IRS girds for response to gripes

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — This week's Senate hearings into IRS abuses led Anthony Barker, a hotel worker in suburban Chicago, to pick up the telephone in the hope he could get some help resolving his own tax nightmare.

"Why am I being held accountable for doing something I had nothing to do with?" a frustrated Barker asked Fisher.

While the Internal Revenue Service can't comment on individual cases without a legal waiver, Barker claimed the agency has dismissed documents proving he didn't endorse checks at the heart of his tax dispute.

Regardless of their merits, stories like Barker's have deluged the Senate Finance Committee and the IRS after three days of hearings.

In response, the IRS and private tax-preparation specialists announced Friday a tentative partnership to help sort through taxpayer grievances and resolve them speedily.

Acting IRS Commissioner Michael Dolan told a House committee professionals licensed to represent people before the IRS have offered some of its members to volunteer without pay to screen long-standing taxpayer disputes.

Transplant patient climbs nation's highest mountain outside Alaska

The Associated Press

MOUNT WHITNEY, Calif. — Two years after her old heart gave out, Kelly Perkins put her new one to an amazing test.

She scaled the nation's highest peak outside Alaska.

No other heart transplant patient is known to have climbed 14,692-foot Mount Whitney, a daunting trek up narrow, rocky trails even for those with no health problems.

Perkins, 35, made the rugged, 22-mile roundtrip hike over three days. She started Monday, carefully braced her hiking partners and blew bubbles to celebrate after reaching the summit Tuesday, and then hiked out on Wednesday.

"You basically live in fear for so long that you're afraid to try to push your limits at all," she said after returning to the mountain's base Wednesday and describing her initial doubts.

"And so it's very freeing to be able to push those limits and to succeed and know that you're back."

Perkins — 5-foot-3 and 35 pounds — had a go-ahead from her doctor because she was an experienced climber and worked hard to rebuild her strength after her 1995 transplant.

But she knew that thousands of people get climbing permits every year, and many are forced to turn back before reaching the top of the Sierra Nevada peak.

Sprains and other injuries are always concerns, along with altitude sickness, hypothermia, dehydration and violent weather changes.

But the weather was perfect for Perkins. Her only problems were a slight knee bruise from a fall as she got out of her tent, and a mild headache.

Kelly Perkins makes her way up California's Mt. Whitney, putting her new heart to a stiff test with the climb.

Should Idaho join test wave?

Magic Valley area teachers, school officials have questions

By Jennifer Sandmann Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley students are among the most tested in the nation, because Idaho requires annual proficiency tests from third to 11th grade.

So should Idaho sign on to President Clinton's plans for voluntary participation in national standardized testing of fourth-graders in reading and eighth-graders in math? Idaho hasn't decided, but many local school officials don't like the idea.

Idaho is among the top five states in the country in administering standardized tests to students, said Larry Watson, testing director for Twin Falls School District.

State schools superintendent Anne Fox has required the annual testing in Idaho, now in its third consecutive year.

The state hopes to have enough information on how to begin analyzing trends and spotting curriculum strengths and weaknesses, said Sally Tiel, state math coordinator. Idaho had previously required testing only in fourth, eighth and 11th grades.

Tiel was in Washington, D.C., Friday to learn more about the national testing plan.

Seven states have signed up for the national tests, which the Senate has approved. The only Western state to sign on is Alaska. Several school districts in California and Texas, and the Seattle School District have said they want their students to take the tests.

"Twin Falls is developing district-wide curriculum standards and needs assessments to certify whether students have met those standards," Watson said. "These national assessments probably aren't going to have much effect on what we're doing."

The national testing debate has been waged for too many years, and it's time to resolve it, Please see TESTS, Page A2

Hold ground on dump, Elmore officials advised

By Mark Heinz Times-News writer

MOUNTAIN HOME — The Elmore County commission is ready for the final round of negotiations with a Washington-based landfill company that wants to open a dump about 20 miles west of Mountain Home.

If it allows a 640-acre dump that could take about 1,000 tons of garbage daily from Idaho and other states, the county would get $30,000 a year from Idaho Waste Systems for community service, environmental protection and scholarships.

The county also wants $2 million set aside for local economic development and closure of the landfill. The county also wants the company to make every effort to hire locals — and Idaho Waste Systems has not said how many jobs the project would create.

And while some residents at a hearing Thursday urged the county to stand its own ground, others accused the county of ignoring months of public outcry against the dump.

Steve Price, Idaho Waste Systems' Boise attorney, said Thursday the company might be ready to start negotiations after its board of directors meets next month. But he said the company will probably stand tough against some of the county's more steep demands.

During two hours of public testimony Thursday, favorable comments about the dump were sparse.

Tennessee company will build, operate new prison in Idaho

The Associated Press

BOISE — The Batt administration Friday selected one of the world's largest operators of private prisons to build and operate a major new prison south of Boise.

Corrections Corp. of America of Nashville, Tenn., which manages institutions in 17 states, Puerto Rico, England and Australia and employs more than 7,200 people, won the potentially lucrative project over seven other bidders.

Those losing bidders have until the end of next week to appeal. Officials said a contract will be finalized after that as Idaho looks for a way to accommodate an exploding prison population while checking the skyrocketing cost to taxpayers.

Corrections Director James Spalding said the first 1,250 beds of what will eventually be a 3,000-inmate medium-minimum-security facility could be ready by mid-1999.

Corrections Corp. of America proposed building the prison for $9 million compared to the $65 million the state estimated it would cost if it built the prison itself. The operating cost proposed by Corrections Corp. was $39 a day per inmate. The state estimates its cost per day at $45.

The proposal calls for Boise-based Morrison Knudsen Co. Inc. to be the contractor on the job. The state will own the facility, paying for it through long-term bonds issued by the State Building Authority. Corrections Corp. will run it, collecting about $18 million a year and eventually over $10 million a year.

Also bidding for the project was Correctional Services Corp. of Florida, U.S. Correction Corp. of Kentucky, Wachutka of Florida, GRW Tennessee, Cornell Corrections of Texas, Group 4 of Maryland and Capital Correctional Resources Inc. of Mississippi.

Wilderness Mountain of Mackay also submitted a proposal, but state purchasing officials disqualified it as non-responsive to the project.

State lawmakers authorized the private prison approach last winter as one way to check spiraling correction costs by taking advantage of effi-

As a precaution, her climbing team — including her husband, Craig, also 36, and four others — shared part of her pack load, carrying her blood pressure monitor and oxygen canisters. As it turned out, the climb was as easy as all, and her blood pressure was OK during periodic checks.

Perkins also drove from her second home in Laguna Niguel, Calif., to the trailhead Friday to adjust to high altitude, and the ascent being slowly — a necessity because it takes a few minutes to get her heart rate up. (The heart is normally stimulated by nerves and adrenaline.) But a transplanted heart no longer has nerves linking it to the brain. Perkins has to rely on adrenaline alone.

Perkins had climbed Whitney once before, when she was 25 and there was no hint of the climb.

But in 1992 she was diagnosed with viral cardiomyopathy, which made her heart race wildly. By 1995, her heart was failing and she was taking up to 30 pills a day. Her husband had to carry her up and down the stairs of their home.

But she didn't despair. "I really was pretty confident that I would be OK," she said. "I knew I had a lot to go through and it would be rough, but I knew it would get better."

"I had to get better. There was really no going down. There was some fear, but at that point a heart transplant was pretty much my last resort. For any kind of real quality of life, that was it."

Perkins, a real estate appraiser, got her new heart on Nov. 20, 1995, from a 40-year-old woman killed when thrown from a horse.

Insurance covered the cost, and her rehabilitation went so well she climbed 8,842-foot-high Half Dome in Yosemite in August 1996.

Mount Whitney became her new goal, but her husband had his doubts because of the altitude — which made him sick and kept him from reaching the sum-companies a for-profit company can achieve without the extensive state government involvement. In addition to costing more, the facility would take twice as long to build if the state did it, according to official estimates.

Corrections Corp. operates 60 prisons with a capacity of 45,000 inmates.

"Its latest financial report showed an net income during the first six months of this year was $23.6 million, compared to $12.7 million for the same period last year."

Only two weeks ago, the company opened the $200-bed, $25 million Southern Nevada Correctional Facility in North Las Vegas, the state's first privately run prison.

But Corrections Corp. has also been its share of controversy.

"In 1996, two convicted sex offenders climbed the fence of a private prison it runs near Houston, Texas, and were released because at the time Texas law did not make it illegal to escape from a private prison. The incident has prompted legislative reform in Texas and elsewhere."

This May, two guards were injured during a disturbance involving about two dozen inmates at its Holdenville, Okla., facility. The warden said there was no connection between that uprising and a series of inmate assaults at the prison a week earlier.

But critics of the company in Tennessee, where it has lobbied itself with organized labor in a bid to take over management of the entire state prison system, maintain there is a pattern of problems that raise serious concerns. During Tennessee's 1995-1996 budget year, the one facility run by Corrections Corp. reported substantially more inmate incidents than two other state prisons with comparable populations and staffs. In one case the Corrections Corp. facility was twice as high and in the other a third higher.

The Idaho prison system is currently at capacity with another 250 to 300 inmates, depending on the time of the month, housed in county jails and 750 more in facilities in Texas, Minnesota and Louisiana.

By the end of the last few months, the inmate count was growing at around 35 a month. But Gov. Phil Batt said earlier this week that the net population increase during the summer has been minimal.

"Personally, I think it's time for Congress to fish or cut bait," Watson said.

Mandated annual testing has helped Shoshone School District identify curriculum gaps, Superintendent Max Excell said, but school boards ought to decide what happens in local schools.

The district set a goal last year to raise its test scores by 5 percent, and it succeeded. It has the same goal this year.

Excell does not favor national testing. "If we believe in local control, then let our local school board determine how we assess our students," he said.

already uses portions of 11 school days to comply with required standardized tests. Superintendent John Garner said. It takes away from instructional time.

Garner questions whether national tests are needed and whether it should be a function of the federal government.

"We're over-testing students," said Larry Olson, a counselor at Individual High School.

"We have very capable students who will 'Christmas tree' the tests," said Olson, referring to students who make designs on ## the answer sheet by filling in the bubbles in a pattern.

Clinton says the country will hold higher educational standards through national testing, because parents will see how local schools measure up.

National tests already compare students across the country and internationally, but they don't test all students, as Clinton wants. The goal is to raise standards for all students, regardless of socioeconomic background.

The new tests would compare scores internationally. Developing the tests would cost an estimated $16 million in 1998.

and it's done right, it could definitely be a plus," said Jack Streeter of Mountain Home.

Idaho Waste Systems could boost the local economy, and emerging technology could someday convert municipal waste to an energy source, Streeter said.

But most speakers said the environmental risks far outweigh any potential benefits.

Many expressed worry over toxic contamination of groundwater, the poor condition of roads leading to the proposed dump site and the dust the landfill could stir up.

George Jones of Mountain Home said he worries that the dump might quickly fill, and Idaho Waste Systems could leave the county in a lurch when it came time to reclaim the landfill site.

Carmel Crook, vice president of the anti-landfill group Idaho Mission Against Garbage Environment, said the commission has tried to keep its dealings with Idaho Waste Systems out of the public eye.

Commissioner Larry Rose, who cast the sole vote against a county special use permit for the company in May, said he was frustrated by the municipal waste-to-energy project.

"We have asked for (the public's) help on this thing, and all we've gotten is a bunch of criticism," he said.

IMACE attorney Larry Ashcraft urged the commission to drive a hard bargain with Idaho Waste Systems.

"You don't have to give in, you're the governing body here," he said.

Elmore County Planning and Zoning Commission Chairman Bob Baker warned that once a business is established under a special use permit, it is nearly impossible to shut it down. So the county should be sure Idaho Waste Systems can make good on all its promises before approving the project.

If the utility and the company reach an agreement, the company's proposal should also go before an appointed site review panel, said state Sen. Robbi King, R-Idaho Falls.

A 1996 law — which King sponsored as a member of the Idaho House — calls for the state and local governments to appoint a review panel each time a company proposes bringing in out-of-state waste.

Idaho Waste Systems has questioned whether the law applies to its proposal, because it applied while the county was three years before the law was passed.

Price said Thursday the company hasn't decided whether to challenge the law.

The company is weary of what it sees as unfair delays, and might concede the issue simply to speed things up, Price said.

'Softer' Senate campaign finance bill may not satisfy

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an atmosphere of intense partisanship, the Senate plunged into debate Friday over legislation to overhaul the nation's costly and scandal-ridden system for financing political campaigns.

"All the excesses of the past are gone," said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., outlining a bill that recently has been stripped of several controversial provisions in a bid to attract enough support to win passage.

But Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said, "I have my doubts" anything will emerge from a lengthy debate that the group to produce at least one filibuster. No votes are expected before early October.

President Clinton said he was delighted the debate had begun but preferred, "The bill will be a good effort to make it look like we're going to do something and nothing will happen" unless voters demand action.

The list of contentious points was a long one, including whether and how to limit "soft money," which is loosely regulated; whether to rein in outside groups that mount costly advertising campaigns on their own; and whether and how to restrict the ability of unions to spend dues and other similar funds on political activities without the consent of individual members.

Opponents and congressional Democrats have been demanding action on campaign finance legislation since the beginning of the year. Whether by accident or design, Lott opened debate on a day in which the president was hoping to raise $600,000 at a Houston fund-raising event for Democrats.

In a sharply worded speech, Lott spoke of "lurid exposes" about the campaign of 1996 and contended that Clinton's "standing on this subject of campaign finance reform is a case study of the problem, not an exemplar of the solution."

Referring to the protracted committee hearings into alleged abuses last year, and Attorney General Janet Reno's hesitation to probe fund-raising activities by Clinton and Vice President Al Gore, Lott said the demand from the White House and congressional Democrats for action on legislation was "an effort to change the subject."

Rebutting for the Democrats, Senate minority leader Tom Daschle of South Dakota said, "The American people are not dumb. They know the system is broken. ... People who think they can kill this effort with political maneuvering without anyone noticing — are wrong."

Behind the political maneuvering lie fundamentally different approaches to changes in a system in which candidates and parties raise hundreds of millions of dollars each election cycle, and in which unions, businesses and other outside groups spend additional millions. "And as the need for money escalates, the influence of those who give it rises exponentially," said McCain, R-Ariz.

Lott and other Republicans oppose many of the limitations sought by McCain, his chief co-sponsor, Sen. Russell Feingold, D-Wis., and most if not all other Democrats. The Republicans argue that such limits would amount to an infringement on the freedom of speech guaranteed in the Constitution.

"We should tread on this ground very, very carefully," said Sen. Robert Bennett, R-Utah. At the heart of the legislation backed by McCain and Feingold is a ban on unregulated contributions to federal races, coupled with fresh restrictions on campaign activities by outside groups.

The legislation also provides for greater disclosure by campaign contributors.

In a late charge that appears designed to pick up Republican support, the legislation requires labor unions to notify non-union workers if their payments in lieu of dues are being spent on campaigns, so they can ask for refunds.

The McCain-Feingold bill commands the announced support of all 45 Senate Democrats and four Republicans.

That leaves it one shy of the votes needed for passage — assuming Gore is available to break a tie — but 11 votes short of the number to choke off a Republican filibuster, should one materialize.

Casino proposal over burial site splits Indian tribe in Kansas

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — For generations, American Indians have been dogged by poverty, their traditions weakened from within and without.

But few things have encapsulated their plight as neatly as this proposal by a tribe to build a casino on an Indian burial ground.

"The tribe is small and needs money to survive. An economic development project like this will give us the money to be self-sufficient," said Leulford Bearskin, chief of the 3,800-member Wyandotte Tribe of Oklahoma.

Other Indians are shocked by the idea of building on what they regard as sacred ground. "That they would think so little of their ancestors and elders and heritage to propose doing this, it's really abominable," said Fran Davidson, who often brings nuts and berries to the spirits of her 32 ancestors buried at the cemetery. "Imagine our relatives lying here, looking up at the floor of a casino."

The two-acre spot, which is bordered by busy streets and is just blocks from the government hub of downtown Kansas City, is the spiritual center of the Wyandottes' cousins, the Wyandot Nation of Kansas, who have buried their own there since 1843. The Wyandottes, however, are recognized by the U.S. government as a tribe, and thus have control over the cemetery.

If the Wyandottes get their way, workers could be driving pillars into the cemetery some time next year, in preparation for a $4 million to $5 million casino and bingo hall that would overlook some of the graves.

For years, Indian tribes around the country have fought against encroachment on their lands, going to court to keep scientists from studying burial sites and ancient dwellings and laying claim to property they say was taken from them.

In this case, though, "this is not some multimillion, non-Native conglomerate saying, 'Hey, we have a good deal for you,'" said Dan Wildcat, a professor of American Indian Studies at Haskell Indian Nations University in Lawrence. "This is a native people proposing to do this over the burial ground of their relations. It flies in the face of our beliefs, values and customs."

The state, city, and four other Kansas tribes have gone to court, asking for restraining orders to block the project. Sen. Sam Brownback, R-Kan., introduced an amendment to ensure that the cemetery is used as burial ground only.

Measure aims to help immigrants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Illegal immigrants would get a three-week reprieve to file paperwork in their fight to stay in the United States under legislation the House will consider next week.

Immigrant communities nationwide have been in a panic over Tuesday's expiration of a measure that lets undocumented, or illegal, immigrants to file here for legal status instead of at U.S. consulates abroad.

With Congress still far from completing its appropriations for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, the House on Monday will consider a stopgap spending bill that would fund government operations through Oct. 23.

Included in that bill is a three-week extension of the immigration provision due to expire Tuesday.

Initially, a one-year extension had been contemplated but was drawn away after Rep. Dana Rohrabacher, R-Calif., threatened to delay passage of the stopgap spending bill.

Rohrabacher lifted his objection to the three-week extension after securing a commitment from the GOP leadership that a vote on the provision's fate will be scheduled later this year.

Astronaut due to arrive at Mir today

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Space shuttle Atlantis and the next American to live on Mir closed in on the Russian outpost Friday, with flight controllers watching and hoping the station's troublesome computer keeps working.

Handyman astronaut David Wolf is due to arrive at Mir this afternoon with a new computer and other station gear. The docking is scheduled for 2 p.m. EDT. The rendezvous between Atlantis' seven crew members and the three men on Mir will take place 250 miles above Earth.

Wolf will change pieces with American Michael Foale, who has spent 4 1/2 months on Mir and was aboard when a cargo ship plowed into the run-down station in June.

Late Friday afternoon, Atlantis was trailing the Russian space station by 2,000 miles, and closing the gap by 350 miles every orbit.

Panel: Punish china for arms sales to Iran

WASHINGTON — A House panel urged the Clinton administration Friday to punish China for selling naval cruise missiles to Iran.

"The acquisition of at least 60 C-802 missiles from China is clearly a serious threat to stability in the Persian Gulf," said Rep. Benjamin Gilman, R-N.Y., who chairs the Committee on International Relations.

He said measures against Beijing could include a one-year halt to U.S. support for aid to China by multilateral lending institutions such as the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank.

House agrees to end cost for passport info

WASHINGTON — The House voted Friday to close a State Department 900-number telephone line that requires callers to pay for passport information they once got for free.

Sponsors equated it with "double taxation."

"Americans who have already paid a $65 passport fee are now required to pay for information that used to be free," said Rep. Chris Smith, R-N.J.

Department officials have said the line was created to ease the burden of understaffed passport offices. The service is paid for by the fees it generates and an taxpayer dollars were used, they said.

But Smith said callers became outraged upon learning they will be charged $1.05 a minute to speak with a live operator or 35 cents a minute for recorded information. Credit-card users pay a flat $4.95 fee.

Ex-Letterman harasser targets astronaut

KISSIMMEE, Fla. — The Connecticut woman who harassed David Letterman for years is now after retired astronaut Story Musgrave, authorities say.

Margaret Mary Ray, arrested seven times for trespassing at Letterman's New Canaan, Conn., home, was found outside Musgrave's home here early Thursday, deputies said.

"She began hanging on the front door at approximately 5:30 a.m. and then went around the house turning on all the water faucets," sheriff's reports state. She was charged with stalking, a misdemeanor punishable by a jail term up to one year.

Musgrave, 62, told investigators that Ray has harassed him for the past four years by calling, writing and sending him packages.

Scientists find genes for eye diseases

NEW YORK — Scientists have identified three genes that lead to the vision loss when they're flawed, an advance that could lead to new treatments.

Two genes cause forms of retinitis pigmentosa, or RP, which damages the eye's light-sensing cells called rods and cones. The genes cause types of RP that strike unusually early, causing legal blindness in childhood and early adulthood.

Some 100,000 to 200,000 Americans have RP. The genes probably account for a few percent of those cases.

FDA warns against unapproved home tests

WASHINGTON — The Food and Drug Administration warned consumers Friday not to use two at-home medical tests for the AIDS virus and hepatitis, saying they were fraudulently sold by a California company.

Neither product — the "Lei-Home Access HIV Test" and the "at-home Hepatitis A Test Kit" — has been shown to work, the FDA said.

Anyone who already has used the products should consider being retested, the FDA said. In fact, the agency said it could not be sure that blood samples consumers mailed to the company were checked for the viruses. The kits were sold by Lei-Home Access Care, a division of Jin-Greene Biotechnology Inc. of Sunnyvale, Calif. They were sold largely over the Internet, on a site that claims 100,000 HIV tests were sold in eight months.

Exhibit opens eye on 19th century

WASHINGTON (AP) — Photographic pioneer Matthew Brady created some of the best-known images of 19th-century America, but most of his work has not been seen together since Brady closed his Washington studio more than 100 years ago.

The National Portrait Gallery is changing that with a collection of portraits depicting generals and actors, poets and villains.

"Matthew Brady Portraits: Images as History, Photography as Art" opens Friday.

Brady displayed almost all the photographs in his galleries to drum up business. Among them were pictures of newspaper editor Horace Greeley, poet Walt Whitman, showman P.T. Barnum, novelist Henry James as a small boy, Civil War nurse Clara Barton and actor Junius Brutus Booth, father of President Lincoln's assassin John Wilkes Booth.

The collection also features famous images of Lincoln and of the principal antagonists of the Civil War, Ulysses S. Grant and Robert E. Lee.

Curators readily admit that no one can certify whether any of the 100 images were shot by Brady himself.

Peering through glasses and wearing a trademark goatee, Brady was more a photographer, showman and attractor of customers. Dozens of technicians prepared the daguerrotype plates and glass negatives, made the exposures and printed the photographs. But each of the carefully posed images bears the Brady Studio mark alone.

"We can't say that he focused the lens," said Mary Panzer, the Photographic pioneer Matthew Brady's work is on display at the National Portrait Gallery in Washington, D.C. He is best known for his Civil War photos, including that of Gen. Grant, above.

Portrait Gallery's curator of photography. "If you are looking for the actual person who made the exposure, it's impossible to say."

"But he had greater credibility as an artist for not being the one to soil his hands with photographic chemicals or to focus the lens or to click the shutter," she said as she led a tour of the exhibit.

"He arranged the pose, worked with the subject and he probably said when to speak the shutter. He was the conductor of the orchestra," she said.

So there's Grant, left hand on hip, right hand and forearm on a tree outside a Union Army tent, looking as if he's about to sink into the camp chair nearby and whittle a stick.

And there's Lee, in Confederate gray, seated in an elaborately carved chair on the back porch of his Richmond, Va., home a few days after he surrendered to Grant at Appomattox.

"It was supposed that after his defeat it would be preposterous to ask him to sit, but I thought that to be the time for the historical picture," Brady recalled decades later.

The Brady studio photographed Lincoln in New York in 1859 to deliver his soon-to-be famous Cooper Union address. In the final print the Brady operators raised the presidential candidate's collar to hide his scrawny neck, tamed his unruly hair and smoothed his awkward features. An engraving of the photograph appeared full page on the front of Harper's Weekly.

"Brady and the Cooper Union made me president," Lincoln said after his inauguration in 1861.

Some portraits in the exhibit were made in 1849, just a decade after the invention of photography.

"For viewers born years before that invention, you can imagine the shock and astonishment that must have been in everyone's mind as they saw these images of Daniel Webster, Henry Clay, John C. Calhoun," Ms. Panzer said.

"They felt as though they were looking at the steady presence of John C. Calhoun himself, not just a picture of him."

Ms. Panzer believes Brady made pictures with an eye to the future, not just to amaze and entertain his contemporaries.

"He was thinking about posterity," she said. "We are the people for whom these photographs were made."

Woman pilot decries pornography in the cockpit

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — For years, airline pilots have been leaving little surprises in the cockpit for the next crew: dirty pictures slipped into flight manuals, hidden behind equipment panels and stuffed into seat-backs.

The practice was usually good for laughs but when pilots were an all-male fraternity and flight attendants were known as stewardesses.

Now the practice is at the center of a lawsuit by a woman pilot who is suing Continental Airlines for sexual harassment.

"It's like hanging up a 'men's only' sign on the occupation," said Francine Moccio, director of Cornell University's Institute for Women and Work. "The playing field has changed. What was a big, funny joke 20 years ago is now illegal."

Capt. Tammy S. Blakey, who is seeking unspecified damages, accuses Continental of failing to keep cockpits free of pornographic pictures glued to the bottom of drawers, behind panels marked with an X, and in flight manuals.

She testified at the trial, which began Sept. 10 in federal court in Newark, that her complaints prompted the company to retaliate by questioning her attendance record, sending her to the company psychiatrist and forcing her to take extra qualifying tests.

She also said male pilots got back at her by scrawling her name on graphic photos, including one of a naked woman penetrated, sexually with a bloody saber.

Houston-based Continental says Blakey's complaints began only after her schedule changed in 1991 and after the company raised concerns about poor attendance. The airline says it responded promptly and alerted pilots that offensive material was banned from cockpits.

Moccio, who is not involved in the Blakey case, said the scenario painted by Blakey is similar to those in other male-dominated fields such as construction, the military, and police and fire departments.

"What's happening is that the customs and traditions of the men in that occupation are tough to resist change," Moccio said. "They say, 'Why should we change for just a handful?'"

Women accounted for just 2.6 percent, or 3,346, of the nation's 127,486 airline pilots in 1996, more than double their number in 1987, according to the Federal Aviation Administration.

Blakey, 38, of Arlington, Wash., was hired in 1984. In 1990 she became the first woman at Continental to attain the rank of captain of an Airbus A300, a jet that carries up to 272 passengers, she testified.

Blakey has been an unpaid leave since mid-1993. She says she wanted to come back in 1994 after her daughter was born. But the company says she made no effort to return.

Male pilots do not dispute that pornography was standard cockpit fare in the industry, but claim it was done discreetly and is now disappearing.

A senior pilot at Newark-based Kiwi International Air Lines, speaking on condition of anonymity, recalled that when he worked at the now-failed Eastern Airlines, women pilots would swap the girly pictures with beefcake shots of men.

Soldier seeks review

'Hard to hit a moving target': Dole busy after campaign

Loss to Clinton wasn't defining moment in his life

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The physical hurt lasted much longer than the psychic pain.

But nearly a year after losing the presidential election, Bob Dole is over both.

"He doesn't really look back," said his wife, Elizabeth. "It's done; you move on. He's on to new challenges — a whole new array of them."

Although he still misses the excitement of a campaign for the White House and the camaraderie of the Senate, Dole is indeed adapting nicely, thank you, to a hectic new life that's equal parts elder statesman, rain-maker extraordinaire, philanthropist, lecturer, commercial hustler and comedian.

"I like to keep moving — hard to hit a moving target," he quipped.

By all accounts, the former Senate majority leader quickly got over his loss to President Clinton. "This was not the defining moment in his life," explains a longtime chum, referring to Dole's six injuries that crippled his right arm.

But it was "months and months" before the swelling in his good hand receded — "from all the handshaking," said Elizabeth Dole, president of the American Red Cross.

Disinclined to look back, Bob Dole nevertheless revealed that his campaign last summer secretly tested public reaction to a Dole-Bob ticket.

He said they tested several possible running mates. "I think we just drew Elizabeth into the pot. Nobody ever thought it was serious."

"The response," according to a former top campaign official,

Former presidential candidate Bob Dole shakes hands with former U.S. Senator Bob Packwood Thursday after an Oregon GOP fundraiser in Portland.

"was what a lot of people predicted: The United States is not ready for a monarchy."

In separate interviews, the Doles recently also acknowledged that they realized, well before Election Day, that he would not win. Yet they never talked about it, not even to one another.

"We just kept charging, kept doing all the things that needed to be done," Elizabeth Dole recalled.

Today, Bob Dole relishes looking ahead — to 2000. "The biggest applause I get right now is when I say, 'Well, I get one more chance to get to the White House,'" he said. "People go wild at the mention of Elizabeth."

A few days later, sitting in her elegant Red Cross office two short blocks from the White House, Elizabeth Dole broke into a hearty but practiced laugh and issued this nondenial statement: "No plans to run. No plans to run. I made a commitment to come back to Red Cross, win or lose. So here I am."

For Robert Joseph Dole, now 74, his new life began the day after the election. He arrived at his campaign headquarters near the Capitol in a surprisingly chipper mood.

"We were pretty down — as you can imagine," recalled a former top campaign aide. "But he was relaxed and at ease."

The aide quoted Dole as saying, "We gave it our best shot. Let's move on." Dole's demeanor and remarks, he added, "made the rest of us feel good."

Dole next surfaced in January, appearing in a humorous Visa commercial that aired during the Super Bowl. With no fanfare, he donated his earnings — $250,000 — to a variety of charities, including the United Negro College Fund, a national Latino scholarship fund, a homeless shelter and several foundations that serve troubled youths.

Other Dole commercials quickly followed. In one, a TV spot for SuperTarget stores that aired widely in Kansas, Dole sat in a Senate-like office, saying that he remained committed to providing voters with a choice. The punch line: "Paper or plastic?"

Dole has donated all earnings from commercials to charity, with one exception.

As a part of his contract with Dunkin' Donuts, Dole is receiving five dozen doughnuts every Monday morning for a year. One such day recently, he presented three dozen to the Red Cross, remarking afterward with a chuckle: "(Elizabeth) had a doughnut party. And they were all excited."

Dole himself avoids such sweets. Lotsa fat, Lotsa calories," he said disapprovingly. "I've been eating low-fat stuff," he added, putting his mid-section. He has lost 10 pounds since the end of the campaign.

He also has appeared on numerous TV talk shows, including David Letterman's and Jay Leno's, evincing a self-deprecating, sometimes biting sense of humor that all but disappeared during his 1996 campaign.

After cracking a series of one-liners on Letterman in August, the host remarked: "Since we last saw you in November, have you just been sitting around writing jokes?"

Without missing a beat, Dole replied, "Well, don't have anything else to do."

That's not true, of course. Dole has taken a $600,000-a-year job at Verner, Lipfert, Bernhard, McPherson & Hand, one of Washington's premier law firms, whose partners include former Democratic Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell of Maine and former Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, the Democratic vice presidential candidate in 1988. Dole test visitors that when he wants a Republican to talk to, he has to bring his miniature schnauzer, Leader, to the office.

Dole serves as an ambassador for the firm, meeting with world leaders and other movers and shakers around the country and abroad.

"Gotta get clients. Gotta get clients," one longtime Dole friend quoted him as saying during a lunch last summer, just before Dole flew to Hawaii and Taiwan.

When Verner Lipfert announced Dole's hiring, the Kansas native issued a statement saying in part: "I'm looking forward to this nonpartisan reunion with George Mitchell and Lloyd Bentsen. The best part will be no filibusters, no cloture votes and no quorum calls."

In fact, Dole misses the Senate and often turns on C-SPAN to watch Senate proceedings. "Very exciting. I see my colleagues — at least, the ones who are awake," he said.

Since November, about 40 organizations have given him awards for his public service. The highlight came at the White House in January, when Clinton conferred upon him the Presidential Medal of Freedom, America's highest civilian award.

Seeing old friends: Medal of Honor recipients gather

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Raymond "Mike" Clausen Jr. is one of a dwindling number of heroes, those awarded the Medal of Honor for valor in combat who are still alive.

The Marine who ran again and again through a mine field to save a platoon in Vietnam chatted with some of the other members of the Medal of Honor Society here this week, all the while knowing there will be fewer next time they meet.

"I came because the society is getting smaller and smaller. I'm here to see guys I met before who may not be here next time," said Clausen, a Ponchatoula, La., man who missed the past two conventions.

About 100 of the 168 living medal recipients are in Little Rock for the society convention, renewing friendships, seeing old faces.

Ronald Rosser, awarded the medal for Army infantry action in Korea, remembers when World War I veterans were in the society, 10 years younger than he is now. And those veterans could recall members who had fought in the Boxer Rebellion, in Haiti and in the Philippines.

"The World War I veterans, those guys were (in the society) with men from the Civil War and the Indian wars," said Rosser, of Roseville, Ohio.

"I regret not keeping a journal from the early days, not only to remember for myself but to pass on what they did and what they said."

In the 135 years since it was authorized, more than 3,000 people have been awarded the Medal of Honor, most posthumously, for risking their lives in combat beyond the call of duty.

Rosser said the society is shrinking but — by his count — there are hundreds of others who pose as society members, frauds known as "ponies." Last year, the company that makes the nation's highest combat decoration — H.L.L. Leadership Industries Inc. of Hauppauge, N.Y. — admitted selling 300 unauthorized medals for $75 each.

Bill Charrette was in the Navy in Korea and earned the medal for action he saw as a hospital corpsman with a Marine Corps rifle company. He said he enjoys the company at the conventions.

"I get the biggest kick out of people trying to compare the wars," he said. "There was a Marine that said any time you get shot at, it's the biggest damn war you've been in."

For Clausen, the meeting was a chance for new friends. "For all wars, we all share the same common bond," he said. "The Medal of Honor and the Purple Heart are medals you never try to get."

Survey shows former aid recipients more self-reliant

BOISE (AP) — Idaho has been trying to find out what happened to all the people who dropped off state cash assistance rolls after new laws went into effect in July.

Advocates for the homeless feared that a lot of people would "fall through the cracks" due to tougher new requirements.

But Gov. Phil Batt and Linda Caballero, director of the Department of Health and Welfare said Friday that doesn't seem to be happening.

An independent survey shows nearly 80 percent of former welfare recipients who are not participating in new cash assistance programs say they are able to pay their own rent and live in what they consider to be permanent housing.

Most of the former welfare families still rely on Food Stamps to buy groceries and Medicaid to help with the medical bills.

After Idaho's welfare reform went into effect in July, welfare workers reported a 63 percent drop in the workload.

About 6,800 families received cash assistance through the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program in June. When new

"These people dropped out of the cash assistance program, but for the most part they did not drop out of sight or through holes in the social safety net."

—Linda Caballero, Health and Welfare director laws went into effect, the name was changed to Temporary Assistance for Families in Idaho, reflecting the goal of getting people off welfare.

In July, 3,100 families qualified for cash assistance, dropping more in August and to 2,280 families on Sept. 22.

"Our intent was not to cut numbers just for the sake of cutting, but rather to help families take care of themselves," Batt said. "We would far rather put dollars into supporting working families than into keeping people on public assistance."

Caballero ordered the survey in July. Questionnaires were mailed to more than 5,000 families that participated in the old program in March but did not sign up for the new program in July. More than 1,000 families responded.

"Some people wanted to say the caseload drop was a clear sign that welfare reform worked," Caballero said. "Others said it showed just as clearly that we somehow had failed."

"My overriding concern was finding out if those families and their children were okay. It's nice to know that, by and large, they are," she said.

Nearly half those responding to the survey reported an increase in self-esteem and 25 percent said new eligibility requirements for cash assistance spurred them to look for work. Another 20 percent said they were working.

About 63 percent of the parents of families that did not enter the new welfare program said they were earning more than the minimum wage and 32 percent said they were earning more than $6 per hour. Very few said they rely on food banks or other community resources.

"This is very exciting news," Caballero said. "These people dropped out of the cash assistance program, but for the most part they did not drop out of sight or through holes in the social safety net."

8-VEHICLE ACCIDENT

Rescue and emergency personnel from the Idaho State Police, Latah County Sheriff's Department, Moscow Volunteer Fire Department and various towing companies try to untangle an accident that involved eight vehicles just south of Viola on U.S. Highway 95 Wednesday. The afternoon crash sent five people to the hospital and closed the highway for three hours.

Idaho Wildlife Council rejects meeting with Fish & Game head

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Fish and Game Director Steve Mealey's first effort to repair his tattered relationship with the Idaho Wildlife Council didn't get far.

In a letter to council president Don Clower, Mealey tried to set up a meeting with the hunter group's leadership. Clower said no.

"Most of the chairmen of the regional councils are really not interested in meeting just to have a meeting," Clower said in a letter to Mealey.

"Enough has already been said and now it is time for you and the (Fish and Game) commission to start doing your job. You have to earn credibility and respect and you can only achieve that goal by actions and not talk."

Steve Mealey

Mealey's message to Clower said he realized that he hasn't spent enough time with the council and its members. He said he needed to "solicit your opinions on important fish and wildlife matters" and improve working relations.

The Idaho Wildlife Council, actually seven wildlife councils across the state, asked for Mealey's resignation in August after Mealey named a piece of art on a sportsman-fund boat trip in northern Idaho.

Clower said he was upset by what he called "the continued coverup" of what happened on the boat trip, and the agency's decision not to seek a fee increase next year.

He said that decision shows disregard for what the department needs in favor of what was acceptable to political leaders.

The chairman of the commission, John Burns, said the wildlife council's hard feelings toward Mealey started when the director said he would not hunt bears over bait.

The council and its allied organizations led the battle against a bear hunting initiative rejected by the voters last year.

Report worries Education board

LEWISTON (AP) — Flaws in the first draft of a $50,000 management review commissioned by the Idaho Board of Education has state employees on edge.

The board hired the Sacramento, Calif.-based accounting firm Deloitte and Touche to study how the board and four education agencies should be organized to avoid wasteful duplication. The final draft is due next month.

"Any change or study creates turmoil," the board's interim executive director, Darrell Manning, said Thursday. "The employees get nervous. That's inevitable."

What makes Mike Rush, state administrator of the Division of Vocational Education, nervous is what he considers the draft report's flawed research.

Deloitte and Touche's first draft recommended that the Division of Vocational Education be dissolved. It also called for assigning the agency's duties to the Board of Education office, which now focuses on higher education. The report suggested more staff be added to the board office while the vocational education staff be cut in half.

However, Rush said, the accounting firm "jumped to recommendations without substantiating what we did." In addition, the first draft contained glaring errors and was incomplete. Manning and Rush said.

Among errors in the draft document were the number of employees attributed to the Division of Vocational Education. The agency has 39 employees, six less than the Deloitte and Touche report cited.

The draft also says the agency is responsible for administering programs at the University of Idaho's technical college even though the university does not have a technical college.

Rush said the Deloitte and Touche draft also failed to note that the division has money for training that the Idaho Department of Commerce frequently taps into.

Utah state workers told not to carry guns

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Gov. Mike Leavitt, legislators, judges and other elected state officials can bring guns to work if they wish, but not Utah's 17,000 rank-and-file public employees.

An administrative rule prohibits non-law enforcement state employees to pack firearms into their state offices, state vehicles or while on state business — whether they possess a concealed weapons permit or not.

However, the rule doesn't apply to elected officials. Adopted in July 1996, the restriction was intended to protect the workplace and the safety of all workers.

OSHA cites Nampa contractor for trench cave-in at construction site

BOISE (AP) — A Nampa contractor faces up to $17,600 in penalties in connection with a Boise trench accident that injured a worker.

The U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration cited

K&L Excavation on Thursday for allegedly failing to protect Troy Gray of Meridian from the cave-in. The company also was cited for two other safety violations at the site, just north of Interstate 84.

Gray, 35, was digging with a shovel in a 7-foot-deep trench on Sept. 18 when the wall gave way. He was removed by emergency workers about 90 minutes later and hospitalized until the next afternoon with a gashed arm and bruises.

LOW RIDER

Tom Morland and his two dogs keep a close watch for cars backing out of parking places as they make their way around Walls Walk, Wash., Thursday. Morland saw a TV ad for a low-riding bicycle five years ago but couldn't find a place locally to purchase one. He ended up building one from scratch, and it is his main form of transportation.

Agriculture chairman upset with retreat on Canadian wheat pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — Upset about rising Canadian wheat shipments to the United States, Rep. Bob Smith accused Canada Friday of reneging on a voluntary grain export limit it had agreed to in a 1994 trade pact.

"It is the first time I can remember when a country represented by the deputy minister outright broke his word and the government's word," the angry Oregon Republican told The Associated Press.

Smith, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said Canadian Deputy Agriculture Minister Frank Clayton promised him twice this spring — once in Canada and once here — that Canada would voluntarily remain within the limits.

But USDA officials reported this week that Canadian exports of durum wheat exceeded agreed-upon levels by more than 21 percent while spring wheat exports were more than 35 percent above the voluntary limit, he said.

"I want to know what in the world is going on? I can't believe they are doing this," Smith said. "I want to hear from this fellow. I want to know why they are doing this in violation of his word," he said.

A spokesman for the Canadian Embassy said Clayton would review Smith's concerns but that the congressman may have misread his earlier conversations with the deputy agriculture minister.

His previous talks involved "preliminary projections about shipment levels. There was never at any point a suggestion that the Canadian government was committed to a target level," Canadian Embassy spokesman George Rioux said Friday.

"Our longstanding position on this has been that no export cap would be considered. I think it is fair to say that remains our position," he said.

Smith said it couldn't come at a worse time as Congress considers new fast-track authority to expand the North American Free Trade Agreement.

He expressed his concerns in a letter to Clayton today in Ottawa. He also told Clinton administration officials he wants to know how they intend to respond.

Smoky air brings rash of complaints

SPOKANE (AP) — Heavy smoke in the air of the Inland Northwest this week brought a flood of calls to air-pollution officials on Spokane and Coeur d'Alene.

There was lots of finger-pointing Thursday over who was to blame for the pollution.

Culprits include a 350-acre intentional burn on the Turnbull Wildlife Refuge near Cheney, plus grass-seed farmers in the midst of the annual burning of their fields.

One Spokane official is blaming the weather for trapping smoke in the area.

"Anybody doing anything from the Rocky Mountains to the Cascades is contributing to it," said Ron Edger of the Spokane County Air Pollution Control Authority.

While grass growers are blaming the Turnbull fire, officials for the wildlife refuge say all their smoke went west, away from Spokane.

Patricia Hoffman, a clean-air activist, is angered by the blame game.

"There's 40,000 acres of grass fields being burned within a 40-mile radius of Spokane, and tens of thousands of acres of wheat stubble," she said. "You don't have to go look much further." The field-burning season ended Thursday in Idaho, but continues in Washington.

Meanwhile, an Idaho woman is suing Idaho and Washington farmers to stop the annual field burning.

Kelly A. McAnally, her husband and children filed the lawsuit in Kootenai County District Court last week against 26 farmers and farm companies who were burning on Sept. 18, 1995. That was the date McAnally said she first suffered an asthma attack.

Tribes halt salmon season after poor returns

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Columbia River Indian tribes have called a premature halt to their gill-net salmon and steelhead season because fewer-than-anticipated Snake River-bound steelhead are moving upriver.

The Indians had been selling salmon and steelhead from their catches directly to the public.

The tribes ended the season this week even though they had not caught their allocated quotas of fall chinook or steelhead, said Rick Taylor, spokesman for the Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission.

The tribes caught an estimated 72,000 fall chinook, 5,000 fewer than their quota, and 23,000 steelhead, 5,000 less than they were allocated.

Taylor said the tribes were extremely pleased with their catch and the results of their direct sales to the public.

Business investment bolsters economy during consumer lull

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Soaring business investment helped the economy expand retailing during a lull in consumer spending this spring.

A consumer revival should keep it from falling too much for the rest of the year, analysts say.

The gross domestic product — the broadest measure of economic growth — advanced at a 3.3 percent seasonally adjusted annual rate in the April-June period, the Commerce Department said Friday.

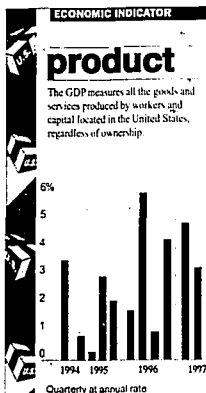

That was little changed from the department's estimate of a month ago, 3.5 percent, when it registered a somewhat stronger export increase. And healthy growth was accompanied by very little inflation.

Indeed, lower energy prices held the advance in a price measure tied to the GDP to a mere 1.5 percent annual rate, the least since 1995.

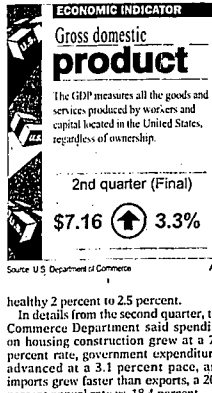

Second-quarter growth was down from a tepid 4.5 percent rate in the first quarter. Consumer spending, which accounts for about two-thirds of the nation's output of goods and services, decelerated more sharply, falling from a 5.3 percent pace to just 0.5 percent.

What saved production in the quarter was a buildup in inventories and a surge in business spending on equipment from computers to aircraft. It rose at a 23 percent annual rate, the best since 1983.

Looking ahead, analysts are divided. Many, noting strong back-to-school spending and other signs of a consumer revival, believe growth will hold in the second-quarter range for the rest of the year.

Others believe the inventory accumulation will restrain production, even in the face of greater consumer demand, and bring growth to a softer but still healthy 2 percent to 2.5 percent.

In details from the second quarter, the Commerce Department said spending on housing construction grew at a 7.4 percent rate, and government expenditures advanced at a 3.1 percent pace, and imports grew fastest, up an export a 20.5 percent annual rate vs. 18.4 percent.

After-tax corporate profits rose 1.7 percent from the previous quarter to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $475.3 billion. They increased 2.9 percent in the first three months of the year.

The various changes put the economy's output in the second quarter at a seasonally and inflation-adjusted annual rate of $7.16 trillion.

Should you buy a used or a new home? It depends

By Steve Kerch
Chicago Tribune

CHICAGO — Most people, when buying most things, prefer to buy new. That's because with almost any product you can think of, there is no real advantage other than a lower price to purchasing a used version.

You wouldn't spend a lot of time over the kitchen table debating the relative merits of buying a new versus a used refrigerator, for instance. You might think about a used car, but probably not if you needed it for anything more than short commutes or errands and even then you'd want as few miles on it as possible. Certainly you'd never even consider a used computer, which was already outdated the moment the first buyer got it home anyway.

But housing is different. With homes, the most serious decision is one of the most important considerations with which buyers must cope.

Real estate economists and authors over the years have provided plenty of advice on topics, offering numerous suggestions on how to decide on new or used (although in real estate circles we don't call used houses "used," we call them "existing").

Most of the advice is straightforward. New homes are preferred if you want the most modern amenities, like a three-car garage; if you want to have a say in the way the space is laid out beforehand.

But that's not the only reason you might prefer a bedroom to a home office; if you cannot abide somebody else's taste in appliances or countertops or bathroom tile; if you have to have a loft, which, unless you buy a U-frame is not something you'll find in many existing homes; or if you simply cannot stand that your dream home can only be built to your specifications.

Existing homes offer the advantages of "established" neighborhoods, meaning you know beforehand what will surround you and how far you'll have to walk or drive to the park, school or grocery, or "mature" landscaping, meaning the trees are actually taller than you and the shrubs have proven capable of sustaining themselves through a Chicago winter of "charm," which many home buyers insist can only be found in older houses; and of "stability" in the sense that you don't have to guess what taxes or heating bills will be and also in the sense that you have some evidence how the house will endure.

But I think the best test of whether you should buy new or used is something I call the Expectation Aggravation Index — EAGIs for short.

EAGIs is based on the assumption, gleaned from many conversations with new-home buyers over the years, that those who purchase new expect perfection in their houses and that their expectations rise exponentially with each and every imperfection they discover.

For Carol Withers of Hanover Park, Ill., it was peeling paint on the columns and exterior siding of her new townhouse that set off a two-year odyssey of attempted correction, held up by rotting wood and a dispute between the builder and painting subcontractor.

But that's not the only reason you might prefer a bedroom to a home office; if you cannot abide somebody else's taste in appliances or countertops or bathroom tile; if you have to have a loft, which, unless you buy a U-frame is not something you'll find in

Stocks snap 3-day losing streak; Dow rises 74 in Friday's trading

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks ended a three-session losing streak on Friday as a bond market rally resumed with help from an economic report that further validated forecasts for steady growth without inflation.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 74.17 to 7,922.18, enough to give the barometer of 30 blue-chip companies a small gain of 4.91 points for the week.

The optimistic mood that handicapped the market all week, the Dow gained most of its ground in the opening minutes and then locked into a tight range for the remainder of the session.

Broader stock indicators also put in their rebounded from Thursday's stumble, sending interest rates lower.

Bonds rose Friday morning after the government's latest calculation of second-quarter economic activity unexpectedly registered a slower rate of growth than earlier estimates.

"Once again, slow and steady wins the race with an economy that's moving, but not generating inflation," said John Lynch, director of investment strategy at Raymond, James and Associates in Charlotte, N.C.

The Commerce Department report said gross domestic product grew at a 3.3 percent annual rate in the April-June quarter, down from an estimated 3.6 percent.

The revised tally represents a more substantial drop from the 4.9 percent rate recorded in the first quarter, a sizing up that led the Federal Reserve to raise one of its key lending rates in late March to ease consumer spending and other inflationary pressures.

The markets had retreated on Thursday after a series of robust economic readings stoked worries the Fed may intervene again, potentially slowing company profits in the process.

Fed officials are scheduled to meet on Tuesday for one of their periodic strategy discussions, but few analysts expect the central bankers to take any action then.

"It's not clear if the Fed will raise rates," said Larry Lief, chief investment officer at Josephthal, Lyon & Ross. "I don't think there's anything except some stuff bubbling on the surface that they can hang their hat on for a pre-emptive strike."

Financial executives, who enjoy a stronger lending business when interest rates aren't rising, were among the day's best performers.

AROUND THE VALLEY

MVRMC offers special deal on mammograms

TWIN FALLS - In an effort to encourage women 40 and older to obtain mammograms, Magic Valley Regional Medical Center is offering a special deal on the examination.

Women can obtain a certificate for a $49 mammogram during National Breast Cancer Awareness Month in October. The certificates are available to the first 600 callers beginning Oct. 1 and are valid through March 31, 1998.

The certificates represent a $41 savings and are available at Magic Valley Regional's Outpatient Services in the Professional Plaza, 525-J Sheup Ave.

"This year more than 46,000 U.S. women will die from breast cancer - an estimated 154 of them will be from Idaho. Early detection through mammography could save many of these lives because it can detect breast cancer as early as two years before it can be felt," said Gary Andrews, Southern Idaho Regional Cancer Center director.

The reduced-cost exams also are made possible with help of the cancer center, Southern Idaho Radiology and the following Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Foundation endowments: Curtis I. and Wilma H. Eaton, Gordon and Joyce Glesmann, Esther Wise and Virginia Wolter. For more information, call 736-1675.

Shoshone School Board to discuss construction

SHOSHONE - The Shoshone School Board will hold a special meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Media Center at Lincoln Elementary School.

Discussion will focus on building construction, including a progress report and bid packages.

An executive session may be called if necessary.

New program to go online at Jerome municipal utility

JEROME - A yearlong city effort to update municipal utility billing technology will pay off for staff and customers.

Jerome is nearing completion of a project to revamp its computer system and will replace an outdated IBM System 36 mainframe with a Novell network system. Network administrator Kathy Markus has coordinated the project and will oversee its operation.

The biggest change utility customers in Jerome will see is a revised billing statement. The new system allows for a level pay system so customers can have utility bills averaged over a year, if they wish. That should make it easier for customers to budget. Currently, Jerome's utility customers pay more in the summer and less in the winter due to consumption patterns.

Flyers showing a sample of the city's new utility bill, along with detailed information, are available at City Hall and the library.

"We hope our customers will like the new format and will find it more helpful," City Clerk Kathy Miller said.

Portuguese Hall beer, wine license on tap in Wendell

WENDELL - The Wendell City Council will hold a special meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday at City Hall to discuss pending beer and wine licenses for the Portuguese Hall, and personnel matters.

The public is invited. Wednesday the council tabled the decision on the Portuguese Hall's license because of residents north of F Avenue East claimed the licensing would negatively affect their neighborhood and cause auto accidents.

Representatives of the hall, in an industrial zone on the south side of F Avenue East, said drinking is allowed only inside the hall, and a state official who visited the site approved the licensing.

The council also will meet in executive session to discuss personnel matters.

Pay Less stores ready for change

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - The Pay Less Drug Stores in Twin Falls and Burley are going through changes inside and out.

At the beginning of the year the name will be changed to RiteAid, reflecting their new owner. The RiteAid company, based in Harrisburg, Penn., purchased the 1,000 stores in the Thrifty/Pay Less chain last December, said spokeswoman Sarah Datz.

RiteAid also has been looking at whether the Twin Falls store will relocate or remain at Blue Lakes Boulevard North and Addison Avenue, she said. Company representatives have talked with the neighboring Albertson's Food Center about possible repaving of their stores at the corner, but no decisions have been made.

"We are not leaving Twin Falls. That's a very popular store with us. The location is an excellent location," Datz added. It's on one of the busiest corners in town and affords easy access. "We've been evaluating all of our sites since we acquired the chain."

A Utah development company working with Albertson's presented to neighbors, plans for a new shopping area behind the grocery store and asked about the sale of their properties.

If RiteAid winds up making physical changes at Pay Less stores, they probably will include a drive-up pharmacy window, Datz said. The windows have been popular with senior citizens and people

City elections field rounded out at last

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Across the Magic Valley, some cities reported their lineups for the Nov. 4 city elections Friday, while one candidate pulled out of a race.

Following are some additional candidates and goings in 1997 city elections:

Castleford: Incumbents Linda Calhoun and Ray Fabela are running unopposed for four-year council seats, while incumbent Herb Runyan is unopposed in his bid for a two-year council seat.

Dietrich: No one has filed for two open council seats.

Hagerman: City Council incumbents Pete Weir and Delra Glauner and challenger Geraldine Olney filed for four-year terms. Incumbent Berman Woods and challenger David Spider filed for a two-year council term.

Hazelton: Mayor J. Ervid Van Sickle is unopposed for another term. Kevin Anderson and Kent Sullivan filed for open four-year council terms, while Bill R. Culver filed for an open two-year term. Council members Emmett Kent, Joyce Douglas and Jerry Andreassen will not seek re-election.

Martwah: Mayor Terry Hanson is challenged by David Van Lecuwen for a four-year term as mayor. A pair of four-year council seats are being contested by incumbent council member Mary Grisham and challenger Dawna Belnap, Kelly Cutler, Paul LaRusso and Walter Kidd III.

Paul: Dan Evecheart has withdrawn from the race for a four-year council seat.

Twin Falls: The Times-News roundup on city elections contained one inaccuracy and omitted one candidate.

Jerome: Jim Samargis is one of eight candidates running for two four-year council seats on the Jerome City Council. Samargis' name was misspelled in a story Friday.

Wendell: Incumbent council member Fred McCloud has filed for a two-year council term. His name was omitted Friday.

The Times-News regrets the errors.

Triumph residents endorse cleanup plan for mine

The Associated Press

HAILEY - A cleanup plan that could include removing three beaver dams to divert water flow has been approved by people who live around the old Triumph Mine and state environmental officials.

Officials say the agreement could lead to the start of cleanup operations next summer, a year ahead of schedule. The Triumph Mine is a few miles from Hailey. Decades of silver mining operations have left piles of mine debris laced with arsenic and lead.

More than four years ago, the federal Environmental Protection Agency proposed putting the site on the national Superfund list. Local residents objected, knowing of the restrictions and glacial pace of cleanup that would mean.

EPA four years ago agreed to let the state take the lead in the cleanup. The state Division of Environmental Quality and state Lands Department, which supervises some of the land covered by tailings, have been working on plans.

"It's in all our interests to try and get that site cleaned up as soon as possible," said Bob Hanson, the state's mine waste program manager.

At a meeting, residents gave the Lands Department permission to remove three beaver dams diverting a river through a tailings pond.

That's one of 18 possible cleanup options to be released in November. A contractor could be selected in April or May. Cleanup measures range from doing nothing to hauling the tons of tailings away. Both are considered unlikely. "The primary goal is to protect water quality and human waste," said Scott Nichols, attorney with the state land agency.

Work also could include removing soil around the 25 homes in the area. How much would have to be removed depends on the level of contamination.

Phelps Dodge mining company files plan to drill in Copper Basin

The Associated Press

KETCHUM (AP) - Phelps Dodge, one of the world's largest mining companies, has filed a plan with the U.S. Forest Service to conduct exploratory drilling in the Copper Basin, between Ketchum and Mackay in central Idaho's mountains.

The plan calls for drilling nine holes to determine if copper exists in the area, a historic mining region on the East Fork of the Big Lost River.

Ray Henderson of the Salmon and Challis national forests said three proposed drilling sites are next to a road running through a flat, grassy area. Other sites are on sagebrush-covered hillsides, near a spur road, a temporary road and within 400 feet of a road.

Henderson said Phelps Dodge plans to use rubber-tired vehicles to reach the sites. Once test drilling is done, the holes will be plugged and the disturbed area will be reseeded.

"It's pretty minor," he said. "This is an initial exploration. If they find a taste of something, they must submit another plan."

Laura Scallies of the Idaho Conservation League is critical of the Forest Service and Phelps Dodge for the way the plan was submitted and its environmental impacts.

She said copper mines are huge, consuming undertakings that can make dramatic changes in the environment. "We do not need an open pit mine in the Copper Basin," she said.

TF activist launches gubernatorial bid

The Associated Press

BOISE (AP) - Dr. Peter Rickards Friday launched an independent bid for governor, with critics of two Republicans who might seek the job.

Rickards, a ponytailed Twin Falls podiatrist, said two Republicans mentioned as top contenders - Sen. Dirk Kempthorne and Rep. Michael Crapo - have very bad records on working on plutonium contamination problems at the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory.

Rickards, running as a Republican in 1996, unsuccessfully challenged Crapo for Congress.

Rickards, who has spent much of his time criticizing the way Gov. Phil Batt and other state leaders have handled the nuclear waste issue, told a Statehouse news conference Friday that his big issue is to stopping the spread of plutonium contamination from the INEEL.

Peter Rickards

"Idaho politicians are cooperating with the reburial of plutonium over our water supply," he said. "Idaho is becoming the plutonium incinerator center."

He said he would ban the disposal of plutonium contamination through incineration until the Centers for Disease Control Advisory panel can test the filters. He's a member of the panel.

Batt announced Sept. 17 he would not seek a second term as governor.

Rickards is circulating initiative petitions to force cleanup of the Radioactive Waste Management Complex at INEEL. He said he's about halfway to his personal goal of gathering 2,400 signatures.

Initiative backers need 41,335 signatures from registered voters by next July to qualify for the next general election ballot.

Rickards said it will take a major grass roots effort. "I will not have paid signatures, ever," he said.

Rickards said he favors removing Lower Snake River dams to protect salmon that try to return to Idaho to spawn, but would not vote to remove cattle from Idaho public lands. Grazing is compatible with other uses, he said.

Idaho counties split $7.7 million for in-lieu payments

BOISE (AP) — The federal government has a program where it shares its revenue from tax-exempt federal lands in the state. In Idaho's Magic Valley, the program translates to nearly $27 million this year. In Elmore County alone, the payment in lieu of taxes program is worth $612,412 — the largest single payment in the state. Other southern Idaho payments include:

- Cassia County: $537,676.
- Twin Falls County: $464,756.
- Blaine County: $451,377.

- Lincoln County: $183,265.
- Gooding County: $172,245.
- Minidoka County: $126,703.
- Jerome County: $119,151.
- Cassia County: $41,732.

Since Idaho has a lot of federal land, about 32 million acres, it gets a lot of money from the federal government. This year, the state will receive such in-lieu payments with $7.7 million more out to the 44 counties.

New Mexico gets the biggest payment, $1.1 billion, followed by California, $1.1 billion, Arizona, $9.4 million, Utah $9.3 million and Montana, $8.9 million.

The director of the Bureau of Land Management, Pat Shea, said the payments in lieu of taxes help local government carry out such vital services as firefighting and police protection and construction of public schools and roads.

The payments to counties are based on a formula taking into account population and the amount of federal land within a county. The revenue comes from activities such as livestock grazing and timber harvesting.

St. Luke's hospital chief loses job in merger with Wood River center

HALLEY (AP) — Due to a merger between St. Luke's Regional Medical Center and Wood River Medical Center, Al Stevenson is out as administrator of the hospital at Halley.

Wood River Medical Center Chairman Geri Herbert said in an announcement that Stevenson's termination was effective immediately.

Stevenson, 45, will continue to receive his monthly salary of $11,275 per month, $135,299 per year, plus benefits, for 17 months, under the termination agreement.

As part of the merger agreement, St. Luke's will provide interim management services to Wood River Medical Center. The Interim Management Agreement is expected to start in October," the news release said.

St. Luke's President Ed Dahlberg praised Stevenson when the merger was announced as a "visionary leader" and highly regarded administrator who played a pivotal role in bringing St. Luke's into the Wood River Valley.

Because the management contract calls for the on-site chief executive to be supported by "significant administrative supervision and involvement from Boise," the management requirements at Halley will be reduced from those provided by Stevenson, Dahlberg said.

Stevenson said the announcement did not come as a surprise, and St. Luke's decision to bring in their own administrator was "a very normal part of the merger process."

St. Luke's Vice President Bill Bodnar said four candidates have been interviewed for the new CEO position.

Stevenson was administrator of Moritz Community Hospital, Sun Valley, from 1981-86. After four years as hospital administrator at Pocatello, he returned to Moritz in 1992 and continued as administrator when the facility was merged with Blaine County Medical Center in 1992.

Woman claims schizophrenia, begs to be hospitalized, not jailed

By Penelope Reedy
Times-News writer

BURLEY — A local woman who has been in jail since being charged with battery claimed Friday that she is schizophrenic and suicidal and that she has not been able to take her medication while incarcerated.

Court records say Jackie L. Petty attacked officer Robin Green Sept. 3, shortly after being fingerprinted at the Mini-Cassia Justice Center. She had been arrested earlier in the day by the Idaho State Police on suspicion of battery on another woman.

At Petty's arraignment on charges of battery on a correctional officer, District Judge George Granata Jr. entered a plea of innocent on her behalf.

Petty told the court she has been denied her medication while in jail.

When Granata asked her whether she understood her Constitutional rights, she replied, "I don't understand what's going on."

Petty's attorney, public defender Kerry McMurray, said he had attempted to read and discuss her rights with her on two different occasions, but Petty became agitated both times.

"I need you to understand your Constitutional rights," Granata said.

"I need a hospital," Petty replied.

McMurray told the court he had discussed Petty's request with Mental Health Services and she is indeed supposed to be on medication, but officials at the jail told him she wouldn't be able to get it until as late as Oct. 5. He doesn't know what the problem is.

Granata told McMurray he wanted her to have it within a week, and he wants to be personally notified if that isn't the case. He apologized to Petty for not being able to move more quickly over her plea.

Petty's psychological evaluation isn't scheduled until Nov. 5 in Twin Falls, Petty said she doesn't think she can wait that long. She said she is suicidal and has been put in isolation at the jail.

"Is that all that happens to people when they try to kill themselves?" Petty said, "they just sit there." She said she is concerned for her own life and insisted she should be hospitalized.

Granata said he cannot make that decision until her psychological evaluation is done.

A status conference was scheduled Nov. 21.

100 expected at CROP Walk

Organizers hope to turn around trend of decreasing revenue

By Penelope Reedy
Times-News writer

BURLEY — More than 100 people are expected to participate in today's CROP walk, said public relations manager Jackie Handy.

Walkers will meet at 10 a.m. at the National Guard Armory near the airport in Burley or at the Rupert Christian Church on Eighth Street. Emerald Lake in Heyburn is the destination, where a picnic lunch will be served.

Walkers usually make the five-mile trip within one or two hours.

"We have a wide range of ages participating," local CROP Chair Leslie Crabtree said. "We used to walk 10 miles, but that was difficult for some of the elderly who wanted to walk too."

Walkers find sponsors to donate money when they complete the walk.

CROP was originally a synonym for "Christian Rural Overseas Program," which is now called Church World Services, an ecumenical organization originally formed to send wheat and other food crops from American farms to feed war-torn Europe in the difficult years following World War II.

Now, however, the 50-year old organization supports long-range self-help programs in 70 countries, particularly in the Third World.

Mini-Cassia keeps 25 percent of the money raised by the CROP walk. Last year walkers raised $2,400, but the figure has been dropping every year, Crabtree said.

If that figure is met or topped this year, three local assistance programs — Helping Hands, Oasis Outreach and the General Shepherd Alliance Church soup kitchen — will divide up a little more than $1,300 to help keep their burgeoning programs functioning.

Shawni and Mike Nix accommodate 10 to 13 people a night at their Helping Hands Mission on Miller Avenue. Many sleep there every night while they look for work, while others have severe emotional or mental problems and have no place to stay.

"They come from all over," Shawni said, "but the majority of them seem to be from the Magic Valley area."

Shawni Nix said although most of the food is donated to the Mission, they still need cash for heat and electricity. They're collecting wood right now in hopes they can heat the building with a small wood stove to save money.

"We make up a surprising number of food baskets," she said. "They go mostly to single moms whose paychecks won't stretch to the end of the month. They come here to get help feeding their children."

Unfortunately, fewer local couples are participating in CROP this year, and Crabtree isn't sure why. Crabtree hopes church members, whatever their denomination, will remember and contribute to the humanitarian aspects of Christianity.

"Just when we're seeing more people on our street corners with signs, fewer people seem willing to help," she said. "I wish the program doesn't just hand out food to people; it develops programs so people can help themselves."

JEROME — The city of Jerome is celebrating its 50th anniversary Wednesday.

The Jerome Public Library will hold an open house from 1 to 9 p.m. that day. Susan Jacobson, head librarian, said a display of old pictures of the city, the Miller Dam and the development of the canal system will be highlighted at the library. The public is invited.

The Jerome County Historical Society Museum will be open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wednesday for its anniversary open house celebration.

the historical society secretary said. The society is holding anniversary activities this fall.

Registration for Crabtree are 1 to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

The Northside Canal Co., which also is celebrating its 50th anniversary, will hold an open house from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday.

Judge releases search warrants for JonBenet's house

DENVER (AP) — Search warrants in the JonBenet Ramsey slaying case can be made public because media leaks in the case have made keeping them secret unnecessary, a judge ruled Friday.

Warrants seeking authorization to search the Ramsey's Boulder home were scheduled to be released Monday. A court order seal had been scheduled to expire Saturday.

"The court finds that the piracy interests in the four search warrants, affidavits and returns have been much diminished by other news disclosures, including publication of the ransom note," Judge Diane MacDonald wrote.

In her ruling, however, MacDonald agreed with a motion filed by prosecutors to keep portions sealed because people who are not suspects are mentioned.

"Certain parties who have been mentioned in the media and who are not considered suspects in this fall, prosecution at this time are mentioned... The court finds that piracy interests of those parties do outweigh the public interest of access to the news."

MacDonald said those portions will remain sealed "until there is an arrest in the case."

NASA identifies launch, landing sites for X-33 program

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NASA plans to launch the X-33 reusable launch vehicle at Edwards Air Force Base and land it at sites in California, Utah and Montana, the space agency said Friday in a final environmental impact study.

The preferred launch site is near Haystack Butte on the eastern end of Edwards, the Mojave Desert base north of Los Angeles where NASA tests aircraft and has large space shuttle launch ramps.

The three preferred landing sites are Shuman Lake, a dry lake bed near Baker, Calif.; Michael Army Air Field at Dagway Proving Ground, Utah; and Mainstream Air Force Base near Great Falls, Mont.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said the X-33 is expected to land in Utah sometime during 1999.

"The highly simplified ground operations at Vernal, compared to the shuttle system, will raise the prospects that Michael Army Airfield could become a major part of our nation's future space shuttle launch and operations system," Hatch said.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said seven sites were evaluated for use during a 14-month study that considered public safety, noise, impacts on biological resources and effects on cultural resources and natural resources.

NASA said that in 30 days it will formally announce whether it will proceed with the X-33 flight test program or discontinue the environmental impact statement.

"The study determined that the overall predicted environmental impacts of X-33 were minimal at all sites considered," said Rebecca McClell, director of environmental engineering and management at Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., and head of the study.

Wyoming senators deny lawsuit settlement

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — The recent settlement of a lawsuit over snowmobile use in Yellowstone National Park could result in trail closures, breaking a promise made just last week, Wyoming's U.S. senators charged Wednesday.

Republican Sen. Craig Thomas and Mike Enzi said in a joint statement that they would rather see the Park Service continue to fight the lawsuit filed by local rights and environmental groups.

"Park policy shouldn't be hatched by aggressive environmental lawyers," said Thomas, chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on National Parks.

"If lawsuits or the threat of lawsuits are going to dictate park policy," he said, "we want to know what's best for our national parks for protecting the resources or for the people who enjoy them for recreation."

Under the agreement that was announced Tuesday, the National Park Service will make a full study of the impacts of snowmobiling in Yellowstone and Grand Teton national parks. At least one park snowmobile trail will be closed each winter to gauge the impact on wandering bison.

But Enzi said Park Service Director Dan Cross had promised in a conversation that no trails would be closed in a settlement.

Mining

Before Thursday's deadline for public comment on the plan. If the plans are approved, work could start next month and be finished by December.

Phelps Dodge Exploration Manager Greg Coffin said the company hasn't been trying to hide anything and the documents being submitted are open to the public.

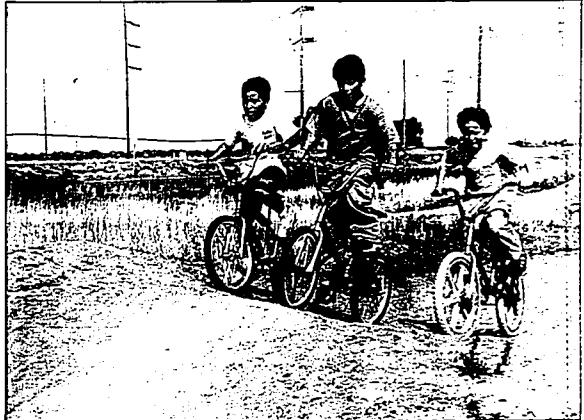

"There are rules and regulations and we operate within the laws of the land," he said.

The company also is proposing exploratory drilling along the East Fork of Indian Creek in Lemhi County. Coffin said they are the company's only two operations in Idaho.

Phelps Dodge is based at Phoenix and is the third-largest copper producer in the world. It has exploration offices in Colorado, Montana, Nevada and Arizona and 11 foreign countries.

Nature conservation groups have criticized Phelps Dodge for its plan to operate an open pit gold mine along the Big Blackfoot River near Lincoln, Idaho. That river was the setting for Norman Maclean's novel, "A River Runs Through It."

Louisiana authorities capture 3rd Idaho escapee; 2 remain free

BASILE, La. (AP) — The third of five Idaho prison escapees was recaptured Friday in southwest Louisiana where authorities have concentrated their manhunt since the breakout from a private prison 50 miles to the east.

"We had a man in the tocker who saw the last one as he went through the fence and that's how we were alerted to the escape."

and about midway between Baton Rouge and the Texas border. The prison has 504 inmates, 300 being held under contract with Idaho to relieve overcrowding in its prisons.

Babb is serving 20 years to life for the 1991 first-degree murder of Lumberton farmer Ronald Boone. According to trial testimony, Boone, Babb and his common-law wife, Kathy Spencer, met at a Polk bar. The three went to Boone's farm later that night, and Babb testified that he woke up the next morning to find Spencer gone and Boone shot to death in his own bed. Babb was eligible for parole in April 2011.

Copenhaver is serving 25 years to life for the 1994 first-degree murder of his stepfather, Fats Maheras of Idaho Falls. Copenhaver's mother, Dee Maheras, committed suicide a few months later. He was eligible for parole in May 2019.

Basile Detention Center Warden Richard Wall said rapist David Lloyd Wall said captured in Beauregard Parish, where a truck stolen just hours after Thursday night's escape was abandoned early Friday.

Still at large are murderer Roger Dale Babb, 41, of Polk and child sexual abuser Kallahan Lee Ziegler, 24, of Kootenai County. But Wall said authorities believe the pair remains in Beauregard Parish because of the abandoned truck was found there two reports of failed attempts to contact other escapees.

Babb, murderer Michael John Copenhaver, 21, and the other three cut their way through two chain-link fences Thursday night at the exercise area near one of the prison dormitories.

Copenhaver and burglar Leroy Dale James, 29, were captured about two hours after the escape.

The entire prison population was locked down on Friday, and the fences had been repaired, Wall said. A third fence might also be needed on the perimeter, he indicated.

A team of Idaho Correction Department administrators are scheduled to make a regular visit to the Basile facility next week.

Names of Unabomber trial jurors to be kept secret

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The prosecution and the defense agreed Friday that the names of the Unabomber trial jurors should be kept secret to insulate them from the pressures of intense media coverage.

Both sides told U.S. District Judge Garland Burrell Jr. that they had received letters and calls from around the world related to the scheduled Nov. 12 trial of Theodore Kaczynski, 55, who has pleaded innocent to using bombs to kill a lobbyist and a computer store owner in Sacramento, and injure two others.

Neither the U.S. attorney's office nor Kaczynski's court-appointed defense team provided specifics of the communications.

Both sides suggested that at least some of the letters were threatening or unbalanced, and they said that victims, potential witnesses and participants in the case had been exposed to unwanted contact with members of the public or reporters. Jurors, too, could be affected, they said.

There is an incredible amount of interest in this case and it doesn't subside," said defense attorney Judy Clarke, who asked Burrell to cloak all aspects of the jury screening process, including initial and follow-up questioning of the 600-member jury pool, from the public.

Prosecutor Robert Cleary added that the "media and other public contact would continue if the jurors were identified to the media and the public."

Clarke described the public attention in the Kaczynski case as "unprecedented," but did not mention such recent high-profile trials as the Oklahoma City bombing, the O.J. Simpson double-murder case and the just-finished trial of former NBC sportscaster Marv Albert.

As she spoke, the courtroom was less than half full.

Burrell on Sept. 5 ordered the names of jurors and six alternates to be kept secret for the duration of the trial. He has not decided whether to require anonymity to the jury screening.

An attorney representing the coalition of news gathering organizations — including several

Names of Unabomber trial jurors to be kept secret

Northern California newspapers and television stations, the Los Angeles Times and The Associated Press — urged Burrell to open jury screening to the public.

"It's fundamental to the history and function of public access to the courts," said attorney Charly Kenyon.

Burrell also delayed until Oct. 3 his ruling allowing prosecutors to have their own doctors conduct a psychiatric examination of Kaczynski. Clarke and fellow defender Quinn Dewitt had asked for the delay to give them time to appeal Burrell's decision to the federal appellate court in San Francisco.

Cleary said the government's psychiatrists plan to spend five days testing Kaczynski during the first week in October.

The government said it needed the tests to prepare its case against a possible mental impairment defense.

Kaczynski, who was arrested in April 1996 at his tiny Montana cabin, also was arrested in charges in New Jersey in the 1994 bombing death of an advertising executive.

Services available in RiteAid stores also might be added to the Pay Less stores, such as a business center with fax, packaging and copy services, one-hour photo processing and food items, some of which already are available, she said.

Pay Less pharmacies would be a particular target of change. Those in RiteAid stores are considered state-of-the-art with private consultation areas for the pharmacist and customer to talk and with expanded waiting areas, RiteAid also has started a campaign to promote "Vitamin Insulin" in all its stores. Their pharmacists have received training in consulting with customers about vitamins and herbs to improve health, she said.

Nora refuses to go quietly, dumps heavy rain in areas

AGUILA, Ariz. (AP) — The remains of Tropical Storm Nora refused to leave Arizona quietly Friday, bursting an earthen dike and flooding this desert farming hamlet and dumping inches of rain in the mountains.

People turned out in many areas to marvel at normally dry washes and riverbeds churning with runoff. More than 5 inches of rain fell in some areas a day after the former hurricane blew into Arizona from the Gulf of Mexico.

By mid-afternoon, what remained of the storm's center had passed well into Utah and headed toward Wyoming, said Bob Berkovitz, a National Weather Service meteorologist in Phoenix.

Berkovitz said he was surprised to see news reports downplaying Nora, which stayed west of Phoenix and caused little property damage or flooding in Yuma, where it entered the United States on Thursday with great media fanfare.

"It was a pretty hefty storm," he said. "It hit a lot of areas hard. It gave a lot of rain. Why are they making fun of it?"

No one was pool-pushing Nora in Wickenburg, a town about 50 miles northwest of Phoenix that received about 5 inches of rain.

The Hassayampa River through Wickenburg was a chocolate-colored torrent that closed two bridges Friday morning. Schools shut down and some families had to move to higher ground before the water receded. Many headed to the riverfront to witness the spectacle.

"It's been a long time since we've had water here," said 14-year-old Nick Pecora, who stood with his mountain bike on one bridge.

Pecora said the rain fell so hard overnight and Friday morning "you couldn't even see in front of you because it was coming down so fast."

Twenty miles east of Wickenburg, Centennial Wash flowed through cantaloupe fields and wiped out an earthen dike protecting Aguila. Up to 5 feet of water filled this town, which is home to 800 people, including migrant farm workers.

"We don't know where we're going to sleep tonight," said Dagoberto Duarte, a farm worker.

"The field is all covered with water," Duarte said. "You can see here the melons are no good."

About 40 people were evacuated from the hardest-hit area of Aguila. They went to a school, then had to move again when the school flooded.

At Juanita's Market, owner George Lopez used a broom to sweep water off his front stoop after each passing car washed water toward the door, which was protected by sandbags. Green cantaloupes floated with the floodwater.

"If they just keep the roads closed we'll be all right," he said.

Jerome planners call special meeting

The Times-News

JEROME — A special meeting of the Jerome City Planning and Zoning Commission has been called for 6:00 p.m. Monday, City Administrator Jon Cecil said.

Jerome City Planning and Zoning Administrator Art Brown will meet with the commission to discuss the preliminary plat of the Rocky Mountain Subdivision to be at 26 Frontage Road E. in Jerome County.

In other business, the commission is set to hold a work session on the Lincoln/Main Street Overlay Zone. The third reading of the overlay ordinance, scheduled for Sept. 16, was postponed by the City Council until the first meeting in October, to allow for work on ordinance details. The ordinance is designed to enhance the appearance of entrances into Jerome and establishes landscaping and setback standards.

The commission also will discuss on the impact-area map and land-use designations.

Residential zoning changes fall under scrutiny in Sun Valley

By Susan Bailey
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Changes in the site-review and residential sections of the zoning ordinances were the big topic for Sun Valley planning and zoning commissioners this week as the city plans for increased growth.

Proposed policy changes are under review, with no action planned in the near future.

New to the ordinances would be requirements for administrative review on landscape changes, new roofs or retaining a structure with another color. Such changes would require an application to the city and written notice to neighboring property owners.

City at-large member Paul Peaches said the policy follows a recent furor when a Sagehill-area homeowner painted his house pink.

Planners also took up defining and monitoring accessory structures for guest houses, secondary dwelling units, detached garages, tennis courts, swimming pools and horse shelters.

The city of Ketchum is debating merits of conditional-use permits for accessory dwelling units.

Sun Valley, meanwhile, is firmly committed to issuing conditional-use permits before allowing a secondary dwelling unit that might be attached or detached buildings used to house one or more people. A secondary unit would have to have a bathroom and cooking facilities, and cannot be smaller than 350 or larger than 800 square feet.

A renter for a secondary dwelling would have to live in the space for 90 days or more to be legal in Sun Valley.

Only one secondary dwelling unit would be permitted for each primary dwelling, and no lot of less than 20,000 square feet would be allowed to have a secondary unit.

Sun Valley planners argued about the definition of a guest house as a building without a kitchen, and said they would rule further on the issue in October. The zoning ordinance presently does not allow independent living in a guest house.

"I think guests should be able to be independent," said planning Commission Chairman Jim McLaughlin.

But city planner Bethann Skamser said a guest house with a kitchen easily could become a rental property.

"The kitchen has always been the way to control underground rentals," Skamser said.

City Council member Linda O'Shea said rentals by individual homeowners enable avoidance of taxes such as a bed tax required of commercial property-rental companies. She said she did not like to see unfair competition.

McLaughlin said that in the past year only four secondary dwelling units were built in the city.

Skamser said the issues deserve another look.

"We're seeing more and more of them," she said. "The idea was not to have short-term rentals there."

Like Ketchum hashing over how to control the possible rashly rentals in residential areas, Sun Valley plans to explore the ramifications further before approving the zoning changes.

Funeral held for 2 killed in shootout

INDIANA, Pa. (AP) — A minister made no attempt Friday to make sense of a shootout with police in his eulogy for two brothers killed in Idaho.

"They were struck down, your two sons, in a hail of bullets," the Rev. Roger Peterson told Martin and Famy Brodrick at the funeral for their sons, Craig, 30, and Doug, 27.

"If you're going to gain any sense of peace, you're going to gain it only as you find God's love in your heart," Peterson said.

The Brodrick brothers were killed Saturday after failing to signal a turn.

At the funeral, the brothers reportedly refused to cooperate with police, several officers arrived as backup, and gun fire erupted. One officer has said he may have fired a split second before Craig Brodrick reached for a handgun. Other officers maintained Brodrick fired first.

The exchange, however, left both Brodricks and Officer Mark Stall dead. Stall was buried on Wednesday amid a huge outpouring of emotion and support from thousands of police officers and thousands more citizens.

The site of the shootout has become a memorial for Stall, and attempts to remember the Brodrick brothers with crosses at the same site have been repeatedly vandalized.

Allegheny County Coroner Cyril Wecht, hired by the Brodricks' parents to investigate the deaths, said he "can't remember a case in which people were riddled with bullets to the extent these two young men were" and called it an outgrowth of Idaho's "ambiguity mentality."

The Brodrick brothers had only recently moved from their home in rural Brushy Valley, 10 miles southwest of Indiana, and taken jobs in a plastic factory.

About 25 members of the Brodricks' extended family sat shoulder-to-shoulder in the Graystone Presbyterian Church, some weeping quietly. Another 60 members of the congregation were in the sanctuary.

After the two gray metal caskets were wheeled up the aisle, Peterson gave the 20-minute eulogy. He said the brothers died together because they were inseparable.

"I'll share with the congregation one of the comments from a member of the family at the funeral home yesterday," Peterson said. "God needed two angels, and he couldn't take one without the other."

Twin Falls squad celebrates homecoming with convincing win

TWIN FALLS — The Bruin offense got back on track and Ryan Jund threw four touchdown passes as Twin Falls won its homecoming game, 44-7 Friday night in Bruin Stadium.

Twin Falls (3-1) spent the week preparing to face the strong arm of quarterback David Plotts, but the Bobcats went with Tyler Carson behind center.

"We wanted to get some pretty good heat on them, whoever was at quarterback," said Bruin coach Mark Schaal. "We forced them to throw the ball early and our secondary did a great job."

Carson threw four interceptions and completed just one of 16 first-half attempts and 2-of-19 on the night, and the Bobcats' offensive output fell in the hands of Logan Ormond, who carried the ball 18 times for 58 yards for Burley (0-4).

"That was a focus all week — getting back to basics, being physical up front and knocking people off the ball," Schaal said. "It makes a big difference."

Jund, plagued by interceptions in the two previous starts, completed touchdown passes to Fernando Salinas, Jake Robertson, Joe Durham and Jimmy Tyler. Six of the Bruins' seven scoring drives used five plays or less.

Robertson made sure the Bruins had good starting position with several big punt returns, starting with a 22-yard return that set the Bruins at the Burley 23-yard line for their opening drive.

Jund hit Salinas from 12 yards two three minutes into the game, and Brazilian exchange student Eduardo Serena de Andrade kicked the first of five extra points for a 7-0 lead. Andrade would later clear a 39-yard field goal in the second half.

Salinas opened Twin Falls' second drive with two 25-yard runs, setting up Jund's 26-yard toss to Robertson.

Burley's lone score came with a minute left in the first quarter when Ormond picked off a Ryan Jund pass and returned it 84 yards for a touchdown, cutting the Bruin lead to 14-7.

Twin Falls scored its next two touchdowns within two minutes of each other, as Salinas plunged in from one yard and, Jason Goodpastor intercepted Carson on the first play of the Bobcats' drive, and Jund hit Durham four plays later.

Salinas added a 63-yard score in the closing minutes of the half as the Bruins held a commanding 35-7 lead.

Taekwondo Grand Master will oversee local contest

BURLEY — Four years ago, taekwondo Grand Master Chang Jin Kang set a world record by breaking 1,068 boards with his hands in just over 13 minutes.

Today he's in town to oversee the Fifth Annual Burley Tournament of Champions competition.

This year's tournament begins at 10 a.m. at White Pine Elementary school and includes more than 120 competitors from five different states, including California, Nevada, Washington and Oregon. Locally, Twin Falls, Jerome, Ashton and Boise also will be represented.

From ages three to 60, all hels will compete in board breaking, sparring and sword fighting. Burley taekwondo instructors Sean Kay, a 4th-degree black belt and Lori Berg, a 2nd-degree black belt, will be competing for points hoping to earn enough to qualify as one of the nation's top 4 in their divisions. At the end of the season, the top 4 go on to compete in Sacramento for grand national champion honors in December.

"We're pretty excited about Grand Master Kang being here, he's well-known throughout the world," said Kay. "We're expecting some really good competition. I think they'll be more fun out of state this year because we've had more people competing at

U.S., Europe end Ryder day tied

Los Angeles Times

SOTOGRADE, Spain — What's longer than the ferry ride over to Tunisia? Longer than the road to Malaga? Longer than the line at the sangria stand?

It's the opening ceremony of the Ryder Cup, which turned out to be way too long for one little day to handle.

So two of Friday's matches sort of slid into Saturday's at water-logged Valderrama Golf Club, where the U.S. and Europe were tied, 3-3, after nearly 10 hours of play.

"Isn't the Ryder Cup neat?" U.S. captain Tom Kite asked. "This is really exciting stuff."

Really. Jeff Maggert, he might have said.

It's the time lengthy Maggert said it was too dark at 8:20 p.m. to go on with his match on the 16th hole, there were only two people who disagreed.

Of course, they were the guys Maggert and Justin Leonard had been to playing, Nick Faldo and Lee Westwood.

Faldo and Westwood were 2-up and Westwood was only a 6-foot birdie put away from possibly ending the match when Maggert squinted at Leonard's 25-foot putt and concluded it was too dark to play.

"There was a little strategy involved as well," he said. "They have the momentum. We don't want them to

Rose to baseball: Let me in

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — More than eight years after he was banned from baseball for life, Pete Rose applied for reinstatement Friday, trying to eliminate the barrier keeping him out of the Hall of Fame.

"Right now, the ball is in their court," Rose said on his nationally syndicated radio show. "I just hope they approach it with an open mind."

Baseball's career hits letter said he signed a letter that was faxed to acting commissioner Bud Selig, who has shown no inclination to let Rose back in the game.

"He has requested that baseball reinstate him so he can spend the rest of his life in the game he loves," said Rose's lawyer, S. Gary Spicer.

None of the 14 people banned from life by baseball for gambling has been reinstated. Other baseball officials, speaking on the condition they not be identified, have said that Rose, 56, never will be allowed back until he admits he bet on baseball.

The matter will be handled in due course," Selig said in a brief statement, a signal no decision is likely until next year at the earliest.

"OK, that's what we'll wait for," Rose said on his show, broadcast on the Sportstar Radio Network.

Asked about the timing of his appeal, Rose responded, "Is the time right? We don't know if the time is right."

"You see how people receive me — overwhelming support," he said, referring to his many recent public appearances, including the major league debut of his son, Pete Jr., for the Cincinnati Reds.

A TV show you could really sink your teeth into

Well, the new fall TV season is already upon us, so I suppose it's too late to pitch the following storyline idea to the network honchos. But I think it has potential to be every bit as popular as "Men Behaving Badly," so maybe they'll keep it in mind as a mid-season replacement.

Lend me your ear, and chew on this: In envision a sitcom tentatively titled "Reality Bites" — no relation to the Winona Ryder movie by that name. It would star Mary Albert (playing herself) as a middle-aged, nationally known Jewish sportsaster.

When he becomes embroiled in a sex scandal and ultimately loses his job, Mary is forced to rent out a room in his house so he can boost his sagging finances.

Guess who answers Mary's classified ad? A young, nationally known black boxer, played by Mike Tyson.

At first, the resulting culture clash creates endless possibilities for laughs.

take it to the clubhouse. So let them sleep on it."

And the reaction of Faldo and Westwood?

"Well, they weren't too happy," Maggert said. "They were under the impression we were going to play the 16th hole. It surprised them. And that was the intention, actually."

One other match will be completed Saturday morning before the scheduled four-ball and foursome matches — Tom Lehman-Phil Mickelson are even with Ignacio Garrido-Jesper Parnevik after 12 holes.

That could mean that the Lehman-Mickelson duo plays 42 holes Saturday, if Kite keeps them on the course for both matches; it might be a marathon, but they're up to it, according to Kite.

"Sure they are," he said.

tournaments so people know who we are now... King arrived last night to participate in a black belt competition and will make sure all the rules of the International Taekwondo Council (ITC) are followed.

Grand Master was born in Seoul, Korea, in 1944 and by the age of 24 he was appointed as the Commanding Officer of the Taekwondo Exhibition Team for the Korean Army in Vietnam. In 1970 he received the "In Han" award, the highest honor for distinguished service and military merit and in 1980 he operated the Santa Ana, Calif. LIDO Taekwondo School. Today he lives and operates five taekwondo studios.

Three years ago he was promoted to ninth degree black belt during the first test done of its kind in the world. "The kids definitely know who he is," Berg said.

King is returning for second trip to Burley after attending a training session here this summer. He normally attends at least 15 tournaments a year all over the nation.

King is very active in taekwondo and I fully support his praise," said Kang, who'd like to compete but there won't be anyone at his level. "I'm still in training, but today I'm just going to observe and control the tournament."

But as Mary and Mike get to know each other better (perhaps in a few conversations over dinner?) they discover that they actually have a lot in common. Similar tastes, if you will. The pair begin double dating, and they even open a restaurant together—the Fastes-Like-Chicken Cafe—in an episode—guest-starring—Anthony Hopkins as a customer who declares that he's never had liver and favas beans that tasted quite like THAT before. So life gets pretty delicious for the toothsome, I mean twosome. But they fall upon lean times when health inspector Sweeney Todd (Alexander Holyfield) accuses them of using human flesh in some of their entrees ("What exactly is IN these ladyfingers, anyway?") and forces them to shut down.

The show would co-star O.J. Simpson and Frank Gifford as Mary's impending former broadcast partners. Johnnie Cochran, in his first acting appearance since a certain high-profile California murder trial, would play Mary's lawyer. Robin Givens would have a recurring guest role as Desiree Washington. And Dennis Rodman would be a real kick as Mary's personal trainer.

Sound like a hit? It's certainly food for thought.

Eagles heat up the court at Valley of Sun tourney

The Times-News

PHOENIX, Ariz. — The College of Southern Idaho volleyball team ran its winning streak to seven matches Friday, taking five straight at the Valley of Sun tournament.

Two of those wins were over ranked opponents, but the toughest match was over unranked Yavapai, Ariz., 14-16, 15-3, 15-10.

"Yavapai actually had the better athletes of anyone we played," Stroud said. "But we didn't play very well in that match."

The same couldn't be said about the rest of the day, which saw CSI (36-1) rout four good opponents: Eastern Arizona (15-6, 15-10), Bismarck Community College (15-5, 15-5), 16th-ranked University of Texas, Brownsville (15-6, 15-6), and No. 10 Phoenix College (15-5, 15-3).

"We thought to get up for every one of them," Stroud said. "We played really well up through the Brownsville game."

Reneke Gause is "starting to get in shape," said former Charnette Fair for a formalized block up front. Stroud said.

CSI faces fourth-ranked Glendale Community College this morning, followed by perennial California state champion Golden West, plus Mesa Community College and Arizona Western.

News of CSI's recent loss, their first in three years, has gotten around to the other teams, but it hasn't helped them much, Stroud said.

"They're all playin' their guts out against us," he said. "But after the first game, they're not down and they're just going man, they keep pounding us."

Ricks, the team that broke CSI's 190-match win streak last week, is the only other unbeaten team at the Valley of Sun, but the two Region 18 fees will not meet this weekend.

Dodgers stay alive in West

DENVER (AP) — Mike Piazza launched the longest home run in Coors Field history, a 496-footer that enabled the Los Angeles Dodgers to remain in the NL West race with a 10-4 win over the Colorado Rockies on Friday night.

The Dodgers began the night trailing San Francisco, which led San Diego 9-2 in the fifth inning late Friday, by two games in the division race. The Giants and Dodgers each have two games remaining this weekend.

Ismael Valdes (10-11) held the Rockies to one run on five hits through seven innings before four errors set up three runs in the eighth.

The Dodgers hit a season-high six homers. Eric Karros had a three-run homer, Raul Mondesi had a pair of solo homers, and Greg Gagne and Eric Young also had solo shots.

But none compared to Piazza's 38th homer, a two-run blow in the sixth. Piazza's drive off Darrell Holmes carried onto the concourse in left-center field — an estimated three feet farther than the previous record of 493 feet by Colorado's Larry Walker on Aug. 31. Last Sunday, Piazza became just the second player to hit a fair ball out of Dodger Stadium.

Los Angeles scored four runs in the first inning before Jimmy Weight (8-12) could retire a batter.

Bruins

cleared the crossbar by inches and ended on 11-play, 41-yard drive in the third quarter, aided by a pass interference call on 3rd-and-5 near midfield.

Burley stopped Twin Falls on fourth down from the Bobcat 8-yard line and later marched deep into Bruin territory before finishing their final drive with three straight interceptions.

Packers, Jaguars say it's time to win pretty

The Associated Press

The Green Bay Packers have won three of their first four games, but they say it as easily could be the other way around. The Jacksonville Jaguars are undefeated after three games, but feel lucky they don't have a losing record.

The Packers and Jaguars hit the road Sunday looking for wins, but more importantly in search of the level of play that carried them to the Super Bowl title and AFC Championship game, respectively, last season.

Despite the Packers being favored by double digits, they lost their last three games have come down to the final minute. Green Bay is a 17-point favorite against Detroit (2-2) Sunday.

The Packers, who didn't give up in search of a game all last season, held off Minnesota 38-32 last Sunday after building a 31-7 halftime bulge. Green Bay's defense, No. 1 last year, has fallen to 14th overall, 2nd against the run — and get to face Detroit's Barry Sanders on Sunday.

"Every game has been a slugfest. It's going to be that type of year," coach Mike Holmgren said. "Let's not kid ourselves. It's a very competitive league. We finished the season so strong last year. That in itself can be a little misleading."

But safety LeRoy Butler said, although the Packers are a missed chip-shot field goal away from a 4-0 record, "I don't think teams are scared of us anymore."

The Jaguars, who have won their first three games with three different quarterbacks, look to reestablish their running game against Washington (2-1), which led the west in run defense in the league. The Jaguars' 28 yards per carry is tied for 28th in the league with Miami.

"Even though we came out with the win, our ground game has got to improve," running back Jerome Means said after Monday night's game against Pittsburgh, which wasn't decided until the final play when Jacksonville returned a blocked field goal for a touchdown.

"We've got to find answers. We're 3-0, and we haven't played our best. We know there's a lot of room for improvement."

The other games Sunday are: Arizona at Tampa Bay, Denver at Atlanta, Tennessee at Pittsburgh, New Orleans at the New York Giants, Baltimore at San Diego, Chicago at Dallas, the New York Jets at Cincinnati, St. Louis at Oakland, Seattle at Kansas City, and Philadelphia at Minnesota.

On Monday night, San Francisco visits Carolina. Buffalo, Indianapolis, Miami and New England are idle.

Despite their early struggles, the Jaguars take a league-best, eight-game regular season winning streak into Washington. The game may be decided in the air where the Jaguars, led by quarterback Mark Brunell, have the No. 2 passing offense and the Redskins have the stingiest pass defense.

"This is the best we've seen," Washington cornerback Darrell Green said. Keenan McCardell and Jimmy Smith "are young and energetic in an exciting offense. Not prima donna types, but hard-working, paid-the-dues type guys."

There are three intriguing matchups Sunday that pit coaches against their former teams. Dan Reeves leads his winless Falcons against the undefeated Broncos and quarterback John Elway, who hasn't missed a chance to badmouth his former coach since Reeves left Denver four years ago.

"We had 12 great years there and an awful lot of good times," Reeves said. "It's just unfortunate for me and my family that it ended the way it did. Rejection always stings, but that part of my life is over with."

Dave Wannstedt leads the NFL's other winless team, the Chicago Bears, into Dallas, where he was defensive coordinator for the Cowboys (2-1).

"We know the Bears are desperate and we know what kind of coach Dave is," Dallas running back Emmitt Smith said. "We'll get their best shot. I know they'll come after me trying to stop the run. That's the way Dave's defenses always play."

In Cincinnati, former Jets coach Bruce Cofield goes against his former team, with ex-Jet Jeff Blake at quarterback. Blake, who never got a chance to play in New York, has become one of the league's best. Blake's backup on the Bengals (1-2) is another former Jet, Boomer Esiason.

All three downplay the significance of facing New York (2-2). "Any special feeling about playing the Jets? Not really," Blake said.

Royals, traffic jams, homers at Ryder

SOTOGRADE, Spain (AP) — Britain's Prince Andrew was up at 3:30 a.m. Friday and showed up at Valderrama a half-hour later to watch preparations for the Ryder Cup. He got wet in the morning with morning rain, but he was also impressed with what he saw, as groundskeepers swept water off the course after a torrential downpour.

"This, I have to say, is probably the best, most immaculate course anywhere at the moment," said the Duke of York.

"I was actually talking to some of the teams and caddies, and they were all saying they were worried about taking a divot out of the course."

CHEERIO: The BBC, known for its even-handed treatment of world news, drops all semblance of neutrality in the Ryder Cup. "Let's not get downhearted, there's a long way to go," said one radio announcer covering the match Thursday as the Europeans lost a hole.

And this on the 10th in better-half when Nick Faldo missed a 5-foot putt: "Faldo for birds... Oh, the putt rims the hole. A chance gone, a chance gone."

They also cheered for the Swedes, Jesper Parnevik and Per Ullrik Johansson. "What a turnaround for these Swedes, what a turnaround for these Swedes. They're 1-up after nine," a commentator said.

And finally, when Davis Love III and Phil Mickelson missed birdie putts on the 18th hole to lose their better-half match to Costantino Rocca and Jose Maria Olazabal, there was this: "What a great win for these guy, turning it around. What a psychological blow for the Americans."

A spectator rises above the crowd at the opening day of the Ryder Cup Friday in southern Spain.

The pressroom also erupted with loud applause when Europe won a match. There was dead silence when the Americans won.

TRAFFIC PROBLEMS: Traffic and weather conspired against a smooth opening Friday.

"I am sitting in a traffic jam, and I've moved one kilometer (half-mile) in the past hour," a motorist complained in a cellular phone call to a radio talk show that was lamenting snarls on a major highway leading to the course.

The problem is a two-lane road that is creating bottlenecks. Of course, traffic problems are also routine at majors like the British Open and U.S. Open. "It reflects badly on Spain that this stretch of the freeway wasn't completed before the Ryder Cup began," an announcer fretted on the radio.

Meanwhile, there were mixed reviews on Tiger Woods' Ryder Cup debut. He teamed with Mark O'Meara in trouncing Bernhard Langer-Colin Montgomerie, 3 and 2, in four-ball play.

But all that changed in the afternoon, when Langer-Montgomerie swamped Woods-O'Meara in the alternate-shot foursomes, 5 and 3.

Kite said he knew why. "They didn't play very well," he said.

Seve Ballesteros had a more esoteric explanation. "This is the game of golf," he said. "Sometimes there is no explanation."

Woods would have preferred a clear explanation as to why neither he nor O'Meara had much luck on the greens in the afternoon.

"I've just got to hit some putts," Woods said. "The rains coming down screwed up my feel for the greens. Some were kind of fast, some were kind of slow."

Presumably, then, some were just right, just not enough of them.

Scott Hoch made an important putt for the U.S. His 6-footer on the 18th hole, which followed Lee Janzen's six-iron to the green, produced a 1-up victory in the afternoon foursomes against Jose Maria Olazabal and Costantino Rocca.

Popcorn sales build scouting program

TWIN FALLS—Each year Scouts across the United States and Canada sell popcorn to raise money to support their programs and activities. This year's annual popcorn sale begins Wednesday.

The sale is the largest product fundraiser sold by the Boy Scouts of America and Scouts Canada. The sale is entering its 17th year and continues to grow each year with over one million scouts participating.

The goals of the program are to create a community-wide event that unites boys, local and national organizations of the ideals and values of scouting as well as the benefits that scouting provides today's youth and to increase community awareness of each local council's popcorn sales which provides a major funding enabling local scout groups and units to begin their scouting program.

Wednesday, scouts will be going to friends, family and neighbors. Prices for popcorn packages range between 55 and 75 and include varieties such as maple, vanilla, popcorn, caramel corn with almonds and pecans, 97 percent fat free caramel corn, light butter flavor microwave popcorn and an associate caramel corn. On average, 60 percent of the popcorn made by local scouts will support the local scouting program.

For more information, contact the Boy Scout office at 733-2067.

Presbyterian Church pipes in a new and improved sound

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS

Piping Up - With meticulous accuracy and artistic skill, the pipe organ in the Twin Falls Presbyterian Church was taken apart, moved to Springfield, Ill., for an extensive expansion and returned to the church this week.

Robert Dial, an expert organ builder from Springfield, was selected by a church committee to complete the extensive renovation.

Apprentice Joe Salvador of St. Louis, Mo., helps tune each pipe.

"The organ has four divisions - the great organ, the swell organ, the peddle organ and the choir organ," explained the church's organist Barbara Mix. The organ expansion is a gift to the church by James Kinney "in loving memory of his wife Mary Jane Kinney." The cost is not being revealed.

The original organ, built in the 1920s, had 580 pipes. The new one has 1,331 feet long. Five hundred of the pipes are used for congregational singing. Each pipe fits into a large wooden windchest that lets air into a particular pipe through the use of leather valves.

The original organ had 12 ranks, or mixtures of sound; now it has 29 ranks. A two-manual console has been replaced by three manuals, and it will now have the capability of working with a number of computer devices.

"We have gained all kinds of sound colors," said Mix.

The solid state combination relays and all-electronic key bank will allow the organist to register and store in the memory bank the register. Please see ORGAN, Page C2

The majestic musical instrument weighs almost six tons and, installed in the church, occupies three adjoining chambers.

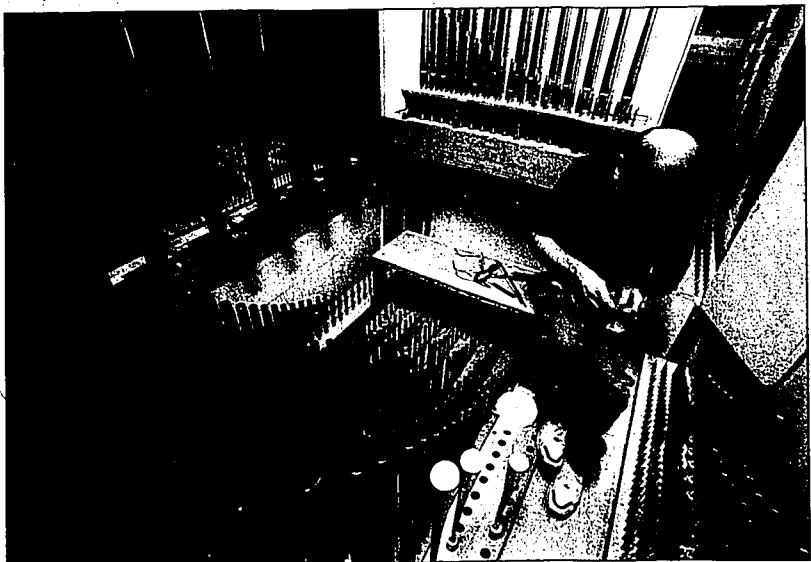

Church organist Barbara Mix of Twin Falls rehearses on a Friday afternoon after the pipe organ is completely installed.

Bob Dial of Springfield, Ill., builder of the pipe organ, fine tunes one of the trumpets while his apprentice plays each pipe.

Accident takes singer's life

The Associated Press

"If my life is motivated by an ambition to leave a legacy, what I would like to leave is a legacy of ambition. But, if my life is motivated by the power of God's spirit in me and the awareness of the indwelling Christ, if I allow His presence to guide my motives, that's the only way I think I really can leave a great legacy."

—Rich Mullins, 1955-1997

NASHVILLE — Contemporary Christian singer-songwriter Rich Mullins was killed in an automobile accident late Sept. 19, in LaSalle County, Ill.

Rich Mullins, who performed with Mullins was also involved in the accident and is listed in critical condition. Mullins is survived by his mother, two older sisters and two younger brothers. Although the accident claimed Mullins' life, his legacy will continue through the music that he recorded during of his 10-year career at Reunion Records.

Burt Koltsh, Reunion Records president and former president of the Gospel Music Association, said, "We are all deeply saddened at the tragic loss of Rich Mullins. Rich's life and his songs always reflected truth and honesty, stripped of all superficiality. He challenged us to live life with purpose and meaning and to know God intimately."

Between 1986 and 1996, Mullins recorded nine records for Reunion, including his last recording, "Songs." He is best known for writing the church standards "Awesome God," which in 1988 was voted one of the top three songs of the decade by the Christian Research Report, and "Sometimes By Step." In addition to eight other number one songs.

Mullins was nominated for 12 Dove Awards and had his songs recorded by artists such as Amy Grant, "Sing Your Praise to the Lord," "Love of Another Kind," and "Doubly Good To You."

Read Arvin, longtime friend and producer of seven recordings for Mullins said, "Rich Mullins was the best writer in contemporary Christian music, and he is utterly irreplaceable. He wasn't really happy, if I'm being candid. But he turned his discontent into art, separating himself from the careerists that thought it would be neat to make money out of Jesus. The first thing I am going to do when I see him in heaven is beg his forgiveness for being so inept at bringing his songs to light."

Singer Michael W. Smith said, "Rich Mullins' life and music has impacted me more than anyone I know. He had the ability to take the mundane and make it majestic. Nobody on this planet wrote songs like he did and I feel we've lost one of the only true poets in our industry. I love Rich Mullins and no one will ever know how much I'll miss him."

Mullins spent much of his time working with Native Americans in the Southwest and with Compassion International.

He once said, "I hope that I would leave a legacy of joy, a legacy of real compassion, because I think there is a great joy in compassion. I don't think that you know joy apart from caring deeply about people — caring enough to actually do something."

Both the Mullins and McKiver families have asked that, in lieu of flowers, donations should be made to Rich Mullins Memorial Fund, P.O. Box 7000, Colorado Springs, Colo. 80933. Cards may be sent to Kid Brothers of St. Frank, P.O. Box 11529, Wichita, Kan. 67202.

A memorial service will be held Friday at Christ Presbyterian Church in Nashville. A public service will be held at 7 p.m. Sunday at Henry Lewis Arena on the campus of Wichita State University.

Presbyterian women announce schedule

BURLEY — The Burley Presbyterian Women have announced their fall schedule.

The first regular meeting is planned for 10 a.m. today at the church, corner of Burton Avenue and 21st Street. Light refreshments will be served, followed by a worship service and business meeting. The Burley group will host the Fall Gathering for Presbyterian Women on Oct. 18 at the Kendall Presbyterian. Activities start at 9:30 a.m. and conclude between 2 and 3 p.m., with lunch served by the Burley group. Pastor David and Nancy Goebel will participate in worship at 10 a.m.

Remaining meetings for 1997 include the Oct. 25 regular meeting. Nov. 22 Thanksgiving service, the annual Holiday Luncheon and Bake Sale fund-raiser on Dec. 6 and a Christmas program and potluck on Dec. 15.

Money raised at the June yard sale and holiday luncheon goes to mission projects supported by the group, including the Mini-Cassia Church, the Helping Hand Mission and church needs locally and worldwide.

CROP Walk set for today in Mini-Cassia

BURLEY — The annual Mini-Cassia area CROP Walk is scheduled for today.

Walkers should meet at 10 a.m. in front of the National Guard Armory, 2000 E. Main St. in Burley or at the Rupert First Christian Church, 1110 Eighth St. in Rupert. Both groups of walkers will end at Emerald Lake in Heyburn, where lunch will be served at approximately 11:30 a.m. to noon.

Last year, approximately 100 walkers collected $5,400.

CROP, originally an acronym for "Christian Rural Overseas Program," has grown from emergency relief to supporting long-range self-help and development in Third World countries. Local Baptist agencies will receive 25 percent of the money raised. Each walker is encouraged to bring a can of food, soap or a personal hygiene item to help restrict the indigent pantry.

Anyone interested can contact their church leaders, Leslie Carter at 683-8467 or Marge Draper at 678-3406.

Kimberly Methodists plan birthday potluck

KIMBERLY — The annual "All Parties Celebrate" Celebration Potluck begins at 6 p.m. today at the Kimberly United Methodist Church. Everyone should bring a dish to share and a seat at the table for the month in which their birthday falls. Music will be provided by Robin Eschenburg.

Mormons ready to greet Baptists

By Jim Riddler Knight-Ridder News Service

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Southern Baptists will be warmly welcomed to Salt Lake City even though they plan to proselytize Mormons, Gordon B. Hinckley, president of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, told religion writers from around the nation last week.

Hinckley, 87, said members of his faith are a friendly people who will welcome the Baptists to Salt Lake, headquarters to some 10 million Mormons in 160 nations.

And he justified about the reported efforts by Baptists to convert Mormons during the Southern Baptist Convention in Salt Lake City next June.

"I am told ... they will try to proselytize among us," he said at the national meeting of the Religion Newswriters Association in Salt Lake City.

But Hinckley said they are looking for converts, I can think of three or four I would like to turn over to them." Hinckley said Mormons might have some things to learn from Baptists when they arrive in the world headquarters of his fast-growing faith.

"Baptists ... Baptists" have announced a "Crossover Salt Lake City" campaign in which Baptists from around the nation will go door-to-door to proselytize among their June convention in Dallas, Southern Baptists were sending videos and printed materials to educate members of the church about their faith, the materials said that Mormons aren't true Christians.

Chris Jones to speak in Twin Falls

TWIN FALLS — Chris Jones will speak at 11 a.m. Sunday at the Living Waters Christian Center, 252 Fifth Ave. E.

Jones is the founder and president of Christian Advance International.

He and his wife, Allyson, direct one of the largest Sunday school programs in the world in Mexico City where they minister to an average of 40,000 children and adults.

Christian Advance International is an international ministry headquartered in Houston. The newest CAI ministry is in Dangriga, Belize.

The public is invited. For more information, call Pastor Vernon Bishop at 733-2472 or 324-2002.

Baptists to honor departing minister

CASTLEFORD — A going away party will honor the departure of Mrs. Loretta Lopez from the Twin Falls Baptist Church.

Lopez resigned his pastorate in Castleford, where he has been full-time pastor since 1994. Before, he served as a pastor for the Magic Valley Christian Ministry. While in Castleford, the Lopez family have been involved in many community programs as well as school activities and church development. They will be moving to Bend, Ore., to initiate a ministry with the Hispanic community.

The public is invited to attend the reception.

Methodist women cook up fund-raiser

JEROME — A homemade stew and cornbread feed will be held from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Friday at the United Methodist Church, 211 S. Buchanan.

Prepared by the church women, the annual luncheon will be served on a come-as-you-are and all-you-can-eat basis. Homemade desserts and beverages also are on the menu. Proceeds will be used for United Methodist Women's missions projects.

Summit's focus: 'Unreaped harvest'

By Judith Weinraub The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — First there are the thousands of trays of food left over from catered dinners all across America. Then there are the truckloads of vegetables left in fields because they're not pretty enough for the farmer to sell. And the mountains of perishables that rest in restaurants, cafeterias, hotels, hospitals and schools can't use right away.

It comes to an estimated 96 billion pounds a year, a portion of all the food produced in the United States. And last week, activists and officials from around the country met here in a first-ever "summit" to share information about this "unreaped harvest" and discuss how it can be gotten more easily to the almost 12 million American households that do not have enough to eat.

That figure is based on a 1995 study of eating patterns released by the U.S. Department of Agriculture last week. In fact, the problem affects one in every four American children, says the Child and the Child Foundation, an organization that focuses on childhood hunger and malnutrition. There also are the elderly subsisting on fixed incomes that don't stretch far enough. The families of the working-poor often work whole days to go to school hungry. The homeless.

The government lags for their problem is "food insecurity," it's even measured according to the degree of hunger — moderate or severe.

The roots of this food recovery movement

As the end of the century approaches, the food recovery movement may be gathering force. ... The roots of this food recovery movement are in the 1960s and 1970s. ... The roots of this food recovery movement are in the 1960s and 1970s. ... The roots of this food recovery movement are in the 1960s and 1970s.

For the past 20 years or so, a loose network of volunteers and non-profit organizations, often working out of churches and synagogues, has tried to rescue food that would otherwise be wasted and rechannel it to the hungry. The movement was rag-tag at first, but grew steadily, many groups unaware of others like them.

Now, according to the Congressional Hunger Center, some 30,000 groups involved in the process.

are Second Harvest, a national food-bank network that distributes more than 1 billion pounds of food and grocery products annually; Food Chain, a national network of 127 prepared and perishable food-rescue programs; and the Chef and the Child Foundation, the philanthropic arm of the American Cancer Foundation.

For last week's summit, "Food Recovery and Cleaning — A Call to Action," those groups joined hands with the Congressional Hunger Center, a 4-year-old nonprofit.

"We want to make food recovery as automatic as recycling," said Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman.

For two days, members of Congress, state and federal agencies, the anti-hunger community, and religious groups, as well as movement practitioners, chefs and representatives from participating corporations such as Kellogg and Pillsbury got together to network, report on their experiences and share strategies. About 500 people participated in Washington, while an estimated 14,000 people in 47 states attended by satellite.

Vice President Al Gore told the group that increasing food recovery by a third (one goal of the summit) would feed 450,000 people daily, and urged them to get "quality food not in the dumpster but in the mouths of those who need it."

Angers Peter, Paul and Mary taped a public-service poem encouraging food recovery and gave new meaning to "This Land Is Your Land," one of their trademark songs.

MISSIONARIES

Several Magic Valley residents have returned from serving missions for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Elder Blake Crockett served for two years in the New Jersey Morris town. He will speak in sacrament meeting at 10:45 a.m. Sunday at the Pella 1st Ward chapel, 400 S. Blake Crockett is the son of Lamar and Ranae Crockett of Burley.

Sister Jennifer Peters served for 18 months in the Philippines Manila Mission. She will report in her mission at 9 a.m. Sunday at the Jerome 3rd Ward chapel, 825 E. Ave. B.

Peters graduated from Jerome High School in 1993 and attended Ricks College for two years. She has been involved with the Sawtooth Country Cloggers and participated with the Ricks College clogging team, traveling to Spain/France and Tonga/Samoas with the team. She plans to continue her education. Peters is the daughter of Tom and Ann Peters of Jerome and the late Lorna Peters of Burley.

Elder Benjamin J. Beutler served for two years in the California San Bernardino Mission. He will report on his mission at 10:45 a.m. Sunday at the Twin Falls 14th Ward chapel, 924 Caswell Ave. W.

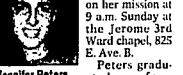

Beutler graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1995. He plans to attend the College of Southern Idaho. He is an Eagle Scout and the son of Calvin and Marilyn Beutler of Twin Falls.

Elder Rob Anderson will serve for two years in the Ukraine Kiev Mission. He will speak in sacrament meeting at noon Sunday at the Hollister Ward chapel.

Anderson is a 1996 graduate of Filer High School. He attended the College of Southern Idaho, where he studied business management and was active in the student senate. He is the son of Chris and Gary Minshall of Jerome and the late Steve Anderson.

Sister Lila Anderson will serve for 18 months in the Pennsylvania Harrisburg Mission. They will speak in sacrament meeting at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Pella 2nd Ward chapel, 400 S. 140 W., Burley.

approach when the Baptists come to his city. "I will be kind and respectful," he said. "We will say, 'Welcome! Yes, you (Baptists) have produced a video and done some things. But I want to say this. There are many wonderful Baptists. They are good people. They are striving for objectives that are wholesome, good and uplifting, and we appreciate that.'"

But Hinckley said "nobody can honestly deny" that Mormons are Christians.

"We may be somewhat different from the traditional pattern of Christianity. But no one believes more literally in the redemption wrought by the Lord Jesus Christ. No one believes more fundamentally that he was the son of God, that he died for the sins of mankind, that he rose from the grave and that he is the living, resurrected son of the living father."

Organ

Continued from C2, she prepares prior to a worship service. The organ has a unique feature that can send a signal to open the pipes. It sits on a platform and, with a long "umbilical cord," can be moved around in the chancel area.

Dial visited the Twin Falls church more than a year ago to take measurements of the sanctuary and do an acoustic analysis of the entire building to know what kind of sound the building could accommodate. He then took the entire pipe organ apart and hauled it back to Illinois, where he constructed and reconstructed the pipes, windchests and console. The pipes were made in many different places, according to specifications, and brought to Dial's facility for tuning.

After completely renovating and expanding the organ to his satisfaction, Dial had it carefully loaded into a large semi-truck and hauled back to its home in Twin Falls. Off-loading was a tremendous task. The re-creation of the pipe organ, called the King of instruments, is estimated to take another three weeks. This will include installation and voicing.

Using the Scripture found in Psalm 127:1 — "Unless the Lord builds the house, they labor in vain who build it" — the Presbyterian congregation has already remodeled the church sanctuary.

"They put in new lighting and carpet, a state-of-the-art $25,000 sound system, an oak chancel, new pews and everything was newly painted — every inch has been touched," said the Rev. Paul Reeves, pastor of the church.

This $310,000 project was funded through donations from individuals, the building fund and memorials, he said.

took time, talent and money from them all and show their dedication and love for the Lord."

An organ task force started working on the organ expansion in the fall of 1995. Members of the task force were Wayne Shippen, Terry Fletcher, Scott Adkins, Linda Stevenson and Barbara Mink. Fletcher and Mink flew to various locations by the Lord Jesus Christ. No one believes more fundamentally that he was the son of God, that he died for the sins of mankind, that he rose from the grave and that he is the living, resurrected son of the living father."

"They put in new lighting and carpet, a state-of-the-art $25,000 sound system, an oak chancel, new pews and everything was newly painted — every inch has been touched," said the Rev. Paul Reeves, pastor of the church.

This $310,000 project was funded through donations from individuals, the building fund and memorials, he said.

Russian Parliament OKs measure restricting some religions

The Washington Post

MOSCOW — The upper chamber of the Russian parliament unanimously approved legislation Wednesday restricting the rights and activities of minority religions, brushing aside Western objections and sending the bill to President Boris Yeltsin, who signed it into law on Friday.

The Federation Council, which is made up of regional leaders, voted 137 to 0 for the legislation, despite two days of objections from Vice President Al Gore, who Wednesday completed a visit to Russia. The U.S. Senate had earlier threatened to cut off U.S. aid to Russia if the bill became law.

The Kremlin signaled this week that Yeltsin, who vetoed an earlier version of the legislation on grounds that it was unconstitutional, is prepared to sign the latest draft, which his aides helped write. The law will probably face a challenge in the Constitutional Court.

Sought by the Russian Orthodox Church, which has felt threatened by the growth of minority faiths and sects since the fall of communism, the legislation would create separate categories of religions, and place legal, financial and operational restrictions on those not deemed "traditional."

Under the preamble to the bill, the traditional faiths are Russian Orthodoxy, Judaism, Islam, Buddhism, which were in the original version, and "Christianity," which was added to the final version.

But the text of the legislation places limits on those groups that cannot prove they have been operating in Russia for at least 15 years — a requirement that would exclude all but those that were in existence when Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev died, when the state was officially atheist and religious activists and dissidents were persecuted and imprisoned.

Among denominations that might be restricted by the new law are the Mormons, Seventh-Day Adventists, Pentecostals, Jehovah's Witnesses, and many smaller sects and cults. The Vatican also has objected to the legislation.

"It's clearly disappointing to anyone who lived through the events of August 1991 and saw the great break from the past," said Donald K. Jarvis, president of the Moscow mission of the Mormon Church, referring to the failed 1991 coup attempt that preceded the collapse of Soviet power.

He recalled that even before the Soviet downfall, a liberal law on religion was approved in 1990.

"There was a wave of liberal thinking that gripped Russia," he said, but added that now it appears to be waning as Russians suffer through hard economic times.

He said minority faiths are being turned into "scapegoats" for the country's pain and turbulence.

If taken literally, he said, the legislation "looks very repressive indeed, and would make things quite difficult for our people. It would send a number of our congregations back to the way things were in East Germany under the Soviet regime. We had a presence there and could own property but that was about all. There was no way we could send any missionaries in, and there was no distribution of literature."

The Mormon Church has about 5,000 members in Russia and about 7,000 people doing missionary work, he said.

"If it implemented the way it's written, we would have no missionaries from outside of Russia," he added.

In recent days, Kremlin officials, bracing for protest from abroad, have been suggesting the law might not be rigidly implemented.

Identical twin brothers embrace priesthood

HERMINIE, Pa. (AP) — Except for the days they inadvertently dress alike or the times they answer to each other's names, identical twins Joe and Tom Trupkovich have led relatively uncomplicated lives.

After growing up in Uniontown, about 40 miles southeast of Pittsburgh, the Trupkovichs, now 42, each sang in a boys' choir and taught math in the Albert Gallatin Area School District and attended St. Mary's Catholic Church.

Like most twins, they have a special bond and have turned to each other for counsel all their lives. So it was not surprising that when one mentioned he wanted to become a priest, the other acknowledged he had been pondering the same decision.

In fact, now that they are ordained (early in the summer), neither can remember who mentioned the idea first.

Dressed alike in black suits and familiar priest's collars, the two wear identical gold watches, identical eyeglasses, close-clipped mustaches and part their brown hair on the same side. They look and sound so much alike that they have developed the polite practice of pointing out who is Joe and who is Tom without being asked, although they suggest sometimes an answer to each other's names out of habit.

The Rev. Joseph Maddalena of the Office of Vocations in the Greensburg Diocese has worked with the brothers since they entered the seminary six years ago.

Maddalena said he was the

first to separate the brothers, who lived with their parents in Uniontown until they entered the seminary — Joe in Latrobe and Tom in East Aurora, N.Y.

"The odds are rare that they would be assigned together. So we wanted to test 'Could they live apart?'" Maddalena said. "They did quite well."

The brothers were reunited recently at St. Edward Roman Catholic Church in Herminie, in Westmoreland County, where Joe has been serving as a deacon. Both will be assigned within the Greensburg Diocese, which covers four western Pennsylvania counties — Westmoreland, Armstrong, Indiana and Fayette.

Maddalena said it was the first time the diocese has ever ordained twin brothers.

In fact, fewer men nationwide are becoming priests. In 1966, 8,325 men completed training to be ordained in U.S. churches, according to the Center for Applied Research in the Apostolate at Georgetown University.

By 1995, that number had dropped to 3,172.

Author issues warning about negative prayer

The Providence Journal-Bulletin

Just when some of the nation's medical schools have begun to warn to the idea that prayer and spirituality might be powerful tools in helping to restore people's health, one of the nation's leading voices on the subject has been urging caution.

It's not that Dr. Larry Dossey has lost his belief in the power of prayer. On the contrary, says the Texas-born epidemiologist, mounting scientific evidence continues to support what millions have believed all along: that prayers, even those made from afar, can have a major role in helping a person heal from illness.

Dossey, however, thinks it's time to call people's attention to what he calls "the darker side" of prayer, a shadow side overlooked by people anxious to keep "God's skirts clean": the possibility that prayer may be used in negative and harmful ways and that even well-meaning prayers can bring about unintended consequences.

Or as he puts it with the title of his new book, "Be Careful What You Pray For ... You Just Might Get It."

By now, Dossey has become accustomed to dealing with tabloids. He has been careful to help make him famous, "Healing Words" and "Prayer Is Good Medicine," he assailed the reluctance of medical schools to teach prayer and spirituality in their curricula.

Then, in a talk before the Religion Newswriters Association last week in Albuquerque, N.M., Dossey told stories aimed at showing his readers and listeners that negative "prayers" can be powerful — and deadly.

He cited the account of psychologist Max Freedom Long, who arrived in Hawaii in 1917. According to Long, shamans would "pray to death" a person who was causing social unrest, even if that person was living on another island. All the victims would meet death in the same way: They would be struck by an ascending paralysis that began in the lower extremities, gradually rising into the lungs.

Dossey also cites the experience of a talented writer he knew who despite his best efforts could not get any of his manuscripts published — until he learned that his mother had been praying all along that he would be a failure as a writer, because she didn't want him writing about any of the family's secrets.

But would God really answer people's prayers in this way? Dossey says many people try to tell him it can't be so. "The usual response is that it doesn't happen, or that if it does happen, it's the work of the devil. They'll say, 'My God is good. He wouldn't do that.' I tell them that's not very helpful. Does it not say in Amos 3:6, 'Does evil befal a city, unless the Lord has done it?' or in Isaiah 45:7, 'I form light and create darkness, I make peace and create war. I am the Lord, who do all these things.'"

For some issue of God gender is no issue

Knight-Ridder News Service

"Our Mother, who art in heaven..."

To many people, such a revision of Jesus' words would be blasphemous; others might find it refreshing, perhaps even healing.

Depending on your beliefs and experiences, the issue of God and gender may be a question of divine truth or human perception.

"I think of God as an undefinable being," says Rabbi Murray Ezring of Temple Israel in Charlotte, N.C. "And to talk about God in (gender) terms, we're talking in terms we can understand and not in terms of what God is really like."

Many people, however, believe using male-dominated language is important to maintaining the traditional language of the Bible.

"You'll definitely hear me say 'he,' because I don't have a problem with that," says the Rev. Blair Bort, rector of St. Martin's Episcopal Church in Charlotte. "I'm very unusual in the Episcopal church as a woman pastor. I'm not trying to pay the price of trying to help people get over the negative connotations of some of the male language. I'm not ready, willing or able, nor do I see it being biblically appropriate to go into 'she' sometimes and 'he' other times."

"I believe that the Bible is God's word to us," says the Rev. Harry Reeder, pastor of Christ Covenant Church, also in Charlotte. "It's one thing to interpret the Scriptures in proper translation; it's another thing to reinvent the Scriptures through our own translations, to apply things to it that it doesn't say."

People who disagree say the Bible's male references to God stem from the patriarchal time in which the Bible was written. Such references limit our ways of relating to God, especially for women.

"It probably has had the effect of lowering women's self-esteem," says the Rev. Wyman Rousseau of Piedmont Unitarian Universalist Church in Charlotte. "Particularly if this God is male, how does that speak to a woman who can give birth? Nurture children?"

Whether one believes God should or shouldn't be depicted as male, hearing references to a female God would be disorienting to most Americans.

In a March ABC News national telephone survey in which 752 participants were asked "Do you think God is a man, a woman or what?" 44 percent responded "man," 14 percent said "woman," 43 percent said "sexual spirit" and 13 percent had no opinion.

There has been a long-standing debate on the precision of gender-based words and metaphors used to describe God in the Old Testament Hebrew and subsequent translations.

"In a lot of places in the Hebrew, pronouns are not used," says the Rev. Sheryl Phillips, associate pastor at Sharon Presbyterian Church in Charlotte.

"The pronoun is inferred by the use of the preceding paragraphs, what's been going on in context. ... A lot of times what we use as a pronoun in English is not present in the original Scripture."

Although pronouns for God may not always appear, according to professor David Marcus of the Jewish Theological Seminary in New York, there are no "she" references to God in the Torah.

This also is true in the Greek and King James versions of the Bible.

Pronouns aside, the Old and New Testaments sometimes depict God as having characteristics traditionally associated with women.

"In the Psalms it says that we rest upon the Lord even as a weaned child rests upon its mother," says Reeder.

The issue of gender and God in religious texts may involve more than linguistics, or even theology. It may be a matter of history.

For thousands of years before the Old Testament was written, many different cultures, especially in Europe and the Middle East, worshipped a Great Goddess.

When the nomadic Israelites conquered the agricultural Canaanites, they displaced a matriarchal world view with a patriarchal one, says Jeffrey Meyer, chairman of the University of North Carolina Charlotte's department of religious studies.

People on both sides of the God-gender issue recognize the centuries of subjugation and abuse experienced by women as a result of patriarchal religious domination. But to those taking a more conservative position, such a condition is the result of a misinterpretation of Scripture going as far back as the story of Adam and Eve.

"I have encountered many people who believed that what they understood to be Scriptural (has) justified abuse that they had lived with," says Sheryl Phillips of Sharon Presbyterian.

"Men have misapprehended the Scriptures," says Livingston. "In the real Christian home there are no male chauvinists. There is a prayerful cooperation (between husband and wife)."

To those who see the "Word" as limiting, referring to God as a female or removing all gender references can be freeing to women — and men.

Atheists want pope monument removed

DENVER — An atheist group has filed a federal lawsuit to have a monument to the pope's 1993 visit to Denver torn down, calling it "extremely offensive."

Julie Wells, a member of the Freedom From Religion Foundation, said the Stone Department of Natural Resources is planning to build and maintain the monument on Butterfly Hill, where Pope John Paul II celebrated Mass in August 1993 as part of World Youth Day.

"In effect, the defendants have erected a shrine and have made this an consecrated land," Wells says in her lawsuit.

Wells said she uses Cherry Creek State Park, where Butterfly Hill is located, to walk her dog and has cut down her walks because she "finds the display extremely offensive."

Assistant park manager Bob Toil said the Denver Catholic Archdiocese paid for the 20-foot-high monument.

Mother Teresa charity issues scam warning

NEW DELHI, India — Sounding an alarm against scam artists, Mother Teresa's Missionaries of Charity said Thursday that people holding fundraising drives and claiming to represent their charity were not authorized to do so.

Since Mother Teresa's death earlier this month, individuals and groups in India have tried to associate themselves with her order, claiming they support her charity.

"Mother had repeatedly made it known we do not authorize anyone to solicit funds or goods for us or by using our pictures or photographs," said Sister Nirmala, successor to Mother Teresa.

All contributions should be sent directly to the nearest house of the Missionaries of Charity or to Mother House, the headquarters of the order in Calcutta, she said.

Young monks keep traditions alive

JINGZHEN, China (AP) — Fresh-faced lay-monks in orange robes recite prayers in dulcet tones, their young voices joining the chirping crickets and tweeting birds that rejoice at the warm tropical dawn.

And so begins another day for the novices of Jingzhen Temple in Xishuangbanna, a lush, enchanting corner of southwestern China, rich with thick jungle and emerald rice paddies.

Three decades ago, Mao Tse-tung's Cultural Revolution, an anarchic political movement that sought to destroy relics from China's past, swept through the region's villages, as it did the rest of the country. Temples were attacked, shrines desecrated.

When the Cultural Revolution ended in 1976, normalcy returned. Today, many of Xishuangbanna's 500 or so temples echo with the chants of young Buddhist monks.

The monks are Dai, Xishuangbanna's largest ethnic minority who are more akin to people in neighboring Laos and Burma than to Han Chinese.

Monks relax at Jingzhen Temple in southwest China earlier this summer. When they are not attending to chores or studying, they are free to spend time as they please.

China's majority.

Many Dai men join a temple at some point in their life, often when young. Parents look to the temples to provide their children with a proper Buddhist education.

In the past, those who did not join a temple risked the scorn of their neighbors and may have had trouble finding a wife.

Only males become monks. Some boys join as young as 8, sometimes staying for three to five years. They sleep, eat and pray in the temples, which become the focus of their lives.

The monks often rise before dawn and split into two groups; one to recite prayers, the other to sweep the temple, inside and out.

In a sign of respect, they kick off their shoes before entering a temple, leaving them in piles at the door.

Later, the monks' parents bring breakfast — often big bowls of sticky white rice that the monks roll into balls and pop in their mouths with a pinch of roasted fish, beef or vegetables.

After breakfast, they attend the village school. Although their orange robes mark them off from other children, the boys monks are not teased or treated differently.

After class, they head back to the temple for lunch. Afternoons are supposedly for study, but some prefer to play, sleep or climb trees, searching for flowers and fruit. Occasionally, the head monk takes his young charges aside to clip or shave their hair.

Promise Keepers founder goes full force

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bill McCartney's experience of being born again was loud, magnetic and built through the door of passion, like much else in his life. No wonder stadiums began filling up because of it.

On the day of his epiphany, the football coach rushed in to tell his wife and her friend that he'd committed his life to Christ. He got blank stares. "As time went on, I thought he was downright nuts about it," Lynda McCartney said. "Every time he turned around he was praising the Lord for everything."

Now, she's come to his way of thinking and so have multitudes of men drawn to Promise Keepers, the ministry founded by McCartney. They flock to stadiums to pledge themselves to a new moral start.

The coach who helped turn the University of Colorado football team into a winner is trying to do the same for Christian men, using some of the same motivational skills and butt-slapping jock attitudes of the game. There are plenty of hugs, too.

On Oct. 4, Promise Keepers will mount a gathering in Washington that McCartney says will be a mass "statement of humility" with no political agenda. Male humility is one of the keystones of Promise Keepers.

But McCartney, 57, could hardly be more expansive in predicting what will take place: "I believe it's going to be a historic gathering unlike any other in any nation in the history of the world."

That's some humble pie.

He's never been very good at making an outline.

A few years ago, he took a personality test and learned "I have a very domineering personality." That's why he figures he was such a success at work while "failing so much at home."

"The work-obsessed man who guided the Buffaloes to a 1990 national championship never made time to see his sons play football until they were in high school."

"The man who concerned himself with moral leadership of his team saw an unwed daughter have two children by Colorado players, and several dozen team members arrested for a variety of misdeeds."

"The McCartneys tell some of these stories in his autobiography, "From Ashes to Glory." They are part of the mythology now — blows that make steel stronger.

"Bill McCartney is tapping into something here — the failure of fatherhood, or the failure of husbands, that is felt in the psyche of America today," says Bruce Shelley, who has taught church history for more than 30 years at Colorado's conservative Denver Seminary.

McCartney quit coaching three years ago after 13 years with the team to spend more time on the group he conceived in 1990 and to be more attentive at home.

"Get up and come now," he now exhorts the masses at stadiums around the country. Hundreds of thousands filed into 22 stadium meetings last year, paying $50 to get in.

Woman, 70, part of growing move toward older preachers

Knights-Ridder News Service

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Whatever congregation hires Miriam Marx will get a minister with maturity, life experience and just one requirement:

"I'm an old lady," she said the 70-year-old preacher-to-be with white hair and high hopes. "I need a nap."

Once she's refreshed, though, watch out for this woman who represents the growing movement toward older preachers.

Marx has started work as interim minister at Unitarian Universalist Church of Charlotte. For six months, she'll help minister Doug Reischer meet the spiritual needs of 300 church members. Then she intends to find a Unitarian congregation willing to hire a widow who heard late in life the inner voice that led her to the pulpit. Not all Unitarian Universalist churches want to hire Marx as an intern, even though one of the guiding principles of the small, socially and politically liberal denomination is: "We believe in the worth and dignity of each human being."

Said Reischer: "They thought not enough people in their congregation would relate to her. The kids wouldn't relate to her."

The Charlotte church, though, welcomed Marx as part of its heritage of accepting non-traditional interns. The last one, Dee Graham, is a lesbian.

Born to Russian immigrants in Philadelphia, Marx spurned her Orthodox Jewish roots to take up a faith 25 years ago that allows each follower to believe in his or her own concept of God.

She was married for nearly 20 years to Werner Marx, a German Jewish immigrant who fled the Nazis in 1939. They lived in Philadelphia, then settled in Champaign, Ill., where her husband taught German literature at the University of Illinois and they raised their three children. Miriam Marx had to support her family by herself after her husband died of a heart attack in 1965.

She taught English at the university, edited a college journal and computer software programs, worked as a secretary, even sold tickets at a performing arts center.

It wasn't until she became a lay leader in the 1980s at her Unitarian Universalist church in Urbana, Ill., that the light of ministry began to flicker.

Last May, Marx received her master of divinity degree from Earlham School of Religion in Richmond, Ind.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"There's no need to hang about waiting for the Last Judgment - it takes place every day." - Albert Camus

Today's South got what he deserved. He claimed that he made the routine play in diamonds and that was the bad trick that beat him. This was the only play that he hadn't calculated how many diamond tricks he actually needed.

South's key trick East's spade queen and South went after dummy's jack, winning the trick when East slavishly ducked. South crossed to his club ace to repeat the diamond finesse. This time, East captured dummy's queen. After South's ace was dislodged, South bet all on a 3-3 diamond break. Diamonds didn't behave, and South lost the trick.

"On a good day, I'd score all five diamond tricks," lamented South. "Even with fair luck, I'm only four."

"How many did you really need?" asked North. That was the question South had asked himself before leading to trick two. East wins and returns a spade. South refuses. Now, regardless of what the defense does, South wins the next trick and leads a diamond to East's ace. Whether East ducks or not, South wins two diamonds and claims three winners to make his vulnerable game.

ANSWER: One heart. Playing a five-card major system, responder should not bypass a four-card major in favor of a minor suit raise (or a bid of one-no-trump).
