UI to operate food quality lab

By Jennifer Sandmann
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A state lab established to test crops for chemical residue is preparing to open this fall after a nearly two-year shutdown, this time under new management and a mission to offer local educational opportunities.

The University of Idaho will staff the Food Quality Assurance Lab at the College of Southern Idaho, and the lab will report to an independent governing body. In the past, the state Department of Agriculture had handled staffing and oversight.

The funding plan also is different. Commodities groups and the Agriculture Department will support the lab financially, instead of the state general fund.

The restructuring could mean tax money won't be tapped to finance the lab, while farmers have a scientific means of tracking crop quality and students have another local career training option.

Gov. Phil Batt shut the lab down in 1996 because of its faulty testing procedures and its drain on the state budget. It should have been operating independently, but had relied on state money since it opened in 1993.

The Legislature established the Idaho Food Quality Assurance Institute in 1997 to take responsibility for the lab until 2002. Ten appointed members representing agriculture, the state, consumers and education.

The Idaho Potato Commission has pledged $200,000 in annual services for three years to finance the lab, said Wayne Thiessen, institute chairman.

The Idaho-Wheat Commission has pledged $25,000 annually for the same period. The Agriculture Department receives federal grants to conduct chemical testing, amounting to about $80,000 worth of yearly business for the lab.

Inside the fishbowl with a preacher's kid who overcame extra odds

*PK: Mom, what should I say when people tell me I don't act like a preacher's kid?
Mom: Try writing them thank-you notes.*

TWIN FALLS — They used to be called PKs, preachers' kids.

Today, they are called TOs, theological offspring. The new term is politically correct.

But the children of modern-day church leaders share many of the same unique burdens shouldered by those before them. They also share the same unique joys.

Results from "The Stressors of Clergy Children and Couples," a survey of 317 ministers' family members across several denominations, were published in the 1993 issue of Psychological Reports. Among the conclusions: Ministers' families experience unique pressures related to the ministry, including congregational expectations, isolation and high mobility.

Other factors that affect preachers' kids include the personality of the child, parenting methods in the home and turmoil in the church.

The Rev. Susan Staley, newly hired associate pastor at the First United Methodist Church of Twin Falls, is a preacher's kid who fought back against extra obstacles.

"I am an incest survivor," said Staley, who ministered in England for two years before her six-year stint at a church in Castleford. "My father was one of those clergy that we hear about — one of those broken clergy who abuse their power by seducing women and children."

She continued, "He had been having adulterous affairs for 30 years, and acting out his sickness through incest ... He has since surrendered his (United Methodist) credentials."

Woman faces 2 charges in Blaine drug case

By Kristan Kennedy
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — A south Blaine County woman was charged Friday afternoon in Hailey with two felonies after police say they executed a search warrant on her home and found 15 small marijuana plants.

Michelle McElroy, 31, was arrested at her office by state and county officers. She was charged with manufacturing, a felony, and failure to affix a state tax stamp, also a felony.

She could face five years or a $15,000 fine if convicted.

McElroy — the president of Bruce Willie Valley Entertainment — was released on $5,000 bond Thursday night.

Magistrate Judge Robert Elgee lowered the bond to $3,500 Friday after her attorney, Ned Williamson, told the court she posed no flight risk and had pending responsibilities as president of Valley Entertainment and as mother of a 3-year-old child.

He characterized the marijuana case as one of personal use.

"Her employment is secure," Williamson told the court.

Blaine County Prosecutor Doug

Worth requested special prosecution for the case. The affidavit in court records accompanying his request said there could be a conflict of interest with a pending case in which Valley Entertainment is the alleged victim.

McElroy had no comment about the charges.

Pending 5th District Judge James May's approval, Jerome County Prosecutor John Lathspich will handle the case.

Spacewalk starts

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — An American astronaut and a Russian cosmonaut floated outside the Mir space station today on a rare U.S.-Russian spacewalk to find punctures caused by history's worst space collision.

Astronaut Michael Foale and Mir commander Anatoly Solovyov, the most experienced spacewalker ever, began the scheduled six-hour inspection just before 5 a.m.

today (7 p.m. MDT Friday), Russian space officials said.

"Everything is going according to schedule," Valley Udding, the deputy chief of Mission Control, said shortly after the spacewalk began.

The walk was the first chance for hands-on scrutiny of the Mir's damaged hull since a remote-control supply ship rammed the station June 25, cutting power and raising questions about its stability.

World mourns Mother Teresa

The Associated Press

CALCUTTA, India — Mother Teresa, the Roman Catholic nun revered for her tireless dedication to the world's most wretched, died Friday surrounded by grieving sisters of her order, she was 87.

Crowds of weeping people stood in the rain before dawn in the streets outside her Missionaries of Charity home in central Calcutta. Pope John Paul II, President Clinton and other world leaders praised Mother Teresa and her commitment to the poor.

With Mother Teresa gone, "there is less love in the world, less compassion, less light," said President Jacques Chirac of France. "She leaves us a strong message on the subject: no borders and which goes beyond faith: helping, listening, solidarity. The world is in mourning."

The frail, 4-foot-11-inch nun, who was born in what in Europe but became an Indian citizen during her six decades on the subcontinent, had suffered heart problems and other ailments for years and gave up leadership of her order in March because she was too ill to do the job.

Her successor, Sister Nirmala, told reporters that Mother Teresa died of a heart attack.

Mother Teresa's last words were, "I cannot breathe," said a close friend, Sunita Kumar.

She said Mother Teresa — then slumped down in her bed.

Her body was taken to a chapel at the convent. Funeral arrangements were not immediately announced.

Later, photographers were allowed inside the chapel to view Mother Teresa's body, lying with hands clasped in the simple habit worn by members of her order — a blue-sleeved blouse. Young nuns filed past, touching her feet in a traditional Indian gesture of respect.

The Vatican said Pope John Paul would celebrate a Mass for her Saturday at Castel Gandolfo, his summer residence outside Rome. "Her death touched his heart very deeply," said the Rev. Carlo Benedettini, a

Queen pays tribute to 'remarkable person'

The Associated Press

LONDON — Speaking from a heart whose warmth had been questioned, Queen Elizabeth II broke the royal silence Friday over Princess Diana's death, calling her "a remarkable person" whose memory must be cherished.

On the eve of today's funeral, the culmination of a stunning outpouring of grief by millions who identify with "the people's princess," Diana's beloved sons, Princes William, 15, and Harry, 12, paid a private farewell visit to her coffin at St. James's Palace.

Hundreds camped overnight near Westminster Abbey, site of the funeral, and several million were expected to jam the capital Saturday, in September sunshine, for what loomed as the biggest public turnout since VE Day more than 50 years ago.

"Princess Diana British spirit, almost like that famed British wartime spirit," said Pally Britner, who waited 13 hours to sign a condolence book at St. James's.

People shared food, got each other tea, and became instant friends, she said, and she hugged a tearful young man who had been in line with her. "At least we all shared it," she added.

Countless millions worldwide watched on television, starting at 2 a.m. MDT today, as the body of the Princess of Wales is borne through London, to the Gothic abbey and then on to her final resting place in Northamptonshire's green hills.

The rites were six days after Diana, her new love Dodi Fayed, died.

Sunday vigil set

A vigil service to honor Mother Teresa is set for 7-8 p.m. Sunday at the Good Shepherd Catholic Church. The Rev. Robb Baker and the Rev. Tom Loucks will officiate at the service, which will include reflections on the life and writings of Mother Teresa and a time of common prayer. The public is invited.

... months ago Mother Teresa received the highest civilian honor bestowed by Congress, the U.S. House of Representatives observed a moment of silence.

... In addition to her charity work, Mother Teresa used her fame as a platform to speak out strongly for conservative values, arguing passionately against abortion, contraception and divorce. She traveled as an envoy of the pope to preach devotion to life.

... A tiny, frail woman bent almost double in her later years, she was as renowned for her humility as her charity.

Gore's aide says event at temple was not a fund-raiser

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former aide to Al Gore insisted in Senate testimony Friday that a 1996 Democratic Party luncheon the vice president attended at a California Buddhist temple was not a fund-raiser.

"Do you dispute that event was a fund-raiser?" Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., asked Gore's former deputy chief of staff, David M. Strauss. "I do," said Strauss.

"We'll let others draw the inference whether all the $5,000 checks made it a fund-raiser or not," said Specter.

Gore, questioned by reporters in New Hampshire today, said he is "confident that when all the reviews are complete, they will find what I did is legal and appropriate."

"We're cooperating fully with the review and we went the extra step of making it all public," Gore said. "What this shows is the need for campaign finance reform."

Specter closely questioned Strauss about what the senator described as "a substantial so-called paper trail" showing that the event was planned by Democratic fund-raiser John Huang as a luncheon to raise money for the Democratic National Committee.

The April 29, 1996, luncheon raised $100,000 for the DNC, which has returned most of the contributions because the money was donated in connection with an event at the tax-exempt temple.

Republicans called Strauss, now executive director of the government's Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp., to try to understand Gore's insistence that he didn't know the event was a fund-raiser.

"I believe I know what a fund-raiser is and this was not a fund-raiser," said Strauss, a veteran congressional and presidential aide.

Strauss also insisted that "I had absolutely no conversations with the vice president about this being a fund-raiser."

Strauss also insisted that Gore's March 15 meeting at the White House with the head of the Buddhist sect and John Huang

"It is unfair to attempt to hold the vice president accountable in any way for the wrongdoing... that probably occurred at the Hsi Lai Temple."

— Sen. Joseph Lieberman

was unrelated to any fund-raising efforts by the DNC operative. The Buddhist leader invited Gore to attend an event at the temple, Strauss said, but there was no discussion of fund-raising.

"There was nothing about that particular meeting that was anything other than a courtesy call, it might have been a smart thing to do politically, but there was no ulterior motive for arranging that meeting," Strauss testified.

But as he was shown a series of documents referring to plans for a California fund-raising trip for Gore, Strauss conceded that he knew at the time that Huang's principal function at the time was to raise money for the DNC.

Strauss told investigators that when reporters asked about the event last fall, he told Gore that the event was a "community outreach event."

In defending his calling the luncheon as a "community outreach" function, Strauss told investigators that in Gore's briefing papers for the appearance, "there is no reference here to any money being raised at this particular event."

Documents in the public domain to Gore's defense, questioning the significance of whether the vice president knew the event was a fund-raiser.

"It seems to me we are pursuing a question here which is irrelevant to the purpose of this inquiry," said Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn. "What he knew or should have known has no relevance."

"It is unfair to attempt to hold the vice president accountable in any way for the wrongdoing... that probably occurred at the Hsi Lai Temple," Lieberman said, referring to an illegal scheme orchestrated by Huang to disguise a temple fundraiser as a DNC as contributions from 22 Buddhist temples and monks.

But Sen. Susan Collins, R-Maine, told Strauss "I don't see how the vice president could not have known, given the numerous documents" referring to a fundraiser in Los Angeles.

"I know precisely how the vice president knew about this event," Strauss testified. "He told me and he told a news reporter."

Huang is a former Democratic Party fundraiser at the heart of the congressional and Justice Department investigations into campaign fund-raising abuses.

Three Buddhist temples from the temple testified Thursday that $45,000 was collected for the Democratic National Committee a day before Gore's appearance, and another $55,000 was raised a day after the speech, because Huang informed temple officials the initial amount was insufficient.

The temples testified they should reimburse donors of the $55,000 and later discovered or altered records to avoid further revelation to the temple. They contended they were unaware that federal law prohibits political donors from giving money that isn't their own.

Canadian export subsidies opposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. dairy processors and farmers asked the Clinton administration Friday to challenge Canada's export pricing system, contending it is an unfair trade subsidy that undermines American farmers' sales.

The petition filed by three major dairy organizations asks U.S. Trade Representative Charles K. Barnhart to bring a complaint to the World Trade Organization, which settles such disputes under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

"Canada's scheme is a threat to the continued growth of U.S. dairy exports," said Tom Suber, executive director of the U.S. Dairy Export Council.

According to the petition, Canada created a system in 1995 which enables its government to sell dairy products at low prices overseas while charging higher prices to its own consumers.

For example, this translates into a price for Canadian butter equal to 88 cents per pound in U.S. dollars overseas while Canadian consumers are paying $1.77 a pound because of government price supports.

"This is the exact opposite of what we sought in the last round of GATT talks," said E. Linwood Tipton, chief of the International Dairy Foods Association.

Besides losing some market share, the U.S. dairy groups are concerned that the European Union and other countries might set up a similar scheme.

Pint-sized boy allegedly beaten to death by teens

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rodney Haynes Jr. was a little kid whose mouth more than made up for his size. It may also have gotten him killed.

On Aug. 25, 12-year-old Rodney and two older boys slipped out of a group home for troubled youngsters late at night after lights out. Early the next day, his 4-foot-10, 85-pound body was found behind a convenience store in the trash, his head smashed, a bloody rock nearby.

Linda Smith, co-guardian, shares a photo of Rodney Haynes in her Compton, Calif., home Aug. 29. Murder charges were filed against two teens, ages 16 and 17, who allegedly admitted to beating 12-year-old Haynes to death.

The two older boys, ages 16 and 17, pleaded innocent Wednesday to murder.

Rodney was killed because the two older boys "felt he was a wiseguy, smart aleck," Sheriff's Sgt. John Greenwood said.

The boy had been at the group home only six days and had gotten into several arguments with his alleged assailants. At the shopping center, Rodney made a wisecrack that led to his beating, the boys told investigators.

The boy's slaying was one of two that have prompted state and local authorities to open an investigation this week into the Los Angeles County juvenile justice system, how it decides where to put the 2,000 youngsters in its custody, and how to improve security at group homes.

A 17-year-old girl, died Wednesday after allegedly being beaten by her 17-year-old boyfriend, who was on a weekend furlough from a juvenile home in Van Nuys to visit his mother.

State law prohibits the Probation Department from discussing specifics of any juvenile case. But a top agency official promised a thorough investigation of Rodney's death.

"Clearly our business is one of life and death, on occasion, and this kind of tragedy focuses us on that even more," acting Chief Probation Officer Walter J. Kelly said.

The odds were stacked against Rodney from the beginning. His father died when he was a few months old. His mother apparently abandoned him. The boy was eventually sent to live with Doris Cross, who became his foster mother.

Mrs. Cross and her daughters, Diedra Naud and Linda Smith, raised an outgoing, fun-loving kid. There was Little League baseball, basketball games with neighborhood kids, pool parties, school.

After Mrs. Cross died in January at 71, Rodney missed classes and started hanging out with the wrong crowd. The day before he turned 12, he was arrested for allegedly acting as the lookout during a burglary at a video store.

After a month in Juvenile Hall, Rodney was released to the Lamplsey home on probation. Then he was tried to run away. He was sent to Passaway, one of 127 juvenile homes under contract with the county. It is in suburban Calabasas about 40 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles.

Two older boys, Rodney and the 16-year-old, were taken to the 16-room pass. The two teen-agers slipped back in through the garage before the morning bed check, Rodney never returned.

"What could he have said to those boys to do this?" asked Jim Lamplsey, who helped his wife and sister-in-law take care of Rodney.

Exactly what the boy said that got him killed isn't clear.

"You have to remember what kind of kids we are dealing with — problem kids," said Bill Looney, a sheriff's investigator. "Another kid would have handled it a little differently."

A judge will decide if the boys will be tried as adults. Because of their ages, their names were withheld.

The Probation Department has stopped sending youngsters to Passaway during the investigation, which will look at how to tighten security in juvenile homes without undermining their purpose.

"They're supposed to be monitored, but it's not a locked facility. This is not a jail," said Corinne Clark, spokeswoman for the state Department of Social Services. "The whole reason they're in a group home is to try to give them an experience of a normal lifestyle as much as possible."

Panel OKs sale of thalidomide

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — The world's most infamous drug moved closer to U.S. pharmacies Friday.

A panel of government advisers said thalidomide should be approved to treat leprosy patients — but with severe restrictions on how it is sold to avoid a repeat of the birth-defect horrors of the 1960s.

The panel, which advises the Food and Drug Administration, voted 8-2 that the benefits to that small group of patients could outweigh the risks — if patients are adequately warned about the potential for devastating side effects, including birth defects that could occur if even one pill is taken during early pregnancy.

The panel said it is convinced thalidomide can help leprosy patients who suffer an agonizing inflammation called erythema nodosum leprosum.

After voting approval the FDA's scientific advisers turned to discussions of just how strict the curbs should be. Under discussion were unprecedented restrictions on the pharmacies that would sell the drug, and requiring intensive physician education before they write any prescriptions.

The FDA is not bound by advisory committee decisions but typically follows them.

Patients with leprosy are very rare — fewer than 50 a year are diagnosed with the ENL inflammation — and most of them are in special research programs that allow them to get experimental doses of thalidomide today.

Thalidomide is also being researched for a host of diseases from AIDS-related wasting and ulcers to cancer, lupus, rheumatoid arthritis and infections.

Thalidomide, once sold in 48 countries for insomnia and morning sickness, was banned worldwide in 1962 after some 12,000 babies were born with no limbs or tiny, flapper-like arms and legs, serious facial deformities and defective organs.

New Jersey-based Celgene Corp. wants to be the first of at least three companies competing to sell thalidomide here. But the FDA panel did not say whether Celgene's version, to be sold under the brand name Syntriv, was ready for approval, citing concerns about some of the company's data.

Great Salt Lake's trestle timber highlights rail museum's expansion

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Logs and beams taken from the former Lucin Cutoff trestle in the middle of the Great Salt Lake are forming the entrance way for Union Station's newly expanded museum of railroad history.

"Trestlewood," the company that is salvaging the trestle's millions of board feet of Douglas fir and pine, donated the posts and cross beams that supported the trestle's tracks for 95 years.

Bob Geier, the director of Union Station, said the trestle is a key part of northern Utah's railroad history, so the Trestlewood donation is a valuable one.

The trestle was called the "Lucin Cutoff," because it went directly across the lake, from Ogden to the town of Lucin, cutting 45 miles off the trip around the lake's northern arm. It was built in 1902-1903, using huge supplies of wood and thousands of workers.

"That whole trestle represents about 30 square miles of forest," Geier said.

Now it represents a railroading past that Geier hopes to preserve.

The timbers, weighing about five tons, were hauled into the front entrance of Union Station late last week, part of a major renovation of the railroad museum.

Much of the museum has been torn out and is being remodeled and rebuilt.

Geier said the change was needed because when Union Station was decided to Ogden City in 1978 and the museum started, he said, it had a building, but no artifacts. Now it has thousands of artifacts, but no place to display them.

The new museum will feature dioramas dedicated to people in all aspects of northern Utah's railroading history. The entrance will show the Chinese and Irish who built the Transcontinental Railroad.

Newly found Rembrandt plate to be shown

WASHINGTON (AP) — On one side of the copper plate a second-rate painter did a quiet landscape 300 years ago.

On the other side, a British expert discovered was a unique etching by Rembrandt, signed and dated 1656.

The National Gallery of Art announced Friday that its Patrons' Permanent Fund had bought the plate with the help of an anonymous donor. Bidding at Christie's art auction house in London reached about $338,000.

It will go on show for the first time Nov. 16.

"It's never been etched like so many of Rembrandt's plates," said Andrew Robison, senior curator at the gallery. "It's like looking over his shoulder as he worked."

An etcher uses sharp instruments to cut fine lines into a metal plate, wipes ink on the plate and prints it on paper. Robison said he could see tiny residues of ink in the grooves and thinks it was put on by Rembrandt himself. Tests that should tell more will take another few months.

Clinton forecasts $63 billion in 2002 surplus

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal budget will not only be balanced by 2002, as called for in last month's budget accord, but will show a $63 billion surplus, the White House predicted Friday.

That's the most optimistic forecast yet, nearly double the 2002 surplus projected earlier this week by congressional analysts.

"The nation's overall economic performance could hardly be better," said the annual summer economic review by the White House Office of Management and Budget.

The OMB predicted moderate growth over the next five years, with continued low inflation and falling interest rates.

It credited both the sound economy and the budget deal struck earlier this summer between President Clinton and Congress.

The report said the deficit for the current fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30, would be $37 billion — the smallest since 1974 and $90 billion below the initial White House estimate last winter. The administration predicted the deficit would rise to $58.3 billion in 1998 but then begin to fall again, reaching $7 billion in 2001. Surpluses were projected from 2002 on at least 2007.

The report suggested the nation's finances will improve far more quickly than previously believed.

Just a month ago, budget negotiators had anticipated a 2002 surplus of about $1 billion.

The OMB usually updates its forecast in mid-July, but delayed it this year to avoid interfering with the balanced-budget negotiations.

Photographers insist driver to blame

PARIS (AP) — A French photographer under investigation in the death of Princess Diana blamed the posh Ritz hotel Friday, saying it never should have sent a "drunk driver" to chauffeur the Mercedes in which Diana and her boyfriend died.

Another photographer — who said he took pictures of the wreck, then fled before emergency services arrived — admitted he and some other paparazzi made no attempt to help the victims trapped in the crushed car in a tunnel along the Seine River. Diana, boyfriend Dodi Fayed and driver Henri Paul died when their car, pursued by photographers, slammed into a pillar at high speed early Sunday. A bodyguard, Trevor Rees-Jones, was critically injured. Police sources said one test showed Paul's blood alcohol content was nearly four times the legal limit.

"In my opinion, the Ritz hotel is responsible," said Nikola Arsov of the Sipa photo agency, one of nine paparazzi under investigation. "A hotel of this class doesn't send a drunk driver."

The Ritz — whose bar Ernest Hemingway pursues the British libel during World War II — long has been a home-away-from-home and watering hole for the world's rich and famous. Mohamed Al Fayed, Dodi's father, bought the famed hotel on Paris' chic Place Vendôme in the early 1990s. Investigators are trying to determine how close the pursuing photographers' cars and motorcycles were to the Mercedes carrying Diana, and whether their actions might have contributed to the accident.

Six photographers and a press motorcycle were detained immediately after the accident. They were released Tuesday after being put under formal investigation for possible charges of manslaughter and failure to come to the aid of a person in danger, a crime in France. Two other photographers later turned themselves in for questioning.

"I understand they lost a princess, but you can't blame the photographers who were there because they had nothing to do with it," insisted Arsov, who claimed he originally had followed a decoy car sent to divert photographers, and only later turned up at the scene of the crash.

Arsov's lawyer, William Bourdon, was more direct. "Obviously, the crazy speed of the driver appears to be the main reason — the only reason — for this crash."

One witness who says he was driving a car just ahead of the black Mercedes told The Associated Press he saw a motorcycle cut in front of Diana's car and then saw a bright flash, perhaps from a camera.

Witness Franck Levi, who has been questioned by police, said after he saw the flash, he switched the Mercedes' headlights "to the left, to the right and again on the left." He lost sight of the Mercedes as his car cleared the tunnel.

In addition to the nine paparazzi already under investigation, police are still looking for others believed to have left the scene.

One who says he did just that was interviewed by German television. "It's true that Diana was (still) alive, she was still moving," said the photographer, whose name was withheld and whose face was hidden from the camera. "OK, we took photos without thinking. What was I supposed to do? I'm neither a doctor nor a fireman."

Netanyahu: Israel no longer bound by accord

JERUSALEM (AP) — His country shaken anew by a triple suicide bombing, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu declared Friday that Israel is no longer bound by peace accords with the Palestinians and will not hand over large chunks of the West Bank by mid-1998, as once pledged.

The dramatic announcement came only a week before Secretary of State Madeleine Albright visits the region to try to resuscitate the Israeli-Palestinian negotiations — a mission that now appears doomed before it begins.

"Palestinians — leaders — said Netanyahu used Thursday's bombings in a Jerusalem pedestrian mall as an excuse to avoid the handover of land and kill a peace process he never supported. A spokesman for Yasser Arafat denounced what he said was a serious Israeli violation of the peace accords and demanded immediate U.S. intervention.

The bombing — claimed by the Islamic militant group Hamas — killed seven people, including three assailants, and wounded more than 190 people. One of those killed, Yael Bowin, 14, had dual Israeli-U.S. citizenship. Six of the wounded were Americans. Immediately after the blasts, Israel reimposed its closure on the West Bank and Gaza Strip and confined Palestinians to their towns and villages. Early Friday, Israeli troops arrested 69 suspected militants in West Bank areas — still under Israeli control.

Israelis also suggested that Israeli troops might hunt down Islamic militants in areas controlled by the Palestinians.

Such a strike could wipe out any remaining cooperation between the two sides and could possibly lead to armed clashes between Israeli troops and Palestinian police.

Netanyahu convened an emergency Cabinet meeting Friday to decide on Israel's response and then announced the suspension of the three-stage troop pullback from much of the West Bank. "We decided that the process... in which Israel, time after time, hands land to the Palestinian Authority, and then murderers use these territories as their launching ground, shall not continue," Netanyahu told Israel TV.

Poisoned prince's wife charged with murder

BANGKOK, Thailand — Prosecutors have filed a first-degree murder charge against the widow of a prince found poisoned in his palace two years ago, the Bangkok Post reported Friday.

The suspect, 27-year-old Mom Chalassu Chooypa — better known by her nickname, "Baby Fish" — was released on an unspecified bond.

Police said the widow confessed in July that she dumped liquid flea killer into the coffee of her husband, Prince Thitapan Ukol, 60.

Among the threatened islands is volcano-plagued Montserrat. With the storm packing 75 mph winds, hurricane warnings were posted on Montserrat, Antigua, Barbuda, Nevis, St. Kitts, Anguilla, St. Barth and Dutch and French St. Martin. Puerto Rico and the U.S. and British Virgin Islands were under a hurricane watch.

A tropical storm warning was in effect for Guadeloupe and Dominica.

UPS strike temporarily restrains job growth in month of August

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United Parcel Service strike cast a temporary shadow over the U.S. labor market in August, holding job growth to the slowest pace in nearly a year.

The unemployment rate inched to a seasonally adjusted 4.9 percent from a near 2 1/2-year low of 4.8 percent a month earlier, the Labor Department said Friday.

But the Bureau of Labor Statistics commissioner, Katherine G. Abraham, said the increase wasn't statistically very significant, and other economists said conditions remain excellent for most job seekers. In fact, the jobless rate for blacks fell to the lowest level since 1974.

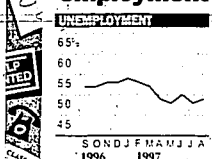

"For workers, this is still the best of times," said economist Mark Zandi of Regional Financial Associates in West Chester, Pa. "It's a good time to be looking for a job and a good time to be working, because wages are starting to go up more quickly."

Average hourly earnings of nonsupervisory workers jumped 5 cents last month to a seasonally adjusted $12.29, compared with a 1-cent increase in July. Over the past year, they're up 3.6 percent, about two-thirds higher than inflation over the period.

With the impact of the UPS strike, job growth was a paltry 49,000 in August, the smallest since September 1996. The strike temporarily subtracted 185,000 jobs, although the U.S. Postal Service and other competitors increased hiring by 32,000 and the return of striking auto and steel workers added 10,000 jobs.

Wall Street as first cheered, taking the report as a sign economic growth was moderating enough to avoid aggravating inflation and would allow the Federal Reserve to refrain from raising short-term interest rates.

"There's certainly nothing in this report that will cause the Fed to act," said economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch. "Inflation is going to be steady. I don't think it's going to pick up."

But other analysts pointed to signs of strength in the report and predicted Fed policy-makers would increase short-term interest rates, if not at their Sept. 30 meeting, then at their subsequent Nov. 12 meeting.

"The Fed's next move is to tighten, not to ease. The mid-November meeting looks like the likely time frame," said economist Everett M. Ehrlich, a former undersecretary of Commerce, now a consultant in Washington.

After initial gains, stocks and bonds retreated. At mid-afternoon, the Dow Jones average of industrial stocks was down 52 points to 7,895. The yield on the benchmark, 30-year Treasury bond, which moves in the opposite direction from prices, jumped to 6.64 percent from 6.60 percent.

Last month's overall job gain was revised up from 316,000 to 365,000, the largest in 17 months.

Also, in August, manufacturers added 47,000 jobs, the most since February 1990. Computer-making industrial machinery, computers, electronic components and aircraft all added to gains.

Despite the tiny increase in overall unemployment, the rate for blacks — particularly in the double digits — fell to a 23-year low of 5.3 percent.

"Every part of our society is seeing the benefits of our nation's strong economy," said Janet Yellen, chairwoman of the White House Council of Economic Advisors.

Among other demographic groups, unemployment in August was 4.1 percent for men, up from 4 percent; 4.4 percent for women, up from 4.2 percent; 16.4 percent for teenagers, the same as July; 4.2 percent for whites, also matching the previous month; and 7.2 percent for Hispanics, down from 7.9 percent.

Job growth in retailing, 31,000, slowed after a strong month. The finance industry continued to add workers, 11,000 in August, bringing payroll growth over the past 26 months to nearly 200,000. Construction employment rose by 10,000 jobs the first gain since May.

Government jobs increased by 72,000, bolstered by 5,000 postal service hires and 49,000 teachers returning to school. The average workweek rose 0.2 hours in August, to 34.7 hours, after a 0.1-hour decline the month before.

Fred Meyer announces stock split

PORTLAND, Ore. — Fred Meyer Inc. Friday announced a two-for-one stock split conditional on its pending merger with the Arizona-based Smith's Food and Drug Centers Inc.

The food and variety store chain also reported higher sales and earnings for the first half and second quarter of the year.

Net sales from the second quarter rose 12.1 percent to $357 million over the same period a year ago.

Net income increased 26 percent to $19.1 million in the second quarter compared with $15.1 million in the same quarter last year.

Shareholders of Smith's and Fred Meyer will meet Sept. 15 to vote on the proposed merger. Fred Meyer said it will invest $88 million in the Phoenix, Ariz., market to revitalize the Smith's stores, operating under the Smith's name.

Fred Meyer said net sales rose 13.6 percent to $2.15 billion for the first six months over the same period a year earlier. Earnings per share were $1.16 for the first half against 86 cents for the first half last year.

Nasdaq sets record, but blue-chips lag once again

NEW YORK (AP) — The Nasdaq market set its first record high in a month on Friday as computer stocks continued to draw away money from the blue-chip sector, which was jostled by growing worries about third-quarter profits.

Market in brief

August from a near 24-year low of 3.6 percent. The unemployment rate crept up to 4.9 percent in August from a near 24-year low of 3.6 percent.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 61.88 to 7,822.41, trimming its gain for the holiday-shortened week, which began with Tuesday's record-setting 257-point, to 199.99.

Hourly wages, meanwhile, rose 3.4 percent above year-ago levels. An increase that's about two-thirds faster than inflation over the same period.

The blue-chips took an early hit after several well-known companies disappointing results for the current quarter and Smith Barney, citing profit concerns, downgraded consumer products giants such as Procter & Gamble, Colgate-Palmolive, and Gillette.

New York Stock Exchange was dominated by the companies that issued profit warnings: Tupperware fell 6 1/16 to 28 7/16, Boston Scientific fell 13 1/4 to 62 5/8, and American Standard fell 4 1/8 to 41.

The Standard & Poor's 500-stock list fell 1.82 to 929.05, and the NYSE composite index fell 0.47 to 484.64.

"It was the predictability of the earnings stream that gave people confidence to pay what some considered excessive" prices for 331 stocks, said Charles White, portfolio manager at Avitar Associates.

Fed officials have repeatedly expressed concern that a strong job market will force companies to boost wages and then raise prices to compensate.

The Russell 2000 rose 3.33 to 433.04. The small-company index has risen for 10 consecutive sessions, advancing nearly 1 percent over that span.

ways, by carefully allocating your investments between your taxable accounts and your tax-deferred accounts such as IRAs and 401(k)s.

Technically, the tax-deferred accounts aren't affected by the new capital gains rates, since withdrawals from these accounts are subject to income taxes, which aren't changing. But you may want to alter your holdings in these accounts, anyway, to maximize your return by considering tax-deferred and taxable accounts.

College-bound need briefing on money management

The Washington Post

The annual off-to-college migration is under way, and millions of parents are coming face to face with the reality of college costs.

But while much attention has been paid to the cost of enrolling, relatively little has gone to the question of how students themselves handle their finances.

Sadly, experts say, many freshmen arrive on campus with only the most rudimentary knowledge of managing money. The result is a steady ripple of mini-tragedies as students bounce checkbooks or running out of cash and live on crackers and peanut butter at the end of the semester.

For most kids, "it's the first time totally on their own, and they don't know how to plan and budget," said Tahira K. Hira, professor of family finance at Iowa State University. "In most cases they didn't do that at home. We find they have not managed a bank account, at least not without their parents' help, so they keep running bad checks or running out of money."

Many colleges allow or require students, particularly freshmen, to live in campus housing and subscribe to some sort of meal plan, so they are unlikely to be invited to literally starve.

But Hira and others say young people often have only the haziest idea of the true cost of many items, especially credit, and little notion of how to live frugally and stretch their dollars. These shortcomings make college more expensive and, when problems arise, distract kids from their studies.

Hira, who has been studying students and their finances, also turned up something parents have always suspected: Financial aid offices have a different view of college costs than families do. She and her associates asked the aid office how much debt it expected Iowa State students to accumulate by graduation. The reply was $11,000. However, interviews with students and checking their records showed the amount was actually $16,000.

That wasn't all academic debt, of course. It also reflected students' increasing tendency to live beyond their means in college.

To help head that off, financial advisers suggest families about to send a young member off to college take time to review the basics of money.

Among the suggested topics:

- Budget. College life is divided into neat segments — semesters, trimesters, quarters and the like — that lend themselves to budgeting. With room and board typically paid in advance or on a set schedule, budgeting is mostly a process of allocating the remaining resources. If you are facing a four-month semester, you could simply divide the available funds by four to reach a monthly spending amount — but expenses probably won't follow that simple a pattern.

Experts recommend setting up a system that divides expenses into academic and nonacademic. Academic expenses — including books, lab fees and supplies — are likely to come predominantly at the beginning of the term. Many schools have a cash card that can be used at campus stores; one approach is to load that with what you think should cover the academics, plus a modest reserve for on-campus social expenses such as pizza, concerts and ballgames.

Beyond that, parents and students can try to work out what they think is a reasonable monthly amount of cash and set up a system for doling that out.

- Banking. A checking account provides both security and access to funds, plus the ability to pay items such as phone bills conveniently. If the student hasn't had a checking account, the family should go over how checks are written and how to keep an account balance.

...it's the first time totally on their own, and they don't know how to plan and budget.

— Tahira K. Hira, Iowa State University finance professor, on college freshmen

Banks in smaller college communities actively solicit student accounts and are likely to tolerate small balances. A big regional bank might have branches both near home and college, so the account remains convenient during summer and other vacations. Also, if parents are providing a monthly deposit, they can drop it into the account rather than mailing it.

Most checking accounts come with automated teller machine cards, which provide convenient, ready access to cash and require a personal identification number, a good security feature. Think twice, though, about the newer "check cards," which allow access to the account based on a signature. Some banks include that feature on the ATM card, and though both MasterCard and Visa promise protections, the holder's legal rights aren't as strong as with a credit card.

- Credit cards. Students arriving for registration on many campuses will find credit card companies waiting nearby, ready to sign them up. Credit cards are convenient, but as a great many students have found, they can be a trap as well.

Parents and students should discuss in advance whether the student is to have a credit card and, if so, how it is to be used and who is responsible for the bill. Parents should emphasize — and students understand — that the full amount should be paid each month. The tiny required minimum payments are tempting, but interest rates are high and the ultimate cost can be stunning. If you think you've never eaten a $100 pizza, trying charging one on your credit card and paying the minimum for a few years.

Also, only in the direst emergency should you take a cash advance from a credit card. There's typically a fee, and interest begins accruing immediately.

- Insurance. The family should review what possessions the student will have in his or her room. Today's college student might have a computer, hi-fi, and other expensive items that would represent a major loss if destroyed or stolen.

"The parents' homeowners policy will cover (a student) as long as he is still considered a member of the family household," said Janet Bachman of the American Insurance Association.

"Member of the household" generally means, "he goes to school but is coming home on vacations in the summer — in other words is not in that (college) area year-round," she said.

Typically coverage for property away from home is limited to a percentage of the personal property coverage, which in turn is a percent of the home's value. There might be restrictions on computers, bicycles and other expensive items, so it's a good idea to review the situation with your agent or insurer.

Likewise, if the student takes a car to school, coverage that he or she had under Mom and Dad's policy will continue. However, it's advisable to notify the insurer: If the student is going off to school in a rural area, the premium might drop, and if he's going to a big city the policy likely requires notification. "If there is a substantial change in the hazard," Bachman said.

- Smart shopping. Many students have relied on their parents for major purchases throughout their lives and might not have spent much time considering how to get the best price on things. College is a good place to start.

For example, nothing vaporizes money faster than long-distance telephone calls. Certainly, the phone is convenient, and it's nice to hear the voice of a parent or that certain someone. But for routine communication, it's hard to beat e-mail for speed and cost.

Students also should be conscious of how much cheaper groceries are than prepared food. For the price of a pizza delivered to the room, you could buy steak at the grocery store. Many dorms have cooking facilities and cable television. If money is getting tight — or before it does — stay in for popcorn and TV instead of going out for pizza and a movie.

Even books might be worth shopping around for. Used books have always been a good deal, though you have to check to make sure the professor isn't going to use a new edition. If you are in a large urban area and can shop around, texts might be cheaper at regular-book stores than on campus.

How to deactivate a negative employee's panic button

The Associated Press

Some employees constantly fear the worst, except everything to turn out wrong and infect everyone else in the office with their negative outlook.

Workingsmart, a newsletter published by the National Institute of Business Management, has some advice for turning a nervous employee into a more productive one. Tell these workers that you'll only listen to problems they raise if they also have a proposed solution. Set short-term objectives for these workers that will produce fast results, not months of hand-wringing. And make attitude a measure of their performance — tell negative employees they're accountable for the impact they have on co-workers' morale.

For example, at the Philadelphia Inquirer, the 401(k) plan offers a number of Vanguard mutual funds. One is the Windsor fund, which has performed well over the years but makes a relatively high annual distribution in capital gains and dividend income. If you had a fund like this in a taxable account, you'd have to pay income tax each year on those distributions, even if you had the money automatically reinvested.

A study by Mutual Funds magazine found that Windsor had relatively low "tax efficiency" of 75 percent over the last five years, meaning the average investor would keep only 75 percent of Windsor's profits over that time after paying taxes on annual distributions, assuming the fund was kept in a taxable account. That makes Windsor, and any fund like it, a good candidate for the 401(k), since you can defer all this tax until you start making withdrawals after you turn 59 1/2.

(Actually, unless you've been in Windsor a long time, the only way to get into it now is through a tax-deferred account like a 401(k). But the principal would be the same if you were considering a fund like Windsor that you could put in either a taxable or tax-deferred account.)

Another option in the Inquirer's 401(k) is the Vanguard Index 500 fund, also a top performer. As a passively managed fund that simply buys stocks in the S&P 500 and holds them, it doesn't incur many short-term profits. An average investor who owned shares in this fund in a taxable account over the last five years would have kept 92 percent of the profits after paying annual taxes, the study found.

And that's where it should be kept — in the taxable account. Putting the Index 500 fund in a 401(k) wouldn't get you much of a tax benefit, since you don't have to pay much annual tax anyway.

So an investor who's interested in both the Windsor and Index 500 funds, could do best by investing the maximum allowed in Windsor through his 401(k), since the Windsor fund can benefit most from the tax deferral. Then you could invest in the Index 500 in an ordinary taxable account.

Adviser: Don't regulate Net phone calls

WASHINGTON (AP) —

For now, the government should not regulate telephone calls over the Internet despite pleas from some small long-distance companies, the Clinton administration's top telecommunications adviser said Thursday.

"Washington at this point has no need to regulate. We do have a need to understand," said Commerce Department Assistant Secretary Larry Irving, whose testimony before the National Telecommunications and Information Administration organized a conference here on Internet phone technology.

"We are not holding this forum with any initial steps toward regulation or oversight," he added. Worried that the new communications may cut into profits, a group of small long-distance companies, the America's Carriers Telecommunications Association, has asked the Federal Communications Commission to order makers of Internet phone technology to stop selling software that allows people to make such calls.

The group also wants the government to regulate Internet phone providers like traditional telephone carriers, meaning they would have to pay fees to support affordable telephone service for low-income and rural people and their services would be subject to state and federal regulation.

The FCC has not yet acted on the petition, filed in March 1996.

International or long-distance calling over the Internet is much cheaper than conventional phone service. Because the call travels over data networks rather than public telephone networks, the caller doesn't have to pay long-distance or international charges, just the price of the Internet service.

Weather cooperates, contributes to slow fire season

BOISE (AP) — What has happened to the Forest Service smokejumpers stationed at Grangeville in central Idaho is pretty typical of the summer throughout the West.

"We had a three-day fire season," said Randy Dornan, deputy chief of the fire staff at the Nez Perce National Forest. "We had three days in which we had quite a bit of activity" in late August, he said. In that period, his crew of about 25 smokejumpers battled 77 fires reported on the Clearwater National Forest and another 60 on the Nez Perce.

Other than that brief period of frenzied activity, it has been a slow year, thanks in part to weather conditions that didn't lead to a lot of forest fires.

Across the region, the dry lightning storms that usually trigger huge numbers of forest fires this year have been accompanied by rain. Also, much of the region had a wet spring, leaving soil and vegetation with good moisture content.

The National Weather Service meteorologists at the federal government's firefighting center in Boise track lightning storms closely. Meteorologist Rick Ochso said a "good, heavy, active day" that can be 60,000 to 70,000 strikes.

Most don't result in fires and when accompanied by rain, few do.

"We haven't had the dry lightning outbreaks that we have had from time to time," he said.

Although the fire season usually tapers off after Labor Day, Ochso said the West isn't out of danger.

"We do have a lot of potential for fire, especially in California," he said.

"It is becoming more and more unlikely that we will have anything that is particularly bad this season."

—Winston Wiggins,
Department of Lands

On Friday, the Boise fire center, which coordinates fire suppression efforts for all federal agencies, said there were 34 fires in Western states on state lands and 28 on Forest Service land. The 18 fires burning in northern California were by far the largest contrast but there were no large fires. Alaska by far has the most land covered by fire this year. The state had fires on 833,991 acres of Bureau of Land Management land, 761,000 on Forest Service land, just under 300,000 on state land and a total of 1.9 million acres.

Nationally, it has been an average fire year, with fewer fires reported than the 10-year average but a little more acreage burned than the average.

Lorraine Buck, assistant chief for external affairs at the National Interagency Fire Center at Boise, said 49,801 fires have been reported to the center, compared with a 10-year average of 60,095. About 2.7 million acres of federal land have been involved in fires, just above the 10-year average.

For all of last year, 79,107 fires were reported, covering just over 4 million acres.

"We are not going to get as bad as that past year," Buck said. "The fire season is sort of winding down. We would need a radical shift in weather predictions."

The state treasury on Idaho might benefit from the small number of fires. It can be expensive to protect the state's 2.6 million acres of land. Three years ago, the bill was more than $1 million.

So far this year, the state has spent about $473,000 on 234 acres covered just 744 acres, said Winston Wiggins, assistant director of the Department of Lands.

"It is becoming more and more unlikely that we will have anything that is particularly bad this season," Wiggins said.

State educators question popular proposed charter school legislation

MOSCOW (AP) — About a dozen public school board members, administrators and teachers told an interim legislative committee they are leery of its proposal for allowing creation of charter schools.

President Clinton, Gov. Phil Batt, the Idaho Education Association and the National Education Association support creating charter schools as a way to encourage innovation.

"About 700 charter schools are operating in 29 states, free from many requirements imposed on public schools in an effort to help them meet local education needs."

"This is popular legislation," Moscow School District Superintendent Jack Hill told the legislative panel Thursday night at the second of its seven public hearings across the state. "It narrows deregulation and market-faire impulses."

Yet he said the proposal might end up diverting much-needed funding for public schools and running afoul of the Idaho Constitution. "I realize it's fashionable to jump on the bandwagon, but I caution a careful review."

Under the draft legislation, charter schools could be created through conversion of nonsectarian private schools with the approval of the state superintendent of public instruction. They also could be established inside existing public schools with the endorsement of local school boards.

Contracts would spell out how the schools would deliver a test, nationally required through education. Ten charter schools could be created in the first year of the bill, 20 schools in the second and an unlimited number after that. Senate Education Chairman Gary Schroeder, a Moscow Republican, said he favors adding language to the proposal to ensure creation of charter schools does not result in reduced funding for existing public schools.

Under the proposed legislation, charter schools would get the average amount of state and property tax money public schools get for each student. Schroeder said about $100 million in federal money is available for charter schools, and Idaho plans to apply for some of that money.

Moscow Junior High School teacher Dan Leonard said he favors creating charter schools inside existing public schools to allow local school boards to respond to local needs. But he said the interim committee should strip the provision granting the state superintendent authority to authorize conversion of private schools into charter schools.

Dennis Uhrman, a teacher at Lewiston High School, said the public wanted decisions made at the local school district level when he helped rewrite the state's Public Employees Law and reduce their number from 1,500 to 375.

IDAHO IN BRIEF

Crews hope to open U.S. 95 near Riggins

RIGGINS — Crews will begin clearing Idaho's only north-south road route at once from the rockslide on U.S. Highway 95 has stabilized, Idaho Department of Transportation officials said Friday. The slide happened at about 7:45 a.m. Thursday, 15 miles north of the Salmon River crossing, Idaho State Police said. It was about 300 yards wide and 30 feet deep.

The rockslide had been raining for a few weeks. It is the same place that mud and rocks slid down the route around Thanksgiving last year, a police dispatcher said.

A detour built after last year's slide also was buried Thursday night.

Feds looking into home-built plane crash

NAMPA — It could take months for the National Transportation Safety Board to determine what caused the crash of an experimental airplane which killed its Boise pilot.

Lei Harris, 51, was trapped in the burning wreckage Tuesday night near the Nampa airport. The craft had struck a business major construction.

Harris built the Zen Air Zenith two-seater during the past three years in his garage, according to his obituary.

One witness told airport director Jerry Wilda the plane dove into the building after making a left-hand turn at 200 feet.

Man dies of knife wound to the chest

RIGGINS — An investigation was under way into the death of a man who was stabbed in the chest in his home.

James A. Schneck, 30, was pronounced dead Thursday at McColl Memorial Hospital. He was stabbed about midnight Wednesday, Idaho County Under Sheriff Jon Stroop said.

No arrests had been made, Stroop said.

Tribe, utility study sturgeon on Snake River

LEWISTON (AP) — Lower Snake River sturgeon will be the focus of attention for fisheries biologists working on two separate projects this fall.

The Nez Perce Tribe is studying sturgeon from Lower Granite Reservoir upstream to Hells Canyon, and Idaho Power Co. will study the huge prehistoric fish as part of a project that began in 1991 near the company's Upper Salmon Dam west of Twin Falls.

The study is an attempt to learn more about how sturgeon are using Lower Granite Reservoir and the lower Snake River, said Nancy Hoelle, the biologist overseeing the Nez Perce project.

The Idaho Power study involves a 59-mile stretch of river from Hells Canyon Dam downstream to the mouth of the Salmon River.

The effort to learn more about the sturgeons' health, habitat and the impact of hydroelectric dams is part of the company's bid to win approval of its federal licenses to operate three Hells Canyon dams, which expire in 2005.

Men plead guilty as accessories in Freeman incident

BILLINGS (AP) — An Arkansas man and a Montanan involved in the 1996 standoff between the antigovernment Freeman men and the FBI pleaded guilty Tuesday to federal charges of being accessories after the fact.

Stewart Waterhouse and Casey Clark entered their pleas in U.S. District Court under agreements with prosecutors, preventing a trial date for Ramsey to be set.

Waterhouse, from Oage, Ark., pleaded guilty to one count of an indictment. A charge that he was a fugitive in possession of a firearm is expected to be dismissed at the time of sentencing.

Waterhouse faces a maximum of 15 years in prison and a $500,000 fine. A sentencing date has not been set.

Federal prosecutors charged that several days after the standoff began, Waterhouse sneaked onto the Freeman ranch by avoiding a police roadblock, and then served as an armed watchman for about a month. Prosecutors also said Waterhouse knew the Freeman were issuing worthless money orders.

The standoff between the Freeman and the FBI lasted 81 days, ending peacefully on June 13, 1996.

Clark, 22, pleaded guilty to being an accessory after the fact in the interstate transportation of stolen property, including a motorcycle used at the Freeman compound.

Under an agreement with prosecutors, the government agreed to recommend he be sentenced to time already served, plus two years of supervised release. Clark, who is from the Jordan area, recently was released from custody after spending 435 days in the Yellowstone County jail.

Waterhouse remained in jail Thursday after asking U.S. District Judge James Burns to let him be under house arrest and electronic monitoring while he awaits sentencing. Waterhouse, who is in his late 30s, said he wishes to be in Hawaii, where he has relatives. U.S. District Judge James Burns took the request under consideration.

Before a penalty can be imposed, the court must receive a presentence report. Preparation of such reports usually takes about three months.

Some two dozen people were charged in connection with the standoff.

Funeral set for mining magnate

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Funeral services were set for today for Page Preston Blakemore, one of the West's primary uranium speculators and leading organizer of Utah's historic San Francisco Mining District.

Blakemore, 78, died Labor Day.

He was renowned for his mining acumen and lifelong passion for chemistry, mineralogy and geology.

Brush tied to Ramsey investigation

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — The piece of wood used to strangle JonBenet Ramsey was a broken paintbrush, the rest of which was found in her mother's art supplies, Denver newspapers reported Friday.

The 6-year-old beauty queen was strangled with a garrote — a stick with a cord attached, according to the coroner's report released last month. The wooden stick was "irregularly broken at both ends, and there are several colors of paint and apparent glistening varnish on the surface," the report said.

Citing unidentified sources close to the case, the Rocky Mountain News and The Denver Post said the rest of the paintbrush was found among Patsy Ramsey's art supplies.

Police spokeswoman Leslie Aaholm had no comment on the reports.

JonBenet was found dead in the family's basement Dec. 26.

Investigators have also found a legal pad believed to have been used to write the $118,000 ransom note and an aborted "practice" note. Handwriting samples have eliminated JonBenet's millionaire father, John, as the note's author, but samples from the girl's mother were inconclusive.

The Ramseys have not been ruled out as suspects, and they have sharply criticized the police investigation, now in its ninth month.

The latest criticism came after the entire ransom note was made public Wednesday. The Ramseys blamed police for the leak, an allegation denied by investigators.

"If this wasn't authorized by the command staff, then they have lost control of this police department," Ramsey attorney Hal Haddon said.

Aaholm said an inquiry into the source of the leaks would disrupt the criminal investigation.

License check leads to charges

LIBBY, Mont. (AP) — A 53-year-old man arrested this weekend after a routine fishing license check has been charged on theft and burglary warrants from five states.

Authorities said the arrest also sparked a two-state investigation into a possible murder near Mesa, Ariz.

Lincoln County, Montana, officials said five fugitive warrants were issued against Robert Bradley Corle for theft and burglary. He is wanted in Montana, Oregon, South Dakota, Colorado and Arizona and was being held in the Lincoln County jail.

A detective in Yuma County, Ariz., said officials there are investigating the disappearance of a Washington man who was last seen camping near Mesa. Corle was driving the pickup truck that apparently belonged to the missing man.

James Ramsey, 67, has been missing since January 1997. Yuma County detective Dianne Brooks said Montana authorities called her after Corle indicated he may have been involved in the disappearance.

Train cars derail in northern Idaho

BONNERS FERRY (AP) — Seventeen freight train cars derailed north of here Thursday, forcing rail traffic to detour to another route, Union Pacific Railroad said.

No one was injured in the morning accident, the railroad said. Seventeen of the train's 73 cars jumped the track, and several were overturned.

Only one of the derailed cars was loaded, and no contents were spilled, the railroad said.

The cause of the accident was under investigation. Crews were working to remove the derailed cars and to repair 200 feet of derailed track.

FERTILIZER PLANT FIRE THREATENS EXPLOSION

Above, fireman Brent Johnson of Murtaugh is attended to after being overcome with heat while battling a fire that broke out at the Valley Chemical and Fertilizer plant in Milner Friday afternoon. Johnson was treated at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center and released.

At right, Rock Creek Fire District firefighters inspect the Valley Chemical and Fertilizer plant in Milner after extinguishing a blaze sparked by welders working in the building Friday afternoon.

Blaze sends firefighter to hospital

Firefighters keep flames from spreading, avert explosive chemical reaction

By Gregory Hahn Times-News writer
MURTAUGH - A fire inside a fertilizer plant near Milner Dam Friday threatened to cause a chemical explosion until firefighters contained the blaze, but the incident sent a Murtaugh fireman to the hospital with heat exhaustion. Brent Johnson collapsed to his knees soon after leaving the mill building. He spent several minutes trying to recover in the shade on the north side of the plant before fire district medical technicians gave him oxygen and called an ambulance. He was taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center and released before 6 p.m., said a hospital spokeswoman. The fire started at about 2:30 p.m. when some workers were welding in the Milner plant of Valley Chemical and Fertilizer, said Commander Jerry Morton of the Rock Creek Fire District.

"As long as ammonium nitrate and sulfur stay apart, we're safe," said Jerry Morton, fire district commander. A large white tank held sulfur above the one-story section of the plant where the fire began. A cache of ammonium nitrate was nearby. When combined, ammonium nitrate and sulfur can trigger a chemical explosion. "As long as those stay apart, we're safe," Morton said as around a dozen firemen worked on and around the small plant to make sure the fire hadn't spread. Smoke continued to trickle from the plant's vents until almost 4 p.m. It was unclear how many workers were in the building when the blaze began, or how much destruction the fire caused. The fire had blackened portions of the plant on the outside, but Morton said damage in the building appeared minimal. Unemployment rate signals slow down

The job picture in the Mini-Cassia area suffered because of layoffs, but the August rate doesn't reflect it. Because the unemployment survey was taken in mid-August, the jobless rate doesn't count the massive layoffs at the J.R. Simplot Co. plant in Heyburn, McDonald said. Later in the month, the potato-processing operation began laying off 175 workers. In Cassia County, 589 people were not working out of a 10,089-person work force. In Minidoka County, 716 people were out of work in a job force of 10,589, the department said. Statewide, the seasonally-adjusted rate for Idaho is forecast at 5.2 percent for August, up three-tenths of a percentage point from July and one-tenth of a percentage point from August 1996. The national unemployment rate was 4.9 percent, up ever so slightly from the previous month.

Leaseholder lashes out at rent hike

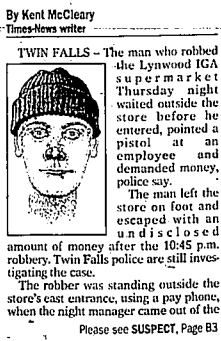

PICAGO - One of the leaseholders for a lakeside cabin site in central Idaho's Sawtooth National Forest lashed out on Friday at the federal proposal to increase her annual rental payment more than 20 times. Katie Breckenridge, who runs the B Bar B ranch, suggested that the government was breaking faith with three generations of her family by deciding to boost the lease payment for her lot on Pettit Lake from $1,200 to $25,000, based on a new appraisal. "The federal government has put a gun to my head, stolen my heritage and ambushed my heart," Breckenridge said in a statement. "I am one of many Idaho residents who have become the victims of bureaucracy." Breckenridge is among the holders of 182 federal land leases in the forest who were notified by certified mail over the past week of dramatic increases in their annual rents beginning Jan. 1, 1998. The "current rents" are based on appraisals made in 1978. Lease holders have 45 days to appeal by obtaining independent appraisals of their tracts and then reconciling any differences between them and the government's or splitting the cost of a third appraisal with the Forest Service. The yearly rental is 5 percent of the appraised value, adjusted annually to reflect inflation. The Sawtooth National Forest was the first to complete the reappraisals called for under regulations negotiated with leaseholders and others during the late 1980s and early 1990s. Reappraisals of the other 15,000 national forest-leased tracts for recreational lands around the country will be completed within five years. The General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, reported

Suspect sought in IGA robbery

TWIN FALLS - The man who robbed the Lynwood IGA supermarket Thursday night waited outside the store before he entered, pointed a pistol at an employee and demanded money, police say. The man left the store on foot and escaped with an undisclosed amount of money after the 10:45 p.m. robbery. Twin Falls police are still investigating the case. The robber was standing outside the store's east entrance, using a pay phone, when the night manager came out of the store. Please see SUSPECT, Page B3

Commissioners approve budget

By N.S. Nokenkvent
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Twin Falls County commissioners approved a $20.5 million budget, but not before publicly rejecting a plea for more money to control black flies.

The plea came Friday from state Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, who was speaking as an ordinary citizen, he said. Noh was the only member of the public to comment on the new budget.

The flies, about one-fifth the size of a common housefly, generally don't bite people. But they swarm around and get into eyes, nose, throats and ears of folks in their backyards or in the outdoors.

Like mosquitos, the gnats need animal blood to complete their reproductive cycle. They seem to prefer livestock. Noh is a sheep rancher and has his herd in the South-Hills south of Hansen.

The nasty gnats attack the animals' ears and can make them crazy and hard to handle. They also bother cattle and horses, often turning their ears into a bloody mess. And they are suspected of carrying viral livestock infections.

The problem with black flies became severe in 1970 when the Twin Falls Canal Co. began draining the canal in the winter, killing the naturally occurring nematodes that had kept the black flies in check. Noh said.

The canals are a prime breeding ground for the nasty gnats. They lay their eggs on weeds in moving water. The larvae attach to weeds along the edges of the stream and feed on microscopic organic matter carried by the water.

With the help of the University of Idaho, the source of the flies "was discovered and an effective treatment was started. Noh in the past has shouldered the bill for the treatment.

Also known as buffalo gnats, the flies acquired an immunity to the chemical used to kill them. By 1992 the chemical killed only 20 to 30 percent of the flies.

The chemical has been replaced by a biological agent which kills up to 99 percent of the flies. But it is expensive - a single application costs about the same as a whole season's worth of the chemical agent. And, several applications are necessary.

The county has included $20,000 for black fly control in the 1997-98 budget passed Friday. But that only pays for treatments partway through the season.

Noh urged commissioners to find some more money somewhere to continue the control program. The county is in a better position to raise money for the program than any group of individuals, and it would benefit most Twin Falls County residents, Noh said.

But the 3 percent growth cap on the county's ability to levy property taxes doesn't leave a lot of wiggle room, Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said.

Earlier this week Hempleman said commissioners didn't feel they could afford any more.

"If the livestock industry is concerned, let them come up with some money," he said.

After Noh's comments, the commissioners, passed the budget.

Commissioner Carla Reed seconded the motion that brought it to a vote, but she voted against the new budget. The budget includes raises for all county employees, including an annual $1,400 pay increase for commissioners. She said she felt uncomfortable voting herself a raise, she said. Commissioners now make $34,281 - with the raise they will make $34,681.

Though she was outvoted, Reed can refuse the raise by notifying the county's payroll department if she wants to, County Clerk Bob Fort said.

Commissioners put off action on a money-saving proposal that would offer incentives to department heads to save money by letting them keep most of what they save.

Times-News staff writer N.S. Nokenkvent can be reached at 733-0931, Ext. 237.

Police charge Twin Falls man with assault

TWIN FALLS - A Twin Falls man is charged with aggravated assault after police say he pointed a cocked revolver at his son-in-law during a dispute.

Bert Westley Rüdiger, 65, was arrested Tuesday by Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies after he called 911 dispatchers and told them he had just assaulted his son-in-law, sheriff's department reports say.

The incident occurred during a dispute over a phone bill run up by the man's grandson, the report said. The son-in-law, Mike D. O'Neill of Twin Falls, was angry about the bill, and Rüdiger's daughter, Felicia O'Neill, called him to say they would take care of the bill for Rüdiger, the report said.

Mike O'Neill told deputies Rüdiger drove up to their house and said he was not happy with them and pointed the handgun at him. Mike O'Neill said he returned to his house and called deputies, the report said.

Rüdiger went back to his truck and apparently called 911 from there, the report said. Rüdiger was arraigned on the charge Wednesday, and released on his own recognizance, court records say.

Check history allowed in embezzlement case

BURLEY - Checks that Downa Warr cashed and recorded, other than the five at the center of a pending embezzlement trial, will be allowed as evidence at her trial, Judge George Graman Jr. ruled Friday in Fifth District Court.

Prosecutor Steven Bywater said he may want to prove "evidence of a total course of conduct" that began when Warr started working for Richard Kechter of Westwind Farms in 1989. She pleaded innocent last May to five counts of grand theft and five counts of false entries into record books.

Warr's attorney, Raymundo Pena, said he was concerned about prejudicing the jury by alleging that former actions were crimes. If she was given permission, by Kechter, her former lover, to cash these checks, argued Pena, then her actions were not crimes.

Warr, who was not present in the courtroom, worked for Kechter as a secretary and bookkeeper. Her trial is set for Sept. 15.

Suspect pleads guilty in L and L case

BURLEY - In a plea agreement Friday, Julio Reardon Rodriguez Jr. pleaded guilty to one count of lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor under the age of 16.

Rodriguez admitted to having been on drugs during the time the acts occurred. Sentencing is set for Oct. 17. Although the State is recommending an abuse treatment program, and no more than a prison term of 18 months to five years, suspended. The crime carries a maximum of life in prison.

DUI suspect begins 180-day sentence

BURLEY - An emotional Kenneth Wayne Ellsworth was taken into custody in Fifth District Court Friday.

Ellsworth pleaded guilty to aggravated driving under the influence, in connection with a July 31 accident.

During pre-sentencing discussion, Ellsworth, who begins serving a 180-day sentence pending further evaluation, admitted to having used methamphetamine off and on for the past 15 years. District Judge George Graman Jr. also ordered Ellsworth to pay $19,980 in restitution and court costs.

Cassia board chairman steadily improves

Cathy Bowen

BURLEY - School Board Chairman Bruce Bowen's recovery is on a steady incline after an August farming accident left him with an incomplete spinal cord injury.

After several weeks of heavy fall on his back and neck on Aug. 7, he was flown to the Church of Latter Day Saints Hospital in Salt Lake City, where he'll remain for at least a few more weeks, his wife Cathy said Friday.

Just five days after the accident, Bowen was moved from intensive care to the rehabilitation unit where he continues to progress, especially this last week.

"He's done something new every single day this week," husband has made in less than a month.

"He's got feeling in his fingers and his upper body so we're all very, very encouraged," Morley said. "Bruce is really starting to make some large steps."

Vice Chairwoman Connie Meade has stepped in to take over the board in Bowen's absence and will do so until he's able to come back. Although it's still unknown when that will be, Morley said the district has no plans to replace Bowen.

"The other four members are doing just fine," Morley said. "And we make contact with Bruce to fill him in on what's happening and to get his input. We will expect him to return."

Cathy Bowen said the cards, phone calls and words of support from people "back home" have made a huge difference to the whole family.

"All the encouragement has really helped," Cathy Bowen said. "We want people to know we're missing them and we're all excited to go home."

Storm winds cause wreck, trip alarms

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Friday-night storm winds kicked sand in the face of drivers, causing one accident at the intersection of U.S. Highway 93 and U.S. Highway 30.

Windblown sand and dust obscured vision at the intersection, and contributed to a rear-end collision, Idaho State Police reports say.

A car driven by Marvin Fallon, 63, of Boise, ran into a car driven by Michael Donnelly, 37, of Twin Falls, at 7:41 p.m. No injuries were reported in the wreck.

Dispatchers at Southern Idaho Regional Communications Center recorded 208 calls in eight hours Friday afternoon.

At least 30 firefighters responded to several alarms, but all the calls turned out to be unfounded - alarm systems tripped by the thunder and lightning, fire reports say.

Lightning started a tree fire in Jerome and a small grass fire on the north shore of Shoshone Falls, but both fires were controlled, fire reports said.

Farmers, ranchers air views before federal commission

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) - Farmers and ranchers appearing before a federal commission on small farms offered everything from complaints about packing companies to suggestions to promote organic farming.

"Dozens of people testified in New Mexico during the four of seven hearings throughout the country by the recently formed National Commission on Small Farms, which is assessing rural problems.

"We're not just another rubber stamp," said commission vice chairwoman Kathleen Kelley, who with her husband runs a small farm near Meeker, Colo.

Recommendations from the panel will go to Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman, who will pursue ways for small ranches and farms to get a fair chance in the marketplace and to make enough profit to stay in business.

Four cattlemen complained about an overwhelming influence on price and availability of beef by four packing companies.

Computer theft won't compromise juvenile records

By Kent McCleary
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The theft of a judge's laptop computer won't compromise confidential juvenile records.

Magistrate Judge John Varin used the computer to track juvenile offenders he handles.

Varin reported his computer, stolen from the Snake River Youth Center courtroom between Aug. 28 and Tuesday, according to Twin Falls police reports.

Password protections will keep whoever took the computer from accessing those records, Varin said.

Losing the computer, which was sitting on the judge's bench, is a hassle, Varin said.

"It makes it more difficult. I'm able to use it up on the bench," Varin said. "I can get the same information by talking to probation officers and the secretary. It just slows us down."

Varin is Camas County magistrate judge, but travels between counties to concentrate on juvenile cases. The portable computer was purchased to allow Varin access to a database on all offenders, juvenile justice officials have told The Times-News.

Juvenile cases have been closed to the public except with a judge's permission. A change in state law and Idaho court rules went into effect July 1, has opened most cases to the public, but only after the defendant's initial appearance.

Judges may still rule cases sensitive to the child and close them to the public.

School district refuses to pay contractors for down time

By Karen E. Nalczinek
Times-News writer

RUPERT - The Mihidoka County School District is refusing to pay a Boise company $150,000 for five days of workers' sat idle after asbestos removal halted the company's demolition of Pershing Elementary School.

C&C Salvage & Demolition signed a $32,000 contract with the district earlier this summer to remove the 79-year-old Pershing building. A few days into the demolition, workers discovered asbestos in the school's floor, so they had to stop working.

An abatement company was brought in to remove it, but because C&C Salvage's equipment was down for five days, the company wants some compensation.

"You just can't hold a crowd there, feed and house them and expect them to OK," C&C Salvage owner Gatus Cunningham said.

They were 170 miles away from

home so it wasn't like we could just sit back and let it go."

District legal advisor Brent Tingey said they weren't going to pay the additional money because the building had already been checked and cleared of asbestos by the Environmental Protection Agency before demolition even began.

After C&C Salvage found more asbestos, the district brought the abatement company back to remove it, but Tingey said the delay wasn't the district's fault.

"As far as the district's concerned we hired a company to remove the asbestos and if there was some they didn't get, then they're responsible for the downtime," Tingey said. "We're going to pay the amount under the contract but we're not going to pay any additional money."

After finding out the district wasn't going to pay him, Cunningham said he did not know what steps he would take, next.

store to empty a pop machine, according to Twin Falls police reports.

The robber followed the manager back into the store and ordered the manager to close the doors, the report said.

The robber opened his sweat jacket, pulled out a semi-automatic handgun, ordered the manager to the office, and demanded money, the report said.

One other employee was in the store at the time, the report said. That employee saw the robber, then went into the back of the store and called 911, the report said.

The robber left the store while the employee was calling police, the report said. He fled north, down an alley, crossed to Blue Lakes Boulevard and was last seen at Spruce Avenue, police said.

Twin Falls police tracked the man with dogs, but lost the track, the report said.

Police describe the robber as a Hispanic man about 35 years old, 6 feet tall, 200 pounds. Police say the robber wore blue sweat pants, a blue sweat coat and a brown ski hat that he pulled down over his face before entering the store.

Twin Falls police ask anyone with information on the robbery to call Detective Felix Garcia at 736-2214 or 736-2212.

Rent

late last year that undervaluation of the federal lot was costing the government and counties across America tens of millions of dollars a year. The Forest Service says the reopportunity should move rents to market value, ending taxpayer subsidies.

In the Sawtooth alone, annual revenue from the 182 tracts will soar from less than $100,000 to $800,000 if the government appraisals hold. Some leases will increase 40 times from just over $200 to nearly $5,000 a year.

The Forest Service said that if leaseholders refuse to pay the higher charges, they can either sell their cabins to someone who will or remove the improvements from the land.

Breckenridge did not say what she or other leaseholders specifically intended to do, but she indicated that they would not simply give in to the higher charges.

"Seventy-five years ago, my grandparents cleared a path around the south side of Pettit Lake to build a summer cabin," she said. "The Forest Service ranger told them to 'pick a spot' and let him know what they build - all done on a handshake agreement."

"Our family has a long history of cooperation with the Forest Service," she said. "I am committed to working with local ranchers, cabin owners, hikers and campers in finding a solution whereby everyone is a winner."

Movers load belongings from Ariz. Gov. File Symington's office at the State Capitol in Phoenix onto a truck Friday. Symington will officially leave office today at 5 p.m., compelled to resign after his conviction on fraud charges.

Hull takes over as Symington's resignation becomes official

PHOENIX (AP) — The change at the top took place almost imperceptibly, as File Symington's resignation as governor became official Friday, and power passed to his Secretary of State, Jane Hull.

The only sign of the transition was a pair of moving vans in a Capitol driveway. Symington had packed up his mementoes and slipped out Thursday night, the day after he was convicted of fraud.

On Friday, movers carted off furniture, paintings from his extensive art collection and dozens of boxed belongings from his ninth-floor office.

His resignation became official at 5 p.m. Hull, a fellow Republican, passed the hour without ceremony, instead scheduling her swearing-in for Monday.

Hull, 62, becomes the second woman to hold the office in 85 years of statehood. Democrat Rose Mofford served out the term of Republican Gov. Evan Mecham after he was impeached and removed from office in 1988. Symington left the Capitol for good on Thursday, swept out by his conviction on seven federal fraud charges after 6 1/2 years as governor.

A jury Wednesday found he lied to get millions in loans to shore up his collapsing real estate empire. Symington planned to ask a judge to set aside his conviction before he is sentenced Nov. 10. He theoretically faces more than 100 years in prison and millions

"The economy is good in Arizona, but it's good all over. I think you're going to see that left the state in a pretty big mess in many areas."

— Bruce Merrill, journalism professor in fines, but legal experts say it's more likely he'll serve at least 18 months in prison.

Symington won election in 1991 by portraying himself as a successful businessman who would run Arizona like his development empire. While that venture failed — Symington filed for personal bankruptcy in 1995, listing debts of nearly $25 million — his fate's economy hummed like an air conditioner during his tenure.

Staunchly pro-business, Symington pushed tax breaks for high-tech companies that added thousands of jobs. And he and the Legislature cut income and other state taxes.

"Yes, Symington the man had business and personal problems, but Symington the governor was certainly very successful in moving the state forward in position for the next century," said Tim Lawless, vice president of the Arizona Chamber of Commerce. "As time goes forward, people will look back at the Symington administration as very good for all Arizonans," he said.

But others say history will regard Symington, the great-grandson of industrialist Henry Clay Frick, as an average governor at best.

"The economy is good in Arizona, but it's good all over," said Bruce Merrill, a political pollster and Arizona State University journalism professor. "I think you're going to see that he left the state in a pretty big mess in many areas."

Merrill cited a lingering court battle over funding for public schools, a crisis at the agency responsible for investigating reports of child abuse, unsuccessful Arizona Indian gaming issues, and environmental and transportation problems.

Hull, who spent 15 years in the Legislature and served as speaker of the House, is a conservative who says her views aren't much different from Symington's.

"The differences will be in style rather than substance," she said. Hull, a former teacher who once taught on an Arizona Indian reservation, said education will be a priority.

"I want to continue the tax-cutting. That's been great for the state of Arizona," said Hull, who is expected to seek a full term in 1998.

Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, a former Arizona judge, will administer the oath of office to Hull on Monday.

Court upholds 'don't ask, don't tell'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A federal appeals court upheld the military's "don't ask, don't tell" policy Friday and said two service members who declared their homosexuality were discharged for conduct, not speech.

"The military has a legitimate interest in discharging service members on account of homosexual conduct in order to maintain effective armed forces," the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said in a 2-1 ruling.

The court also said the military was entitled to presume that self-declared homosexuals had a "propensity to engage in prohibited homosexual conduct." That presumption can be disproven, and some have done so, the court said.

A dissenting judge said the policy "severely burdens speech."

encourages lying, and has no rational connection to military effectiveness.

The ruling upheld the discharge of a Navy officer in Washington state and reversed a judge's decision in favor of a California Army National Guard officer who challenged his discharge.

Three other federal appeals courts have also ruled that service members can be discharged for declaring their homosexuality and failing to prove that they would not engage in homosexual acts, either on or off the military base, while in service. The Supreme Court has not considered the issue itself but has denied review of one of the appellate rulings.

One of the appeals courts, the New York-based 2d Circuit, is considering another challenge to the policy. A claim that the Constitution bars the discharge of homosexuals for conduct that would not subject a heterosexual to discharge. A federal judge in Brooklyn recently agreed with that argument.

The policy was adopted by Congress in 1993 and accepted by President Clinton, who had previously proposed repealing entirely the ban on gays in the military.

Career rules prohibit inquiries into a service member's sexual orientation but allow discharge for homosexual conduct or for "propensity" to engage in homosexual conduct.

Lawyers for the two men in Friday's case said they were disappointed and would probably appeal.

Fall means cougars are on the prowl

MEDFORD, Ore. (AP) — Livestock owners and rural residents in southern Oregon are keeping a sharp lookout for increasing numbers of cougars on the prowl since Oregonians enacted a ban on hunting the big cats with rifles.

"We have three small children, and we don't let them outside alone," said Don Scott, a carpenter in the Applegate River community of Murphy, where there have been a number of cougar sightings recently. Scott carries a weapon when he is outside.

More than a dozen sightings and attacks on pets and livestock have been reported since Aug. 1 in Jackson and Josephine counties.

The trend probably will continue until the problem cougars are killed or the deer they prey upon migrate out of the high country to lower-elevation winter range in October, said John Thielen, a biologist for the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife.

Since Oregon voters enacted a ban on using hounds to hunt cougars in 1994, the numbers have been rising, from 2,500 to 4,000 statewide, Thielen said. Cougars are solitary animals that cover a wide territory, and it is difficult to find them without dogs.

Responding to increasing complaints, the Oregon Fish and Wildlife Commission this year expanded the cougar hunting season and increased the number that could be killed. However, the ban on using dogs remains in effect.

Cougars have been blamed for killing several llamas, a horse, sheep and a goat in the past year in the Dark Hollow area southwest of Medford.

Utilities agree to settlement in Spokane wildfire litigation

SPOKANE (AP) — Two Spokane-area utilities have agreed to pay more than $11 million to homeowners to settle lawsuits filed in the wake of 1991 wildfires known as "Firestorm," attorneys announced Friday.

If approved by a court, Washington Water Power Co. would pay $10.3 million and Inland Power & Light Co. would contribute $1 million to compensate plaintiffs in class-action lawsuits.

The proposed settlement involves no admission of liability by either of the utilities.

On Oct. 16, 1991, 92 fires, mostly in Spokane County, burned 35,000 acres and destroyed 114 homes. Damage estimates were $15 million. One woman died.

About 1,000 families and their insurance carriers later brought suits. Six separate trials were scheduled for next year.

Property owners alleged that faulty electrical lines and poor maintenance contributed to many of the blazes. Fire investigators found that 86 of the wind-blown Spokane area fires were started by downed wires.

The fires burned in the Spokane suburbs of Chatteroy, Nine Mile, Panderosa, Marshall, Midway and Golden Cirrus.

The proposed settlement also sets aside $300,000 for fire-safety education programs.

Bruins weather storm

Twin Falls football tames Tigers, 18-7

By Darren Clow
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Bruins came away with their second victory in as many games Friday with a little lightning and a lot of luck.

A 10-minute rain delay in the first half allowed Twin Falls to regroup from a sluggish start, and Jerome's steady stream of turnovers put the 18-7 Bruin victory in hand.

"I think we came out a little flat. They basically dominated the line of scrimmage in the first half," said Bruin coach Mark Schaal. "Maybe the break kind of woke us up."

Travis Choate completed 18- and 21-yard passes to Colton Swan and Sean Roberts, respectively, in the Tigers' opening drive. Jerome marched 91 yards and into the Bruin end zone, where the ball slipped out of Choate's hands and into Bruin lineman Sam Garner's.

The Tigers fumbled again on their second possession, but Twin Falls didn't capitalize until the third turnover of the half, when junior Jared Hobbs intercepted Choate's pass and ran 35 yards for the score.

"We got lucky on their miscues," Schaal said. "They put the ball on the ground a lot and we were fortunate enough to be right there."

After the rain delay, Twin Falls' Fernando Salinas scampered 32 yards in the final minutes of the half to put the Bruins up 12-0 with only his third carry of the game.

The Bruins weren't all lucky, as tight end and back-up quarterback Dane DeBoer limped off the field in the closing minutes.

CSI survives challenge, downs Ricks

By Karen Baumer
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It was "see what you are made of" night at the College of Southern Idaho volleyball tournament Friday.

And the Golden Eagles showed they aren't quite ready to surrender their 173-match winning streak, beating Ricks College 15-8, 13-15, 15-13 in the thriller of the Applebee's Invitational thus far.

With four earlier wins against Spokane 15-10, 15-3; Snow 15-6, 15-7; Treasure Valley 15-4, 15-7 and CEU 15-10, 15-5, CSI's gut check came in the form of its 17th win this season.

Action continues today with games beginning at 9 a.m. CSI plays Columbia Basin at 10:15 a.m. and the championship bracket of the tournament begins at noon. The format switches to the best 3-out-of-5. The championship game is slated for 6 p.m.

Ricks gave the Golden Eagles all they could handle but a long serve in game three by Matt Burningham at 14-13 gave CSI the match by virtue of quick score. In quick score every ball that hits the floor, counts as a point.

"She didn't lose the game for us. I'd rather go down with that than have them pound it in our face," said Ricks coach JoAnn Reev. Burningham's decision to go for a winning serve.

The tenseness of the match began long before that, though.

After dominating Ricks with power in game one, CSI shanked a few passes and made some errors in game two to fall behind 7-0.

A block by Shaunce Stout and Melissa Bingham took Ricks to 8-1 before the Golden Eagles started to chip away at the Viking lead.

CSI's Reneeka Gause combined on a block with Joy Sorensen to give the Golden Eagles two. A kill moment's later by Gause, another one by Flavia Gabino and a hitting error by Ricks took CSI to five.

That's when Ricks went on another run. Down 12-5, CSI's Hai Yan-Wang and Gabino took over the match. The two combined for eight kills, six assists and three blocks to pull the Golden Eagles into a 13-13 tie.

But a kill by Megan Lovell gave Ricks the final serve. Lovell followed with an ace. Then two CSI players watched the ball fall before them for the game-winner and a 15-13 tie-up game.

"We did a great job hitting back," said CSI coach Ben Stroud. "The way it ended was sad."

That's when CSI faced a possible streak-ending game.

In that game, the Golden Eagles never trailed. They were tied five times, though.

"I'm happy that we competed," Stroud said. "People play their butts off against us. Everybody plays as hard and good as possible against us every night."

Reev said that won't end any time soon.

"We're going to go at it again," Reev said. "I think Salt Lake is better than us and somebody's going to get them. I'm proud of how the kids played."

If seeding holds, Ricks and CSI should meet again tonight in the championship at 6 p.m.

In other matches Friday, Ricks beat CEU 15-6, 15-6, CHCC 3-15, 15-4, 15-10, Spokane 15-11, 15-2 and Snow 15-9, 15-10; Treasure Valley beat CHCC 17-15, 16-14, Spokane 15-10, 15-16, CEU 15-10, 15-6; CEU beat CHCC 15-9, 15-9; Spokane 15-6, 9-15, 15-3 and lost to Snow 15-12, 15-9; and CHCC lost to Spokane 15-13, 13-15, 15-5 and Snow 15-10, 15-7.

Minico blasts rival Burley, 35-14

By Karen E. Nalezinek
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The Mini-Cassia rivalry was packed with excitement and gusty winds both off huge running plays and from a mini storm that blew in midway through the game.

But unlike last week, when Minico fell victim to Twin Falls with just minutes on the clock, the Spartans rolled over Burley 35-14 on the Bobcats' home field.

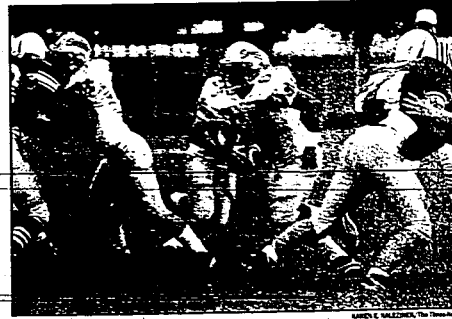

"With this rivalry game you just never know what's going to happen, so I'm just glad we stuck with it and got the win," said Minico coach Tim Perrier. "Burley came up with some really big plays in the second half, we were lucky to hang onto and get the win."

The Spartans scored early in the first on a 3-yard run by quarterback Kris Hayes and again in the second when tailback Jesse Peralez ran the ball five yards. Minico kicker Sam Knopp connected on both PAT's and the Spartans led for the break with the 14-0 advantage.

Burley struggled in the first half, gaining only one first down and leaving the negative only 21 yards passing and perrier nine yard rushing. Tyler Carson caught all three of David Plores' receptions to account for the 21 yards.

Minico's Adam Plores came out in the second half to return the kickoff 86 yards and increase his team's lead by three TDs.

With a quiet Burley crowd, Plores revived their enthusiasm when his connection with Casey Vorwaller for a 3-yard pass to put some points on the board. Burley kicker booted one through for a 21-7 ballgame with 1:33 left in the third quarter.

Minico's Jesse Peralez gets the kickoff from quarterback Kris Hayes in the Spartans' victory over Mini-Cassia rival Burley on Friday.

More high school sports — BS

The excitement was just getting started for the Bobcats as Andy Bartolucci attempted an offside kick that Burley recovered on its own 48 yard line.

The Bobcats drove 8 47 yards off carries by tailback Logan Ormond and three carries by Plores, before Plores scored on the one yard line. A good kick decreased Minico's lead by seven.

Having flashback to the Brian beating, the Spartans turned up the heat again and went on to score off an 8-yard run by Peralez who then ran it 3-yard for the 2-point conversion.

Late in the fourth and down 29-14, Burley recovered a Minico fumble with a 204 left and drove it down to their own 45 yard line before Donovan Hartley intercepted it and ran it for another Minico touchdown.

Williams wins thriller to face Hingis in women's final

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Tennis found its Tiger Woods.

Venus Williams, no longer a curiosity or a teen pumped up by hype, emerged as a legitimate claimant to the future of the women's tennis Friday when she advanced to the U.S. Open final and a showdown against Martina Hingis.

No final in Grand Slam history has featured two players as young as the 17-year-old Williams and the 16-year-old Hingis, and their meeting Sunday could well please the direction of the game for years to come.

Neither Hingis' No. 1 ranking, nor her triumph at Wimbledon and the Australian Open are intimidating to Williams.

"I've never been the type of person who is scared," Williams said. "I can't let it hold me back. I won't. This is a challenge of a lifetime. It's a tournament of a lifetime. I wouldn't be angry if I didn't win but I'm not going to go out there and be afraid, because fear holds you back. I won't let it happen."

Beads clacking, arms flailing, legs splayed, the tall, gangly Williams became the first unseeded woman finalist in the Open era and the first to go far in her debut since Fern Stover in 1978.

In a match as brilliantly played as it was thrilling to watch, Williams showed guts, stamina and a creative flair to beat No. 11 Hina Spinea 7-6 (7-5), 4-6, 7-6 (9-7). By comparison, Hingis' 6-2, 6-4 ouster of Lindsay Davenport was a boring win-again-ace.

Williams said she's a raw talent, inventing her game as she goes along after being trained by her father, Richard, since birth to become a champion. While he's stayed away — he didn't even want her to play this tournament — she's been making history.

"I worked so hard for this all my life," Williams said. "I get to play on Day 14. Hey, Daddy, I don't have to come home now because I won."

Williams convinced her father to let her come four days before the tournament.

"I'm glad I'm here. He's glad," she said. "It's not like I'm going to say I was right or he was wrong."

Williams said she's been discovering herself more with each match at this Open, coming up with shots that had never been part of her repertoire — drops of incredible touch, volleys from out of angle, running groundstrokes of balls that seem to be past her.

"I've learned a lot of things in this Open," Williams said. "I've learned to put more balls in play, not to go for winners so prematurely, not to rush things."

Michael Chang leads semifinalists at U.S. Open

NEW YORK (AP)—If all it took to win the U.S. Open was energy and determination, they could wear up the championship trophy now for Michael Chang.

birthday—Saturday, and Jonas Bjorkman. Chang has been walking a tightrope at the Open. He was two points away from losing to Pioline in the fourth set of his fourth-round match, then let Rios back in their quarterfinal match after winning the first two sets.

He is apprehensive about his game. "I'm not going to kid you or lie," he said. "It is a bit of a new situation for me because even though I'm No. 2 in the world, I don't normally go into a Grand Slam favored. This, Grand Slam was no different until Pete. So it is a little different for me."

Chang is apprehensive. Rafter is not. "I can't get myself nervous about the situation I'm in," he said. "I'm confident with the way I'm playing. If those guys can beat me with what I'm doing, then it's just a good. I have a one-in-four chance of winning. That's the way I look at it."

Kuerten defeated Sergi Bruguera for the French title. Rusedski has ridden his booming serve into his best Grand Slam position ever. Bjorkman has won four of five previous meetings, all his wins coming on hard court surfaces.

Junior wows 'em on the road, as Maris remains within reach Griffey also leads the majors with 131 RBIs, six ahead of Tino Martinez of the New York Yankees.

The Times-News

RAFT RIVER - Although Raft River fell to the Kimberly Bulldogs coach Randall Spauld, remains optimistic after his debut as head coach. "I've got to take my hat off to Kimberly. They are probably the biggest, strongest, fastest team I've ever seen," said Spauld.

Raft River had a chance to catch the Bulldogs in the third quarter when the score was 14-7, but couldn't get the momentum back to get the done.

Offensive Bulldog performances were led by Ron McClimans, who had 32 carries for 221 yards, and quarterback Scott Plevy, who went for 16 for 56 yards passing.

Jerome cross-country sweeps I-Club Invitational

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Jerome's boys and girls ran away with the team titles in the I-Club Invitational cross-country meet Friday afternoon.

"I'm Jackson of Jerome with the varsity girls. I've been in this community 40 years. I'm Jenni Nelson. Raft River runner Aaron Edwards took the boys' title, barely beating Nathaniel Castle of Gooding.

There were 55 boys and 73 girls in the meet.

JARRELL, Texas - Kevin Makal was on his way home from the airport on May 27 when the deadly tornado hit this community 40 miles north of Austin. Sitting on the side of the highway just south of town, Makal knew it was bad.

It wasn't until Travis County rescue vehicles were screaming up Interstate 35, however, when Makal, a high school art teacher, emergency medical technician and assistant volunteer fire chief, had any idea he was dead.

In the days immediately after the disaster, Makal was put in charge of the grisly task of recovering and identifying bodies. More than three, but the memory lingers.

Friday night, Makal joined thousands of other Texans celebrating the start of the high school football season. But the excitement of Jarrell High School's season opener against Bruceville-Eddy was tempered with the reality of this summer's tragedy that resulted in 27 deaths, including 12 schoolchildren and six football players.

"It will take people's minds off (the tornado)," Makal said. "I probably take a while. I know they are gone and there is nothing we can do to bring them back. We have to get on with our lives."

In memory of their teammates, many Jarrell football players had been wearing pieces of tape on their helmets with the names of their former teammates who were killed written on the tape. Those pieces of tape were removed Friday night. Players will honor their teammates with inch-thick pieces of black ribbon sewed to their uniforms from now on.

Football coach Troy Burke said a memorial wall inside the field house is planned.

"To see them leave live so soon, it's tough," Burke said. "You just have to recover because you don't have a choice. It's either God's divine providence. I've got to

Buhl 7, Middleton 0

BUHL - The Indian offense struggled with six turnovers, but the defense came through in a big way as Buhl avenged last season's thrashing at the hands of the Vikings.

Buhl's offense had its biggest threat by forcing a fumble on the 1-yard line. Four sacks by Tanner Davis and two by David Kenison contributed to the shutout as Buhl moved to 2-0.

"Our defense," they saved our bacon. We put the ball on the turf and they saw us," Buhl coach Gary Krumm said.

Buhl finally broke the ice with a 35-yard scoring strike from Art Reynolds to Jeremy Walker in the fourth quarter.

Middleton running back Jason Roorda racked up 102 yards on the ground, but couldn't hit paydirt.

Next week, Buhl hosts Gooding, another shutout winner Friday.

MURTAUGH - Murtaugh and Valley combined for 18 points in the first quarter, but couldn't get anything going after that as the Vikings won a 12-6 battle in nonconference football action Friday.

A Cape Town, South Africa, resident shows disappointment Friday after learning that Cape Town was passed over for the 2004 Olympic Games. In favor of Athens, Greece.

In minor upset, 2004 Games go to Athens

ATHENS, Greece - In a minor upset, Athens was awarded the 2004 Summer Games Friday, with the birthplace of the Olympic movement outlasting Rome in a four-ballot vote.

The International Olympic Committee, meeting in Lausanne, Switzerland, sent the Games back to Europe and nullified Greece's still standing offer of the decision to grant the 1996 Centennial Games to Atlanta rather than historic Athens.

Knocked aside along with Rome, the pre-vote favorite, were Buenos Aires, Argentina; Stockholm, Sweden; and Cape Town, South Africa.

More tests conducted in Marv Albert case

ARLINGTON, Va. - A second round of genetic tests on the underwear of a woman who accused NBC sportscaster Marv Albert of sexual assault shows his sperm was present, according to a laboratory report filed in court.

An analysis by the Virginia Division of Forensic Science matched semen stains in the woman's underwear with a blood sample taken from Albert.

The analysis, filed late Thursday, concluded that there was a 1 in 8.8 million chance that semen found in-stain in the front of the underwear could have come from anyone other than Albert. However, tests on a stain in the rear panel of the underwear showed that there was a 1 in 750 that the DNA was from someone other than Albert.

Earnhardt says he's confident of health

RICHMOND, Va. - Dale Earnhardt said Friday that doctors did everything "to her than taking me apart" in their search for the cause of last Sunday's blackout at Darlington.

"They dug and prodded and did everything they could do," Earnhardt said. "They soaked awful hard on me and looked awful deep and found nothing, which is a great relief."

Dr. Charles Bench, a neurosurgeon at Bowman Gray Medical Center in Winston-Salem, N.C., said Earnhardt had an episode that probably remains somewhat unexplained.

Bench said Earnhardt was cleared to race in Saturday night's Exide 400 at Richmond International Raceway after doctors reviewed an extensive battery of tests "to determine whether or not there was any medical condition that we could identify that ... would put him at any further risk at continuing ... as a race car driver and we could find none."

Earnhardt qualified 22nd-fastest in Friday afternoon's time trials at 123.70 mph.

Sanders doesn't play on final day with Reds

CINCINNATI - A sore Deion Sanders asked out of the Cincinnati Reds' lineup Friday, his final day before returning to the Dallas Cowboys' fall team.

Sanders strained his right hip during a 5-2 victory Thursday night over Pittsburgh and suggested that manager Jack McKeen let someone else start his last game with the Reds.

Sanders sat on the bench as the Reds rallied to beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 8-6.

BSU likely to face Wisconsin's Dayne

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Injured halfback Ron Dayne is expected to return for only 46 yards in Wisconsin's season opener, is expected to play Saturday against Boise State despite a sore neck.

The Badgers' featured rusher has been bothered by a pinched nerve in his neck throughout training camp and during the Badgers' 34-0 loss to Syracuse Aug. 24. Dayne practiced during the week without contact.

If he is unsteady against Boise State, coach Barry Alvarez said Thursday, he will be summoned to the sidelines.

Alvarez said he would not risk a season on one game. "If Ron's not ready to play, he's not going to play," Alvarez said. "I've already made up my mind that if he has serious, he won't play. It would be foolish to play him."

"It might not matter if Dayne plays or not. Boise State is a 36-point underdog, even with the 262-pound tailback on the bench. If Dayne plays little, senior Carl McCullough, a 1,000-yard rusher in 1995, and redshirt freshman Eddie Faulkner, could share the duty.

Faulkner did not play against Syracuse because of a sprained ankle.

The Badgers surrendered a kickoff return for a touchdown on the first play against Syracuse on their way to their most disheartening loss in the Alvarez era.

It was the Badgers' first shutout in an opener in 30 years.

Boise State, of the Big West Conference, built a 16-0 lead before being outscored 63-7 in the final 2 1/2 quarters in a 23-23 tie with Oregon State-Northridge.

The Broncos surrendered a school-record 643 yards, including 511 yards and six touchdowns through the air.

"We had a chance to study that game and it was a very strange game, to say the least," a BYU said.

BYU gets chance for fame, revenge against Huskies

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Coach LaVell Edwards was given an opportunity for both renown and revenge when his Brigham Young team was scheduled for a home opener against fourth-ranked Washington.

A victory Saturday would do two things for 19th-ranked BYU: extend the Cougars' national-best 12-game winning streak and wipe away the stain of the Huskies' 29-17 win at Seattle, BYU's only loss in a 14-1 campaign last year.

"They were the best team we'd played," said Edwards, embarking on his 26th season as head coach. "They were our young team, then. Now, they have a lot of people returning."

The Huskies, 93 last year, have 16 starters back eight each on offense and defense. Two names catch Edwards' attention most: Jason Chorak and Rashaun Shehee. Chorak, a senior linebacker, accounted for three of the eight sacks BYU quarterback Steve Sarkisian endured last year; classmate Shehee, a tailback, scored two touchdowns — one on a 45-yard run.

"We didn't play well and got beat by a very good team. They beat the stuffing out of us," Edwards said.

Washington is favored by a touchdown Saturday, but coach Jim Lambright puts about as much stock in that as he does the Huskies' high ranking in preseason polls.

"It's nice to be mentioned," he said. "(But) if people ask the question, 'Do you deserve the ranking you have nationally,' the answer is no."

Lambright's concern is centered at his two-deep roster — it lists five third-stringers in second-team slots, along with three walk-ons.

"It's my greatest concern," Lambright said. "The depth isn't experienced, and it's not tough enough because of (insufficient) playing time."

Shehee is more upbeat about Washington's prospects. "BYU will be more prepared this time, but so will we," he said. "We have the No. 1 offensive line in the nation. I'd stack them up against any team in the country."

Volunteers remember last visit to Rose Bowl

Combined wins services

PASADENA, Calif. — Tennessee is two weeks away from a showdown with Florida that might ultimately determine this year's national champion. The game won't mean nearly as much to the Volunteers should they stumble against UCLA Saturday.

The third-ranked Vols are two-touchdown favorites over the Bruins, but coach Phillip Fulmer and quarterback Peyton Manning remember what happened the last time the teams met at the Rose Bowl — site of Saturday's game.

UCLA dominated the first three quarters, and led 18-0 early in the fourth period before the Vols rallied, only to fall short 25-23.

UCLA opened its season by losing 37-34 to Washington State. Washington State quarterback Ryan Leaf picked apart the UCLA defense, passing for 381 yards and three touchdowns.

As if UCLA's task isn't difficult enough, the Bruins will almost surely have to face Manning and the Vols without their best defensive player, safety Shaun Williams, who sprained an ankle in practice Wednesday.

One thing the Bruins have going for them is a more balanced offense than the Vols. Cade McNown passed for 257 yards and one touchdown, and Skip Hicks gained 190 yards on 27 carries and scored four TDs against Washington State.

Clemson

VS. Appalachian State
CLEMSON, S.C. — With 18th-ranked Clemson opening at home against Appalachian State Saturday, it's time to talk football.

You can't miss the Vols-Clemson last year at this time, because of all the players' arrests, suspensions and poor performances. Clemson played poorly in its first month, losing at North Carolina (45-0), Missouri (38-24) and Florida State (34-3) last year.

"There were a wide number of distractions. It was hard to concentrate," linebacker Mond Wilson said. "We can't make excuses. It's up to us to have the best start possible."

And that's more than probable against Appalachian State, an NCAA I-AA member. Clemson has won its three previous games against the Mountaineers by a cumulative score of 1227, including a 34-0 victory in 1991, the Tigers' last Atlantic Coast Conference championship year.

College football outlook

fourth-and-inches play he converted against Nebraska in last year's Big 12 championship. It enabled him to make good on a promise that Texas would win the game.

Or, maybe it's because he is in his fifth year.

Whatever the reason, teammates say Brown is more confident, more focused and more demanding of those around him.

Ruggers will be the first to see the new Brown when Texas opens its season Saturday night in Austin against the New Jersey team.

The Knights, who went 2-9 last year and are a five-touchdown underdog, lost their opener last week to Virginia Tech 59-19.

Florida State vs. USC

LOS ANGELES — Florida State coach Bobby Bowden, a college football history buff, is looking forward to his team's first meeting with Southern California.

"I'm excited because Southern California ... has got such a great tradition," Bowden said. "When you think of great teams, you think of teams like Southern California and Notre Dame."

Southern Cal, ranked 23rd, hasn't finished higher than seventh in the national rankings since 1979, and hasn't completed a season in the top 10 during the 1990s. The Trojans needed a victory over Notre Dame in their final game to finish 6-6 last year.

The Seminoles, by contrast, have joined college football's elite over the past decade, ranking no lower than fourth in The Associated Press final poll each year since 1987.

Louisville vs. Utah

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Coach Ron Cooper wants the Louisville defensive unit to forget about its performance last week against Kentucky when the Cardinals meet Utah on Saturday.

"Don't let Kentucky beat us two weeks in a row," Cooper said of the advice he's giving the defense. "Meaning, get over it. Move on. Get yourself ready for Utah. Don't let the Kentucky loss keep our heads down and worry all over and die. We have a game this weekend."

Louisville will be going back to the basics on defense as Utah seeks consistency on offense.

Louisville's defense was ravaged for 519 total yards, including 398 through the air, in the season-opening 38-24 loss at Kentucky. Meanwhile, Utah generated 294 total yards in a 21-14 loss to Utah State.

Georgia Tech

at No. 11 Notre Dame

Cheer, cheer for new Notre Dame star Lou Holtz successor Bob Davie debuts in newly refurbished and expanded Notre Dame Stadium from 59,075 capacity to 80,225. Georgia Tech is 4-25-1 against Notre Dame and has long been fodder for great Irish numerals, most notably Rudy Ruettiger's 27 seconds of fame in the 1975 game on which a movie plot was hatched.

California at Houston

Things might not be peachy for new Cal Coach Tom Holmoe, who succeeded Steve Mann, but at least Holmoe didn't lose Jerry Rice for the season. Cal actually has a good receiver in Bobby Shaw but is breaking in a new quarterback. Houston lost to No. 15 Alabama last week, 42-17.

Indiana

at No. 7 North Carolina

The Tar Heels begin what some think could be a national title run with a tricky opener against the Hoosiers, a Big Ten mystery under new 33-year-old Coach — Garn Carnon.

No. 21 Northwestern

vs. Wake Forest

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — Wake Forest's Demon Deacons have a good idea what to expect from Northwestern Saturday.

When the Wildcats came to Graves Stadium last year, they were ranked 13th and heavily favored to beat Wake Forest. Instead, the Demon Deacons rushed for 196 yards and threw a dramatic fourth-quarter comeback for a 28-27 victory over a team that was coming off a Big Ten championship and a Rose Bowl appearance.

This time, Northwestern is ranked 21st and favored by two touchdowns.

Preachers' kids tell stories of life in the front pew

Pam Dowd, who has a home page on the Internet for victims of breast implant mishaps, survived some tough times in church as the daughter of a strict Nazarene minister.

PKs share their unique burdens, joys

TWIN FALLS — As preachers' kids tell their stories, church members can better understand their own pieces in the church-life puzzle, pieces that may help or hinder God's work.

Here are three real-life stories:

The first paragonize Pam Dowd lived in was a converted chicken coop. Her dad was very strict. Growing up in church, she sat in the second pew, while her brother sat in the front row. She was not even allowed to lean her head on her mother if she got tired during her dad's 45-minute sermons.

The first time she was ever allowed to wear an "older hairstyle" — a French twist at age 15 — a church member criticized her for it. After she was allowed to date, at age 18, she left home and married a man her father would not accept. "The marriage didn't last."

Dowd's life was shaped, at least in part, by her preacher father ("how strict he didn't really need to be") and her church ("however many people come to the church, that's how many crosses you have").

One day, Dowd found out her dad had become a Christian when she was two months old and was a recovering alcoholic. She began to understand him better — and she made peace with him.

"I was there for 25 hours when he died," she said. "I talked to him about a lot of things ... how, even though he didn't agree with decisions I made in my life, it was OK."

Though bishops in the Mormon Church are unpaid volunteers, young Brent Nelson knows what it's like to be in the religious fishbowl.

"They (church members) look to kids whose parents are leaders as more examples to see what they should or shouldn't do," Brent said.

US bishops conduct meetings and sometimes speak at church, and they take care of members of their words. But Brent said his dad always makes time for him and his brothers and sisters.

"As my parents really truly believe in what they have taught me," he added, "I love the value system our church has."

Brent said he would be willing to be a bishop someday.

"Being the child of a bishop might be harder on some kids," Nelson said, "but I'll all I've known and grown up with."

Some PKs stay in the family business

TWIN FALLS — Sometimes the stereotype of the surly, resentful preacher's kid becomes reality, sometimes the PK follows in the preacher's holy footsteps.

Either way, the job impacts the family.

Here's how Stephen H. Webb, in a 1996 issue of The Christian Century, related his experience as the son of the chairman of the elders and the best friend of the preacher's kid: "We terrorized the Sunday School teachers because we had no other way of saying who we were. We thought we owned the place, but, of course, it owned us."

Lots of preachers' kids end up in the family business.

The Rev. Bevin Vriesman is one of those who signed up on God's dotted line, like his dad before him.

"I had vowed to avoid the ministry at all costs," said Vriesman, pastor of the Reformed Church of Twin Falls. "People say PKs turn out to be preachers, missionaries or drug addicts."

Vriesman talked about living in a "glass house," moving every few years and being expected to know all the answers in church classes.

"There was a woman who, at one point, stopped attending church because she said she had said hello to me and I didn't respond," Vriesman said. "I was in third or fourth grade and, for the next few weeks, I said hello to every inanimate object in the church."

Vriesman decided to be a pastor during his senior year in college, in large part, he said, because his parents had love for God and passion for the church. Now 43, he has never regretted his decision, though he is aware of the negatives.

Vriesman's father, still a Reformed church minister, was a workaholic, Vriesman said. So he tries hard to spend time with his family, wife Lori and their four children, ages 7 to 16. Vriesman also owns his own home, and he has promised his family there will be few moves. (He's been at the Twin Falls church for 13 years.)

"And with my own kids, I've made every effort not to imply anything over and above what I believe the normative Christian should be," Vriesman explained.

Beyond that, he noted, he's just lucky to have good people in his church.

Sharon Kester, a PK who married back into the business, gives similar credit to her church.

"Our church here doesn't put expectations on me," said Kester, wife of the Rev. Jerry Kester, who pastors the Twin Falls Church of the Nazarene.

But if anyone ever does, she said, she knows how to act from experience. Her grandfather was a Nazarene pastor. Her father is a Nazarene pastor turned Methodist pastor.

"My father switched for political reasons," Kester said. "Nazarene churches were hard on their ministers back then."

The family was in the Midwest, in a church mired by internal power struggles, and Kester's father ended up leaving. He also experienced a breakdown, and one of Kester's brothers didn't move with the family, Kester said.

"We didn't know where my brother was," she said. "He didn't want to conform; I didn't mind."

Today, all three of Kester's brothers attend church. Or, as Kester put it, "We survived."

Now Kester, 42 and a Jerome High School home economics teacher, has children of her own — 12 and 16-year-olds. Moving has been hard on her kids, she said.

"But Jerry maintains a good balance, and family is really important to him," Kester said. "We are working to make church a joy and a privilege for our children."

Jimmi Sommer, a 20-year-old college graduate, recently left for the Netherlands, where she will do support work for missionaries for the Mennonite Central Committee.

Her father, the Rev. James Sommer, is pastor of the Christian Center Foursquare Church in Twin Falls. The family served a mission in West Africa for two years.

Jimmi Sommer, raised in the church and in Christian schools, even went to a Christian (Quaker) University (George Fox in Newberg, Ore.). Sometimes, other kids treated her differently.

She recalled a few saying, "We can't talk about this around Jimmi."

But once, she said, a family left the church because they thought her parents didn't have enough control over her.

"You just have to not let people's comments bother you," she has decided.

Today, she is doing church work because "I believe in God and have a relationship with God." And her family is close and loving.

"But I'm not going to have kids," Jimmi said. "I might marry, but it's hard to raise kids."

The Rev. Paul Thompson age 30, opted for both church work and children, and is even living in a parsonage.

He's the pastor of the Foothills (Southern) Baptist Church in Fairfield, where he lives with his wife and two boys, ages 6 and 9.

"My dad (also a Southern Baptist pastor) didn't protect us from anything," Thompson remembered. "He was laid back, and that helped make the ministry attractive."

Thompson thinks "distant families" cause kids to rebel, along with fathers who neglect their children and hypocrisy.

"When I was a senior in high school, I had gone to Colorado Springs to run a race on a Sunday," Thompson recalled. "The church gave my dad some trouble, but he was encouraging to me."

Thompson's dream is to someday organize a camp just for PKs.

He thinks he could really understand them.

Artist makes name illustrating Christian books for children

KnightsRider News Service

EULESS, Texas — As a little girl, Liz Bonham was determined to become a famous artist.

She's on the right track; it's just a different track than she planned. Bonham, a freelance artist who lives in Euleus, Texas, recently became an illustrator of Christian children's books. She is a rising star in a rapidly growing genre.

The first book she illustrated, "The Crippled Lamb" by Max Lucado, has sold 280,000 copies since its 1994 debut, according to figures compiled by the Evangelical Christian Publishers Association. It won the association's Gold Medal award for best gift book of that year, said Amy Williams, publisher for Thomas Nelson Publishing Co. in Nashville, Tenn., which owns "The Crippled Lamb."

Her third book, "The Priest With Dirty Clothes," about a medieval priest who falls in the mud on his way to an appearance before a king but is wrapped in clean clothes by a Christian prince, is scheduled to be released in September.

And contracts for more books are stacking up. Children's book illustration is highly competitive and tough to break into, Williams said. It is not a field that Bonham sought to enter.

She got into it accidentally, by handing out invitations to her Fort Worth gallery opening to parents of children in her Sunday school class. What Bonham didn't know was that one of the parents working for Word Publishing, an Irving-based Christian publishing house that was later bought by Thomas Nelson Publishing.

When the woman approached Bonham about illustrating, Bonham was unenthusiastic. The idea was a job to her artist's pride, she said. But she decided to give it a try, and in the process, developed respect for the taxing work.

"I have to make it (the artwork) pretty and classical so Mom and Dad'll buy it," as well as make it entertaining for children, she said. And her work has to fit the story in two ways: Not only does it have to illustrate the tale, it has to leave room for type. For each project, Bonham said, she gets a copy of the manuscript, laid out page by page as it will appear in print. Her job is to draw around the text.

Each illustration takes 20 to 50 hours, with most leaning toward the high side of that range, Bonham said. Bonham said she now considers illustrating to be her calling, a way to put her faith to work for her passion: art.

Shrine gives poignant glimpse of Cuban life

The Associated Press

EL COBRE, Cuba — Old-fashioned Christian faith and secular fervor mix easily as the shrine to Cuba's patron saint, providing a poignant glimpse at everyday Cuban life.

Neatly folded uniforms of officers of the Revolutionary Armed Forces, the official red book of the Legion of Yarey, Communists and credentials of Olympic athletes are among thousands of items placed here.

The yellow pencils of students who pressed their exvotos, and a kidney stone the size of an egg, successfully removed from a Havana woman, are also among the expressions of love and faith.

The Rev. Jorge Palma, who oversees the shrine, says hundreds of Cubans from around the country and foreign new-homes in Miami, Tampa and elsewhere travel here seeking miracles: the saving of a child's life, help in finding a husband a job, granting an elderly woman her wish to see her first great-grandchild.

Anywhere from 20 to 100 people make the pilgrimage each day.

Palma expects those visits — and interest in Roman Catholicism in general — will increase in the months leading up to Pope John Paul II's first visit to Cuba in January. The pope is to stop here when he travels to the nearby eastern port city of Santiago to celebrate Mass.

Although Catholicism has limited influence here, most Cubans still know the story of how the Virgin of Charity appeared in the Bay of Nipe near Santiago in 1628 to brothers Rodrigo and Juan de Hoyos, mulattos of mixed white and black heritage, and Juan Mearcan, a black boy of about 10.

Struggling in a storm-tossed boat, they heard a voice declare "I am the Virgin of Charity." Across the bay, they spied a wooden board carrying a statue of the Virgin Mary, dressed in a yellow gown and depicted as a nun.

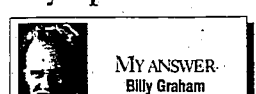

In her left arm, she carried a small baby, Jesus. In her right hand, she held a cross.

Cuban pilgrims walk from the shrine of Cuba's patron saint in Coibre, Cuba, in July. Pope John Paul II will visit the shrine during a January trip to Cuba.

Want to get the Holy Spirit within you? Here's how

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I am confused about the Holy Spirit. When does it come to dwell in us, if we are Christians? Do I have to wait and beg for the Holy Spirit to come upon me, even though I have been a Christian for many years? — MRS. N.D.

MY ANSWER - Billy Graham

DEAR MRS. N.D.: The Holy Spirit is God Himself, as He works in our hearts and lives. Jesus said, "I will dwell within us. (This is why we should not refer to the Holy Spirit as "it," for He is God, not a thing.) The Bible teaches that when we come to Christ, God the Holy Spirit has already been at work in our hearts and lives. Jesus said that "No one can come to me unless the Father who sent me draws him in ..." (John 6:44). And when we come to Christ, God the Holy Spirit comes to dwell within us. In other words, we know Christ, the Holy Spirit already lives within you, for (as the Bible says) "... if anyone does not have the Spirit of Christ, he does not belong to Christ" (Romans 8:9). God's Spirit lives within us when we know Christ — but that does not mean He is in control of our lives. What we need to do is commit our lives to Christ (for each day — not so He will save us [if He has already done that]), but so that the Holy Spirit will rule our hearts and draw us closer to God.

You do not need to beg for Him to come to live within you — but every day make it your practice to yield your life to Him and ask Him to guide you. You may not always feel His presence when you do — but He is still with you, and He will stand alongside you to help you.

Continued from C1 hours at church, and she even met her husband at a church youth event. Paul Bowman went to church all his life, too. Neither of them ever considered becoming a minister, but they didn't rebel against going to church either. When they decided to marry, their fathers jointly officiated. And yet, Paul Bowman's fish-bowl wasn't always picture perfect, especially after he left home. "My parents divorced after 40 years of marriage," he said. "I got ulcers from the divorce." But he worked through the pain. Today, the Bowmans say they understand preachers and preachers' kids better than they would have if they had not been raised by preacher dads.

Deion's faith is not for us to judge

Knight-Ridder News Service

Dallas Cowboys superstar Deion Sanders isn't joking about his newly found Christian faith. But don't expect him to be perfect.

That's the word from Bishop T.D. Jakes, a nationally televised evangelist, author and pastor of a Dallas church where Sanders recently gave a spirited Christian testimony.

"I applaud what he's done," said Jakes, whose multicultural Potter's House church in far downtown Dallas has grown phenomenally to 11,000 members since it was established a year ago.

Sanders, who also plays baseball for the Cincinnati Reds, has been attending Potter's House periodically for about a year, although he is not a member.

"My reaction to Deion is that he is sincere," Jakes said. "That doesn't mean he's perfect."

The flamboyant athlete, who is going through a divorce, shocked many recently when he appeared at a news conference wearing a diamond-studded cross and announced he is a changed man.

"I'd rather have Jesus than silver or gold," Sanders said, quoting from one of his favorite religious songs. "I'd Rather Have Jesus."

Sanders also has given his testimony at churches in Cincinnati and Atlanta.

Some have expressed skepticism about Sanders' profession of faith. But Jakes said many Christian athletes have been effective in reaching young people and others with the Christian message.

"The public has been positively impacted by men like Evander Holyfield, A.C. Green and Reggie White, who have made tremendous contributions to professional sports with an integrity and a serenity that has won respect in many circles."

Holyfield, the world heavyweight boxing champion, Green, a former Los Angeles Lakers standout now with the Dallas Mavericks, and White, an all-pro with the Green Bay Packers football team, often speak publicly about their faith.

Sanders is at the beginning of a journey, and Jakes said he fears the athlete will be so scrutinized that he won't be allowed to differ on his faith.

"All Christians develop at different rates," he said. "It's a real struggle with a high-profile person because everyone watches them. It's like having an actor learn his lines on stage. Few people, visible or not visible, can stand up to that kind of scrutiny."

Jakes pointed out that Sanders has been a born-again Christian for less than six months.

Reviews of latest releases by Chapman, Dino

Knight-Ridder News Service

Gary Chapman, "Hymns from the Ryman" CD. This 10-song CD features a unique mix of Gary Chapman's favorite hymns. He sings a few, and the rest are simply instruments.

The true impact of this CD lies in the rich history of its creation. In 1892, the Union Gospel Tabernacle was established in Nashville. It was known as "Sam's Place," named after a fiery preacher Samuel P. Jones. One night, Captain Thomas Ryan and his friends came to ridicule Jones, but Ryan had a change of heart. He had been gambling boats and vowed to build a proper place for the Rev. Jones to preach in. After Ryan died in 1904, the building became the Ryman Auditorium. In 1943, it became a stage for the legendary Grand Ole Opry.

This CD is the first in a planned series of "From the Ryman." When the "Sam's Place" concert series began, Chapman walked out to center stage before each show and sang an old hymn. This CD is an attempt to recreate the best of those opening moments.

Chapman presents a combination of some of his favorite music with some great musicians including Michael W. Smith, Buddy Greene, Ruth McGinnis, Chet Atkins and the Sam's Place Band.

Artist bio: Chapman is one of the most popular artists in Christian music today and he carries his fame over to country music. He is host of TNN's Prime Time Country and recently co-hosted the 29th annual Dove Awards.

(And yes, he is married to Christian music's mega-star Amy Grant.)

What's good about it: Good mix of hymns. Chapman adds a nice flavor to the music; his choir foundation makes it more exciting.

Dino, "Music for All Time" CD. Description: This man belongs on stage with his 9-foot rhinestone-covered grand piano and 24 energetic dancers. If you can't make it to his theater in Branson, Mo., this CD is the next best thing. While most of the songs are not what most would consider "religious," Dino says he is ministering with his music. "My highest aspiration as an entertainer and performer has always been to use what God has given me to bring light into the darkness."

You can feel the energy and excitement as "America's Piano Showman" masters such works as the medley "That's Entertainment/Warsaw Concerto/You Stepped Out of a Dream," through the Spanish classic "Malagueña" and the finale of "The Entertainer." New York, New York." He worked six months with a Broadway set designer. Hollywood costume designer and special effects experts to create what he calls the most spectacular production of his career.

Artist bio: Dino Karsonakis, known professionally as Dino, was born and raised in New York City, the grandson of first generation Greek immigrants. At the age of 3, Dino sat down at his family's piano and began picking out the melody of a song he heard in church. He eventually studied at The King's College, Juillard School of Music, and at conservatories in France and Germany. He has recorded 41 albums and has performed in front of millions of fans. He won a Religion in Media award, eight Dove Awards and was nominated for a Grammy for his instrumental album, "Chariots of Fire."

What's good about it: Exciting and bold productions. Familiar songs.

Extra: Dino spends about seven months a year entertaining audiences at his theater, the Grand Palace, in Branson, Mo.

Tiny college sticks to its urban mission

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — Side by side against every America's smallest colleges, Donnelly College seems, well, small.

Its campus is a single nine-story brick building, an old hospital gutted and rebuilt into a place of learning.

But as social and academic missions go, it may be as big as they come. Some suggest the Catholic-sponsored school is a rare gem in this struggling blue-collar city, in a country where nearly 40 percent of adults lack high school diplomas and countless more fail in their first attempts at higher education.

"We provide second chances," Donnelly President John Murry says, beaming. "I think a lot of people in academics might laugh at us, call us 'Second Chance U.' That's fine. I take it as a compliment."

Since 1919, Donnelly's mission has been razor sharp: Give inner-city students — at least half of them living in poverty — a two-year college education and the promise of a much more secure future. Students, many of whom have dropped out of college before, pay tuition when they can. But Donnelly makes an offer to those who can't: The school pays most, if not all, tuition if the student shows up to class.

More than half of Donnelly's students come from families earning less than $6,000 a year.

Numbers show Donnelly's investment in a needy student body has been a smart one. Since 1992, 93 percent or more of its graduates have gotten jobs or transferred to four-year colleges.

In May, Donnelly graduated 41 students and sent many of them to four-year schools. Next year, the school hopes to reach even more students by using money left to it by a priest dying of AIDS.

Professors and instructors aren't paid very well, but many insist Donnelly's mission — not professional pay — is what matters. The library's small collection is dusty and worn.

Donnelly is one of a dwindling number of schools with a mission that have stuck with the inner city while businesses beat a path to the suburbs.

"You're just not going to see two-year community colleges in the future. It's either you have urban prosperous businesses," says Stephen Gwinnett, marketing director at College Technical College in suburban Atlanta. "Tax dollars alone can't pay for everything."

Gospel singer Jessy Dixon, Chicago Community Choir take 'good news' music to new audiences

CHICAGO (AP) — Jessy Dixon frowns at the thought of the hard-driving, crystal clear sound he is looking for out of a group of tired gospel singers.

For two hours they have been practicing the choir music at a small storefront church on the South Side for a summer tour of Europe and South Africa. But their music this night lacks the energy and fervor that sets gospel apart from other music.

Dixon and his Chicago Community Choir were able to capture that enthusiasm on their CD, "He's Able."

"You always have to sing as if you're trying to save souls," Dixon told the 20 singers.

Dixon and his choir are riding a wave of increased interest in gospel — religious music that combines the rhythmic beat of blues, jazz and even hip-hop. Tour groups from Europe now travel to New York's Harlem and Chicago's South Side to hear the best gospel performers in its natural home, the black church.

"Gospel music is a hot entity now," says Jacquie Haselrig, a program director at Chicago's top-rated WCCF-TV, and host of its gospel program.

The past year has been particularly busy for Dixon, as Europe's love of gospel music has prompted him to make several trips there for solo performances. His choral group also has toured

And he remains in demand at home.

"I seem to be recording more and more," said Dixon, who has fourteen several gold albums and four Grammy nominations as a singer and songwriter working with such artists as Paul Simon and Diana Ross.

Dixon has become a fixture on religious television screens around the country, hosting his own syndicated music-talk show, "Celebrate With Jessy Dixon." He is featured in the "Gather Gospel Homecoming Video Series" produced by gospel composer Bill Gaither and regularly shown on the Nashville network.

Charles Morris' most-read chronicle of American Catholicism explores past, pinpoints future crises

New York Daily News

NEW YORK — In six previous books, Charles Morris has tackled some humongous topics — the Cold War arms race, the global economy, international technology, the politics of aging and big-city politics.

In his seventh, he has tackled what in many ways is the most humongous of all — the American Catholic Church, past, present and perhaps future.

In "American Catholic" (Times Books, $27.50), he has eloquently told the dramatic story of how the Catholic Church became by far the most important religious and most intense Catholic conversations with a woman I was introduced to," says Morris, "and as we talked, an open to Mario Cuomo came over. He listened for a few minutes, then asked: 'How do you pick each other out in a room like that?'"

"It was a good question," Morris says, "and it got me to thinking about Catholics as a special kind of tribe. My deal with my wife was that I don't play golf so I can spend weekends doing research."

The idea did not sell until he made the connection between his profession — he was a management consultant at the time — and the story he was wanted to tell.

"So I decided to look at the

the country, hearing his own syndicated music-talk show, "Celebrate With Jessy Dixon." He is featured in the "Gather Gospel Homecoming Video Series" produced by gospel composer Bill Gaither and regularly shown on the Nashville network.

The book, subtitled "The Saints and Sinners Who Built America's Most Powerful Church," opens with the dedication of St. Patrick's Cathedral in 1879, and just like that, the floodgates open for a procession of names and events big enough for a DeMille epic.

'Present Time' series among recent religious video releases

The Dallas Morning News

"Present Time" (Zondervan Publishing House, 45 minutes, $19.99).

An amazing laptop computer becomes the epicenter of this engaging new video series featuring real people filmed in real situations, along with some technical wizardry. Young Josh Walker receives a mysterious package that contains a souped-up laptop that displays the time of David and Goliath's awesome fight. Josh encounters virtual-reality events when Goliath winds up on his basement floor and David arrives looking for the felled giant.

The story delightfully builds as Josh and his friends face bullies at school. Josh learns convincingly from David how to deal with enemies and how to depend on God as the ultimate giant-killer. It's yet another try at the well-worn time-travel story; thankfully, this video displays fresh textures that make the dialogue and characters that make it entertaining for youth and adults.

"Animated Hero Classics: Galileo" (Nest Entertainment, 30 minutes, includes workbook, $29.95).

The life of Galileo Galilei is briefly told for young viewers: He challenged the view that Earth was the center of the universe. He believed that Earth and the other planets revolved around the sun. Galileo's view was in opposition to some church leaders' doctrine at the time. Eventually, Galileo faced the Inquisition in Rome and lived under house arrest the last eight years of his life because of his beliefs.

Producers select a key theme in this video about standing for the truth: "What good is knowing the truth if you're not willing to defend it?" Galileo asks in one scene. A song, "To Know The Truth," underscores that message, explaining that the truth must be told despite the costs.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"Familiarize yourself with the chains of bondage and you pave your own limbs to wear them." — Abraham Lincoln

"I purposely avoided a pre-emptive heart raise, hoping he'd find the spade fit," lamented an unhappy West.

"You certainly gave him enough rope," agreed East. "I too had used it to hang us."

Had West bid three or four hearts over South's takeout double, his side may well have stolen the hand. As it was, West's solid holding in spades gave him false confidence against a spade game. Worse, his final double made it easier for South to find the best line of play.

West's diamond West's heart ace, cashed his diamond ace, and led a low diamond toward dummy. West discarded a ruff would make no difference) and dummy's king won. South won a finesse to cash his grand main and West grudgingly ruffed. With nothing better to do, West led another heart for South to ruff, and South cashed his trump ace. Then South led his grand main, and West was stuck whether he ruffed or discarded. Dummy's last heart went on South's high diamond, and South continued cashing minor suit winners. West scored his three trump winners, but South scored his doubled grand for the enemy.

"Today's deal taught West an important lesson. When partner pre-empt (took two-bid) and you have good support, it's better to concede the present trick than to think about laying traps for the enemy."
