Driver's ed instructor faces charge

The Associated Press

DURHAM, N.C. — Read rage — how much more, that is — wasn't supposed to be part of the driver's ed curriculum.

David Cline, a driver's education instructor for Durham Public Schools, was suspended for allegedly ordering a student to pursue a car that had cut them off and then belting the car's driver. Cline, athletic director, physical education teacher and baseball coach at Carrington Middle School, also was charged with simple assault after the Sept. 19 incident in nearby Chapel Hill. The Herald Sun of Durham Wednesday quoted unidentified officials as saying that Cline, 36, was teaching two female students how to drive when the other car cut them off. # Kempthorne decides: He'll try for governor

By Liz Wright Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — At roughly 2:15 p.m. Wednesday, Idaho's political dominos began to topple.

U.S. Sen. Dirk Kempthorne, R-Idaho, announced he is seeking the governor's chair, causing other candidates to fall away and observers to turn attention toward congressional openings.

For one, state Sen. Clint Stennett, D-Ketchum, who had been considering a gubernatorial bid in recent months, said Wednesday that he will "probably stay put" now that Kempthorne is running. "I think the senator would be a very formidable candidate for governor and I don't think you can count me as one of the people who would run against him," Stennett said.

Kempthorne, 46, said he decided he will try to succeed retiring Republican Gov. Phil Batt after returning to Idaho and speaking with family and friends. Kempthorne, a former mayor of Boise, has spent almost five years serving in the Senate.

Kempthorne said he is proud of the role he has played in Congress in giving power back to the states and now looks forward to building Idaho's reputation as a role model for those efforts.

Kempthorne added that congressional service "has been tough on my family." "We often think about public sacrifice and public service," he said Wednesday. "It is the spouse and the children that truly make the sacrifice and it's been tough on them. It's made them tougher, but they have my eternal gratitude for sticking with dad on this journey."

"I guess it's fair to say we never got Potomac fever," Kempthorne said.

Special bill draws concern — C4

A rising star in Congress, Kempthorne is credited with achievements on the Endangered Species Act, the Safe Drinking Water Act and the federal unfunded mandates law. While Kempthorne seeks the governor's nomination, most potential GOP candidates were expected to drop out of next May's primary. Waiting to launch their own campaigns for the GOP nomination to succeed Batt were House Speaker Michael Simpson, Lt. Gov. Butch Otter and Senate Majority Floor Leader James Risch. Interest in the nomination has also been expressed by Kootenai County Commissioner Dick Connon and former Attorney General Wayne Kidwell. On the Democratic side, former U.S. Rep. Richard Stallings said he continues to mull options including reentering Congress or the Senate.

"I hope (Kempthorne's win) is not automatic, I hope our side is at least able

DOE plan leaves waste in limbo

By N.S. Norkkved Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The federal Energy Department has no plans to dig up waste buried in Idaho before 1970, states a newly released federal document.

Department spokesman Brad Huggler at the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory said the agency has no plans for digging up waste.

At sites such as the troubled Pit 9 work site, INEEL officials are working to develop plans to dig up plutonium-contaminated wastes that threaten the Snake River Plain Aquifer — southern Idaho's main groundwater source. Once the wastes are dug up, though, it is not clear what would happen.

An environmental document recently released on a federal waste site in New Mexico, the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant, seems to say the waste could go there for disposal, but there isn't room.

WIPP is slated to dispose of plutonium-contaminated waste — known as Please see PLAN, Page A2

Republicans grill attorney general

Reno stands firm; says she'll handle fund-raising probe based on facts, law

Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — They showed videotapes of President Clinton praising John Huang at a fund-raiser. They waved public opinion polls. They told Janet Reno her credibility had been destroyed.

For hours, Republicans on the House Judiciary Committee grilled the attorney general Wednesday about why she hasn't asked for an independent counsel to investigate White House fund raising.

But Reno never wavered, saying that her decisions are "based on the facts and the law, and nothing else."

With Congress out of session and little else going on, the hearing was the biggest show in town.

The committee room was packed with reporters, and Judiciary Committee Republicans, who have been out of the limelight during the campaign-finance controversy, saw the chance to shine. In the end, though, the daylong hearing didn't produce much new. Reno calmly held her own, revealed little, and didn't change her position. She did

House members that the law prevented her from sharing details of the investigation.

"If I could tell you what was being done, I think you would feel much more comfortable," she said during her appearance, which came a day after she extended a preliminary investigation into Clinton's fund-raising telephone calls. And showing her characteristic independent streak, the former Dade County prosecutor told them if she loses her job, "I can go home to Miami. And now that we've got a World Series team, that has some merit too."

Committee Chairman Henry Hyde quoted a CNN/USA Today poll showing that 73 percent of Americans believe an independent counsel should be appointed.

ACROSS THE NATION

West: Fair skies were over the state Wednesday and the same conditions with warmer temperatures were forecast for Thursday. Winds are light in speed and variable in direction.

Southwest: Thunderstorms rumbled through South Carolina and Georgia.

Midwest: Clear to partly cloudy skies dominated much of the region from the Gulf Coast to the Ohio Valley. Temperatures rose into the low 70s in some areas.

A weak upper level trough was building across the Great Lakes and central Plains, bringing cloud cover to much of the Great Lakes region. Light showers fell from eastern Nebraska into Missouri.

Behind the system were cooler conditions spilling into the upper Midwest and northern Plains.

to make a contest out of it. I hate to see a one-party system in this state," Gendling says.

But while Democrats haven't yet found an opponent to Kemphorne, they are already throwing down the gauntlet.

Karen White, executive director of the Idaho Democratic Party, criticized Kemphorne for not discussing his campaign platform.

Kemphorne told reporters that he would discuss his agenda later.

"The fact he did not detail (his issues) makes me believe he hasn't thought through an agenda and I believe the voters of Idaho will suffer because of that," White said.

Meanwhile, plenty of candidates — including state Rep. Mark Stubbs, R-Twin Falls — are waiting to see if U.S. Rep. Mike Crapo runs for Kemphorne's seat. Crapo plans to decide within the next two weeks.

Stubbs said he got an early jump on meetings and put together an exploratory committee to gauge Republican and citizen feelings transuranic waste — from Idaho and other sites across the country.

Burr's not that simple.

One section of the WIPP document says buried waste that is dug up and treated — such as waste at INEL — would be eligible for disposal in WIPP.

But another section says that there won't be room for all the eligible waste, so waste from cleanup would be stored above ground until — and if — WIPP is expanded.

Still another section adds that all transuranic waste "would be removed from some sites" — including perhaps INEL, but the document doesn't specify.

Then there is a continuing disagreement over numbers, which doesn't appear to be resolved in the latest WIPP document.

An inventory of waste at INEL has not matched the federal government's nuclear waste cleanup agreement with Gov. Phil Batt, and state officials complained.

The new document doesn't seem to clarify that difference, said

Cline instructed the student driver to chase down the car. The newspaper said students then took out and the instructor had the student give chase again.

Police spokeswoman Jane Goulet confirmed parts of the newspaper's account. She said a police officer pulled the driver's education vehicle over for allegedly speeding. She didn't know how fast the car was going.

She said while the officer was talking to Cline, the other driver, Jon Macklin, pulled up and told the officer Cline had assaulted him. She said Macklin swore out an assault warrant against Cline, who was arrested and released on $400 bond.

Several of the Cline's supporters said Tuesday that the outburst was out of character.

Clinton turns on the charm during visit to Brazilian slums

Knight-Ridder News Service

—RIO-DE-JANEIRO, Brazil — One TV announcer confessed he could barely hold back tears. Another gushed that President Clinton deserved a "nota 10" — a perfect score.

Clinton, who couldn't seem to get a break in the first half of his journey through Brazil, turned a corner Wednesday by doing what he does best: turning on the charm.

Addressing members of a community center in Mangueira, a slumtown that blankets several of Rio's hills, Clinton praised their school-and-sports program for providing youth with an escape route. "Every child enters this world with a great gift from God — the power to dream. But that gift can be lost through poverty, relentless deprivation, and the daily defeat of hope."

The comfortable, Clinton said, "have no greater responsibility than to nourish that power to dream, with education for the children of Mangueira, Brazil. United States, and the Americas. For it is the dreams of our children that will shape our lives in a new century, in a new millennium.

The speech, which Clinton intoned like a sermon on a patch of artificial turf bounded by power lines, highlighted the fact that Latin America's present turnaround has yet to lift millions from poverty.

A day after leaving Brasilia, where his motorcade was pelted with manure, Clinton touched down in Rio and set to work. Visibly enjoying himself, he climbed into bleachers and nudged for photos with kids, bounced a soccer ball on his knee and caught a "high five" from soccer hero Pele.

Clinton had come to one of Brazil's largest slums Wednesday to highlight a central theme of his three-nation tour: that countries throughout the hemisphere must work together to improve the failing public education systems that keep too many mired in misery.

Official: Amtrak strike can be averted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transportation Secretary Rodney Slater said Wednesday he feels "very good" about the possibility of avoiding a strike at Amtrak's next week. But even if one occurs, the union has promised to allow local commuter lines to keep operating, he said.

The union and management "are now engaged" in talks, he said. "That is good news. ... We feel very good about this."

President Clinton joins a percussion band at Mangueira School during a visit to Rio de Janeiro Wednesday. The Mangueira project seeks to lift children out of the despair of slum life through athletics and academics.

CIA budget comes out in lawsuit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA ended 50 years of secrecy Wednesday surrounding how much the government spends to spy, announcing in response to a lawsuit that the annual budget for national intelligence is $26.6 billion.

Disclosure came in a cross-country legal filing by Lee Strickland, a CIA-information officer. "In response to the referenced Freedom of Information Act request, the total budget appropriation for intelligence for fiscal year 1997 is $26.6 billion."

The budget, covering the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, includes the CIA, the National Reconnaissance Office, the Defense Intelligence Agency and other branches of the vast U.S. intelligence-gathering apparatus, as well as tactical military intelligence.

No breakdown of how the money was spent was provided and CIA Director George Tenet said some would be.

"The administration intends to draw a firm line at the my limit," Tenet said. "Beyond this figure, there will be no other disclosures of currently classified budget information because such disclosures could harm national security."

Tenet also said the administration would decide on a year-by-year basis whether to reveal overall intelligence spending. Neither Congress nor the administration has provided the intelligence budget for fiscal 1998, but congressional staffers, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said it was only slightly larger.

To put the intelligence budget in perspective, the total was somewhat lower than when the federal government spent last year on transportation, $39.9 billion, and health and human services, $34 billion, not including Social Security.

Despite the lack of detail, the Federation of American Scientists, which filed the suit, has been able to construct approximate breakdowns of intelligence spending based on an inadvertent disclosure by the House Appropriations Committee three years ago.

Hearing

to investigate allegations of illegal fund raising.

"We can equivocate, split hairs and rationalize as much as we want, but the simple fact is that the average American wants an independent counsel."

Reno fired back that polls shouldn't be a factor. "I don't think the American people want polls involved, otherwise you would have written a statute that said, 'When 51 percent of the American people think there should be an independent counsel statute, we'll have one.'" And I don't think that's what you want, Mr. Chairman.

The Democrats came to Reno's defense. "Your integrity is unimpeachable, no pun intended," Rep. Marty Meehan, D-Mass., said, referring to GOP threats to impeach her.

Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., said Republicans should ask for a probe of House Speaker Newt Gingrich's support of a $50 billion tax break for tobacco companies — the latest budget deal — in light of their contributions to the Republican Party.

In a testy exchange, Rep. James Sensenbrenner Jr., R-Wis., challenged Reno about newly released White House tapes showing the president praising Democratic fundraiser John Huang as "being the one who always came through."

Huang was a Commerce Department official and a fundraiser for the Democratic National Committee among Asian-Americans. He was a key middleman for illicit Asian contributions to the Democratic Party.

"For the Justice Department and its leader to say that the president didn't do anything wrong by pouring effusive praise on Mr. Huang ... is something that really destroys your credibility and the credibility of your department," he said. "And I think that alone ought to be enough for you to wash your hands of the affair and to appoint an independent counsel."

Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., asked: "Can you tell us why the American people should believe you when you say, 'We're going to pursue every lead and everyone who has information?'"

Reno replied: "One of the most frustrating things I face is to sit here and hear your conclusions and not be able to share with you everything that was done."

The attorney general said she isn't afraid to ask for an independent counsel if the evidence and the law justify it.

The Cassini spacecraft sits atop a Titan rocket as it is launched from Cape Canaveral Air Station Wednesday. The controversial spacecraft, carrying over 70 pounds of plutonium, starts its seven-year journey to Saturn.

Cassini probe begins journey toward Saturn

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The Cassini space probe now is safely zipping to Saturn, and the debate over its plutonium power source fades with every mile.

"Wow, great, wow," Cassini chief scientist Dennis Matson said as he watched a Titan IV-B rocket light up the sky in a 4:43 a.m. EDT (2:43 MDT) launch Wednesday. "I should have brought my sunglasses."

With the launch over and Cassini beginning its 2.2 billion-mile journey, the major players behind Cassini, both pro and con, can sit back and wait. For a long time.

Scientists have spent 15 years working on the $3.3 billion mission to the tumultuous but beautiful Saturn and its mysterious moon Titan. But scientific instruments won't even be turned on until 2002, and Cassini won't arrive at the butterscotch-colored planet until July 1, 2004.

Anti-nuclear activists won't have a plutonium-laden probe to fight until 2002 or so, NASA's general plans for nuclear space probes — to Pluto or Jupiter's moon Europa — but no money or launch dates yet, NASA's space-sciences chief Wes Hunsstader said.

Cassini's record 72 pounds of plutonium galvanized anti-nuclear activists worldwide, but just a handful of protesters showed up Wednesday to picket the launch. Most said earlier that they were leaving town to go.

"I expected this mission to be off without a hitch," said Beverly Cook, Department of Energy nuclear space manager. "It's been more reviewed than anything I've ever seen."

But Bruce Gagnon, leader of the anti-Cassini movement, said "I don't think it proves anything other than we got lucky this time. We'll see how lucky we'll be in the future."

The debate over the safety of Cassini's plutonium-likely will restart in August 1999, when the probe swings by Earth to gain momentum to reach Saturn. Protesters add even some scientists worry that if Cassini goes off course and hits Earth's atmosphere, it could spew plutonium dust in the air.

Anti-Cassini opponents say up to 1 million people could die of cancer in such a scenario, NASA says the number would be about 120, while Frank von Hippel, a Princeton University physicist and former White House science adviser, estimates that the death toll would amount to 50,000 people.

But the chance of such an accident is 1 in 1 million, NASA said. NASA can change Cassini's path if it's heading toward Earth, said Cassini mission manager Richard Spelachis.

Wednesday's launch was the second try for Cassini. On Monday, bad weather, a computer problem and faulty battery testers on the ground caused a 48-hour delay.

Scientists said that in about a week the administration would announce a deficit for the fiscal year just ended of less than $30 billion, the smallest since 1974. Although recent shortfalls have consistently shrunk below expectations, he said, the administration still expected a deficit in 1998, making it unwise to prepare to spend extra money soon.

"My friends, reducing the debt and deficits, lessening the burden in the financial business, is not a surplus," Raines, a former investment banker, told a meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers.

He added, "Until they actually cross the line of balance, there is no surplus to be spent."

Congress blights payments to Israel

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time since it began massive aid to Israel to support Middle East peace, Congress is holding back on releasing all of the money.

A spokesman for Rep. Sonny Calhoun, R-Ala., chairman of the House appropriations subcommittee that oversees foreign aid, said Wednesday that the panel is withholding consideration of $75 million in economic assistance "until such time as we can resolve how Middle East funding is going to be divided."

But a more serious threat to full funding of Israel's longstanding $3 billion annual allotment is concern by Calhoun and other members of Congress over its refusal to extradite Samuel Sheinbein, a teenager charged in the killing and dismemberment of another Maryland teenager.

Israel is holding Sheinbein while trying to determine the validity of his claim to Israeli citizenship. Israeli law requires that citizens be tried in Israel, even for crimes committed abroad.

Jo Bonner, Calhoun's spokesman, said the Sheinbein case was a separate issue from the delay in releasing aid for Israel. But he said the issue of withholding aid pending Sheinbein's return from Israel would be taken up next week.

when House and Senate members work out the final foreign aid bill for fiscal 1998.

"Several members of Congress have approached Calhoun and stated it is wrong not to discuss the issue," Bonner said.

The delay in funding, however, is almost certainly the source of $200 million in aid promised to Jordan, he said. While both Israel and Egypt have agreed that part of the sum could be deducted from their annual aid allotment, no figures have been specified.

Aid to Israel far exceeds that for any other country, and Egypt is second, with $2.1 billion annually. While aid to other countries has declined in recent years, the two nations have been receiving the same level for nearly two decades.

"Calhoun feels there should be a cap on how much they can expect American taxpayers to contribute to the Middle East process," Bonner said. "He is not opposed to Jordan getting it, but he is opposed to increasing total aid to the Middle East."

Israel enjoys so-called early disembarkment privileges, giving it the right to ask Congress to approve aid installments whenever it needs them. Earlier this month, it applied for about $75 million.

Budget chief: No spending surpluses

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top Clinton administration official warned Congress Wednesday against spending budget surpluses that haven't materialized, signaling battles ahead with Republicans already drafting plans for using the money.

And in the first hint of what the White House might do should surpluses emerge, budget director Franklin Raines showed little enthusiasm for broad tax cuts, a priority for many Republicans.

Instead, Raines said he preferred reducing the national debt while increasing spending for public works, technology and modernization.

Balanced budget suspends veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget analysts are looking into a possible unannounced consequence of the line-item veto law. President Clinton might find the power suddenly suspended if the budget gets halved.

Although Congress and Clinton recently agreed on a budget deal to eliminate the annual deficit by 2002, some economists suggest it could perhaps as early as next year because of the shrinking U.S. economy.

The line-item act, which Clinton used for the third time

Tuesday in canceling $144 million in projects from a defense spending bill, requires him to use the saved money to reduce the deficit rather than spending it on other projects.

With no deficit, he would have no time-item power, the theory goes.

"We need to believe that's the case, based on the purposes of the line-item veto that is outlined in the law," said Larry Haas, a senior adviser to the House Office of Management and Budget. "That's the best sense that we have."

recent weeks have some analysts been foreseeing federal surpluses as soon as next year. As a result, both parties are only beginning to formulate their goals and political strategies.

But soundings a theme the administration seems likely to use against GOP tax-cutting plans next year, Raines said. "If we've learned anything from the 1980s, a live-for-today fiscal policy ... is a tremendous detriment to this nation."

Federal deficits during the 1980s soared from $70 billion to more than $200 billion.

In other areas, Raines urged his audience to lobby lawmakers for "fast-track" legislation sought by Clinton to speed consideration of trade treaties. The measure is in trouble in Congress, where few Democrats have supported it.

White House and congressional budget analysts say the 1998 deficit will probably get bigger because many of the tax cuts in this summer's budget package have taken effect, while few of the spending cuts have.

"Despite his warnings to lawmakers, Raines made it clear that a period of federal surpluses may not be far off. He said he believes deficits will disappear before the 2002 target set in the budget-balancing deal that President Clinton and Congress enacted this summer."

"I've told the president I believe it will happen while he's in office, but we don't need to wait until 2002," Raines said.

From House Speaker Newt Gingrich on down, GOP lawmakers have been discussing competing proposals for spending expected surpluses. The most popular ideas — which many legislators hope to pass as early as next year — include tax cuts, reducing the $5.4 trillion national debt and building highways.

After nearly three decades dominated by federal deficits and attempts to erase them, only in Federal deficits during the 1980s soared from $70 billion to more than $200 billion.

In other areas, Raines urged his audience to lobby lawmakers for "fast-track" legislation sought by Clinton to speed consideration of trade treaties. The measure is in trouble in Congress, where few Democrats have supported it.

"The time has now come for all who support free trade to make their views known, the sooner the better," he said.

Raines also told a reporter Clinton on Tuesday removed a 14th item from the list of line-item vetoes the president issued to the 1998 defense spending bill.

Raines said the eleven-hour reprieve went to the USS Intrepid, a decommissioned aircraft carrier now berthed in New York and used as a museum. The measure, now law, contains $13 million to refurbish the Intrepid.

Genital herpes rates jump in young whites since 1970's

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite the emphasis on sex safety to prevent AIDS, genital herpes has increased fivefold since the late 1970s among white teenagers and doubled among whites in their 20s.

In all, about one in five Americans over age 12 has the sexually transmitted infection, and most of them don't know it, the Centers for Disease and Control Prevention reported.

Dr. Michael S. Louis, who wrote the report with colleagues at the CDC, said it was surprising that herpes went up during the 1980s despite publicity about AIDS. Other sexually transmitted diseases, such as gonorrhea, declined.

He said other studies have

Jet makes steep dive after radar fails to spot smaller aircraft

NEW YORK (AP) — A Swissair Boeing 747 was forced to make a steep dive over New Jersey after a new radar system failed to spot a single-engine plane 400 feet away from the jet, New York City reported Wednesday.

The Federal Aviation Administration is trying to determine why its radar system, installed in Gibbsboro, N.J., on Sept. 1, did not detect signals from the first Piper Aerostar twin-engine, according to the paper.

plane, Swissair Flight 127, was flying at 10,000 feet and had just received permission to climb when a collision-avoidance alarm sounded in the cockpit, New York said.

A controller at the New York Air Route Traffic Control Center in Ronkonkoma told the Swissair pilot there was no traffic in his plane's path, but the warning system ordered him to descend, the paper said. As the pilot took the jet in a sharp dive, he said he could see a Piper Aerostar about 400 feet above the windshield.

Book award finalists announced

NEW YORK (AP) — Don DeLillo, a 1985 National Book Award winner, is a finalist for this year's prize for his novel "Underworld," which intertwines the Cold War and Bobby Thompson's legendary 1951 home run.

Nineteen other writers were named finalists for the awards, the National Book Foundation said Wednesday.

The group also will honor two-time finalist Studs Terkel, the Pulitzer Prize-winning historian, with a medal for distinguished contribution to American letters.

DeLillo, who won his earlier award for the novel "White Noise," was nominated in the fiction category along with Charles Frazier for "Cold Mountain," two-time finalist Diane Johnson for "Le Divorce," Ward Just for the political epic "Echo House" and 1972 finalist Cynthia Ozick for "The Puttermer Papers."

The nonfiction nominees are historian Joseph J. Ellis for "American Sphinx: The Character of Thomas Jefferson," David I. Kertzer for "The Kidnapping of Edgardo Mortara," Jamaica Kincaid for her frank story of her brother's AIDS death "My Brother," poet/undertaker Thomas Lynch for his essays "The Undertaking: Life Studies from the Dismal Trade" and Sam Tanenhaus for

African capital falls to foreigners, militiamen

KINSHASA, Congo (AP) — The Republic of Congo's president lost his four-month battle to remain in power Wednesday after militiamen backed by foreign troops took control of the country's capital and second-largest city.

Soldiers with the Cobra militia of former dictator Gen. Denis Sassou-Nguesso captured the capital, Brazzaville, about noon from forces loyal to President Pascal Lissouba, according to Radio Liberte, Sassou-Nguesso's main radio station.

"The forces of former President Sassou are apparently in control of Brazzaville," State Department spokesman James P. Rubin said in Washington.

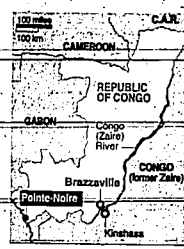

Rubin said the U.S. Embassy in Kinshasa, located just across the river from Brazzaville, reported that as of Wednesday morning, there was no longer any significant fighting in Brazzaville.

Cobras alongside Angolan troops also took over the Republic of Congo's main port and second-largest city, the Atlantic coast city of Pointe Noire, said Rubin, witnesses, U.S. team presses U.N. probe

WASHINGTON (AP)

— U.N. Ambassador Bill Richardson will lead a U.S. delegation to Congo next week to press President Laurent Kabila to allow a U.N. investigation into reported massacres of Rwandan refugees, the State Department said Wednesday.

Spokesman James P. Rubin said the delegation will try to break a months-long impasse between Kabila and the United Nations over the ground rules for the investigation.

The Republic of Congo is located across the Congo River from Congo, the former Zaire.

U.N. sources speaking on condition of anonymity said they had been unable to contact Lissouba and he appeared to be out of power following four months of battles with Sassou-Nguesso's militiamen.

When Richardson visited Congo last spring, he received assurances from Kabila that a U.N. investigation would be allowed to proceed.

But U.N. investigators have not been permitted to visit the alleged massacre sites, despite warnings from the United States and other countries that badly needed assistance would be withheld so long as the Congolese government blocked the probe.

Dustbowl hampers hurricane recovery

ACAPULGO, Mexico (AP) — Drying mud turned Acapulgo into a choking dustbowl Wednesday, forcing everyone from taxi drivers to teenagers to wear face masks or bandannas as they scrambled to find food and clean water amid shortages of tortillas, milk and other basic foods.

The stench of sewage and rotting garbage wafted above Acapulgo's mud-caked street market, where merchants rushed to reopen soiled shops even before sanitation crews could haul tons of storm debris away.

"I'm worried about this. It's not the usual dust. It's from the mountains, with the dead animals in it," said taxi driver Jose Solis.

Hurricane Pauline triggered floods and mudslides that roared into downtown Acapulgo last week, killing at least 150 people here. As the mud dried Wednesday under a blazing sun, a stinging haze rose over western Acapulgo Bay. The hurricane swept through Guerrero and Oaxaca states Oct. 8-9, claiming more than 230 lives in all and leaving at least 50,000 homeless.

Flour, Daniel, 17, piled dozens of mud-soaked sneakers and shoes atop a flimsy table for sale. "Five pesos! Five pesos!" he yelled to passersby.

Pauline crippled Acapulgo's city water and power system, forcing dozens of businesses to close. State officials say tortilla factories, which provide an essential staple for the poor, have shut down for lack of clean water to mix with corn meal. Milk supplies are down because stores have no refrigeration.

"We can't even clean up here because we don't have enough water," said Sergio Alonso, 28, before whipping up a few handfuls of tortillas.—down from the usual 2,000—in his dirty shop.

Seeking to ease shortages, the government food subsidy program Conasupo said Wednesday it had sent 46,800 gallons of drinking water and enough powdered milk to make 80,000 gallons. Despite those efforts, desperate residents dipped buckets into a manhole Wednesday to capture water leaking from ruptured water pipes. "It's safe. They say the health department put chlorine in there today," said Fulgencio Viana, 29.

Ernesto Zedillo and her son Williams Zedillo, 2, wear masks to protect them from dust on their way to a market by a commuter bus Wednesday in Acapulgo, Mexico. Hurricane Pauline triggered floods and mudslides that roared into downtown Acapulgo last week, killing at least 150 people.

Shoving matches have erupted in some shelters because people were forming for handouts of food and water. In others, lines have formed almost spontaneously, with some residents not even sure what they were waiting for.

"I ran up the hill yesterday because someone said they were giving out water," said Josefina Bautista, a maid temporarily jobless because she cannot clean her employer's home without water.

Elsewhere on Mexico's hurricane-stricken coast, President

Ernesto Zedillo went out for his second straight day of disaster inspection amid pledges to rebuild housing and fight any disease outbreaks. He traveled to Huatulco, another stricken Pacific resort, to see damage there and elsewhere in the surrounding state of Oaxaca.

In Acapulgo, epidemiologists were watching for cases of cholera, salmonella, dengue and diarrhea, hoping that outbreaks would not hit shelters housing thousands of homeless. Hundreds of water trucks, guarded by soldiers, deployed citywide.

"What if 400 people in a shelter come down with cholera? We don't have the capacity to take care of 400 people," said Jorgo Garcia Leal, director of Acapulgo's 120-bed General Hospital.

City officials had their hands full in 1991, when 4,000 people contracted cholera, Garcia said.

Although only three cases of cholera have been reported, officials worried about tainted runoff from hillside slums where flash floods are believed to have entombed many of the missing under tons of mud.

Along one winding road of tumbled homes and buried cars, 25 people living in a hilltop shelter turned away someone trying to sell them spoiled fish and meat—even though they had run out of food. "We're looking for help. But we don't want cholera," said Gilberto Riancho.

Suffering could be found in all through the once-glamorous resort city on Mexico's Pacific coast.

Juan Dominguez's grunts could be heard outside the door to his Acapulgo hospital room. Between labored breaths, he told of a wall of mud and rocks slamming into his home before dawn, crushing him, his wife Olivia and their 1-year-old daughter, Mayrene.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Yeltsin appeal defuses no confidence vote

MOSCOW — President Boris Yeltsin defused a proposed no-confidence vote against his government Wednesday, persuading the communist-led parliament to avoid a showdown it seemed likely to lose.

Facing the prospect that his proposal would fail, hard-line lawmakers backed down after Yeltsin promised to cooperate in talks of revising an austere 1998 budget plan that has caused weeks of wrangling.

After discussing the no-confidence issue for more than two hours, the State Duma, or lower house, voted 228-137 to postpone a no-confidence vote until next Wednesday.

Yeltsin waited until the debate was under way before offering the communist-led opposition a face-saving way out.

Egyptian military court sentences 3 to die

HAEKSTEP, Egypt — A military court sentenced three Muslim militants to death Wednesday and ordered 53 others to jail for plotting assassinations, bombings and other subversive acts.

The defendants, members of the outlawed Jihad group responsible for the 1981 assassination of President Anwar Sadat, were kept in a large steel cage in a makeshift courtroom at this military base 25 miles north of Cairo. Some murmured "God is great" as the chief of the three-judge panel read the verdict.

Thirty-one defendants were acquitted.

Guerrillas defend right to set land mines

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia — In a slap at the anti-land mine campaign that won the Nobel Peace Prize last week, Khmer Rouge rebels declared Wednesday that laying land mines is the "inalienable right" of all Cambodians.

"Cambodian people have the right to use all kinds of weapons for self-defense, to protect their country from being washed out by the Vietnamese communists," the guerrillas said in a radio broadcast.

The Khmer Rouge guerrillas have a long hatred of the Vietnamese, who ousted them from power with a 1979 invasion.

Cambodia, with its many 7 million mines buried in its soil, is one of the most heavily mined countries in the world. Aid agencies estimate that up to 300 people are killed or injured in Cambodia every month by land mine explosions.

Many of the mines have been laid by Khmer Rouge guerrillas in their long civil war against successive central governments, although all sides have sown the lethal devices.

Rebel battle kills 18 in Sri Lanka capital

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Gunfire crackled up the streets of Colombo as Tamil rebels mounted an audacious attack on the capital Wednesday, shattering hotel windows with explosions and sending workers and tourists running for safety.

At least seven Americans were among the more than 100 people injured. The day of violence by rebels, left 18 dead in a city struggling to portray itself as businesslike and peaceful. Most of the injured were hit by flying glass.

The Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam want the government since 1983 to demand a separate homeland for ethnic Tamils, who they say suffer widespread discrimination at the hands of Sri Lanka's Sinhalese majority.

Last week, the U.S. State Department added the Tigers to its list of terrorist organizations. The Tigers said the U.S. action would only escalate the war.

The rebels launched their attack Wednesday morning with a truck bomb that exploded in the parking lot of a luxury hotel, causing heavy damage to the building, a neighboring hotel and the twin towers of the World Trade Center which had just opened on Sunday.

Apartheid official denies killings

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A former Cabinet minister insisted Wednesday that South Africa's apartheid government did not authorize killings and torture to put down black activists, blaming atrocities instead on police who he claimed misused power.

"No member of the South African police had license to act illegally," former Law and order minister Adrian Vlok told a special hearing of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission trying to determine who ordered the systematic abuses.

But, Vlok conceded, "we used technology that could be misused."

During the two-day session, Vlok

and other apartheid leaders repeatedly denied personal responsibility for the atrocities. Their mistake, he said, was in failing to investigate allegations of abuse more closely and leaving under the rules for fighting the black liberation movement.

Incredulous commissioners tried Wednesday to pin Vlok down on the gap between what the government said and what the police understood. "You must have heard some of this," commission deputy chairman Alex Boraine said of the abuses.

"We weren't deaf," Vlok replied. "But there was never any report on my desk. We tortured someone or we killed someone and buried his body."

"I never approved it and it was never brought to my attention. When and where we found it out, we charged people. But we should have done more to prevent it," Vlok said.

While Vlok testified Tuesday that he merely suspected police were violating the law, on Wednesday he conceded that allegations of abuses led to a meeting with police commanders.

Remembering Amanda: When justice fell short

How did Amanda Hostetler die? Five years after the celebrated case's unsatisfying conclusion, the question still mocks our community. If anything, we're more confused than ever about those grim events of 1992.

And therein lies a sad lesson: Don't expect too much of the criminal-justice system. For all its elaborate procedures and high-tech investigative wizardry, it is a human institution. Truth is an elusive quarry, and we're fools if we expect the hunters always to win.

The facts seemed straightforward at the start. Two-year-old Amanda died of a brutal blow to her abdomen, sustained while in the care of her mother's live-in boyfriend, 28-year-old Donald "Bud" Stradley. Medical examiners found more than 50 partly healed bruises on the child's body - evidence, apparently, of long-term abuse.

But the facts quickly lost their clarity when Stradley went on trial. Witnesses portrayed him as a harmless simpleton, a "gentle giant" who adored children. Suspicion turned toward Amanda's mother, Jodie Hostetler, who was said to have battered and neglected the child. Was the wrong person on trial?

A unanimous jury freed Stradley, while by then was practically a folk hero. Jodie Hostetler eventually went to prison for permitting injury to her child. No one went to prison for murder.

At year's end, Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter left office in public disfavor. The governor named a task force to investigate why Amanda's obvious peril had escaped the attention of child-welfare workers. Local citizens organized to agitate for answers.

But the full answers never came. Subsequent events raise even more questions. Stradley pleaded guilty this year to molesting two small girls he had baby-sat. What is the public supposed to think about the "gentle giant" now?

Jodie Hostetler finally left prison last week, to the dismay of die-hard detractors who long for more lasting retribution. Her father, Amanda's grandpa, maintains that four years in prison was too harsh a punishment. Jodie was plainly a neglected mother, but she was the wrong target for the public's outrage, Tom Hostetler insists.

He also raises an old complaint about prisons. Four years behind concrete walls made a "sweet kid" harder and less trusting, he says. Maybe that's true, though few who remember the case's facts would call Jodie "sweet." Regardless, this harder, less trusting woman now will build a new life in Boise, haunted by memories of her child's awful death.

Amanda's story is a tragedy calculated not by one. The public institutions that were supposed to protect children, solve crimes and rain appropriate vengeance on wrongdoers were not up to their tasks in this frustrating case.

It's a distasteful conclusion for the public to swallow, but there it is. As much as we'd like the world to make sense, sometimes it just doesn't.

Environmental control = personal control

In this city of historic geography and ominous geology, the question about the Big One - the big earthquake - is not whether it will come, but when. So people here have enough to worry about without being hectorated about their perfume being a public health problem.

However, here you find the nation's highest metropolitan concentration of liberalism. Hence residents are being told that their well-being is menaced from every direction, and they must modify their behavior in manifold ways or the city will no longer be "sustainable."

So says "The Sustainability Plan," a report prepared for and endorsed by the city government. It is a wonderful window into the world of environmental worrying, and illustrates the distillation of liberalism to an agenda of bodily health for individuals who are "educated" to appropriate social consciousness.

According to the report, a sustainable society meets its needs without sacrificing the ability of future generations "and non-human forms of life" to meet theirs. According to Beryl Maglavy, director of the city's Department of the Environment, who does her bit for a better world by owning neither a car nor television, the report avoids "the sky-is-falling mode." But its cumulative effect is to sound this alarm: Time is running out because everything else is, too.

"Let me explain about that," she says, pausing over her vegetarian pasta dish and politely masking her weariness about being again asked to explain the report's recommendation that San Franciscans reduce their "personal impact on the shared indoor environment by limiting the use of scented personal-care products." Some people, she says, are bothered by such things, so why not include in the report, which includes so much else, a recommendation of moderation - the report speaks only of reducing uses - about what the report calls "airborne emissions from fragrances." Here is why not. The recommendation is symptomatic of contemporary liberalism's aspiration to use the reduction of life's risks as the rationale for minutely monitoring, and improving, the behavior and consciousness of individuals.

The report begins at a Paul Reverene-like gallop, warning that "our current course of environmental degradation and resource depletion" jeopardizes "our fragile ecosystems." How fragile? The problem is not just chemicals and other hazards (including that pervasive carcinogen, sunshine?), but also "everyday activities," such as firing up barbecues and fireplaces. "True sustainability, which implies eliminating" - yes, eliminating - "garbage collection and land-filling, will require dramatic changes to almost every economic transaction."

The report envisions lots of new jobs for the boys and girls of the "caring professions" who care for, by "educating," the masses who, without supervision by the caring, will carelessly foul San Francisco and the contiguous planet. The promise to educate recurs: "educate food stamp users to shop at farmers' markets... educate cooking students (future chefs) about organic, regionally produced foods...."

The report favors "culturally responsive" foods. Maglavy says such foods raise the consumer's consciousness of seasons and natural rhythms. The report encourages food grown locally, which will get people in touch with nature through "seasonal flavors" and will minimize yucky trucking.

"Roofs of new and existing buildings offer a vast amount of potential agriculture space..." The report is a marvelous evocation of Soviet life, with its broth of slogans and quotes: "Initiate a 'fruit tree in every yard' campaign"; "Identify appropriate crops, such as apples, for citywide production quotas."

The report's animus against the internal combustion engine is, of course, strong, as is its endorsement of "secure bicycle and roller-ski storage at transit stations." For you out-of-towners, the report suggests "a procedure by which guests in San Francisco hotels can choose to have towels replaced less frequently than every day, to reduce water used in unnecessary laundry."

"On page 63, just past the exhortation to 'increase public education on the value of calcium in the diet' and just before the recommendation to 'establish more sex education and self-esteem programs for youths,' the report calls for a study of 'the nature and causes of stress to San Franciscans.' Well. One way to reduce that stress would be to burn - in an environmentally responsible incinerator, of course - every copy of this report, which says that virtually everything that everybody does is implicated in the impending unsustainability of everything.

Is it not somewhat disproportionate for people living by cheerful choice on the San Andreas fault to fret about the menace of disposable diapers? "That's true," says Maglavy brightly, "but we're already here." Not for long, if the report is right.

Decision on train issue was wise

We have been watching with great interest the controversy about the rezoning and moving the railroad to 3300 East. We were pleased with the decision made Oct. 6 and thought that it was a very fair decision.

The city officials have stated that the soil testing of the old rail yard will be under all government regulations and a comment was made that it would have to pass all requirements before this is a done deal. Now all the key players have to go through this turmoil of decision again because the mayor and councilmen got confused with the issues at hand.

The councilmen spent five or 10 minutes joking around that weren't talking bribes. I am wondering if the above statements were just a smoke screen so that now the City Council can go ahead and give Pinnacle Land and Investment Corp. everything that they have proposed.

You gentlemen were told by Mr. Stubbs that there is plenty of M2 land available and located near railroads that can be used instead of this land under proposal. If you councilmen breaking your own comprehensive plans and ordinances?

I hear that there are rumblings of recall in the wind if the council gives Pinnacle Land Corp. everything that it wants and the 2,000 people who signed petitions and many others who are against the proposal have their rights ignored.

I know that the council is an intelligent group of men that has been elected to vote for the people. Are their wants, needs and interests being considered?

Mayor Gooding and the councilmen are making a decision of tremendous consequence. The citizens of Twin Falls County will pay for these consequences, good or bad.

Thanks for aiding cabin owners

I would like to extend a public thanks to Sen. Craig and Rep. Crapo for their timely intervention for Idaho cabin owners.

My family has been fortunate enough to own a cabin in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area for seven years. It is a handsome, 50-year-old log affair with hardly any level spots. We bought it from its original owners, and we love it, tend to it and repair it gladly. We consider ourselves as stewards of the surrounding land.

I pay property taxes to Blaine County for the cabin. We've always paid a yearly base fee to the National Forest Service, even though we receive no services, no road maintenance, no water, no sewer or garbage. But we pay it with no complaints.

However, the recent appraisal formula applied to us would be devastating. My "lot" (assigned as an invisible one-fourth acre) was appraised against private property in high-value areas such as Snilly Creek and Fisher Creek. Some of those lots were as large as 1.8 acres. Then a 5 percent fee was assessed consistent with the "commercial lease" value, despite the fact that I can't build on, modify, lease, sublet or live in my cabin, and I only have access to it six months a year. Imagine how my cabin value would plummet with a $2,500 per year fee (about $250 per weekend).

Idaho National Forest cabin owners are a small group, certainly not amounting to many votes. We are so pleased that Larry Craig and Mike Crapo were on this issue immediately, asking for modifications to a misguided plan. None of us will mind paying reasonable fees, and reasonable fees will allow Idaho families to keep those Idaho cabins.

Thanks again.

Re-elect Clow as city councilman

Perhaps you have noticed the signs all over town to "Re-elect Lance Clow for City Council." You are an indication of the energy and enthusiasm Mr. Clow brings to the council.

I have known and worked with Lance for four years and found that he is truly a public servant. Besides giving of his own time, money and energy to volunteer projects for the city, he listens to and considers all sides of an issue and comes up with the best response for the whole community. I have even seen him espouse an "unpopular" view, stick with it and be proven right in the long run time and again. That is his integrity, and with him on the council that is our integrity, too.

We are fortunate to have him on the City Council; let's keep him there. Vote for Lance Clow in November.

Charge for toilet use, not grazing

In regard to Jim Prunty's recent letter to the editor and William Brock's Oct. 10 article, "Sawtooth Forest unveils new attractions," perhaps the Forest Service should charge a "fair" price for using the new $15,000 "SST" (sweet-smelling toilet) on Rim View Trail.

Then government agencies wouldn't have to worry about increasing grazing fee to pay for these unnecessary backwoods luxuries.

Until this type of thing is straightened out, leave Sen. Craig alone.

Consider home improvement

He's been saying it a lot lately, most recently on his tour of South America. President Clinton wants to "give people the tools to succeed."

CAL THOMAS

Growing up, I remember my parents telling me, "You can do anything you set your mind to," and "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again." They were teaching me the importance of persistence. I never recall them saying, "Kennedy or Johnson would be giving me the tools I needed to succeed."

These. They come from parents, from church, from mentors and heroes. By saying that government has the tools for success, Clinton implies we cannot be whole or complete without the presence of government in our lives. It isn't true. It never was. Only those who desire power for themselves want a greater and more powerful government. The rest of us realize that, as government's influence shrinks, freedom grows.

That's what Somerset Maugham thought when he wrote in 1941 at a time when freedom was being challenged all over the world: "If a nation values anything more than freedom, it will lose its freedom; and the irony of it is that if it is comfort or money that it values more, it will lose that, too."

The only "tool" we need to succeed is a human spirit unencumbered by government.

3 Americans win Nobels in chemistry, physics

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Six scientists — including three Americans — won Nobel prizes in physics and chemistry Wednesday for discovering how atoms can be slowed down and how the body's cells get revved up.

Two American physicists and a French colleague won the Nobel prize in physics for ground-breaking experiments that trap atoms and chill them to the brink of what nature allows.

The chemistry winners — an

Steven Chu William D. Phillips
American, a Dane and a Briton — received their prize for work on how the body's cells store and transfer energy.

Steven Chu, 49, of Stanford University, William D. Phillips, 48, of the U.S. National Institute of Standards and Technology, and Claude Cohen-Tannoudji, 64, of France, were cited for developing novel ways to cool atoms to super-low temperatures with laser light. Their work "may lead to the design of more-precise atomic clocks for use in space navigation and accurate determination of position," said the citation for the $1 million prize.

Their work allows researchers to manipulate matter at the lowest temperatures achievable, and raises the possibility of 21st-century technologies based on the behavior of individual atoms. It already has led to the creation of the Bose-Einstein condensate, a form of matter that was theoretically described by Albert Einstein and an Indian colleague in the 1920s but never existed until 1995.

U.S. ships tracked by Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran said it was tracking the movements of U.S. warships in the Persian Gulf on Wednesday with a new unmanned aircraft that can evade radar detection. The claim came after Iran accused U.S. battle ships and reconnaissance planes of spying on its war games in the strategic "waterway."

A seven-ship Navy battle group led by the USS Nimitz arrived in the Gulf on Sunday, about two weeks ahead of schedule. Its dispatch followed Iranian air attacks on Iranian opposition bases inside Iraq. The Sept. 29 raids violated a no-fly zone patrolled by the United States and its allies. Iraq sent up two fighters in pursuit, again violating the zone.

Iran's navy commander Ali Akbar Ahmadian said Wednesday that Iran was successfully monitoring the movements of all American warships, and especially the Nimitz, using the new stealth plane.

Cleveland Indians pitcher Jose Mesa celebrates the last out of Game 6 of the American League Championship Series against the Baltimore Orioles Wednesday in Baltimore. The Indians defeated the Orioles 1-0 and will face the Florida Marlins in the World Series.

Tribe dinger tames Orioles

The Associated Press

BALTIMORE — They must be hiding good luck charms in those high socks of theirs.

How else to explain the strange fashion in which the Cleveland Indians keep finding ways to win?

The Indians won the 311 pennant for the second time since 1926 Wednesday, beating the Baltimore Orioles 1-0 in Game 6 on an lightning home run by line substitute, Tony Fernandez.

The Indians open the World Series on the road Saturday night against the Florida Marlins.

Cleveland managed only three hits, yet still won their fourth one-run game of the series.

The Indians prevailed in Game 5 on a three-run homer by their No. 9 hitter, Game 3 on a blindfold squeeze-bunt and Game 4 with the aid of a wild pitch that scored two runs.

“This whole series I didn't think we caught any breaks,” Orioles manager Davey Johnson said.

“You don't win this many one-run games because of fate or luck, but because you used your 7's and 9's and you've got talent,” Cleveland manager Mike Hargrove insisted.

The Indians concluded a magical week with their best catch yet — snatching another brilliant effort by Yulie Mussina and making the Orioles disappear from the playoffs.

The Indians managed only one hit in eight innings off Mussina, who tossed in his second straight seasonal performance in a losing game. Mussina left after having thrown 118 pitches in his second consecutive start with three days' rest.

Mussina set an ALCS record with 15 strikeouts in Game 3, but the Orioles failed to score during his seven innings and lost 2-1 in the 12th. The right-hander was even sharper this time, retiring 20 of the first 21 batters while allowing only a leadoff double by David Justice in the fifth.

Again, however, Baltimore couldn't give him any support and he left after allowing one hit, two walks and striking out 10.

His line for the ALCS: 15 innings, four hits, no earned runs, 25 strikeouts and two no-decisions.

Mussina set records for strikeouts in an ALCS (25) and in one possession (41).

Baltimore stranded 14 runners and went 0-for-12 with runners in scoring position.

Rafael Palmeiro was the worst offender, going 0-for-3 and stranding five.

Cleveland starter Charles Nagy allowed nine hits and three walks in 1 1/3 innings, but he matched zeros with Mussina to keep the Indians in the game.

The Indians finally broke the scoreless tangle in the 11th, when Fernandez launched a 2-0 pitch from Armando Benitez over the 45-foot scoreboard in right field to stun the crowd of 40,075.

Fernandez was playing for Big Roberts, who was out of the lineup after taking a time drive below his left ear.

“I knew something special was going to happen tonight, but I couldn't tell you it was going to hit a home run,” Fernandez said. “It worked out for the best. I'm glad I was able to contribute in a positive way.”

It was the first postseason home run in 131 at-bats for Fernandez.

“It's a genius aren't it?” joked Hargrove. “It's an absolutely fantastic story. It's hard to embellish on it. I didn't tell him to hit a home run that last time up or anything.”

Top 5 seeds advance to SRC quarterfinals

BOISE — The top five seeds from the Snake River Chapter of the Rocky Mountain PGA advanced into the quarterfinals of the SRC Match Play Championship Wednesday.

The event, which is being held at Boise Ranch Golf Course, continues today and Friday. Match-play finals will be Friday at 9 a.m.

Defending champion and No. 2 seed Jeff Thomsen quickly moved through his first two matches of the tournament. The No. 2 seed, Tad Holloway and the No. 3 seed Mike Hamblin also swept their first two matches.

The first upset of the tournament was John Graham, the No. 4 seed, losing to John Van Vleet in 19 holes. John Schoonover, who is seeded fifth defeated Chris Inglis, who was the 1596 runner-up.

In the senior match play division, Jerry Breaux and Leany Stroup both advanced into the finals to be held today. In the senior consolation finals, Stoney Brown is matched against John Weckes.

Today Mike Hamblin plays Jon Stein in a semi-final match.

Minico volleyball sweeps Buhl

By Karen E. Naleznek
Times-News writer

RUPERT — After struggling to beat Twin Falls Tuesday, Minico's volleyball team quickly disposed of Buhl 15-8, 15-1 Wednesday night.

With the regular-season play ending this week, Buhl coach Roger Shield opted to turn the court over to his reserves and kept four of his starters on the bench.

“We played kids that haven't seen a lot of playing time this year and just kind of let it all hang out,” said Shield, who's team falls to 15-12 overall. “And we just never got anything going offensively.”

Despite four serving errors in the first game, the Spartan offense dominated at the net and built a quick 6-1 lead after two consecutive blocks by 5-foot-9-inch Shadet Crystal. Two aces, two Minico errors and a kill by sophomore Brigitt Murphy brought the Indians to within two, but the Spartans later went on score three unanswered points for the 11-6 advantage.

Buhl got two more points off Spartan errors, before Minico's Jennifer Child slammed down her first kill of the night for the win.

Game two went quickly as the Spartans took the 7-0 lead. Buhl's Carrie Williamson stopped the run with a kill for the side out. But the Indians couldn't take advantage, missing the serve.

Serving errors seemed to haunt Buhl who missed three in a row, before allowing Minico to take a 9-0 lead.

After that, it was Williamson again

Spartan senior Stephanie Clark spikes it through Buhl's Erin Scott and Carrie Williamson in Minico's volleyball win Wednesday night.

who earned the side out with her second kill of the game before her third kill finally put one on the scoreboard for the Indians. Minico's Carrie Williamson from there and Spartan senior Stephanie Clark came on strong with three kills and a block to get her team to game point.

After two Minico serving errors, Spartan Lacy Seidn put a serve safely over the net and Buhl committed the error on the Minico offense.

“We did some quick-and-serve shows at the net which we haven't been working on all year,” Minico coach Kelly Foscacon said.

Ex-TCU athlete fights for worker's comp

The Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas — Almost 23 years ago, Alvis Kent Waldrep, Jr. broke his neck on a football field and was left paralyzed while playing for Texas Christian University.

Today, Waldrep is at the center of a lawsuit that could forever change the relationship between colleges and their student athletes.

He is suing TCU's insurance carrier for worker's compensation benefits, saying he was an employee who should get lifetime benefits for a debilitating injury suffered while on the job.

Waldrep. But TCU's earlier insurance company has refused to pay, forcing the 43-year-old Waldrep back into court.

Waldrep, who raises funds for spinal cord injury research, said the case isn't about the money — even though he has insured more than $250,000 in medical costs alone.

“It's time that college athletes take care of the kids who make it all possible,” Waldrep said before jury selection began Wednesday for his trial, which is expected to last four days.

“The only way this is worth going through is to change the NCAA. We know this is going to go to the (Texas) Supreme Court. It's going to be a couple more years.”

After questioning by attorneys, a jury of eight women and four men was selected.

Waldrep's injury came in a 40-20 TCU loss at Alabama in 1974 on a sweep play late in the second quarter.

Waldrep, who was carrying the ball, was fumbled toward by a Crimson Tide defender near the running back flying.

“I was turned in an awkward position and came down head first on the artificial turf,” he recounted in a 1988 interview. “I tried to get up, but I wasn't getting it. It was frightening. . . I felt tremendous pain in my neck, and it was hard to breathe. It never occurred to me I had broken my neck.”

Shoshone slips by Dietrich

By Darren Clow
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — Jake Uhrig rushed for three fourth-quarter touchdowns and the hometown Indians avoided an upset at the hands of Dietrich with a 38-28 win in the sole Sawtooth Conference football game Wednesday.

The Blue Devils (1-6) looked to end their five-game losing streak, taking a 22-16 lead into the fourth quarter before Shoshone (5-2) took charge.

“We told our offensive line, ‘We're not going to pass the ball in the second half. I don't care if it's 4th-and-20, we were gonna run it, so you guys have got to make it happen,’” said Shoshone coach Tim Chapman.

Uhrig scored on a one-yard plunge on the first play of the fourth quarter and ran in the conversion as Shoshone took the lead, 24-22. Three plays later, Blue Devil quarterback Jake Bingham (rumored to be Dietrich's popular option play, senior up another Uleric score on the next drive.

Dietrich sustained a 10-play, 56-yard drive on his next possession and Clay Ward scored the 22-22 tie in the second downs, but the Indian defense stopped Dietrich on the conversion and held the 30-28 lead.

With the Blue Devil defense battling the clock as well as the Shoshone running game, Uhrig sprinted 27 yards on 3rd-and-6 with just over a minute left, and ran it in from three yards out for the final score.

“You take away a few mistakes and penalties, and I think we end up a few points ahead,” said first-year Dietrich coach Ed Simons. “Our option game is improving and we're developing into a very good football team. Too bad this isn't week one.”

Shoshone opened the scoring at the tail end of the first quarter when junior quarterback Phil McDonald hit a wide-open Johnny Escamilla on a slant route across the middle for a 40-yard score. Eric Johnson ran in the first of his two two-point conversions for an 8-0 lead.

Tiger runners win Gooding Invite

The Times-News
GOODING - The Jerome Tigers won the boys' and girls' titles in the Gooding Invitational country meet at Gooding Country Club Wednesday.

But the individual honors went to runners from different schools. Nathanael Castle of Gooding won the boys' division in 16:24, while Holly Holson of Wood River took the girls' division in 4:44.

HAZELTON - In a two-hour marathon match, Declo pulled out the 11-15, 15-12, 15-11 Canyon Conference win over Valley Wednesday.

"Both teams played really hard," said Valley coach Julian Escobedo. "All three games were really close. The biggest difference for us was that we net served so many times."

Escobedo said his setter Tegan Rogers had a great game.

"The passer weren't there all the time but she was there setting it up for us," Escobedo said.

Declo also won the junior varsity match. Valley took the freshman contest.

Carey def. Camas County 15-10, 15-6

CAREY - The Panthers overcame a 10:2 Camas County lead in game one to sweep the Mubers 15-10, 15-6 Wednesday in a Northside Conference volleyball match.

Sami Alley led Carey at the service line, scoring 12 points. Teammate Lindsey Earton finished the match with eight assists.

Soccer Wendell 2, Bliss 1

WENDELL - Ruben Lopez and Jared Ashmead scored goals in the first half to lead Wendell to a 2-1 Class A soccer win over Bliss Wednesday.

After Ashmead's goal, Bliss' Cesar Espino scored to tie it up. Lopez's goal ended up being the game-winner after neither team scored in the second half.

Wendell, which travels to ISDB today, improves to 1-5.

Attorney Nina Cassack, left, and Don King leave the Federal courthouse in Philadelphia, Wednesday, U.S. District Judge Norma Shapiro considered suspending King's ability to promote boxing matches until disgruntled heavyweight boxer Orin Norris Jr. is given a chance to play the ranking of top challenger in the World Boxing Association.

King's promotional career still threatened in federal court

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Don King left the federal courthouse Wednesday with his ability to promote boxing matches as uncertain as when he entered.

At issue is disgruntled heavyweight Orin Norris Jr.'s court-room bid to become the No. 1 challenger in the WBA, below only champion Evander Holyfield. In a federal lawsuit against King and the WBA, Norris contended the two parties colluded to unfairly deny him the top challenger spot.

The sides settled in June, with the WBA and King agreeing to set up a fight between Norris and WBA No. 1 challenger Frans Botha. But Botha declined the $400,000 King offered him for the fight, and no one else has stepped in to promote the bout.

"Once we get the (Norris) fight, Mr. King will be exonerated as will the WBA," U.S. District Judge Norma L. Shapiro said.

The hearing Wednesday was to address Shapiro's threats, in response to the stall of the Norris-Botha fight, to enjoin King from promoting and prevent the WBA from sanctioning or supervising fights.

King declined comment after the hearing.

WBA attorney James J. Binns offered a new agreement to offer a Norris fight down the list of ranked fighters - to No. 12 if need be - and declare the winner the No. 1 WBA challenger.

"If out of the top 12, we don't find someone who will fight (Norris), he'll be No. 1," Binns said.

The settlement drew protests from many sides. Norris attorney James Beasley wanted his client declared top challenger immediately, based on Botha's refusal to fight and his legal position that Norris deserved to be top contender anyway.

Norris, 32, was formerly represented by King. He is 47-4 against mostly second-tier opponents and held the WBA cruiserweight title briefly in 1994 and 1995 before returning to heavyweight.

Arguments from attorneys for Holyfield and Michael Moorer, however, made Shapiro realize that her understanding of the original settlement was not universally held.

Shapiro wants to see Norris, provided he wins the first match, guaranteed a shot at the winner of the Nov. 8 fight between Holyfield and Moorer.

As she questioned attorneys, Shapiro realized WBA rules allowed exceptions that could puff off a fight between Norris and Holyfield-Moorer winner indefinitely.

Not only did the Jerome girls' cross-country team get some well-deserved coverage, I also was very impressed with Mr. Bowlin's creative writing style. I thoroughly enjoyed his descriptions of the Four plays later, Dietrich's Clay Ward took the option pitch and cut back up the middle for a 48-yard score. Ward ran the two-point conversion to tie the game.

McDonald hit J.D. Sologara for a 17-yard gain on the next drive, but was picked off by Ruben Vasquez near midfield. Dietrich marched to the Indian 24 but Ward fumbled back to Shubert and the teams were tied at half-time.

Uhrig, Johnson and Sologara rushed the Indians 50 yards to a touchdown on the opening drive of the second half, and Dietrich answered with a 10-play, 54-yard drive of its own but was stopped on the two-point conversion and stalled, 16-14.

The Blue Devils then regained possession when their kickoff went untouched, and scored seven plays later on Ward's second touchdown. Bingham passed to Patrick Perron for the two-point conversion as Dietrich took the eight-point lead heading into the final quarter.

San Francisco gets Super Bowl; Cleveland waits for Browns

WASHINGTON (AP) - NFL owners already know where the 2003 Super Bowl will be played. The same kind of planning does not apply to placing a team in Cleveland by 1999.

Their decision was solid Wednesday to award San Francisco the 2003 title game, to be played in a new stadium that will replace 3Com Park.

At the same time, the owners said they were in no hurry to decide whether an expansion team or a relocated existing team would become the new edition of the Cleveland Browns.

In fact, they are even prepared to appoint a staff to scout players and assemble key personnel for the team first - before deciding where the owners will go.

"It will probably be twophased," commissioner Paul Tagliabue said. "We haven't made that decision."

The league has committed itself to returning to Cleveland by the 1999 season under an agreement that allowed the previous Browns, owned by Art Modell, to move to Baltimore last year.

But with teams such as Indianapolis, Minnesota, Phoenix and Denver facing stadium and financial concerns, the owners may wait until a mandated November 1998 deadline before choosing between expansion and relocation.

Some owners, such as Dallas' Jerry Jones, oppose expansion because they feel it would water down the talent pool and further divide the revenue pie. They appear to be in the minority, however, he said.

"I have heard nothing but a leaning toward expansion, really," Kansas City Chiefs owner Lamar Hunt said.

Texas owner Ray Patterson for the Browns - but not a coach or general manager - could be appointed in early 1998.

If Cleveland is awarded an expansion team, the owners would have to decide whether to admit a second city - perhaps Los Angeles or Houston - to maintain an even number of teams. The NFL currently has 30 teams.

An odd number would require at least one team to have a bye every week. A team that has a bye the final week and also wins its division could have back-to-back byes.

Will Florida Gators snap against Auburn?

Auburn coach Terry Bowden is as anxious as anyone to see how No. 7 Florida reacts after a loss.

ANALYSIS Richard Rosenblatt

The Tigers may be playing their best, not us. We know we're among one of the best teams in the country... The Gators (5-1, 3-1 SEC) dropped from the No. 1 ranking after a 28-21 loss at LSU last Saturday... Auburn (6-0, 3-0), with a 49-13 win over Louisiana Tech, moved up two spots to No. 6.

yards and 13 TDs passing and 101 yards and two TDs rushing.

"It has the same thing... Herb Tyler brought great scrambling ability, great arm and good receivers... Gators defensive end Thad Bullard said: 'We have to go out and be as aggressive as we can, stop the run and put them in passing situations, then contain and intercept and sack as much as we can.'

And now that the Gators are down, wide receiver Jacques Green understands how opponents feel about them: "Everybody hates the Gators," said Green, his team shooting for a fifth straight SEC title.

"Everybody tries to beat the Gators. We expect that every game we go into."

The picks: Minnesota (plus 34) at No. 1 Penn State

Now that Curtis Enis is warmed up... PENN STATE 45-14.

Texas Tech (plus 37) at No. 2 Nebraska

Another 70-YD game for Ahmad Green? Sure... NEBRASKA 52-10.

No. 21 Georgia Tech (plus 23) at No. 3 Florida State

Are the Seminoles really playing a decent team?... FLORIDA STATE 42-20.

No. 4 North Carolina (minus 12) at North Carolina State

Tar Heels know to slip up at inopportune times... NORTH CAROLINA STATE 42-20.

No. 15 Iowa (minus 7) at No. 5 Michigan

Wolverines allowing 52 scoring points per game... MICHIGAN 30-17.

No. 7 Florida (minus 11) at No. 6 Auburn

Auburn QB Dameyrah Craig's benchmark game... AUBURN 31-30.

Mississippi (plus 16) at No. 8 LSU

If Tigers can shut down Florida's offense, what will they do vs. Rebels?... LSU 31-10.

No. 9 Tennessee (minus 9) at Alabama

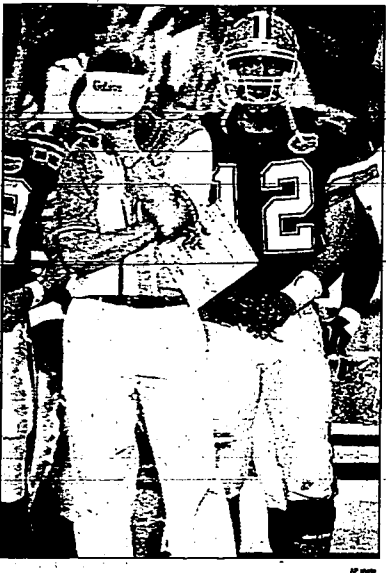

Vols have new hope for SEC title after Florida's loss at LSU... TENNESSEE 27-24.

No. 10 Washington (minus 12) at Arizona

Huskies putting all the pieces together... WASHINGTON 27-10.

Indiana (plus 34) at No. 11 Ohio State

Despite 378 yards passing vs.

Florida coach Steve Spurrier and quarterback Doug Johnson (12) look on from the sidelines during the Florida 28-21 loss to LSU on Saturday in Baton Rouge, La. Johnson has been suspended for Saturday's game at Auburn, Spurrier said Wednesday.

Penn State, Joe Germaine remains Backeyes backup... OHIO STATE 45-13.

No. 12 Michigan State (minus 13) at Northwestern

Spartans looking at 60 mark before next week's showdown vs. Michigan... MICHIGAN STATE 33-23.

California (plus 17) at No. 13 Washington State

The Lead crawler picks up steam after a week off... WASHINGTON STATE 42-21.

No. 14 Texas A&M (minus 1) at No. 20 Kansas State

Aggies lead nation in scoring at 46.6 points per game... TEXAS A&M 35-23.

Oregon State (plus 21) at No. 17 UCLA

Bruins rampage continues for SoCal... UCLA 52-21.

Fresno State (plus 12) at No. 15 Air Force

Buildings blew 28-point halftime deficit too much for Badgers... AIR FORCE 21-7.

No. 19 Georgia (minus 11) at Vanderbilt

These Bulldogs rebound nicely after loss at Tennessee... GEORGIA 31-14.

No. 24 Wisconsin (plus 2) at Purdue

Boilermakers high-octane offense too much for Badgers... PURDUE 45-34.

Arizona State (plus 1) at No. 25 Stanford

Two Sun Devil QBs may be better than one Cardinal QB... ARIZONA STATE 34-31.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Owners approve 1-team realignment

BALTIMORE (AP) - In a move that likely will result in Kansas City or Milwaukee switching to the National League next season, baseball owners finally approved a realignment plan Wednesday.

Owners approved the plan 27-0 during a telephone conference call shortly before Game 6 of the AL championship series.

With the switches, the NL will have 16 teams next season and the AL 14. That enables owners to bunch interleague games in specific periods of the season, as was done this year.

Brugrera advances to round 2 in Czech

OSTRAVA, Czech Republic - Jiri Novak of the Czech Republic pulled off the biggest upset of the ATP Czech Indoor tennis tournament Wednesday, ousting top-seeded Carlos Moyá.

HONG KONG - Boris Becker defeated Italy's Renzo Fulcani 6-7 (3-7), 6-3, 6-2 Wednesday in a preliminary group match of the $725,000 Marlboro Hong Kong Tennis Championships.

Boris Becker wins opening group match

Becker plays Jonathan Stark on Friday in his last group match, and then he would give up a place in the semifinals.

The 12 players in the event are divided into four groups of three, with the winners of each group advancing to the semifinals.

Albert Costa of Spain was forced to withdraw from the tournament because of injury. Costa is suffering from tendinitis of his right shoulder and will miss next week's tournament in Stuttgart, Germany.

Piolino, Santoro advance in Lyon

LYON, France - Eighth-seeded Tim Henman of Britain and Wimbledon finalist Cedric Piolino advanced Wednesday in the Lyon Grand Prix tennis tournament.

Henman moved into the second round when Guillaume Rufin of France retired in the second set while trailing 6-1, 4-1.

In another first-round match, Christophe Voorman topped Frenchman Arnaud Boetsch 7-5, 6-2.

Hingis sweeps to quarterfinals in Europe

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) - Martina Hingis made her first appearance in Switzerland as the world's No. 1 player Wednesday and delighted fans with a sweeping second-round victory at the Swiss Open European Indoor Championships.

Hingis, who successfully defended her first career singles title last week in Filderstadt, Germany, took just 59 minutes to advance to the quarterfinals, dispatching French lucky-loser Anne-Cécile Sidot 6-3, 6-2.

Earlier in the day, second-ranked and defending champion Janina Novotna recovered from a second-set lapse to advance with a 6-0, 6-7 (6-8), 6-2 victory over Japan's Ai Sugiyama.

Lance Armstrong joins new team

NEW YORK - Star cyclist Lance Armstrong, recovering from testicular cancer, has signed with a new team.

The 26-year-old former world champion recently split with the Cofidis cycling team, and he is to disclose his new team - believed to be the U.S. Postal Service cycling team - at a news conference Thursday.

Last week, Cofidis said it would not sign Armstrong for next season, the cyclist's agent Bill Stapleton, said Armstrong was "deeply outraged" by the move.

Cofidis, based in Lille, France, accused Armstrong of "not playing fair towards a partner who always supported him more as a friend than a sponsor." Stapleton called the charges "senseless and malicious personal attacks."

Armstrong was diagnosed with cancer, which sidelined him for 1997.

Hobert waived after admitting unprepared

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. - The Buffalo Bills waived backup quarterback Billy Joe Hobert on Wednesday, two days after he admitted he was unprepared for an injury to starter Todd Collins.

Hobert told The Associated Press earlier this week he glanced over the passing plays and was not ready last week when Collins sustained a strained shoulder in a loss to the New England Patriots.

"It's not the dumbest thing I've ever said in my life," Hobert told the Empire Sports Network, a local cable station. "I think it was a gut feeling for Coach (Marv) Levy to do this. I know that they know I worked my hand end off during the week to prepare myself."

Kemp close to $107 million deal with Cavs

Shawn Kemp moved a step closer Wednesday to getting his remaining megacontract, a seven-year deal with the Cleveland Cavaliers that will be worth about $107 million.

It will make Kemp the fifth NBA player in the $100 million club and will end the salary saga of the ex-Seattle All-Star whose anger with his old contract played a big part in driving him away from the SuperSonics.

According to a source close to the Cavs, the sides have agreed on the amount of money Kemp will be paid - approximately $8.3 million in the first season with 20 percent raises in each of the next six years.

Noted in Brown's locker: "Keep your head up"

ALAMEDA, Calif. (AP) - A silver and black helmet, shoulder pads and uniform pants surrounded the empty locker of Oakland Raiders cornerback Larry Brown. A piece of scrap paper advised: "Keep your head up."

Brown was gone Wednesday, a day after being suspended for four weeks by the Raiders for "conduct detrimental to the team." Left behind was a tape of the Denver offense, which Brown had been preparing to face this Sunday.

Cowboys attempt to avoid ride into sunset

It doesn't get any easier for the Dallas Cowboys, who come home after two losses on the road to find the Jacksonville Jaguars in town.

"We have to keep pushing the envelope hard and maybe we'll crack it open," Eric Smith says. "It could easily become a very ugly season for us if we're not careful."

The bettors already think the Cowboys have opened as a favorite and dropped to a 4-1/2 - a lot of money of the year.

This is the week the Cowboys have to prevent it from getting uglier.

The Jaguars, 4-0 at home, have lost only once - on the road in Washington. Their only other road game was a 1-point win opening week in Baltimore.

So the job for the Cowboys is simple - if they can get over those problems getting the ball into the end zone, something they do not do on just four of their last 20 trips inside the opponents' 20. Take an early lead and the crowd goes on their side; start slowly and on their crowd is likely to turn on their heroes.

ANALYSIS Dave Goldberg

Look at it this way: Troy, Emmitt, Michael and Deion have too much pride to let it get too far out of hand.

COWBOYS, 20-13

New England (minus 3.5) at New York Jets

Tuna Bowl II. Or, if you prefer, the Pete Carroll Bowl - it's his first trip to the Meadowlands since 1994. It's one season at the Jets' coach. This time, talent over emotion.

PATRIOTS, 27-14

Denver (minus 5) at Oakland

The Broncos have played four of their six games at home, and this could be difficult if the Raiders are in the right mood. But Oakland seems to know how to lose.

BRONCOS, 27-19

New York Giants (plus 6 1/2) at Detroit

Three straight Giants' wins demonstrate a consistency Detroit has yet to show.

GIANTS, 24-23

San Diego (plus 6) at Kansas City

The Chargers actually have won two of the last three games they've played at Arrowhead.

CHARGERS, 23-13

Buffalo (minus 1 1/2) at Indianapolis (Monday night)

Two straight prime-time appearances for a witness team?

COLTS, 17-16

San Francisco (minus 10 1/2) at Atlanta

Penn State could probably finish second in the NFC West. It has... 49ers, 34-10

Arizona (plus 5) at Philadelphia

The Cards finally get off their 1-point thing last week - they lost by 14.

EAGLES, 17-6

Pittsburgh (minus 5) at Cincinnati

Bad news for Cincinnati: Bill Cowher was furious with his Steelers after their narrow escape against the Steelers.

Washington (plus 1) at Tennessee

Eddie George against the Redskins' rush defense is a good mix for the Oilers. The five people in the stands will be happy.

OILERS, 20-17

Carolina (minus 5) at New Orleans

Danny Wuerffel is not the kind of quarterback that gives Carolina trouble.

PANTHERS, 13-9

Miami (minus 1 1/2) at Baltimore

Dan Marino's starting to find some poise to guys.

DOLPHINS, 27-24

Seattle (minus 2) at St. Louis

Oh, that NFC West. SEAHAWKS, 20-16

Last WEEK: 5-7 (spread), 7-5 (straight up). SEASON: 47-43-4 (spread), 64-30 (straight up).

Grizzlies ready for what could be biggest game of year

Half the season still remains, but Montana's Grizzlies find themselves bracing for what could be their biggest game of the year.

Coach Mick Denney's squad leads the Big Sky Conference with a 2-0 league mark entering Saturday afternoon's game against visiting Eastern Washington.

A home victory would strap Montana (4-1 overall) snugly into the conference driver's seat. A triumph by EWU (5-2) would put the Eagles back on top.

EWU coach Mike Kramer, who lost 49-20 the last time the Eagles came to Missoula (1994), knows playing in Washington's Grizzly Stadium is never a picnic.

"A stadium is built by people and the people in the stadium make it their 12th man," Kramer said. "It's a great challenge for our football team and coaching staff."

EWU's trip to Missoula and maybe improve upon last year's effort (a 34-30 loss in Cheney)."

Montana appears to be firing on all cylinders behind quarterback Brian Ah Yat, who tossed three touchdown passes in a 48-0 rout of Idaho State in Pocatello last week.

Still, Denney is leery of the Eagles, who are themselves fresh from a 30-17 win over visiting Sacramento State.

"It's no surprise that Eastern Washington has had the type of season that they've had so far," the Grizzlies coach said. "They have veteran players who have been through the Big Sky wars."

"You can't take any shortcuts when you're playing against Eastern. They're a detail team in every phase of the game."

Larking in the wings will be Northern Arizona (4-2, 2-1) and Montana State (4-2, 2-1), who look to tighten the league race by winning against Sacramento State (4-1, 1-2) and Cal State-Northridge (3-3, 1-1), respectively.

NAU snapped MSU 14-13 last week to move into a third-place tie with the Bobcats, and looks to keep its title hopes alive by winning on the road.

"We went back to focusing on - lying to the ball, winning third down. We told our players that we had played some good games and that we needed to focus on the things we can do well."

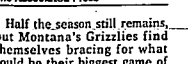

Lumberjacks defensive coordinator Robb Akay said.

MSU coach Cliff Hysell expects to have all he can handle against Northridge, and is just happy to be playing the Bulldogs in Borzema.

"Northridge is a very, very athletic team, especially at the skill positions," he said. "They're a special Big Sky team in that they throw the ball really well."

Indeed, while the Bulldogs are without injured quarterback Aaron Flowers, backup Josh Fiske has proven effective. Last week, Fiske threw for 254 yards and a touchdown in upending visiting Weber State.

"This is a very important game for us," said Northridge coach Jim Fenwick. "We need to win a conference game on the road. If we can win, we'll be in the top four of the conference."

AROUND THE VALLEY

Need to drive? You may not get license today

TWIN FALLS - A broken link in the state driver's license issuing system means local drivers may not be able to get a new license today. A device linking driver's licensing bureaus across the Magic Valley to the state data base broke down Tuesday, said Idaho Transportation Department spokesman Ralph Poore. The gear is leased and so must be replaced, not repaired, he said, and the replacement may not arrive until Friday. The newest driver's license offices not affected by the equipment failure are in Mountain Home and Pocatello, Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department officials said. Meanwhile, the Sheriff's department is recommending calling local driver's license bureaus before you go to make sure they are operating. The only services affected by the breakdown are for driver's licenses, the sheriff's office said. The breakdown just prevents clerks from automatically calling up information on licenses, Poore said.

Cable channel to air council candidate debate

TWIN FALLS - A candidates' debate for City Council aspirants will be broadcast at 7 p.m. tonight by Community Cablevision. Directors of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce and members of the chamber's Governmental Affairs Committee will pose the questions. The debate will be aired live on cable channel 10, and it will be rebroadcast before the Nov. 4 election. All six council candidates have been invited to participate. The public also is invited to attend the debate inside City Hall.

Murder suspect pleads innocent during arraignment

TWIN FALLS - The suspect in the murder of Gene Hartwig of Hansen took another step toward trial Wednesday. Liesel pleaded innocent to a charge of first-degree murder as he was arraigned into Twin Falls County District Court Wednesday. Liesel, 25, is charged with tying up Hartwig, beating and torturing him, and dumping the body in a field south of Hansen after Hartwig died. A trial date has not been set.

Prosecutors are using three elements of the crime to support the first-degree murder charge: kidnap, for tying up Hartwig; robbery, for the theft of Hartwig's car and a VCR from his house; and torture, for the bruises and burns prosecutors say Hartwig suffered before his death. If jurors agree with any one of those, Liesel could be convicted of first-degree murder.

Defense attorney John Olson is seeking to have the charge reduced to second-degree murder, Olson told District Judge Daniel Mechi. He will try to strike the torture element of the charge, and was concerned that Liesel's plea meant he was accepting the charge as-is, county Deputy Prosecutor Calvin Campbell said.

Energy Department sponsors workshops on waste disposal

IDAHO FALLS - The federal Energy Department is sponsoring two workshops to gather comments on an upcoming study of the environmental effects of plans to treat radioactive waste for disposal. One workshop will be from 7 to 9:30 p.m. today at the Siltlo Inn in Idaho Falls. The second will be from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Oct 23 at the Boise Centre on the Grove. The workshops will serve to identify issues, concerns and alternatives that should be covered in the environmental impact statement. The statement will evaluate methods for treating highly radioactive and highly corrosive liquid waste stored at the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory. Instead of oral public testimony, workshop participants will work in small groups to identify issues or alternatives.

Infection no threat to public

By Pat Marcantonio, Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS - The bacterial infection responsible for the death of Dr. Rodney Swartling was not the kind resistant to antibiotics or a threat to public health. "The bacteria was resistant to penicillin, but sensitive to a lot of the antibiotics. It was not the resistant strain of staphylococcus we're all worried of getting in this community," said Dr. Robert Porter, Swartling's longtime partner in Twin Falls. Swartling, 59, was brought by ambulance to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Friday and died Sunday at the hospital from an "overwhelming" staph infection. The sudden death shocked the community because Swartling was reported in good health. Since Swartling's death, however, about half a dozen people have called their office, asking about the infection, Porter said.

"This is not contagious and not the type of staph infection that anyone would get," he said. "There are other types of bacteria, like tuberculosis or the common cold, that is much more infectious." Swartling, an orthopedic surgeon and Magic Valley Regional board member, had returned recently from a trip to Italy and apparently had injured his back lifting luggage. He did not have an open wound on his back, Porter said. Please see INFECTION, Page C3

Woman alleges battery

By Kent McClary, Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS - A man has been charged with battery after being accused of grabbing a woman at College of Southern Idaho Tuesday. His alleged victim wants to contact other women who may have been victimized by the suspect. Eloy Alvino Mendoza, 22, of Rigby, admitted to walking up to the woman in front of the CSI gym, putting his hand on her crotch and saying, "Can I have some of this?" a Twin Falls police report said. Mendoza was arrested on battery charges and was released from Twin Falls County Jail Wednesday on $300 bail. Mendoza confessed to grabbing the woman and told police he had done the same thing before, the report said. That's what has the victim concerned. "I want to know if there are other people out there who have sexually assaulted, because we have a court case coming up," said Karen Purren, 26, of Twin Falls. Purren, a CSI student, said she's concerned the next victim might be assaulted worse, or not be brave enough to charge Mendoza. Purren said Mendoza went up the stairs at the gym's west side, several yards ahead of her. He entered, then came back out and walked toward her as if to ask the time, she said. "What he said was very offensive. He did it so casually, it was like he didn't have to think about it," Purren said. "My first reaction was, 'Oh what a jerk,'" Purren said. "It took me two steps to realize he was more than just a jerk." Purren said she walked to the gym door then returned and said, "I'm married. I have kids, you pig."

WOOL ON THE ROAD

Stranded while driving his 8-year-old daughter Juliet to school, Joseph Burkett enjoys an unexpected delay during Wednesday's sheep trailing celebration.

Trailing the sheep

Blaine County residents treated to up-close look at ranching

By Kristan Kennedy, Times-News correspondent
SUN VALLEY - Dawn's light in the Wood River canyon is dim, as a meandering band of sheep makes its autumn sojourn from the Sawtooth forests to the flatlands. Pockets of flame-orange aspens frame the journey. The hills crawl with woolly, nunching animals. Bells around their necks create a wind-chime echo in the cold morning air - tunes for a laborious trek to warmer winter pastures. It's known as the "trailing of the sheep." It is being celebrated this week in Blaine County with the help of sheep ranchers John and Diane Peavey and the Ketchum/Sun Valley Chamber of Commerce. The groups hosted a reception at Anne Reed's gallery where pictures of the sheep runs were viewed and stories of life with the herd were shared. Wednesday morning at dawn, the public took to the trails to walk with the flocks. John Peavey's Flat Top Sheep Company is a four-generation legacy, and closer to home than politics. The former state senator spent 21 years in the Legislature but he has lived his entire life on grazing lands in Carey, Eden, and in the Sawtooths. He defends sheeping as an exercise in Bla Chanco leads sheep and members of the community down a Halley street Wednesday morning in a celebration of the trailing of the sheep. environmental ranching and multiple use of public lands. "It's called sharing," Peavey says.

"The sheep are unique. They don't invade the riparian areas. They like to climb all over the hills, not like the cows." On today's trail. The industry staked claims in Idaho long before potatoes, mining, or ski resorts. But the backdrop has changed over the years - especially in Blaine County. And nowhere is the change more apparent than in Sun Valley's Elkhorn Canyon. Reaching Milligan Canyon, a tangle of public land off Sun Valley city limits, requires skillful driving past Harker Center swimming pools, tennis courts, and road construction crews who've been re-contouring Morningstar Road for 18 months. A condominium development makes the journey harder today. Reaching the canyon these days is hard enough in a four-wheel drive. But the sheep like to climb, and they munch wild onions, carrots and a licorice root tenderly as they go. Turning back and heading down to Elkhorn Road, the air and mood change the minute one crosses the national forest boundary and hits Sun Valley. Please see SHEEP, Page C3

2 incumbents, 2 challenges vie for Wendell council

By Steve Koehler, Times-News correspondent
WENDELL - The top two vote-getters in a four-way race will win the two four-year seats up for election on the Wendell City Council. Karl Serr and Ted Anderson are vying for positions now held by Glen Spencer and Dale Bunn, who both want to be re-elected. Bunn and Serr all see a need for sewer service on the west side of town. Serr and Anderson are unhappy with Wendell being a training ground for policemen. Bunn said the Lewiston Street well - it will be the city's main well after installation of the new water-storage tank - has "septic tanks all around it." The city recently acquired the easements for a sewer main that could solve the problem next year, he said, without a tax increase. "All the council and the mayor are working on it, and they're all wanting it as bad as I am," Bunn said. "We have the employees qualified to install it." Spencer said "possible extension of the sewer system on the west side of town" is a major issue. Serr said there are a lot of septic tanks in the northwest quarter of town - "We need to get sewer service there before we begin other projects." Serr also wants Wendell to lengthen the tenure of its police officers. "We train them, they put in their applications elsewhere, then they go," he said. Pay that's competitive with other police departments was Serr's suggested solution to the problem. Anderson echoed Serr's sentiments and cited the "bad" example of a Wendell policeman who went to Shoshone for higher pay. "I'm tired of Wendell being the training center for the policemen of Idaho," he said. Please see WENDELL, Page C3

Grant gives Gooding students chance to explore graphic design

By Laura Savage Times-News correspondent

GOODING - Teacher Mary Kren impressed Gooding school trustees with a report on how she's using the US West grant she received last summer.

The grant enables students to set up a schoolbased enterprise using graphic design, textile applications and the Internet to order materials. Kren told the School Board Tuesday.

At this time, 21 students chosen for their artistic abilities have been handpicked for the project.

To stay in the program, students in the class must maintain a C average or better.

Students picked for the one-credit, hour-long class are mostly juniors and seniors, she said.

Property to sell - C-4

Contracts requiring student and parent signatures will be given out soon.

In other Gooding schools businesseid the team liked class meetings in which students talk among themselves about their problems.

According to Bennett and Thompson, the team liked the combined elementary/middle school building.

One problem the team addressed was that some textbooks are outdated. One is the seventh-grade social studies book, but Thompson said it already is on the list to be replaced at the end of the school year.

Another problem Thompson brought to the board's attention is that the chorus teacher is not certified.

"We were given the name of an individual who could be certified as an expert for one year" as a possible replacement for the chorus teacher, Thompson said.

In addition, some accreditation team members thought there needed to be better balance in physical education classes, the principals said.

Thompson displayed a plaque awarded to Donna Pence by the Hoops for Heart program. Pence's physical education class was the program's top donation producer in the state.

The board approved the Jaycees' request to use the Frum cafeteria for community activities, as long as the Jaycees provide liability insurance.

The School Board voted to refinance the schools bonds, hopefully saving taxpayers $209,000. The board agreed to refinance as long as the district retains the right of refusal - if the board doesn't like the price - and it could be done with no additional cost to the district.

Additional classrooms at the high school soon will be a reality thanks to Zion's Bank, which has helped the school a line of credit to start construction of four new classrooms.

The regular Gooding School Board meeting will be continued at 5 p.m. Monday.

Panel: Preserve existing gaming operations

BOISE (AP) - Months of wrangling and maneuvering ended Wednesday when Gov. Phil Batt's Gaming Study Committee narrowly recommended maintaining existing gambling operations on and off Idaho's Indian reservations.

from the statement is an endorsement of the Internet lottery site the Coeur d'Alene tribe has been test marketing since its northern Idaho reservation.

The statement, drafted by the attorney general's office following negotiations with tribal leaders, proposes general state policy that Batt, lawmakers and other interests would put details to.

"The tribes made concessions," said LeRoy Wickler, attorney for the Kootenai Tribe in the Panhandle. "They saw it was a vote to possibly end the strife over tribal gaming in the state of Idaho."

After attending to some housekeeping matters, the committee adjourns. The vote of the sharply divided 12-member panel was the one expressed by Batt administration officials after the governor established the committee last spring and had been splitting 6-6 on dozens of issues since then.

Officials uncertain of California gambling law's impact on Nevada

LAS VEGAS (AP) - The passage of the California Gaming Control Act is just the first step in a long journey, but the jury is out on the impact the legislation could have on Nevada's lifelong industry.

Politicians are focusing on Indian casinos which are winning at least $1 billion a year, and the state's legal card clubs, where $9 billion is wagered annually, Rose said.

Under current California law, Indian casinos feature bingo, parimutuel betting, betting on the state lottery and card games. Card clubs feature only card games. Slot machines and video poker machines are banned under the current law. Although the large card clubs are getting larger, the number of clubs has decreased over the past decade from 300 to the current 173, Rose said. The new gaming law establishes a Division of Gambling Control to regulate the card clubs, and extends until the year 2001 a moratorium on new cardroom areas.

Joy Thomas was born Aug. 14, 1902, to Everett and Molly Bedeas Noble in Burket, Neb. She moved with her family to Shoshone in 1911, where she was valedictorian of her high school graduating class. She attended the University of Washington where she was a member of Alpha Chi Omega sorority. On Oct. 27, 1923, she married John Thomas in Boise.

Mrs. Thomas was a member of PEO, Lincoln Chapter #42, Order of Easter Star, Idaho Methodist Church. She served the school boards of both Buhl and Shoshone and was active in many civic endeavors. Her lifelong interests include travel, gardening and SACRAMENTO, CALIF.

Harold D. Conner

HAROLD D. Conner, 75, of Sacramento, Calif., former of Twin Falls, passed away Sept. 15, 1997, from complications due to a massive stroke.

He was born in Rupert, on Nov. 18, 1921. He moved to Twin Falls at an early age and graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1940.

After high school he moved to Chicago and attended Sherwood School of Music and Chicago Musical College. In pursuit of his dream, he was accepted as a college student by some of the greatest, studying under Alois Trinka and Hans Hoyer. He played with the Chicago Civic Orchestra, and one summer did a duet with Lily Pond. He was drafted during World War II, but declared 4F due to a heart murmur. So, instead he toured around the U.S. with the Krazy Symphony Orchestra. He also performed in numerous symphonies in the Midwest, including the Sioux City Symphony, Milwaukee Symphony, and Indianapolis Symphony. While in Indianapolis, he was the cellist instructor for Jordan Conservatory and Butler University. In addition, while in Indianapolis, he played with the Sonia Hema Ice Show, the New York stage shows "Othello" and "Bridgerton." He also performed regularly on CBS Radio, appearing with Vaughn Monroe for the "Cameo Club Show."

In 1946, he won the Society of American Musicians contest. The prize was a chance to perform a recital at Kimmel Hall, for which he was hailed by critics from both the Chicago Star and Chicago Tribune as a "colt with a future." He continued to study until he became a member of the Joffeier String Quartet.

In 1952, he moved to Sacramento, and went to work as a music teacher in the Sacramento Unified School District. Later, when city schools started cutting back on music education, he began teaching English.

He was a member of the Sacramento Masonic Lodge, the Scotts Bluff and the Sacramento Shriners. He was active in the community not only as a music teacher and cellist in the Sacramento Symphony, but also as a music director at Mather Air Force Base and in numerous churches.

He was in high demand for big star performances in Las Vegas and Reno casinos. He was recognized as a top musician who could play anything without prior rehearsal. He performed with cellists as Slavia Wonder, Rod Starling, Liberate, The Carpenters, The Dixie Sisters, Dinah Shore, and Johnny Mathis.

Family survivors include his wife, Elaine (Durling) Conner; his three sons, Richard Conner of Bad Tolz, Germany; Douglas Conner of London, and Devin Conner of Cassia Valley, Calif.; a sister, Gay (Roland) Rose of Filer; and brothers, Gene Conner of Twin Falls, and Junior Conner of Texas;

Sheep

Then a dirt trail turns to pavement. Sheep will travel through Elkhorn and fight for turf with Rollerbldades, cyclists and joggers. The barren hills of Milligan change to condominiums and hillside-carved homes. One giant redwood structure under construction draws a gasp from a Peruvian herdsman.

Protecting the flock

Life on the trail is a foreign way of life to the urban.

For Amancio Chanco, a herdsman working on a three-year contract, life on the trail earns a $700-a-month stipend. He sends 50 percent of it to his wife and six children in Lima.

The pay might sound paltry, but Peavey contends the jobs are safe and good. His herdsman have meals, shelter, health care, worker's comp benefits and long-distance access at their disposal.

This is not a partying clan. Amancio spends his down time on the ranch or with the herd. Herding is not as safe in his homeland, which is in political turmoil. There, the hills are speckled with terrorists.

Still, he misses home and is lonely. He will leave in 1999 and return home where he will see his family and have free time to attend Catholic mass. Herding is a full-time job. Today, he will leave camp for a short break to mail a letter to Lima at the Ketchum Post Office.

Herders are in sync with the rhythms of the animals. They rest for three hours midway when the sheep are tired. They have trotted and munched five miles by high noon. Most of this herd are pregnant ewes.

Amancio and the camp leaders prepare lunch. Today the fare is chicken stew with fresh carrots, onions and potatoes. It is cooked on a wood stove inside the sheep wagon. A small chimney leads smoke from the roof. On the trail, there is no fire code.

Peavey and ranch manager Dennis Burks deliver groceries once a week to the herd and its tenders.

Amancio Chanco, a Peruvian herdsman who works for the Flat Top Sheep Company with his brother Blas, has committed to work for the company until 1999.

"That includes the dogs. One of Amancio's daily tasks is to take food to the ridges where the white Great Pyrenees defend the herd. The shepherds are the mongrels, or work dogs. They don't pack as much prestige as the great Pyrenees, and have the manly job of chasing and controlling the flock.

All of Peavey's employees are Peruvians, another change on the trail.

The Basques are credited with bringing the flocks to Idaho originally. Some settled in Idaho and set roots, though the Basque herder has all but disappeared from the Idaho landscape.

During the Depression, unem-played men came to the West to help herd the sheep.

Today's herdsman see their job as a vocation and a way of life, and they take the job and their families seriously.

The sheep are headed for warmer winter pastures in southern Idaho and California. There, they rest and graze. The ewes give birth and nurse their lambs. Peavey said. Then they rest before coming back to their Idaho homes where they start the trek all over again next year.

Teaching on the trail

Sheepherding doesn't always peacefully coexist with modern life.

In Blaine County, some consider sheep rust an archaic practice that doesn't mix with resort living. Others simply don't like the droppings on bike paths.

Sometimes the conflict is stark. Two weeks ago the driver of a pickup truck didn't spot a herd on Idaho Highway 75. The collision left 30 sheep killed or maimed.

Peavey told Wednesday's crowd the incident could have avoided with better herding practices, but training sheep during daylight hours.

The sheep still have legal rights in Idaho. An official "sheep easement" still borders the west side of Highway 75 from Ketchum south to Greenhorn Gulch, where no homes exist. To quiet the caysayers, volunteers take to the trails to clean up droppings.

The week's celebration is an attempt to give newcomers a look at the area's past. The Peaveys say they want to educate people who come from cities, strangers to the herding way of life.

They believe the historical charm will ward the skeptics, not unlike the sun that, on this morning, gradually warms the mountains.

Cassia will outfit bus with infant seats

By Karen E. Maloznek Times-News writer

BURLEY — With Cassia County School Board approval, the district will soon install infant seats on a school bus to help two young students' mothers transport their babies.

The issue came before school officials earlier this year, after a 13-year-old gave birth. Special Services Director Rich Davidson said.

As part of the mother's Individual Education Plan, the girl is required to spend a few hours each day with her infant's caretaker to learn parenting skills. But because she is too young to drive to the day-care center, the district is putting a safety seat on a bus to carry the mother and her child.

"We realize some people may see this as glorifying teen pregnancy but we look at it as the good that we can do now affects both the individual and the future of the child," Davidson said. "If we can help them now, that child might not have to grow up to be on welfare."

After the request came in, Assistant Superintendent Jerry Doggett checked with the district's insurance carrier, and learned the babies would be covered under the district's insurance policy.

The board voted 31 Monday to pay to install the seats, but only for the two students in the Individual Education Program who now need them. Any other students who ask for district help would be considered on a case-by-case basis.

Only those involved in the Individual Education Program will be eligible to use the seats.

"I think we should help these girls any way we can," board member Neal Jeppesen said.

The Idaho-based, non-profit Chairman Bruce Bowman is still recovering from a farming accident and didn't vote Monday.

The sole vote against the infant seats came from Tim Preston.

"I think the board needs to be as helpful as it can and get involved with things in the education process but I don't think this is one of those issues," Preston said. "My primary concern is the cost of the infant seat to take the kids to day care. At the meeting I just didn't feel like there was enough information to vote for it because where would we draw the line and with that unknown to the girls, what are we opening ourselves up to?"

The Cassia County district is unsure how much the program will cost. Superintendent Tom Morley said.

In September, Minidoka County School District paid to install four new seats in a bus with seat belt straps for infant chairs, costing $800 per seat.

Only two students attending the Mini-Cassia Opportunity Center use the seats the district rents from Minidoka Memorial Hospital for $25 per seat a year.

"This was the first year we've had a request for them so we leased the seats from the hospital," said Lucky Bourn, transportation supervisor for the Minidoka district. "Right now we have two seats, one for a less than 1-year-old and one for a 2-year-old and when they grow we've worked it out with the hospital to exchange them for bigger seats."

Electrical deregulation meeting tonight

The Times-News

POCATELLO — The public is invited to attend tonight's final public meeting of Gov. Phil Batt's subcommittee that addresses how to protect projects benefitting low-income and elderly citizens under a deregulated electrical industry.

The meeting of the subcommittee will be held from 6:30 to 9 p.m. on Idaho State University's Pocatello campus in the Student Union Building, in the third-floor South Fork Room.

Members of the subcommittee include owners of small businesses, an environmental advocate and a representative from Potlatch Corp. as well as local residents.

The subcommittee must decide whether to recommend a Pacific Northwest proposal that would fund low-income projects, weatherization and energy conservation programs with 3 percent of electric utilities' yearly earnings under deregulation. They will make their recommendation to Batt at the end of the month.

Infection

Instead, the wound had to be opened surgically and drained.

Although not required, an autopsy was performed and affirmed what the treating physicians knew — that Swartling died of the raging infection, he added. In Swartling's case, the antibiotics affected the bacteria, but "there was so many of them," Porter said. "They were probably spreading overnight."

Doctors were mystified how Swartling got the infection, however.

For many years, all types of staph bacteria were treated with penicillin, Porter said.

"Now, a lot of those bacteria have mutated and aren't sensitive anymore to penicillin," he added. Another kind of antibiotic, methicillin, proved effective, but a newer strain is resistant to methicillin.

"That's the one we don't have any good antibiotics for," he said. But, he emphasizes, the strain was not the one identified in Swartling's case.

The physician's death was not reported to the health department as an unusual occurrence of illness, said Cheryl Becker, epidemiologist with the South Central District office in Twin Falls.

The state doesn't keep track of deaths caused by staphylococcus bacteria, resistant or not, added Dr. Christine Hahn, state epidemiologist. But there is no evidence of an increasing risk from resistant strains in the state, nor any more of an aggressive strain in Europe.

Bacteria have always been among us, and for reasons we don't understand, people in good health may succumb," Hahn said. "This is something that happens every once in a while. It's a terrible thing for them and their family."

Because of antibiotics, staph infections are less of a killer than 10 years ago. "But it's still a ferocious bacteria," Hahn said.

A memorial service for Swartling will be held at 10 a.m. today at the Episcopal Church of the Ascension, 210 Blue Lakes Blvd.

Wendell

he said. "My kids think the world of (Police Chief Philip) Covelli (but) I don't even know our other officers because they change so often."

Police turnover has a "bad effect" on youth, Anderson said, and higher pay is the answer to the problem.

Anderson also sees low pay as a problem for the city crew.

"Make the wages so a person can support his family," he said. "Make it an incentive program. If (crew members) take training for water quality or sewage management and they pass the test then give them a raise — they've worked for it."

Spencer spoke of the money problems of the city's irrigation system. He was concerned about "the city's cost of providing irrigation service," and that "everybody says but not everybody has water available."

Serr said he has heard rumors the irrigation system will be eliminated. Then everybody would have to sprinkle their lawns with drinking water from the aquifer, he said.

"If the town can surface-irrigate it should upgrade its system," he said.

Serr said Wendell is a "nice little town, but it's been going downhill from lack of leadership." He's running for office "to get involved" instead of being just a complainer.

"I figured it was my turn to see if I could help," he said. "I want to help the future of Wendell."

Anderson is running for office in response to residents' requests.

"People have asked me to run for City Council," he said. "They said we needed fresh blood and Wendell needed a change. I got 40 signatures in 24 hours. That's how I got started."

Bunn wants to continue in office to see finished the installation of the proposed west-side sewer service, and growth resulting from that project and ongoing water-system improvements. These new city services could lead to development of fast-food restaurants along Frontage Road, he said.

"I've tried for eight years to get that (sewer system) in," Bunn said. "I want to see that get in."

Spencer said he has gotten valuable experience since he was appointed to the council and would like to continue.

Faster than sound: Brits break speed record

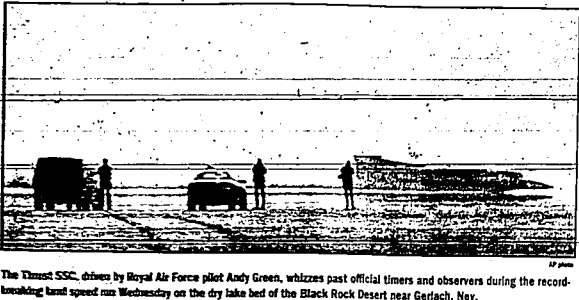

GERLACH, Nev. (AP) — Trailing a huge plume of dust across the desert floor, a British jet-powered car blasted through the sound barrier twice on Wednesday, shattering the world land speed record.

"It's been a major milestone," said a beaming Richard Noble. "It's a hell of an achievement."

Noble's jet-powered Thrust SSC took advantage of cool, clear weather for back-to-back runs that pushed the land speed record above 7,600 mph, the speed of sound. The feat came 20 years and a day after pilot Chuck Yeager first broke the sound barrier in an experimental rocket-powered plane.

Noble's car, with Royal Air Force pilot Andy Green at the controls, went 7,923.33 mph on its first run and 7,669.93 mph on the second. The run, an average of the two, was 7,633.63.

The speed of sound, which varies according to weather and altitude, was calculated Wednesday morning at 748.111 mph. The car's top speed runs were approximately set at

The Thrust SSC, driven by Royal Air Force pilot Andy Green, whizzes past official timers and observers during the record-breaking land speed run Wednesday on the dry lake bed of the Black Rock Desert near Gerlach, Nev.

Carlisle Burge, left, and Bobbie Tucker take part in a candlelight vigil Tuesday for singer John Denver in Steamtown Aspen, Colo.

When he throttled up for the return trip, the dust cloud from his first run still hung over the desert on the crisp, sparkling morning.

The sleek, black car broke the sound barrier twice on Monday but missed the record books because a problem with a drag parachute delayed the team and it took 61 minutes to start the second run.

Noble considered making the record run on Tuesday, the 50th anniversary of Yeager's feat. But he opted for the more favorable conditions of early morning Wednesday in the desert 125 miles north of Reno.

Idaho planes, cranes head to New Mexico

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — An experimental migration of four rare whooping cranes and several sandhill cranes touched down Wednesday in Utah on their 800-mile trek, led by ultralight planes, to a New Mexico bird sanctuary.

Except for initial reluctance by one whooper, everything was reported to be going well on a flight that scientists hope may help save the whooping crane from extinction: "The planes and their avian entourage stopped for fuel and rest Wednesday near Heber City, Utah, about 25 miles east of Salt Lake city, according to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Twelve cranes took off Monday from the Grace, Idaho, ranch of Kent Clegg, who has led selected sandhill cranes to the Bosque del Apache National Wildlife Refuge in New Mexico for the past two years.

This year the four whoopers were added to see if they would follow Clegg in his ultralight plane. The cranes are trained to follow Clegg as a parent figure.

One whooper balked upon takeoff from the Clegg ranch Monday.

"Suddenly, one of the whooping cranes broke formation and headed back, taking the others with him," Clegg says in a daily narrative he has been posting on his Internet web site. "Repeated circling to pick them up failed — they were headed back to the barn."

So they put all eight sandhills and four whoopers in a trailer and drove them 15 miles away from ranch landmarks to spend the night in the Heber, Fish and Wildlife Service spokesman Hans Stuart said.

Mayor calls for mediator to address cop complaints

BOISE (AP) — Mayor Brent Coles proposed having a mediator rather than a citizens' board handle complaints against police in the wake of eight fatal shootings in 16 months, including the death of one officer.

The City Council did not immediately agree Tuesday. Instead, members decided to think about the plan and bring it up again in two weeks.

Under Coles' plan, the mediator would be stationed in the Office of Professional Standards and report to the police chief, mayor and council.

The mediator would take complaints about police conduct and use mediation skills to resolve conflicts. The specialist also would train officers in mediation skills.

"We will in the short term be able to fully respond to complaints, and in the long term, we will create a culture of mediation within the Police Department," Coles told the council.

"But some members, including Council President Carolyn Torching, said they wanted more information before they decided what to do."

"I still need comparative data, primarily data from communities of similar size," she said.

The council will take up the issue Oct. 28 after Councilwoman Paula Forney and two city police officers attend a national conference on police accountability in Oakland, Calif.

City backs open container law

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Unlike most other Idaho communities, Idaho Falls has no open container law. Nothing prevents someone from walking around downtown with an open can of beer in hand, or wine or a mixed drink.

Councilwoman Ida Hardcastle has an ordinance to change that. It's in the form of a public hearing together with other cities' open container laws. She does not expect the council to start working on it until next month.

"The council is trying to come up with a law that will not impact popular downtown events like Oktoberfest and Alive After Five. The draft ordinance limits drinking at festivals and other events to 5,000-square-foot "beer gardens." The size of the beer gardens is subject to negotiation.

"I really feel like we can come together and compromise," Hardcastle said.

Some advocate elimination of alcohol at events.

"I do not believe we need an open container law in a public street in Idaho Falls," said city Councilman Larry Carlson.

He said there is no need to promote public drinking. Carlson said he would like to see the open container ordinance an issue after the elections are over in November.

Company stops recycling glass

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Glass recycling has ended in Idaho Falls.

"The last glass recycling company in the area has stopped accepting new material, meaning glass will have to go into landfills," Stan May, owner of Western Reclaiming and Recycling, said his company probably was the last in eastern Idaho that took glass. But it's no longer feasible.

May said his company received between $2 and $40 per ton for recycling glass in Denver, Portland, Shipping and other areas. The price for glass in the area has stopped accepting new material, meaning glass will have to go into landfills.

May said his company probably was the last in eastern Idaho that took glass. But it's no longer feasible.

Denver crash probe wraps up

PACIFIC GROVE, Calif. (AP) — A final transportation safety inspectors packed up the on-site investigation into John Denver's fatal airplane crash on Wednesday.

Teams of Federal Aviation Administration and National Transportation Safety Board investigators cleaned up remaining few details at the site of Sunday's crash, which killed the 53-year-old singer instantly. The teams then returned to their respective offices in Los Angeles and Washington, saying the investigation would continue from there.

It could take six months to determine the cause of the crash because there is a backlog of other cases, NTSB spokesman Matt Furman said.

There are approximately 2,000 aviation accidents in this country every year and the NTSB by law has to investigate all of them. This one goes into the "top 10" list, he said.

Meanwhile Wednesday, the singer's cremated ashes were taken to Colorado, where a memorial service is scheduled, said Denver's publicist Paul Shubin.

Elsewhere, a Tucson man who taught John Denver to fly experimental aircraft called the entertainer a self-informed and safety-conscious pilot who would have needed to stick back to shore if he had that capability.

Hal Goddard, a 62-year-old test pilot and aeronautics instructor, told the Tucson Citizen he taught Denver to fly a different exper-

Businesses fear losses from trail closures

CODY, Wyo. (AP) — Business operators in the five communities surrounding Yellowstone National Park fear that authorization to close snowmobile trails, a move they say could hurt their economies.

"Without snowmobiling (in Yellowstone), we'd go to being a park where people drive through their cars in Jackson to ski," said Irvin Brandt of the Dubois Chamber of Commerce.

The Fund for Animals, aided by the Biodiversity Foundation, is suing the National Park Service, alleging it failed to study the impacts of Yellowstone's winter use, especially by those using snowmobiles, on the park's environment and wildlife.

Under a proposed settlement, the Park Service would conduct such a study and would close at least one snowmobile trail for three years to study the impact of the closure.

"The settlement is being challenged by tourism industry and snowmobile tour groups, who think it could lead to the closure of the park to snowmobiling. Such a move would devastate a small but growing snowmobile industry in Cody," said Paul Hagen, director of the Cody Country Chamber of Commerce.

"That closure will have the effect of basically killing off the impact would be much greater," said Viki Eggers, director of the West Yellowstone Chamber of Commerce.

Eggers said last year, taxes from purchases by snowmobilers made up almost half of the community's resort taxes and more than one-third of the town's total operating budget.

Eggers said the snowmobilers have allowed many of West Yellowstone's businesses to stay open throughout the year rather than close at the end of the summer tourism season.

Killer changes mind over plea bargain

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Jorge Benvenuto at first rejected, then accepted a plea bargain that will put him behind bars for the rest of his life for the 1986 slaying of a teenager and wounding of another.

On Wednesday morning, Benvenuto, 31, had rejected the deal. But by afternoon, an agreement was reached.

It coincided on the capital murder case he faced in the August 1986 shooting death of Zachary Saunar, Benvenuto could have faced the death penalty.

In addition to being charged in the shooting death of Saunar, 18,

Benvenuto was charged with wounding Yvette Rodier, 18, and leaving her for dead.

Snarr and Rodier were shot while taking pictures of the moon at Dimple Dell Reservoir in Parleys Canyon late Aug. 29.

The suspect shot Snarr several times in the head and wounded Rodier in the head, side, shoulder and left leg with a .44 magnum handgun.

Benvenuto was arrested the day after the shootings and confessed, Salt Lake Sheriff Detective Keith Stephens testified at a preliminary hearing.

Great comebacks to the world's oldest lines

Knight-Ridder News Service

Friday night. You're out with friends. You're looking good. You're laughing, having a good time, minding your own business, when suddenly you're approached by a combination of Charles Manson and Urkel. He insistently repeats one of the 10 oldest and worst pickup lines of all time. What do you say to get rid of him?

Ladies, worry no longer. Jeanne Martinne has the answer in her new book "Comebacks, Comebacks-and-Kiss-offs: Date Lines Every Woman Needs to Survive Her Search for the Holy Male" (St. Martin's Press, $11.95). Martinne offers suggestions for the dating spectrum from starting a conversation with a stranger to rejecting a date via fax.

But the best part is the kiss-off lines. (Note: Men can use the same lines on women; just remember to switch the appropriate gender references.)

He says: "What's a pretty little lady like you doing here?"

She says: "Waiting for you, sweetie! But you know, you don't look like the kind of guy who would be interested in a man in drag."

He says: "Can I buy you a drink?"

She says: "Oh yes, do buy me a drink. Drinking helps my yeast infection."

Other great exit lines: "Has anyone ever told you how wonderful you are? No? Then where did you get the idea?"

"I don't have time to talk about this right now. Can it wait until we're dead?"

"You know women only smile at you because they're trying hard not to laugh."

"Wow, I never expected to get the brush-off from someone with so little hair."

Let's hope one of these will keep him from calling. But if he absolutely refuses to leave you alone, try this remedy from Sophie's "Little Book of Hexes for Women" (Andrews McMeel, $9.95):

You will need:
Something the suitor has given you
A purple pen
Matches

The spell: On something the suitor has given you, write the following incantation:

FASCINATION
F

Then say each word, ending the chant with these words:

REDUCE, DIMINISH!
AFTER THAT FINISH!
WE CAN NEVER BE,
I SET YOU FREE!
GOOD-BYE!

Then burn the scrap. If he bothers you again, send him the ashes.

Frolicsome father-in-law puts frown on family face

DEAR ABBY: My mother-in-law (I'll call her Nora) died after a long battle with cancer. After the funeral, everyone came back to the house, and it turned into the party of the year.

Five months later, my father-in-law began dating Nora's best friend, "Zelda." One month later, they were engaged.

Two months later, Zelda moved in. They plan to marry in March.

My father-in-law acts like he's 18 years old. Dad and Zelda are an embarrassment in public. Since Nora passed away, Dad seems relieved that he can get on with his life.

I am very upset about this, but it is hard since we live only five miles away. Is this normal behavior?

— DAUGHTER-IN-LAW IN ILLINOIS

DEAR DAUGHTER-IN-LAW: Not everyone reacts to death in the same way. Some people are so depressed they can barely function without medical assistance.

Emotions, which are very close to the surface, sometimes

DEAR ABBY

become confused. Laughing jags occur when one might expect tears. Some religious groups concentrate on the positive aspects, choosing to celebrate life and the fact that the deceased is no longer suffering.

It's not unusual for a grieving spouse to find solace with a close friend of the deceased, nor is it unheard of to want to live life to its fullest after witnessing the death of a loved one.

DEAR ABBY: I'm addressing my comments to "No Name, Please," the widow whose older gentleman friend is taking advantage of her, living in her house and letting her pay all the bills.

Dear No Name Please: Get that freeloading "gentleman friend" out of your home immediately, before he becomes ill or disabled. If he gets sick, or reaches the point where he needs a lot of personal care and you allow yourself to start taking care of him, you'll be turned into a slave and will probably not receive any recompense for your slavery.

He does not sound in the least like a gentleman to me. He is using you.

The fact that he won't pay his share of expenses and will not sign a prenuptial contract says loud and clear that he intends to take you for everything he can get.

Perhaps if he were alone in the world, I might have some sympathy for him, but he has two sons. Whether they like it or not, it is up to them to make arrangements for their father. Do not let the sons talk you into taking care of that freeloader.

Whatever they promise could be as unreliable as his promises to share the expenses.

Get him out of the house now! Then consult with your lawyer about sending him a bill for his share of the expenses for all the time he lived in your house—including the taxes you paid.

Last but not least, look into getting some protection for your assets by buying long-term health-care insurance.

The younger you are, the cheaper the premiums will be. Look carefully at the various insurance plans that are available. Buy coverage that provides a certain amount of money that you can use for care either in your own home or in a nursing home.

— MARGARET G. SMITH
ROSEVILLE, MICH.

DEAR MARGARET: That's straight-from-the-shoulder advice, and I hope that "No Name, Please" heeds it.

However, she also stated that before she met this man she was so lonely she was climbing the walls, and when he came along he filled a void in her life.

Sometimes people are so lonely they will tolerate being used rather than face being alone.

Bison will be killed inside park

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — For the first time in decades, Yellowstone National Park officials have agreed to shoot some bison inside the park.

The agreement came at a meeting Tuesday of bison specialists from the park and other federal agencies and state of Montana wildlife officials. The meeting was called to discuss how to handle bison that enter Montana this winter.

They were updating interim bison management procedures that will go into effect when bison enter Montana. That usually begins to happen late in the year after several heavy snowfalls.

Almost 1,100 Yellowstone bison were shot or sent to slaughter last winter when they entered Montana because some have brucellosis, a disease that can cause cattle to abort.

The Park Service participated in the shooting of bison last winter only once at the request of the Montana Department of Livestock, and that was outside the park.

Yellowstone's bison are shot or sent to slaughter when they enter Montana because livestock officials fear bison can transmit brucellosis to cattle and Montana could lose its brucellosis-free status. That would mean ranchers would have to test the blood of all cattle, shipped out of state, an expensive proposition.

Top ranger accused of misconduct

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — Yellowstone National Park's top law enforcement officer has been suspended with pay while the National Park Service investigates unspecified allegations of professional misconduct.

Chief Ranger Dan Sholly was placed on administrative leave on Sept. 30. He will be given other duties temporarily effective next Monday, said park spokeswoman Marsha Karle.

"I cannot say what the allegations involve," she said. "We are confirming that an investigation is being conducted regarding allegations of misconduct that have been filed against Chief Ranger Dan Sholly."

Sholly called the investigation "a very unfortunate, very difficult situation with a lot of bad rumors that do not represent what occurred."

The investigation is being conducted by the Park Service in Yellowstone. Sholly has until Nov. 14 to file a formal response, Karle said.

Once he responds and the investigation is wrapped up, a final ruling will be made by Yellowstone Superintendent Mike Finley.

Sholly came to Yellowstone in 1985 to take the post of chief ranger. He had previously worked for the National Park Service in Washington, D.C. He is the author of the 1991 book, "Guardians of Yellowstone."

Prison concerns officials

BOISE (AP) — The state Department of Correction has become increasingly concerned about mounting contract violations at a troubled private Louisiana prison housing 300 Idaho inmates.

A new state audit found numerous problems with the Basile Detention Center's handling of an $8 million contract to house the prisoners. Among the problems, the audit revealed that some guards at Basile were hired without training and that inmates are allowed too little recreational time.

But Idaho Correction Director James Spaulding said state officials still have not lost faith in the prison because it follows most department rules.

"We'll see how they respond to this audit" before reissuing the contract, Spaulding said.

In July, Idaho's lack of prison space prompted the state to fly 300 of its 4,100 inmates to Basile, a small town about two hours west of New Orleans. Another 450 inmates are housed in Minnesota and Texas.

The Correction Department audit comes as local officials in Basile are themselves becoming alarmed about the prison's problems. Five inmates escaped last month. One escapee, a sex offender, remains at large. A riot that caused at least $30,000 damage, a sit-down protest and short-lived hunger strikes also have marred the prison's record the past three months.

The district attorney in the Basile area has said he does not want the prison housing violent offenders like some of Idaho's inmates. Prison officials responded by asking Idaho to take back 100 such inmates. The Correction Department last week agreed to make the transfer within two weeks.

A major finding in the Idaho audit is the lack of training. Basile Warden Richard Wall said the prison has hired untrained guards because of high staff turnover, according to the audit.

Contract provisions require the prison to meet American Correctional Association standards, which require at least 40 hours of training.

Other contract violations by the prison include:

- Inmates receive too little recreational time away from their dorms. To keep them occupied and for humanitarian reasons, prisoners should get five hours of free time; instead, they have had only 3.5 to 4.5 hours.
- No natural light enters cells used for discipline, which also breaches American Correctional Association standards.
- The prison is keeping inadequate records and written policies for inmate discipline, inmate custody-level classifications, inmate grievances and employee training.

Resort requests name change

BOISE (AP) — Developers of the proposed Valbois resort on Cascade Reservoir are applying for a permit from the Boise National Forest and plan to change the name to West Rock. Valbois Inc. President Donald Weilmunster has approached the agency for a special-use permit to operate the four-season resort on the slopes of West Mountain near Donnelly.

After 12 years of working to get the $120 million project off the ground, plans for the ski hill, marina, condominiums and other amenities died two years ago when the investors filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy.

Mexican industrialist Alfredo Miguel owns Delaware-based Minix Associates LLC, which retired the bankruptcy debt and holds the Valbois stock.

The new application takes in a continuation of the earlier project, with the addition of new ski terrain on state lands to the north, as well as new private lands to the north and south of the original resort village.

We changed our name.
Who knows what others are waiting for.

MSB-Blue Shield of Idaho is now Regence BlueShield of Idaho.

For us, changing our name was an obvious decision. Why? Because MSB-Blue Shield of Idaho recently became part of a new affiliation of several Northwest Blue Shield and/or Blue Cross health plans, allowing us to offer health care programs to employers not only in Idaho, but in Washington and Oregon, too. And we wanted to tie this affiliation together under a regional common name. But only our name has changed, as we will continue to provide the same great health care coverage. We'll just be doing it under a slightly different name. Regence BlueShield of Idaho.

A windy day 3 half-wits and a 4WD

Whatever else there is in Idaho, I notice the country the most — its rolling hills, the smell of sagebrush and the beauty of high mountain lakes.

But to enjoy the country, one must arise from the couch, lace up one's boots and "git out there." That's what a couple of colleagues and I did on a recent Saturday afternoon.

When we finally got on the road, our small Suzuki Sidekick struggled to make headway against the incredibly strong Idaho winds. Darin, owner of the little 4 wheel drive, was often forced to shift from overdrive into fourth gear, gunning the small engine to a fevered pitch just to travel the speed limit.

MY BACKYARD
Kurt Friedemann

It was a dubious start to our adventure, and it prompted dubious comments from Greg and me. Of course we didn't pass up the chance to make fun of Darin and his struggling vehicle, or speculate on our chances for a smooth drive to our destination — the mountains north of Fairfield.

The first stop on our journey was the Camas Prairie, which buries up against the mountains surrounding Fairfield. Greg had never seen the prairie, and as we got closer he began to pepper us with questions: "Is this the Camas Prairie? Is this it?"

It seemed pretty obvious to Darin and me, long-time Idaho residents, that we were surrounded by sagebrush and desert. We couldn't see any Camas lilies, but that didn't stop Greg — an Indiana native — from asking:

"Nope, he was anxiously awaiting the sight of a 'prairie with camas and stuff.' I challenge anyone to find a Camas bulb in the way at this time of year, but hey, why tell him that?"

Keep the flatlander guessing. Our plan was to follow a small back road through the Soldier Mountains, gazing in amazement at Idaho's backcountry, to a beautiful little burg called "Pine." Hmmm, I wonder where they came up with THAT name?

Sure enough, we found the mountains. After all, what idiot could miss them? We also found the road that leads to Soldier Mountain Ski Resort — if you can call two chair lifts a "resort" — but we were hopeless when it came to finding that back road to Pine.

Of course, I wasn't driving. No, I was just pointing and yelling "Hey, there's a sign," so it really wasn't my fault.

After bumping around in the wilds for awhile, we chose an easier road that happened to be the road that leads to Fairfield, then onto the "freeway" through Hill City, then swung north again towards Pine. The road wound along the shores of Anderson Ranch Reservoir, offering a fantastic view of the man-made alpine lake and cabins nestled along its shores.

Pine wasn't quite what we had imagined, but our adventure was far from over. We drove through town and headed upstream along the banks of the South Fork of the Boise River. No longer paved, the road was a symphony of ruts.

Well, the old Sidekick wasn't built for such rough going. The thing rides like a prairie schooner and it compressed two vertebrae in my spine. As Greg observed, "We now know the true meaning of 'jostle.'"

Nearing the zenith of our foray on dirt, Darin became red-faced and burst into a high-pitched giggle. He'd warned us earlier that good things rarely happen when he giggles. Greg and I lunged for the doors.

Thankfully, Darin pulled over. I took a moment to ease some of my internal fluid pressure while Greg readjusted his liver. By popular vote, we decided it was getting late and we needed to make our way home.

Even in this lowly venture, Idaho's wild country had made an impression. We were already making plans to return and try our hand at fly fishing, and perhaps floating the reservoir.

Next time, however, we'll take a vehicle with more suspension and a better map.

Trout Creek Trail offers wonderful mountain-biking

By Mark Weber
Times-News correspondent

HANSEN — A mountain bike trip down the Trout Creek Trail is an excursion into some of the least-visited terrain in the South Hills.

It's a fine trail that begins high on the slopes of the area's highest mountain — 8,060-foot Monument Peak. From there, the trail drops nearly 1,400 vertical feet in about 5 1/2 miles, angling south and slightly east.

The biggest question for cyclists is deciding how fast to descend. Aggressive riders can lay their ears back against their scapulae and let 'er rip. The single-track trail cuts through a forest of towering fir trees, allowing riders to weave through the giants like fighter pilots in the thick of combat.

My wife and I took a subtler tack on a recent descent of the Trout Creek Trail. Instead of streaking down the hill, passing everything in a blur, we chose to stop often and savor the sights, sounds and smells.

A crisp autumn breeze was blowing, prompting the old fir trees to gently sway and creak. Sunlight streamed through the forest canopy, dappling the scene in a patchwork of light and shadow.

A tiny stream coursed through a tangle of fallen trees and rocks. We watched, curiously, as a pair of small trout drifted aimlessly in a pool. Their mood matched our ours, so we enjoyed a long, leisurely moment together.

The Trout Creek Trail begins on the eastern flank of Monument Peak at an elevation of about 7,600 feet. Recent Above, the Trout Creek Canyon is a great place to escape life's cares for a while. The canyon has something for everyone, particularly mountain bikers. Below, Hansen resident Tracy Weber rises out of the saddle to keep 'em turning on an uphill stretch of the Trout Creek Trail.

snows have deposited a thin blanket over the area, so conditions may be slick near the top. The view is a spacious panorama of pine and fir forests punctuated by mountain meadows. The terrain closes in as the trail descends. The broad, high valley gives way to a tight canyon that barely has room for the stream and the trail. The slopes are covered with sage and stands of brilliant aspen trees. Even farther down, the canyon opens a bit and strangely sculpted rock formations begin to appear. Though the trail ends, Trout Creek continues to head south, collecting tributaries, before trickling into the Nevada desert.

Remote lake chain still offers some solitude

The Associated Press

WEST YELLOWSTONE — The scream of an eagle circling high overhead mixes easily with the sound of canoe paddles slicing through the clear waters of Hidden Lake. From the hillside above this lake nestled in the foothills of the Centennial Valley, golden patches of aspen announce the coming of fall.

As the days shorten and the air turns crisp, it's easy to find solitude in the chain of lakes that straddle the divide between the Centennial and Madison valleys.

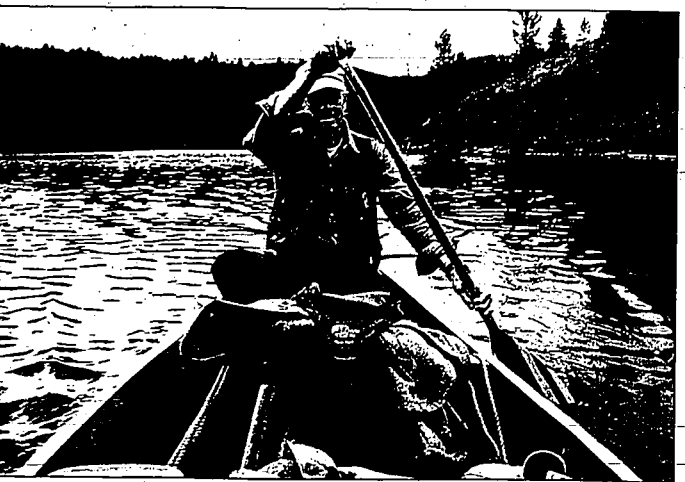

From the Centennial side, the chain begins with Elk Lake. It's a short drive from there to the trail head that leads a quarter mile to Hidden Lake.

Then, for much of the year, you walk to the pothole lakes called Goose and Otter. And if you're in the mood for hiking, you can continue on to Cliff and Wide lakes, both of which can be driven to from the Madison Valley.

For nearly 30 years, Nils "Suede" Troedsson, 63, of Dillon, Mont., has been portaging his canoe over the trails between the lakes. Over time, he has discovered the lakes. Over time, he has discovered the lighter and stronger canoes. He owns a pair of canoes made from Kevlar — the same material used in bulletproof vests — and the lightest weighs only 34 pounds.

With the ease that comes with practice, Troedsson reaches down and in a single fluid swoop, picks the canoe up over his head and lets the ash yoke settle on his shoulders. Then with a slow, steady gait, he's off to the next lake.

"Knocking around the backcountry is a good way to stay young," Troedsson said. "If you quit, you die."

Nils "Suede" Troedsson, 63, of Dillon, Mont., paddles his Kevlar canoe on Goose Lake at the end of September. For about 30 years, Troedsson has been exploring a chain of seven remote lakes that straddle the mountains between the Centennial and Madison valleys in southwest Montana. Forest Service rangers are worried too many people may spoil the beauty of the lakes.

garbage left by careless campers. Over the past 30 years, Troedsson figures he's packed out nearly a half-ton of trash from the shores around the six different lakes. He offers canoe trips to Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks' Please see LAKES, Page D2 shovel and pick hammer to mine the multi-colored stones; and something to hold them for the eventricker climb down the mountain.

Visitors climb a hill at Rockhound State Park, 12 miles southeast of Deming, N.M., at the base of the Little Florida Mountains, in mid-August. Their destination is a pit where they can dig for semi-precious rocks while enjoying beautiful vistas. Dick's Hayes, 45, of Lakeville, Minn., right leads the way, as other family members follow.

One group of visitors this summer, the Hayes family from Lakeville, Minn., and their relatives, the Kings from Las Cruces, N.M., tackled the mountain with five young children, ages 10 to 3. The route starts at the campground on a maintained, if steep, dirt path.

When the path — a 1.1-mile loop trail built in 1995-96 by the Youth Conservation Corps — turns sharply to the left to traverse the lower mountain, rock-seekers head straight up toward the pit, which at this point looks like a small yellow scar above one of the mountain's many rhyolite tuff (volcanic mud) rock outcroppings.

With a minimum of whining by nervous youngsters — and adults — the two families wound their way through the mountainside's abundant prickly pear, ocotillo, yucca, creosote and mesquite — slipping and sliding, lending each other a hand and urging each other on.

Mitch Hayes, 31, of Lakeville, Minn., shows off some of the rocks he found in Rockhound State Park in mid-August. The state park encourages visitors to take a piece of nature home with them.

"Finding a diamond — that would make this trip worthwhile," quipped Wyatt King, 41. The clear leader — for the scientific aspect of the hike — was 10-year-old Mitch Hayes, who had just taken a geology trip with his father's cousin, Wayne. Mitch definitely planned to take home a piece.

"You see these bubbles on the rock — that's a 'prode,'" he said. "Look for the bubbles."

Having arrived at the pit — a 10-foot-high and 40-foot-long indentation on the mountainside — some family members got immediately to work hammering at the dirt and rocks, while others took breaks on chair-size rocks to view the vast barren-looking valley below and the 7,300-foot-tall Big Florida Mountains beyond.

"We have 55,000 to 75,000 visitors a year, and a lot of them come for the view and the serenity," said the park's manager, Edward S. Espinoza. "During the winter we get a lot of painters and writers. It's a wonderful place, and the rangers are beautiful."

Getting to the park is easy — Fun — Yes. Easy — no.

Lakes

Game wardens each summer to help them patrol the area.

"I think that there was a general perception that the area is a remote that you could get away with anything," Troedson said. "When the wardens started going in there and going in some afternoon, the word gets out that's not the case."

Despite the lakes being off the beaten path, the common perception is that visitor numbers are increasing every year.

On a busy summer day, hordes of fish rubbers descend on Hidden Lake to fish for the plentiful and large rainbow trout. That pressure comes despite the fact it takes some effort to get to the lake.

From the Madison side, travelers must negotiate a dusty 12-mile dirt road. And for those coming through the Centennial, there's more than 40 miles of tire-chewing dirt road.

"We call it Not-So-Hidden Lake anymore," said Dillon-based warden Mike Mehn. "It's really become a popular place for float rubbers. It's not unusual to go down there in the middle of the week and check 20 fishermen."

"When you're there and start talking to people, they'll often tell you about how it used to be. They all can remember when you wouldn't see anyone else on the lake and you could have it all to yourself," Mehn said. "It's the same story you hear everywhere in southwest Montana. There are people showing up everywhere."

The lakes are on Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest land. The Forest Service has taken the lack-of-not-advertising-whereabouts.

"It's a place that we like people to be able to discover on their own," said Jonathan Klein, supervisor forestry technician for the Ennis ranger district. "It's the kind of area that we don't like to see show up in every guide book... It's small and can't take a whole lot of use."

The agency must manage in a way that will allow for its increased popularity and still preserve wildlife and solitude. To meet those goals, the Forest Service has restricted grazing from the lake corridor and installed outhouses at popular camping areas.

To protect the sense of solitude on Hidden Lake, the agency has restricted the use of gasoline motors and shut down a noisy stock water pump.

"It's a difficult balancing act," said Klein. "We do the best we can and we can't always please everybody."

Deer poacher fined $1,000

BOISE — An Emmert man has been charged $1,000 in fines and penalties after being convicted of poaching a deer — a citation that was aided by the fact he had a new pickup truck.

The Idaho Fish and Game Department said Thomas "Fritz" Lindstrom, 18, was assessed $800 in fines and court costs, a $200 civil penalty and his Idaho hunting and fishing privileges were revoked for three years.

Lindstrom also was ordered to perform 80 hours of inmate labor and received a suspended 90-day jail term and two years probation.

Investigators said after midnight on July 10, a citizen came upon a man field-dressing a deer on a county road east of Horsehoe Bend. The poacher ran away, but the citizen got a good look at his truck, described as a 1997 light green pickup with chrome bumpers and no license plates.

Idaho Falls anglers to speak

TWIN FALLS — Two anglers from Idaho Falls will be the featured speakers at tonight's meeting of the Magic Valley Flyfishers.

The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. in the Rock Creek Restaurant, 200 Addison Ave. W. The public is invited.

Gary Grant, president of the Snake River Cutthroats fishing club in Idaho Falls, and club member Buck Goodrich will discuss the Federation of Flyfishers regional conclave and fly-tying expo to be held April 25-26 in Pocatello. The pair also will discuss the federation's International Conclave, scheduled for Aug. 4 in Idaho Falls.

On top of all that, Grant and Goodrich will discuss trout fishing on the Henrys Fork of the Snake River.

Canada plans big wilderness reserve

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — A wilderness area in the Canadian Rockies that is bigger than Switzerland will be protected from most development, British Columbia's government has decided.

A plan for the rugged and remote Muskwa Kechika area will be introduced in the next session of the provincial Legislature.

Premier Glen Clark said

Wednesday. The plan covers nearly 17,000 square miles, more than one-quarter off-limits to all development and the rest open to resource development under tight regulation. In an area widely compared to such unique regions as the Serengeti plains of Africa.

OUTDOORS

Sean Donaghy, a HawkWatch observer from Portland, Maine, scans the skies over Bonney Butte, Ore., east of Mount Hood, at the end of September. The area is the best-known raptor migration route in Oregon, during the annual autumn flight south.

Volunteers track migrating hawks

From Alaska to South America, Oregon is the busiest station

GOVERNMENT CAMP, Ore. (AP) — Data collected by volunteers have helped wildlife officials track the population of migrating hawks from Alaska to South America, and one of the busiest stations is in Oregon.

Bonney Butte near Mount Hood, one of 13 HawkWatch International counting stations throughout the West, routinely logs 100 or more raptors a day as birds fly south during the fall.

In its 11 years of operation, Salt Lake City-based HawkWatch has counted 400,000 of the birds, which are vital indicators about the health of the environment because they are at the top of the food chain.

The public is welcome to visit spotters at the 5,600-foot-high Bonney Butte station, atop a 35-mile-long ridge just a few miles east of Mount Hood.

But a banding station is off-limits to the public to keep distractions to a minimum for both birds and volunteers, who use nets to grab the raptors out of the air.

"We haven't injured any birds during the banding process," said Carole Hallett, a longtime volunteer. "I suppose there's always the potential, but we're a small operation."

Just in case there is an injury, Hallett is licensed as a bird rehabilitator and knows how to give avian first aid. Even pigeons, which act as lures during the banding process, receive loving care.

"Pigeons are pretty hardy," Hallett said. "I raise all the birds myself. When a red-tail hit one of my birds on the wing, I retired it for the season even though it was a minor injury. Some of my pigeons have been working for me for four or five years."

When Hallett traps a hawk, the bird usually is held captive for less than five minutes while measurements are taken. A tally

A Cooper's hawk waits to be released Sept. 22 after it was caught and documented as part of the HawkWatch migration project at Bonney Butte, Ore. Hawks are lured into nets by tethered pigeons and are held captive for a few minutes to be measured, weighed and have a band placed on a leg.

sheet is used to record the size of the bird's beak, the length of its longest talon, its wing and tail, and the amount of fat along its breast bone.

"The birds usually sit calmly in your hand while you take culper measurements to a hundredth of a millimeter," Hallett said. "I don't know why they're so calm."

"Raptors are indicators of the overall health of an ecosystem."

—Paul Grinnod, a HawkWatch researcher

Hallett said. "There's something appealing about a wild creature dropping out of the sky and you catching it."

Paul Grinnod, a HawkWatch research assistant based in Salt Lake City, said data compiled during the first 10 years of HawkWatch found populations of red-tailed hawks, peregrine falcons, merlins, ospreys and turkey vultures to be on the increase.

But golden eagles and northern goshawks were found to be diminishing.

"Raptors are indicators of the overall health of an ecosystem," Grinnod said. "If raptors disappear, you have to assume there is a bigger underlying problem."

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service relies on its own research, as well as programs such as HawkWatch, to determine whether to list a species as threatened or endangered under the Endangered Species Act.

The largest Western raptor spotting station is in the Goshute Mountains of eastern Nevada. Located at the west edge of the Great Salt Lake Desert, the Goshute flyway attracts birds that want to avoid crossing the salt flats. Annual counts number 21,000 birds spotted, with more than 3,000 banded.

By comparison, the Bonney Butte station spotted 2,743 birds last season, and Hallett banded 126.

Eastern Idaho hankers for numerous recreational trails

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — For joggers who have dodged potholes on country roads, or rollerbladers with joints jarred by rough pavement, eastern Idaho is becoming a friendlier place.

Paved or gravel paths designed for walkers, runners and bicyclists are cropping up in small communities, following the lead of larger towns like Idaho Falls and Boise.

All told, more than 45 miles of greenbelt are finished or in the works in three eastern Idaho counties, at a cost of more than $1 million.

Runners are already pounding the pavement on an 8-mile trail connecting the Teton Valley towns of Victor and Driggs.

A trail around a small lake, Madison County and Rexburg have begun building a 3.5-mile paved trail. Backers hope that is only the beginning.

St. Anthony residents are trying to develop a similar project for their town. And the state is getting ready to build a gravel path joining Ashton to Teton, 31 miles apart.

The proliferation of trails is ignited by the increasing popularity of outdoor sports, concern about preserving public access through land, and a spurt of trail-building money in recent years.

"I think people have become more outdoor recreation-oriented," said Jim Long, a retired Ricks College professor who has helped push for the Rexburg trail.

Funds aren't always the answer

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — No matter how well designed, mutual funds may be for a wide range of investment missions, sometimes a fund just isn't the best answer for your needs.

As you go about learning how funds can help you manage your money, it's also important to have an idea of what they can't do very well.

The prime virtue of mutual funds is the diversification they provide. That, along with other attributes like liquidity and convenience for small investors, makes them great candidates for a variety of investments ranging from growth investing to cash management.

But it may make funds less attractive choices in cases where you want concentration, not diversification, or in situations where diversification adds no real value.

The first of those two exceptions applies mainly to aggressive investors out for sky's-the-limit rewards; the second to conservative investors whose prime concern is safety.

Let's suppose, for a moment, that you are a young, ambitious sort with a taste for adventure and a few thousand dollars in the bank. A couple of friends you respect want you to come to work for their fledgling business venture, and invite you to "invest" your modest nest egg for a nice equity interest in the company.

Instead of opening a mutual-fund account at this early stage of your working life, you might make a better choice to plow your money into your friend's startup enterprise.

The risks are many times larger that way. The probability of taking a total loss is certainly much greater. But the potential for big-time rewards is also a lot better.

A basic axiom in the financial world states the point succinctly: Diversification is a strategy for protecting wealth; concentration is a strategy for creating wealth.

Now imagine yourself in an almost opposite position. You're well into your retirement years, so comfortably situated that your main concern is protecting your money from risks like bond defaults and dividend cuts.

To live well, you need to soundly, you decide to put the bulk of your money in U.S. government securities, spreading it over a wide range of maturities from three-month Treasury bills to Treasury bonds that don't come due for more than 10 years.

By "laddering" your investments this way, you figure you can minimize the chance that you'll ever need to cash in any security before maturity at a possibly depressed price.

You can set up such a portfolio using mutual funds that invest in nothing other than Treasuries. But there is another route you might also consider — investing on your own by buying securities straight from the government through a program known as Treasury Direct.

As it happens, the government has just made some changes in Treasury Direct designed to modernize it and attract more people than the 825,000 participants it had at last report.

"The Treasury Direct program has been suffering from pre-electronic age procedures," say analysts at Standard & Poor's Corp. in the firm's publication, the Outlook. "In essence, it was a good idea, but it's a much better one now."

You can buy Treasury bills of up to one year for a minimum of $10,000 with two- and three-year bills for $5,000, and longer-term notes and bonds, including the new inflation-indexed notes, in amounts of $1,000.

So you do need a huge bankroll to get good maturities. Diversification by issuer isn't a matter for concern, since all Treasuries come from the same source, Uncle Sam, who is widely considered the safest credit risk anywhere.

A partisan of mutual funds might speak up here to make a case for diversification beyond Treasury securities, using something like a flexible bond mutual fund.

MCI for sale? GTE offers record $28 billion cash deal

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — GTE Corp. offered to buy MCI Communications Corp. for $28 billion in cash on Wednesday, escalating a bidding war for the nation's second-largest long-distance phone company.

The bid would be the biggest all-cash deal ever, topping RJR Nabisco Inc.'s $25 billion sale in 1989.

It comes two weeks after WorldCom Inc., the No. 4 long-distance company, offered $30 billion in stock and British Telecom earlier proposed paying about $21 billion in stock and cash.

GTE would pay $40 a share in cash for MCI, or a total of $28 billion. The combined company would have $40 billion in annual revenue.

WorldCom's offer would have worth more than either rival bid, but investors will typically settle for a lower price in return for the security of cash rather than stock. MCI is scrutinizing whether WorldCom's stock would retain its value.

MCI less than $1 billion cash on hand, GTE would need to borrow billions more to pay for MCI.

Buying MCI could make sense for GTE, a major seller of local phone service. GTE, which doesn't face the same restrictions as the Baby Bell regional telephone companies, has been expanding in long-distance.

WorldCom's offer on Oct. 1 exposed cracks in British Telecom's bid, which was revised lower in July after MCI said its earnings would suffer due to its massive losses from its effort to enter the local market.

MCI shareholders are scheduled to vote on the BT offer in December. "It makes sense for GTE to get into the long-distance market as aggressively and as fast as it can because it's free to do so," said David Goodacre, an industry analyst with Forrester Research.

GTE, unlike Baby Bells that sell service in concentrated regions, offers local service in thousands of small communities scattered across 27 states in the Midwest and West.

MARKETS

Dow falls 38 points in wake of weak profits

NEW YORK (AP) — Investors bristled at a disappointing earnings report from Intel and more signs of inflationary pressure, Wednesday as the Dow Jones third-quarter profit reports ended.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 38.31 to 8,057.99 after nearly an early 61-point point drop twice during the session.

Broader stock measures also fell modestly as interest rates rose in the bond market after a stronger-than-expected reading on September's retail sales.

Even before the morning opening bell, the market was bracing for a difficult session in the aftermath of late Tuesday's third-quarter profit report from Intel.

The bellwether of the semiconductor industry reported a 21 percent increase in earnings compared with last year's third-quarter, but the results came in slightly shy of many Wall Street forecasts.

Intel, which fell 5.316 to $6.116 as the most active Nasdaq issue, also cautioned that its fourth-quarter results won't show much of an improvement from the third quarter.

Many technology shares straggled Wednesday — IBM fell 1.5/8 to 101 1/16 as the Dow's weakest issue — but the heaviest punishment was reserved for Intel.

In fact, many personal computer stocks bucked the trend after General Electric's revised forecast for Compaq Computer, which rose 3/8 to 77 1/4 as the most active issue on the New York Stock Exchange.

COUNTRY CHARM

Country photo

Two years ago, Teresa Chang of Filer submitted a photo of her children, Christy and Danny, to a magazine contest featured in "Taste of Home" magazine. She never received a reply and didn't think any more about it. A few weeks ago, her mother was looking through her October/November issue of "Country" magazine, a sister publication to "Taste of Home, and ran right into a picture of her grandchildren. "Other people found out about seeing the picture since," Shank said. "But it was a delight that Grandma Jane had it first."

COMMUNITY EVENTS

Olmstead celebrates 75th

TWIN FALLS - An open house to help Neil Olmstead celebrate his 75th birthday is planned for 2 to 5 p.m. Saturday at the Shilo Inn, 1588 Blue Lakes Blvd. N.

The event is hosted by his children, Carolyn (Steve) Peterson, Brent (Lisa) Olmstead, Rosaloe (Ray) Shantley and Jeanine (Steve) Clayton.

No gifts, please.

Seminars set at CSI

TWIN FALLS - "Secrets of Aging Well: For You and Those Who Care" will be held from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday at the College of Southern Idaho Taylor Building.

The one-day seminar topics are "Fundamental Benefits of Home," "Aging: Don't Take it Sitting Down," "Give Me Strength," "Eat Well: Age Well!" and more wellness strategies.

Cost is $10 for seniors and $25 for caregivers.

Interested residents in the Burley area can call the Golden Heritage Center at 678-8646 for information on car pooling and registration.

Mothers gather in Boise

BOISE - The national president and national mother of the year will be guests at an American Mothers state meeting Saturday at the Owyhee Plaza in Boise.

1997 Mother of the Year Deen Day Smith of Georgia, and Nancy Hawks of Charleston, S.C., are both scheduled to attend, says State President Marilyn Whitson of Cascade. Past Idaho state mothers to be honored include Helen Henderson of Filer, 1971; Mary McCloskey of Twin Falls, 1973; Perdita Humphreys of Fairfield, 1980; Marty Mead of Twin Falls, 1989; and Lorayne Smith of Twin Falls, 1993.

Idaho has had 51 state mothers, 24 of whom are still living. Nearly all of them are expected to attend, according to Winona Watren of Twin Falls, District 3 coordinator.

The local Magic Valley District meeting Tuesday at the home of Marjorie Williams. Plans for working with young mothers were discussed. Linda Helms of Jerome is a nominee for state office at the election to be held at the Boise meeting.

Clubs and organizations interested in nominating a candidate for the 1998 Mother of the Year are urged to contact Lydia Edwards, 418 Highland View Drive, Boise, ID 83702.

Managing diabetes

TWIN FALLS - The Diabetes Center Foundation is presenting a free meeting open to anyone who is interested in diabetes management.

"The Costs of Diabetes: What Can We Do?" is planned for 7 p.m. Monday at the Health and Welfare building on Pole Line Road. Elected officials representing local, state and national government have been invited to the meeting to learn how diabetes affects families, communities and the state. Speakers include Ken Hurt of the Idaho State Insurance Commission and Dolly Baughman of CIGNA (Medicare), both of Boise, and Janet Renaldi of Community Resources and Ann Bybee of the Diabetes Center Foundation, both of Twin Falls.

Pre-registration is not necessary. For more information, call Bybee at 733-3700 or Barbara Holloway at 736-8336.

Parents offered help

TWIN FALLS - The Scottish Rite Learning Clinic is offering a four-session workshop for parents of children with attention deficit disorder or learning abilities.

"They Don't Come With Instructions" is planned for 6:30 to 9 p.m. Wednesdays, Oct. 22 through Nov. 12. Parents will gain an understanding of their child's disability, learn how to help with schoolwork and communicate effectively with the school.

Cost is $10 for the series. For more information, call Melody Allen Lenkner and Jackie Howell at 734-3914.

LETTERS OF THANKS

Boosters say thank you

The Burley Booster Club would like to thank all of the local businesses and individuals who donated to the success of our golf tournament.

We exceeded our expectations, and we want to express to all of you. Go Boonies! FRANK JENSEN AND STAFF Burley Booster Club

Work finally complete

For all the help in getting our store and continuing to make it work, we offer special thanks to John Doerr and Dave Cooper of Cooper Norman and Co., Mr. and Mrs. Dale Wildman, the army of volunteers who have sanded and hung and scrubbed and smiled and prayed with us each day through all these years. Perry Hicks, Rick Mesaros, James and Norma Garcia, Connie Zimmerman and to all of you who have helped as you could since we moved in more than 10 years ago. We appreciate your continued support

Donations appreciated
Thanks to all those that helped by donating food, talent and time for the Habitat for Humanity Hodeown on Sunday.
We raised just over $1,000 and we now have raised just over $2,000 of our goal of $3,000 to submit for affiliate status.
Also, a special thanks to all of the good people of the Mini-Cassia area that sup-

'Carmen' well received
Thanks to Idaho Commission of the Arts and the Western States Arts Federation, as well as the College of Southern Idaho and Arts on Tour in Twin Falls for bringing "Carmen" to Twin Falls.
First Century Bank in Twin Falls was a generous sponsor helping to make this possible. I had not seen this opera and was glad to see this first-class production in Twin Falls on Sept. 15.

Last of the 42nd Street lunchettes closing down

NEW YORK (AP) — The wrecking ball is one door down and due at Fred Hakim's luncheonette on Sunday. Hakim, who formerly served its first Times-Square hot dog in 1939, knows his cramped 42nd Street diner — the last old business on the block — is history. He leaves with his memories and clings to a dream: that the forces behind the much-hyped Times 42nd Street will find a spot where his disabled son, Fred Hakim, can serve in the family business. Officials are sympathetic, but offer no guarantees. "I'm trying to be brave about it, but I can't," says the 67-year-old Hakim, his eyes growing misty as he stands aside a well-worn grid packed with burgers and hot dogs. "I start to cry."

Frank Hakim and his son, Glenn, enjoy a light moment at their diner on 42nd Street in New York City Friday. The elder Hakim can't believe the curtain is closing on his family's 58-year Times Square run.

Hakim's vintage eatery, tucked off the lobby of the Shubert Theater, is the last of its 42nd Street block's old development businesses — a six-seat, 50s-style lunchette where two hot dogs still sell for $1.92. Neighbors, shops like Lorely Tobacco and Dixie Faberhadars, disappeared as 42nd Street evolved into a tourist attraction fit for the millennium. "Fifty-eight years," Hakim says softly. "It's my life." But life has changed. All the property along the 42nd Street block known as "The Deuce" was condemned to make way for new tenants. The street is dominated by Disney's new store of animating theater. Demolition crews are making way for an enormous hotel/retail complex.

Hakim, 69, joined the staff of his father's Times Square eatery at age 11. The family served hot dogs to 40s revelers celebrating the end of World War II. They endured the slow, steady neighborhood decline in the 70s. And they witnessed its amazing '80s comeback. Hakim's regulars were heavy-hearted after word arrived last month that the shop would close this Sunday. Truck drivers and beat cops offered good luck wishes. Longtime customers made grand pilgrimages to his Grand Lunchonette. "I always knew this would be the last of the dinosuars," said James Walton, sucking down a chili dog before his commute to Jersey City, N.J. "There's a lot of nostalgia here."

A customer bites into a hot dog at the Times Square lunchonette Friday.

Hakim's narrow counter games to all. A homeless man picks his shipping cart at the curb and orders a hamburger. "Dogs want crumbs!" Hakim adds, extending a courtesy that will likely leave warm. "Some officials are aware of Hakim's hopes for his son, who might leg and arm were permanently damaged when he was hit by a car at age 2. Glenn, now 32, joined his father at the lunch counter when he couldn't find other work and was building on his dad's business for the family. Charles Gorman, head of the Urban Development Corp., said discussions are underway to fund the Hakim's new space in one of the new buildings — although that may not happen until Hakim. Hakim continues to hope, but he's a realist. While many of his customers can't imagine the block without his shop, Hakim says — and he'll tell you why — although that may not happen until Hakim. "That's a landmark," he says resignedly, jerking a thumb at the adjoining Shubert Theater. "This isn't."

for the month of May through and including August of 1997 in the amount of $42.55 per month and continuing each and every month thereafter until date of sale of this property. The principal balance as of August 11, 1997 is $43,863.59 together with interest thereon as of August 11, 1997 in the amount of $7,490.33. The per diem rate is $17.70. In addition to the above, there is also due any late charges, advances, attorney's fees, and costs associated with this foreclosure. The balance owing as of this date on the calculator secured by said deed of trust is $55,429.56, including interest, but excluding costs and expenses actually incurred in enforcing the obligations hereunder on or after this date, as trustee's fees and/or reasonable attorney's fees 20% in excess of that customary rate secured by the aforementioned Deed of Trust.

ALLIANCE TITLE & ESCROW CORP.
By Ben Peterson, Trust Officer

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On the 20th day of January, 1998, at the hour of 10:00 AM, of said day, (precipitous legal time), in the Office of First American Title Company, 289 3rd Avenue North, Twin Falls, in the County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, First American Title Company of Idaho, Inc., an Idaho Corporation, as Successor Trustee, will sell at public auction to the highest bidder, for cash, at legal notice, the following described real property, situated in the County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, and described as follows, to-wit:

Lot 11 Block 3 of GOLDEN VIEWS SUBDIVISION NO. 2, Twin Falls County, Idaho, according to the plat thereon, recorded in Book 8 of Plats, page 29, records of said County.

The Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above-mentioned real property, but for purposes of compliance with Section 60-103 Idaho Code, the Trustee has been informed that the address of 6811 Ridgeway Drive, Twin Falls, Idaho, is sometimes associated with said real property.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding the possession or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the deed of trust executed by JESSE WILLIAM FREEMAN and SANDRA FREEMAN, husband and wife, as grantors, to FIRST AMERICAN TITLE COMPANY OF IDAHO INC. an Idaho Corporation, as successor trustee, for the benefit and security of First Security Bank of Idaho, as beneficiary, dated October 27, 1990, recorded October 27, 1992, as instrument no. 1992015593, and assigned to FLEET MORTGAGE CORP. as beneficiary, by assignment recorded December 9, 1992, as instrument no. 1992017745. Mortgage Records of Twin Falls County, Idaho.

THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE WAIVED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1506 (4)(a), (IDAHO CODE), NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.

The default for which this sale is to be made is a failure to pay when due, under Deed of Trust Note dated October 27, 1990, the monthly payments for Principal, interest and amounts of $606.55, due per month for the month of May through August, 1997 and all subsequent payments until the date of sale or reinstatement, with a monthly late charge accruing at $24.27, unaccrued late charges are due in the amount of $72.78, with interest accruing at 7.5% per annum, and continuing to accrue from April 1, 1997. The principal balance owing as of this date on the calculator secured by said Deed of Trust is $71,039.94 plus accrued interest, costs and advances.

All rights and interests are reserved together with every other charge, lien, mortgage, judgment and security liens, encumbrances, trustee's fees, attorney's fees, and any amounts advanced to protect the security associated with this foreclosure and that the beneficiary elects to sell or cause the trust property to be sold to satisfy said obligation.
