "Home Run Derby" with 9-10, 11-12, 13-16 and 17 and up divisions starts at 6:30 p.m. on the softball fields. Three swings cost $1.

A judge gun to check throwing speed is available for all ages and at no charge during the derby.

Tournament sponsors estimate 1,300 to 1,400 people to be in town for the event.

Rupert plans Lil' Spartan football camp

RUPERT — The Lil' Spartan 1997 Football Camp is scheduled from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. July 22, 23, and 24 at the Minico High School football field.

The camp, with emphasis on individual technique and skills development, is open to future Spartan football players in the second to seventh grades. The fundamentals of football, sportsmanship, and most of all, having fun — will be stressed.

The cost is $25 and each athlete will receive a T-shirt. Campers need to bring shorts and cleats or shoes.

For questions, call Tim Perritt at 677-3418 or Steve Haugeberg at 678-5933.

High schoolers invited to football camp

RUPERT — The Spartan Pride 1997 Football Camp for grades eight through 12 will be from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. July 29-31 at the Minico High School field. Check-in is at 6 p.m. on Tuesday.

The camp will stress the fundamentals of football, safety, sportsmanship and teach techniques to improve players for the fall.

The $25 cost includes a camp T-shirt. Campers must provide cleats or shoes and wear shorts.

Call Tim Perritt at 677-3418 or Steve Haugeberg at 678-5933 for more information.

Broncos, tight end reach $7.2 million deal

GREENEY, Colo. — Shannon Sharpe arrived at training camp Wednesday with a three-year, $7.2 million contract with the Denver Broncos that will make him one of the highest-paid tight ends in the NFL.

The contract was worked out during about six hours of meetings Tuesday and was signed in time for Sharpe to report to training camp at the University of Northern Colorado.

Sharpe's base salary in 1996 was $1.35 million, which put him among the highest-paid tight ends in the league.

The agreement is similar to a three-year, $7.5 million contract that Ben Coates signed with New England in May.

Warriors hire Westhead as assistant coach

OAKLAND, Calif. — Paul Westhead, former coach of the Los Angeles Lakers, Chicago Bulls and Denver Nuggets was hired Wednesday as an assistant coach by the Golden State Warriors.

Westhead, who most recently coached on the collegiate level at George Mason, also has coached at LaSalle and Loyola Marymount.

Westhead led the Lakers to the 1990 NBA title with a 50-18 regular-season record. Overall, he was 111-50 in three seasons with the Lakers from 1979-82.

He joins new Warriors coach P.J. Carlesimo.

Mets' GM, co-owner clash; GM loses

NEW YORK — Joe McVaine was fired Wednesday as general manager of the surprising New York Mets, the apparent victim of a personality conflict with co-owner Fred Wilpon and manager Bobby Valentine.

Steve Phillips, 34, was promoted from assistant general manager to the GM job, and will be given a contract through the 2000 season.

McVaine, who was offered another job in the organization, was the Mets' scouting director when they picked Phillips in the 1991 June draft.

Celtics waive Radja, free up $2.8 million

BOSTON — Forward-center Dino Radja was placed on waivers by the Boston Celtics on Wednesday, the team said.

Radja, 30, has been with the Celtics for four seasons. A native of Croatia, Radja was the Celtics' second-round draft choice in the 1995 NBA draft. He led the Celtics in scoring and rebounding in 1995-96.

Radja, who is under contract to Boston for three years, was scheduled to make about $5.6 million next season. The Celtics then would have about $2.8 million, roughly half his salary for next season, to spend on a free agent, Pitino said.

Sonics owner says he'll talk to Kemp

SEATTLE — Seattle SuperSonics owner Barry Ackerley said Wednesday he'd be happy to talk to Shawn Kemp if the disgruntled All-Star forward asks for a meeting.

Kemp has demanded to be traded, saying he would never play for the Sonics again. On Tuesday, his agent said Ackerley had not returned calls seeking a meeting.

Ackerley, in turn, issued a statement saying Sonics president Willy Walker and other club representatives had been spurned in their requests for a meeting with Kemp.

Stinson leads Sting past Starz at home

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Andrea Stinson had 19 points and 10 rebounds and the Charlotte Sting remained unbeaten at home with a 75-63 victory over the Utah Starz on Wednesday night.

Stinson added five assists and three steals as the Sting (5-5), who have yet to win on the road, sent Utah to its fifth loss in as many games against Eastern Conference teams.

The Starz (3-9) were unable to overcome early shooting problems and fell to 0-2 on their five-game Eastern swing. Charlotte forced 16 turnovers and had a 36-27 rebounding edge over Utah, which came in averaging a WNBA-leading 36.9 rebounds.

Martinez ties McGwire in homer race

CHICAGO (AP) — Tino Martinez tied Mark McGwire for the major-league lead in homers at 33 with a go-ahead grand slam and a solo shot leading the New York Yankees over the Chicago White Sox 11-5 Wednesday.

Martinez hit his fourth career grand slam off Wilson Alvarez (8-7) on an 0-2 pitch in the seventh inning.

Following Derek Jeter's single and walks to Luis Sojo and Paul O'Neill, Martinez, who had 31 homers with Seattle in 1995, connected in the third to set a career high.

Andy Pettitte (11-5) had his scoreless inning streak snapped at 23 innings in the second. He gave up five runs and nine hits in 6 1/3 innings.

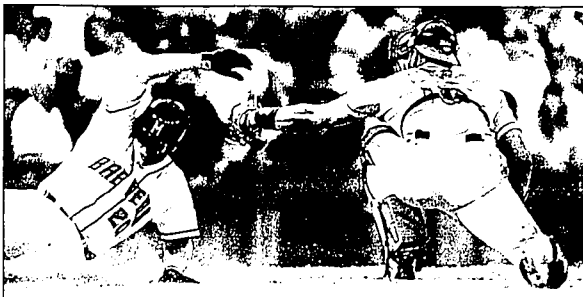

Alvarez, who had won his previous five decisions, was tagged for a season-high 10 runs and nine hits in 6 1/3 innings. Wade Boggs had an RBI single in the seventh after Tony Castillo relieved, then added a homer in the ninth.

New York took a 3-0 lead in the first on O'Neill's RBI single and Mariano Duncan's two-run double.

Red Sox 4, Orioles 1

BALTIMORE — Steve Avery won his first decision since April 22 and Mike Stanley hit the circuit homer off Jimmy Key as the Boston Red Sox beat the Baltimore Orioles 4-1 Wednesday night.

Avery (3-0), making his third start since coming off a two-month stint on the disabled list, allowed one run and eight hits in seven-plus innings. The left-hander struck out one, walked three and was aided by three double plays.

Signed as a free agent in January, Avery was 0-1 in four starts since beating Cleveland. Jim Corsi got three outs in the eighth and Heathcliff Slocumb worked the ninth for his 12th save.

Shane Mack had three hits and Nomar Garciaparra had a double and a triple for the Red Sox, who had lost four of five.

Rangers 6, Blue Jays 0

ARLINGTON, Texas — Darren Oliver pitched his second career shutout and Will Clark doubled twice and drove in three runs

Wednesday night to send the Texas Rangers to a 6-0 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Oliver (6-9) scattered eight hits in his first complete game and shutout this season. The right-hander, whose other shutout also came against Toronto on June 8, 1996, struck out four out of the eighth and pitched a 0.55 ERA in his career against the Blue Jays.

Warren Newson added a three-run homer in the sixth off Pat Hentgen (9-7) as the punchless Blue Jays dropped their third straight and were shut out for the seventh time. Hentgen, the 1996 Cy Young award winner, allowed six runs and 10 hits in 5 1/3 innings, his shortest outing since Oct. 1, 1995. Hentgen, who had made 55 starts since then, struck out five and walked one.

Indians 4, Brewers 3

MIHLWAUKEE — Rookie Jared Wright pitched six effective innings and Brian Giles homered Wednesday night to lift the Cleveland Indians past the Milwaukee Brewers, 4-3.

Wright (2-0), making his first start since cutting his right index finger attempting to bunt on July 17, allowed two runs and three hits. The 21-year-old right-hander struck out six in his third career start.

Jose Mesa started the seventh following a 1-hour, 8-minute delay. Mike Jackson gave up a two-out RBI single to Jesse Lewis in the ninth before getting his 12th save. Giles hit his 11th homer and added an RBI double for the Indians, who won for the fifth time in six games.

Brown 1-hits L.A. for Dodgers' 2nd loss in July

MIAMI (AP) — Kevin Brown pitched his first career one-hitter, leading the Florida Marlins over Los Angeles 5-1 Wednesday night and sending the Dodgers to their second loss in 13 games this month.

Brown (9-6), who no-hit San Francisco on June 10, faced just two batters over the minimum, allowing a leadoff single to left by Raul Mondesi in the fifth. Brown then retired his final 15 batters.

He struck out eight and walked one in his fourth complete game of the season. The Dodgers' run was unearned; Brown has allowed one earned run or none in 10 of 20 starts this season.

Hideo Nomo (9-8) dropped to 0-3 this season against the Marlins as Los Angeles lost for the first time in eight road games. Nomo, 0-4 at Miami in his career, was tagged for four runs and eight hits in 5-2 1/3 innings with five walks.

Cubs 6, Mets 5

NEW YORK — Right fielder Sammy Sosa made a nunning catch with the bases loaded to end the seventh inning and catcher Scott Servais had the key pickoff in the eighth, leading the Chicago Cubs over the New York Mets 6-5 Wednesday night.

The Cubs stopped their four-game losing streak and sent the Mets to their third straight loss. Before this game, New York fired general manager Joe McVaine despite starting the day with a 51-41 record, fourth-best in the NL.

Rookie Jeremi Gonzalez (7-2) lasted just long enough to get the victory, giving up five runs in five innings. John Olerud hit a three-run homer and Todd Hundley had a two-run double for the Mets.

The ball at the edge of the warning track. Sosa broke the wall to break his momentum, and was met by a half-dozen Cubs outside the dugout when he returned.

Trailing 6-5, the Mets loaded the bases with two outs in the seventh. Terry Adams relieved, and Bernard Gilkey lined his first pitch deep into the gap in right-center.

Sosa turned his back to the infield, reeled back into the alley and backhanded the ball at the edge of the warning track. Sosa broke the wall to break his momentum, and was met by a half-dozen Cubs outside the dugout when he returned.

Phillies 6, Expos 0

PHILADELPHIA — Curt Schilling pitched a fourth-hitter for his first shutout this season and Scott Rolen homered and drove in two runs Wednesday night to lead the Philadelphia Phillies to a 6-0 win over the Montreal Expos.

Schilling (11-8), involved in trade rumors with several teams, struck out seven and did not walk a batter in his fourth complete game. The right-hander, who leads the NL with 176 strikeouts, also allowed a runner to reach third in pitching the Phillies' first shutout of 1997.

The shutout was Schilling's first since last Aug. 21 and the ninth of his career. He combined with Ricky Bottalico to shut out the Dodgers on opening day.

Rico Brogna also homered for the Phillies, who won back-to-back games for the first time since May 17-18 against Houston. Philadelphia won for just the fifth time in 28 games.

Reds 7, Pirates 3

PITTSBURGH — Jon Nunnally homered and drove in three runs in his first NL start and Dave Burba remained unbeaten in Pittsburgh as the Cincinnati Reds stopped the Pirates' four-game winning streak, 7-3 Wednesday night.

Burba (6-9) improved to 5-0 in three Rivers Stadium, including 2-0 this season. He gave up three runs and eight hits in his second complete game and the Reds' second 7-3 season.

Pittsburgh lost for only the third time in 14 games.

Nunnally, acquired Tuesday in a four-player trade with Kansas City, and Willie Greene hit consecutive homers in the fifth off starter Esteban Loaiza (6-7) as the Reds scored six of their runs with two outs.

Astros 8, Giants 1

HOUSTON — Mike Hampton pitched a four-hitter to win his third shutout Wednesday night, leading the Houston Astros to an 8-1 win over the San Francisco Giants.

The Astros have won five of seven since the All-Star break and seven of their last nine. The Giants have lost three of four and five of seven since the break.

Hampton (6-7), who began the season 2-6, has won four of five shutouts in his last six starts. The left-hander won the distance for the third time in his last four starts, struck out six and walked none.

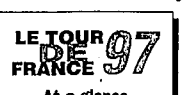

Tim Lincecum homered and Hampton added an RBI single in for the Astros.

Padres 4, Cardinals 3

ST. LOUIS — Ken Caminiti singled home the go-ahead run with two outs in the ninth inning Wednesday night as the San Diego Padres rallied to beat the St. Louis Cardinals 4-3.

San Diego scored twice in the eighth to tie the score at 3.

At a glance

STAGE: The 11th stage from Andorra to Perpignan, 119.3 miles, as the tour comes down from the mountains.

WINNER: Laurent Desbiens was awarded the victory after Ukraine's Sergel Ouschakov interfered in the final sprint, Marco Finco was second, Ouschakov was placed third.

HOW THE OTHERS FARED: Bike fans, last year's winner, almost five minutes behind.

TOUR TIDBIT: The riders and major officials hopped a plane immediately after the race to go to St. Etienne, where they will stay three nights. Thursday is a rest day and Friday is a time trial.

THAT'S THE WAY TO WIN: Then they leave St. Etienne to get to L'Alpe d'Huez on Saturday.

QUOTE OF THE DAY: "I wanted to win for Contis; I dedicated this victory to Tony Rominger," Laurent Desbiens, on his team leader who went out of the tour last week with a broken collarbone.

NEXT STAGE: There is a rest day in St. Etienne on Thursday, Friday's 12th stage is a 34.2-mile time trial around St. Etienne.

approaching the finish line. Ouschakov finished first but Desbiens immediately raised his hand in protest while crossing the line.

Carlo Finco of Italy was second and Ouschakov was placed third. The three broke away from the main group. It was the second time in a week that a rider's apparent victory was taken away for an irregular sprint.

Friday, Erik Zabel of Germany was placed last after finishing first. He then won the next two stages.

There is rest day on Thursday in St. Etienne and an important time trial there Friday.

From there there are four days in the Alps before another time trial in Disneyland Paris July 26 and the finish in Paris on July 27.

Desbiens' victory came as the Tour came down to the plains after two days in the Pyrenees.

Bowladrome partners see change

TWIN FALLS - Now for the rest of the story about Mike Devine, Ed Chappell, Dave Dellect and the Bowladrome, Inc., that we started last week.

They came to Twin Falls from different parts of the country. Mike and Dave from Illinois. They came to Twin Falls with ideas of buying into a bowling center.

BOWLING
Thelma Tucker

At this same time Eddie was working as Manager for the Brunswick Corporation, which owned the Bowladrome.

They became a team, and now Eddie is the general manager, Mike heads up maintenance and Dave has the pro shop - a rounded threesome that keeps things going.

They are plenty busy, accommodating 23 leagues each week during the regular season, plus school activities, open bowling and many bowling parties that are hosted by their center.

The Bowladrome was once located on Main Avenue. It opened with 24 lanes on Eastland Drive in 1956. The area where lanes 1 through 6 are now was set up for pool tables. Those six lanes were updated in 1987.

The lanes were upgraded with Guardian Lanes Surfline in 1987, and the automatic scorers were added in 1993.

The Bowladrome is currently the third largest bowling center in Idaho, behind Westy's Garden Lanes, Boise, a 40-lane center, and the 32 lanes housed at Meridian Lanes.

In bowling's early days, the sport had a bad reputation, Chappell said. Bowling alleys had a bar-like atmosphere, and ladies did not participate. Alleys and gutters are among the terms that have changed as the sport has matured.

Today's bowling atmosphere is more family oriented. It used to take six hours to bowl three games on a league but, with the new equipment, a five-person team can roll three games in 2 1/2 hours.

Pin boys have been replaced by automatic pinsetters, hand-scoring by automatic scorers, foul lines by foul lights, wood lanes by synthetics, and wooden bowling balls to the myriad high-tech creations that we have now.

With all the changes that have taken place, do you suppose that if we all could come back in 100 years, we would recognize the game?

Intercity golf association takes to the links

JEROME - The fourth match of the Magic Valley Ladies Intercity Golf Association was held at Jerome Country Club Tuesday.

The Twin Falls team moved into first place with 48 points. The Jerome girls fell to second with 44.5 points. Canyon Springs was in third at 38.5 points. Blue Lakes has 39, Clearwater has 32.5, Gooding had 30, Burley has 29 and Rupert has 27.5.

Medalists for the day was Rupert's Sergene Jensen with 78. Second went to Kathy Handchett from Canyon Springs with 82. Clear Lake's Oleta Robert took third with 83. Twin Falls teammates Charlotte Brunelli and Mary Ferrell tied for first net in third at 38.5 points. Blue Lakes has 39, Clearwater has 32.5. The next match will be at Fennan on Friday, July 19.

Twin Falls seniors head down under

TWIN FALLS - Twin Falls High School had an outstanding football season last fall, which included reaching the semi-final game of the Class A-1 state championship.

Seven of the graduated seniors received special recognition in being selected to represent Idaho's South team in the 9th annual Down Under Bowl. Idaho's South team is made up of the finest senior football players from all the high schools in Southern Idaho. They will be competing against the best high school all star teams from throughout the United States in Melbourne, Australia. The competitors left Wednesday and return July 28.

ball game. The boys, as a team, found sponsors to help defray the costs, which amounted to $3,000 per player.

The Down Under Bowl is each June and July in Australia and

New Zealand. American All Star football teams play each other and American All Star cheerleaders and dance/drill team members perform in various cities throughout Australia and New Zealand.

Battery charges filed against jail inmates

TWIN FALLS - Battery charges have been filed against four Twin Falls County jail inmates accused of beating up another inmate.

The four attacked the inmate at about 6:50 p.m. Tuesday, according to Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department reports. The victim, inmate Charles Quickenden, needed 10 stitches to close a cut over his eye and has been placed in a segregation unit for his own safety, sheriff's department officials said.

Inmates Jason William Cates, 19, Michael Wayne Talamantes, 25, Aaron Max Boldt, 23, and Levi Joseph Seal, 19, all face battery charges in the beating. All are in jail on other charges, and bail was set at $500 for each.

Quickenden was talking on the phone about one of the charges facing him, and Cates overheard the conversation, the reports said. Quickenden's charge apparently was connected with Cates' family, the reports said.

Quickenden told deputies Cates confronted him about the phone conversation, then Talamantes, Boldt and Seal came into the room and began beating him. Quickenden is being held on a Gooding County warrant on a charge of sexual abuse of a person under 16 and $1,000 bail on a local charge of battery, jail records say.

Sheriff's officials say fights among inmates are not uncommon, but charges in the fights rarely are filed.

TF band remembers 1930s during today's concert

TWIN FALLS - The Twin Falls Municipal Band will remember the 1930s when it performs at 8 p.m. today at City Park.

Featured on the program are Aaron Copland's "An Outdoor Overture," some early Duke Ellington and Benny Goodman swing, a late John Philip Sousa march and memorials of Judy Garland. The Marshbords will present a barbershop intermission.

Weekly concerts start at 8 p.m. Thursdays through Aug. 7, rain or shine. Admission is free.

Democrats schedule picnic for Harmon Park Saturday

TWIN FALLS - Twin Falls County Democrats will hold their annual picnic from noon to 4 p.m. Saturday at Harmon Park.

Kimberly School Board to convene Tuesday

KIMBERLY - The regular July meeting of the Kimberly School Board will be held at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the high school library.

The meeting originally was scheduled for today.

Transportation Department announces road construction

SHOSHONE - The new roadway at the south end of the realignment of U.S. Highway 93 south of Shoshone is being built, the Idaho Transportation Department said.

A detour route will be paved today to carry traffic so crews can build the connection from the new alignment to U.S. 93. New asphalt will be laid in during the next few weeks. The new section should be built and paved in August, meaning that traffic will be shifted onto the new section by Labor Day.

Realignment is continuing on the north end of the project.

After traffic is shifted to the new alignment, crews will remove the old roadway and eliminate slopes that obstruct sight. The project should be completed by early fall.

Flaggers will assist travelers through the work zone. Motorists are reminded to use caution in the construction area; speeding fines are higher in work zones.

The new alignment of U.S. 93 is about 100 feet east of the current roadway. It will be flatter and straighter with fewer sight obstructions, allowing motorists to pass more safely.

Jackpot Advisory Board schedules Monday meeting

JACKPOT, Nev. - The Jackpot Advisory Board will meet at 5:30 p.m. Monday at the Jackpot Fire Station training room.

A special meeting, prior to the regular meeting, is set for 3:30 p.m. starting at the Jackpot Fire Station. The advisory board will meet with Randy Brown and Lynn Foreberg to tour Jackpot and pick out possible cemetery sites before voting on a site.

The public is invited to both meetings; public comments are welcome.

Also, Elko County commissioners will hold their midmonth meeting Wednesday in Jackpot; the meeting starts at 2:30 p.m. at the Jackpot Recreation Center and is open to the public.

Hansen asbestos cleanup begins

School officials don't disclose costs

By Jennifer Taylor Times-News writer

HANSEN - Cleanup starts today of cancer-causing asbestos found July 2 during demolition at the old Hansen High School.

Asbestos Abatement Inc. in Boise was awarded the contract Wednesday morning and will start the two-week cleanup this afternoon. But the contractor and school district officials have refused to say how much the job will cost.

Korry Holden, general manager of the cleanup company, said all debris will be handled as though it is contaminated. Machines will perform 90 percent of the cleanup to limit employee exposure.

The debris will be placed into dump trucks lined with two thick layers of plastic and taken to the Twin Falls landfill, he said.

The company would not say how much the cleanup will cost.

Hansen Superintendent Dennis Coulter refused comment and referred questions to the district's lawyer, Bill Hofffield of Twin Falls.

Hofffield did not return repeated phone calls from The Times-News Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Coulter and School Board President Jeanne Gibson would not disclose the amount of the cleanup costs, which is public record under Idaho law.

The Hansen district and the demolition contractor, C. L. Stutzman Excavating Inc. of Twin Falls, are jointly liable under Environmental Protection Agency regulations, said Becky Georing, state asbestos program coordinator for the EPA. They both should have made sure an asbestos check was conducted before demolition began June 30, she said.

Asbestos found in the debris is easily crumbled by hand, because it was left in the building during demolition, Georing said.

Asbestos in this state is more likely to break up and be inhaled, and inhaling asbestos can cause cancer. But Dr. Kennon Heard, toxicologist for the Rocky Mountain Poison and Drug Center, said people normally have to be exposed to asbestos for a long period of time before hardening or scarring of the lungs or lung cancer takes place.

"Everybody is very sensitive of exposure, but there's not a lot of cases of short-term exposure problems," he said.

Some community residents are upset at the school district.

The first contaminated sample was drawn July 1 from a leaking faucet, said Irene Carnahan, chairwoman of the King Hill Domestic Water District. As a result, the EPA ordered four more samples. The second testing, July 9, showed no contamination at the original source, but a sample taken from a different location produced evidence of impurities in the water.

Carnahan said the bad results may have been a case of improper sample handling. Although she normally tests water for the local district, recent surgery forced her to depend on volunteer help to draw the samples.

"I really don't think anybody has much to worry about," Carnahan said.

Two wells, in operation since 1993, provide King Hill with its domestic water. Samples taken from the wells and storage tanks have shown no evidence of contamination.

Two more tests, to be drawn today and Aug. 1, must pass EPA clean-water standards before the boil order is lifted.

KING HILL - The Environmental Protection Agency has issued a boil order for the central hillside residents of King Hill after two samples from the domestic water supply showed signs of contamination.

Magic Valley Arts Council seeks support for granary project

By Pat Marantoni Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - As people toured the inside of an unused granary Wednesday evening, their chat echoed off the round walls and into the immense darkness.

They were there at the invitation of the Magic Valley Arts Council, recruiting partners to give new life to the building - a life including a cultural arts center.

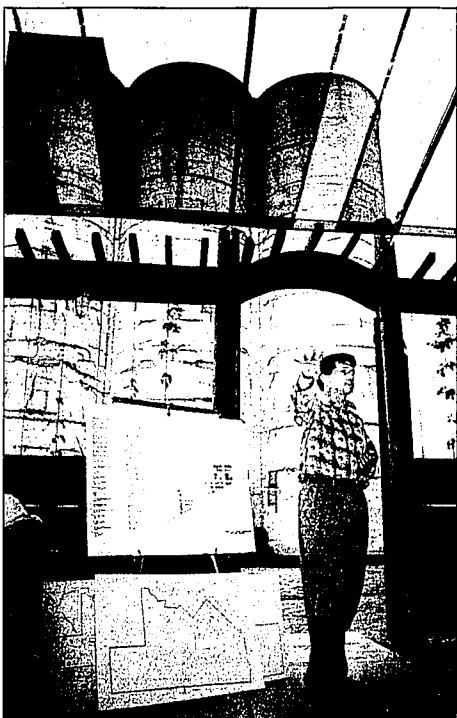

"Let your imagination go when you go in the place," encouraged the arts council's Kathy McMillan.

The big blue metal granary, between Muggers Brewery and the Depot Grill on Shoshone Street, is 130 feet in diameter and 4 1/2 stories tall. And at a meeting before the tour, organizers shared their visions with about 30 people about how the granary could be used to promote the arts and much more.

Such a center might hold a concert or small performance venue that could be used by other businesses or organizations to benefit the community, McMillan said.

"But we don't want to be the only one," she added.

Seattle architect Ron Jelaco has been hired by the nonprofit group, an umbrella organization for arts groups, to prepare a feasibility study of the project.

Seattle architect Ron Jelaco describes the benefits of an arts center to a group of business and civic leaders who met Wednesday to discuss the project.

"The purpose is, begin a dialogue to see who might be the possible partners in this," Jelaco said. "The arts council will do what it takes to be players and they're looking for other players."

Jelaco said he realizes Twin Falls might not support an arts-only center, but there are possibilities with other uses. He told the group about several examples of businesses or organizations getting together to make a project reality and said the same could be done with the granary. In Seattle, a theater group became partners with a housing agency on a building.

Within the granary structure, the arts council and its partners could share meeting places or classroom space, he said. The people who will buy into the project will be those who will lead the community into the next century, Jelaco added.

"The hard part is, convince them this is not an overpricing possibility," he said.

With the historic silo as the background, Jelaco talked about how the Old Towne area was the most powerful economic area in Twin Falls' first 50 years because of the railroad and other businesses.

"What they've done is left a tremendous series of buildings in their wake," he said.

His study must be completed by October, at which time, he says, he will hand it off to the council for the next step.

City Economic Development Director Dave McAlindin discussed other Old Towne and industrial projects funded by revenue from the increased property taxes from other completed projects.

About one dozen projects, including land purchase, street improvements and landscaping, will be funded in September with bonds and at no additional cost to taxpayers. In turn, more revenue from the newer projects could help fund more improvements, he said.

New chairman heads Filer School Board

By Leandra Reuble
Times-News correspondent

FILER - The Filer School Board voted in a new board chairman, Jim Ray, and vice chairman, Gerald Oltch, Tuesday night.

Filer High School has entered into an agreement with the College of Southern Idaho to let students still in high school receive college credit. For a $10 fee per class, students will be able to take a variety of technical prep courses at the high school and receive credit at both the high school and CSI. Students must maintain a B in the classes to receive the credit.

In other Filer School Board business, the board discussed the possibility of rezoning the trustee zones to accommodate population increases.

The current zones have been in place for 25 years without an update.

Superintendent Bill Feusahrens said officials would like zone sizes to be within 10 percent of each other.

The board approved $11,300 for B S Construction to replace the brick facade on the middle school gym; workers will seal the brick to prevent future erosion.

• J Bar S Construction also received $9,439 to replace ceiling tile at the middle school auditorium. The previous tile was found to contain asbestos.

• Paula Leninghaus was hired to teach fifth grade half-time and special education half-time at Hollister Elementary.

• The board accepted the resignations of Jill Hudson, Filer Elementary School secretary, and Drua Skogen, a teacher at Magic Hot Springs.

• The electrical power to the scoreboard and concession stand was voted to be upgraded at a cost of $3,000.

• Dampers for the gas furnace at the high school were approved at $1,665.

• The board also approved purchase of a $5,280 computer program that will set building temperatures automatically during vacations.

• Feusahrens said he is working on a $62,000 state technology grant to buy computers for the school district.

Boaters avoid disaster after river accident

Rescuers pull man from rock at 4 a.m.

By Mark Heinz
Times-News writer

JEROME - Two Jerome residents narrowly escaped disaster after ignoring a Jerome County Sheriff Department's recommendation to stay off the Snake River.

David Altes, 24, and Tamar Rakes, 26, were thrown from their small inflatable boat into the river late Monday while floating near Yingst Road just below the Jerome Country Club, Undersheriff Jocelyne Roberts said.

Deputies and Search and Rescue teams from Jerome arrived on the scene at about 10:35 p.m. and found Altes stranded on a rock in the river, Roberts said.

It took until nearly 4 a.m. Tuesday to rescue him, she said.

During an interview with deputies later, Rakes said the boat got carried into a strong current and her oar broke, Roberts said. Rakes told deputies the boat then flipped, and she and Altes were pulled under.

Rakes came out of the water on the north shore and Altes was thrown onto the rock, according to Rakes' statement.

Rake told deputies she walked to a nearby house and called for help, Roberts said.

Roberts said a search team provided light while deputies tried to put a boat in the water and go after Altes, but soon decided it was too dangerous.

Twin Falls Search and Rescue workers finally got to Altes in a canoe and brought him back to shore, Roberts said.

Both victims were taken to St. Benedict's Family Medical Center, Roberts said. Rakes was treated for a foot injury and released and Altes was treated for exposure and released, she said.

Although an official ban on boating local sections of the Snake River has been lifted, Roberts said the sheriff's department still recommends against it.

Investigators: Child porn not linked to Ramsey case

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) - Investigators working the JonBenet Ramsey slaying have discovered no evidence linking child pornography to the little girl's death, the district attorney's office said Wednesday.

Assistant district attorney William Nagel's statements came as he opposed a motion to unseal search warrants and other documents in the Ramsey case. Several media outlets went to court Wednesday to appeal a county court's ruling that the documents remain sealed until September.

They argued the public has a constitutional right to know what's in the documents, while prosecutors contended releasing the information could impede the investigation. JonBenet was found dead in her family's basement Dec. 26 about eight hours after her mother said she found a ransom note. There have been no arrests and no suspects named.

Earlier this month, it was reported that Arvada Detective Walt Parsons was brought on to the case to investigate child pornography computer databases in connection with JonBenet's death. Parsons works in the Crimes Against Children Unit in Arvada, a Denver suburb.

Searches, interviews and other efforts in the investigation have turned up nothing to indicate a link between the slaying and child pornography, according to Nagel.

He referred to the child pornography issue as an example of a leak to the media that would not be resolved by opening the sealed documents.

Lawyers here have been criticized from the beginning for their work in handling the investigation, primarily for failing to secure the crime scene and allowing John Ramsey to find his daughter's body.

In April, District Attorney Alex Hunter conceded the Ramseys are a focus of the investigation. But he also stressed investigators are following all leads, including the possibility an outsider committed the crime.

The Ramseys were first interviewed by investigators in April after extensive negotiations. They returned to the Boulder County Justice Center on Saturday for another interview with Lou Smit, a retired Colorado Springs homicide investigator who serves on a special prosecution task force in the case, said Suzanne Laurion, the district attorney's spokeswoman.

Boulder authorities also have another witness in their hands, the Colorado Bureau of Investigation has finished testing the ransom note for finger and palm prints and forwarded the results to Boulder investigators.

Laurion would not comment on the results, nor would she detail the latest interview with the Ramseys or whether additional interviews were expected.

The slaying of the little beauty queen has gripped the nation and led to anger and frustration as months pass without an arrest. Investigators, from the beginning, have been particularly tight-lipped about their work.

Earlier this week, the state Supreme Court refused to hear arguments to keep JonBenet's autopsy report sealed. All but six brief portions of the report were released Monday, with the remaining portions to be opened Aug. 13.

On Wednesday, attorney Thomas Kalich, representing the media, termed the case "stalled." He said release of the information could do nothing to harm the case.

Officials search for AWOL postman suspected of theft

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - A warrant has been issued for the arrest of a St. George postal worker who is suspected of stealing mailbags containing $270,000 last year.

Judge J. Thomas Greene re-arrested Duane D. Fox, 26, on May 17 until his trial date, provided that he report to pretrial services officers once a week, surrender his passport, take a psychiatric examination and remain at his Hurricane home.

But pretrial services officer David G. Christensen notified Greene on Friday that Fox, who surrendered to authorities last month in the middle of a nationwide manhunt, hadn't checked in since June 30 and failed to show up for the psychological evaluation.

According to documents filed Monday in U.S. District Court, Fox has not been seen since June 28. Greene issued a warrant for Fox's arrest on Friday.

Fox was awaiting trial after pleading not guilty to a one count charge of kidnapping.

In their last meeting, Fox asked for permission to move in with his parents in Orem, Christensen said. But his parents have not seen him, and neighbors it has seen two weeks since Fox has been at his Hurricane home. Also, his girlfriend said she doesn't know his whereabouts, Christensen added.

Fox disappeared with three mailbags Dec. 2 after dropping one bag off at the Southern Utah Federal Credit Union. He turned up six weeks later at the Salt Lake International Airport, where he surrendered to postal authorities.

At a court hearing in January, Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Lambert told U.S. Magistrate

Ronald Boyce that Fox had apparently spent those six weeks in Latin America.

The missing money was never found, and prosecutors said Fox refused to say what he had done with it.

While he was in jail awaiting arraignment, Fox was severely beaten by other inmates. There was some speculation that the prisoners were trying to force him to disclose the whereabouts of the missing money. Jail officials later said those prisoners suspected Fox of being a "snitch."

Man charged in shootout will fight extradition

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) - A Colville man charged in a videotaped shootout with Ohio state troopers will fight extradition to that state to stand trial, his attorney said Wednesday.

Cheyne Kehoe, 21, will likely have an extradition hearing sometime in August. It was unclear why Kehoe would fight a return to Ohio, since he turned himself in to law officers last month.

Defense attorney John Rodgers declined to reveal what grounds Kehoe would use to fight extradition.

"There is a reason why, but I can't tell you," Rodgers said.

Spokane Deputy Prosecutor Matt Duggan said successful efforts to fight extradition are rare, but not unheard of.

Meanwhile, Kehoe's brother, Chevie Kehoe, has dropped his fight against extradition from Utah, said his court-appointed attorney, Scott C. Williams.

Chevie Kehoe was served with a warrant signed by the governor of Ohio last week and could be retrieved by Ohio authorities at any time, Williams said.

Chevie Kehoe remained in the Salt Lake County Jail as recently as Tuesday, but Williams said he had been unable to determine whether Kehoe remained there Wednesday. Authorities were keeping their transportation plans secret for security reasons, he noted.

George J. Toynovich last month asked the governors of Utah and Washington to return the Kehoe brothers, both charged in the shootout and both being held in prison in Utah.

At extradition hearings, courts do not examine the merits of a case against the defendant, Duggan said.

Utah college student dies after 20-foot fall into ice crevice

AMERICAN FORK, Utah (AP) - A Utah State University student who was hiking and skiing with friends in American Fork Canyon was killed when he fell into an ice crevice.

Authorities said Fred Small, 26, San Jose, Calif., died after falling 20 feet into the crevice. He was with a group of friends who were hiking and skiing on snow and ice patches. The friends had spent most of the day skiing on a glacier at Emerald Lake.

About 4 p.m., they were returning down the trail when they stopped to ski an old avalanche.

About halfway down the slide, the group discovered that it was steeper and more slippery than expected, authorities said.

Small was slowly working his way down the slide when he fell, sliding down the slope and into the crevice. He suffered severe head injuries.

Other members of the group hiked down the trail and notified the camp host at Timpanoake Campground.

Small was transported by medical helicopter to LDS Hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

Chamber tries again: Maier named chief

Cassia considers funding

By Karen E. Haleznik
Times-News writer

edge of the area and glad to have Mark on board."

Maier has been active for several years on the Idaho Regatta in Burley. His appointment fills the void Becky Smith left in April. Lloyd said Smith served as executive director for nearly three years before leaving for personal reasons. Heubyn city grant administrator Ceia Spaulding was scheduled to take over for Smith on June 30, but after Heubyn offered her more money to stay, she turned the chamber's position down one week before she was to start. Spaulding said Wednesday she thought Maier would do a good job. "I think that's wonderful," said Spaulding, who has worked with Maier on projects in the past. "He's always been more than willing to help me and he's done a good job with the Burley boat regatta so I'm sure he'll do a great job for the Chamber of Commerce." Lloyd said Spaulding was their first choice at the time, but after re-evaluating the community's needs now Maier is their first choice, not their second. "After going back through the applicants, we were looking at different aspects," Lloyd said. "This time we were looking for public relations, promotion, marketing and grant funding, and Mark's got a lot of those things." Lloyd admits Maier, 28, is young and doesn't have a lot of experience with chambers, but "he's trainable," Lloyd said. And he knows the area and many of the people in it, which Lloyd said will serve Maier well in his new position. "It's been a long process, now I'm excited to get started on the great challenges ahead," said Maier, who grew up in the area and attended Valley High School. "When Bill Schafer left a few years back I wanted the position, but I felt I needed more experience and maturity." His experience with the Idaho Regatta over the last eight years and starting a family, Maier said, has helped give him gain both. Maier said he plans to bring himself up to speed on area economic development, a recent issue where he doesn't have much background. He's also looking forward to better acquainting himself with government groups such as city councils and county commissioners. "I've already developed relationships with many people in the community but I'm looking forward to developing those relationships on a new level," Maier said.

BURLEY - A week ago, Mini-Cassia Economic Development Commission members were ready to give up hopes of getting government money for a development specialist, said one of the backers of the plan. Patrick Robinson - one of the commissioners to attend a Cassia County commission meeting this week to voice support for an economic development specialist - said the development commission was ready to throw in the towel because county commissioners had shown little support for the plan. "The commissioners wouldn't make a stand," said Robinson, a Burley landlubber. "They have been very wishy-washy about this." Cassia County Administrator Tim Hurst said commissioners have tentatively budgeted the $15,000 the county commission requested. But he stressed that could change during the budgeting process. "We don't know if that money can be used for the commission or not," Hurst said. "We won't know until we are finished with the budgets." He said Cassia and Minidoka county commissioners met Monday and agreed more information was needed before funding the specialist. Robinson said he had been told commissioners were much more positive about the idea after 30 Mini-Cassia business people gathered to show their support for the position and to ask commissioners to pass their share.

Over-budget bids cause senior center delay

By Jennifer Taylor
Times-News writer

RUPERT - The senior center's renovations and additions will be put off until next year because the bids came in more than $16,000 over budget. The bidding, opened July 10, with bids coming from Hayes Construction Co. Inc. in Buhl, J Bar S Construction in Filer and Ron Stanley Co. Inc. in Twin Falls, said Pete Anderson, an architect with Myers and Anderson Architects in Pocatello. With bids ranging from $72,747 to $102,754, Anderson recommended the City Council reject the bids and re-bid the project in late October or the first of November so the contractor can start construction in the spring. "The cost of the bids received are high as compared to the work being done," Anderson said. The City Council voted Tuesday night to re-bid this fall. "There is no sense wasting money when we can save," Mayor Dwindle Allred said. The senior center had about $54,000 budgeted for the project. Idaho Department of Commerce, said city project coordinator Theo Schut. Although the Department of Commerce doesn't like waiting this long for the money to be used, it has no problem delaying the bid until October or November, said Kathy Uker, project assistant for Region 4 development. Two mechanical bids and two electrical bids also were received. "All areas appeared high," Anderson said. "The cost of the bids received are high as compared to the work being done," Anderson said. The City Council voted Tuesday night to re-bid this fall. "There is no sense wasting which would add 440 square feet to the building on 11th Street in Rupert. The facilities will be upgraded to make them handicapped accessible, the kitchen will be expanded and storage room will be added, board member Ralph Phillips said. "It has to be updated for safety reasons," he said. Anderson said the bids probably were so high because contractors are busy this time of year. The center was awarded an Idaho Community Development Block Grant in May 1996 from the

Asbestos

"They should have been more cautious and should have known there was asbestos in the building," said Jean Johnson, who lives about one mile from the school. "Just think how many people have been affected." Heard said a person exposed to very high levels of asbestos at one time may get a cough, fever or acute inflammation of the lungs, but the cases are rare. "It's not likely to cause a lot of problems in a brief exposure," he said. The type of asbestos found in the high school is chrysotile, the most common and least dangerous type of asbestos, Heald said. Since the asbestos-contaminated material has been doused with water on a six-hour sprinkler cycle, Gehring said there is no continuing exposure. Water keeps asbestos fibers out of the air. But residents are still londering how much they were exposed. "It's like a nightmare," Johnson said. "I think it was purely stupid on their part." Times-News staff writer Jennifer Taylor can be reached in Burley at 677-4012.

Controller: Use surplus to raise state workers' pay

BOISE (AP) — The state's unobligated cash surplus at the end of the budget year was more than $1 billion bigger than initially thought, reaching almost $1.3 billion through June 30.

State Controller J.D. Williams said Wednesday that the final figures reflect an unexpected increase in corporate tax receipts and strong growth in personal income tax more than offsetting weakness in sales tax receipts.

Williams said the extra money should help convince the 1998 Legislature to approve a pay raise for Idaho's 16,000 state employees.

Gov. Phil Batt recommended a 2-percent hike last winter, but cautious lawmakers refused to finance it. The governor since has said he would try to raise most state employees' pay through bonuses and other administrative methods, possibly including a reduction in the pension contribution.

"In an economy that is experiencing strong growth in the private sector, the competition is intense for good, qualified workers and we need to hang on to our valuable employees," Williams said.

"Although some employees

J.D. Williams

within individuals may have received bonuses and short-term increases, this did little for morale and did not offset inflation and the added costs of health insurance which all state employees experienced."

Batt agreed during a news conference in his office that the larger surplus improves the chances that legislators will be able to accommodate a pay raise next year. But he and Williams both cautioned that the state still faces more requests for prison funding, a forest fire season that still could have a costly flare-up and uncertainty about how much federal help will be available in response to this year's Idaho flooding.

The larger-than-anticipated cash surplus was aided by stronger tax collections from such corporations as Micron Technology Inc., which had been struggling with a dramatic decline in the international computer chip market. "Our state is strong, and we are in a resurgent mode," Batt said.

The year-ending surplus was a big turnaround from last winter when state tax revenues ran as much as $12 million behind projections. That prompted legislative budget writers to cut over $10 million from the proposed spending plan for the 1997-1998 fiscal year — saving $8 million alone by refusing to finance the employee pay raise.

Meanwhile, state Schools Superintendent Anne Fox announced that end-of-year checks sent to Idaho school districts Tuesday would provide more money per "support unit" than originally estimated because overall public school enrollment increased less than expected.

The Department of Education initially advised districts to base their budgets for the last school year on an estimated $17,099 in state support per support unit — roughly a classroom and teacher. But based on a smaller enrollment increase — 2,700 rather than the expected 3,600 — the payments wound up being $17,484 per unit.

Jerome to vacate street for school

By Dixie Thomas Roale
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Jerome schools soon will have one campus housing Central Elementary and the middle school, Superintendent Ray Cobble told the City Council on a bid to have the city vacate the stretch of West Third Avenue between North Birch and North Lincoln.

"The school owns land on both sides of the street and by eliminating the street dividing them, the district's long-term plan, including a library centrally located between the two schools and a possibly a breezeway between the buildings can be pursued," Cobble said Tuesday evening.

"The safety of the children is a major factor in reorganizing the map of the campus."

—Ray Cobble, Jerome Superintendent

The safety of the children is a major factor in reorganizing the map of the campus.

"Parking is to be moved to the north and northwest side of the middle school. Parking will also be located on Alder Street toward First Avenue West. The buses will load on Birch and Fourth Street," he said.

Cobble said he wants to eliminate traffic congestion on North Lincoln which regularly occurs when parents drop off or pick up children, and when buses arrive and depart. He wants to build a soccer field and install some playground equipment on the vacated street area.

The city needed to have easements in place and a map to all the utility lines and sewer connections so the city can continue to service utility connections.

Councilman Dennis Moore suggested the city make a verbal agreement with the school pending a written contract. That way the school can proceed with its plans while the city pins down location of the utility pipes and other connections.

In other Jerome city business:
• The City Council gave permission to Katherine Tyacke, who lives in the 800 block of East 18th Street, to block off East 18th between Hayes and Jackson streets for a block party from 3 to 9 p.m. Saturday.

Tyacke said she and her neighbors are trying to organize a Neighborhood Watch Program.

"They hope by having a neighborhood barbecue where the children are allowed to roam the neighborhood freely the children can get to know the other adults," she said. "In the event an emergency the children will have to know that the neighbors are safe people to go to for help."

The city also gave permission to Dianne Holly, a representative of St. Jerome's Parish, to block off East Avenue A from Adams to Buchanan streets on Sunday for an international festival, carnival and street dance.

Holly said the celebration will start with Spanish, Portuguese and English food at 11 a.m., a carnival at 2:30 p.m. and a street dance at 6:30 p.m. The celebration is scheduled to end at 9 p.m.

OK Paving of Twin Falls was awarded the bid for the West H Street paving project. West H, currently dirt and gravel, will be paved from Lincoln to South H Street.

OK Paving submitted the low bid of $37,940, said Mayor Gerald Oster said was below the original engineer's estimate.

• Lon McDonald volunteered to chair a committee to look into the feasibility of running a pipe down South Lincoln to irrigate maple trees planted along it. He said he belonged to a committee concerned with the maple trees, which had $800 or $900 that could be used for tree upkeep. McDonald said he would put together a plan and get back to the council.

Livestock raising gets reprieve in Hagerman

City will keep close tabs on FFA, 4-H projects.

By Gina Mulder
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — City officials corralled the issue of livestock within the city limits by passing an amendment to the city's animal ordinance.

Council members Tuesday night approved changes which will permit 4-H or Future Farmers of America animal projects in town on a temporary basis with a special-use permit. Before the Tuesday meeting, livestock in town was considered an unlawful nuisance.

Councilman Pete Weir said the revision is enough of a compromise to offer some latitude for educational purposes. However, the city will maintain control over the permit's criteria and time frame and will consider each application individually.

Weir also said a special-use permit would require the petitioner to publish the application in the county's newspaper of record, notify all neighbors within 300 feet and hold a public hearing. Also, any special-use permits would require an annual review by the council.

The revision also approves any existing pasture within the city limits. However, once the pasture is void of animals for six months, it loses the grandfather rights.

In other Hagerman council business:
• Council members decided to table discussion about a grant application to the Idaho Department of Water Resources until after the 1998 budget has been finalized. The grant, applied for in April by JUB Engineers on the city's behalf, would help finance an engineering study of the water system to determine what improvements will be necessary to add 107 shares of Big Springs water.

JUB's Scott Bybee said IDWR has approved the $50 percent matching grant, with a limit of $2,500.

"This is pretty straightforward and minor," Bybee said. "It will involve some calculations and costs on what can be done as far as alternatives to develop the rest of (the city's) water source out of Big Springs pipeline."

Bybee said he would tell IDWR Hagerman still is considering the grant.

• An ordinance fixing compensation for the mayor and City Council was read for the first time. It would increase the mayor's monthly wage from $225 to $275 and council members' pay from $75 a month to $125.

• Councilwoman Connie Brown submitted her resignation.

In a letter to the council, Brown said she had accepted employment out of state and would resign her position on the council effective Monday.

• City Attorney Phillip Brown said he had filed an appeal with the state Industrial Commission, protesting unemployment compensation to former city librarian Jan Vargo.

Vargo had requested unemployment benefits earlier this year, saying health construction forces forced her to resign her city library post and move to California.

The city of Hagerman disputes her claim, saying Vargo made no mention of health problems when she resigned.

Times-News correspondent Gina Mulder can be reached in Hagerman at 837-6273.

Castleford trustees accept teacher negotiations

By Leandra Reuble
Times-News correspondent

CASTLEFORD — The Castleford School Board voted Tuesday to accept negotiations with teachers and classified school-district staff.

Because they are locked into the state salary schedule, the vast majority of staff members did not move on the pay schedule, Superintendent Kelly Murphy said.

"The negotiations were extremely friendly," he said. "It was a serious attempt to keep everybody employed."

In other business at the Castleford School Board meeting:
• The board continued discussions concerning closing the school's campus to students in sixth through 12th grades but acted on Murphy's recommendation to keep the campus open. Students still will be allowed off campus on foot, but parents have the option of requesting the campus closed for their child.

• The board voted to maintain the same bus route as last year with a few adjustments for independent families who have moved into the area.
• Principal Andy Wiseman said the Future Farmers of America students who attended the national competition in San Francisco placed silver.

• He also expressed interest in forming a committee to look into the school's make-up policy for missed assignments; Mike Bulkeley, a School Board trustee, volunteered to serve on the committee.
• The board approved Murphy's request to dispose of two 1986 computers not being used by students.

• Murphy also said he is writing three grant applications for the school: for a new greenhouse, an English as Second Language program and a latchkey program to supervise reading after school.

• The board also voted to maintain the same meeting time and day — 8 p.m. Daylight Savings Time the third Tuesday of every month.

• Scott Tverly and Bulkeley, who both ran unopposed for School Board positions, were sworn in. Mary Potucek was voted in as chairman and David Smith as vice chairman of the Castleford School Board.

• Construction on the new addition to the gym is progressing satisfactorily, though Murphy said there have been the typical building headaches involved with construction.

Previously, the Times-News reported the school would build a new gym facility; actually, it is an addition to the existing gym.

The Times-News regrets the error.

Utah crews battle wildfire that claimed man's life

MONROE, Utah (AP) — A man trying to save a camp trailer threatened by a 7,700-acre wildfire near his central Utah town died while trying to contain the flames.

Fire crews found the body of Michael Brent Larsen, 21, of the Austin community north of here, early Wednesday morning. He was the first person to die in a Utah fire in seven years, said Kathy Jo Pollock, a spokeswoman with the Interagency Fire Center in Salt Lake City.

Sewer County sheriff's Lt. Delbert Lloyd said Larsen and the father of a friend had gone up the mountain in separate vehicles to retrieve the camper. Larsen had abandoned his truck at the top of the mountain when he was killed.

The other man, who was not identified, drove down the mountain through the flames and escaped unharmcd. Lloyd cautioned against trying to outrun a wildfire.

"You can't do it. This story speaks for itself," he said.

The last Utah wildfire fatality occurred in 1990 when two men were killed fighting a blaze at Wasatch State Park near Midway, Pollock said.

The search for Larsen began at 9 p.m. Tuesday, several hours after two fires near Monroe, 145 miles south of Salt Lake City, merged. The fires, one north of town and one south of town, began that afternoon, possibly ignited by lightning.

"It was an instant show. Both fires just got up and ran," said Bert Hart, Bureau of Land Management Richfield District spokesman. "It was crazy."

The fire, burning in grass, sage brush, oak, mahogany and nondescript pine, came within a mile of several homes here and moved eastward into the steep, rugged mountainside dotted by summer cabins.

Term limit initiative likely is unconstitutional, AG says

BOISE (AP) — An initiative proposal probably is unconstitutional because it includes two separate subjects under the name of an attorney general's advisory says.

The attorney general's office on Wednesday released its analysis of three initiative proposals, all filed just before a new law took effect.

Since July 1, initiatives face restrictions that many officials feel will make it nearly impossible to make the ballot in the future.

The attorney general's analysis of the initiatives is a preliminary step before ballot titles can be written and sponsors can start circulating the proposals.

The reports are advisory only and can be disregarded by the sponsors.

Donna Weaver, sponsor of the initiative, said Wednesday afternoon she hasn't had a chance to study the advisory. "I think we really will have to look at that," she said.

But Weaver, Hayden Lake, contended that both subjects in the initiative are closely related to the effort to enforce the term limit limitations approved by voters in 1994.

"It is not convinced that these two things are tied together," she said.

By next July, sponsors of initiatives must gather 41,325 signatures of registered voters to qualify for the November, 1998, general election ballot.

One initiative gives counties, municipalities and school districts the option to eliminate term limits by citizen initiative.

But it also has a section forbidding former members of the Legislature, or the Legislature's employees, from lobbying public agencies for the same number of years as the person served in the Legislature or worked there.

An analysis prepared by Deputy Attorney General Matthew McKeown said Article 3, Section 16 of the Idaho Constitution makes it clear that each act can cover no more than one subject unless they are very closely related.

"Section 2 of the proposed initiative attempts to enact legislation concerning two distinct subjects: county term limits and restrictions on lobbying," the report said.

The Idaho Supreme Court ruled in 1913 and 1923 that matters in a single act must be closely related.

Based on that, a reviewing court is likely to declare the entire initiative void, the report said.

Among the eight initiative proposals filed before the new law went into effect was a plan to eliminate most of the restrictions placed on initiatives by the 1996 Legislature. An advisory concluded it appears proper to amend initiatives by another initiative.

An initiative seeking to encourage candidates to declare their political affiliations also could run into legal problems, McKeown said. If a candidate signed a pledge, a label would be put by his or her name or if they refused to sign, that also would be noted on the election ballot.

Whether election officials can put any labels or descriptions beside the name of candidates is the subject of a lawsuit before the Supreme Court. The court heard arguments two months ago but hasn't issued a ruling yet.

The advisory said if the Supreme Court rules the related 1996 initiative is improper, courts also would strike down the latest attempt to encourage term limit labels.

Another section of the new proposal also could run into legal problems. It requires election officials to "post in a conspicuous place in every polling location a copy of the Term Limits Pledge."

State election laws forbid anyone from "circulating cards or handbills of any kind" within 100 feet of a polling place and another law forbids any pro-candidate material.

If that's the intent, the section should be revised to state that it takes precedence over state election laws, the advisory said.

Explosion rocks Victor motel again

VICTOR — One man was hospitalized and several businesses were evacuated after the third recent explosion at the Timberline Motel.

One man was taken to Teton Valley Hospital Tuesday with second-degree burns on his hands and face, said Teton County Commissioner Geneo Knight, an emergency medical technician. The man's condition and identity were not available.

There have been three incidences of some type of explosion or fire there in the last three weeks, Knight said.

On Sunday, a blast ripped through the same area in the motel's basement, injuring two people. One man was taken to Teton Valley Hospital and later released. Another man, Tim Scheiss of South Victor, was flown to a Salt Lake City hospital for treatment of burns and later was released.

Tuesday's explosion occurred about 12:30 p.m. Investigators were unsure of the cause. Gas was suspected, but the only source of gas to the building was turned off after Sunday's explosion, Knight said.

Old Inn auctioned for $11 million - maybe

ST. MARIES — The deteriorating Kootenai Inn, which a few months ago couldn't muster a $80,000 bid, has fetched $11 million at an auction. Or did it?

Some confusion reigned after Monday's auction on the steps of the Benewah County Commission. Two bidders, Vanessa Edwards of St. Maries and Peter Cooper of Hayden Lake, battled it out in an auction that went far past the value of the once-regal inn. When Cooper put in a bid for $11 million, Edwards topped it by $10,000.

County Auditor Key Sather said Edwards hadn't written her bid but as of Monday afternoon, the county hadn't heard from Cooper.

More women sue retired Rexburg doctor

IDAHO FALLS — Two Idaho women have filed a federal lawsuit against a retired Rexburg doctor they claim molested them when they sought medical treatment.

Dr. Laver Withers already faces a similar suit from a Wasatch County, Utah, woman who also alleges she was molested. The trial on Katherine C. Proctor's complaint starts Monday in U.S. District Court in Pocatello.

In the class-action suit filed Tuesday, Tee Andrew and Cindy Phillips allege Withers subjected them to "breast exams" even though they had unrelated medical problems. Andrew visited Withers complaining of a migraine headache and Phillips was suffering flu-like symptoms, according to court documents.

Homeowners win battle; valuations lowered

COEUR D'ALENE — Kootenai County commissioners have decided to change the way some rural property is assessed for taxes, giving homeowners in the Cougar Gulch area a victory.

The county changed the way it assessed rural property this year, but Monday's commission action means assessment rules will go back to the way they were in the past.

The change saves some Cougar Gulch homeowners hundreds of dollars each in property taxes. Forty-three homeowners won in this week's ruling and another 30 have filed similar appeals and commissioners said they likely will rule the same way in those cases.

Senate OKs new water plant for McCall

WASHINGTON — A federal appropriation of $2.5 million has been approved by the Senate for the McCall wastewater treatment plant, part of a large effort to remove pollution from Cascade Reservoir.

Wastewater from McCall and the Fish and Game Department's hatchery at McCall flows downstream in the Payette River and winds up in Cascade Reservoir. That contributes to high levels of phosphorus and algae in the reservoir.

The city of McCall is spending $3.1 million for the treatment plant, the state environmental agency $2.6 million and the Legislature appropriated $1 million. The Payette Lake Water and Sewer District also is contributing $600,000.

High court rejects malpractice claim

BOISE — In a 4-1 decision, the Idaho Supreme Court has refused to reinstate a lawsuit filed against Bingham Memorial Hospital after a patient received a chemical overdose.

The court ruled Wednesday that because Lea and Mark Mitchell failed to file a tort claim within 180 days of the 1992 incident, their later medical malpractice lawsuit was properly dismissed.

The Mitchells said Mrs. Mitchell was overdosed with a chemical, requiring several days in intensive care.

Idaho Falls learns identity of benefactor

IDAHO FALLS — A drive has raised $4.2 million for the Colonial Arts Center, and the Idaho Falls Arts Council has revealed the name of a donor who promised to match any donations up to $950,000.

At a party at their home Tuesday night, Miles and Virginia Willard said they put up the challenge grants.

Teens challenge sentence; prosecutor not worried

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Three Riggins teenagers are challenging their sentences for the 1995 murder of Fidela Tomchak, but Jefferson County Prosecutor Robin Dunn said they have little chance of success.

Christopher Shanahan, the admitted gunman, was sentenced to at least 35 years in prison last month after pleading guilty to first-degree murder and robbery.

His attorney has filed a motion in 7th District Court asking that Shanahan be sentenced as a juvenile.

He was 15 at the time of the killing, but was sentenced as an adult.

A similar motion was rejected earlier by 7th District Judge Brent Moss, who also will hear the latest request. An appeal on the same basis also was filed Tuesday with the Idaho Supreme Court, attorney Robert Crowley said.

A Supreme Court appeal also was filed for Benjamin "B.J." Jenkins.

Moss sentenced Jenkins to at least 15 years in prison after he pleaded guilty to second-degree murder and robbery. Jenkins, then 15, watched Shanahan shoot Tomchak and then helped steal beer, cigarettes, and cash from the store.

Thomas Lundquist is challenging his minimum 20-year prison sentence and seeking to overturn his felony murder conviction in 7th District Court.

Prosecutors painted Lundquist as the ringleader of the crime, even though he waited in the getaway car while Tomchak was robbed and killed.

Tomchak, 41, was shot in the back of the head Nov. 10, 1995, as she stocked a soda pop cooler in her family's convenience store in the rural community of Grant.

Shanahan and Jenkins both pleaded guilty and testified against Lundquist, who was the only one of the 17-year-olds who pressed his case to trial and was convicted by a jury.

Dunn said he was confident the conviction would be upheld.

"To me the trial was very, very clean," he said.

A hearing on the Lundquist and Shanahan appeals is scheduled Aug. 4 in Rigby.

Fish & Wildlife nominee seeks to reassure Idahoans

The Clinton administration's nominee to become director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service promised Sen. Dirk Kempthorne her agency's cooperation as Idaho deals with endangered and threatened species issues.

During Jamie Clark's confirmation hearing Wednesday before the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee, Kempthorne, R-Idaho, said

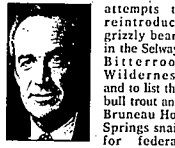

"Can you assure me that grizzly bears will not be released in Idaho within the next 18 months, and the state of Idaho will have an opportunity to work with the service to define the conditions regarding this issue?" he asked Clark.

"I will assure you, senator, that I believe we have ample time to work together with you, the state and other interested parties to address the concerns of the state of Idaho and to address the needs of the grizzly bear and to ensure that all of our collective interests are met," she replied.

Clark also agreed to address issues Kempthorne raised about protecting public safety and the authority of the citizen's advisory committee on grizzly bears.

In addition, she said she would work with the state on prelisting agreements for bull trout and on conservation agreements for Brunau Hot Springs snails, as well as to use updated data from Owyhee County aquifer monitoring wells.

'Missing' woman found 12 years later

Judy Roberts, a reporter at The News Tribune in Tacoma, Wash., shown in this undated photograph from her family, disappeared suddenly 12 years ago.

SITKA, Alaska (AP) — Twelve years after newspaper reporter Judy Roberts disappeared from Tacoma, Wash., she resurfaced in this Southeast Alaska community with a husband and two sets of twin girls.

Roberts, who moved to Alaska in 1989 under the name Jane Dee, told authorities and relatives she has no recollection of her life before she found herself in a Denver-area shopping mall shortly after her disappearance in May 1985.

Reporters calling at her home in a trailer park here Wednesday morning were told by her husband, Dan Williams, that she was not ready to speak with the media, that she was busy catching up with her family in Oregon and the first 27 years of her life.

A 12-year memory loss would be "highly unusual," said Dr. Gary Tucker, chairman of the University of Washington's psychiatry department.

But amnesia is one of the least understood neurological afflictions, said Michael Copass of the UW's neurology department. Amnesia can be caused by the mind's recoiling from "something terrible," Copass said.

Amnesia lasting years likely would involve other symptoms, none of which appear to exist in this case, said Dr. Vernon Neppa, a UW colleague of Tucker's, though he noted one should not reach conclusions "based on tiny amounts of fact."

There is no test to confirm an amnesia claim, Tucker said.

Doctors who treated Roberts in Denver told her that "whatever happened to you was like a near-death experience. It was so dangerous you blocked out everything," said Roberts' sister, Anne Corning of Beaverton, Ore., after a telephone conversation with her long-lost sibling.

"She's just overwhelmed with the fact that she's just found her family. She doesn't remember anybody. She doesn't know us. She doesn't realize who she is and what she did, and she's just in shock," Corning said.

Roberts' family and colleagues are just relieved that she is alive. The unsolved missing-persons case had recently been reopened as a homicide investigation.

"This is the best news. This is just wonderful," said her mother, Marilyn Roberts, from Lake Oswego, Ore., late Tuesday, still overwhelmed after she and her husband, Jim, had a two-hour phone conversation with their daughter, the second of five children from her family, disappeared suddenly 12 years ago.

"Everyone at The News Tribune feels a tremendous feeling of relief to know that Judy Roberts is alive. We would love to know more, but we're happy today just to know that Judy's alive," Tom Osborne, senior editor at The News Tribune in Tacoma, Wash., said Tuesday.

"She didn't know she was a reporter. She didn't know when her birthday was," Mrs. Roberts told KSTW-TV.

Her daughter, who turned 39 on Monday, thought she was 35, she said.

In the years she had been missing, Roberts reportedly became a waitress and put herself through the University of Denver, where she studied Russian, among other things, Corning told the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

She also apparently spent some time in Denver-area hospitals, where authorities were unable to confirm her identity.

Roberts was reported missing after she failed to appear for an assignment on May 20, 1985. Her car was found in a parking garage near the newspaper offices.

Some thought her tough reporting—including stories about corruption in government and the Green River serial killer—may have played a role in her disappearance.

In January, the case was reopened as a homicide investigation by the Pierce County sheriff's office in Tacoma after an intern noticed it was unworked while going through old files.

Pierce County Sheriff Mark French asked King County police to handle the investigation earlier this month after learning his own deputies were looking into allegations that he had threatened Roberts in 1985 over a story about his alleged cocaine use. French has said he asked Roberts not to report the allegations, and interviewed him if she did so.

"I always knew that I would be vindicated," he said of her reappearance Tuesday.

She resurfaced when a former Alaska coworker, who now lives in Washington state, saw her photograph in recent news stories about the old case.

"She recognized her and called us and said, 'I worked with her in another state,'" Elledge said.

The tipster provided a photograph of her former coworker, and "it looked just like Judy," Elledge said.

Roberts' family was shown the photo and confirmed the identification.

Mir commander unfit for repair job

MOSCOW (AP) — Russian space officials declared the commander of the Mir space station unfit for a grueling repair job and said Wednesday that a U.S. astronaut would begin training to replace him.

However, NASA officials said it was premature to say astronaut Michael Foale would participate in the delicate mission into a sealed-off module that was punctured last month in a collision with a cargo ship.

"He can do some basic things, but no official simulations or the actual spacewalk. None of that's been approved by NASA yet," spokeswoman Catherine Watson said from Russia's Mission Control outside Moscow.

She said a decision likely would be made within a few days.

While Russian officials insisted that Foale would begin training and was "clearly delighted" by the prospect, they also said they "move ahead." Should the two sides agree, the prospect of an American astronaut pitching in on repairs to a Russian spaceship would seem to take international cooperation in space to new heights.

But Russian officials are clearly turning to their American partners out of desperation. The two Russian cosmonauts on the Mir, Alexander Lazukin and mission commander Vasily Tsibilyev, were to carry out repairs this weekend to return the spacecraft to nearly full power.

But on Monday, Tsibilyev began complaining of an irregular heartbeat. On Wednesday, Vladimir Solovoy, chief of Russia's Mission Control, said space controllers had decided that the Mir commander was unfit for the difficult repair job, expected to take four to five hours in a bulky space suit.

"As the commander has medical problems, we have decided that he shouldn't take part," he said. "As a brave man, he's distressed about that. But you can't give orders to your heart."

Russian doctors told the 43-year-old Tsibilyev to get more rest and take medicine to relieve his stress. Medical checks showed Tsibilyev had arrhythmia, or an irregular heartbeat.

The doctors also advised Tsibilyev against any extra physical activity and urged space officials to ban him from taking part in the repair mission.

The repair job — now put off until July 24 — involves opening the hatch to the now-airless Spektr module and reconnecting cables that carry electricity from Spektr's solar panels to the rest of Mir.

The cables had to be disconnected after the accident that punctured Spektr because they ran through the hatch, which was frantically shut and sealed. As a result, Mir has been operating at about half-power ever since.

While the crew is not in danger, the Russians are eager to solve the problem before the next crew of three arrives Aug. 5. The two crews will overlap for 21 days, stretching the station's reduced power supply to its limits.

If the current crew is unable to reconnect the cables, the task will be given to the next mission, Solovoy said.

Prisoners call for end to violence

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Saying "the armed struggle cannot be justified" right now, two more jailed members of a Basque separatist group called Wednesday for an end to separatist violence.

In a letter released to the media, the prisoners condemned the murder of 29-year-old Miguel Angel Blanco, whose kidnapping and slaying by the group ETA has riveted Spain, and criticized Herri Batasuna, the organization's political wing.

"We hope and desire that ETA and HB take into consideration the response of the majority of citizens in the Basque country who in these difficult times have taken to streets to plead for peace and liberty," they wrote.

WORLD IN BRIEF

North Korean food shortage grows worse

BEIJING — Food shortages in North Korea have grown so acute that more than a third of its children under 6 are malnourished, said an aid worker who displayed photographs Wednesday of youngsters with sticklike limbs.

Devastated by two years of flooding and poor harvests, the communist country still needs massive foreign aid to stave off widespread famine, said Kathi Zellweger, who had just returned from a North Korean tour for Caritas, a Roman Catholic aid agency.

"We are moving into a very, very serious situation if we don't help them now," she said.

Officials cite negligence in Thai hotel fire

BANGKOK, Thailand — Two hotel executives have been charged in the deaths of 90 people — many of them trapped behind locked emergency exits — in Thailand's worst hotel fire.

Both men neglected fire safety measures at the Royal Jomtien Resort in the beach city of Pattaya, where the fire broke out Friday, police said.

Thavorn Ujjan, managing director of Kiatpol Co. Ltd., which owns the hotel, and company chairman Indra Thamrongwittawatpong, both have been charged with involuntarily causing death and injury, said Maj. Gen. Kongdej Choosri, police commander in the home province of the 8-year-old luxury hotel.

Cambodian coup leader names co-premier

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia — As his army routed resistance forces in northern Cambodia, Hun Sen added a veneer of legitimacy Wednesday to his bloody coup by naming a new co-premier.

Exiled legislators said the replacement of deposed Co-Premier Prince Norodom Ranariddh with Ung Huot, a member of Ranariddh's own party, was illegal — but there was little they could do.

"Life must go on. We have suffered too much," said the 52-year-old Ung Huot, who will continue to serve as foreign minister.

Court overturns same-name marriage ban

SEOUL, South Korea — South Korea's highest court struck down a 689-year-old law that prevented people with the same surname from marrying one another, ruling Wednesday that it was unconstitutional and outdated.

The decision affects an estimated 60,000 couples who live together but whose clan names had kept them from marrying, even though there is no evidence of blood ties.

The law was written in 1308, when inbreeding was a concern because people lived in isolated villages for generations. It also conforms to Confucianism, under which male descendants are considered part of a single family, no matter how many generations they are removed.

Mad dads are angry enough to reclaim the streets

DEAR ABBY: The letter in your column from "First Class Parent" — the father who was raising his child as a single parent — struck a chord with me as president of the national MAD DADS (Men Against Destruction — Defending Against Drugs and Social Disorder).

So many of our children today grow up in homes with only one parent — usually the mother. Children need the influence of a father or other positive role model. Many of our male volunteers grew up in households without a father, or are single fathers themselves. They have seen firsthand the consequences of absent fathers, and they are doing something about it.

Our organization started in 1989, after one of the founders' sons was nearly beaten to death by gang members. Here in Omaha, we were tired of the downward spiral of delinquency, drugs, gang involvement and destruction.

DEAR ABBY

Today, MAD DADS has 50 chapters in 14 states. Our volunteers act as mentors, friends and, most important, positive role models to youth. These individuals walk their neighborhoods in pairs to take back their streets from drug dealers and gang members. They implement activities and programs to reach out to youth, serving as surrogate fathers, uncles and big brothers.

MAD DADS chapters have been created in some of the poorest and most crime-ridden areas of the country. (South Central Los Angeles, for example, now has a chapter and two subdivisions.)

MAD DADS continues to reach out to recruit positive role models for inner-city youth. If your readers would like further information regarding MAD DADS, including how to become a volunteer or start a chapter in their area, they can contact us at 1-802-

451-3900, or write to: MAD DADS National Headquarters, 3030 Sprague St., Omaha, Neb. 68111.

Thank you, Abby, for drawing attention to the important issues of fatherhood in our nation.

— EDDIE STATION,
PRESIDENT, OMAHA

DEAR MR. STATION: Thank you for letting my readers and me know about this worthwhile effort to reach and rehabilitate fatherless youth.

Mentoring is not a new idea, but it seems to be enjoying a resurgence in popularity. Mentoring takes time, training

who step forward to donate their time and energy are to be commended. I wish you continued success in this noble effort.

THE FRITZES

BUHL — Mr. and Mrs. James Fritz of Buhl will be honored at an open house Friday in observance of their 50th wedding anniversary.

Friends and relatives are invited to call from 4 to 8 p.m. at the Moon Glo Village Reception Center.

Fritz and Annabelle Eckley were married Sept. 7, 1947, in Enterprise, Ore. They have lived in Buhl for the last 50 years. He worked at Universal Frozen Foods, retiring in 1989. She also worked at Universal Frozen Foods during the 1970s.

The event is being given by their children, Allen (Teressa) Fritz, Terry Fritz, and Willard (Vicky) Fritz, all of Buhl; Bob (Kolly) Fritz of Nampa; and Harold (Andrea) Fritz of Twin Falls.

The couple has 14 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Dogs on their best behavior

TWIN FALLS - The Mighty Mutts 4-H group will be holding a Fun Match Saturday at Twin Falls City Park. Registration will start at 9 a.m. and a workshop will follow from 9:30 a.m. to 11 a.m. on "How to get Your Dog Ready for the Canine Good Citizen Test."

The judging of the 4-H Obedience and Fitting & Showing will start at noon.

Cost to 4-H members, including the Canine Good Citizen Workshop, is $9.

There will be a show and go going for non-members and will cost $1 per entry.

The American Kennel Club Canine Good Citizen Test will begin 1:30 p.m. Saturday at Twin Falls City Park. It is sponsored by the Snake River Canyon Kennel Club of Idaho. The 55 testing fee will be donated to a dog organization by the kennel club.

The AKC Canine Good Citizen Program is a two-part program that teaches responsible dog ownership to owners and basic good manners to dogs. All dogs who pass the test receive a certificate from the American Kennel Club.

Farmers Market vendors grow lunch

TWIN FALLS - Vendors at the Twin Falls Farmers' Market will serve a free garden-fresh lunch beginning at 11 a.m. Saturday. Lunch will feature foods made from produce available at the market. Some recipes will be available. The market is visited beginning at 11 a.m. and runs from 12 p.m. to 4 p.m. at the parking lot, 2318 Addison Ave. E.

Area garden clubs set annual picnic

JEROME - The Gooding Garden Club has planned its annual picnic for surrounding garden clubs for noon Monday at the home of Mary Tevs, 513 Golf Course Road. "Garden of Thought" is the theme; it will feature organ music, poems and monologues. Members of the Twin Falls Garden Club have been invited. To find Tevs' home, cross the Perrine Bridge and go north to Golf course road; at the first stop sign, turn right and go north about a mile to the blue house with balloons displayed. Those wanting a car pool should meet at 11:15 at the home of Jan Reynolds. For more information, call Mae Heron at 733-4989, Helen Thorne at 734-5547 or Esther Babcock at 934-8350.

Summer dance classes begin

TWIN FALLS - The Lori Head School of Dance has planned two summer dance classes through the Twin Falls Recreation Department. Creative Movement is a class for ages 4, 5 and 6. The program provides an introduction toward basic locomotor skills and uses props, music and basic tumbling. Classes will be held from 10 to 11 a.m. Beginning Jazz Dance will teach the latest lurch, funk and basic dance skills. Classes are planned for 9 to 10 a.m. Both classes are scheduled for Monday and Wednesday and July 25 and 28. Cost is $20 per student per class. Make checks payable to Lori Head School of Dance. For more information, call 733-8918 or 736-3998.

Jerome Queen Contest slated

JEROME - The Jerome Rodeo Queen Contest will be held July 25 at the Best Western Sawtooth Inn, 3057 S. Lincoln. Interviews begin at 10 a.m. and are followed by modeling, speeches and a light luncheon. The horseman competition will be at the Jerome County Fairgrounds. A fun freestyle reigning pattern coordinated to music and choreographed by the contestants will conclude the event. A complete schedule is available. For more information, call Nancy Storer at 324-6544.

Funds raised to buy Christmas lights

BURLEY - Burley area merchants are sponsoring a fund-raiser to purchase Christmas lights for the "Regatta That Never Was." Those who make a $10 donation to the fund-raiser will receive a free 1997 Idaho Regatta T-shirt. Donations are being accepted at the Overland Shopping Center by the American Heritage Academy, downtown Burley by the Mini-Cassia Christmas Council and the Snake River Plaza by the Minico Micadentes Drill Team. Organizations collecting the donations will receive a portion of the proceeds.

LETTERS OF THANKS

A job well done earns praise

I would like to take this opportunity to commend and thank George Shannon and Sandra Thompson on a job well done in our School-to-Work program this past year. Their efforts are to be greatly appreciated in placing students of Jerome High School in this program. It takes a great deal of time, effort and hard work to make a program of this type function properly, and they have accomplished this.

The community of Jerome should be proud of the talented young people placed in the businesses of Jerome and grateful for George Shannon and Sandra Thompson for caring about the future and careers of the students of Jerome High School.

Wishes come true with a bit of help

We would like to thank the students and staff of the Immanuel Lutheran School for their contribution in helping to make a dream come true for a Magic Valley child who wished to go to Disneyland. Thanks to the Peace Lutheran Quilters and the Peace Lutheran Youth Group for all the beautiful quilts they made and donated for our "Blankie Program."

Also, thanks to Joe and Cathy McClure of the Magic Bowl, Bob Leazer, Sam Wormsbaker, the Idaho State Men's Bowling Association and all who make the "Sun Campaign" a huge success in raising over $1,600.

Difficult day becomes delightful

Independence Day would have marked my 16th wedding anniversary - that is if I were still married - and I have to say I wasn't exactly looking forward to the holiday.

Divorce, like death, has a peculiar way of decimating or magnifying those formerly "special days" and it's hard to know ahead of time just how the day will play out. Being a survivor - with a little help from family and friends - I was certain I wouldn't sit at home and cry. Being fairly new to the area, however, with my nearest relative in Denver, my options were a bit limited.

That was before I had the good fortune to meet a few members of High Desert Backcountry Horsemen.

NATURAL REMEDIES
Carol R. Dumas

It was at a gathering held by a friend and fellow writer. We were standing around in the kitchen when two people I had just met started talking about an impromptu Fourth of July trail ride they were planning in the South Hills. They asked if I rode, to which I replied, "I love to ride."

Of course this may have given them the impression that I actually know how to ride, which I clearly do not, so I was quick to add the finer details of my limited horsemanship. After moving to the West, I've come to feel right at home in cowboy boots, but the truth is I hail from that "little rustic town" of New Orleans, where the asphalt turns to a lather. I'm better suited for a pirogue than a saddle, and in fact I'm scared of horses - at least when I'm on the ground where they are clearly bigger than me.

The funny thing is, there is almost no other place I'd rather be than atop a horse, viewing the backcountry.

The date was set, complete with the promise of a novice-friendly named Whiskey. Contrary to name to a true Irishman like myself, I was certain we would get along handsomely.

The Fourth, of course, was one of the most beautiful days I have ever seen. How could it be anything less? The countryside was alive with the green of a buck and water year, and wildflowers - too numerous for me to learn all their names in one ride - highlighted the hillsides with contrasting hues. Wildlife was elusive, but we were blessed with the spotting of a buck and doe, a golden eagle, and a red-tailed hawk. Anywhere I looked, from the bottoms of Third Fork to the tip of the Rim View Trail, reminded me of just how good life is.

Whiskey, in addition to a totally euphoric experience, I also learned some very valuable trail skills, such as:

- If a certain rough-and-ready someone screams bloody murder - loud enough to hear all the way to Twin Falls - it's more likely to mean a snake is in the vicinity than grizzlies are attacking from the left.
- The hard and fast rule about mounting and dismounting from the left is an old horse rule (and the expression, ladies), one that could result in the rider and horse rolling down the hill together if the left side happens to be on the outer edge of the trail.
- If the road gets too long, and you have to turn around on a narrow mountain trail, get off the horse and lead the head first, toward the outside of the trail so he can see where he's going. The "don't look down" theory is only for humans; a horse that can't see the side of a cliff may step off it with his hind legs.

And last, but not least, if you expect insulated saddle bags to keep your favorite beverage cold, you better pop the top during the first hour you're on the trail.

From the start to the trail's end, it was a glorious day - sensory with the sights and sounds of nature at her best and graced by new friends who didn't know until after the ride what a difference they had made or what could have been a difficult day.

But it was a long ride, about 20 miles and eight hours on the trail, and my saddle-javvy comrades kept warning me through the day that I wasn't sore yet, I would be by evening.

It didn't matter, I told them, I'd go to sleep grinning. And I did.

Angling for the right rod

Proper rod selection can sharpen your netting skills because you'll be catching more fish. This angler had good results with a longer, heavier rod in fast-moving water.

Different conditions demand different equipment

By James J. Krulich
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - When I bought my first "good" fly rod decades ago, I shopped around because I needed a lot from a single rod.

I studied on the subject and bought a fly rod that would "do it all." I caught bluegill, bass, trout, crappies, perch and even catfish with that rod.

Today, more than 20 years later, I still have that rod. I fish with it at least once a year and the old 7-weight stick is still a joy to cast with big flies. It also casts well in the wind, but it's too darn powerful for smaller flies. For delicate presentations, a 7 weight is pathetic.

I now own at least seven fly rods. It's overkill, because I can't use them all at the same time, but I've learned a few things in the course of acquiring them. Hopefully, the following guide will prove useful for anglers who want to know more about fly rods.

In the end, local circumstances dictate the appropriate length and weight of the rod you should be using. Compromises are inevitable, so find what works for you.

Weighty proposition

For starters, fly rods are classed by weight. The range is 1 through 13, with a 1 weight being the lightest and 13 weight the heaviest. The same holds true for fly lines.

Generally speaking, fly rods with weight from 1 through 7 are typical for Western waters.

Eight-weight rods are generally used for steelhead or throwing large, weighted flies in swift water for trout. Heavier rods, such as 9 and 10 weights, are commonly used for larger salmon and light saltwater fishing. The really big rods, 11 through 13 weight, are used for larger saltwater fish.

Getting down to business

Really small rods, 1 through 3

weights, have two common applications. Because lines thrown by these rods are thin and light, they are preferred when a delicate presentation is required.

Delicate little rods are excellent for casting small flies on waters such as Silver Creeks. Before you run out and buy one, remember there are plenty of disadvantages to small rods. Even subtle winds make casting difficult, and heavy or bulky flies are extremely hard to cast with light equipment. It takes longer to land fish with light tackle because it's difficult to pull hard.

Next in the pantheon of Western fly rods is the 4 weight - which is a good choice for a wide range of opportunities. They have enough subtlety to present small flies correctly, yet have enough backbone to handle dry flies in mid-streams such as 12, 14 and fish with light tackle because it's difficult to pull hard.

Next in the pantheon of Western fly rods is the 4 weight - which is a good choice for a wide range of opportunities. They have enough subtlety to present small flies correctly, yet have enough backbone to handle dry flies in mid-streams such as 12, 14 and fish with light tackle because it's difficult to pull hard.

16. These rods also can be used with some weight, such as when fishing small nymphs. Four-weight rods are better in the wind than their smaller counterparts, but even moderate winds make casting difficult. These rods allow for delicate presentation of small flies, but do not perform well with larger, wind-resistant flies.

Heavy artillery

The most popular rods for Western fishing are 5 and 6 weight models. Small flies and delicate presentations are quite possible with 5 weights, which can also throw fairly large flies and nymphs of moderate weight. Most anglers consider a 5 weight the bare minimum for fishing from a float tube. A 5-weight rod also will function relatively well in moderate wind.

The 6-weight rod is popular for many reasons. They are capable of handling large flies and weighted nymphs, and performance is good even in fairly brisk winds. Long casts can be accomplished and float tubers often use 6 weights because they have enough backbone to lift sinking lines from the water. The downside of a 6-weight rod is that delicate presentation of small flies in calm water is difficult, even for accomplished casters.

The 7 weight has a reputation as "the rod" for fishing larger rivers such as the Madison, Yellowstone, Snake, etc. Long casts with big flies or leaded nymphs - in the wind, no less - are why this weight rod is popular. Needless to say, a 7 weight is an excellent choice for float-tube fishing. Some anglers also use 7 weights for light steelhead excursions.

Measuring up

In addition to weight, length is another key consideration.

Fly rods generally range between 6 and 10 feet in length. The little ones are designed for excursions on small, brushy streams where short, accurate casts are required. Trees, which typically overhang small creeks, make casting difficult with longer rods.

The general rule is this: Small rods for small waters. Shorter fly rods also are popular as pack rods since they can easily be strapped to a backpack. However, short rods don't work well for float-tubing or anglers on moderate to large streams and rivers. Short rods also don't perform well in the wind.

Longer rods are popular in the West because most moderate to larger streams are hemmed by trees and vegetation - not "covered" by an overhanging canopy. Longer rods also dominate the float tube scene and are preferred by guides on larger rivers.

Simply stated: Longer rods equal longer casts.

The most popular lengths are 8 1/2 and 9 feet because these lengths seem to be adequate for most fishing situations in the West. Also, most anglers inherently cast well with rods of these dimensions.

In the end, local circumstances dictate the appropriate length and weight of the rod you should be using. Compromises are inevitable, so find what works for you.

Duck population reaches 42-year-high

Spring survey brings hope that 'Good old days' may return for hunters

The Associated Press

BOISE - With duck populations the highest they have been in 42 years, it's possible the "good old days" will return for hunters next fall.

The spring survey of duck breeding areas in the United States and Canada produced an estimate of 42.5 million, the highest number since the survey started in 1955. The count is up 13 percent from last year, and 31 percent higher than the 1955-1996 average.

"Given the good production last year and this year's excellent habitat conditions, we expected some improvement," said Ducks Unlimited chief biologist Bruce Batt. "But these numbers are better than most of us expected."

So far, he said pintails and scaup are the only species falling under projections under a management plan. A combination of conservation measures and abundant moisture is credited with greatly improved habitat and the recent rise in duck numbers.

Mallards, the duck most popular with hunters, were surveyed at 9.9 million breeders, a 25 percent increase over last year and 37 percent higher than the long-term average.

News is particularly good for Idaho hunters. Other than substantial local production, most of Idaho's fall flight originates in southern Alberta and western Montana.

Even when the last drought broke, conditions in southern Alberta were not always good for breeding public ducks. This year, southern Alberta habitat is excellent. The pond count there is the second highest ever, 22 percent better than last year and 49 percent above the long-term average.

Overall mallard numbers were raised substantially by counts in some areas where populations have exploded. The breeder count this year in Montana and the western Dakotas is 189 percent above the long-term average. The figure is 215 percent in the eastern Dakotas.

Fish and Game to repeat hunting permits sale day

The Associated Press

BOISE - Because of a computer glitch, the Idaho Department of Fish and Game will try again next Tuesday to sell leftover controlled big game hunt permits to license vendors and Fish and Game offices.

The sale began Tuesday but was suspended in mid-morning because of a failed computer program that prevented sales at license vendors. The machines were working at Fish and Game offices.

"We are going to start over to make it more fair to folks who waited unsuccessfully at vendors," Fish and Game administration chief Steve Barton said.

The contractor, GTECH, has identified the problem and will correct it and test the system in the coming weeks. The annual sale gives hunters a chance at permits for controlled hunts that had insufficient applicants to fill in the regular controlled hunt drawing.

Volunteers work on a trail at a work party sponsored by the Washington Trail Association at Cougar Mountain outside of Bellevue, Wash.

Diverse volunteers do more than keep trails open

BELLEVUE, Wash. (AP) — Avid hiker Marjorie DesRosier calls it "gardening in the Cascades." Mountain biker Leonard Francis does it because he "loves being in the woods." At the same time, it brings her back rider Becky Hope an "overwhelming sense of accomplishment."

Volunteer work on forest trails offers different things to different people. The net result, however, is the same: Thousands of volunteer hours each year in backcountry recreation areas around Washington state make a world of difference for the trails, and the people who maintain them.

"I think the biggest change is the realization by the (state recreation) agencies and the public that we're in this together," said Gary Paull, who has spent 22 years with the Forest Service in central and western Washington. "It's a much more collaborative effort and I think it will get more so in the future."

The Volunteer Trailwork Coalition is an example of this new teamwork. Launched in February with a state grant, the coalition strives to combine the efforts of several different associations and user groups to help preserve Washington trails.

It is a landmark program, the kind that hasn't been tried in any other part of the United States, according to Erin Marinus, VTC volunteer coordinator. Hikers, motorcyclists, four-by-four enthusiasts, mountain bikers, horseback riders and mountain climbers — all have representation in the VTC. Its creation is a testament to the increasing popularity of volunteer trail work parties, and the importance of outdoor recreation, especially on forest trails, among state residents.

It is also a response to the ever-widening resources of the U.S. Forest Service. The growing need for trail maintenance led Congress to approve a controversial demonstration program for collecting fees at trailhead parking lots this year.

Several factors motivate people to donate their time to trails. Among the dozen people contacted for this article, each one could recall the day of their first work party. They cited an affinity with the outdoors, the ability to make a visible difference with their work, and the desire to give something back to a natural playground that has provided personal enjoyment.

"It's one of the most enjoyable things I have discovered in a long time," said DesRosier, a retired nurse who has pitched in on about 10 work parties with the Washington Trails Association. "The people were friendly and they seemed to enjoy what they were doing. Plus, I liked the mechanics, the cleaning up and tearing down and building up."

Volunteers have the opportunity to do some basic physical work with tools like buckets, shovels, hoes and rakes on work parties. Most crew leaders have formal training and are responsible for making the work party fun as well as safe.

"Safety is a big issue," said Paull, the wilderness and trails coordinator for the Mount Baker-Snoqualmie National Forest. "We have three rules on all work parties: be safe, have fun and get some work done."

Francis helped the Backcountry Bicycle Trails Club form in 1995 when several mountain biking enthusiasts came together to fight for biking rights on Cougar Mountain. He didn't know much about trail maintenance at the time. Now he leads a work party every Tuesday evening at Cougar Mountain.

"I have worked on trails that I wouldn't have gone to otherwise," said Gary Larson, a self-employed sound engineer in Issaquah and an ardent mountain biker. "I would go back now, though. It's nice to go back and see some of the finished product."

The Backcountry Horsemen of Washington have more than 3,000 members statewide in their 31 regional chapters. Each chapter takes on four to five projects a year, such as building a trailhead or repairing a bridge. In 1996, the hours of volunteer maintenance. Later this month, three chapters will help the WTA and the American Hiking Society deep in the backcountry of the Darrington Ranger District. They'll pack in equipment, tools and supplies for the nine-day work party.

"That kind of cooperation hasn't existed in the past," said Hope, a North Bend resident who is the director of the Tahomah Chapter of the Backcountry Horsemen in Maple Valley. "It has more the last three years. It makes sense to utilize something we're good at and they need."

The WTA is the state's leader when it comes to volunteer trail maintenance. The 22-year-old hiker-oriented group based in Seattle has a list of 2,000 people who have either served on a work party or express interest in doing so. As strong as it is, the WTA still welcomes the birth of the VTC.

"By bringing these groups in, it gives us a wider base who can help in finding solutions to trail problems," said Julie Goodrich, WTA trail maintenance coordinator. The diversity of the VTC is also its strength.

"The different user groups that in the past there's been a fair amount of animosity between have really come together a lot in the last few years," Paull said. "As the trail community is together and united, a lot of positive things occur when speaking with one voice rather than bickering. All the major use groups are working toward a common goal: a better trail system in the future."

Congressman raises awareness about gray wolf endangerment

The Seattle Times

SEATTLE — Not all endangered species are created equal. An out-of-state Rep. Norm Dicks, D-Wash., a former University of Washington football player, blocking for them.

Dicks has put on the fast track campaign to bring the northern gray wolf back to Olympic National Park, with the House expected to include $300,000 for a feasibility study when it votes on the budget this week.

Funding for a wolf study, which Dicks' office says eventually could cost about $1 million over the next three years, is barely pocket change for most government programs.

But dollars for actual species-recovery work — outside of the high-profile cases like salmon and the spotted owl — can be as scarce as the crickets themselves. In this year's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service budget, the Western Washington field office says it received no money for recovery.

When it comes to saving an endangered species, the story of the Olympic wolves is a lesson in how one influential and eager congressman in your corner is often worth a laboratory full of scientists.

Reintroduction of wolves to the Olympics wasn't a high priority among federal agencies or many Northwest wolf advocates until Dicks, urged by Defenders of Wildlife, an East Coast-based conservation group, got excited about the idea.

"Wolves in the Olympics haven't been our priority," said Jim Michaels, endangered-species coordinator for U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's Western Washington field office. "But dollars certainly are very scarce and competitive for this stuff. If you've got a congressman who is interested, you better snag the chance."

Indeed, Dicks' patronage of wolves in the Olympics stands in contrast to the fate of recovery plans for their brethren in North Cascades National Park.

Biologists say gray wolves, migrating from Canada, have begun to repopulate the Cascades in small numbers during the past decade. But in 1994, the Fish and Wildlife Service cut the roughly $200,000 being spent annually on recovery efforts for wolves and grizzly bears in the North Cascades, diverting the money to programs in Idaho.

The agency has never written a recovery plan for wolves in the Cascades. There is little monitoring of wolf packs or counting of the wolves that have returned to the Cascades, Michaels says.

Some biologists say the recovery of wolf populations in the Cascades would pay bigger dividends toward ensuring the species' survival in North America than reintroducing wolves to the Olympics.

And federal officials didn't include the Olympics as part of a nationwide wolf-recovery plan.

Ed Bangs, head of wolf recovery for the Fish and Wildlife Service, said the agency's priority is restoring wolves to large land areas where they can link up with existing populations. The Olympics, as a wolf habitat, is virtually an island, and restoration of wolf populations there requires direct human intervention.

While advocates like Beth Church, conservation manager for Wolfhaven, a research and wolf advocacy south of Olympia, applauded Dicks' effort in the Olympics, they are still rankled by the budget cuts in the North Cascades.

Argues Mitch Friedman, director of the Northwest Ecosystem Alliance, "Wolves in the Olympics make perfect political sense because you've got a congressman who wants them in his district. But biologically speaking, why are we starting another batch of cookies while we let the ones we've already got in the oven burn?"

While funding for the Olympic wolf-recovery program has been rolling through the House, the Fish and Wildlife Service last week announced it had completed a grizzly-bear recovery plan for the North Cascades — a study first begun in 1991.

What the agency didn't mention is that it has no money to implement the grizzly plan. The only "recovery" efforts the agency can afford, said spokesman Jon Gilstrom, is to present a slide show he's assembled.

Hank Fischer, who heads the wolf program for Defenders of Wildlife, shares concerns about how spending priorities for endangered-species recovery are set. Like many critics, he worries that the federal government spends far more energy deciding what animals and plants to list as endangered rather than on actual recovery.

But he notes that wolves alternative are repopulating the North Cascades, with or without government help.

The Olympic Peninsula presents what he considers a low-cost opportunity to place wolves back in an area where they were systematically wiped out by settlers and the federal government more than 60 years ago.

Nature Conservancy wants to preserve land near Canyonlands National Park

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A Michigan philanthropic organization has agreed to donate $630,000 toward the purchase and preservation of a large private ranch on the border of Canyonlands National Park.

The Kresge Foundation said it will donate the money so long as the Nature Conservancy raises an additional $2 million on its own by Dec. 31. To date, the group has raised $37 million.

The total cost of the so-called Dugout Ranch project, unveiled last September by the Nature Conservancy, is $6.3 million.

"Few projects we have reviewed recently have been as compelling as the Dugout Ranch," said John Marschall III, president of the Kresge Foundation, which awarded nearly $18 million in grants last year. "This is one corner of the West that must be preserved before it's too late."

If the goal is reached, the money will go toward the purchase and perpetual maintenance of Dugout Ranch, now owned by Robert, Heidi, Matt and Adam Redd. It is located just outside the Needles District of Canyonlands.

Eastern box turtle study to monitor return to the wild

The Baltimore Sun
BALTIMORE — Free at last, two Eastern box turtles took a quick look around, split up and headed for the deep woods at high turtle-speed.
 They were the first of six radio-equipped females recently released in the dark and secluded forest that shelters undeveloped portions of the Baltimore Zoo.
 The release was part of a yearlong Towson State University study of the threatened species. TSU herpetologist Don C. Forester and four undergraduate volunteers will track the turtles by radio for a year as they establish territories, mate, forage for worms and burrow in for their winter hibernation.
 Forester hopes the work will reveal how turtles native to these woods respond when nonresident turtles confiscated from a smuggler are introduced into their territories. That could suggest ways for people to avoid mistakes when they release captive turtles in well-meaning efforts to help reverse the reptiles' shrinking numbers.

 "Too often people catch them and release them somewhere else," Forester said. "They think it's OK, but we're trying to get a handle on what happens. Do they wander off, or settle down? Do they cause the turtles that are already there to reduce their movements?"
 Glenn Therres, a wildlife biologist with the Maryland Department of Natural Resources, said it's not even known whether captive turtles survive after they are released in the wild. "It might seem to be the right thing to do, but is it? That's the big question they're trying to answer."

Eastern box turtles, or Terrapene carolina, are the most terrestrial of Maryland's 13 turtle species. At home in forests, they are omnivorous, dining on berries, worms, small insects and even baby mice, Forester said.
 They typically roam a territory of several acres, with life spans similar to humans. A few have been known to live more than 100 years.
 Box turtles are listed as threatened throughout their range — from New England to Florida, and as far west as East Texas and Arkansas. That means they are in decline and may be in danger of extinction if nothing is done.
 "When I was a kid, I could go out and find several box turtles," said Anthony Wisniewski, curator of reptiles and amphibians at the Baltimore Zoo and Forester's partner in the study. "Now I could look all day and not find any."

 Box turtles seem to be doing well in the secluded Baltimore Zoo woods, part of the city's 700-acre Druid Hill Park. The mature hardwood forest covers most of the zoo's 60 acres of rugged, undeveloped land.
 For several years, zoo employees have been catching, weighing, tagging and releasing the resident animals whenever they turn up, part of an effort to learn more about them and their territories. So far, they have identified 12 individuals.
 To learn more, Wisniewski said, "we thought it would be interesting to take a group of the turtles, put radio transmitters on them and follow them around." He and his assistant curator, Vicky Poole, contacted Forester at TSU and asked if he would like to help.
 Towson State, seeking to involve more undergraduates in research, agreed to provide $2,000 for the study, for the transmitters, locator antenna and other gear.

 With help from TSU undergraduates Melissa Sawicki, 21, Katie Kelly, 19, and Bill Leonard, 39, Wisniewski and Forester carried the animals into the woods. They marked the spots and checked to be sure the radios were working, then let the turtles go.
 The zoo turtles were released as close as possible to where they were found, so that they could return to their own territories. Each was paired with one of the confiscated turtles so the study could track how they adjust to each other's presence.
 Forty-eight hours later, the zoo turtles had moved the farthest, Forester said. Two of the confiscated turtles remained where they were released.

Tapping your inner wealth

Author views money as spiritual asset, but the amount doesn't count

Three years later, Orman has learned another lesson: The Manhattan apartment, a home in the Oakland, Calif. hills, expensive jewelry and a BMW aren't necessarily keys to her happiness. "Spiritual control" over money is what really matters.

"That's when I learned that money was more important than life itself," said Orman.

These things don't make me who I am, she said. "But you are never powerful in life, until you're powerful with your own money."

The Encinitas, Calif.-based financial adviser is the author of a new book "The 9 Steps to Financial Freedom: Practical & Spiritual Steps So You Can Stop Worrying" (Crown Publishers Inc., $23).

9 steps to financial freedom

- 1. Set goals. Think back to your first experiences with money and consider how these memories shaped your attitude toward money and your adult financial life. 2. Think positive. Replace financial fears with new, positive messages such as "I have more money than I will ever need" and "I am in control of all my affairs." 3. Take action. Be honest about your current financial status and decide how you want to spend your money. 4. Consider others. Be responsible to those you love by taking care of those "must dos": wills, trusts, life insurance, durable power of attorney for health care, long-term care insurance and estate planning. 5. Invest wisely. Respect yourself and your money by investing wisely in retirement plans, stocks, money market accounts and mutual funds. Eliminate credit card debt. Action gives that respect meaning. 6. Trust your instincts. Pay attention to your inner voice; it will tell you whether what you are investing in is right for you. 7. Be charitable. Give a portion of your money to others and release an anxious grasp on your money. 8. ... 9. ...

NBC's "Today" show and Oprah Winfrey. The book has sold 200,000 copies since April, primarily through the televised home shopping network, QVC.

Part self-evaluation, part nuts-and-bolts financial advice and part self-reflection, the book offers real-life stories and personal exercises to help readers just like her attitudes toward money. The book also provides practical information about clearing credit card debt, planning for retirement and college tuition, creating trusts and choosing investments.

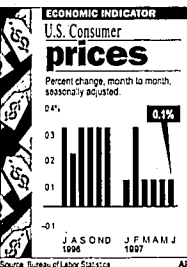

Orman, a follower of Eastern religion, often offers financial services to those with hard-luck stories for free. Others who can afford her services pay according to what they think she deserves.

"My clients want me to take care of them and I'm saying forget it, I want to teach you how to take care of yourself."

Albione Benet, founder and executive director of a $1.5 million San Rafael, Calif.-based nonprofit for drug-addicted women and mothers, now takes her personal financial matters into her own hands as a result of Orman's counseling.

constant fear of losing it. Other people are afraid they'll never make ends meet," she said.

Orman's nontraditional approach to financial planning has garnered her a regular clientele and national attention, including scheduled appearances on

Prices may be tame, but rise expected

WASHINGTON — Although news that consumer prices were especially well-behaved in June cheered investors, they were cautioned that the path for inflation later this year is up.

The June consumer price index rose a meager 0.1 percent at both the overall level and at the core level that excludes volatile food and energy sectors. June prices overall were up 2.3 percent from a year ago, while core prices were up 2.1 percent.

"It was good news, but if you look through the report you had a lot of special things that helped keep prices in check," said Robert Brusca of Nikko Securities. "I think we're going up" from here, though, he added.

Less concerned that inflation may pick up in the second half was Dana Johnson of First Chicago NBD.

"It was a great report," he said. "And there's no inflation in the pipeline." The news propelled the Dow Jones industrial average past 8,000 and the Nasdaq market posted its biggest point-gain ever.

Dollar increase takes a breather on trade data

NEW YORK (AP) - The dollar touched a two-month high against the yen but fell to end lower on Wednesday, weighed by profit-taking ahead of data expected to show a further widening of Japan's trade surplus.

The pullback at least temporarily halted a rally that had pushed the dollar to six-year highs against the mark and left it sharply higher against most other currencies on the heels of the U.S. economy's bullionist stock market and doubts about Europe's single currency plan.

"We saw a significant selloff in the dollar," said Joseph Pedone, a currency trader at the New York branch of Dai-ichi Kangyo Bank.

"There's some concern out there that a further expansion of Japan's trade imbalance might lead to pressure on the dollar," Japan's trade report for June, to be released Thursday in Tokyo, was expected to show a surplus of 1,048 trillion yen, up 43 percent from 732 billion yen a year earlier.

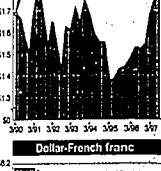

Although that would represent a slowdown from the 220 percent increase in May, it still raised concern that the yen's weakness could aggravate trade frictions with the United States.

U.S. trade data for May, due Friday, also are expected to show growing Japanese surplus due partly to weakness in the yen, which has made Japanese products more affordable abroad and hurt the ability of American companies to compete in Japan.

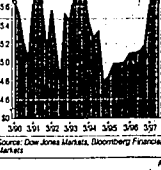

Dollar strength

The dollar has advanced to 6-year highs against the German mark and French franc, but U.S. currency performance has been mixed in other major foreign-exchange dealings.

The dollar reached an intraday high of 116.40 yen, the strongest level since mid-May, before falling to settle in New York at 115.52 yen.

Oil firms team up; critics fear impact on prices

The Washington Post reports that major oil companies are forming a new consortium to coordinate production and marketing.

The oil industry is in the midst of a merger and consolidation phase - not in the oil fields, but in the refineries where gasoline is produced and at the gas stations where it's sold.

Shell Oil Co. and Texaco Inc. have agreed to combine their U.S. refining operations, which has been confirmed by either company, about combining their U.S. refining and marketing operations.

Oil firms team up; critics fear impact on prices

Consumers might benefit from those savings, but critics say the more likely beneficiaries are the companies' shareholders.

"Instead of having three stations on every corner, we have one or two," said William Berman, of the American Automobile Association.

According to the A.A.A., the number of U.S. gasoline stations has shrunk from about 225,000 in the 1970s to about 188,000, many of which are convenience store operations that sell relatively little gas.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"If you visit, there will come a time to tell the tale of your life."
—Japanese proverb

Today's hand was played at a recent duplicate tournament. The normal contract was a heart game by South. Some made an overtrick, and others went down. Much depended on how patient West was on the defense.

Some tournament players use the jump shift to describe a weak hand rather than the traditional strong hand. Being poor card holders, they feel that the weak hands come up more often than strong ones.

The impatient West led the singleton spade to East's ace and immediately scored a spade ruff. But it was a costly ruff. South's ace of West finished in his left hand, and the heart ace dropped. West's king. To add insult, South made an overtrick for a top score. He led a trump to dummy's 10 and discarded a diamond on dummy's 10. West was to ruff all his hearts, forcing West into a hopeless position. On the last heart, with A-K-9 of clubs and the diamond 10 left in dummy, West had no safe discard. If he held on to three clubs, South would lead another diamond trick. And if he held on to his diamond honor, dummy's clubs would run.

The patient West did better. He led the diamond king. He not only did he dodge the frustrating squeeze, but some actually defeated the game.

After South took his diamond ace, the unwary South took an ill-advised trump finesse. On the bidding, South should decline the trump finesse. These fortunate Wests won, cashed a diamond, and then led a patient spade. This earned them a one-trick set and a raise toward beating the lay-down game.

ANSWER: Two spades. Rebid the excellent six-card suit. Partner's hand helps to help a spade contract. South's hand may be of little use in a red-suit partscore.
