City adopts watered-down rate hike

By William Brock
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - It wasn't pretty to watch, but Monday's City Council meeting ended with a decision to raise the price of city water.

On a 4-2 vote, the council agreed to raise water rates - but scaled back recommended increases for all but the smallest consumers of city water. Councilmen Gene Kleinkopf and Tom

Major water users ask for phase-in time

Mikesell voted against the idea; Councilman Art Frantz was absent.

Several major water users pleaded to phase in the new rates over three years, but the council opted to hike the rates in a single bound. Kleinkopf tried, and failed, to win a two-year phase-in.

Henceforth, city water will be billed at four different rates, depending on how much is consumed during a month. The council agreed to top 4 cents from each of the three highest-consumption rates, but left the proposed base rate - $5 for 2,000 gallons - intact.

An effort to trim 4 cents from the base rate, suggested by Councilman Chris Talkington, was rejected. A suggestion by Councilman Lance Clow to increase the base rate to $6 generated even less enthusiasm.

The new rates will generate another $805,000 per year, said City Finance Director Gary Evans. The original recommendation would have yielded an additional $170,000.

Overall, the water department needs another $780,000 to pay for system improvements and rising operational expenses.

Car theft suspects face hearing in court

Victims of spree voice their anger over losses, prospects of no jail time for trio

By Kent McCleary
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Among them, Justin Livingston, Toby LaPray and Josh Grill face 50 charges from a string of cars they're suspected of stealing in Twin Falls and Buhl.

They've been released from juvenile detention, and are scheduled for hearings in juvenile court today. But they also face the anger of their victims.

Livingston, 16, and Grill, 16, both of Twin Falls, and LaPray, 15, of Buhl, are charged with stealing vehicles, mostly pickups, and all cars with the keys left in them. The three stole at least nine cars in Twin Falls, three more in Buhl, and several in the county, according to police reports, all within about two weeks. As many as nine were taken in Twin Falls within two days.

Many of the vehicles were destroyed or badly damaged, police say.

Victims say they're furious. And frustrated that the three - who have admitted participating in the spree, according to Twin Falls County sheriff's department reports - may not serve time.

Livingston, who police say was the ringleader of the spree, told The Times-News he was involved in the thefts because he was bored.

"I could tell them (victims) I'm sorry, but that doesn't really do much good," Livingston said with a shrug. He expects to be sentenced to pay restitution, he said.

LaPray faces four counts of grand theft for stealing cars, six counts for stealing items in the cars, three counts of operating a vehicle without the owner's consent, referred to as joyriding; two counts of aiding and abetting joyriding, and two counts of petit theft.

LaPray's father, Mike LaPray, said everything would come out at trial, and that he had no comment.

Livingston is charged with one count of felony eluding an officer, five counts of grand theft of vehicles, eight counts of grand theft of items, six counts of joyriding, two counts of petit theft, and one count of misdemeanor injury to property.

Grill, who prosecutors say did not join the spree until the day of the chase, faces one count of grand theft of a vehicle, five counts of grand theft of items, three counts of joyriding, and one count of aiding and abetting the eluding of a police officer - for encouraging Livingston to try to outrun officers. Grill was released to his father, who lives in Boise.

Twin Falls police detectives say they have evidence linking the teenagers to more thefts, but could prove only nine of the thefts in court.

Most of the charges would be felonies in adult court. They're being charged as

Suspect in car thefts says boredom landed him in trouble

Livingston faces 23 charges in court

By Kent McCleary
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Justin Livingston faces 23 charges in connection with a string of car thefts.

"And he offers no explanation. "It was bored. It's just my reason, nobody else," Livingston said. "The grandfather he lives with isn't so sure.

"I don't know why he did it. I've asked him. I haven't got no answer I'm satisfied with," said Robert Livingston Sr.

Livingston - a skinny, 16-year-old with straight hair, parted in the middle and bobbed at his neck - is due in juvenile court this morning for a hearing on the thefts. In adult court, most of the charges against him would be felonies.

Livingston said he has discussed only one theft with investigators - the June 12 theft of a pickup, which prompted a high-speed chase through Twin Falls and toward Kimberly. Police say Livingston was the ringleader in the spree; Livingston said he was driving the pickup that night.

Without his attorney present, Livingston said, he won't discuss any of the other thefts, although he will say he was present when other cars were stolen. Livingston's attorney, Terry Johnson of Twin Falls, declined Monday to discuss the case with The Times-News.

Livingston said he has never been in trouble.

"It messes up everything. I've got a record now," Livingston said. Livingston said his father, Robert Livingston, is in prison in Idaho. He said he lived in California until his mother died, then moved to Terre Haute, Ind., to live with his grandparents.

When Livingston's grandparents moved to Twin Falls, he said he moved with them, but left last summer, to move in with his sister in Gallup, Miss. He returned to Twin Falls about four months ago, he said.

"I knew I was going to get in trouble when I came back to Twin Falls. Because it's too small of a town. I know everybody," Livingston said. "The group of friends I had got me in trouble, and then I started my own group of friends and got them in trouble."

Getting caught crossed the boys' minds, Livingston said. "I'll tell you one thing. I know they wanted me bad," he said, with some bravado.

GOP leaders, White House reach budget deal

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Congressional Republicans and Clinton administration officials announced tentative agreement Monday night on a plan to balance the budget by 2002 while slashing taxes for millions of families, students and investors.

"We have reached a tentative agreement on the Balanced Budget Act and the tax relief package that is pending review of the statutory language," Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott told reporters in the Capitol in early evening. Lott, accompanied by the microphones by Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, said he expected that review to be completed by Tuesday with legislation going to the House and Senate floors later in the week.

Congress plans to leave Friday for its annual summer recess.

"We gave ground. The administration gave ground and we found common ground," Lott said.

President Clinton got word of the agreement while playing golf in Las Vegas, said White House spokesman Joe Lockhart.

"The president was pleased and is looking forward to a full briefing tomorrow," Lockhart said. At the Capitol, two of his top lieutenants were ebullient.

"We have a tentative agreement on a very good balanced-budget plan,"

Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin exclaimed as he left a meeting. Said White House chief of staff Erskine Bowles: "We couldn't be more pleased with the outcome."

The agreement assured a tax credit for many children. And many disputes were resolved with an everyone-wins approach. Underlining this, the five-year, $85 billion net price tag for tax cuts set by the May balanced-budget agreement seemed likely to grow by about $6 billion.

As it emerged, the accord put leaders of both parties in position to claim credit for the broadest tax cut since 1981 and, if achieved, the first federal surplus since 1969.

Clinton said he was pleased and was looking forward to a full briefing this morning and asked aide Rahm Emanuel whether he'd gotten what he wanted for education, a children's tax cut and the children's health package, Lockhart said.

Even as both sides smelled victory, they circled each other on some issues. The GOP acceded to Clinton's demands for a $24 billion, five-year effort to expand health-care coverage for many of the country's 10 million uninsured children. That amount was $8 billion beyond what many Republicans preferred, but there was a catch. They were insisting that Clinton let states have leeway in deciding which services would be

Court tells Simpson to hand over $40,000 car, piano

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — O. J. Simpson was ordered Monday to surrender a new $40,000 car and a piano despite insisting he owns neither.

He said the piano was a gift to his mother, who plays it every morning when she is at his home, and the car was a birthday present from his mother and sisters for him to drive his youngest children to school.

Superior Court Judge David Perez agreed with a lawyer for Fred Goldman, who claimed the car was a birthday present from his mother and sisters for him to drive his youngest children to school.

"This is part and parcel of this whole charade, your honor," said attorney Gary Cairns.

juvenile, because the crimes are property crimes, not crimes of violence, Twin Falls county juvenile prosecutor Julie Sturgill said.

The three might still be charged as adults, Sturgill said.

One factor would be whether the three have prior records, Sturgill said. The boys have no prior juvenile record, she said.

Twin Falls County court records list no charges against any of the three.

Jeanne Serviss was the last of the victims in the spree. Her pickup truck was stolen June 12, hours before the three teen-agers were arrested.

Serviss, 54, leases a dairy outdo Buhl with 150 cows. She has farmed most all her life.

The afternoon of June 12, Serviss said, she was feeding hay to her horses, and left her teal 1995 four-wheel drive Chevrolet pickup to go inside her home and make supper. By habit, she kept an eye on the dairy, through her windows.

Suddenly, she realized her truck wasn't there. She called to an employee, who said he'd seen it heading down the road.

"I called police, once it sank in," she said.

Serviss said she hasn't had much peace since.

"It's awful. I'm up every time the dog barks, or when a car goes by. I haven't slept a full night since. It's weird feeling. It's a violation of what you know. And the kids are out. I know they're out," she said.

Patricia Tom Phernetton tried to stop the car after it squealed tires going around a stop sign. In the heavy rain and truck traffic, the juveniles drove through the First Street in Glenns Ferry, according to Glenns Ferry police reports, trying to avoid Phernetton. The car slid and nearly hit several cars, Phernetton said.

Driving on the Interstate 84 onramp, the car slid into the dirt and hit a sign, but continued outrunning him, Phernetton said.

"Because of the rain and the speed, and the quickness of the car, I wasn't able to catch it," Phernetton said.

While investigating the incident, Phernetton heard the boys in the car had bragged to friends they outran police, driving 150 mph.

Newman said 570 miles were put on his car before June 11, when he found it parked at a Twin Falls Camal Company office in Buhl.

Newman says his car is ruined. The wheels were damaged, speakers pulled out and interior door panels yanked off, he said.

"I've been working hard since I was 13 years old. I work my butt off to have nice things and somebody takes it," he said. "It was flawless when I had it. In my eyes, it's totaled. I don't want it back now....

"There's nothing I can do about it. I've been a punk kid before, and cost my parents money, but I never would take something that's not mine," Newman said.

"It's sick. They'll get away with it, spend a little time in juve, and they'll be out."

Teachers worry about extra duty dealing with pupils' medical woes

WASHINGTON (AP) — When a mother told teacher Joel J. Knox to "considerably" increase the medication he administered to control her 8-year-old son's seizures, Knox wanted to verify the dosage with the boy's doctor.

But the physician couldn't be reached, and the mother was adamant, so the Merced, Calif., special education teacher followed her instructions. The boy suffered an overdose and had to be hospitalized.

Across the country, teachers like Knox say they are frustrated by growing obligations to provide medical care for children with conditions ranging from asthma and attention deficit problems to more serious disorders such as cerebral palsy and spina bifida.

No fatal or permanently damaging incident has come to public attention. But teachers worry about being accountable if serious harm comes to a child. The worry and care also distract from teaching, they say.

The situation has intensified as federal law has led more and more children with serious medical needs to attend regular public schools.

At the same time, not every school has a nurse. The number of full-time nurses ranges from 30,000 to 40,000 for about 85,000 public school buildings, according to estimates.

Moments later, Newman said, employees of a neighboring bank called, saying two kids had just died off in his car. Newman bought the distinctive, baby blue, high-performance car just a month and a half before the theft.

"I guess they'd been nosing around for half an hour. Why nobody called the police, I don't know," Newman said.

Newman's car turned up June 10, the day after it was stolen, spotted by police in Glenns Ferry.

Patricia Tom Phernetton tried to stop the car after it squealed tires going around a stop sign. In the heavy rain and truck traffic, the juveniles drove through the First Street in Glenns Ferry, according to Glenns Ferry police reports, trying to avoid Phernetton. Representatives from Lamb Weston, Avonmore West, and the Twin Falls District — all big water consumers — attended Monday's meeting.

"A little bite to bite off" is a lot easier to bite off," said Mike Johnston, operations manager for Lamb Weston — the biggest water user in town.

"It isn't the best idea to penalize the industries that keep the economy afloat," added Rick Warren of Avonmore West.

"Industry will argue that the rates are too high for them," said Wayne Anderson, who wore a "Union Yes" T-shirt to Monday's meeting. However, the bulk of the increases would be paid by small, residential users, he said.

In other business, the council proposed a 2 percent cost-of-living increase for all city employees — plus merit pay raises of up to 2 percent for worthy employees.

Council members lauded city employees for the quality of their work, but said hefty raises aren't in the cards due to frugal budgeting.

"What we've got to work with is based on how much we're willing to tax," Clow said. "This is a conservative community."

City employees haven't been able to discuss the council's latest offer, said Scott Sterling, an engineering technician who chairs the city's employee committee.

Sterling said 105 city employees recently participated in a survey which underscored substantial morale problems in some departments. He offered to distribute the survey results to the council, which will resume the discussion Monday.

Finally, the council pledged its intention to pay half the construction costs for a new skateboarding area at Harmon Park. Council members held off on creating a specific budget item for the request — which could run $40,000 to $50,000.

Senate probe finds link to Asian wires, donations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Less than a week after receiving money wired from the Bank of China, fund-raiser Yah Lin "Charlie" Trie reimbursed two associates the same day they donated to the Democratic Party, Senate documents show.

The transaction last year tied to a fund-raiser hosted by President Clinton is one of several that investigators intend to introduce this week as Senate hearings into fund-raising abuses turn to the activities of Trie, an Arkansas businessman and presidential friend.

In all, investigators have evidence that Trie received nearly $1 million wired from Asia from his overseas business partner, Ng Lap Seng, during the period he was raising money for the Democratic Party and Clinton's legal defense fund.

The money that Trie raised for the party and the defense fund has been returned in recent months because of suspicions about their origins.

Senate aides, speaking on condition of anonymity, say some of the wire transfers closely correspond to Trie's fund-raising activities and that investigators have not found any legitimate business purpose for the transfers.

Trie, who left for China after his fund-raising stirred controversy, has not yet cooperated with the investigation.

But a Senate aide said the committee was negotiating with Trie's lawyer about an interview overseas. The attorney, Reid Weingarten, is trying to strike a deal with the Justice Department for his client, the aide said.

Weingarten did not return a telephone call Monday seeking comment. But in an interview broadcast Sunday on ABC, Trie declared "I'm not hiding." As for his fund-raising, he added: "The past is the past."

Federal law prohibits donors from disguising contributions, the name of others and prohibits

U.S. companies from using any money they earned overseas to make a U.S. political donation.

One chart prepared by Senate investigators, obtained by The Associated Press, shows that on Feb. 14, 1995, just under $150,000 was transferred by wire from San Kin Yip Holding Co. Ltd. — a Macao-based venture of Trie and Ng Lap Seng — from the Bank of China in Hong Kong to a Trie bank account in Washington.

A Senate investigative memo said Xiping Wang and Yue Chu, who were granted immunity from prosecution and are scheduled to testify this week, were asked by Ng to "front money" for donations.

"Ng Lap Seng said he wanted to attend a DNC function so that he could meet Clinton but was unable to purchase a ticket to the event himself because he was a non-citizen and non-resident," the memo said.

Ng told the women he "would reimburse them" if they made the contributions, the memo said. "Chu stated that she decided to participate in the scheme as a favor to her husband's boss." Her husband is an employee of the Trie-Ng company.

Xiping Wang contributed a $5,000 check to the Democratic National Committee on Feb. 19 and was reimbursed from Trie's Washington account the same day. Yue Chu made contributions of $7,500 and $12,500 on Feb. 19 and was reimbursed the same day.

The donations were made at a gala Feb. 19, 1996, dinner for Asian-American donors in Washington attended by Clinton that netted $1.1 million.

Meanwhile, new details emerged Monday about the event that first thrust the Arkansas restaurateur-turned-global-businessman into national headlines — his delivery of $640,000 in donations to Clinton's defense fund.

In a deposition obtained by AP, the lawyer who oversaw the trust fund and the return of Trie's donations described how Trie delivered the first batch of money from a Buddhist sect in early 1995.

"What was your reaction when this mound of checks and money orders came out of the envelope?" Michael Cardozo was asked.

"I wished there were curtains on the glass conference room," Cardozo responded.

Cardozo became suspicious quickly because some of the checks, allegedly from different donors, bore similar handwriting. After a review, the fund decided to return all the money Trie delivered in two visits.

Cardozo's deposition also discloses that Trie made a third, previously undisclosed visit to the fund in May 1996 to say he was bringing in another $150,000. The offer was rejected because Cardozo already had too many suspicions about the earlier money.

provided, such as mental health and dental coverage.

In addition, the GOP wanted welfare recipients taking subsidized jobs in the public and non-profit sectors to be exempted from minimum wage and other worker protections. They argued that such requirements would make it harder to find such slots and hurt state efforts to trim welfare rolls. Clinton was resisting.

The continuing snags were clearly annoying GOP leaders, who were within reach of two of their party's biggest legislative achievements in years. Lott said the administration's bargaining tactics were "like the box constrictor that continues to squeeze."

In a triumph claimed by both sides, there would be a $400-per-child tax credit in 1998, rising to $500 the next year, for children 16 and under. It would apply to many families who earn as little as $18,000 and owe little or no income tax, a victory for Clinton. But it would also go to single parents making as much as $75,000 and couples making $110,000, which Republicans wanted.

The package was on track to include $35 billion or more in education tax breaks, a key Clinton demand to which lawmakers added their own ideas. Clinton said it would contain his treasured "Hope scholarship" of $1,500 tax credits for the first two years of college. Also included were special savings incentives for education and other reductions.

After years of trying, Republicans finally won a reduction in capital-gains tax rates, which are paid on profits from sales of land and other investments. The top rate would go from 28 to 20 percent, middle-income rates from 15 to 10 percent. For assets bought after 2001, the top rate would be 18 percent, the lower rate 8 percent.

In a break for most homeowners, there would be no capital gains tax on home sales in which the profit was below $500,000 — similar to a Clinton proposal.

The GOP surrendered, however, in its effort to "index" capital gains for inflation — that is, to exempt from tax any increase due solely to inflation. Clinton said that would dent federal revenues too deeply in the future.

Republicans were winning an increase in the estate-tax exemption from its current $600,000 to $1 million over 10 years — $1.3 million starting next year for small businesses and family farms. And a host of new Individual Retirement Accounts for spouses, students and first-time homebuyers were on the way.

To help pay for all this, bargainers were near agreement that the cigarette tax would rise a dime in 2000 and another nickel in 2002.

Most of the approximately $140 billion in five-year savings came from Medicare, whose growth would be trimmed by $115 billion, or about 12 percent.

Most Medicare savings would come from reducing payments to hospitals and other health-care providers, though the current $4.80 monthly premium for coverage of doctors' bills would grow slowly.

Dropped were three Senate-approved Medicare plans that drew fire from House Republicans because they could anger elderly voters.

These would have boosted premiums for higher-income recipients, gradually increased the eligibility age from 65 to 67, and charged $5 for each visit by home health workers.

FBI director: Agents may have violated Jewell's rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI agents probably violated Richard Jewell's constitutional rights last year while questioning him about the bombing at the Atlanta Olympic Games, FBI Director Louis Freeh said Monday.

Testifying before a Senate judiciary subcommittee, Freeh said any incriminating information Jewell might have provided likely would not have been allowed in court because he was not properly advised of his rights.

"Had he said something adverse to his interests, his constitutional rights would have been violated," Freeh said.

Jewell, a security guard who discovered the bomb before it exploded in Atlanta's Centennial Park, was exonerated by the Justice Department last fall after several months in which he was the focus of both the investigation and intense media scrutiny.

"When he first came to the attention of agents investigating the bombing, Jewell was questioned by FBI agents who told him in a training film to participate in their efforts to bring someone responsible to bombing scenes."

The Justice Department, in a

report released today, concluded that it was "a major error in judgment" for FBI agents to warn Jewell about his constitutional rights against self-incrimination and to a lawyer while he was participating in that video.

Michael E. Shaheen Jr., the Justice Department lawyer who investigated the FBI's handling of Jewell, said Jewell's waiver of his rights "may have been compromised by the possibly misleading manner in which the warnings were presented."

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., criticized Shaheen for not stating explicitly in his report what he told the subcommittee today — that the FBI had violated Jewell's constitutional rights and would not have been able to use any incriminating information he provided.

"If the agents engaged in activity that was wrong... that ought to be explicitly stated as guidance for the future," Specter said.

Freeh said one agent and one supervisor were suspended for five days without pay because of their roles in the questioning of Jewell. Two FBI executives were given letters of censure. He did not identify any of those disciplined, citing privacy concerns.

Versace 911 call: 'Who would have done something like that?'

MIAMI (AP) — With a woman screaming hysterically in the background, Gianni Versace's chief breathlessly told a 911 operator the fashion designer had been gunned down and wondered: "Who would have done something like that?"

The 911 call, released Monday, captured chief Charles Podesta's frantic efforts to get help July 15 after staffers inside Versace's oceanfront mansion heard "three or four loud pops" and found the designer in a pool of blood.

At one point, the dispatcher asked Podesta whether Versace was breathing.

"We don't know — he's not moving," he said as the woman screamed in the background.

Two-and-a-half minutes into the call, Podesta asked the dispatcher: "Why aren't they here yet? My God, we're only a minute or two away."

The dispatcher tried to calm him down, and less than 30 seconds later sirens could be heard wailing as police converged on the villa.

Versace was shot twice in the head at close range as he opened the gates to his home on fashionable Ocean Drive. He died at a hospital minutes later.

Within hours, suspected serial killer Andrew Cunanan, already wanted in four killings in Minnesota, Chicago and New Jersey, was identified as the chief suspect.

Gianni Versace

A nationwide manhunt ended when Cunanan killed himself Wednesday on a houseboat 2 1/2 miles from Versace's mansion.

On Monday, the houseboat caretaker who heard shots and called police received a $10,000 reward from New York City's Gay and Lesbian Anti-Violence Project.

Fernando Carreira accepted the check in New York from the group's executive director, Christina Quinn, who acknowledged the call did not result in an arrest and conviction, but "we decided not to stand on details or fine print."

"I appreciate this very much," said the 71-year-old Carreira. "You promise, and then you go through with your promise."

Miami Beach Police Chief Richard Barreto said officials still need to check out Carreira's story and make sure he had no association with Cunanan before they decide whether to give him their $45,000 reward.

"Short of having any association with Andrew Cunanan, he will get the money," Barreto said.

"If his whole story pans out, then he should get it."

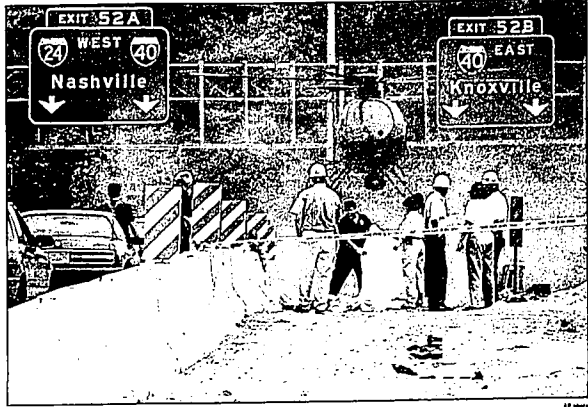

Carreira said he feels entitled to it.

"I'm the one who caught him," he said in New York. "In my opinion, I'm indirectly responsible for killing him. I'm the one who got him to put his gun to his head."

New York Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, who had announced another $10,000 reward, has already said Carreira did not meet the conditions of that reward. "Cunanan was not arrested, he was not convicted and he was not apprehended in the city of New York," Giuliani said.

Meanwhile, some have come forward to say they believe they may have been a target of Cunanan's. The latest issue of Time magazine quoted Sylvester Stallone as saying both he and Madonna may have been targeted.

"I was notified by the FBI that Cunanan had spoken to some bartender, inquiring about Stallone's and Madonna's habits in Miami," Stallone said.

Rescue workers collect and cover the remains of two construction workers killed in an accidental dynamite blast along a bluff, above Interstate 24 Monday morning in Nashville, Tenn. At least 10 other people were injured, including passing motorists.

Blast kills 2 at construction site

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A blasting accident at a highway construction site killed two workers Monday, hurling one across five lanes of morning rush-hour traffic.

Fourteen workers and motorists were injured by the explosion or in a series of traffic accidents it caused on Interstate 24. "I saw two big old clouds of smoke, and I thought we were having an earthquake here in Nashville. The next thing I saw was a man flying across the road," said truck driver David Lanford.

The construction crew was preparing dynamite to clear rock and widen the highway at the time. The cause of the accident was not immediately known.

"Everything just stopped," said another driver, Michelle Messer. "It was real eerie. Then I saw two guys crying. It was like they were coming out of a cloud of smoke. They were all black and disheveled and bloody."

Ricky Greene, 42, of Ashland City, and another worker whose name was not immediately released were killed. The blast shattered the wind-shields of passing vehicles and threw rock and dirt across the asphalt. Twelve motorists and two other workers were injured, none seriously.

Workers from the construction company LoJac Inc. were putting explosives in drilled holes when something triggered the blast, said Luanna Grandinetti, a state Transportation Department spokeswoman.

The construction company said it had a demolition expert at the site and did not know what caused the explosion.

It's a boy: Washington's National Zoo welcomes baby giraffe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Zoo has a new 127-pound baby.

The zoo's 15-year-old Masai giraffe, Griff, gave birth Sunday afternoon to a boy calf. The birth, which occurred with Griff standing and the baby dropping 6 feet to the ground, was witnessed by dozens of tourists and sightseers.

A few minutes later the baby was on his feet walking. "The giraffe is just a miniature adult," said zoo spokesman Mike Morgan.

Morgan said the calf is "very active" and is already nursing and following his mother around.

Veterinarians said the still-unnamed baby is healthy and should grow to between 17 feet and 18 feet tall and weigh 4,000 pounds.

Massachusetts governor resigns

BOSTON (AP) — In a maneuver that took the White House by surprise, Republican Gov. William F. Weld resigned Monday to fight his own party for the right to become President Clinton's ambassador to Mexico.

"I don't believe it would be fair to the people of Massachusetts to permit the conduct of their government to become embroiled in the vagaries of Washington politics," Weld said at a news conference.

The resignation is effective at 5 p.m. today.

Weld's aides said the move is part of a campaign to either win himself the posting in Mexico City or highlight his longheld belief that the Republican Party must be more inclusive if it hopes to regain the White House.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, has said he will not hold a confirmation hearing for President Clinton's nominee because the governor supposedly is soft on drugs. Weld, 51, has supported the medical use of marijuana and needle exchanges for addicts.

Top AF general asks to step down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Air Force Chief of Staff Ronald Fogleman asked Monday to retire a year early.

It was a move he had warned he would take if U.S. officers were held accountable for the terrorist blast that killed 19 airmen in Saudi Arabia.

Defense Secretary William Cohen is expected to announce later this week whether he has decided to punish anyone in connection with the June 25, 1996, Khobar Towers bombing.

Pentagon officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Fogleman took the dramatic step for a variety of reasons but clearly intended to signal that he believed Gen. Terry J. Schwalier, commander of the air base where the attack occurred, should not be punished for an event beyond his control.

"I respect General Fogleman's personal decision to retire to pursue new opportunities after his service to the Air Force and to the nation," Cohen said in a terse statement issued at the Pentagon.

Fogleman was not available for comment, nor was a statement issued by his office. However, he told CNN in an off-camera interview that he had accepted to avoid the appearance of influencing Cohen's upcoming decision.

If the four-star general's request to retire is approved by Air Force Secretary Sheila Widnall, Fogleman would be the first chief of staff to step down voluntarily in mid-term.

The Air Force celebrated its 50th anniversary this year and Air Force Gen. Ronald Fogleman asked Monday to retire ahead of schedule.

Fogleman, 56, is the 16th general to serve as chief of staff. He has served three of the four years in a normal term.

Fogleman told Widnall he wants to retire as soon as possible and not later than Sept. 1, one official said.

During his tenure, the stocky, blunt-spoken general became known as an outspoken advocate of air power and the Air Force's ability to conduct warfare around the globe and even in space, should that become necessary.

Shortly after he succeeded Gen. Merrill McPeak in October 1994, Fogleman began to advocate that Air Force personnel take a new look at matters of character and personal responsibility.

In 1995, he was dubbed the "accountability general" after he grounded five officers and imposed administrative penalties on several others for their role in the shutdown over Iraq of two Army Black Hawk helicopters.

Twenty-six people were killed when two F-15s monitoring the post-Gulf War "no-fly zone" attacked the choppers, which were flying on a diplomatic mission.

Fogleman also ordered the Air Force's 380,000 men and women to view a video he'd made stressing what he called his three core values — "integrity, service above self and excellence in everything you do."

He also made fairly significant changes in performance reports for officers and enlisted personnel.

And reversing a decision by McPeak, Fogleman restored the U.S. insignia to all uniform lapels and allowed officers to again wear their rank on their shoulders, rather than on the sleeves, Navy-style.

Fogleman recently made headlines for speaking bluntly to Congress when he was queried about the case involving adultery charges against 1st Lt. Kelly Flinn, the service's first female B-52 pilot.

"This is an issue about an officer entrusted to fly nuclear weapons who lied. That's what this is about," the general told a Senate committee hearing.

Fogleman is a 1963 graduate of the Air Force Academy and was a highly decorated fighter pilot in Vietnam, flying 315 combat missions.

The general has often spoken of a wish to retire with his wife to a home in Durango, Colo., that he built in recent years.

Red, white, blue: Not the flag, but Mars' rocks

BOSTON (AP) — Mars rocks are red, white and blue in photos taken by America's Pathfinder spacecraft, the blue perhaps showing where fierce storms scoured the rocks.

Peter Smith of the University of Arizona said that Pathfinder pictures taken with different filters show a faint bluish tint on one side of exposed rocks, while the other side of the rocks is a typical Martian red.

Some partially buried rocks, he said, are a whitish color and may actually be layers of a hard material called calcite, a calcium carbonate rock material common in Arizona.

Smith gave a report Monday on preliminary findings from the first three weeks of scientific studies by the Pathfinder at a meeting here of the American Astronomical Society. The spacecraft landed on Mars on July 4. It has taken hundreds of photographs and sent a rover creeping across the planet's surface.

In panorama photos taken by Pathfinder of its landing site, there is a striking two-color appearance on dozens of rocks, Smith said.

"You divide the scene into two parts — the red part and the blue part," he said. "There is a very clear difference between the red side and the blue side."

Smith said that the blue side is on the east side of the rocks, suggesting that the sometimes-furious wind storms on Mars may have scoured off a layer, uncovering the color. The west side of the rocks, protected from the wind, are red, probably from layers of Martian soil, he said.

"The strong wind comes through and it could have sandblasted the one side of these rocks," he said. It could have happened from one huge storm, or "it could have happened gradually over millions of years."

Tracks made by the wheels of the Pathfinder's small rover, Sojourner, have revealed that in some places around the landing site there is a thin layer of reddish soil on top of white rock that could be calcite, Smith said.

"If you had a broom you might be able to sweep the dust off and find a whole layer of rock there," Smith said.

Sojourner operators have intentionally spun the wheels of the small vehicle to churn up the soil. Scientists then analyzed how the dirt slumps to determine its texture. Smith said they have found three types of soils within the small area that Sojourner has explored.

"There is a type that is like fine grained beach sand," said Smith.

2 missing after Marine helicopter crashes

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. — Rescue crews Monday searched for two Marine aviators after their attack helicopter crashed in the Atlantic. The two-person AH-1W Cobra went down Sunday night seven miles southeast of New River Inlet during a training exercise. The Marines, the Navy and the Coast Guard searched by air and sea for Capt. Clark A. Cox of Iowa City, Iowa, and Capt. Jerrill H. Boggan of Haskell, Okla. The cause of the crash was under investigation.

Church burner gets 2 1/2 years in prison

WILMINGTON, N.C. — A white teen-ager was sentenced to 2 1/2 years in prison Monday for burning a black church. Matthew Neal Blackburn, 19, of Stella, had pleaded guilty in May to federal charges in the blaze last summer at the St. James AME Zion church, which was doused with fuel and lit with beer bottles filled with gasoline. He was also ordered to pay for the damage to the church, which reopened on Easter Sunday after $55,000 worth of repairs. Blackburn could have gotten 30 years in prison.

Federal judge leaves active service

SALT LAKE CITY — U.S. District Judge David K. Winder is looking forward to taking the next four months off to spend time with his family, travel and more or less "do nothing." A former Utah state "Judge of the Year" and once ranked best federal judge in the six-state 10th Circuit, Winder is leaving active service after reaching "senior status" on June 9, the day after his 65th birthday. He was appointed by former President Jimmy Carter and sworn in as a federal court judge on Dec. 20, 1979. "I attribute what success I've had to treating everyone fairly," Winder said.

Bill would aid families of Flight 800 victims

WASHINGTON (AP) — Families of the victims of TWA Flight 800 and other aviation disasters could win larger monetary awards to compensate for the loss of their loved ones under a bill the House passed Monday.

The measure would permit families to seek compensatory and punitive damages in state court. It also would allow those relatives who aren't economically dependent upon the victim to seek redress too.

The bill would apply to plane crashes on or after Jan. 1, 1995 — including the explosion of TWA Flight 800. Federal officials are still trying to figure out what caused the Paris-bound jetliner to erupt off the coast of Long Island, N.Y., last July, killing all 230 people on board.

The measure was approved by a voice vote and moves to the Senate.

Sponsors of the bill said current law is inadequate because it treats airplane mishaps in international waters differently from those on land.

"With this legislation, we will ensure that all families will be treated the same regardless of whether a plane crashes in the ocean or on land," said Rep. John Duncan Jr., R-Tenn.

"The value of an individual's life does not change depending on where the plane happens to come down," added Rep. William Lipinski, D-Ill.

Rep. Joseph McDade, R-Pa., introduced the bill less than one month ago.

He represents Montoursville, Pa., the home of 21 high school French club members and chaperones who perished in the unsolved aviation disaster.

Former law clerk Larry Kastan pays his respects to former Justice William J. Brennan Monday at the Supreme Court building in Washington.

'Most influential' judge remembered

Brennan's body put on public display

WASHINGTON (AP) — William J. Brennan's body was carried in a flag-draped coffin Monday back to the Supreme Court building where, over a 34-year tenure, he became America's most influential judge of the 20th century.

"This was his life. This was his way of touching our lives." The Rev. Milton Jordan told Brennan's family and former colleagues gathered in the Supreme Court building's stately Great Hall.

The Supreme Court's leading liberal from 1956 to his 1990 retirement, Brennan died last week at age 91.

He left a huge legal legacy. His opinions shaped the landmark "one-person, one-vote" principal of political reapportionment, expanded free-speech rights and broadened the rights of all people to battle the government in court.

President Clinton was to deliver one of the eulogies at a funeral service for Brennan at St. Matthew's Cathedral on Tuesday. But first, Brennan's casket was to remain on public view for 12 hours at the court building, resting on the same funeral bier used for Abraham Lincoln in 1865.

He is history's fifth Supreme Court member honored in this way. Chief Justices Salmon Chase, Earl Warren and Warren Burger and Justice Thurgood Marshall, one of Brennan's dearest friends, also had their coffins placed on display before burial.

Three of the court's current members — John Paul Stevens, Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Clarence Thomas — were present Monday, as were retired Justices Byron R. White and Harry A. Blackmun. Marshall's widow, Cecilia, also attended the brief ceremony. Thomas served as her escort.

With the court in summer recess, six of its current members were not in town.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist was said to be at his summer home in Vermont; Justice David H. Souter was at his home in New Hampshire.

This was his life. This was his way of touching our lives.

— Rev. Milton Jordan, on former Justice William Brennan

Justices Anthony M. Kennedy, Sandra Day O'Connor, Antonin Scalia and Stephen G. Breyer were out of the country.

About 100 people lined up in stifling heat to be among the first to pay their respects to the deceased justice.

"But for Brennan and others, I don't know if I would have had the opportunities I have had in my life, as a black and a woman," said Tiffany Graham, a paralegal. "He used the Constitution as a tool to effect social justice and social change, and for that I will be forever grateful."

Louis Linden of Baltimore, first in line, said, "Justice Brennan and the things that he wrote pretty much define why I became a lawyer... The idea that the Constitution was primarily a document to protect people rather than property."

From a vantage point across the street, scores of Boy Scouts silently watched the hearse carrying Brennan's casket stop in front of the imposing marble building.

As former Brennan law clerks, some now federal judges, removed the casket and took it up the building's front steps, the Scouts removed their hats.

Tribes spent $4.2 million on '96 lobbying

WASHINGTON (AP) — Indian tribes spent at least $4.2 million last year to buy influence in Washington and to protect their gambling interests, according to a study released Monday.

The biggest chunk of the money, some $2.3 million, went to run the tribes' Washington lobbying operations and to hire outside lobbyists, said the Center for Responsive Politics, a nonprofit group that studies the influence of money on politics.

Most of the lobbying firepower was directed at three issues: a successful fight to head off proposed new federal taxes on tribal gambling revenue; the formation of a national gambling study commission; and changes in federal regulation of Indian gambling operations.

By far the biggest spender on lobbying was the Mississippi Band of Choctaw Indians, which paid $700,000 to be represented by a lobbying firm. The Seminole Tribe of Florida ranked second, spending $320,000 on lobbying.

At the same time, tribes increased their giving to candidates and political parties. In the two-year cycle leading up to last November's elections, tribes gave nearly $1.7 million, more than double the amount given in the 1994 election cycle.

A recent study by the General Accounting Office found that tribal-run gambling generated more than $4.5 billion in revenues in 1995, about 10 percent of revenues for the gambling industry as a whole. GAO said 184 tribes now operate 281 gambling facilities across the country.

But the study found that political giving by tribes in the last election cycle constituted 26 percent of overall industry campaign contributions. And the tribal share has been rising, from 8 percent in the 1992 cycle and 20 percent in the 1994 elections.

Democrats benefited disproportionately from the tribes' giving, receiving 87 percent of Indian gaming contributions, compared with 47 percent for all other campaign money. The top congressional recipient of tribal money was Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, who received $24,000 in the past two years. Second was Rep. Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn., with $12,500.

Inouye was honored in January by the Mashantucket Pequot at a reception at their opulent downtown Washington offices. The Pequots operate the country's most lucrative Indian casino, Foxwoods, in Ledyard, Conn.

Lawmakers condemn blockade of U.S. ferry

WASHINGTON (AP) — House lawmakers on Monday condemned a recent blockade of an American ferry in the Pacific Northwest by Canadian fishermen angry over the salmon catch of oceangoing U.S. boats.

The nonbinding resolution, approved by a voice vote, also criticized Canada for failing to bring a swift end to the blockade, which lasted several days.

The measure urges President Clinton to take immediate steps to protect U.S. interests in the Pacific salmon industry and to force the Canadian government to prevent further harassment of U.S. fishermen. The Senate approved a similar resolution last week, 81-19. The salmon dispute last week upset the normally calm waters of U.S.-Canadian relations as fishermen from the two countries continue to disagree over how to divide stocks of Pacific salmon.

The American ferry was surrounded by hundreds of fishing boats July 19. The British Columbia fishermen backed off only after being assured their government would try to settle the dispute over the salmon that are netted by oceangoing U.S. boats as they swim to spawning streams inside Canada.

In other action, the House voted to establish a moratorium on large fishing vessels that harvest Atlantic herring and mackerel within 200 miles of the U.S. coast until a population survey of the fish is completed.

Lawyer will likely bow out of police shooting case

CINCINNATI (AP) — The lawyer hired to defend a former fugitive against charges of shooting at three police officers said he'll probably bow out of the case to avoid a conflict of interest.

Dayton lawyer Earl Moore said Monday he faces a potential conflict since he already represents Chevie Kehoe's colleague, Cameron Hawkins of Xenia.

Kehoe is being held on a $20 million bond on charges stemming from a Feb. 15 shootout with police near Wilmington. The shooting was caught on videotape shot from a cruiser and later broadcast around the country.

Hawkins is charged with attempted murder and aggravated robbery in an unrelated case for allegedly shooting at a shopping mall security guard. Moore would have a conflict if prosecutors called Hawkins to testify about any statements Kehoe might have made to him in jail.

Assistant Clinton County prosecutor Rick Moyer raised the conflict of interest question Monday during a private meeting with Common Pleas Judge William McCracken.

Moyer did not immediately return a call seeking comment. Moore said he planned to tell Kehoe to keep the public defenders who were appointed to his case last week.

"There are a lot of lawyers who will want to get into it for the publicity, and he'll be fair game," Moore said.

Spouses' 'coming out' can leave straight partners reeling

The Orlando Sentinel

Imagine this: You've been married five, 15 or 25 years. You think you have a fairly solid relationship, despite the predictable ups and downs of wedlock. Then one day he announces that he's gay, he can't live a lie anymore and he wants a divorce.

Or she announces she's a lesbian, she has found a partner she can really communicate with, and she wants a divorce.

Where do you, the straight spouse, go from here? Probably into shock, tinged with shame — "Wasn't I woman (or man) enough?" — and exacerbated by a sense of profound isolation, experts say.

Straight spouses "don't have anybody to talk to," says Kimberly Brooks, a licensed mental health counselor in Winter Park, Fla.

Even if they work up the courage to confide in family and friends the real reason for their impending divorce, they may get something less than empathy.

"They get stigmatized by other straight people," says Amity Pierce Buxton, the author of "The Other Side of the Closet" (John Thanks a lot — that's just what a straight spouse with a bruised psyche doesn't need to hear.

What they do need to hear, Buxton and Brooks say, is that there are plenty of other people experiencing their anguish.

"There are probably 2 million couples who are or were married in which one was gay, lesbian or bisexual," Buxton estimates. She was one of them. Her husband came out after 25 years of marriage.

In "The Other Side of the Closet," she writes, "Only as shock subsides can straight spouses begin to understand homosexuality and homophobia and how those realities affect them and their children. Though relieved to know the reason behind prior changes in the partners' behavior or problems in marital sex, most feel hurt, angry and helpless."

Nancy, a 60-year-old Orlando, Fla., woman who did not want her last name used, was married for 27 years to a man who she learned only in the last years of their marriage, was gay. He died three years ago of AIDS. She tested negative.

"You're very helpless in competing with another man," she says. "If it had been a woman, I'd have done somersaults, anything to win his love. But when I knew it was a hopeless situation."

Nancy, of course, had no inkling that her husband was gay.

Tips clear up how sexes should interact

Knight-Ridder News Service

Dating doesn't have to be awkward, painful or traumatic, says relationships guru John Gray, author of the hit book "Men Are From Mars and Women Are From Venus" (six million-plus copies sold in the United States). Gray's eighth how-to is "Mars and Venus on a Date" ($25, HarperCollins).

A breezy read with chapters like "Why Men Don't Call" and "Why Some Women Remain Single," "Mars" poses vast differences in how the genders should mix.

We spoke to Gray on the phone from Phoenix, picking his sensitive-man brain for a little more detail on his tips.

opposed to immediately shifting gears (and changing clothes). If you don't have a uniform, I don't suggest putting on a fake one.

"If she says, 'Do I look fat?' don't say — 'Well, you certainly don't have the body of a model, but those women starve themselves.'"

"She may be feeling a little insecure about her weight. He need not answer literally — she needs a comment such as, 'Oh, I'm so attracted to you' or 'You are the most special woman for me.'"

"When a woman reaches across to unlock a man's door, it ... confuses their roles."

"Allow him to take care of you for an evening. That type of experience will produce the most bonding."

"Even when things go really well on a date, a man may still not call."

"When a man has a wonderful date with a woman, he feels satisfied, complete — job done. He won't feel the need to call her until he has something to say. The woman's reaction is, 'I can't wait to talk to him tomorrow.' Men grow in affection when they are away from the woman, whereas women grow in affection when they interact."

"A woman will feel most attracted to a man when he makes his compliments personal and direct, while a man will feel most attracted to a woman when her compliments are less direct and more about how she feels in response to what he has done, thought, decided or provided."

"For men, what will really get to his heart is when he provides something — he takes you to a restaurant and you go. This soup is so great, this restaurant is wonderful." That's what men really need to hear — that who he is can make a difference in her life."

Prevention is best with STD

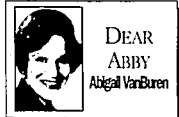

DEAR ABBY: I was interested to read the letter about genital warts from "Keeping My Pants On in Florida." As a gynecologist, I agree that prevention of sexually transmitted disease is the best solution to this enormous medical problem.

The same sexually transmitted virus that causes genital warts (HPV) is the most common cause of cervical cancer. The more sexual partners you have had, or the more partners your partner has had, the greater your risk of coming into contact with this virus.

Another important risk is the age at which a person becomes sexually active, since during adolescence the cells of the cervix are more susceptible to this infection. Therefore, intercourse at an early age increases the risk of getting cervical precancer and cancer.

HPV is often detectable during a regular gynecologic examination. A routine Pap smear is a fairly effective way to find this virus on the cervix, long before it has caused cervical cancer.

Treatment for both genital warts and abnormal Pap smears can be easily performed in the doctor's office with minimal discomfort. Hysterectomy is rarely necessary. And the development of cervical cancer and death is avoidable if women will simply have yearly examinations and Pap smears.

DEAR ABBY

— WILLIAM H. PARKER, M.D., SANTA MONICA, CALIF.
 DEAR DR. PARKER: Thank you for this information. Since many people suffer from genital warts, I'm sure it will be appreciated. You are not the only medical professional who wrote to comment about the letter from "Keeping My Pants On in Florida." Read on for another response.

DEAR ABBY: The man in Florida who acquired genital warts from his girlfriend after having sex with her for the first time was under the false assumption that had he used a condom he would not have contracted this virus.

Condoms are ineffective in preventing the transmission of genital warts or herpes. They are transmitted by intimate skin-to-skin contact in areas that the condom does not cover. These viruses also shed beyond the "protected" area. Transmission of genital warts can also occur through secondary contact, such as fondling, foreplay and petting.

Abby, please make this clear to your readers: The 12 percent failure rate of condoms in the prevention of pregnancy alone argues against their use for preventing an incurable or fatal disease. People must understand the ineffectiveness of condoms. The only safe sex is a mature, mutually monogamous relationship with an uninfected partner. If people choose otherwise, they should be aware of the risks involved.

— SALLY BEACH, R.N., LAKE WORTH, FLA.

DEAR SALLY BEACH: Thank you on behalf of my readers for the warning. Although it may be tempting to proceed in the heat of passion, it's wiser to wait until after a period of cool reflection before consummating a sexual relationship.

Accused spy's mother appeals for release

NEW DELHI, India — The mother of a Tibetan music scholar jailed in China on charges of spying appealed Monday for international pressure to win his release.

Ngawang Choephel, 30, a former Fulbright scholar who has taught in the United States, was arrested in 1995 while visiting Tibet to research folk songs. He was sentenced to 18 years in prison by a Chinese court for allegedly spying for the self-proclaimed Tibetan government-in-exile.

The Dalai Lama's administration has denied Choephel was spying on its behalf.

Chinese execute 9 more for Xinjiang riot

BEIJING — China has executed nine more people in the Muslim province of Xinjiang in connection with a deadly anti-government riot, a court official said Monday.

The executions bring to at least 12 the number of people put to death in connection with the Feb. 5 uprising, in which authorities say 10 people died and 140 were injured.

The nine people executed had been sentenced at a public rally July 22 in the Xinjiang city of Yining, the official Xinjiang Daily newspaper reported.

An official of the Yili People's Court confirmed the nine had been executed, but did not say when. Three other people were executed in April.

The February rioting was some of the worst in Xinjiang since the start of the Communist era in 1949. The indigenous Uighur minority resents Chinese rule in Xinjiang, where they once had an independent republic.

Kidnapped American escapes captors

NAIROBI, Kenya — A U.S. aid worker was kidnapped in western Somalia, only to escape unharmed within hours, the U.S. Embassy said Monday.

Somali kidnapers seized Daniel Suther at Belet Huen near the border with Ethiopia on Friday. He escaped shortly afterward, jumping out of his captors' car when it stopped at an intersection and then hiding in brush overnight.

"It was tense," Suther, 30, told Voice of America. "But I'll go back there anytime. Just give me a time to rest." Suther was flown to Nairobi Sunday, a U.S. Embassy spokesman in Nairobi said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

It was the second time Suther had been kidnapped in Somalia — in September, abductors in the Somali capital, Mogadishu, seized him and held him for a day.

'Melting' dike sends sandbaggers scrambling

BAD FERENHWALDE, Germany — The surging Oder River tore through an earthen dike Monday in eastern Germany, sending soldiers scrambling to patch the latest breach before water could engulf the villages behind them.

Authorities said the 15,000 remaining residents of the rural, lowland Oderbruch region in northwest of Berlin were not in immediate danger.

But after nearly two weeks of record-high water, "the dikes are melting away practically before our eyes," said Michael Muth, head of the crisis staff for Brandenburg state.

North Korea allows inspection of drought areas

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — U.N. relief workers have concluded that a devastating drought means famine-threatening North Korea can expect little from this year's harvest, North Korea's state news agency said Monday.

North Korea's Korean Central News Agency quoted U.N. adviser Christian Roberto as saying any rains would come too late for this year's crops.

On Saturday, representatives from the United Nations and relief agencies toured Hwangju and Pongsan counties, 31 miles south of North Korea's capital, Pyongyang.

"They, accompanied by management officials of cooperatives, farmers, round maize fields and admitted that drought damage was serious," the agency reported.

North Korea already suffers from chronic food shortages aggravated by severe flooding in 1995 and 1996, North Korea said Saturday it now is battling a widespread drought that has laid waste to 716,300 acres of farmland and 704,300 tons of grain.

The reclusive communist state, which preaches self-reliance as a guiding philosophy, is already dependent on outside food aid.

Albright chides Malaysia on human rights

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Secretary of State Madeleine Albright scolded the Malaysian government Monday for moving to water down human rights and blaming the West for a decline of Southeast Asian currencies.

The clashes, both public and private, ended three days of regional meetings on a sour note, although U.S. officials saw the debate as a healthy sign of growing face-to-face frankness between America and Asia.

"We obviously have a very different world view here," State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns said. "But that doesn't mean that you walk away from the relationship. You try to make the relationship work."

Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad, host of the Southeast Asian meetings with nations that have regional interests, had for days blamed American businessman George Soros for destabilizing currencies. He claimed Soros meant to punish the Association of Southeast Asian Nations for accepting the military-ruled Burma into its fold this year. Soros has denied the charge.

U.S. officials issued low-key responses, blaming the problem on the plunging Thai baht. It has lost 20 percent of its value against the dollar since July 2, causing other regional currencies to slip. Thailand asked the International Monetary Fund for a $20 billion loan Monday, conceding its internal economic policies led to the crisis.

The dispute came to a head here when Malaysian Foreign Minister Abdullah Badawi opened Monday's post-ministerial meeting by blaming currency fluctuations on Western traders committing "unholy actions."

"It is time that we recognize these actions for what they really are, namely villainous acts of sabotage," Abdullah said to Albright, other foreign ministers and reporters in the day's only open session.

A fuming Albright ordered Stuart Eizenstat, undersecretary of state for economic, business and agricultural affairs, to deliver a rebuttal.

"Market movements are not dominated by a small number of currency speculators, let alone one person, who happens to be a U.S. citizen," Eizenstat said in the statement.

Later, when Albright met with representatives of the nine ASEAN member nations, she took on the Malaysian representative over Mahathir's plan to ask the United Nations to review its universal declaration on human rights.

Mahathir, in a story published Monday in the local New Straits Times, argued that the post-World War II doctrine that calls for civil and political freedoms for people the world over "dis-developed Southeast Asian nations.

Albright was outraged. "She said it would be a mistake to believe that these principles had been imposed by the West on other regions, other cultures of the world," Burns told reporters. "And she said they benefit people everywhere."

If Malaysia goes ahead with the U.N. proposal, Burns said, "The United States would be relentless in its opposition to any attempt to water down that declaration."

On another topic, she urged Southeast Asian nations to attack the region's pervasive narcotics trade by refusing to deal with drug-tainted Burmese businesses.

"Narcotics production has grown in Burma year after year, defying every international effort to solve the problem," she said in a statement to the foreign ministers. "As a result, drug traffickers who once spent their days leading mule trains down jungle tracks are now leading lights in Burma's new market economy, and leading figures in its new political order."

Seductive expo center could be a boondoggle

The wonderful and terrible thing about democracy is that government will do whatever we tell it to do — good for us or not. Shucks, it's just tax money, right?

That's the seductive risk facing Twin Falls County voters. They'll vote next week on building a $7 million expo center at the Filer fairgrounds. Through the facility's promoters promise a whirlwind of events and shows, the wisdom of such an undertaking is far from clear.

The center originally was floated as a modest, year-round revenue source for fairgrounds upkeep. In the past few months, however, its mission has grown both more glorious and less specific.

Now it's a "stand-alone profit center," whatever that is, with twin goals of (1) providing a venue for trade and entertainment events, and (2) bringing visitor dollars to restaurants, hotels and related businesses.

That's swell if you think monster truck rallies and cattle shows are what the community needs. It's even better if you own a restaurant or a hotel. But from taxpayers' standpoint, it's dicey.

Fair officials' first estimates were that the center might clear $10,000 to $20,000 a year. When it became clear that such a tiny figure was a laughable return on a $7 million investment, they sharpened their pencils and projected a net income more than 10 times that amount.

That's a nice piece of change — if it's real. But this estimate is based on a tall stack of assumptions. It assumes the center can attract 100 events a year. It assumes those events will attract paying crowds. Stack up enough assumptions, and voila! — you've projected a quarter-million-dollar profit. Converting the projection into real money is the tricky part.

One disturbing aspect of this plan is the rush in which it was developed. Fair officials pulled it together quickly to meet a short deadline. Expiration of jail-construction debt created an opportunity to float a new bond issue that technically "won't raise taxes." Stamped by this artificial urgency, the Twin Falls County commissioners slapped it onto the ballot without asking the nitty-gritty questions that ought to be asked before you spend millions of dollars.

Example: Not until after the commissioners had OK'd the plan did someone (us) ask fair officials how many events they would need each year to break even. They didn't know. (They did, however, produce a number the next day.)

Despite officials' confidence that the center will succeed, the risks in this plan are significant.

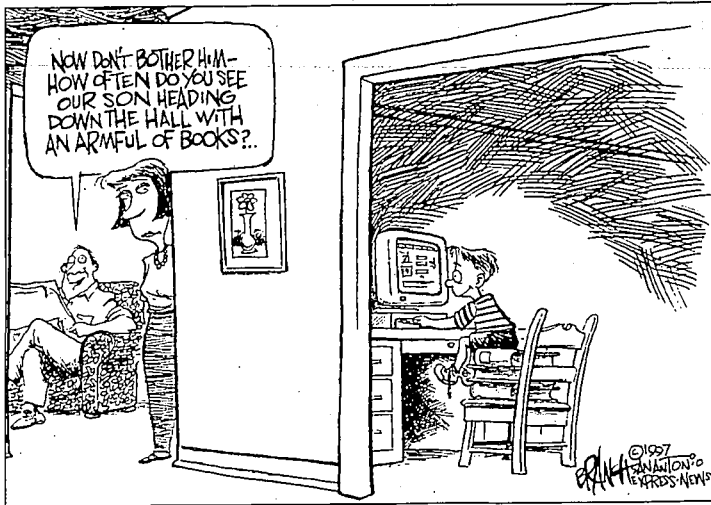

Note the experience of Pueblo, Colo., as detailed in Sunday's paper. There, a $579,000 profit projection gave way to a $248,000 first-year loss.

Note also that the Filer facility would be built less than 150 miles from two comparable venues in Boise, a third in Nampa, and a fourth in Pocatello.

Though a multi-purpose events center has obvious appeal, this proposal's details seem far too speculative. Few of us would take a $7 million plunge if we were spending our own money.

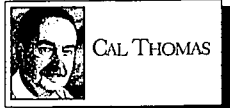

But you know that? It is our own money. Let's treat it that way.

Watch for additional comments on this issue later this week.

The White House: 'Like a subway'

One of the Democratic Party's biggest campaign donors during the last election cycle, Johnny Chien Chuen Chung, has told the Los Angeles Times that he personally handed a $50,000 check to the First Lady's then chief of staff, Margaret Williams — in response to requests for "help" from aides to Hillary Rodham Clinton.

gave $366,000 between mid-1994 and November 1996, all of which was returned because the DNC wasn't certain that the source of the money was Chung rather than the Chinese businessman Chung represented.

Saying he was seeking special treatment for himself and a delegation of visiting Chinese businessmen, Chung says he was asked to help defray the cost of a White House Christmas reception that had been billed to the Democratic National Committee. Chung's version of events directly contradicts Clinton administration accounts that claim "at no time" did anyone solicit contributions from Chung.

In the latest example that these White House occupants hung out a "for sale" sign, Chung said, "I see the White House is like a subway: You have to put in coins to open the gates." An administration that regards the White House as the people's house rather than the residence of political kings would not invite such cynicism. But a prostitute cares little about the background or motives of a customer, so long as the john comes up with the cash.

President Clinton, himself, has vouched for Williams, who he claimed played a "completely passive role" in re-laying what he alleges was an unsolicited donation to the DNC. But Chung says most of his contributions were solicited by DNC Finance Director Richard Sullivan and other DNC officials. Chung came to Mrs. Clinton's office on March 8 and 9, 1995, that Williams did receive a $50,000 check from Chung in the White House and that Chung was seeking admittance for himself and the Chinese businessman to sit in on the president's radio address. And they say that Williams may have arranged lunch and a photo with Mrs. Clinton. But they deny soliciting the money.

When one is left with a choice of believing the Clinton White House, which regularly backtracks and dissembles about almost everything associated with ethical behavior, and Johnny Chung, who views the White House as a subway turnstile, it is clear that Bill Clinton's promise to make his the most ethical administration in history is not going to be realized.

Since Chung has refused to testify before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee unless he is granted immunity, the public may never get the chance to hear, under oath, a full accounting of Chung's "subway" journeys. But if this isn't enough to persuade a fair-minded person that this White House has been turned into a house of ill repute, consider this:

Chung's attorney, Brian Sun, says that just one month ago, while the DNC was returning his client's donations, Chung received an invitation to join the president and vice president for a Broadway fund-raiser in New York. Chung declined, but the invitation shows that after its derailment, the White House "subway" — and the turnstiles necessary to reach it, appear to be back in operation.

Why is this mess still here?

More than two years ago, gasoline was removed from a closed service station in the 400 block of Washington Street North. What was left behind was a large pile of dirt put on the adjacent lot and a hole in the ground. The hole is protected with nothing more than an orange plastic fence attached to a railing now lying on the ground.

The community leaders seem to be oblivious to the situation. My neighbors and I have contacted the county commissioners, the city attorney, Sherry Jeff, the Environmental Protection Agency and Mr. Laird Noh. To my knowledge, Mr. Noh has been the only one to respond personally with an on-site appearance.

We were told the properties were in litigation and nothing could be done. Then we were informed it would be cleaned up in June. Well, it is the end of July and it is still here.

We have endured this mess of dust in our homes, yards, cars and our lungs developing coughs that get worse when the wind blows. The main concern is that children play in the contaminated dirt with their bikes, wagons, etc. The possibility of a serious accident from playing in the dirt or falling in the hole is very real.

Will you and his have done little to correct this health and physical problem to be liable? Come see for yourself or live in the area for a week. You can bet if your community leaders had this problem, it would be gone before the sun sets.

Wait a minute, Mr. Postman

What's the problem with Mr. Postman? Man, I don't understand. Why did he boot the flute? Dennis has played his flute in front of the post office for quite a spell. Why all of a sudden tell him only on Mondays and Fridays? Dennis is a very kind man, he causes no harm! Just plays his flute.

I would like to say, Mr. Postman, please mister please, bring back Dennis, "Mr. Flute Man."

Dr. Laura teaches family values

There is a wonderful radio program Monday through Friday from 1 to 4 p.m. on KART Radio - 1400 AM. If you are a person with morals, character, honesty and believe in marriage vows and family loyalty, you will love this program and her books.

On the other hand, if you have no morals, no integrity, are shacking up, committing adultery, lying, destroying your children's homes and lives so "you can be happy," have no commitment to your marriage vows, no family loyalty and are causing shame and disgrace to yourself and your family — you will not listen to this wonderful program or read her books.

Also if you think your children are lucky because they have two homes — a week here, a week there; they want one home with their own mom and dad, not another mom or dad with kids strung all over. Also, being a mom and dad means loving each other and the children — being there every morning to feed them breakfast, dress them, and then off to school and at night to read them stories, hear their prayers and put them to bed. Being a mom and dad is not going to a soccer game sometimes and taking them out for pizza sometimes, not paying child support, going to the bars sitting around home drinking and using filthy language. Go to church — listen to Dr. Laura.

Valley is quite service-friendly

This is a reply to the letter from Warren and Barbara Duke on July 2 about the valley not being service-friendly.

I, too, moved here from somewhere else about five years ago to marry my husband. My somewhere else included the suburbs and surrounding areas of New York, Chicago, Pittsburgh, San Jose/San Francisco and Salt Lake City. First of all, let me state that one can find the most friendly experiences in some of the worst circumstances and the most terribly frustrating situations in the lowliest settings. The next statement beginning to be mentioned is that missed deliveries, schedules, messages, etc., do occur and often are the fault of no one person in particular.

Personally, I have found the Magic Valley to be a beautiful area in which to live. And by calling it beautiful, I am not merely referring to the scenery, I am encompassing the low crime rate (although growing), the friendliness of the native Idahoans and transplants, the cordiality of the valley merchants, police and fire departments and the various service-oriented organizations. I just spent 1 1/2 hours yesterday afternoon with the very cooperative staff at the Twin Falls Library sitting me in successfully beating the negative of a picture of the area. It was a refreshing experience. In the five years that I have been in the valley my husband and I have purchased various cars, furniture, clothing, food (groceries, dinners, pizza, catering), real estate and required the expertise of numerous service establishments in the building of our house, we came in contact with architects, construction contractors, cabinet makers, masons, marble and tile setters, plumbers, electricians, nurseries, etc. I must vehemently disagree with labeling of this valley as not being service-friendly.

Before an unknown company can market an unknown product, the public has to be made aware of what the product is, how trustworthy is the company and product and what safeguards and guarantees, if any, accompany a sale. Similarly, when one moves to a new neighborhood, one is an unknown company with an unknown product. A successful marketing strategy must be adopted and utilized. If not, no one is buying, so the new move-in "hair selling." No, I am not a salesperson. However, I am the daughter of very successful, professional salesmen. In any worthwhile relationship, social, business or family, one must sell one's self before the other party buys.

Bank: Files found in shredder room may be linked to Holocaust victims

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — Switzerland's largest bank confirmed Monday documents discovered in its shredder room by a night watchman may have been related to property sold by Jews under the Nazis.

The Union Bank of Switzerland had previously maintained that the documents salvaged by the guard, Christoph Meili, were unrelated to dormant accounts of Holocaust victims.

But a statement Monday acknowledged the documents may have some relation to the victims. Jewish groups have criticized Swiss banks for not being forthright in revealing records of Jewish gold and assets that disappeared in Switzerland following the war.

Some of the shredder room documents were relevant to the research of an international panel of historians investigating Switzerland's dealings with the Nazis, the panel's secretary, Linus von Castelmur, told The Associated Press today. He declined to elaborate.

Union Bank said it had copies of documents relating to "the case of three properties, for the purchase of which a German bank in 1937 acted as intermediary and whose previous owners were possibly Jews."

Since Jews were under Nazi pressure to sell their property in Germany at prices well below market values, the mortgages for a 1937 sale of property, possibly by Jews, could well come under the scope of the commission's work. Documents related to the sale were in the shredder room.

Meili, who lost his job after turning the documents over to a Jewish organization in January, is under investigation for breaking Switzerland's banking secrecy rules, has fled to the United States with his wife and two children because he said he felt their lives were in danger. The U.S. Congress has moved to give them permanent residence status.

Union Bank admitted that its chief archivist shredded documents earlier this year, but it is not known how many or which documents were destroyed.

The bank also admitted the documents' destruction violated a law requiring preservation of any evidence that might relate to investigations into the World War II era.

TWIN FALLS — The week of golf that culminates with the annual Idaho Open tournament started Monday with events aimed at future pros.

The tournament itself, is the second-largest professional golf event in Idaho. Players will compete at both Jackpot and Twin Falls Municipal golf courses Wednesday through Friday.

But the sideline events draw even more people to the event, and to the game.

On Monday, more than 250 kids received free clubs, hats, golf gloves and lunch as part of a junior clinic.

The youngsters were also treated to trick shot artist Pat Akins. Afterwards, kids could try a couple of the tricks.

Trick-shot artist Pat Akins entertained the youngsters, and the kids even tried their hands at some of the shots.

In the late afternoon, two four-man teams competed in a skins game for charity.

Playing for the Special Olympics was the team of two-time defending Idaho Open champion Eric Rustand, Cal Jensen, Lee Gilliland and Danny Marona.

Messier leaves Rangers for Canucks

The Associated Press

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — When Mark Messier raised his arms to celebrate signing with the Vancouver Canucks, the image brought back memories: the hoisting of the Stanley Cup.

Messier, the only player to captain two different teams to NHL championships, left the New York Rangers on Monday to return to his homeland and take a three-year contract reportedly worth up to $20 million.

"Hopefully I can come in here and help out in any way that I can to bring Canada, bring Vancouver, what they're really hoping for — the Stanley Cup," the 36-year-old center said. "I can't wait to get started."

"He'll have his work cut out for him. The Canucks, who have never won the Stanley Cup since joining the NHL in 1970, missed the playoffs last season with a 35-40-7 record and had trouble filling their new arena, the GM Place.

To cheers and applause at a news conference at the arena, Messier donned a No. 11 Canucks jersey — the same number he wore with his two other NHL teams, the Oilers and the Rangers. He called the Canucks a "great fit" and raised his arms.

"When I see him raise his arms like he did, I can envisage a Stanley Cup (in them)," Canucks coach Tom Renney said.

Added general manager Pat Quinn: "(Messier) is not going to be the Messiah, but he is going to make a big difference."

Messier has hoisted the Cup six times,

Free agent center Mark Messier signed a three-year deal with the Vancouver Canucks in Vancouver Monday. The 36-year-old star center, one of the NHL's premier players, reportedly signed the contract worth up to $20 million. Messier donned a No. 11 Canucks jersey to cheers and applause at a news conference at GM Place, the Canucks' new arena.

five with Edmonton. One of the most memorable images in hockey in recent years was when he lifted the Cup after the Rangers' 1994 victory over Vancouver in seven games — a huge smile on his face as New York ended its 54-year championship drought.

The free-agent bidding war over one of the NHL's premier players had heated up in the past few days, with the Rangers, the Washington Capitals and

Detroit Red Wings also in the running.

The Daily News reported that the three-year Vancouver deal may have options for a fourth and fifth season, making the contract worth more than $20 million.

Messier was reportedly offered a two-year contract worth $10 million plus an option year to stay with the Rangers and teammate Wayne Gretzky.

"I very much wanted to keep him as a Ranger, keep him for the rest of his playing days," New York general manager Neil Smith said. "My intention all along was to try to keep Mark as a Ranger. There's no equivocation. ... I couldn't tell you how disappointed I am that Mark won't be on the team."

Smith said Messier never got back to the Rangers after the team increased its first offer. Messier had criticized the team's negotiating tactics.

Yankees demote Irbu for minor repairs

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Yankees couldn't wait for Hideki Irbu to get to New York. Now they want him to get out of town — for a while anyway.

With expectations falling short every time the Japanese pitcher takes the mound, the Yankees optioned Irbu to the minor leagues on Monday in hopes that he can regain his confidence.

"This is just trying to get him fixed so he can help us," New York manager Joe Torre said. "... the biggest part of this is that he can get wavy and then come back."

Irbu, hit hard in his last three games, will join Triple-A Columbus later this week after stopping off for a few days to workout at the Yankees' training complex in Tampa, Fla.

The right-hander is next expected to start in Columbus on Friday night against Rochester.

"He's going to Columbus to get things ironed out in a less strenuous atmosphere," New York general manager Bob Watson said in a hastily arranged news conference at Yankee Stadium.

In his last start Saturday against Seattle, Irbu, whom the Yankees signed to a $12.8 million contract after lengthy negotiations, gave up six runs and four hits in only two innings of a 9-7 loss to the Mariners.

Irbu had trouble with his location from the first pitch, and threw just 41 before being booed as he left the mound with Seattle leading 6-0.

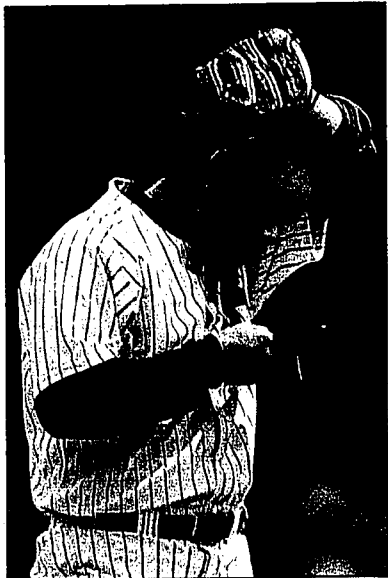

Following the game, Torre said he thought Irbu looked preoccupied and seemed to be distracted, possibly by the intense scrutiny placed on him by the media and Yankees fans.

"Torre's original plan was to have Irbu skip his next start and pitch out of the bullpen. But after the Yankees braintrust suggested a trip to the minors might help, Torre gave his OK."

Torre said he was involved in making the decision along with Yankees owner George Steinbrenner, Watson and pitching coordinator Billy Connors.

"It was just a matter of talking," Torre said. "The bullpen was one option for us, but when we started discussing what our options were, we decided that this would be best."

Irbu spoke through his interpreter for about five minutes before leaving the stadium Monday before the Yankees hosted the Oakland Athletics. He appeared calm and seemed to understand that the Yankees were demoting him for his own good.

Ex-New York Yankee starting pitcher Hideki Irbu displays some frustration after giving up a home run to Cleveland. Irbu is not headed to the bullpen after all. He's going to the minor leagues.

Barkley in court for bar fight

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Charles Barkley, sued for $500,000 over a bar fight, jumped past prosecutors to reportedly punch a man who was acting as a peacemaker during an argument about a woman, a lawyer said Monday in opening statements.

Earlier in the day, Barkley mumbled in expletive to the plaintiff, Job Tyler, before prospective jurors were led into the courtroom.

The scuffle happened last summer at The Basement nightclub when Barkley was in town with the U.S. Olympic basketball team. Barkley has told police he was the one who was attacked, and a defense lawyer said Olympic teammate Reggie Miller will testify that Tyler threw the first punch.

Relaxed as ever, Barkley patted his two lawyers' rear-ends when asked to stand as the judge entered the courtroom. The Boston Rockets forward had stopped earlier to sign autographs for some youngsters in the courthouse.

During jury selection, plaintiff lawyer Timothy Itak asked Rogers, "Does anyone have a problem with the plaintiff being from around Rochester, N.Y.?" Barkley, who is from Leeds, Ala., raised his hand.

Barkley would not discuss the case, but told reporters, "You tell everybody back in Houston I'm fine. Unfortunately, being famous, this is one of the drawbacks."

In a complaint announced Monday, the 24-year-old Tyler of Spencerport, N.Y., is seeking $500,000 in compensatory damages from Barkley and the bar, and $500,000 in punitive damages from Barkley. The jury can award any amount it sees fit.

Bank: Files found in shredder room may be linked to Holocaust victims

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — Switzerland's largest bank confirmed Monday documents discovered in its shredder room by a night watchman may have been related to property sold by Jews under the Nazis.

The Union Bank of Switzerland had previously maintained that the documents salvaged by the guard, Christoph Meili, were unrelated to dormant accounts of Holocaust victims.

But a statement Monday acknowledged the documents may have some relation to the victims. Jewish groups have criticized Swiss banks for not being forthright in revealing records of Jewish gold and assets that disappeared in Switzerland following the war.

Some of the shredder room documents were relevant to the research of an international panel of historians investigating Switzerland's dealings with the Nazis, the panel's secretary, Linus von Castelmur, told The Associated Press today. He declined to elaborate.

Union Bank said it had copies of documents relating to "the case of three properties, for the purchase of which a German bank in 1937 acted as intermediary and whose previous owners were possibly Jews."

Since Jews were under Nazi pressure to sell their property in Germany at prices well below market values, the mortgages for a 1937 sale of property, possibly by Jews, could well come under the scope of the commission's work. Documents related to the sale were in the shredder room.

Meili, who lost his job after turning the documents over to a Jewish organization in January, is under investigation for breaking Switzerland's banking secrecy rules, has fled to the United States with his wife and two children because he said he felt their lives were in danger. The U.S. Congress has moved to give them permanent residence status.

Union Bank admitted that its chief archivist shredded documents earlier this year, but it is not known how many or which documents were destroyed.

The bank also admitted the documents' destruction violated a law requiring preservation of any evidence that might relate to investigations into the World War II era.

TWIN FALLS — The week of golf that culminates with the annual Idaho Open tournament started Monday with events aimed at future pros.
The tournament itself, is the second-largest professional golf event in Idaho. Players will compete at both Jackpot and Twin Falls Municipal golf courses Wednesday through Friday.
But the sideline events draw even more people to the event, and to the game.
On Monday, more than 250 kids received free clubs, hats, golf gloves and lunch as part of a junior clinic.

The youngsters were also treated to trick shot artist Pat Atkins. Afterward, kids could try a couple of the tricks.
Trick-shot artist Pat Atkins entertained the youngsters, and the kids even tried their hands at some of the shots.
In the late afternoon, two four-man teams competed in a skins game for charity.
Playing for the Special Olympics was the team of two-time defending Idaho Open champion Eric Rustand, Cal Jensen, Lee Gilliland and Danny Marona.

Messier leaves Rangers for Canucks

The Associated Press

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — When Mark Messier raised his arms to celebrate signing with the Vancouver Canucks, the image brought back memories of the hoisting of the Stanley Cup.
Messier, the only player to captain two different teams to NHL championships, left the New York Rangers on Monday to return to his homeland and take a three-year contract reportedly worth up to $20 million.
"Hopefully I can come in here and help out in any way that I can to bring Canada, bring Vancouver, what they're really hoping for — the Stanley Cup," the 36-year-old center said. "I can't wait to get started."
He'll have his work cut out for him. The Canucks, who have never won the Stanley Cup since joining the NHL in 1970, missed the playoffs last season with a 35-40-7 record and had trouble filling their new arena, the GM Place.
To cheers and applause at a news conference at the arena, Messier donned a No. 11 Canucks jersey — the same number he wore with his two other NHL teams, the Oilers and the Rangers. He called the Canucks a "great fit" and raised his arms.
"When I see him raise his arms like he did, I can envisage a Stanley Cup (in them)," Canucks coach Tom Renney said.
Added general manager Pat Quinn: "(Messier) is not going to be the Messiah, but he is going to make a big difference."
Messier has hoisted the Cup six times,

Free agent center Mark Messier signed a three-year deal with the Vancouver Canucks in Vancouver Monday. The 36-year-old star center, one of the NHL's premier players, reportedly signed the contract worth up to $20 million. Messier donned a No. 11 Canucks jersey to cheers and applause at a news conference at GM Place, the Canucks' new arena.

five with Edmonton. One of the most memorable images in hockey in recent years was when he lifted the Cup after the Rangers' 1994 victory over Vancouver in seven games — a huge smile on his face as New York ended its 54-year championship drought.
The free-agent bidding war over one of the NHL's premier players had heated up in the past few days, with the Rangers, the Washington Capitals and

Detroit Red Wings also in the running.
The Daily News reported that the three-year Vancouver deal may have options for a fourth and fifth season, making the contract worth more than $20 million.
Messier was reportedly offered a two-year contract worth $10 million plus an option year to stay with the Rangers and teammate Wayne Gretzky.
"I very much wanted to keep him as a Ranger, keep him for the rest of his playing days," New York general manager Neil Smith said. "My intention all along was to try to keep Mark as a Ranger. There's no equivocation. ... I couldn't tell you how disappointed I am that Mark won't be on the team."

Smith said Messier never got back to the Rangers after the team increased its first offer. Messier had criticized the team's negotiating tactics.

Yankees demote Irabu for minor repairs

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Yankees couldn't wait for Hideki Irabu to get to New York. Now they want him to get out of town — for a while anyway.
With expectations falling short every time the Japanese pitcher takes the mound, the Yankees demoted Irabu to the minor leagues on Monday in hopes that he can regain his confidence.
"This is just trying to get him fixed so he can help us," New York manager Joe Torre said. "... the biggest part of this is that he can get away and then come back."
Irabu, hit hard in his last three games, will join Triple-A Columbus later this week after stopping off for a few days to workout at the Yankees' training complex in Tampa, Fla.
The right-hander is next expected to start in Columbus on Friday night against Rochester.
"He's going to Columbus to get things ironed out in a less strenuous atmosphere," New York general manager Bob Watson said in a hastily arranged news conference at Yankee Stadium.
In his last start Saturday against Seattle, Irabu, whom the Yankees signed to a $12.8 million contract after lengthy negotiations, gave up six runs and four hits in only two innings of a 9-7 loss to the Mariners.
Irabu had trouble with his location from the first pitch, and threw just 41 before being booted as he left the mound with Seattle leading 6-0.
Following the game, Torre said he thought Irabu looked preoccupied and seemed to be distracted, possibly by the intense scrutiny placed on him by the media and Yankees fans.
Torre's original plan was to have Irabu skip his next start and pitch out of the bullpen. But after the Yankees braintrust suggested a trip to the minors might help, Torre gave his OK.
Torre said he was involved in making the decision along with Yankees owner George Steinbrenner, Watson and pitching coordinator Billy Connor.
"It was just a matter of talking," Torre said. "The bullpen was one option for us, but when we started discussing what our options were, we decided that this would be best."

Ex-New York Yankees starting pitcher Hideki Irabu displays some frustration after giving up a home run to Cleveland. Irabu is not headed to the bullpen after all. He's going to the minor leagues.

Barkley in court for bar fight

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Charles Barkley, sued for $500,000 over a bar fight, jumped past bouncers to repeatedly punch a man who was acting as a peacemaker during an argument about a woman, a lawyer said Monday in opening statements.
Earlier in the day, Barkley mouthed an expletive to the plaintiff, Job Tyler, before prospective jurors were led into the courtroom.
The scuffle happened last summer at The Basement nightclub when Barkley was in town with the U.S. Olympic basketball team. Barkley's suit police had was the one who was attacked, and a defense lawyer said Olympic teammate Reggie Miller will testify that Tyler threw the first punch.
Retained as ever, Barkley padded his two lawyers' rear-ends when asked to stand as the judge entered the courtroom. The Houston Rockets forward had stopped earlier to sign autographs for some youngsters in the courthouse.

Barkley would not discuss the case, but told reporters, "You tell everybody back in Houston I'm fine. Unfortunately, being famous, this is one of the drawbacks."
In a complaint amended Monday, the 24-year-old Tyler of Spencerport, N.Y., is seeking $500,000 in compensatory damages from Barkley and the bar, and $500,000 in punitive damages from Barkley. The jury can award any amount it sees fit.

Rockers win 5th straight WNBA game

PHOENIX (AP) — Eva Nemcova scored 22 points and Jenna Braxton added 21 Monday night to lead Cleveland past the Phoenix Mercury 76-64, the Rockers' fifth straight WNBA victory.

Nemcova was 10-of-17 from the field, including 2-of-4 from 3-point range, while Braxton was 13-of-15 from the free throw line and grabbed 10 rebounds as Cleveland (8-8) controlled the boards. The Rockers, who jumped to a 22-5 lead, finished with a 35-25 rebound advantage.

Jennifer Gilom had 19 points to lead the Mercury (6-6), who still lead the Western Conference by 2 1/2 games despite having lost three straight games. Bridget Petis added 16 points, nine on 3-pointers, for Phoenix, which trailed 37-25 at halftime.

Umeki Webb of Phoenix had six steals.

Phoenix played without starting point guard Michele Timms, who was sidelined by a flu-like illness. The game was played before a crowd of 11,012 at America West Arena.

Angels sweep Indians on the road

CLEVELAND (AP) — Dennis Springer scattered eight hits to outfield Bartolo Colon and pitch the Anaheim Angels to a 2-0 victory over the Cleveland Indians in the first game of a day-night doubleheader Monday.

Springer (6-4), who pitched his fourth career complete game and second shutout, did not allow an extra-base hit, struck out two and walked two. The Angels, who had blown two consecutive two-run leads in the ninth inning against Boston, won for the 15th time in 20 games.

Colon (2-5) allowed nine hits, struck out six and walked one in his first major league complete game.

The Angels took a 1-0 lead in the second when Garrett Anderson singled, stole second, advanced to third on Jim Leavelle's groundout and scored on Jack Howell's RBI single.

Angels 10, Indians 7, game 2
CLEVELAND — The Angels got a grand slam from Garret Anderson to hand the Indians their second doubleheader sweep at Jacobs Field.

Anderson hit a mammoth grand slam off Orel Hershiser in the fourth. Todd Greene broke a 5-6 tie with a solo homer in the sixth.

The Angels, who have won 16 of 21 and have 29 comeback victories, added to the Indians their seventh off David Weathers (1-2).

Brewers 1, Blue Jays 0, game 1
MILWAUKEE — Steve Woodard pitched eight innings of one-run ball in his major league debut to lead the Brewers over Roger Clemens and Toronto in the first game of a two-night doubleheader.

Woodard, a 22-year-old right-hander, gave up a double to Ovis Nixon, the first batter he faced, and a walk to Alex Gonzalez in the third.

Brewers 9, Blue Jays 3, game 2
MILWAUKEE — The Brewers turned their first triple play in 18 years and Matt Milne homered to complete a sweep of a two-night doubleheader.

The first two batters in the fourth inning singled off Joel Adamson (3-1) before Alex Gonzalez hit the next pinch down the line to third baseman Jeff Cirillo, who stepped on third and threw to second baseman Mark Loreto for the first out. Loreto then fired to first to get Gonzalez by a step.

Royals 10, Twins 3, game 1
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The Kansas City Royals scored seven first-inning runs and collected a season-high 17 hits in the first game of a two-night doubleheader.

Big Roberts had a single and double in the first inning and went 3-for-5 with two RBIs. Johnny Damon had a single, triple and two RBIs.

Royals 5, Twins 2, game 2
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Johnny Damon and Joe Vitello homered and three pitchers combined on a three-hitter as the Kansas City Royals swept a doubleheader from the Minnesota Twins with a 5-2 victory in Monday's second game.

The last time the Royals swept a doubleheader was May 1, 1994 against Milwaukee.

Orioles 7, Rangers 2
BALTIMORE — Mike Mussina pitched seven strong innings and Rafael Palmeiro snapped a sixth-inning tie with a three-run homer for Baltimore.

Roberto Alomar went 4-for-5 with a two-run homer to help Baltimore to its sixth win in seven games. The four hits tied a career high, accomplished 19 times previously, including last week in Texas.

Yankees 4, Athletics 3
NEW YORK — Mark Whiten snapped an 0-for-16 slump with an RBI single in the ninth inning to snap the Yankees' three-game losing streak.

Ernie Young hit a two-run homer for the A's, who took a 3-1 lead into the seventh.

Charlie Hayes homered for the Yankees, who remained 5 1/2 games behind first-place Baltimore in the AL East.

Atlanta Braves pitcher Denny Neagle throws to the plate during the first inning, against the Chicago Cubs in Atlanta Monday.

Astros fall short of tying winning streak

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros fell one victory short of tying the longest winning streak in team history, losing 2-1 to the St. Louis Cardinals on Monday night to snap their nine-game victory string.

The Astros, comfortably in front in the NL Central, were unable to tie the team record of 10 straight victories accomplished five times, most recently May 26-June 4, 1989.

Todd Stottlemyre (10-7) and Dennis Eckersley combined on a six-hitter for the Cardinals, and Stottlemyre drove in the eventual winning double that raised his batting average to .279.

Chris Holt (7-7) pitched well for the Astros but got the loss, allowing six hits, one earned run and striking out three in eight innings.

Reds 4, Marlins 0
MIAMI — Joe Oliver's three-run homer broke a scoreless tie in the ninth inning and John Smiley combined with two relievers on a shutout to lead Cincinnati past Florida.

The Marlins lost their third in a row and fell into third place in the NL East. They are 8-9 since the All-Star break.

Reggie Sanders led off the ninth with Cincinnati's third hit, a double against Jay Powell (1-2), and took third on a groundout. Willie Greene was intentionally walked and Oliver followed with his ninth home run.

Mike Kelly followed with a scoreless ninth.

Smiley and Al Leiter duelled for 7 1/2 innings and departed for pinch hitters with the game scoreless. Stan Belinda (1-2) pitched one scoreless inning and Jeff Shaw followed with a scoreless ninth.

Braves 6, Cubs 0
ATLANTA — Denny Neagle pitched a three-hitter and Fred McGriff hit a three-run homer as Atlanta routed Chicago and sent the Cubs to their fifth consecutive loss.

Neagle (14-2) limited Chicago to three singles in testing his third shutout of the season, tied for second in the NL behind Houston's Darryl Kile. The Atlanta left-hander allowed only one runner to second base and struck out six with no walks.

Chicago starter Kevin Tapani (1-1) wasn't able to duplicate his first start of the season, a brilliant five-hit, one-run performance against the Braves last Wednesday after 3 1/2 months on the disabled list. He lasted only five innings, giving up seven hits and all six runs.

Graf's father reports to prison.

STUTTGART, Germany (AP) — Steffi Graf's father reported to a prison hospital Monday to treat his alcoholism and begin serving a sentence for tax evasion.

Peter Graf was convicted in January and sentenced to three years and nine months. He was ordered to report to the high security Stammheim prison by Monday afternoon.

But the tennis star's 59-year-old father used a provision of the penal code in the southern Baden-Wuerttemberg state that allowed him to report to any of the 20 penal institutions in the state. He chose a prison hospital outside Stuttgart.

Justice officials said he would be transferred to Stammheim in the next few days, but he could be sent elsewhere to serve his sentence.

Counting the 15 months Graf spent in investigative custody, plus normal reductions, the earliest he could be released is February.

Korda upset at du Maurier

MONTREAL (AP) — Petr Korda, the ninth seed, was upset Monday by Justin Gimelstob in the first round of the $2.3 million du Maurier Canadian Open tennis championship.

Gimelstob, ranked No. 100 in the world, defeated Korda 6-4, 6-4 at the Jarry Tennis Stadium before rain delayed play.

Gimelstob, from Key Biscayne, Fla., rallied from 3-0 and 4-1 deficits in the first set to beat Korda, the world's No. 16 player.

"I started off with a lot of errors," Gimelstob said. "You just have to be tough and hang in there. I started attacking his serve and started being more aggressive. It was effective. He started making errors and started to get a little dejected."

Qualifying matches on Sunday were delayed six hours by rain and skies threatened throughout the Gimelstob-Korda match.

"It was a tough match," Gimelstob said. "We didn't know if it was going to rain, it was windy and Petr's a very tricky player. It was a good match for me to get through. It was a good learning experience."

Winds whip field at Blackwolf Run

KOHLER, Wis. (AP) — With stiff winds and even stiffer competition, all four matches at the international leg of the Anderson Consulting World Championship of Golf came down to the 18th hole on Monday.

"It was a tough day today," Nick Price said. "And I think you could see nobody was going to get a long way ahead unless they took a lot of chances."

Playing safe with swirling winds and sharp slopes, Price beat Vijay Singh 1-up, Ernie Els bested Frank Nobilo 1-up and Steve Elkington defeated Mark McNulty 1-up over his competitors all bogeyed the 469-yard par-5 18th.

Greg Norman, who won the Anderson Consulting world title last year, beat Robert Allenby 2-up when Allenby also bogeyed the final hole in the match-play tourney at the River Course at Blackwolf Run.

Els is ranked second in the world, Norman third, Price fifth and Elkington seventh.

But the field, by far the strongest of the four regionals leading to the Anderson world finals in January, was confounded by the slope of the greens and tricky winds that whipped through the Sheboygan River valley.

"The wind gets in the valley here and it swirls. It's just very hard to tell what's going to do to the ball. It's almost guess-work," Price said.

"I did not feel comfortable today at all," Norman said. "I haven't played a practice round here and the wind and rain coming from a different direction than all the other rounds I've played at Blackwolf Run."

"So, I really couldn't get a feel for the shots and the golf course today. If he winds blow the same way tomorrow, I'll have a better understanding," added Norman, who defeated American Scott Hoch in the Anderson Consulting world finals in January.

"Pretty tough conditions I thought and this course is difficult anyway," agreed Elkington, who faces Norman on Tuesday on the Pete Dye-designed course which will be host to next year's U.S. Women's Open.

"I thought the greens were perfect. I don't know how fast they were rolling because I never had a flat putt," Elkington cracked.

Els faces Price in the other semifinal and the winners tie off in the afternoon for a $200,000 paycheck and the right to face European champion Colin Montgomerie in the four-man world finals at Scottsdale, Ariz., on Jan. 3-4, 1998.

This is the last finals matchup to be determined. Hajime Meshini won the Japanese leg and will face Davis Love III, who won the U.S. regional, in the other world semifinal.

Els trailed his close friend and neighbor by two holes after nine holes but made a long putt on No. 10 to cut to Par's lead in half.

"It was about a 40-foot putt at least," Els said. "I was just trying to get it close and the ball went in the hole. I was one down then and I felt a little better."

"When you're two down, it's a bit of a struggle. When you're one down, you're always in the match," added Els, who pulled even with a birdie on No. 16.

Water or the river gorge come into play on 14 of the 18 holes, a hazard that exacerbated when the winds whip up as they did Monday.

"Today wasn't a day that you were going to see a lot of good scoring because the conditions were really difficult," Price said. Club selection was hard and a lot of these holes you have severe penalties if you miss the green on the wrong side.

Australia's Greg Norman hits a chip shot on the eighth hole in Kohler, Wis., during the first round of the International Regional Championship of the Anderson Tournament Monday. Norman lost the hole to Robert Allenby.

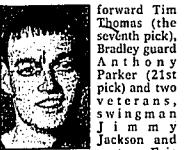

Nets sign Van Horn to several-year deal

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The New Jersey Nets signed former University of Utah forward Keith Van Horn, the second overall pick in the June draft, to a three-year deal Monday. The financial terms were not disclosed.

"We are very pleased to sign Keith to a multiyear deal," Nets coach John Calipatti said. "He is a superb outside shooter and free throw shooter, and is an excellent athlete. Keith's signing is another important step forward in our effort to put a championship-caliber team on the floor."

The draft's overall No. 1 pick, center-forward Tim Duncan of Wake Forest, signed with the San Antonio Spurs last week.

The Nets got the rights to the 6-foot-10 All-American from Utah in a seven-player draft-day trade with the Philadelphia 76ers that also brought veteran guard James McLean to New Jersey.

Keith Van Horn

forward Tim Thomas (the seventh pick), Bradley Guard, James McLean (21st pick) and two veterans, swingman Jamir Johnson and center Eric Montross.

The Nets gave up salary cap room and the ability to sign free agents in order to get Van Horn.

Van Horn averaged 22 points in his senior year at Utah and shot 90 percent from the free throw line, second-best in the nation.

Holmes fights Harris, hopes for Foreman

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry Holmes wants to fight George Foreman, but he probably will have to settle for the Maurice Harris of the boxing world until he finally retires for good.

"I'm getting too old, I can't afford to lose," said Holmes, a 47-year-old grandfather who fights Harris on Tuesday night at the Theater in Madison Square Garden. "Give me a chance to pick up a couple of million dollars."

Holmes will make $225,000 for taking on an opponent less than half his age on a show to be televised by USA.

"I don't know too much about him," Holmes said Monday.

The 22-year-old from East Orange, N.J., has a 9-8-2 record, with five knockouts.

As to why he picked Harris, Holmes joked. "Because he has a 50-50 record." Close enough.

Holmes, who will be 48 on Nov. 3, has fallen in three bouts to become a champion again, losing to Michael Spinks (IBF) in a rematch 1985, to Mike Tyson (undisputed) in 1988, to Evander Holyfield (undisputed) in 1992 and to Oliver McCall (WBC) in 1995.

He doesn't expect to challenge WBA champion Michael Moorer or WBC champion Lennox Lewis.

"Those guys don't want to risk anything against an old man," Holmes said. "I'm not looking for a dream."

A dream, however, is what a fight against Foreman appears to be for Holmes. Foreman has said he would fight Holmes if the money is right.

"I don't know why he wouldn't fight me," Holmes said. "All he could do is lose a fight."

"I don't like a Foreman-Holmes fight," said Lou DiBella, vice president of Sports Time Warner, which presents fights on HBO and TVKO. "What does it prove?"

Hall of Famers worry about football's future

The Associated Press

When a Don Shula expresses concern over the future of football, people listen. Same for Wellington Mara, who along with Shula served on the prestigious competition committee through much of the NFL's growth spurt. All four of last weekend's inductees into the Pro Football Hall of Fame said they worry about where the game is headed.

and then the owners also can make some money in the game," he said.

Impatience has become the biggest enemy of many coaches, whose owners would rather make a change than wait for a team to develop.

"There were 11 coaching changes. If that continues to happen, there is no way anyone will hang around the way I did," Shula said. "If you win early and build a reputation as a winner, you have a chance to stick around — unless you have one losing season."

—Don Shula, NFL's winningest coach

"I just hope there is some sanity in the coaches' and players' salaries without gouging fans, and then the owners also can make some money in the game."

—Don Shula, NFL's winningest coach

"I'd like to see it slow down," Shula said of the exorbitant salaries for top stars and free agents. "With free agency, it took a few years to see what was going on. I hope there is not as much player movement and teams can keep players and fans can identify with them."

"You've got to coach in a hurry now and get new people ready to compete in a hurry when they are coming in."

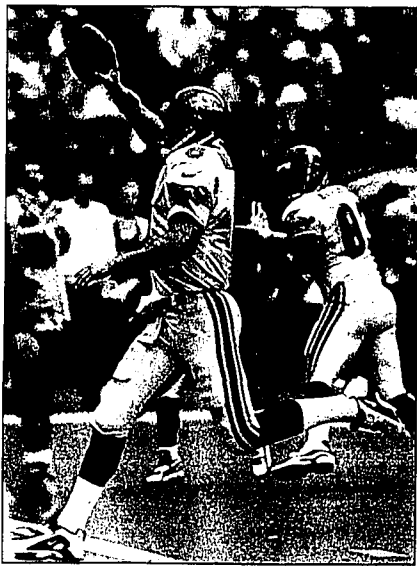

Shula, pro football's winningest coach, even wondered about the sudden explosion in salaries for coaches, particularly in the NBA, where a Rick Pitino or Phil Jackson is worth some $6 million a year.

"I just hope there is some sanity in the coaches' and players' salaries without gouging fans,

Mara, owner of the New York Giants and a key figure in the league's growth from its roots, criticized certain current owners — without naming any — for their selfishness. Mara has been a critic of Cowboys owner Jerry Jones.

After praising the role of his brother Jack, Rams owner Dan Reeves, Bears owner-coach George Halas and then commissioner Pete Rozelle for developing a revenue-sharing plan that has been the backbone of the league's success, Mara turned on those current owners who he contends are as concerned about the game's overall health.

Brunell's boon: Money, expectations

Jacksonville Jaguars quarterback Mark Brunell scores against the Bengalts in his first full year as a starter, led the Jaguars to the AFC championship game in his first full year as a starter, signed a new contract Monday that makes him one of the NFL's highest paid players.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The numbers suggest Mark Brunell is a young quarterback with still plenty to prove — 26 years old, a 12-14 record as a starter and 6,530 career passing yards.

The new contract he signed with the Jacksonville Jaguars suggests otherwise.

Brunell, who took the Jaguars to the AFC championship game in his first full season as a starter, signed a five-year contract that makes him one of the highest-paid players in the game.

"There is some increased pressure with a contract like this," Brunell said Monday. "I'm ready to face that." The new contract is for $30.5 million and includes a $10 million signing bonus. Brunell signed Sunday night, just three days after Brett Favre signed a seven-year contract worth $42 million with Green Bay.

Favre was named the league's Most Valuable Player last year after leading the Packers to victory in the Super Bowl.

"I don't think Brett signing had anything to do with it," Brunell said. "I don't compare myself to other quarterbacks. I don't say, 'Well, I'm making this and I should be making this.' If you play long enough, those things take care of themselves."

Brunell, whom Green Bay drafted in the fifth round out of Washington in 1993, hasn't played all that long.

After two years as a backup to Favre in Green Bay, he was traded to the Jaguars on the eve of their first draft and spent his first year battling Steve Buerlein for the starting job during a 4-12 season.

But Brunell blossomed into one of the more dangerous quarterbacks in the league last year, becoming the first player since Johnny Unitas in 1963 to lead the NFL in passing yards and rushing yards among quarterbacks.

Along with his durability — he was the only quarterback to take every snap last year — Brunell led the Jaguars to four fourth-quarter comebacks.

They won their last five games to get into the playoffs, then beat Buffalo and Denver on the road before losing 20-6 at New England in the AFC title game.

Brunell had six 300-yard passing games and two 400-yard games, giving him a league-high 4,367 yards and 19 touchdowns passes. He finished the season being honored as the most valuable player of the Pro Bowl.

"I came a long way," Brunell said. "I got a chance to play in some big games and win some big games, all the while knowing I still have improvement to go. I'll continue developing. I feel very strongly that I need to grow and I will grow."

Brunell had been in the final season of a three-year contract that would have paid him $1.2 million this year.

"Mark Brunell is an integral part of our football team," coach Tom Coughlin said. "It is critical to acquire and keep the best players, and that's what we have done."

Gernmayr's Tour de France winner Jan Ullrich presents his yellow shirt to the crowd of 20,000 fans in Bonn, Germany, Monday during a reception for the Telekom cycling team at the city hall. He is the first German to win the Tour.

Reviews are in on Ullrich; Jan's the man

PARIS (AP) — Less than a day after Jan Ullrich won his first Tour de France, he was picked to win another — and another and another.

Given his strength and the ease with which he captured the title in only his second Tour — he was second in his debut last year — many insist he will keep right on winning into the next century.

"Nobody can really say that Ullrich will win two, three, five or even more Tours de France," said L'Equipe, the French sports daily. "But the only thing to note is that in the year 2001 he will be just 27, the same age the Miguel Indurain won the first of his five."

Of the four five-time winners of the Tour, only the late Jacques Anquetin was younger than Ullrich, 23-year-old German the first time any of them won the Tour.

The Italian sports daily Gazzetta dello Sport compared Ullrich to Belgian great Eddy Merckx. They both won the amateur world championship at 19 — Merckx in 1965 and Ullrich in 1993. Merckx then won what was the first of his five Tours de France in 1969 at age 24.

Germany was delighted with its new hero. More than 20,000 fans packed Bonn's Market Square to greet Ullrich and his team on their return home.

Ullrich was in the German capital for a reception. The night before he and his Telekom team had a private dinner at a luxury hotel in Paris to celebrate.

The team can afford it. It earned more than $500,000 for the overall win by Ullrich, stage wins and high placings.

ACC, ESPN reach agreement through 2005
ASHEVILLE, N.C. — The Atlantic Coast Conference has given ESPN exclusive rights to televise 100 college football games from 1998 to 2005.

The confederation also extended its national broadcast network agreement with ABC Sports for the same period of time. The agreement with ESPN includes 10 games per season from 1998-2000, 14 games per season from 2001 to 2005, out-of-market rights for ESPN's new network plan to ABC telecasts and at least 20 games reserved for ESPN's Thursday night Game of the Week series during the span.

Buffalo defensive end Bruce Smith was arrested and charged with driving under the influence after police in Virginia Beach, Va., said they found him sleeping at the wheel with his car running.

Smith, the Defensive Player of the Year last season, has been holding out of training camp in a contract dispute. He has been fined $85,000 by Buffalo so far, $5,000 for every day he misses practice.

Smith, also was charged with refusing to take a breath test, was slumped behind the wheel at an intersection at 6:21 a.m. Sunday, Virginia Beach police spokesman Mike Carey said.

Jets

William Roberts, a guard who played for coach Bill Parcells with the New York Giants and New England Patriots, signed a one-year deal worth an estimated $300,000. He is expected to fill the void created when incumbent starter Harry Galbreath suddenly retired after nine seasons.

"In all honesty didn't want to go back to the future," Parcells said. "But I had to get somebody to hold the fort here right now and I know he can do it. This guy started for a championship team last year."

Rams

St. Louis defensive end James E. Harris has been indicted on charges of being the "money man" behind a conspiracy to distribute cocaine.

Harris, 29, was named in a suppressed indictment released in East St. Louis, Ill. Officials said Harris appeared in federal court in Peoria, where he was released on bond pending a hearing Aug. 8 before a federal judge.

The formal charge against Harris is "aiding and abetting a conspiracy to distribute and possession with the intent to distribute cocaine and crack cocaine." The Rams said they knew only that Harris had left their training camp in Macomb on Monday morning.

Redskins

Washington signed defensive end Kendall Lang, the No. 17 overall selection from Miami, to a five-year, $5.78 million contract. The deal includes a $2.5 million signing bonus with a $435,000 salary for 1997.

"We need him to play well and play well early, there's no question. That's why we drafted him," coach Norv Turner said. "If he can get to where he can handle it, yeah, he's got enough time to be

Kansas City released defensive tackle Dan Saleaumua because of salary cap considerations after he refused to take a pay cut. Saleaumua, 32, was scheduled to make $1.7 million this season.

"We tried to exhaust all possible ways to keep him," Chiefs coach Mary Schottenheimer said. "It became very evident that it was not going to become possible. The bottom line was he would not take a cut. That was it."

Fire safety problems cause church school to fall below safety standards

School reps request temporary permit

By Mark Heinz
Times-News writer

JEROME - A school for Mennonite children in the basement of a Hazelton house falls below safety standards, Jerome County officials say.

But church representatives asked the county commissioners for a break Monday, saying they plan to use the basement only until the church can buy property and build a schoolhouse in the county's east end.

Fire safety is the biggest problem with the basement school, Jerome County Building Inspector Dennis Brittain told the commissioners. There is no direct escape route from the basement for the 18 children enrolled in the school, and the county could be held liable if anyone was hurt or killed in a fire there, Brittain said.

"It's basically a trap," he said. Building and fire codes also require schools to be equipped with an emergency sprinkler system.

But Wade Harms, who owns the house near Hazelton, questions whether the church's operation in his basement should be held to the same standards as public schools.

The school is a cooperative effort between six church families, and accepts no students from outside the church community, he said.

Brittain's concern over an escape route is unfounded, Harms said. Children have only to go up a short flight of stairs to reach a door to the outside.

The basement school may fall into regulatory gray area, Jerome County Planning and Zoning Administrator Art Brown said. The county's zoning ordinance says nothing about private schools. All schools - except single-family home schooling operations - are held to the same standards, he said.

The school in Harms' basement doesn't qualify as home schooling because more than one family is involved, and the group has elected a school board, Brown said.

Brittain said the codes hold all schools to strict safety standards.

"The code doesn't care if it's a public or private school."

Harms said the children were taught in two temporary classrooms in his basement during the past academic year. The church doesn't want to stay in the basement school any longer than one more academic year, from September until late May, he said.

Each classroom has a smoke detector, and the children pack their own lunches. So there is no cooking in the basement, he said.

More Mennonite families with schooled children are moving into the county's east end, and the basement won't be big enough after next year, Harms said.

The county commission decided to look into granting the school a temporary special use permit.

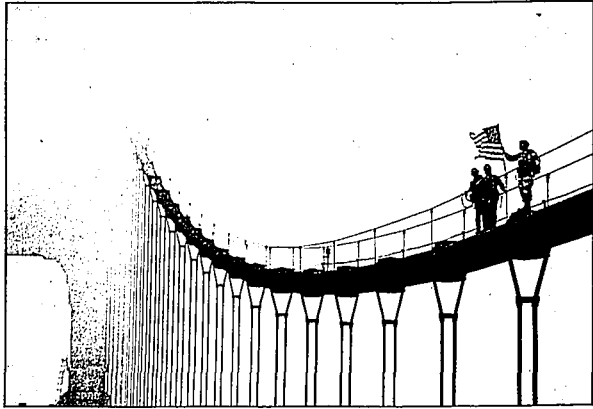

But the church also would need clearance from the fire department and the local fire commission.

The Paul-based West End Fire Department, which covers eastern Jerome County, wants improvement in the basement school, including steel fire doors and emergency exit signs - to comply with fire safety code.

But Harms said such improvements would be too costly and impractical if the church plans to move the school out of its basement as soon as possible.

Times-News staff writer Mark Heinz can be reached in Jerome at 324-6922.

Lois M. Smith

Lois M. Smith, 75, of Twin Falls, died Sunday, July 27, 1997, at the Twin Falls Clinic & Hospital.

Lois was born Sept. 2, 1921, in Colorado City, Texas, to Jerry and Lullor L. Buckwalter Moyers. On Oct. 6, 1940, she married Carl Smith in Lamesa, Texas. They moved to Idaho in November 1956 where they homesteaded a farm in the Kasota area. They continued farming in that area for 24 years, retiring in 1980. She had resided in that area until moving to BridgeView Estates only a few weeks ago.

GOODING

Ronald Dean Fager

He was born the 6th of January, 1919, in Long Beach, Calif., to Donald Fager and Bonnie Najdl. He grew up in Gooding and Jerome where he met his wife, Cynthia. Ron graduated from Jerome High School and Idaho State University. He and Cynthia were married June 14, 1962.

Ron is the owner/operator of C&R Sanitation in a business he founded 20 years ago. He had been an influence in our community for many years. He was a Paul Hansen Fellow with Rotaract International and has actively participated in the community and the church. Ron has been a wonderful husband, father, friend, and leader and he will be missed by all those he has touched.

He is survived by his wife; his daughter, Chivita Stephenson (David); his son, Bryan Fager; his mother, Bonnie; and his sister, Lolla Crockett. He was preceded in death by his father, Donald Fager in 1945.

A memorial service will be held at 3 p.m. Wednesday, July 30, 1997, at the Gooding United Methodist Church. Everyone is welcome. Arrangements are under the direction of Demaray's Gooding Chapel.

George Manning Koyle

George Manning Koyle, 69-year-old Rupert resident, passed away Sunday, July 27, 1997, at his home of an extended illness. He was surrounded by his family members.

George was born Feb. 23, 1928, the son of Ross Fielding and Emma Fay Jolley Koyle. He was born at home south of Burley, in the Willow Creek, Hazel District. He attended schools in Willow Creek and graduated from Burley High School. He served as ward clerk for the LDS Church to the Southern States Mission. George served in the Korean War. He married Dorothy Louise Campbell on Feb. 23, 1955, in the Idaho Falls LDS Temple. They were divorced in June of 1993. He later married Charlene Peterson for the LDS Church. She was later solemnized in the Logan, Utah, LDS Temple.

George was a very hard worker, sometimes working at two jobs. He loved to do yard work and plant a garden. One of his greatest joys was going on family outings and attending family functions. He served as ward clerk for many years and also held various other positions in the church. He was a high priest at the time of his death.

He is survived by his wife; his daughter, Chivita Stephenson (David); his son, Bryan Fager; his mother, Bonnie; and his sister, Lolla Crockett. He was preceded in death by his father, Donald Fager in 1945.

A memorial service will be held at 3 p.m. Wednesday, July 30, 1997, at the Gooding United Methodist Church. Everyone is welcome. Arrangements are under the direction of Demaray's Gooding Chapel.

Train, pickup collide

WENATCHEE, Wash. (AP) - An Amtrak passenger train collided with a pickup truck in a rail-road crossing Monday, killing a teen-ager and her 6-month-old son.

Monica Ortiz-Navarro, 16, and the baby, Antonio, were thrown from the rear of the pickup, which was covered by a canopy. The train was traveling 65 mph when it collided with the truck, striking the driver's side in front of the cab and hurling the vehicle 50 feet, Chelan County Sheriff Dan Breda said.

The teen-age victim's father, mother and brother were injured in the collision, which occurred shortly before 5 a.m.

The victims were apparently on their way to work when the collision occurred.

Hood sentenced to 2 life terms

By Karen E. Nalczek
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Before his official sentencing, confessed killer Corey James Hood heard the statements of the mother of one of his victims and apologized for his crimes.

Exactly one month before his 23rd birthday, Hood was sentenced to two concurrent life sentences for the slayings of 17-year-old Wendy Hunter and his 75-year-old grandmother, Mae Hood.

He will spend a minimum of 33 years in prison before he is eligible for parole.

At the 5th District Judge William Hart announced the sentence, Hood sat emotionless as Hunter's mother, Beverly, took the stand to give a statement on behalf of her daughter, who's body was found on May 17, 1996.

"I chose to make this statement to you, Judge, and to you, Corey, because with the death of our daughter, a part of our lives has been taken away from us," said Beverly Hunter, with tears streaming down her cheeks. "I know what he gets is already set, but I want you to know what it's done to this family. I couldn't live with myself if I didn't say that he should never be allowed to walk the streets again."

The terms of Hood's sentence were set five months ago.

The sentence was set after he pleaded a plea agreement on Feb. 24, pleading guilty to first-degree murder of Wendy Hunter and manslaughter for the death of Hunter. That agreement, however, was thrown out.

Magistrate Judge Roy C. Holloway, citing a lack of evidence, threw out an accessory charge in the Mae Hood slaying against Shannah Reeves, Corey Hood's cousin. Charges against Reeves, Matthew Mines and Brian Mack in the Hunter slaying also were dismissed.

When asked by Hart if he wanted to make a statement, Hood had very little to say. "I want to apologize to the families and this court for what I did," Hood said. "I know there's nothing I can do or say to make up for what I've done."

Hood in 1996 agreed to plead guilty to one count of voluntary development, including community housing, communications center and street department.

At 10 a.m. today, the council will hold a site visit at Thunder Spring, 124 Saddle Road.

The 1997-98 park, bond funds and police trust fund budgets will be discussed at 4 p.m. Wednesday at City Hall.

Discussion of the repaving issue on city streets next at Atkinson Park will be held at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday at Atkinson Park tennis courts.

VALLEY IN BRIEF

Man dies in Friday night auto accident

RUPERT — A man died Friday night when he was thrown from a 1986 Pontiac into a concrete lateral on Idaho Highway 24, a spokesperson for the Minidoka County sheriff's office said Monday.

The sheriff's office refused to release the name of the victim. An employee at Hansen Mortuary Monday identified the victim as Mario Vargas.

The victim's hometown was not available Monday.

The sheriff's office said Juan Manuel Tellez Vargas was driving the car on Highway 24, about two miles east of Rupert, when he ran off the road and struck a guard rail.

The car then bounced from the rail, hit a telephone pole guard wire and rolled, throwing Juan Vargas from the vehicle into a grain field, a sheriff's spokesperson said.

After throwing Juan Vargas, the car rolled two more times and threw Mario Vargas into the concrete ditch. A sheriff's spokesperson said both men were taken to Minidoka Memorial Hospital, and said the victim in the accident was dead on arrival at the hospital.

District can use armory for alternative school

By Jennifer Taylor
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Minidoka County commissioners Monday gave school officials the go-ahead to continue using an old National Guard armory for their alternative junior high school.

The Minidoka County School District has used the building since January, and the armory still needs repairs. But for now, the county gave the district permission to use the armory this school year.

A group including state safety inspector Tony Ray walked through the armory July 17 listing short- and long-term repairs needed in order to house students.

Operations Administrator Lou Roberts said the short-term repairs will cost about $4,500 and can be made in a short period of time. The long-term repairs, including updating the boiler room, will cost about $40,000.

"The main thing is to keep it up to code enough to get the students in," Roberts said. Since the Idaho National Guard has no need for the armory, it will be given to the county. The district hopes for a long-term agreement for the alternative school.

The fair board and 4H also are interested in using the armory space, commissioners said, and the district isn't opposed to sharing space.

The alternative school has about 18 students, and extra space would allow room for the program to grow. School Board chairman Norma Claridge said.

"We feel we need to keep these kids in school," she said. But a decision can't be made until the county receives paperwork releasing ownership of the armory.

County Building Inspector Paul Aston said the district should make only necessary repairs until a commitment is made for long-term use.

"It would be a plus for us to use it," Claridge said. "If we can update it for a reasonable cost."

Moscow cracks down on overgrown yards

MOSCOW (AP) — The wet winter and spring has lawns growing like weeds in Moscow, and city officials are cracking down on residents who let their yards get out of hand.

"It's not fair to people who spray and maintain their yards to live next door to someone that just lets their weeds go," animal control officer Jim Costlow said.

Police Chief Dan Weaver said the department is getting more weed complaints than ever before. And instead of the three or four citations a year issued in the past, the city is now notifying three or four residents a week that they could face a $300 fine if they do not get their yards back in shape in five days.

"We don't generally go out on an active weed control," Weaver said. "We've just been responding to more complaints."

The city has the authority to hire a private contractor to clean up yards and bill the owners who refuse to do it themselves. In one recent case, the charge was $420.

"We haven't had to fine anyone yet this year," Costlow said.

Storms pelt Las Vegas

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Windshield wipers weren't much help early Monday as a thunder storm bringing hail, lightning and strong winds moved through the Las Vegas Valley, stranding cars at flooded intersections and causing havoc on city streets.

"It's a reminder that we're definitely in the heart of our monsoon season," said Ron McQueen, a forecaster for the National Weather Service.

Heavy rain pelted the valley on and off Monday morning until the afternoon, when a hint of sunshine began to show.

"It was that disturbance that rotated in out of the West coast. That's what caused all the activity," McQueen said.

About eight to 10 cars were stranded when the Sahara Avenue and Charleston Boulevard intersection flooded with 2 feet of water. City and county fire officials had responded to 116 car wrecks by mid-afternoon. On a typical day, wrecks might number 87, said Bob Leinbach, spokesman for the Clark County Fire Department.

No serious injuries were reported. A construction worker was struck by lightning while working on Project Paradise, a new hotel-casino. The man was in good condition at a local hospital.

About 4,100 people were without power Monday when high winds caused trees to topple into power lines and lightning hit some areas, said Tom Henley, spokesman for Nevada Power Company.

Only about 50 people were still without power Monday afternoon, he said.

A severe thunderstorm and flash flood warning was issued Monday afternoon for eastern Clark County and north central Mohave County. Winds up to 60 mph were reported in a residential area near Lake Mead, where shingles were blown off roofs in the area.

F&G closes salmon season

BOISE (AP) — Fish and Game Director Stephen McNealy has shut down the salmon fishing season on the South Fork Salmon River after the mortality for wild chinook salmon was reached.

The closure came on Monday after fishermen took 43 hatchery salmon in the first sport season on the river in a generation.

Biologists believe the number of wild salmon is increasing in the South Fork as the spawning season nears. The wild fish should begin building their redds in two to three weeks.

About 300 students from across Idaho attend Boys State each year, Gardner said. They engage in rigorous civics lessons for one week, and fit in time to campaign. Deuel won the lieutenant governor's seat, and Twin Falls classmate Gasey Swenson won the governorship.

Other notable figures who have attended Boys State include Vice President Al Gore and former Idaho senator Frank Church, Gardner said.

At Boys State, Deuel was elected secretary of his mock party, the Federalists. He ran for president but didn't win.

"President Clinton did not get president or vice president, so the rest of us didn't feel so bad that we didn't make it," Deuel said.

Naturally, parents Jeanne and Harlen Hartman of Twin Falls are proud.

"To think that Christopher could accomplish that just blows me away," Jeanne Hartman said.

The summer's experiences have taught Deuel to reach "beyond what is possible."

Another lesson: Sometimes politicians don't represent the people who elected them, he said. He wants a career in public service, possibly to attain the presidency.

Air Force Brig. Gen. Donald Streater holds a part of the bomb release mechanism that was recovered from the crash site of the A-10 warplane as he talks about the recovery operation during a briefing in Eagle, Colo., Monday.

Warplane debris provides few clues for AF

EAGLE, Colo. (AP) — Crews searching a remote mountain for debris from an Air Force jet crash have failed to find conclusive evidence that the A-10 warplane's four 500-pound bombs were still aboard before impact, Air Force officials said Monday.

"I can't tell you with 100 percent certainty that the bombs are on that mountain until we have them in our hands," said Brig. Gen. Don Streater, who is leading the cleanup southwest of Vail. "I would like to have found all the bombs and munitions on the very first day. It is a very large area we're dealing with and formidable terrain, so we're working this patiently and deliberately."

It has been nearly four months since the mysterious crash of the A-10 Thunderbolt II, which slammed into the rocks and snow below 13,000-foot Gold Dust Peak after Capt. Craig Button veered 800 miles off course on April 2. Button had been on a training mission out of Davis-Monthan Air Force Base in Tucson, Ariz.

Searchers have recovered remains of Button as well as wreckage from his plane.

Air Force recovery teams working with an environmental cleanup company found five bomb-rack breaches with four cartridges still intact, Streater said. The MK-82 bombs are still missing.

The four cartridges power the ejector pistons on the bomb racks. They were able to determine that three of the four cartridges were fired, but can't tell when," he said. "The fact that these were fired is inconclusive in itself. They could have fired prior to impact, upon impact, after impact, and they could have fired during a severe spring storm. We just don't know."

Streater said recovery crews have found 26 flares and 176 rounds of 30mm ammunition. About 300 rounds of ammunition remain on the mountain, and the Air Force hopes Denver-based PRC Environmental Management Inc. will accelerate the recovery.

PRC, which specializes in cleaning up aircraft crash sites and other environmental hazards, gives the Air Force an additional 16 experts on the mountainside as well as magnetic detectors that can penetrate 8 to 10 feet of snow still on Gold Dust Peak.

"The mountain itself is the biggest challenge," said PRC project manager Dirk Applegate. "The snowfield is definitely something that's inhibiting the progress, and we're going to bring in the new technology that can see quite a bit deeper into the snow."

In addition to the Air Force and PRC, Air National Guardsmen from an Anchorage rescue unit have joined the search.

Members of the 210th Rescue Squadron are working at 12,000 feet and higher. In Alaska, they are called out for mountain rescues of downed planes and injured climbers, among other accidents.

"It's going too fast," added Wilma Champin, who's spent the past 48 years at 3767 N. 3300 E. "We don't know what it's going to do on our farming operation. They're not interested in our land, at least not yet."

values," said Lekey, who lives at 3289 E. 3700 S., just south of the proposed railroad. "There's no reason to take good country and make a train depot."

The request meshes with the city's comprehensive plan, which envisions eastward expansion.

"It is a natural fit for any extension of the industrial area of the city," said local developer Joe Russell, a partner in Innside Land and Investment, which requested the zoning change.

Russell's business partner, R. Todd Blass, agreed to buy the property from Bill and Helen Matney in January. The Matneys bought the land from Owen and Joann Bennet, according to a warranty deed notarized on Dec. 20, 1995.

Edith Robertson, has lived her entire life at 332 Hunkins Road so, said she opposes the railroad deal because farming is the best use of the land.

"I hate to see farmland taken over and cease to be farmland," said Robertson, whose father started farming the area in 1903.

New Craig disclosure still prompts questions

BOISE (AP) — Republican Sen. Larry Craig's political operatives have revised his financial disclosure statement to resolve questions about transactions reported in the final month of the 1996 campaign.

Larry Craig

Campaign treasurer Kaye O'Riordan also told the Federal Election Commission that future reports will specifically identify businesses paid by credit card rather than listing only the monthly payment to the credit card company.

The revisions to the Dec. 31 report, filed just a week before the disclosure statement for the first half of this year is due, acknowledged that a $17,000 debt originally listed as repaid to a business in early December was misleadingly reflected as a payment to the owner without identifying him as the owner.

In an April 8 letter to the Craig campaign, the Federal Election Commission sought an explanation for that discrepancy, which raised the possibility of an illegal corporate contribution, and for the unexplained appearance of a $2,500 debt to the National Republican Senatorial Committee.

Craig campaign treasurer Kaye O'Riordan told the commission that listing the amount as a debt incurred prior to Thanksgiving and not repaid by year's end was a mistake.

O'Riordan said Monday there was never a $2,500 transaction — debt, contribution or disbursement — involving the senatorial committee.

And earlier, campaign officials had said that money owed to a Boise office supplies company was actually paid as reported although the disbursements were not identified in the same fashion as the debt.

But the revised report also continued to show that $574 owed to William Hart of Boise for travel during the fall was repaid in December but the amount the report shows given Hart to cover travel bills was only $401.

"Maybe it was just an error, and we'll look into it," O'Riordan said.

Hart had not contributed over $200 to the campaign prior to that so the difference could be written off as a legal contribution.

Craig spent $27 million to easily win a second term over Democrat Walt Minnick, who spent $2.1 million. But while Craig ran up a 57 percent majority, he also ran up the first major campaign debt of his political career.

He still owed $181,000 at the close of 1996 and spent the first half of this year raising cash from out-of-state interests to get the campaign out of the red.

Clinton tries to reassure governors

Says national school standards are not a federal 'power grab'

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Having accused the nation's governors of "dragging their feet" on national school standards, President Clinton softened the sales pitch to his former colleagues Monday and assured them he's not making any "power grab" at schools.

"I do not believe that we will be the leading economy in the world 50 years from now unless we can do a more uniform job of getting people out of high school with excellent world-class educations," the president told a meeting of the National Governors Association.

"We have made a lot of progress since ... 1983 and governors have led the way, but we have a lot more work to do," added Clinton, a former Arkansas governor.

The president, who just last week blasted the governors for "dragging their feet," acknowledged that some governors have reservations about his call for national testing and performance measures for grade-schoolers in math and science. But the program is not, he assured them, "a power grab by the federal government to erode states' constitutional responsibility for education and local control of the schools."

On Sunday night, Clinton painted a gloomy picture of society under the status quo.

"If you don't want, even in a strong economy, tens of thousands of people standing around the street, vulnerable to gangs and guns and drugs and violence, and costing you money ... then we had better dedicate ourselves to a national commitment to excellence for every child in education," he told a fund-raising dinner in Los Angeles for congressional Democrats.

President Clinton addresses the National Governors Association during NGA's 89th meeting Monday in Las Vegas.

So far, just 15 urban school districts and six states have agreed — Kentucky, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, North Carolina and West Virginia — as well as schools operated by the Defense Department.

Despite the lack of governors' endorsements, a survey by the American Federation of Teachers finds that education officials from Alaska, New Mexico and Tennessee also plan to administer the tests.

Officials from another 12 states and the District of Columbia told the teachers' union that they probably would give the tests. Iowa said it definitely would not participate.

On welfare, Clinton recognized governors for "their success up to now," in implementing the welfare law since it was passed last year by the Republican-controlled Congress, giving states greater control of welfare programs.

He pushed them, however, to go further in subsidizing child care for welfare recipients trying to enter the workforce, and he insisted that those new workers be eligible for both the minimum wage and the Earned Income Tax Credit.

Both, he said, were strong incentives for welfare recipients to find jobs. "I feel very strongly about that ... I don't think we ought to do anything that would undermine that incentive," he said.

He praised the 36 states that are using welfare checks to subsidize private employment for a period of time, and he pushed the others to follow suit.

As for the budget-balancing compromise deal to agreement on fiscal 1998, the president had earlier suggested that a deal could be completed in time for an announcement before the governors' conference.

"I believe we're on the verge of achieving it," he said today.

Business and politics were not the only order of the president's schedule was set aside for golf.

Clinton recently got the go-ahead from his doctor to resume playing after knee surgery. He played 18 holes Sunday at Los Angeles Hillcrest Country Club, switching in and out of two five-holes during the round.

Mormon Church disputes Time's figures

SALT LAKE CITY — Time magazine's cover story on the Mormon Church "grossly exaggerated" its wealth and income, the church said Monday in a written statement.

"It would also have been well if they had pointed out that the bulk of the church's assets are money-consuming assets, rather than money-producing," said the statement from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

A cover story in Time magazine on newswriters this week called the Mormon Church the most prosperous of American religions. It said the church is preparing to focus that considerable wealth on an unprecedented campaign of international expansion.

The magazine estimated the church's assets at $30 billion and its annual gross income at $5.9 billion.

Sheriff's office calls off search for woman

HUNTSVILLE, Utah — The Weber County Sheriff's Office has called off the search for the body of a Roy woman presumed drowned in Pineview Reservoir.

Sgt. Clint Anderson said divers were unable to locate the body of 37-year-old Deana L. Barnett, reported missing early Friday. The search was called off Monday after a third day. Anderson said because the divers were exhausted and the operation was becoming risky.

CDC finds no link between 7 odd deaths

CALDWELL — Federal medical investigators have ended their inquiry into seven mysterious deaths in southwestern Idaho without offering any explanation for why the people died.

But Canyon County officials are not giving up despite the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's inability to help in uncovering a cause.

"We're not going to take no for an answer," Coroner Vicki DeGueis said. "So we're going to keep looking."

After looking into the deaths for several months, the federal center's report said it could not be certain any of the victims could be conclusively established. Without any additional information, the centers said their investigation was closed.

Juvenile facility chooses new director

IDAHO FALLS CENTER — A Lakeview, Ore., man will supervise a new juvenile detention center when it opens in mid-October in Idaho Falls.

Michael Moore was chosen from about 24 applicants, said Bonneville County Commissioner Roger Christensen.

"He has a fairly broad background," Christensen said. "He was one of the few applicants with a demonstrated, successful program." Moore now heads a juvenile probation department in Oregon. He starts duties in Idaho Falls Aug. 11.

The juvenile jail will have 16 beds and holding facilities for juveniles being held until parents or others pick them up. The jail will serve Bonneville, Bingham and Butte counties.

Police cite fatigue in fatal 4-truck collision

ATHOL — Authorities are citing fatigue as the primary factor that led to last week's four-truck collision in the Panhandle in which a mother and her 2-year-old son were killed.

Idaho State Police Sergeant C. Kalfenberger said interviews with witnesses and those involved indicated that Lynn Janz may have fallen asleep as he was driving his wife and children back to Bonners Ferry after a camping trip.

Janz was driving the family pickup when it crossed the center line last Thursday and plowed off a tractor-trailer rig before slamming head-on into another pickup. Both trucks then slid into a third pickup.

Janz's wife, Vickie Sue, 28, and his son, Layton, whose killed in the crash. Lynn Janz was 28, his daughter, Yvonne, 6, along with the driver of the pickup he hit head-on were hospitalized.

Reasons for Louisiana prison riot come to light

BOISE (AP) — The opening of inmate mail and a lack of rehabilitative classes are among reasons Idaho inmates staged a mini-riot last week at a private prison in Louisiana, inmates and relatives maintain.

Anger-management courses and other programs still not being provided at the Basile Detention center under an $8 million contract with the Idaho Correction Department. Inmates say they need the programs to meet demands from the Idaho Correction Department. The incident involving 101 of the 300 Idaho inmates housed at the facility resulted in at least $35,000 in damage to televisions, beds, windows and light fixtures.

Idaho is paying $36.75 per prisoner per day under the two-year contract with the facility two hours west of New Orleans — about $5 less than it costs in its own system and twice that and more than it is paying facilities in Texas and Minnesota for cell space to ease overcrowding in Idaho.

Basile prison officials said they have provided three of seven classes the contract requires —

Alcoholics Anonymous, Narcotics Anonymous and high school equivalency courses. They are trying to set up the others as quickly as possible, Basile Warden Richard Wald said in a letter to the Idaho prison officials.

Legal mail has been opened in error, Wald admitted, but "we try our best to follow the policy" of opening the mail in the presence of the inmates.

Idaho officials are satisfied Basile staff are treating prisoners well and are not violating constitutional rights, Correction spokesman Mark Carnopis said.

The department wants classes to begin as soon as possible but understands they take time to set up, he said.

"It's not an ideal situation," he said. "We've allowed a little leeway."

Idaho inmates have been voicing complaints about their transfer since before they were shipped out last month. The biggest complaint is the 2,000-mile separation from family members. But they have also complained about the food and the dormitory living conditions.

Ogden considers using part of dump for shooting range

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — City officials are considering a proposal to use a portion of the former Ogden County landfill for a shooting range.

The idea already has drawn opposition from neighboring residents.

"It has little grandchildren who play there," said Erma Monteth of West Ogden.

"The worries me." The city has told residents the former dump will be turned into a park. But county commissioners also have approved a proposal by gun enthusiasts to create a shooting range. The range could be used by both the public and law enforcement officers.

Last week, former Weber County Commissioner Spencer Stokes presented the idea to the Ogden City Council. The council has to approve the proposal before the shooting range can be built.

Council members decided to hold their decision until they hear from West Ogden residents. A public hearing has not been scheduled. Community activist Denise Scott said the proposal was a "slap in the face" to West Ogden residents.

"We have enough issues around guns and gangs," she said. "It would give gang members the idea if it was OK for police to fire guns, it was OK for them."

New mill planned for Bonners Ferry

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Crown Pacific Ltd. plans to build a $17 million sawmill on its Bonners Ferry mill site.

Spokesman Fletcher Chamberlin said the new mill will be more efficient although he could not estimate the increase in productivity it would offer. He also did not have any information on the employment impact of the new operation, which is scheduled to open by fall 1998.

"It all depends on the conditions. 15 months from now," Chamberlin said.

Crown Pacific, which completely closed its Albeni Falls mill a year ago, curtailed operations at the Bonners Ferry site last year in anticipation of the modernization project.

It's difficult to find Typo

Q. We were taught that nobody could build a perpetual motion machine, but the satellites that circle the earth...

A. Not quite. Particles abloom in space eventually will bring them down.

In Haiti, purse snatching was long a crime punishable by death.

A. Some do. Male warbled starlings, for example.

"Just a few good men" is all they want, say the U.S. Marines. Mighty good men, historically. They'd rejected Audie Murphy before he became the most decorated soldier in the U.S. Army.

You rarely see in print the name of that Kentucky place called "Typo." Maybe the proofreaders deleted it.

If the native men up the great South American river had cut their hair, which they didn't, the explorers would not have thought they were the legendary fierce warriors. And the Amazon River might have been called something else.

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Actress Debra Paget says the King of Rock 'n' Roll wanted her to be his queen, but her parents wouldn't let her.

Paget, who starred opposite Elvis Presley in his 1956 movie debut "Love Me Tender," said he proposed to her but she declined because her parents objected.

"Elvis was really a sweet young man," she said in an interview Sunday in The Times-News. "I had worked with him on 'The Milton Berle Show' about three months before we did that film.

"He used to come over to our house and have dinner and just go around with my family. He called me from El Paso and asked me to marry him. My mother and daddy were not for my getting involved. I probably would have married him," Paget said.

Presley wed Priscilla Beaulieu in 1967.

NEW YORK — Jennifer Aniston is learning the ups and downs of being a television star.

"After making it quick and big on the hit series 'Friends,' Aniston said she was shocked when all of a sudden there was a backlash.

"It had great success, and we were thrilled. Then it got bigger and bigger, and then out of nowhere one day you're reading that people are really annoyed," Aniston said.

She couldn't put the criticism out of her mind, she told USA Weekend, until Steven Spielberg offered her this advice: "This happens to everybody. Don't think you're so special."

"These days she's wanting to see if audiences will buy her on the big screen. Her new film, 'Picture Perfect,' opens this week.

"I don't know what it is, why people will make it in movies and same won't," she said. "When does your time run out?"

"I'm hoping you get to a place when you are comfortable in your body of work that you can look behind you and go, 'This is what I want to do. This feels close to me.'"

NEW YORK — Harrison Ford's politics are his business.

The star of the new film "Air Force One" said despite making several appearances on behalf of Tibet's independence from China, he believes actors shouldn't force their political views on their audiences.

"These kinds of loose lips I have no respect for, in myself or anybody else," Ford said in the August issue of GQ magazine. "I'd prefer to see the debate over important issues conducted by experts rather than celebrities. I also don't want to attract attention to myself."

That attitude extends to his personal life, and Ford recently swore at the GQ reporter when asked about his failed first marriage and what his relationship is like with his two older children.

Jennifer Aniston

Was upset by public's un-'Friend'-ly feelings

"I don't want people to know what I like, what I don't like, who I am, where I live, how I live, what the names of my children are," Ford said.

"That's completely contrary to the effort that I'm making when I go into the theater, which is to try and get them to believe that I'm somebody else."

NEW YORK — Forget high taxes and crime. If Marla Maples were president, she'd have different priorities — massages and yoga for all.

In a question-and-answer session in the August edition of GQ magazine, the former first lady of the Donald Trump empire lays out what life would look like with her as the country's top gal.

Running mate? Michael Jordan. Closest adviser? God. Secretary of Defense? My publicist. What would you veto every time? My American Express bill. A reason to go to war: Tabloid journalism.

And Maples said if she could create a new department, it would be The Department of Peace Promotion, "with federally subsidized massages and yoga for everyone."

New resources allow you to follow Lewis and Clark on upper Missouri

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — As the boat turned and motored upstream on the Missouri River, the rock cliffs ahead suddenly appeared to part like a great door opening onto a new world beyond.

It was a wonderful moment, when you could imagine what it must have looked like 200 years ago when the Lewis and Clark expedition first explored this stunning country. For a second the motor-driven boat and 20th century could be forgotten, and you could move back in time.

"This evening we entered much the most remarkable cliffs that we have yet seen," Capt. Meriwether Lewis wrote in his journal on Friday, July 19, 1805.

These cliffs rise from the waters edge on either side perpendicular to the height of 1200 feet, every object here wears a dark and gloomy aspect, the towering and projecting rocks in many places seem ready to tumble on us...

"From the singular appearance of this place I called it the gates of the rocky mountains."

Though the original river bed is now buried under 15 feet of water locked up from Holter Dam, the Gates of the Mountains near Helena is still one of the best places around for a day outing on the Lewis and Clark trail.

Wild mountain goats, eagles and osprey inhabit the spectacular gray limestone cliffs. On one rock wall you can see an Indian pictograph of a buffalo head, painted in red by some unknown artist two or three centuries ago.

Getting the most out of the experience is made easier by a new book, "Lewis and Clark in the Three Rivers Valleys," compiled by Don Nell and Jack Taylor, founders of the Headquarters Chapter of the Lewis and Clark Trail Heritage Foundation.

The book brings together in a portable paperback the journals of Capt. Lewis and William Clark and other expedition members, as well as narratives from two historians-sleuths, Elliott Coates and Olin Wheeler, who retraced Lewis and Clark's steps 90 and 100 years after the 1804-1806 expedition in the Gallatin area, Wheeler got much of his information from a local old-timer, Peter Koehn, who showed him the old buffalo trails.

"The book covers the area of greatest interest around the upper Missouri — from the Dearborn River south of Great Falls, to the Three Forks area and on past

Dillon to Lemhi Pass. There are explorers crossed the Continental Divide into present-day Idaho and finally met the Shoshoni Indians, who gave them the knowledge and horses crucial to surviving a treacherous crossing of the Rocky Mountains.

Also included are the journals from Clark's return journey through the Gallatin Valley and Livingston area. In the book published by The Prairie Press ($20.95, with maps included), you can also see a reproduction of a journal page written by Lewis' own pen.

"We felt there was a need to accumulate some of these rare books so the student or interested party could read them without having to buy a full set," Nell said.

The maps show the routes taken by Lewis and Clark, who themselves were following buffalo trails and Indian roads.

The overwhelming impression from reading the journals is the incredible hardships the party endured, pulling and pushing their heavily laden canoes upstream day after day, often struggling for hours up their punts in cold rivers, enduring sun, thirst, prickly pear wounds and clouds of biting bugs, collapsing in exhaustion. All the while they were feeling somewhat lost.

Another fascinating outing on the Lewis and Clark trail is a trip to Lemhi Pass, Nell said. This is where Lewis first stepped over the Continental Divide, first saw the "tremendous mountains" whose snow-covered peaks went on far as the eye could see, and first realized how hard it would be to reach the west.

"It's still the way it looked when Lewis and Clark first saw it," Nell said.

One historic site on the way to Lemhi Pass is at Clark Canyon Reservoir, southwest of Dillon. This is the location of Camp Fortunate, where the expedition met. Camp Fortunate was the Shoshoni, the tribe the expedition had been searching for with increasing desperation ever since leaving Great Falls six weeks before, and the Shoshoni proved not only friendly, but willing to sell horses, and the chief turned out to be Sacajawea's longlost brother.

The book by Nell and Taylor is designed to bring along in the car for handy reference. Very helpful are the color maps included in the back. They're loose so they can be taken out and used like a highway map.

Tiny guitar is about the size of a blood cell

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — The world's tiniest guitar is about the size of a single blood cell, 20 times thinner than a human hair.

Its six strings can be plucked, but they are too small to be heard.

Scientists at Cornell University carved the guitar out of crystalline silicon to demonstrate the possibilities of building devices at the microscopic level.

The guitar itself is just 10 micrometers long. A micrometer is one-millionth of a meter. The strings are each about 50 nanometers wide. A nanometer is a billion times smaller than a meter.

"The guitar was made for fun, but demonstrates a new technology that can be used to fabricate extremely small mechanical devices for a variety of electronics and other industries," said Cornell spokesman Larry Bernard.

Harold Craighead, an engineering physics professor who supervised construction of the guitar, said it's still technically possible to make devices even smaller.

"The question is how small can we go and still have dependable and measurable mechanical properties," he said. "We are nearing the technological limit where it gets harder to get smaller than this."

He said the guitar is about the size of a blood cell.

A Garden of Thoughts

JEROME—A bed of miniature roses, a flower garden with dinosaurs of painted mortar, a black bear carved in the stump of a dead mountain ash, and faces on the sawed-off branches of trees are all part of the fantasy landscape around the home of Mary and William Tews — setting of this year's annual, joint summer picnic of the Twin Falls, Bliss and Gooding County garden clubs.

The setting matched the meeting theme: "A Garden of Thoughts." Club members and their guests toured the Tews' handiwork which included a backyard flower garden with walkways of Oakley stone and a silvery windmill that appears to grow from a euonymus shrub sculpted in the shape of a bear.

Beneath the weeping willows swaying in the breeze at the one-and-a-half-acre yard, the gardeners sat, ate and talked in the filtered sunlight streaming from the blue sky.

Musicians Lynn Hansen and Reid Estrom from Keith Jorgensen's in Twin Falls played easy listening music on an electronic organ in the shade of a black walnut.

Tews daughters, Ruth Griffith of Pocatello and Mo Tranmer of Gooding, attended the gathering hosted by the Gooding County Club.

"Mom's garden is just as beautiful as the English gardens," said Griffith, who recently returned from a trip to England.

Tranmer pointed out the wood creations of her father and commented that there seemed no limit to her parents' creativity.

Tews said she planted the row of weeping willows in the backyard 15 years ago. The trees, now 35 feet tall, display unusual connections because she had braided them together.

Club members read aphorisms, monologues and poetry about gardening while a tiger swallowtail butterfly soared and flitted above the listeners' heads. Ester Babcock, secretary of the Gooding County Club, was emcee and read Mildred Ferguson's "What is a Garden?"

A poster display showed the flowers of butterfly, moonlight, rose and perennial gardens. Maria Lick of Buhl and vice president of the Twin Falls Club said she joined the organization because she was "interested in flowers and knowing the people who raise them."

How to get involved

□ In Gooding, contact JoAnn Guthrie at 634-4108 or Ester Babcock at 834-8350.

□ In Bliss, contact Ruth Stevens at 352-4545.

□ In Twin Falls, contact Jeannette Bell at 733-1487 or Marie Lick at 543-6330.

Amidst larkspur, roses, snapdragons, and a variety of garden art in the yard of Mary Tews, left, stand the co-presidents of the Gooding County Garden Club — JoAnn Guthrie and Thelma Comer — and Ruth Stevens and Jeannette Bell, presidents of the Bliss and Twin Falls garden clubs respectively.

Bringing warmth to those in need

BUHL — At 90 years old, Tillie Paschen hasn't lost any of her passion for quilting.

Three years ago, Paschen began making baby quilts for the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center and to this day has made over one hundred. She has also made over one hundred quilts for the

Born in Staunton, Ill., Paschen has been quilting for 60 years. She recalls earlier years when ladies met at the Lutheran School to quilt, Paschen sewed clothes for orphans. She later learned to quilt from ladies who came to the bakery her husband owned.

Faschen has three daughters who live in Kansas, Florida and Idaho. She has eight grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren. All have quilts she has made.

Most of the quilts are made from scraps of material that people have given her. The lover Lutheran Women's Missionary League of which she is a member, once had a quilt's shower for her and asked members to bring her anything that could be used for making a quilt. At one time a motel decided to get new bedding and gave 81 sheets to Valley House. The sheets were passed on to Paschen who used them as backs and trim on her quilts.

Paschen's sewing skills are not limited to quilts. As her daughters were growing up their friends would come over with a catalog of clothing. Paschen would study the picture, construct her own pattern and sew the outfit.

Paschen's quilts are completely hand sewn. Today her daughter Maxine hand sews the appliques and Paschen quilts them.

Last winter Paschen donated a quilt to be sold with the proceeds going toward the Valley House. The quilt was put on display in Stanley at the Sawtooth Hotel. This week a couple from Nebraska purchased it for $400.

When Paschen was told how much the quilt sold for she said "It's not what it looks like, it's the purpose it serves."

However, a close look at her quilts reveal that looks to her are just as important as the purpose for which it serves.

Tillie Paschen has made a tradition of giving each of her grandchildren a quilt as a wedding gift. This quilt is for James Schroeder, who is marrying Maxine Harold in August.

Young fishermen travel to Salmon Dam

TWIN FALLS—On June 28, the Magic Valley Optimist held a fishing day for the Transaction Head Start of Twin Falls and Burley. Children from the Boys and Girls Club were also invited. In all, 60 boys and girls participated.

Salmon Reservoir was the site of fishing, hot dog roasting and fun. Five members of the Bassmasters fishing club brought their boats to take out the young fishermen.

"We met some very special people," said Wayne Bohrn, a member of the Magic Valley Optimist Club. "Bob Grady of Twin Falls volunteered his boat to take kids out and Don Reed of Burley volunteered his help and vehicle to take the kids back and forth to the docks. They are truly good Samaritans."

The Magic Valley Optimists would like to say thanks to Bill Vanderkoo for his help with fishing for the second year.

"He's our very special bus driver," said Bohrn.

Fishermen from the Twin Falls and Burley Transaction Head Start and the Boys and Girls Club of Magic Valley prepare their rods and poles for a day of fishing on the Salmon Dam.

Fair superintendents chosen in Twin Falls

FILER—Superintendents for various departments at the Twin Falls County Fair have been selected. Information about their departments and how to contact them follows.

Frank Rodgers Jr. is the livestock superintendent. He has served as superintendent of the beef department for the last two years. His experience as a fair exhibitor in c l u d e s involvement in 4H and Future Farmers of America programs. He and his wife, Margaret, have been ranchers for 52 years, raising polled hereford breeding stock. Rodgers is the president of the Columbia Empire Polled Hereford Association. He serves on the sale committee for the Filer All-English Breed Sale and is a director on the Lewiston Hereford Association Board. Call Rodgers at 543-4055.

Mark Bogges will be the swine superintendent for the third time. He has been influential in upgrading the swine wash pens and installation of outdoor pens near the swine barn. He was born and raised on a farm, spent 10 years as a 4-H member and is now a 4-H leader. He has a B.S. in animal science and has spent several years with the University of Idaho Cooperative Extension Service. Bogges may be reached by calling 734-0735.

for more information. Bob Holloway will be the dairy superintendent. He has been involved with the Twin Falls County Fair since 1945 when he began exhibiting dairy animals. He has continued to exhibit and assisted with the Twin Falls Lions Club parking project over the years. He joined the fair staff as dairy superintendent three years ago and has since seen a new show ring installed, new wash racks constructed and a larger bulk tank added to the milking facility and been involved in plans to cover the dairy show ring. Holloway has spent most of his life in the dairy industry, working in field positions, public relations and cooperative education. He has been to Europe, Asia and Africa seven times as an agricultural consultant for the Volunteers for Overseas Cooperative Organization. Holloway may be reached by calling 736-8338.

The 1997 fair will be the sixth year Raymond Keeton has served as photography superintendent. One of the changes he has made is the addition of a special interest and archival photographs display in the center of the photography building. He is a retired photographer who has won numerous awards and had his work displayed in galleries in Twin Falls and Taiwan. Keeton owned the Lion's Gate Gallery in Ketchum and is a member of the Disabled American Veterans. Call 543-6690 to reach Keeton.

Ken Himphe has been produce superintendent for five years and has consistently strived to improve the quality and quantity of the produce displays. He is pastor of the Filer Community Bible Church, a former Kiwanis Club member and active with missionary work in Romania, where he has distributed nearly 200,000 packages of garden seeds to rural villages. Himphe has been a fair exhibitor for 30 years. Call him at 326-5025.

Mountain Mamas celebrate 25 years

KEETCHUM—The Mountain Mamas are venturing over the hill into Ketchum to celebrate 25 years of community service in the Stanley area.

About 30 "mamas" ranging in age from 30 to 90 years are expected to board the bus, "River Rat Express," Friday in Stanley and travel to Ketchum for the gallery walk and a dining experience at Warm Springs Ranch.

In 1972, a few women gathered to make quilts, meet for coffee during the long winters and help people in the community. The group has evolved into a nonprofit organization and one of the most important booster groups in the Stanley area. It contributes money, labor and leadership to nearly every community project and consists of the resourceful, hard-working, dedicated women responsible for the Arts and Crafts Fair for the last 21 years and the Quilt Festival for the last 12 years. Harris completes military exercise

TWIN FALLS—Navy Fireman John D. Harris, son of David L. and Dana M. Harris of Twin Falls, recently participated in Exercise Tandem Thrust off the coast of Australia while assigned to the guided missile frigate USS Curts, homeported in Yokosuka, Japan.

Harris was one of more than 28,000 United States and Australian sailors, soldiers, airmen, and Marines participating in the combined military exercise between Australia and the U.S.

Scheduled routinely at 18-month intervals, the exercise is designed to train the military staffs of both countries in joint planning and execution of a combined effort. Specifically, the exercise includes carrier battle group and amphibious ready group operations, amphibious landings, live gunfire exercises and parachute landings. Guided missile frigates, like USS Curts, are combatant ships designed to protect carrier battle groups, amphibious expeditionary forces, under way replenishment groups and merchant convoys from undersea attacks. In addition to missiles, torpedoes and advanced sonar systems, Harris' ship also carries two helicopters with sonar and torpedo capabilities which expand the ship's reach.

A 1992 graduate of Twin Falls High School, he joined the Navy in May 1995.

McMullen enters United States Army

BURLEY—Daniel P. McMullen, son of Debra G. McMullen of Twin Falls and Steve McMullen of Burley, has joined the Army under the Delayed Entry Program at the Army Recruiting Station, Twin Falls.

The program gives young men or women the opportunity to delay enlistment into the Army for up to one year before reporting to basic military training.

The enlistment gives the new soldier the option to learn a new skill, travel and become eligible to receive as much as $30,000 toward a college education. After completion of basic training, soldiers received advanced individual training in their career specialty. McMullen, a 1997 graduate of Twin Falls High School, will report to Fort Leonard Wood, Waynesville, Mo., for military basic training Aug. 14.
