Tenant leaps out of railyard site

Neighborhood concern prompts decision

By William Brock
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—In a move that stunned some observers, the sole manufacturing tenant of a newly rezoned, but hotly contentious industrial area announced Friday that it will build elsewhere.

"We're going to abandon that project because of the opposition," Grant Record, chief executive officer of Leading Edge Earth Products, told The Times-News.

"We're looking for a more peaceful place," said Record, who said he still hopes to build in or near Twin Falls. "We want to employ people, not fight with them."

Record said he wants to build two factories, each of which would employ 100 workers in the first year of operation;

Letter to the editor, submitted Friday by Grant Record, CEO of Leading Edge Earth Products.

The Times-News published our earlier letter concerning LEEP's reservations about building a plant on Hanks Road. Many citizens who read that letter have contacted us voicing their approval of our cautious position. I am writing this letter to say at the sheer magnitude of "Eastside" opposing the Hanks Road development now dictates LEEP's withdrawal from this project.

employment would rise in subsequent years, he said.

Confirming our earlier remarks, Leading Edge Earth Products Inc. has come to Twin Falls to build a plant (now two plants), provide good jobs, make friends and enjoy our new city. The Eastside project does not promote these objectives. LEEP will immediately begin to pursue different alternatives in the Twin Falls area. Our objective is to obtain the support of both the citizen and their representatives for any plant site(s) we find.

—Grant Record, Twin Falls

LEEP was facing a long, contentious fight to subdivide and annex the disputed land east of town. Record said, "and as soon as we started moving, we'd be the ones taking the heat."

With LEEP in retreat, the president of the only other identified tenant for the area - Eastern Idaho Railroad - urged city leaders to strike a blow for a sound economic future.

"Hopefully the people in a position of leadership will lead. It's either that or abdicate to a stagnant economy," Mike Klaus, Eastern Idaho Railroad president, said in a telephone interview from Spokane, Wash.

Klaus said he was "surprised and puzzled" by LEEP's announcement, and he challenged "the progressive elements of city leadership become more active."

"Certainly the people who have the vision of the growth and who jobs are being

CLOSE CALL

William Couch surveys the wreckage of the pickup he was driving on U.S. Highway 93 near Jerome Friday afternoon. Couch and a passenger survived a collision with an eastbound freight train.

Pair clip train with their pickup on Highway 93, live to tell about it

By Mark Heinz
Times-News writer

JEROME—After nearly going under the steel wheels of a moving freight train Friday afternoon, William Couch wasn't feeling talkative.

Couch, 20, and fellow Twin Falls County resident James Johnson, 54, escaped death by a few feet when the 1986 Chevrolet pickup Couch was driving struck the lead locomotive on an Eastern Idaho Railroad train at a crossing just north of the Petro 24 truck stop on U.S. Highway 93.

Both men were fully conscious at the scene of the 1:45 p.m. accident, and refused ambulance transport to a hospital. And the men—delivering a table from a Twin Falls furniture store owned by Couch's parents—both knew they had survived a close call. "I thought for a second we were going to go under (the train wheels)," Johnson said.

"I didn't see very much," he said. "I had my head down, reading the Idaho hunting regulations when Willie hollered, 'Oh, s---' and hit the brakes."

Shaking and bleeding from head cuts

Cut glass gave William Couch his only injuries, caused by flying glass. Couch, at first shielded away from reporters at the scene of the wreck.

After regaining his composure, Couch said he remembered pieces of the table shattering the pickup's back window. Meanwhile, the truck was dragged several yards down the tracks before it started on fire.

"These trucks have dual tanks - on either side of the frame - and I thought, 'Those suckers are going to blow,'" he said.

"Willie was shouting 'get out, get out.' We both went out the passenger door even before the thing stopped moving," Johnson said.

The train crew put the fire out with portable extinguishers moments later, he said.

The crossing is equipped with flashing lights, but no dropping gates. Couch said the sun's glare blocked his view of the flashing lights, and he was unaware of the train until he heard a blast from the locomotive's whistle. His truck was nearly upon the rail crossing by then, he said.

Judging from skid marks at the scene, the pickup was probably traveling at or near the 55 mph speed limit when Couch

DETROIT—Owners of sport utility vehicles, pickup trucks and vans may get hit with higher insurance rates because of the damage they cause in crashes with smaller vehicles.

At the same time, people who own smaller cars may get a break on their insurance. Some studies show they cause less damage to other vehicles and therefore are less costly to insurance companies. Farmers Insurance Group and Progressive Corp. are adjusting some of their rates to take the different sizes of vehicles into account. The New York Times reported Friday.

Town's take on Halloween bedevils residents

The Associated Press

HANCOCK, Md.—The people of Hancock know when Halloween is but not when consumed hobgoblins will ring their doorbells.

For vague reasons of liability, this town refuses to set a trick-or-treating date. As a result, households must be prepared to hand out candy all week long.

"Last year, it got to the point people were running back and forth across the street up here every night," said Dixie Weller, who wants the town to set an official date—perhaps even Oct. 31. Hancock stopped sanctioning trick-or-treating more than 20 years ago amid reports of treat-tampering around the country. Town officials shuddered with fear over the prospect of coming face-to-face with—horror!—personal injury lawyers. "If you scheduled a night for trick-or-treating, the town would be more or less sponsoring it," explained Town Manager Louis Close. "If the child got hurt, they could come back and say the town sanctioned it and we're responsible for the safety of the children."

That argument doesn't make sense to Daniel M. Clements, past president of the Maryland Trial Lawyers Association. "It's ridiculous for a municipality to think their obligations will change by attempting to ignore reality," he said. "Halloween is there."

Mayor Daniel Murphy said he has nothing against Halloween. In fact, he heads the Rotary Club committee that organizes an annual Halloween parade.

But Murphy prefers that trick-or-treating be done informally, at the neighborhood level, to avoid having children running all over town in the dark.

Trouble is, some kids—particularly the older ones—see this as an opportunity to maximize their trick-or-treating. "The trick-or-treat has one night and my friend Lisa has another night, so it's confusing. So we just go every night," said Crystal Jakubowski, 17. Amber Payne, 7, said she planned to trick-or-treat 11 nights in a row as she could. And her mother is all for it.

Doc saves family from poison air

By Pat Marcantonio
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—At 6:30 a.m. Tuesday, Dr. James Retmier and his wife, Candy, awoke to the cries of their young daughter.

Within seconds, they knew something was terribly wrong, but they didn't know what.

Not only was daughter Chelsea, 6, crying, but their two other children had collapsed.

"It was like we were in a dream state," he said.

"The kids' eyes, the pupils, were dilated and everyone was pale and weak, kind of unresponsive."

A silent invader - carbon monoxide - came into their home northeast of Twin Falls and almost stole their lives. But prompt reactions and some good fortune saved the family.

"I didn't recognize it at that point that I was impaired," James Retmier recalled.

On his way to help his children, he smacked into walls, even fracturing his big toe. He started coughing and choking.

James Retmier said, "I was unconscious on the floor in his room."

"Candy was the first to recognize we needed to get out of the house," James Retmier said. His wife called 911, and he summoned a neighbor.

That morning, it crossed his mind carbon monoxide was to blame but he didn't see the symptoms he expected. The CO detector his wife purchased was still in the package on a counter.

The parents managed to get their children outside. They had to go back inside for warm clothing and blankets for the morning cold.

When an ambulance arrived, the family was on the front porch, some of them unconscious. At Maple Valley Regional Medical Center, they were placed on oxygen and CO blood measurements were taken. They were released within a few hours with no permanent aftereffects.

About carbon monoxide

Keeping safe

- Inspect fuel-burning appliances, chimneys and heating systems.
- Watch for problem signs: soot buildup near fuel-burning appliances, an appliance that keeps shutting off.
- Never leave vehicle running in garage.

Symptoms of poisoning

- At low levels: Headache, fatigue, sleepiness, weakness, confusion, trouble breathing.
- At high levels: Loss of consciousness, coma.

ACROSS THE NATION

West: A strong high pressure system over the West influenced Idaho weather again in the afternoon. Another pleasant day of warm temperatures and mostly sunny skies prevailed statewide.

East: The wet weather included light rain in parts of North Carolina and Virginia.

Midwest: A weak low pressure system pushed slowly over the lower Mississippi River valley, creating a few light showers in southwestern Arkansas.

South: The system was expected to continue moving toward the Southeast, eventually stationing itself over the central Gulf States and creating problems for the Southeast this weekend.

Skies were clear to partly cloudy from the Pacific coast into the Great Lakes. Temperatures varied from the 40s and 50s in the higher elevations of the West to the 80s and low 90s in the desert Southwest.

The lowest wind chill was 11 at Jackson, Wyo.

active," he said. "What's the vision going to be for this town?"

Record said he would keep looking for a suitable location somewhere west, northwest or northeast of town. "But I can't limit our search to just Twin Falls."

LEEP put down more than $10,000 in an earnest-money agreement to buy land north of the railroad tracks between Hankins Road and 3300 East. Record is optimistic he'll get that money back, he said, "because I don't believe the conditions of the real estate contract have been met."

Record agreed to buy the land from Pinnacle Land & Investments, still locked in a bitter dispute to win industrial zoning for another 71 acres of rural residential land south of the railroad tracks. Some neighbors oppose the request, maintaining it would ruin the area's tranquil way of life.

One of the closest neighbors to the disputed land said she was "sorry to see LEEP go."

"Especially after how concerned we've heard they've been to make sure they didn't ruin our community," said Shanna Breeding. "They wanted to be part of our community and not a sore thumb."

"I don't think it was opposition that drove LEEP out of the area," Breeding continued. "I think it was the developer who knew the process and could've followed the rules, but instead tried to skip over some of the process and bully their broad-based speculation through. That's what the opposition is against."

One of Pinnacle's founding partners, Twin Falls insurance underwriter Joe Russell, said he was "hopeful the sale would still materialize" with LEEP.

Even if the sale goes sour, Russell - and other supporters -

"What's the vision going to be for this town."

-Mike Klaus, Eastern Idaho Railroad

re-zoned 41 acres to accommodate LEEP and a new railroad switching yard and "intermodal" center - where freight can be transferred between trucks and trains.

"The combination of the rail-served industrial park and an intermodal center will give the city an exceptional tool to attract new industry and high-paying jobs," Russell said. "We went into this thinking it is a good, viable long-term project and we knew it wouldn't sell overnight."

If the railroad builds a new rail yard east of town, the city will pay up to $3.3 million to buy the existing switching yard in the heart of Old Towne. All but one set of rails would be removed and the area would be sown with grass, thus opening the way for people to stroll from Old Towne to Rock Creek Canyon.

LEEP's leap "is going to stop the people that the Pinnacle people wanted for their project, but I doubt it will sway their idea of building a rail-served industrial park," said Kent Just, executive vice president of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce.

"It's short-term setback, not a long-term one," added Dave McAlindin, the city's economic development director.

"Next year, when somebody else comes in, they won't even be aware there was a controversy," McAlindin said, adding that he can sympathize with Record's predicament.

"He wants to come to town, build a building and employ people," McAlindin said. "It's getting caught up in the crossfire and I don't blame him for pulling out."

hit the brakes, said Idaho State Police Cpl. K.R. Winn.

The train was probably going 20 to 25 mph, Eastern Idaho Railroad General Manager John Brown said.

Couch was cited for failing to yield at a rail crossing, Winn said.

It appears the truck struck the side of the locomotive near the diesel fuel tanks, Brown said. There was some damage to a stairway leading to the locomotive's cab, but the fuel tanks were not punctured.

Conductor Tim Brinkerhoff said he was busy observing southbound traffic on the highway and never saw Couch's pickup coming northbound.

"I felt it hit," he said.

As emergency personnel and accident investigators mullied over the scene, Couch and Johnson chatted with relieved friends and relatives.

Couch's mother, Lois Couch, said she first heard about the wreck through a phone call from a woman who had witnessed the accident.

"I knew they were OK, but I heard the truck had burned up and I wondered how they had survived," she said.

Save

The source of the problem was not a furnace, but a swimming pool heater in the basement that had failed, James Remier said. The house was aired out.

An acceptable level for carbon monoxide is nine parts per million. In the Remier home, it read more than 600 parts per million, said Twin Falls Fire Chief Phil Clough.

In retrospect, the signs started Saturday when family members became nauseous. James Remier checked them and believed it was the flu. He showed no symptoms, mostly because he had been working at the hospital all weekend.

Remier said family members was fortunate to awaken when they did, when Clouse called for her mother. Any longer, and the poisoning could have been fatal.

This was the worst case of carbon-monoxide poisoning ever reported since the city started tracking such cases, Clough said. The department responded last year to 20 calls where CO detectors sounded an alarm.

While smoke warns of fire, carbon monoxide is odorless and invisible. Its source can be anything that burns oxygen, such as oil, propane, wood stoves or natural gas heaters, Clough said.

"As the family found, the symptoms are deceiving.

"You become a little euphoric from it. You think everything is hunky dory when in reality you are in bad shape," Clough said.

The family had prepared for disasters with a fire alarm system and escape plans, and those helped Tuesday because the children did well under stress, James Remier said.

But their close escape was a tough lesson.

"We didn't think it would happen to us," he said. "Don't assume that everything in your home is safe. ... You must protect yourself and your family."

The Remier home now has three carbon-monoxide detectors.

Veto kills project in GOP leader's state

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton used his line-item veto Friday to kill eight energy and water projects, including $19 million to dredge a recreational lake in the home state of Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott.

It was Clinton's first use of the newly acquired line-item veto against a project in the home territory of a Republican leader.

Clinton, taking this course, tried to show deference to Congress' role in the appropriations process.

Clinton said in a statement while traveling in the South America. "Nevertheless, I feel so strongly that my administration should look for opportunities to save taxpayer dollars by striking unauthorized provisions of bills that come before me."

The $21 billion energy and water spending bill long has been regarded as one of the biggest repositories of home-district projects. Congress sent Clinton's 423 projects worth $817 million that the administration did not request. He killed only eight, worth $19 million.

Administration officials denied any political motivation.

"I think the president is using the line-item veto exactly in the way that it was intended," budget director Franklin Raines said at a White House briefing. "Indeed, he's found projects that close allies of his have been associated with. And I don't think anyone has been able to show that there is a particular political strand here."

A spokeswoman for Lott, Susan Irby, said the veto was unlikely to affect the majority leader's working relationship with Clinton.

Clinton's sparing use of the veto comes at a time he seeks support in Congress for renewing fast-track authority to speed consideration of trade treaties. Many lawmakers were upset over his recent veto of 38 items in the military construction spending measure for 1998.

Since Clinton first used the line-item veto last summer, he has struck $2 billion in projects or tax breaks, Raines said.

The $4 million dredging project at Sardis Lake in northern Mississippi's Panola County was to create a marina basin for leisure and recreational opportunities. Clinton sliced off $1.9 million from the fiscal 1998 budget, leaving intact $2.1 million appropriated previously.

The administration said local interests ought to foot the bill because the project's primary purpose was to enhance local recreation navigation.

O.J. calls Court TV to comment

BOSTON (AP) — O.J. Simpson called Court TV on Friday to comment on the trial of a 19-year-old girl accused of murdering a baby.

Simpson said he was worried viewers might think badly of the girl because of the aggressive tactics of lawyer Barry Scheck, who also represented Simpson at his murder trial.

"Most of the reaction to him was to him and to him, and to call his Jewishness, and that New York style of him," Simpson said. "I think the medical experts of Simpson's defense, as being the same as Louise Woodward, who is accused of murdering a 6-month-old boy and slumping his head."

Clarette Ferris, left, of Denver, and Eileen Wabba, right, of Atlanta, sing 'Country Roads' as they wait with hundreds in line to attend a memorial service for singer John Denver at the Faith Presbyterian Church in Aurora, Colo., on Friday.

Saying good-bye to John Denver

'His music sprang from his feelings of love'

AURORA, Colo. (AP) — It was the kind of day he loved to sing about: a day of sunshine, the peaks of the Rockies in sight, and lots of family and good friends around.

A standing-room-only crowd jammed the 2,000-seat Faith Presbyterian Church on Friday to remember John Denver as a performer whose songs "sprang from his feelings of love."

Under a clear blue sky in 70-degree temperatures, the opening day of Colorado's ski season — more than 100 people stood outside in this Denver suburb to listen to the memorial service on speakers.

"I'm a real reluctant fan of his music, but I was like magnetically attracted to John Denver still," said Randy Gallagher, a 46-year-old Denver man who had met the singer on a ski chairlift at Aspen. "I can't explain it."

Denver, 53, was killed Sunday in the crash of an experimental plane he was flying in Monterey Bay, Calif.

A large photo of Denver clad in a folksy leather jacket and blue jeans stashed down over a bank of hills, carnations, sunflowers and roses.

Through tears, friends and family celebrated his life as his mother, Erma, two ex-wives, Annie and Cassandra, and three children, Zak, Anna Kate and Jesse Belle, watched.

Some of his songs were played — including "High Flight" — and more than once speakers drew laughter recalling the enthusiasm that Denver, born Henry John Deuschendorf Jr., never lost.

"His music sprang from his feelings of love," said Hal Thera, Denver's longtime manager. "Most importantly, his songs resonated with the people."

Denver's optimistic music, including hits "Rocky Mountain High" and "Sunshine on My Shoulders," during the sometimes turbulent 1970s won him millions of fans worldwide.

Fourteen of his albums went gold and eight platinum, worth more than a million copies sold. "John Denver's Greatest Hits" from 1973 is still one of the biggest-selling albums in the history of RCA Records, with worldwide sales of more than 10 million copies.

Author Jerry Jampolsky, who brought Denver's ashes back from California, told one of Erma Deuschendorf's favorite stories of her eldest son. When younger brother Ron was born, John ran around the neighborhood saying his brother had been ordered from a Sears catalog.

Ron Deuschendorf played a message John had left on his answering machine a week ago: "This is God calling. Just want to wanted to see how you were doing." Denver was heard to say, unable to restrain his laughter.

In recent times his brother "was very excited, very happy. He'd had a couple of rough years but things were starting to come around," Deuschendorf said.

Two drunken-driving arrests and his second divorce had been a sort of epiphany, friends have said. A few days ago he played them a newly written song that seemed upbeat and may have had commercial potential, friends said.

U.S., Japan resolve dispute, avert showdown

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Japan defused a tense trade dispute Friday that had threatened to block Japanese bids to open U.S. ports and disrupt billions of dollars in shipping between the world's two largest economies.

Officials from both countries announced they had reached an agreement in principle to give American shippers the same access to Japan's ports that the Japanese enjoy in the United States. U.S. shippers have complained for years about burdensome Japanese port rules that drive up costs.

President Clinton hailed the accord as good news for American companies.

"We have long pressed Japan for a firm commitment to liberalize trade in its ports and today they have done just that," Clinton said in a statement issued from Argentina.

Gore 2000? Vice president pushes hard in California for presidential run

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Flying coast-to-coast four times in four days, Al Gore turned a disjointed fundraising tour into something that could be more profitable in the long run. He was laying the foundation for campaign 2000.

In California and Florida, the vice president amassed political IOUs, handed out government largesse, huddled with political operatives and tried with limited success to show a bit of flair on the stump. Most of his time was spent in on the viceroy Golden State, which Gore was urged to treat "as a separate constituency" as he builds his presidential network.

Wearing black ribband sandals, shorts and a turtle-neck, Gore boarded Air Force Two before dawn Tuesday to begin the trip. He would fly about 12,000 miles — from Washington to California to Florida and to California again before returning home Friday night.

If nothing else, the trip showed that Gore's fund-raising prowess has not ebbed since the Justice Department and congressional investigators began reviewing his 1996 campaign tactics. "We'll keep writing the checks for people we like," said David Novak, owner of a Los Angeles public relations firm who attended a Gore-headlined fund-raiser for Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif. A few minutes earlier, Gore was asked whether the controversy had put a dent in his fund-raising work for Democrats. "I hadn't thought about that," he said. "But I think the answer is no."

The vice president raised $225,000 for Boxer, who now owes him some allegiance in 2000. He had a $150,000 fund-raiser for Senate Democrats before flying home.

It wasn't all about money. Gore conducted a private breakfast meeting with political advisers including consulting Bill Wardlaw, former Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros, former White House aide John Emerson and former White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers. On the agenda: presidential politics in California.

Gore was told he can't win the presidency without winning California, especially if George

Vice President Al Gore jokes with audience before beginning his speech at a breakfast meeting on the California League of Conservation Voters in Los Angeles, Friday.

Bush's son, Jeb, won the governorship of Florida in 1998 and the former president's other son, Texas Gov. George W. Bush, runs for president as the Republican nominee out of another large state.

Gore was urged to "consider California as a separate constituency," said one participant, speaking on condition of anonymity. "You have unions, labor and all the others. He's got to treat California like its own animal."

The vice president's two trips to California this week brought his 1997 total to two.

No small touch was too small for Gore, who Attended a reception Thursday for about 30 California Democrats, some of whom are past donors who received Gore's thanks. Others were not contributors, but came with him might prompt them to lighten their wallets.

- Flew from California to Florida to attend a private conference organized by The New Yorker magazine. It gave him a chance to mix with media and Hollywood elite, with taxpayers picking up part of the travel costs.
- Announced several million dollars in federal grants for California.
- Addressed supportive environmentalists Friday and ate dinner Thursday with Hollywood stars such as actor Tom Hanks and director Rob Reiner. He endorsed himself to the entertainment industry, a key bloc of Democratic donors, by endorsing the lesbian TV character Ellen.

Some critics, during the trip, Gore showed that it will be an uphill battle trying to shed his reputation as a wooden public speaker.

In Santa Monica, Calif., he stood in the center of a room with people crowded around. Unlike President Clinton, who would have turned the event into a political clinic on eye contact and fast-your-pant emoting, Gore plodded through his remarks. Where Clinton would have used homespun expressions, Gore talked about "expedited permits" and "reinvigorating principles."

Then he suddenly loosened up. His hand chopped at the air. His eyebrows arched. His body twisted back and forth to finally acknowledge all three sections of the crowd, and his monotone voice sparkled with emotion and mirth. These were reminders that Gore has made progress as a performer.

Washington political consultant Robert Squier made the trip with the vice president to oversee his speechwriting and made-for-TV events.

Gore softened one crowd up with self-deprecating patter about Inauguration Day, when Clinton took the oath of office five minutes late. He joked that he served as president for those 300 seconds and added that he recalled the crowd chanting, "Five more minutes! Five more minutes!"

On this trip, he was looking for more than that.

An agent from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms carries confiscated ammunition boxes from a Mills, Mass., home Thursday.

Weapons arrests spur concern

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Defense Secretary William Cohen has ordered a military-wide security review following the arrests of 14 people suspected of trafficking military explosives. Six of the suspects are Marines.

"It is imperative that we be confident that military arms and munitions are tightly controlled and safeguarded," Cohen said in ordering the 30-day review. The arrests Thursday were part of an ongoing 18-month investigation into the theft of military weapons, including rocket launchers, machine guns, mines, mortars and grenades. Much of the ordnance was stolen from Camp Lejeune, the sprawling Marine base in eastern North Carolina, where five of the Marines were arrested. Four Marines were stationed there; a fifth was posted at nearby Cherry Point Marine Corps Air Station.

Federal undercover agents bought large quantities of weapons and ammunition.

Americans hit the road, burn record amounts of fuel

WASHINGTON (AP) — American drivers are burning record amounts of gasoline this year, encouraged by a strong economy to get out on the road and increasingly turning to vehicles with more zip and less fuel efficiency.

This summer's gasoline consumption nationwide reached a peak of 356 million gallons a day in July and averaged a record 336 million gallons a day for the first eight months of the year, according to the federal Energy Information Administration.

The latest fuel mileage statistics from the Environmental Protection Agency for 1998 models, show efficiency at a standstill. While a handful of small cars get high mileage, nine of every 10 vehicles get less than 30 miles per gallon and nearly a fifth get less than 20 mpg.

For the eighth time in nine years, Chevrolet's Geo Metro subcompact was the simplest fuel miser, getting 46 mpg in combined city and highway driving. It was followed by two Volkswagens, the Jetta and Passat.

Herb grows popular after ban on diet drug — warts and all

NEW YORK (AP) — For years, German doctors have prescribed a herb called St. John's wort to lift sagging spirits. Now millions of Americans have started using it to lift drooping bellies and backside as well.

St. John's wort has soared in popularity as a weight-loss supplement ever since two diet drugs were pulled from the market last month.

HAN the nearly 250,000 dieters at NorthShore weight-loss centers use the herb, which shows in gold flowers at their brightest around June 24 — St. John's Baptist's birthday.

"I lost 45 pounds in about three and a half months," said Kathie Spina of Coatesville, Pa., who at 5-foot-7 weighs 135 pounds after a NorthShore doctor prescribed a St. John's wort blend. "I'd tried over-the-counter products before and dieting and eating fruits and stuff like that. Nothing seemed to work."

The sudden rise of St. John's wort, or hypericum, is hard to miss. Health food store shelves are newly lined with Herbal Fiber Fuel, Diet Fben and other St. John's wort blends designed to sound like the now-unavailable diet cocktail "Fen-phen." And many doctors now enthusiastically prescribe the herbal remedy.

But many doctors who praise its depression-easing powers question its use as a weight-loss drug.

"I think it's a lousy idea," said Dr. Norman E. Rosenthal, of Rockville, Md., psychiatrist and researcher who is writing on a book on St. John's wort.

Breast cancer video pulled from TV

WALNUT CREEK, Calif. (AP) — A video showing women how to do self-exams for breast cancer provided a little too much information for the county cable television station.

CTV, owned and operated by Contra Costa County, showed the seven-minute film clip one day last week, then took it off the air because it showed naked breasts.

CTV Executive Director Patricia Burke decided the clip wasn't appropriate for family viewing. She offered to advertise the videos, submitted by the county health department, on public service announcements or make them available by request for use at home.

Breast cancer awareness activists complained to County Supervisor Donna Gerber, who asked fellow supervisors this week to consider forcing Burke to run the video.

New logging roads policy in the works

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Forest Service is considering obliterating many logging roads and converting others to trails as part of a new timber policy, Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman says.

The agency is developing the policy to reduce landslides, protect municipal watersheds and limit timber harvests in parts of national forests without roads, Glickman said in a letter to Sen. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., made public Friday.

Expected at the end of the year, the policy will reflect concerns raised last month by Wyden, Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.C., and Montana Sen. Max Baucus, the top Democrat on the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee.

Wyden praised the move in a speech Friday to the City Club in Portland, Ore. He had pressed the Clinton administration for a comprehensive review of the logging roads system as a preferred approach to an environmentalist-backed measure the Senate narrowly defeated last month to dramatically cut the agency's roads budget.

"With this decision, we should be able to end the empty debate over eliminating the roads budget and start the difficult job of crafting a roads policy with science, not politics, at the center,"

Mike Bowersox, an Earth First activist, takes a hike along a logging road in the Nez Perce National Forest, outside of Boise, Id. The U.S. Forest Service is considering obliterating many logging roads and converting others to trails as part of a new logging policy under Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman said.

said Wyden, who also reluctantly had backed the spending cuts on roads.

The 380,000 miles of Forest Service logging roads are eight times the size of the entire U.S. interstate system. Environmentalists say they are the most ecologically destructive force on national forests, accelerating erosion and water runoff that lead to mudslides and floods.

Glickman said a new strategy will determine where and when roads should be built and identify areas that should be protected from road building. It will be part of a broader natural resource agenda Glickman has asked Forest Service Chief Mike Dombeck to develop "built on a foundation of science and sensitive to the needs of communities," Glickman said.

Eagle attacks migrating whooping crane over Utah

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A whooping crane flying in an experimental migration with sandhill cranes and ultralight planes was injured by a marauding eagle over Utah and is now riding in a trailer on the ground.

And one of the two ultralight planes had an engine quit while chasing off eagles Thursday, the ground crew reported Friday on the flight's Internet Web site. The plane landed safely.

The aerial convoy was in the Four Corners area near the Utah-Colorado border late Friday afternoon, expecting to cross into northwestern New Mexico, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service spokesman Hans Stuart said.

"They're making great progress," Stuart said. He estimated the four whoop-ers, eight sandhill cranes and their ultralight leaders would probably arrive at the Bosque del Apache National Wildlife Refuge on Monday or Tuesday.

On Thursday, the plane and birds flew from Heber City to Moab, Utah. Around Friday, Utah, the first eagle attack of the day occurred. "It was a whooper that was injured," Stuart said.

The attack came after lead pilot Kent Clegg, the Idaho rancher who has been leading sandhill cranes to New Mexico for the past two years, noted the whoopers were one-fifth of the way as well as the sandhills.

"For some reason, the whoopers seemed to be holding their own party, and the gang of four (whoopers) hung behind and wouldn't fall into formation," according to the flight narrative posted on the Worldwide Web.

Sales tax hike proposed to meet school building needs

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The Idaho School Boards Association is being asked to back a half-cent increase in the state sales tax to finance school building construction and repairs.

Next month's consideration of the proposal, offered by the Idaho Falls School Board and endorsed by the association's executive committee, comes less than two weeks before 4th District Judge Daniel Eismann opens the trial on the seven-year-old claim by two dozen school districts that the state is not financing the constitutionally required uniform and thorough public school system.

In recent sessions, lawmakers have taken steps intended to blunt most of the school district claims of inadequate financial support. A major change was a complete revision of the formula for disbursing $700 million a year in state education aid.

But the Legislature has done nothing to end the dilemma the 112 school districts face in trying to deal with what is now nearing $1 billion in needed building repair and construction that can only be financed by tightfisted property taxpayers.

"If something dramatic like this is not done, we will lose what we have invested in," Idaho Falls School Board member Sue Fineman said.

Business leaders advise, criticize Idaho's colleges and universities

BOISE (AP) — Its colleges and universities must emphasize technology, agriculture and business for Idaho to remain competitive in the future, business leaders said at the state's first higher education summit.

They also backed state colleges' request for more money and criticized schools for not being flexible in meeting business needs for continuing education.

The state Board of Education brought business and higher education together Thursday, hoping to send a unified message to Idaho lawmakers that colleges and universities need more money. But even though business leaders echoed these pleas for an influx of cash, none of the Legislature's leadership attended to hear them. Most said they had scheduling conflicts.

"I apologize for the legislators who are not here," said state Sen. John Hansen, R-Idaho Falls. "They are critical to the process."

On many issues, Education Board members agreed with what they heard from the business community.

"The fact that we're talking in a formal way raises awareness," board member Jerry Hess of Nampa said. "It's always good."

Nazi-hunter's son works on behalf of victims

BORDEAUX, France (AP) — His rock-star appearance — the long, wavy dark hair and heavy motorcycle boots, the black T-shirt and jeans — clash with the judicial robes he wears each day into a French courtroom.

His manners don't always suit the court's formality, either, when he lashes out angrily, for instance, at a judge who rules against him.

And at 31, his youth seems out of sync with the issue at hand: French responsibility for the deportation of Jews to Hitler's death camps during World War II, more than two decades before he was even born.

All of which has contributed to, rather than hindered, Arno Klarfeld's emergence as one of the most prominent adversaries of Maurice Papon, the 67-year-old retired bureaucrat being tried on war crimes charges for his role in France's pro-Nazi Vichy regime.

Klarfeld was just 15 when the families of Jewish victims started the long process of building a case against Papon in 1981.

But by then, he was already steeped in the history of the Holocaust. His parents are Serge and Beate Klarfeld, the Nazi hunters.

He was weaned on public demonstrations by Holocaust survivors. He is named for his grandfather, Arno, who perished at Auschwitz. At age 14, he survived a car bombing aimed at his parents; no one was hurt.

Arno Klarfeld, right, shown with his father, Nazi hunter Serge Klarfeld, represents the families of 81 children allegedly arrested under ex-minister Maurice Papon's orders in 1942.

He's clearly a child of the '70s and '80s: He dates top models and movie stars, gets around on in-line skates, and even takes them into the Bordeaux courthouse. For a time, he practiced corporate law in Manhattan.

Underneath his hip exterior, a deep and sometimes angry social commitment simmers. When he wrote a novel, it was about genocide in Rwanda. He lobbied with former companion and fashion model Carla Bruni to have the Louvre send a Veronese master-piece home to Italy. When he returned to France from New York, it was to follow in his father's footsteps.

"I think of myself more as an activist than a lawyer," he says of his role in the Papon trial.

His youth and moral outrage are a sharp contrast to the age and cool diffidence of Papon, the gray-suited former Cabinet minister who is the Vichy regime's most senior official to stand trial for crimes against humanity.

Klarfeld is one of about 20 civil party lawyers who represent victims' families and associations, and have the right to call witnesses and cross-examine Papon.

When a Bordeaux court last week freed the former police supervisor for the rest of his trial, Klarfeld cried out in anger, condemning the judge's decision and shattering the shocked silence of the courtroom.

"I couldn't stand having the victims humiliated one more time," he said in an interview.

Next month, Klarfeld plans to read the names of the 81 children Papon allegedly had arrested and deported in August 1942. None survived. He keeps copies of the children's photographs with him in court.

"They give me strength," he says.

He will show the court arrest orders signed by Papon and will display a bill for 350 francs that a transport company sent to Papon's office for bringing Nelly and Rachel Stopnick, ages 5 and 2, to the police station in Bordeaux.

About a quarter of France's 76,000 Jews were deported between 1941 and 1944. Only about 2,500 survived.

U.S. food label found on Korean sub

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Searches of a stranded North Korean spy submarine turned up a label from a can of beef donated by American Mennonites, South Korea said Friday.

The discovery heightened suspicions that hunger-stricken North Korea is diverting foreign relief to its huge military.

U.S. Navy officers found the label in a North Korean submarine that ran aground off South Korea last year, South Korea's Defense Ministry said.

Although the label was torn and scuffed, ministry officials said they could make out the words "Food for relief, in the name of Christ," and "Mennonite Churches of Va."

Museum finds itself in violence's path

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Basque government leaders built the new Guggenheim Museum in the Basque city of Bilbao, hoping to deflect attention from their region's separatist violence.

Instead, the museum has become a focal point of it — even before King Juan Carlos inaugurates the showcase structure on Saturday.

Blood was shed on museum grounds Monday, when a policeman was shot and killed by three men he was questioning as they unloaded flower arrangements from a van. Police later found machine guns and grenades hidden among the flower pots.

Two of the gunmen fled, including the killer. A third, Kepa Arriategui, was captured and acknowledged Friday in a Madrid courtroom that he was a member of the armed Basque separatist group ETA.

Arriategui said he was caught after he tried to fire his pistol and the ammunition clip fell out, the state news agency EFE reported. Arriategui and another man who allegedly stored ETA weapons on his property were ordered held in a Madrid prison.

The slain officer, Jose Maria Aguirre, has been hailed a hero for helping foil ETA's alleged plan to attack Saturday's gala opening with the king and his wife, Queen Sofia, in attendance.

On Thursday night, about 100,000 people marched through Bilbao to protest the slaying.

Hours later, a small bomb exploded outside a Bilbao office building, causing minor damage, and a gasoline bomb set a police van ablaze in Vitoria, the Basque capital.

Blessed are the fiber optics that bind

My sister, Wanda Lynne, and I have never been especially close. We haven't had any major problems or anything like that. We love each other, and we enjoy being together when we see each other. But we've never been, you know, close.

It probably has something to do with the fact that she's seven years older than I am. Think about it when she was 16, I was 9. She was in high school and I was in grade school. We didn't exactly have much in common. After high school, she went away to college, got married and moved hundreds of miles away. It's kind of hard to develop much intimacy — even between loving siblings — when you spend most of your life separated by time and distance.

VALUESPEAK

Oh, and there's one other thing that always separated us: Kathy, our sister, who is in between us in age. Wanda Lynne and Kathy have always been close, and Kathy and I have, been, close. But Wanda Lynne and I... well, it's been kind of hard for us to connect.

Until we connected on the Internet. Now all of a sudden we're talking all the time — electronically. I don't remember ever writing a letter to Wanda Lynne, except maybe a long note in a birthday card. But now we're communicating with each other almost every day. I send her this column via the Internet (hi, sis! Hope you don't mind me writing about you — especially the part where I told everyone how much older you are than me!). She sends me copies of letters from her two sons who are away from home doing missionary work for their church. Since I live closer to our dad, I give her regular updates on how he is doing. Recently, she had Dad stay with her for a week, and she sent me daily updates on what they were up to together.

Once, during that week when Dad was at her house, my family got online at the same time that her family and Kathy's were also online. We all went to a private "chat" area and had a delightful three-way conversation that had us all "laughing-out-loud".

Today I feel closer to Wanda Lynne than I've ever felt before. We've included other "connected" family members in our computer correspondence — even our brother, Dick, who is living in Brazil — and it seems to be bringing us all closer to one another, byte-by-byte. Who would have thought that the "ties that bind" would be made of fiber optics?

It's a wonderful time in which we live, with extraordinary technology that can make life simpler, sweeter and infinitely more satisfying. It should be noted, however, that the same technology that is helping to bring our family together can also be used to access materials that are vile and destructive. This suggests to me that the technology itself isn't inherently bad or good; rather, it is up to those who use it to determine whether it will be a blessing or a curse.

Decades ago, when television was the exciting newswoman on the technological frontier, one of its pioneers, journalist Edward R. Murrow, said this of the medium: "This instrument can teach, it can illuminate, and yes, it can inspire. But it can do so only to the extent that humans are determined to use it to those ends. Otherwise, it is nothing but wires and lights in a box."

The same is true of the Internet, lasers, the space shuttle and multi-level marketing. Innovation in any field — no matter how impressive — is just a package of potential. Its ultimate value has more to do with application than engineering. Our ancestors learned that lesson years ago with fire. It can warm you, or it can burn you. It depends on how you choose to use it.

Now, if you'll excuse me, I have to get online. I'm expecting e-mail from Wanda Lynne.

Have I ever told you how close we are?

A light in the darkness

Crusade comes to Magic Valley

By H.R. Weisel

Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Listeners are invited to drink generously from the well of Christ's mercy at contemporary Christian musician Steve Camp's crusade.

"The idea of bringing Steve Camp to the Magic Valley for a Light of the World Crusade was birthed by theighthouse Christian Fellowship," explained the Rev. Greg Fadness, pastor at Lighthouse, in Kimberly. "It's something we've been praying and seeking for a long time and was born out of the need to reach a broader field of people in this area."

Fadness said the crusade is based on Scripture found in John 8:12: "Again therefore Jesus spoke to them saying, 'I am the light of the world; he who follows me shall not walk in the darkness, but shall have the light of life.'"

People from many Magic Valley congregations are helping plan the Camp crusade, Fadness noted.

"In the manner of Billy Graham's ministry, the concert crusade will be free of charge, with only an offering taken to cover expenses," he said in a press release. "We don't want anyone to be turned away due to lack of funds. The Gospel was freely given to us by our Lord, and we should offer it without charge to those who are in need of the Savior."

Camp has released 16 best-selling albums in 18 years, including "He Covers Me" and "There Is No Other Name/Wonderful Merciful Savior."

As a spokesperson for Compassions International, Camp recently organized a multi-artist event, for which he and Phil Madala wrote the song "Do Something-Now." The effort raised several hundred thousand dollars and sponsored thousands of children in the work to fight world hunger.

Camp has also worked with Christian evangelist Tom Campolo to plan benefit concerts for crisis pregnancy centers. He was one of two recipients of the NARAS president's Merit Award for his work to feed the poor, and he gave a benefit concert for the royal family at Royal Albert Hall to benefit Princess Anne's Save the Children Program.

He wrote the Grammy award-winning song, "Martin" as a tribute to the late Martin Luther King Jr.

Camp said, "The Christian faith my parents taught me as a child led me to make a confession of faith at the age of 5 and came to fruition in the form of a commitment to serve the Lord Jesus Christ when I was 17."

In his press release, he stated, "As we learn how to worship the Lord daily within our own families, then we know better how to worship him in the family of God. I am learning in the context of family to be weak, to trust one another, to give up my rights and to serve. This is also key to true praise before our Lord. Weakness is a spiritual gift. It causes our dependency on God not to be partial, but total." Camp's 50th release, "Mercy In The Wilderness," is a worshipful song that bids listeners to "Come worship the Lord in the beauty of His holiness... come find mercy in the wilderness." The Magic Valley community choir, with musicians from many churches under the direction of Pam Fadness, will fill the auditorium with praise and worship music at Camp's crusade in Twin Falls. There will also be a crusade praise band. Camp and Fadness will provide the messages.

It's all Latin to these priests

By Knight-Ridder News Service and The Times-News

ELMHURST, Pa. — Our Lady of Guadalupe Seminary seems to float at the top of a steep green hill, looking out at the sky from its perch in the high, flowing mountains of northeast Pennsylvania.

The building, once in disuse, has been resurrected — to an unlikely fate.

The chanting that filters down its staircase is the aged, old Gregorian chant, and the men walking its halls wear the long black cassocks that Bing Crosby wore in "The Belts of St. Mary's." They are a peculiar sort of priestly squad, come to learn the old Latin Mass.

It's a specialized, but thriving, 60-student ministry. The Latin Mass in the form celebrated for centuries up to the Second Vatican Council — is being said again these days all across the country. Of about 180 dioceses in the United States, 82 host a Tridentine Mass every Sunday, and another 30 do so at least once a month.

None of the churches in the Magic Valley are celebrating Mass in Latin at the present time.

The Latin Mass, also called "Old" Mass, is a Mass in which the priest stands with his back to the congregation, reciting mostly inaudible Latin prayers. It is the Mass that was supposed to fade into liturgical history after Pope Paul VI closed the soul-shaking Second Vatican Council of the 1960s, the relic Mass that was supposed to be supplanted by the vernacular Mass. So that everybody who attended would "understand" what was going on.

Instead of dying out, why is it gaining new life?

"Because it's a superior expression of the faith," said the Rev. Arnaud Devillers, director of the North American district of the Priestly Fraternity of St. Peter, part of

Publisher introduces line of romance novels for Christian readers

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — There's a new kind of romance novel in which no bodices get ripped, no loins thro, no breasts heave, and the cover is more likely to feature a wedding dress than a shirtless Fabio. And while a kiss is still a kiss, it no longer sends the hero on an inexorable journey to "the pulsing flower of her womanhood."

Harlequin Enterprises Ltd., one of the world's leading publishers of romance novels, is introducing a line of inspirational Christian fiction in which the heroine is always chaste and God is the third figure in every love triangle.

In a testament to the growing popularity of religious fiction, the Ontario-based publishing house launched its new Steeple Hill division in September with three Christian romances.

Steeple Hill plans to bring out three a month through the end of the year, and eventually branch out to broader areas of religious fiction and nonfiction. With Harlequin's publishing muscle behind it, the line represents a major step for religious fiction, enabling it break out of Christian bookstores and into mass-market sellers such as Kmart and Wal-Mart.

"It not only speaks loud and clear about the market, but it does, if you will, give a validity to this market because it speaks from a commercial voice," said Phyllis Tickle, religion editor for Publishers Weekly.

The new Harlequin fiction line also

Tibet makes a big splash in Hollywood

The Hartford Courant

Tibet is on Hollywood's horizon, and it's far from lost.

Jean-Jacques Annaud's "Seven Years in Tibet," with superstar Brad Pitt, just opened, and another film on the early life of the Dalai Lama, "Martin in the Wilderness," will open during the winter holiday season. Also due out this winter is "Wind Horse," a low-budget feature film centered on current conditions in Tibet.

The plight of Tibet, already a high-profile cause, is filling news pages and airwaves, and there will be plenty of celebrities on hand to add star lustre to the cause of Tibet and to Tibetan Buddhism. (Actor Richard Gere and the Beastie Boys' Adam Yauch have been prominent supporters.)

In the United States, the Dalai Lama, winner of the 1989 Nobel Peace Prize, is clearly the best-known Tibetan Buddhist monk. He is among a number of prominent Tibetan Buddhist teachers in the United States in the past 30 years. But it's hard to imagine that the current vogue for Tibet could have occurred without Chogyam Trungpa Rinpoche, a charismatic and controversial teacher who died 10 years ago, of a heart attack, at age 48. Trungpa translated the often esoteric doctrines of Tibetan Buddhism for American seekers.

Trungpa's legacy is impressive, if

Don't feel like hearing a sermon?

You obviously haven't heard the preaching of 'Carol Burnett of Christian Comedy'

BRENTWOOD, Tenn. (AP) — In a colorful bathrobe, fuzzy slippers and a wig with curlers, she hits the stage with a coffee pot in one hand and New Testament in the other.

As a bluesy song blares the virtues of the modern-day Christian woman, she struts, slaps her chest, mops like a guitar and twists her vacuum cleaner hose around her like a boom constructor.

Meet Kay Dekalb Smith, "the Carol Burnett of Christian comedy."

"I feel like laughter is the tool that God has given me to pierce the heart," Smith says in a rare serious moment.

Her hilarious skit is a modern take on Proverbs 31, the Bible's listing of the qualities of a godly woman: "She opens her mouth with wisdom, and the teaching of kindness is on her tongue. She looks well to the ways of her household, and does not eat the bread of idleness. Her children rise up and call her blessed; her husband also."

That intimidates most women because it describes the ideal. Smith says. But her jazzy translation elicits a different reaction.

"Women in the audience just come and hugged when I do this," says Smith, who finishes the routine wearing a coat of armor. My interpretation says that today's godly woman may have to juggle kids, jog to work and keep a busy schedule, but she's still a woman who very much needs her heavenly father."

Compared to Carol Burnett by a pastor early in her comedic ministry, the 43-year-old redhead performs 100 shows a year at churches, conventions, universities and other events worldwide.

She grew up in Hartselle, Ala., with hilarious parents. A 10th-grade teacher observed her animated conversations and encouraged her to develop impersonations. She began performing at age 16 at Hartselle's "night-clubs."

"You know, the Rotary, Kiwanis and Lions clubs," Smith

When Kay Dekalb Smith does her preaching, she uses a plunger, loud bathrobe and hair curlers in addition to her Bible. Dubbed "the Carol Burnett of Christian comedy," Smith performs 100 shows a year at churches, conventions and universities.

deadpans, in characteristic Southern drawl. "At 17, she wowed judges at a Miss Alabama Teen-Ager pageant with her impression of Shirley Temple and was second runner-up in the national contest. She was Miss Birmingham the next year.

But her best education came at Opryland USA theme park in Nashville, where she performed two years as a singer, dancer and impersonator.

She studied speech and drama at Samford University but quit with her parents' permission in 1974 to explore her talent in Nashville. In the next 10 years, she did radio, TV commercials, performed with Anita Bryant and volunteered at Vanderbilt Children's Hospital. She has cassettes and a video.

She married husband Ed in 1982 and they have two daughters, Allie and Evin, ages 10 and 14.

Her act includes songs and stories about balancing the check-book, hot flashes and her dislike of cooking — "My family always knows when dinner is ready because the smoke alarm goes off!" A gifted soprano, she does an hour-long spoof on church choirs and sprinkles other routines, with songs like "Lord, Change My Spouse."

Her pastor, the Rev. Richard White of the First Baptist Church of Franklin, applauds her for presenting a spiritual message "without belittling anything down people's throats."

Religious groups turn to preventative care

ATLANTA (AP) — For those who have devoted their lives to healing the poor, it's a real problem to suddenly have idle hands and a hefty bank account.

It's also a problem that's going to spread in the next five to 10 years, if competitive pressures force the merger-or-sale-of-at least half the 700 hospitals in the United States that are owned by religious groups. Organizations that sell their hospitals could be left with up to $30 billion.

That next step, if it's invested, could generate almost $2 billion a year to spend. Former President Jimmy Carter is stepping into this intersection of commerce and charity, working to redirect these resources toward preventing disease rather than treating it — and using an army of churchgoing volunteers instead of paid medical staff.

"Imagine what would happen if the 145 million members of faith groups in the United States served just their immediate neighborhoods to ensure that every person went to bed adequately fed, every pregnant woman had prenatal care and every little child was immunized," Carter said.

"Showing concern for the poor and vulnerable absolutely is at the heart of expressing faith in God, whether you're Muslim or Baptist," said Gary Gunderson, director of the Carter Center's Interfaith Health Program. "That's Community Health 101."

Two statistics guide the Carter Center's work: "About 75 million people go before age 65 are preventable because they're caused by lifestyle or poverty."

More than once a week to a church, synagogue or mosque. Nonprofits move toward public health could significantly improve health care for the working poor — people who earn too much to qualify for Medicaid but not enough to pay for private insurance, said hospital industry analyst Peter Costa of ABN AMRO Chicago Corp.

In Pittsburgh, the Jewish Health Care Foundation started with $75 million from the sale of the nonprofit, 450-bed Montefiore Hospital to the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center. A strong stock market has increased that net gain to $120 million, even though the foundation distributes $5 million annually.

The foundation makes almost 100 grants a year to groups focusing on the elderly, at-risk children and at-risk women's health. Those priorities were set by the foundation's 57 board members, including residents of Pittsburgh's poorest neighborhoods.

Reviews of contemporary Christian and gospel CDs

By Stacie Beattie Staples Knight-Ridder News Service

Jars of Clay, "Much Afraid," Label: Essential

Jars didn't change their sound much from their first album, but then again, why should they? They continue to produce hook-driven songs that draw you in from the first beat. Jars' sound is mostly acoustic with funky percussion and keyboards that round out their earthy rhythms. The vocals are heartfelt and the words are easy to relate to. One of the highlights is the song "Hymn" which is, cleverly enough, a hymn. It's a mellow acoustic ballad with lyrics that plead for God to change the hearts of people.

This is the second full-length release from the popular twenty-something quintet. Their first album released in 1995 went platinum (1 million albums sold). They've achieved success in both Christian and secular music markets.

"Amazing Grace 2: A Country Salute to Gospel," Label: Sparrow

This sequel to the gold-certified CD of the same name has 12 of today's most popular country musicians, each choosing a hymn and giving it a country flavor. Instead of pipe organ or piano, these hymns mix such instruments as violin, mandolin, dobro, acoustic guitar and synthesizer. You'll hear "The Old Rugged Cross" by John Berry; "Wayfaring Stranger" by Trace Adkins; "There is Power in the Blood" by Lari White; "Will the Ark Be Unbroken / I'll Fly Away / Jesus Loves Me" by Brian White; "A Beautiful Life" by Kim Richey; "I Surrender All" by Gary Chapman; "Amazing Grace" by Bala Fleck; "Just a Little Talk With Jesus" by Charlie Daniels; "Where You There?" by Marty Raybon; "Just as I Am" by Billy Ray Cyrus; and "Neath the Old Olive Tree" by The Cox Family.

Networkers try to wire Christian churches

Robert Thibadeau displays the Internet homepage of the Houses of Worship website while standing in front of St. Paul's Cathedral in Pittsburgh.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — In a basement on a side street near the University of Pittsburgh, a small computer and staff of 20 are trying to provide every Christian church in the world with its own Web site.

The Houses of Worship project opened here 16 months ago, and plans to reach out to more than 330,000 North American churches by June. By 2000, project leaders expect to circle the globe, connecting Christendom's estimated 2 million churches.

The ambitious project is built around a simple idea: an electronic backbone that supports four Web pages per church for pastoral messages, church and youth activities, and services church needs.

The pages are free. The 330,000 churches have the pages now, whether they know it or not; all they need is a computer, an Internet service provider and an editor willing to update the pages.

The aim is to cut through the clutter of the World Wide Web's 2 million-and-growing sites to ensure that churches can be easily found. "We think this will become an even more profound need in the future," said HOW founder, Robert Thibadeau, a leading computer scientist at Carnegie Mellon University and HOW's technical guru.

The project is backed by a $5 million grant from the 137-year-old American Bible Society. Through the nonprofit Pittsburgh Leadership Foundation, organized by Christian pastors, it also is tapping into similar foundations in other cities to recruit more churches. "There is no other place on the World Wide Web where all the churches appear," said ABS communications director Mike Maus. "We saw it as a way to accomplish the main mission of the American Bible Society, which is to get the Scriptures into the hands of people."

Thibadeau designed HOW to be easy to use. Its Web site includes a tutorial that teaches even a naive computer user how to edit a church's text-only Web pages. If a church already has its own home page, the tutorial shows how to link it to HOW's pages. HOW is staffed 24 hours a day and staffers are alert to any potential abuse — someone editing in an offensive message or linking to off-color images. The rule for dealing with unwanted messages also is simple — the pastor decides what's appropriate for his or her church.

In demonstrating HOW, Thibadeau clicked on the needs-and-offers page for the First Church of the Nazarene in Gallup, N.M. "We are in need of young families to work in our congregation," the posting said. "It was anywhere near Gallup, N.M., I'd be showing up at their doorstep so fast it wouldn't be funny," Thibadeau said.

Baptist seminary librarian fired for daring to disagree

Knight-Ridder News Service

—Even though conservatives have been in control of the national Southern Baptist Convention for years, they brook no opposition from denominational employees.

Proof of that came again last week when the 64-year-old reference librarian at Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky., who was 10 months away from retirement, was suddenly fired.

His sin? He dared criticize comments by the Rev. Tom Elliff, president of the Southern Baptist Convention.

The librarian, Paul Debusman, graduated from Southern Seminary and had been a librarian at the denomination's oldest seminary for 35 years. But he was gone in a minute.

It happened after officials learned that Debusman had written a letter to Elliff taking issue with the Baptist president over a remark he made during a Sept. 16 address at the Louisville seminary.

Elliff had told his audience that when the seminary was controlled by Baptists moderates a few years ago, he probably would not have been invited to speak.

Debusman wrote a private letter to Elliff, pastor of the First Southern Baptist Church in Del City, Okla., and told him he was wrong. He said that when the seminary was controlled by moderates, they made a point of allowing people with differing points of view to speak.

Seminary officials somehow got a copy of the letter. "They came to me and said I had been insubordinate," Debusman said in a phone interview this week. "They asked for my office key."

When returned to get my belongings, they said they would help me. They wanted to see that I didn't take anything." Daniel L. Aiken, a former faculty member of Criswell College in Dallas who now serves as vice president for academic administration and dean of the school of theology at Southern Seminary, said personnel matters can't be discussed.

But Debusman, who will get most of his retirement benefits, let people know publicly that he doesn't agree with conservative control of the Southern Baptist Convention.

"I was trying to be conciliatory. I'm deeply pained by all that has happened since 1979," he said, referring to the year in which the conservative-moderate Baptist split began. "We have wasted a great deal of time and energy on this controversy. It has drained us of our money and our energy."

Debusman's pastor, the Rev. Ron Sisk, pastor of Crescent Hill Baptist Church and a graduate of Southern Seminary, described the fired librarian as one of the kindest men he has ever met.

Minister pleads for end to moral crisis

The Dallas Morning News

Josh McDowell is scared. His family senses it, and so do the members of his worldwide youth ministry who travel with him across the country, talking to parents about his latest campaign. In 30 years of working with youth through Campus Crusade for Christ and his own ministry, he wearily acknowledges he's more worried than ever.

During rallies he begs parents, at times almost getting in their faces, to "wake up to the greatest threat to the cause of Christ."

McDowell's most recent discovery in his talks with teens: Even Christian kids don't believe in a truth greater than themselves. They believe God exists, maybe, but they don't relate to a universal set of values set by God.

"I'm the oldest youth minister you'll find," says McDowell, 58, starting into the wooded acreage of his rural back yard. "This has been the hardest five years of my life because I'm realizing some very harsh trends with our kids. So much of today's philosophy, theology and world outlook is not so much from rational thought as emotional hurt. Our kids are a reflection of that."

McDowell's opinion, the modern notion of tolerance is undermining young Christians' faith. He believes so strongly in this message he has organized a new campaign, "Right from Wrong," to try to educate both parents and youth.

"When everything is leveled out, when we accept everything in culture, we lose the ability to discern right from wrong," he says. "We don't have morality anymore, just different opinions. You can choose what's right or wrong, but don't impose your values on me."

Believing in a hierarchy of values, he says, is now considered the highest form of bigotry.

"He seems to have this sixth sense about knowing where culture is going," says Bob Teide, associate director of the Josh McDowell Ministry, who has worked with him since 1979.

McDowell regularly taps into his most solid source of research — his own four children. Ranging in age from 12 to 23, the McDowell children help keep their father in tune with the thoughts and feelings of young people.

He and his wife, Dottie, have raised their children "to challenge us," McDowell says. "Respect authority but challenge it, question it."

McDowell started asking questions about Christianity as a student at Kellogg College in Michigan. He says he became a Christian by trying to refute it.

After transferring to Wheaton College, he began traveling on weekends to speak at churches and evangelistic events. He then entered Talbot Theological Seminary in La Mirada, Calif., and continued his ministry, calling it "Focus on Youth."

McDowell joined the staff of Campus Crusade for Christ in 1964. His own ministry was named one of the organization's five formal divisions three years ago.

McDowell has written more than 50 books and traveled to about 700 college campuses.

"I want to say I was able to reach people by the time they get to those major decisions that affect the rest of their lives," he says. "Kids today are making life-altering choices at 12 and 13 years old. They're making adult choices with adolescent emotions."

Police charge Twin Falls man with battery

TWIN FALLS - A Twin Falls man is charged with aggravated battery after police say he pointed a pistol at a woman and threatened to kill her.

Another woman in the room said she was calling the police, and Werner fled in his pickup truck.

Stabbing suspect pleads innocent at arraignment

TWIN FALLS - Stabbing suspect Robert Paul Lewis is headed for trial.

Lewis was arraigned into Twin Falls County District Court Friday, and he pleaded innocent.

A judge from outside the district heard Lewis' trial on the threat. An outside judge could be brought in because of the conflict with Burdick.

Friday-afternoon car wreck in Twin injures 2 women

TWIN FALLS - A car wreck injured two people Friday afternoon.

An Idaho State Police report said Crystal Malone, 17, of Murrighan was driving eastbound on Kimberly Road at 1:30 p.m. and had stopped to make a left turn into the Twin Stop Chevron, 3197 E. Kimberly Road.

Malone was taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center by ambulance. She was treated for injuries and released.

Mountain Home miner convicted of fraud charges

MOUNTAIN HOME - A former Mountain Home lava rock miner accused of cheating First Interstate Bank out of more than $1 million was found guilty of fraud charges in Boise U.S. District Court.

William Ward, 52, now residing in Palmer, Alaska, was convicted by a federal jury of 18 criminal acts following a seven-day jury trial recently, according to a news release by U.S. Attorney Betty Richardson in Idaho.

Ward owned a company called Lava Flow Products that was involved in mining and distributing lava rock. He was found guilty of submitting false financial information to First Interstate in order to obtain loans, diverting secured accounts receivable to his own personal benefit and falsely representing the total amount of outstanding accounts receivable, the release said.

Ward also was found guilty of evading federal income taxes by listing only $7,500 in income on his tax returns, the release said.

Officials: Safety uncompromised

County sheriff defends consolidated E911 emergency dispatches

By Kent McCleary Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Law enforcement officials dispute that consolidating police, fire and emergency medical dispatching compromises safety, as Twin Falls County Council candidates contended during a debate Thursday.

Regional Communications Center in Jerome, saying communication problems have compromised the safety of officers and citizens calling for help. They said the city should pull out of the center and return to dispatching their own police and fire departments.

"There is no direct correlation between the crime rate and SIRCOMM. The dispatchers at SIRCOMM don't cause crime, and they don't fight crime. They're just the people that crime is reported to."

They're just the people that crime is reported to.

Consolidation of dispatch means more officers on radio channels than officers have been used to, Towsley said, but that doesn't mean officer safety is compromised.

During a televised debate Thursday, several council candidates raised concerns about the year-old Southern Idaho

"The streets of Twin Falls are less safe today than they were one year ago," said city councilman Chris

Towsley, who has been deeply involved in the startup of SIRCOMM. "The dispatchers at SIRCOMM don't cause crime, and they don't fight crime."

Student explorers discover Dierkes Lake

By Jennifer Sandmann Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - If it weren't for the glow of orange, red and yellow leaves at Dierkes Lake Friday afternoon, it would have been hard to tell it's fall.

In the 70-degree, calm weather, eighth-graders from Vera C. O'Leary Junior High School examined maps and road compasses to navigate the rugged terrain in the Snake River Canyon.

Ryan Yandle uses a compass to find the way for his group in an "Orienteering" exercise at Dierkes Lake Friday morning. Students had to blaze a trail between guideposts using only a direction and counting their paces.

For several weeks students have been studying "Orienteering," a unit developed by their social studies, language arts, science, math, physical education and health teachers.

Teachers on Thursday night scaled four courses. Students had to use their compasses to find and follow the trail. Questions were posed at each stake. Science questions checked for ability to identify magnetic objects, much demanded calculating distances, social studies tested for knowledge of early North American explorers and discoveries; health and physical education involved the orienteering trail as well as preparing a survival kit and language arts required students to write in their journals afterward about the experience.

Students Samantha Hammond, Jennifer DeHaan and Lisa Levin, all 13, said the courses were tough. Of the six, Levin was the only one who had used a compass outside of school.

It's the first time any of the students participated in the interdisciplinary teaching model. Learning about different aspects of the same subject in each class helps DeHaan keep more organized and generally makes things easier, she said.

"You remember a lot, because you get firsthand experience," she said.

It took Jason Bevan's group about two hours to complete one course, but the challenge was worth being out of the classroom.

"We don't have to be in school to learn it," he said.

Police arrested Harding Sept. 23 after seeing him exit a stolen car and jump a fence to flee, police say. The charge wasn't filed because of an error in the charging papers, prosecutors say, and Harding was released from jail.

Two Falls police arrested John Darrell Harding, 34, Oct. 9 on suspicion of forging a check on a closed account for a delivered pizza. A pretrial hearing Friday on the forgery charge, however, ended with dismissal when Magistrate Judge Kevin Cassidy ruled that prosecutors did not have sufficient evidence.

Harding forged the checks for pizza after his release, prosecutors said. Twin Falls police are tracking an avalanche of forged checks, and check fraud investigator Detective Dave Richardson says businesses must scrutinize checks to avoid losses.

Twin Falls County Deputy Prosecutor Jon Brody said charges were filed Friday for a warrant for Harding on a charge of grand theft for defrauding a bank with a forged document. However, Harding was released from jail Friday before the warrant could be served, Brody said.

"The key is to check identification and compare it to the person," Heidemann said. "Don't bend your rules."

Police arrested Harding Sept. 23 after seeing him exit a stolen car and jump a fence to flee, police say. The charge wasn't filed because of an error in the charging papers, prosecutors say, and Harding was released from jail.

Much of the fraud has been from stolen checks written out to be payable to the forger and cashed, Twin Falls police reports say.

One way of documenting who passed the check is to get a thumbprint on the check from the person passing it, Heidemann said. Thumbprint kits include a pad with ink that doesn't stain the thumb but leaves a print on the check, he said.

Thumpprint Signature kits are available for less than $5 each from the Idaho Bankers Association at 342-8282.

Panel mulls creating fund for high-profile murder cases

The Associated Press

BOISE - A study committee is considering recommending that the Legislature create a state-led fund to help finance costly murder trials.

Two Falls police arrested John Darrell Harding, 34, Oct. 9 on suspicion of forging a check on a closed account for a delivered pizza. A pretrial hearing Friday on the forgery charge, however, ended with dismissal when Magistrate Judge Kevin Cassidy ruled that prosecutors did not have sufficient evidence.

Harding forged the checks for pizza after his release, prosecutors said. Twin Falls police are tracking an avalanche of forged checks, and check fraud investigator Detective Dave Richardson says businesses must scrutinize checks to avoid losses.

But one panel member, 5th District Judge Roger Burdick, Twin Falls, cautioned others on Friday that it's far from a simple matter.

For one, Burdick said, defense attorneys would have little incentive to keep their costs down.

Twin Falls County Deputy Prosecutor Jon Brody said charges were filed Friday for a warrant for Harding on a charge of grand theft for defrauding a bank with a forged document. However, Harding was released from jail Friday before the warrant could be served, Brody said.

Police arrested Harding Sept. 23 after seeing him exit a stolen car and jump a fence to flee, police say. The charge wasn't filed because of an error in the charging papers, prosecutors say, and Harding was released from jail.

Defenders have no loyalty to the county to save money," he said. "Their only loyalty is to their client."

Panel members talked of recommending "a capital crimes defense fund," similar to a fund counties created to share insurance risks.

It would call for voluntary participation by counties, but most members said they thought few of Idaho's 44 counties would not join.

The fund would be triggered only in cases where the death penalty is a possibility. Proposed legislation calls for a court fee of $5 to generate a $1 million defense fund, with the fee to be paid by anyone convicted of a violation in any county participating in the fund.

Ada County Commissioner Roger Simmons said the Idaho Association of Counties is behind the idea. He said his county likely would take part in the cap-

Elko holds hearings on gas tax increase

The Times-News

ELKO, Nev. — Public hearings to discuss a possible increase in the gas tax have been scheduled by Elko County commissioners. Hearings in Nevada are planned for p.m. Monday at the Jackpot Recreation Center and 7 p.m. Oct. 27 at the Wells fire station.

The commission has the authority to levy an additional 5 cents in gas taxes over the current 4 cents used for regional transportation needs. The tax is used for new road construction and, with changes made in the last legislative session, can be used for road maintenance as well. For more information, call Linda Ritter at (702) 777-7110 or George Boucher at (702) 738-5398.

Sun Valley honors hospital chief

St. Luke's plans for leadership of new Ketchum facility

By Susan Bailey
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Alan Stevenson, former Wood River Medical Center administrator, was honored by the City Council this week for his years of community service. His contract recently expired and was not renewed by St. Luke's Regional Medical Center, builder of a new hospital facility south of Ketchum. The new facility is expected to open in 2000.

"It has been a key part of the success that the hospital has experienced over the years that he has been the administrator," Mayor Tom Praggastis said. "Al has brought us into modern-day administration." The award given Thursday says: "In grateful appreciation for your visionary guidance and undying leadership to the medical community."

and touched.

Stevenson was administrator of Moritz Community Hospital in Sun Valley from 1981 to 1986 before that facility merged with Blaine County Medical Center in Hailey. Wood River Medical Center was created in February 1992 after a long process of reviewing operations of the two hospitals.

Stevenson was administrator of the two acute-care hospitals from 1990 until his resignation in September. The organizations will operate "jointly" until St. Luke's opens the new hospital, outside Ketchum.

"St. Luke's is searching for an administrator to live in the Wood River Valley and work for St. Luke's under the interim management agreement forged between it and Wood River Medical Center," said St. Luke's spokesman Bill Bodnar.

The Wood River Medical board has the right to approve the Boise hospital's choice of a new administrator, said Chairman Geri Herbert, a Ketchum resident. After the new hospital opens, the interim management agreement expires and St. Luke's will receive community input by way of a new 11-member community advisory board that will include local physicians.

"The whole joint operating committee will continue to administer the hospital until the new hospital is opened," Herbert said. The Wood-River Medical board is made up of 10 Wood River Valley residents, including Blaine County commissioners.

"I feel like we're going to have really good input," Herbert said of the arrangement with St. Luke's. Stevenson said he felt confident the community was in good hands with St. Luke's Regional Medical Center although he was sorry to leave his post as administrator.

"I'm trying to stay in the area," Stevenson said. "I love it here and my family loves it here." Praggastis said Stevenson handled his job with grace and dignity throughout the years. Between February 1986 and February 1990 Stevenson was administrator of Blaine County Regional Medical Center in Pocatello. Herbert said the Moritz Community Hospital worked hard to hire him back in 1990.

Baldy views prompt appeal of building plan

By Susan Bailey
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Saying his view of Bald Mountain will diminish if his neighbor is allowed to build where the planning and zoning commission gave approval, resident Suresh Shivdasani has appealed to the City Council to reverse the decision.

The planning commission earlier this fall approved a replat to an undeveloped parcel owned by Nick Parker in the Juniper Road area of Twin Creeks, Elkhorn. The replat gives Parker the right to move his building envelope 60 feet uphill from its original location.

Shivdasani said he bought his house many years ago and sited it on the lot based on where zoning ordinances allowed his neighbors to build.

"This changes my views considerably," Shivdasani said.

Represented by attorney Michael Donovan, Shivdasani appeared before the council Thursday to ask for reversal of the planning commission decision.

Councilman Kevin Laird said the matter has been rescheduled for Nov. 6 because attorneys for the appellant and for Parker intend to present to the council new information not heard by planners when they made the original decision.

"We have new exhibits and testimony," Donovan said, "and hope the council seriously considers the matter."

In hearing the preliminary arguments from Shivdasani, Laird noted a conflict between neighbors, as Pierce Milliman of 312 Juniper Road would gain the Bald Mountain views with the recently approved Parker replat, while Shivdasani and other neighbors would not.

Shivdasani built his house at 319 Juniper Road in Elkhorn more than 10 years ago.

Burley man dies in rollover

The Times-News
OKALEY — A 21-year-old Burley man died Thursday in a one-car rollover on Mountain Road west of Okaley, a Cassia County sheriff's report said.

Christian J. Strunk was a passenger in a 1995 Nissan pickup driven by Toby Robinson, 18, of Rupert.

Robinson, also known as Toby Reedy, was transferred to Hancock Regional Medical Center in Pocatello, where he was listed in critical condition in the intensive care unit Friday afternoon.

Also injured was William Eddings, 18, of Mountain Home, listed in stable condition Friday evening at Cassia Regional Medical Center.

The accident occurred at about 8:20 p.m. Thursday.

The pickup, which was traveling westbound, appeared to have left the roadway on a curve, Robinson overcorrected, and the vehicle rolled end over end, landing on its wheels.

Several beer cans were found in the car and on the road, the report said. No alcohol test was performed at the crash scene on Robinson, according to the report.

Robbery Widmer, of Murtaugh, and Sgt. Smith of Okaley, told officers they had spoken with the men in Okaley shortly before the accident. Widmer drove upon the accident minutes after it happened.

Firearms class aims to teach safety

By Penelope Reedy
 Times-News writer

BURLEY — Returned Burley native Denis Jeffs signed up for the Firearms Training Institute because he believes owning handguns is a right he has as Americans.

"When I lived here before," he said, "I never went anywhere without a gun."

His wife LaFawn Jeffs is applying for a concealed weapons permit because she is concerned about personal safety.

"My parents are old, and I take them around, and I want to have something for protection," she said.

Want a permit?
 Thinking about getting a concealed weapons permit? To find out when the next Firearms Training Institute is scheduled, call Deputy Wayne Winder at the Cassia County Sheriff's Department at 678-6510.

In the recent film "Fierce Creatures," when John Cleese's character finishes firing his handgun, he points the gun toward his own head and blows smoke out of the barrel.

"Movies are the worst teachers," Winder said.

The "6 o'clock hold" seen in recent films, where the gun is held sideways, could cause a shell to eject into a shooter's eye.

lethal force. The attacker must have the means, the intent and the opportunity to do a person or their loved ones bodily harm, or a victim cannot claim self-defense.

Nor can a permit holder shoot a criminal as he runs away. The immediate threat is over once a perpetrator runs.

"This is also true in the case of rape," Winder said. "A victim may not shoot a rapist after the act."

The purpose of drawing a firearm is to stop a menacing person's aggressive, life-threatening behavior. People may think that means "winding" a person — aiming at an offender's leg. Not so.

"Unfortunately," Winder said, "the quickest way to stop a person's negative behavior, is a shot that will probably kill them."

Police officers are trained to aim for the chest cavity and the head, as are citizens applying for concealed weapons permits.

Permit holders are not police officers, a mind-set both Winder and Mendenhall stress.

If you are in Albersson's picking up groceries," the manual says, "and armed felons attempt to rob them, you hit the floor with everyone else and stay out of it...until the three-year level one's threatened with death or bodily harm. You cannot start a fire-fight in a crowded supermarket...you could end up in jail or be sued, into-point-of-law."

Even permit holders may not take their guns anywhere they please. Courthouses and detention facilities are off limits. Many businesses and schools forbid firearms on their premises.

Burley 'Big Four' candidates say ad was a big misunderstanding

By Kurt Friedemann

BURLEY — Consolidating candidates with similar minds and agendas can often lend an advantage to those in a political race.

But members of the so-called "Big Four" say they never meant to take over City Hall.

Incumbent Curtis Mendenhall said the only reason the four banded together was to lessen the high cost of running a political campaign. "but we were never running as a group."

Want a permit?

are not running for city office are (trying to control city business."

Vaughan Egan, one of the two backers for the "Big Four," said running a campaign is a big job and the group needed help.

"We wanted to keep the costs down," Egan said. "Four guys can run under the right program for just a little more than one."

He said the problem may have arisen from miscommunication between members of the group.

"They never thought the public would take it like they did," Egan said. "The interpretation the public got was wrong."

"I don't think it helped them other than allowing them to split their expenses," he said.

Manning said that is exactly the plan.

"Most of us shared similar ideas," he said. "But we just wanted to consolidate our advertising expenses."

"There were no hidden agendas," Manning said.

"I think some people thought we were making a power play," he said. "That is not true, we were never planning to run as a group."

The "Big Four" now are on their own again.

"The job is completed," he said. "They've been recognized."

VALLEY IN BRIEF

Hailey council holds meeting
HAILEY — The Hailey City Council will meet at 6 p.m. Monday in the meeting room at Hailey Town Center.

Scheduled public hearings:

- Joel Liederker's appeal of a planning and zoning decision to deny a 7-foot variance from the front-yard setback restrictions at 518 First Ave. N.
- The Hailey Comprehensive Plan amendment requested by Sprenger, Grubb & Associates that would allow commercial development outside the downtown area.
- An annexation application from Tom Richmond and Brian Barsotti for about 12 acres north of Hailey adjacent to east-end-of-Idaho Highway 75 and north of Woodview Drive.
- Proposals for growth restrictions regarding commercial and residential limitations.
- Adoption of the 1997-98 water and sewer user and hook-up rates.

Blaine commissioners will meet

HAILEY — Blaine County commissioners will meet at 8:15 a.m. Monday.

An open public comment session is first on the agenda, followed by a public hearing regarding the Griffin Ranch Subdivision's resubdivision of Lots 1-4 into a 54-lot planned-unit development. Indigent applications, a request for release of easement by Marketron property owners and a jail inspection complete the morning's agenda.

The afternoon session opens at 1:30 p.m. Four public hearings are scheduled: a plat amendment for a 374-acre Broadview Road, a plat amendment application for Gimlin Subdivision at 114 Rail Road, a plat amendment application for Smiley Creek Subdivision at 105 Buckskin and a draft amendment to the Blaine County zoning ordinance to provide for a hearing examiner.

A commissioners' discussion will conclude the meeting.

FBI to get involved in deaths of officer, 2 brothers

BOISE (AP) — The FBI confirmed Friday it will investigate the Sept. 20 shooting which resulted in the deaths of a city police officer and two Pennsylvania brothers.

"This is the case," said Special Agent Mike Dillon in Boise.

"About all I can do is confirm there is a civil rights investigation into the deaths of Mark Stull and the Brodick brothers."

Craig and Doug Brodick, who were from Brush Valley Township regularly, making sure officers are OK, Mullins said. The computer system reminds the dispatcher to check on officers' safety as often as every five minutes, depending upon the nature of the call, Mullins said.

"On a domestic dispute, I'd say I do the first check on the officer within two minutes of their arrival, and then every five minutes after that," Mullins said.

Dispatchers are conscientious about tracking officers, and gathering information on the situation, officers respond to, Tussley said.

Twin Falls police statistics near Pittsburgh, were killed after their car was pulled over for not signaling a lane change. The brothers reportedly refused to cooperate with the officer's requests, and more police were called in.

Seven officers ultimately responded, and six fired their weapons.

"It was the first time a Boise officer has died in the line of duty, but the Brodicks were the sixth and seventh fatal shootings by city police in the last 21 months.

An autopsy by the Ada County coroner indicated Craig Brodick, 30, was shot at least 12 times and possibly up to 25, and Doug Brodick, 27, was hit at least seven times.

"I welcome the review the investigators in Boise, Police Chief Larry Paulson said. "Whatever information they need or if they need to talk to anybody, we'll facilitate that."

Vomiting incident outrages parents in Washington

CUSICK, Wash. (AP) — School district officials Friday were trying to figure out what caused most members of a junior high volleyball team to become nauseous and throw up on a bus that carried them home from a night match.

As many as 15 of the 19

Cusick Junior High School players vomited into two large plastic garbage bags during the 1½-hour trip home from a Thursday night game in Wellpinit, a player said.

"You can imagine how it tastes coming up," said 13-year-old Nikki Bell, who estimated she threw up five times during the trip. "It smelled even worse."

She said there was a strong smell of propane in the bus.

Some parents fear the bus had a faulty exhaust system, exposing the girls to engine exhaust, said Sherry Porter, mother of Nikki, on Friday.

He said he especially wanted to see the council through construction of a new hospital, expected in 2000. He said another goal is completion of an updated comprehensive plan.

Laird said major changes in land use are likely in the future, as Sun Valley Co. owns more than 10 acres of unimproved land that is zoned for recreational use, commercial or multifamily units.

"Still a big issue for us is the comprehensive plan," Laird said. "It's going to force the city and the biggest landowner, Sun Valley Co., to come to grips. We hope what's good for the company would be good for the city and the community."

Part of the master plan, according to General Manager Wally Huffman, is constructing a convention center and hotel on the site of the former hotel adjacent to Sun Valley Lodge. The Sun Valley Gun Club, Penny Mountain and a portion of the fields by the Sun Valley Horsemen Center already are zoned for development.

In addition to planning for development by Sun Valley Co., Laird said, council members must deal with a change in demographics. Once a city of part-time residents, Sun Valley has become home for many people, including families with young children.

"Before it was basically a resort that needed a city to get a liquor license," Laird said. "Now it's a city with all these things that are different needs, like a park. We didn't have children in the past."

Laird said the council needs to plan for a different community, one that is active and growing. O'Shea noted the same need.

She said she was pleased the council likely would remain focused on the future.

"We're working very well together," O'Shea said. "We have different viewpoints, and that's good."

O'Shea is spearheading establishment of fiscal policy for the city. The council Thursday began work with a Twin Falls accounting firm to alter some of its fiscal policies.

"Managing government accountability and responsible to the citizens is where I've really expanded my efforts," she said. The council must plan for budget shortfalls, she said, as well as possible recession.

O'Shea said the council faces a challenge in maintaining the tourist-related economy of a city that is fast becoming more residential.

"We need to think about mitigating impacts, because people are coming here," O'Shea said.

"We are a community, we have diverse interests. This is not about gate-keeping. We need to lead rather than take a close-the-door attitude."

shooting himself in June 1996.

"That little group of 2,500 people would have been in a world of hurt if that guy hadn't killed himself," Darrington said.

Simmons noted that in recent years, some smaller counties have shied away from filing first-degree murder charges because of the expense they face for the trial and long appeals.

"When the counties start making deals based on what a county can afford, we really cause ourselves some problems," Simmons said.

"That's what we want to get away from," Darrington said.

The panel also is looking at creating a state central office to defend people accused of murder and facing a possible death penalty.

The office of state appellate public defender would be under the State Board of Examiners and could represent defendants both at the trial level and through appeals.

Proposals discussed by the panel call for lawyers to be appointed for four-year terms and have at least five years experience.

Filer students involved in extracurricular activities get more time to raise grades

By Nicole Gilbert, Times-News correspondent. FILER - Filer High School's "no F" policy for students in extracurricular activities met opposition from teachers at Wednesday's School Board meeting. As the rule originally stood, students were required to pass five out of seven classes every nine weeks or each quarter. This was accordance with rules set up by the Idaho High School Activity Association. But teachers don't believe nine weeks give students enough time to improve their grades, Principal Joe Hendrickson said. For example, freshmen making the transition to high school often experience a drop in grades, he said, and the first quarter's report card can be a "wake-up call" that something needs to change. Teachers argued that punishing students before giving them a chance to improve only aggravates their problems. The nine-week policy also frustrated coaches, Hendrickson said, because sports seasons and quarters are not coordinated. Coaches organize their teams before quarterly grades come out and often are forced to rearrange teams mid-season due to bad grades. The board approved a modified graded policy, said Superintendent Bill Feusabers, which reads: The grades of all students participating in extracurricular school activities will be reviewed each semester. Students taking five or six classes must pass all of them. Students taking seven classes must pass six, and students with eight classes must pass seven. In addition, students who do not appear to be performing at their potential - indicated by a sudden drop in grades or change in behavior - will meet with their coaches, parents and teachers to deal with the problem. The students then will be evaluated twice monthly to track their progress.

Teachers and board members alike hope the new policy will encourage parents to become more involved in their children's academic progress. In their Other School Board business, Filer High School government classes are surveying the district's trustee zones. Feusabers said the area has not been rezoned in 25 years. The board is asking for further verification of the area north of Filer to the Snake River, and south of the city to the Nevada border. Did dinosaurs sit on eggs?

Q. Do your fingernails ever stop growing while you're alive?
A. Almost sometimes, when you get severely sick. Your house is worth what it's worth plus the price of your car, if it has an attached garage with automatic doors. Or so contend some real estate experts. Because, they say, car thieves cruise with shopping lists, spot listed makes in driveways and on the street, then come back after hours. A car behind a closed garage door does not make their list.

Q. How many liters can a female house mouse have in a year?
A. Up to 18.

Men who weigh more than they think they should, or so say the researchers. This is contrary to the well-known corollary finding: Women who weigh less than they think they should do not weigh as much about it as women who weigh more than they think they should.

Q. Ever see a bald head?
A. Have indeed. Bald also means white. Ergo "bald eagle," which has feathers aplenty atop its head.

Some people say you have the right to kill, if necessary, to defend your house. Others say you don't. The item here is not which conviction is correct. It's simply that believers on either side cannot grasp why those on the other side think the way they do.

Those who restore antiques say it's not a legitimate restoration unless at least 20 percent of the original is retained in the finished piece.

Q. Did dinosaurs sit on their eggs?
A. Not on purpose. Theorists think they covered those eggs with rotting vegetation to generate heat.

• The College of Southern Idaho Refugee Center assists refugee families and individuals in transition. The center is interest and encourage individual curiosity.

Martha Bates operates the Bo-Peep Day Care and Preschool in Twin Falls. She has been in business for 30 years. She says one of the joys of the day is seeing the children progress. One of the highlights is the annual St. Jude's Triko-A-Thon, where the children raise money for St. Jude's Research Center. They learn safety rules of riding a trike or bike and also learn compassion for other children that are less fortunate. She said she has had the privilege of serving second-generation children and that they care is challenging but very rewarding.

Scholarships awarded

The University of Idaho has awarded more than $37 million in scholarships to more than 3,000 students attending the university for the 1997-98 year. Magic Valley area recipients include the following:

Janet K. Kaurst of Albion; Benjamin J. Nelson of Bellevue; Brandon J. Medrano and Eric R. Swenson, both of Bruneau; Angella N. Eckert, Karen M. Eckert, Ryan A. Eckert, Jeffrey L. James, DuWayne L. FOCUS ON PEOPLE

Providers recognized

The Child Resource Center in Twin Falls has recognized three child care providers who have been in business for more than 20 years.

Mary Robinson operates the Land of Oz child care center in Twin Falls. She has 23 years of experience and a child development associate degree. She said one of the most rewarding experiences for her was when a group of little girls were role-playing and wanted to be "Mary" and have a nursery in their home when they grew up. But the most gratifying reward is in following their achievements and accomplishments throughout the years and knowing you played a part in their development.

Barbara Larsen operates the Mother Goose Day and Preschool in Wendell. She has been in business for 25 years. During a child development class as a sophomore in college, Larsen studied a film that depicted a nursery school environment and it clicked - "this is what I would like to do someday." She says God has given her the talent of bonding with a child, touching his fragile life and becoming a friend to him and his family. She enjoys teaching topics that peak their

CSI volleyball too hot to handle

By Karen Baumert
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho volleyball team was just too big, too powerful, too focused — too much — for Salt Lake Friday in a Region 18 clash.

The Golden Eagles downed the Bruins 15-7, 15-9, 15-7 to move to 4-6-1 on the season.

"Salt Lake played good," said CSI coach Ben Stroud. "I thought they sided anything." Earlier this year, the Bruins took CSI to five games; Friday, a more emotional Golden Eagles squad mixed up their offense and created new meaning to the term "down ball."

"We didn't have that collapse," that has plagued the Golden Eagles all season, Stroud said. "That's the best thing to happen to us all year."

And the few times Salt Lake looked to challenge, the Bruins knocked a serve into the net.

On the night, Salt Lake committed 11 service errors.

Everyone knows they have to serve tough to beat us, so for an ace, so they have a lot of service errors," Stroud said. "If I was playing us that's how I would do it."

But Salt Lake coach Tom Peterson said his team needed to do more than just serve tough to beat the Golden Eagles.

"They are playing very well," Peterson said.

Mike Nicholson is wrapped up by Capital's Tyler Bennett (33), Trebor Struza (10); and Jeremy Mizayo (70) in the second quarter of the Bruins' 28-6 loss Friday.

Twin Falls Bruins fall to Capital, 28-6

By John Derr
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The third-ranked Bruins knew that Friday's game against the No. 4 Eagles would be won or lost in the trenches.

In the end, it was the punishing ground game of Capital and two costly turnovers in the second quarter that gave the Eagles a 28-6 victory over Twin Falls in an A-1 football battle Friday night.

"They controlled the line of scrimmage and got after us pretty good," said Twin Falls coach Mark Schaal.

The Bruins fell to 5-2 on the season and 2-2 in league action. They face a must-win situation in two weeks against the Borah Lions if they hope to host a playoff game. Capital improves to 3-1 in league and 6-2 overall.

Twin Falls was unable to get anything going offensively in the first half, ending with just 48 total yards while the Eagles collected 167 yards — 79 of those from their leading rusher, fullback Brad Lau.

The first quarter was a defensive struggle, with both teams punting three times.

The second quarter proved to be the key to the game. Capital fumbled at its own 14-yard-line and the Bruins' Pat Hobbs recovered it to give the Bruins an excellent chance to score. On 4th-and-9, Capital intercepted the ball and returned it to the Bruins' 44-yard-line.

Eagle quarterback Scott Freeman hit tight end Jason Gordon for 21 yards then Lau took it in from the five-two plays later.

Twin Falls was 3-and-out on their next possession and the Eagles responded with a 57-yard eight-play drive. Aaron McGee caught a 13-yard pass from Freeman for the touchdown.

With less than a minute to go in the half, the Bruins tried to run out the clock, but Capital called a time-out and forced Twin Falls to throw for a first down.

The pass was picked off and returned to the 4-yard-line. Lau took it in from the 1 and the extra point gave Capital a 21-0 halftime lead.

The Bruins came out of the locker room inspired. Bruin quarterback Ryan Lund, who had been held to a just-1-of-8 passing in the first half, hit a pair of passes and Fernando Salinas rushed for 18 yards as Twin Falls marched the ball down the field.

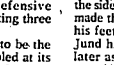

The drive was stopped on a fumble, but restarted one play later when Jason Heatwole recovered an Eagle fumble.

Just hit Beau Barry steaking down the sideline and the senior wide receiver made the acrobatic catch while keeping his feet in bounds for a 26-yard gain. Lund hit Chris Westburg seven plays later as Twin Falls finally got on the scoreboard.

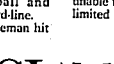

The Bruin defense continued to shut down the Eagles, but the offense was unable to move the ball. Twin Falls was limited to just three first downs for the RUPERT — Faces were painted, the queen and king were crowned and the band was booming, so it only seemed fair that Minico's football team give the Homecoming crowd a 21-14 victory over Rigby to take home.

Faced with a one-point deficit late in the fourth quarter, Minico's offensive plan was to use the sideline, but quarterback Kris Haynes connected with Donovan Hartley who broke two tackles downfield for a 65-yard game-winning touchdown pass on the first play of the drive.

The teal tells it all: New look to '97 World Series

The Associated Press

MIAMI — And so, in this land where baseball always came for its spring ritual of renewal, the game has returned this fall to decide a champion.

More than seven months after the Florida Marlins and Cleveland Indians met on a meaningless March afternoon in the Sunshine State, they're back to play for real. Suffice to say the World Series has never looked so rounded this way before.

Samba bands parading outside Pro Player Stadium, Latin treats cooking inside at the concession stands, a sultry, South Florida evening instead of October chill, with temperatures in the 80s at the start for Game 1 on Saturday night.

Series preview — B9

A record crowd of 65,000 fans dressed in teal, the color the Marlins brought to the major league landscape. Plus a team that did not even exist five years ago.

"It's the Indians against the Marlins, who would have ever thought that?" Cleveland outfielder David Justice said Friday.

"We were eating today down at South Beach and just to see the people here in Florida so excited about the Marlins," he said. "I think this Series already is great and we haven't even started yet."

Orel Hershiser, a postseason ace at 39, starts the opener for the Indians, trying to win their first World Series championship since 1948. Livian

Cleveland infielder pitcher Jose Mesa and his son Jose J. Jog past the Florida Marlins logo during a workout at Miami's Pro Player Stadium Friday. The Indians face the Florida Marlins in Game 1 of the World Series today.

Carey edges Rockland

CAREY - The Panthers came back from a two-week hiatus Friday afternoon and edged the Rockland Bulldogs, 20-18 in a battle of Sawtooth Conference underdogs.

Carey (7-0) rushed for 302 yards in his first game since Oct. 4, and now appears to be in the driver's seat for homefield advantage in the playoffs.

The Panthers finish the season with games at Dietrich and at Camas County. The Musters beat North Gem in Bancroft Friday afternoon and still have only one conference loss, but have to get past Shoshone next week before setting their sites on Carey.

Dusty Patterson opened the scoring for the Panthers on their first possession of the game after Rockland fumbled away the opening kickoff. Michael Ash passed for a touchdown and ran for another as the Bulldogs (6-1) took a 12-0 lead at the 11:15 mark.

Camas County Freshman Jonathon Rivera tied the game in the third quarter with a nine-yard run. The Panther defense stopped Rockland on 4th-and-1 from Carey's 1-yard line early in the fourth quarter.

Greg Edwards' interception then set up Dagny Simpson's seven-yard score. That proved to be the game-winner, as the Rockland's Scott Fillmore recovered a Carey fumble with 1:51 remaining and returned it 31 yards for a touchdown, but the Bulldogs' conversion failed.

Camas County 46, North Gem 20

BANCROFT - Camas County upended defending state champion North Gem 46-20 in "one of the biggest wins for Camas County in years," said Musher coach Randy Jewitt.

"The North Gem defense could not shut down the Musher running game, as the underdog Camas team rushed for a combined total of more than 500 yards, receiving big yardage from Nick Smith (251), quarterback Jamon Frostenson (150) and Dusty Hibbard (67).

The offensive yards were scored behind the blocking efforts of an effective line led by Rufus Lockwood, Anthony Niehah and Luke Meyers. Hibbard came out of the backfield to help.

The victory was sweet revenge for the visiting Musters, who were trampled by North Gem last year. "We are starting to peak at the right time," said Jewitt. "We have improved so much in the last two weeks."

Smith, Meyers and Frostenson led the Camas defense, holding North Gem to 20 points. Frostenson snagged two interceptions.

"North Gem has a good team, but we caught them off guard," said Jewitt. "Frostenson ran the option to perfection."

The Camas County, now 6-1, made a huge step toward a playoff game with Friday's win. The team travels to Shoshone next Friday.

Richfield 54, Sho-Ban 8

RICHFIELD - Levi Long's debut as starting quarterback for the Tigers resulted in Richfield's first victory of the season, a 54-8 rout of Sho-Ban on Friday night.

The Chiefs' lone score came on a failed punt attempt, but the rest of the day belonged to Richfield. Long, the first quarterback of the season at Richfield, completed 9 of 12 passes for 207 yards, three touchdowns and an interception, and also rushed for a touchdown.

Long threw two first-quarter scoring passes to Isaac Jones and completed a 65-yard score to George Turgoose before halftime. Jerry Ward added two rushing touchdowns, and Derrick Ellis and Sam Riley also scored.

Hagerman 21, Oakley 6

OAKLEY - Curt Osborne scored on two first-half runs to give up-ranked Hagerman all the points it needed in a 21-6 win over Oakley.

"I thought in the first half we were a little bit intimidated, then our kids settled down and we played with them," said Oakley coach Larry Findley, who praised the play of linebacker Blake Matthews, running back Bryce Cranney and quarterback Brian Findley.

By holding the top team in the state to four touchdowns, Findley touted Friday's game as the "best I've seen our defense play in my two years here."

"This is what we've been trying to get them to do," Findley added. "Penetrate and get after people. I don't like the end result but I sure like the effort."

Buhl 33, Wood River 6

HALLIE - The Indians opened their conference schedule with a win and the Wolverines closed theirs at 0-2 as Buhl toppled Wood River 33-6 Friday night.

The Indians scored 20 points in the second quarter after being presented with great field position.

"You just can't give the ball to a good team on your own 20," said Wolverine coach Dave Zamora.

"Field position was a key during the night and coach Krumm's guys took advantage of that."

Buhl scored touchdowns on pass plays from Luke Chivers to Sean Buhl, Courtney Mabey and John McCauley. The Indians rushed for one touchdown and returned an interception for another.

Glenns Ferry 53, Filer 12

GLENN'S FERRY - The Pilots wrapped up another Canyon Conference title Friday night, gaining 463 rushing yards in a 53-12 win over Filer.

Glenns Ferry was two yards shy of three 100-yard rushing performances on the evening - Jared Allen (110 yards, 2 TDs), Travis Hampton (103 yards) and Alex Francis (98 yards, 2 TDs).

"Defensively, we played super," said Pilot coach Bill Brock. "Our assistant coaches did a great job getting the kids ready and our kids did a great job executing the game plan."

Jerome 29, Burley 21

BURLEY - The Tigers capitalized on their mistakes, holding off Jerome 29-21 in high school football Friday night.

"Our team played a hard game," said assistant coach Steve Satake. "They came up short by making costly mistakes that Jerome took advantage of. Jerome played a great ball game."

Receiver Garrett Pence led the Bobcat offense with two touchdowns. Ty Jones also had key catches.

Burley falls to 1-6, and hosts Mountain Home (ranked No. 2 in the conference) next Friday at 7 p.m.

"It is a critical game for us to step up and win," said Satake.

Wendell 56, Kimberly 35

KIMBERLY - Wendell's fourth-quarter dominance overpowered Kimberly in a Canyon Conference high school football game Friday night.

"We gave up the big play and weren't able to come back from it," said Kimberly coach Kirby Bright, whose team must beat Filer next week to have any chance at post-season play.

The two teams were tied heading into the fourth quarter, but 21 unanswered Trojan points sealed the Bulldogs' fate.

Still, Brights said Ron McClintock had a big night carrying the ball and Scott Plew did a good job at the quarterback position.

Kimberly drops to 4-3 on the season. Wendell improves to 5-2.

Local pro knocked out in 2nd round

BOISE - Local golf pro Mike Hamblin of Twin Falls fell in the semifinals of the 32-player Rocky Mountain PGA Snake River Chapter Match Play Championship at Boise Ranch Golf Course Thursday.

Hamblin fell 3-and-2 to his second sectional champion, Tad Holloway of Boise. In the other semifinal, this year's club champion John Schoonover of Boise defeated defending champion Jeff Thomson 2-and-1.

Schoonover then beat Holloway in the 36-hole final Friday, 5-and-4, setting a course-record 6-under-par 63 during the first 18 holes.

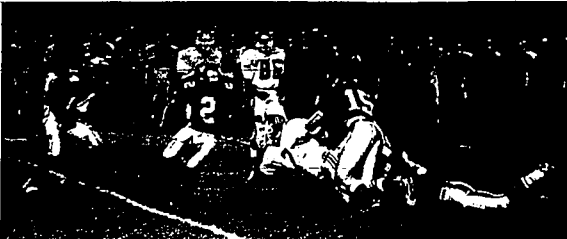

BOISE - Registration for Junior Jazz Basketball for boys in grades 7-8 will continue through Monday at the Racqueteers Health and Fitness Club, 1150 E. 16th St.

Draft night, to sort players into teams, will be at 6:30 p.m. on October 27. Adult volunteer coaches are needed.

Games begin Nov. 3 and end Dec. 17. Cost is $20 for members and $25 for non-members and includes a jersey.

Minico senior tailback Chad Field got the offensive momentum rolling, picking up 42 yards on his first two carries. The Spartans (4-3) managed to push the ball into scoring territory on its first possession but their 28-yard field goal attempt went wide.

The Trojans took over on their 20-yard line and Minico gave up three plays before defensive lineman Josh Mani recovered a fumble at the Trojan 45. Minico wasn't able to turn it into a score, but the Spartan defense held Rigby on its next drive on fourth and got the pigskin back on its own 41.

With good field position, Minico took advantage and drove the ball 48 yards before Spartan quarterback Kris Haynes took it into the end zone for his first of two touchdowns on the night.

Rigby's total offense in the first half consisted of quarterback Jed Erickson and running back Lee Poston, who accounted for 34 yards passing and 73 yards rushing, respectively.

After struggling against Minico's defense and being called for two penalties - including a holding call that brought back a 20-yard gain by Poston - Erickson finally sparked his offense by running for his 30 yards to Minico's 16-yard line.

Poston scored from one yard out with just over two minutes in the half.

Another Haynes touchdown opened the final quarter when he hopped over the pile from the 1-yard line. Rigby refused to go down quietly and regained the lead when Ish Womack ran for 34 yards to touchdown.

It wasn't enough after Harley's big score and the two-point conversion by Jesse Peralez.

Peterson said. "We made too many errors to stay with someone playing that well. CSI doesn't do anything spectacular, they are just big and experienced."

By spectacular, he said he meant the Golden Eagles don't do a bunch of fancy things, they are just "big, good and are going to beat you."

While the CSI block that harassed the Eagles through the season was a little off, the passing was on.

"It's nice to see us making progress with serve receive," Staud said. "We didn't do a good job with the block but we still blocked a bunch of balls. We didn't have to block really well. We're starting to turn the corner a little bit."

While that's good news for CSI, it's bad news for the rest of the region.

World Series opens today

Leyland, Bonilla finally make it to Series—together

MIAMI (AP) — The Florida Marlins' new third baseman walked into the clubhouse with his 3-year-old son, crying as he interrupted reporters trying to interview another player.

"I'll get away," Bobby Bonilla shouted between profanities. "There's a new sheriff in town."

This was last February, even before the first spring training game. Reporters trembled. Jim Leyland chuckled.

"The Marlins' new manager knew that he and the new sheriff would bring out the best in each other. It was that way in Pittsburgh; it turned out that way in Miami."

Now they're in the World Series against the Cleveland

Indians. For Leyland, Bonilla and the Marlins, it's a

"The World Series," Bonilla said, wonder in his voice. "I can't believe I'm even saying those words."

This season's success has all but erased Bonilla's reputation as a malcontent. He became a positive force in the clubhouse and on the field, playing through pain and delivering clutch hits. He unified a team of newly assembled millionaires and, to his shock, even received the Florida media's annual "Good Guy" award.

In the Marlins' pennant-clinching 7-4 victory Tuesday at Atlanta, Bonilla limped off the field in the eighth inning with three RBIs and a sore hamstring, his work done. Seven outs later, in the swirl of celebration, Bonilla and Leyland shared a long hug near home plate.

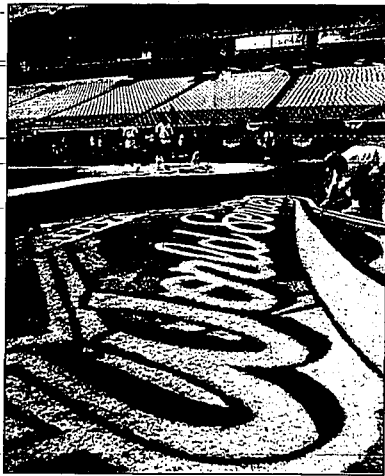

"I love you," Leyland told him. "We're going to the World Series."

Bonilla began to cry. "It was more of a relief hug than a joyous hug," he said.

Bonilla, 34, made it to the World Series in his 12th season, with his fifth team. For Leyland, 52, the wait was even longer: 33 years in professional baseball, including 12 as a major-league manager.

In deference to his other players, Leyland dislikes talking about his special bond with Bonilla. It dates back to 1986, when a rookie switch-hitter and rookie manager were united in Pittsburgh.

"It's a thrill for Bobby and me to get to the World Series together," Leyland said. "But it's really no more of a thrill than it is for any other guy on the club."

Still, Leyland and Bonilla are linked because of history. In 1990, led by Bonilla and Barry Bonds, the Pirates began a three-year reign as NL East champions. Twice they finished one win shy of the World Series, and once they came within an out.

Following the 1991 season, Bonilla opted for free agency and began a tumultuous 3 1/2 years with the New York Mets. He was then traded to the Baltimore Orioles, where he reached the American League championship series last year but feuded with manager Davey Johnson.

Leyland, frustrated by budget cuts and four years of losing in Pittsburgh, joined the Marlins last October. Bonilla, once again a free agent, arrived a month later, eager to be reunited with his former manager.

Indian fans use notions to 'help' team win

CLEVELAND (AP) — The real reason the Cleveland Indians are in Game 1 of the World Series tonight against the Florida Marlins has nothing to do with clutch hitting, defense or solid relief pitching.

Cleveland's superstitious fans know the truth: The Indians' postseason run is all about hiked-up red socks, Jim Thome's batting helmets and bobble head dolls.

Each time their heroes take the field, Cleveland fans go through their own little rituals to "help" the Indians win.

Stieglitz may scoff, but believers ask how else, underdog Cleveland could have knocked out the New York Yankees and Baltimore Orioles to face the Marlins.

"Since we started in the playoffs, I wear the same outfit for every game," said Janine Petersen, who collapsed on the floor weeping when the Indians beat the Orioles for the AL pennant.

"I wear my high-top sneakers, white socks, jean shorts and an embroidered Indians shirt. I never add anything — no hat, no bandana, no earrings."

Unlike some Indians fans, Petersen risks washing her outfit (and the luck it supposedly carries) between games.

"Getting it washed is OK," she said. "Just so long as I put it back on for the next game."

Jason Howe, a 20-year-old fan of Thome, wouldn't be caught dead watching a Cleveland game unless he was Thomed out.

"I've got all Jim Thome stuff. The Jim Thome red socks, the Jim Thome batting helmet and my Jim Thome "Thominator" T-shirt," he said. "Every time I wear it, they win. You've got to stick with what works."

Thome's socks are Cleveland's most visible talisman this year.

On Aug. 27 — Thome's 27th birthday — the rest of the Indians paid tribute to the first baseman by wearing their socks pulled up as Thome does. Cleveland scored 10 runs in an inning, beating the Anaheim Angels 10-4.

The Indians have been wearing their socks pulled up ever since, and the trend has spread to fans.

Denise Allen was in a mall last weekend during Game 3 of the AL championship series when she started to believe in the power of the socks.

On the spur of the moment, she bought a pair at the Indians team store. Marquis Grissom stole home to give Cleveland a 2-1 win in 12 innings last October.

"Now I've got them on every time we play," she said.

There's just one problem with such superstitions, said Cornell University psychology professor Thomas Gilovich: They don't work.

"People draw false correlations between real events and their own actions."

But that probably won't stop Erik Ramhoeller of Huron from lining up his three Indians bobble head dolls in front of the TV set for every World Series game, or David Mina from holding his own David Mina from Tribe to his own tradition during hitting games.

"My superstition is I don't break the TV," said Mina, a 20-year-old from Warren. "Sometimes I almost feel like I have to — but that would be bad luck."

Marlins for sale while Miami mayor woos team downtown

MIAMI (AP) — First, Wayne Huizenga spent nearly $100 million on free agents to build the Florida Marlins into a World Series contender.

Then Huizenga said he's losing millions and would sell his 5-year-old franchise.

Now that the Marlins are in the series, what will Huizenga do if they win? He wasn't saying Friday.

"We're not going to worry about it until the series is over," he said.

A source close to Huizenga said the Marlins owner hasn't changed his mind about selling, despite the team's postseason success and enthusiastic fan response.

"Don't read anything into that. There's been no change," said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Attendance slipped 43 percent from the debut season in 1993 to just 21,565 per game last year. It increased this year to nearly 30,000, but Huizenga said that's not enough to support a payroll approaching $50 million.

So far, no one has made an offer Huizenga deems legitimate. Your average Marlins fan doesn't have the $125 million to $150 million the team is purportedly worth.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Swiss stunner: Hingis loses at home

ZURICH, Switzerland — Playing before startled home fans, a weary Martina Hingis was beaten by Lisa Raymond, 4-6, 6-2, 7-5 in the European Indoor Championships on Friday, only the fourth loss this year for the world's No. 1 player.

Hingis, who has won 11 titles this year including three Grand Slams, seemed to regard fatigue for her performance, which left her record for 1997 at 70-4.

Earlier, Lindsay Davenport routed Venus Williams to advance to the semifinals. The all-American match was over quickly, with Davenport beating the 17-year-old 6-0, 6-4.

Raymond will play her semifinal against France's Nathalie Tauziat. No. 2 seed Justine Hengeman defeated fellow Czech qualifier Sandra Kleinova 6-2, 7-6 (7-1) to advance to the semis, where she will meet Davenport for the first time since the American beat her in the U.S. Open quarters.

Stewart still leading at Disney Classic

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. — Payne Stewart walked away from Lake Buena Vista Friday with a 5-under-par 67 and the second-round lead of the Disney Classic.

Stewart had a two-day total of 131, and a two-stroke lead over Len Mattiace and Andrew Magee.

Brad Bryant, the 1995 Disney winner, was in a group at 10-under 134 that also included Phil Blackmar, Bill Glasson, Joe Durant and John Cook.

The oval will be made after today, giving the players and their three amateur partners a round over each of the three courses used in the tournament, which is sponsored by Oldsmobile.

The easiest of the three is Lake Buena Vista, where the average score over the past 13 years is 69.7.

Tougher rules could shut U.S. drug labs

NEW YORK — The two main drug labs in American sports face shutdown next year over still new rules set by international Olympic officials who have discredited the very machine the labs say is needed to meet the stricter standards.

The labs, in Indianapolis and Los Angeles, will have their licenses from the International Olympic Committee suspended March 1 unless they meet tighter limits for detecting steroids.

The only way to pass, the leaders of both labs say, is through use of an expensive machine that neither can afford — and that the IOC has indicated it doesn't want.

U.S. nears Dunhill Cup semifinals

S.T. ANDREWS, Scotland — The United States swept past Japan 3-0 on Friday to move one victory away from the final-four at the Dunhill Cup and Zimbabwe lost the first match of its crucial showdown with New Zealand even before it was played.

The U.S. team got steady efforts from Mark O'Meara, Justin Leonard and Brad Faxon in its easy win over Japan, and will advance to the semifinals from Group 1 with a victory over England today.

The winner of the showdown between Zimbabwe and New Zealand, both undefeated, will win Group 4 and advance. Nick Price, who withdrew Friday, because of a muscle-pull in his chest, has already forfeited his match to Frank Niekirk.

Sweden can win Group 2 with a victory over Australia and, in perhaps the best match of the day, Scotland and South Africa — both undefeated — play to see who will represent Group 3 in Sunday's semifinals.

Cain Montgomery takes on Ernie Els in what could be the key match in that contest.

Summerhays, Snead share first-round lead

KAANAPALI, Hawaii — Bruce Summerhays and J.C. Snead shot 7-under-par 64s on Friday to share the first-round lead in the Kaanapali Classic.

Summerhays had six birdies on the back nine over Kaanapali's North Course. Snead birdied seven of the first 12 holes.

Summerhays made seven birdie puts of 12 feet or less, including a 1-foot putt on the 18th, the second-most difficult hole on the Senior PGA Tour last year. He added a 35-footer on the 12th, after three-putting the previous green for his only bogey.

Snead is 31st on the money list with two events remaining before the Senior Tour Championship. The top 31 qualify for that event. He three-putted the 14th, for his only bogey Thursday. His round included just 27 putts.

4 share lead in LPGA World Championship

SEOUL, South Korea — Chris Johnson, Juli Inkster, Helen Alfredsson of Sweden and Australian Karrie Webb shared the lead midway through the LPGA Samsung World Championship of Women's Golf after a windswept Friday at Lakeside Country Club.

All the wind whipping shots around the 635-yard par-72 layout, no one in the elite field of 16 women was able to shoot in the 60s.

Inkster and Webb got off to shaky starts. Webb had four bogeys on the first five holes but settled down to shoot a 74 after a bogey and Inkster made two bogeys on the first five holes and also managed a 74 and a share of the lead.

Ivanisevic advances, Bruguera upset

OSTRAVA, Czech Republic — Croatia's ATP Ivanisevic beat Bosnia's fifth seed of the Czech Republic in straight sets Friday to advance to the semifinals of the $975,000 Goran Ivanisevic tennis tournament.

The third-seeded Croatian won 7-6 (7-4), 6-2 in just 57 minutes, completely dominating Ujirik. He next will play Slovakia's Karol Kucera, who ousted Jiri Novak of the Czech republic 6-4, 6-2.

In an upset Friday, Sweden's Magnus Norman defeated the tournament's second seed, Sergi Bruguera of Spain, 6-7 (6-7), 7-5 and will next face Thomas Muster. The Austrian overpowered Diego Nargiso of Italy 7-6 (7-4), 6-1 for a place in the semifinals.

Boris Becker reaches Marlboro semifinals

HONG KONG — Boris Becker of Germany defeated American Jonathan Stark 4-6, 6-4, 6-3 Friday to advance to the semifinals of the $725,000 Marlboro Tennis Championships.

Becker, ranked 22nd in the world, struggled to master Stark's serve early in the match, but then turned on the power to record his second win in group play.

Following his three-set victory over Italian Renzo Furlan on Wednesday, Becker emerged at the top of the Gold Group and will meet Zimbabwe's Byron Black in the semifinals.

Australian Scott Draper set up a semifinal encounter against French Open champion Gustavo Kuerten of Brazil after winning the Red Group. Draper defeated American Vincent Spadla 6-1, 6-3 on Friday.

Santoro wins and moves into semifinals

LYON, France — Fabrice Santoro won 11 consecutive games in routing fourth-seeded Felix Mantilla 6-1, 6-1 Friday in the quarterfinals at the Lyon Grand Prix tennis tournament.

Mantilla won the initial game before Santoro swept through the next six to make the first set. Then he raced to a 5-0 lead in the second set before Mantilla got on the scoreboard again.

In another quarterfinal, Tommy Haas of Germany upset fifth-seeded Thomas Enqvist of Sweden 6-3, 6-3 to reach his second semifinal of the year.

Broncos, Raiders in different directions

The Associated Press

The Denver Broncos will be trying to do something they never have done since the franchise's inception in 1960 - win their first seven games.

Sunday's game at the Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum will bring together the Broncos (6-0), the NFL's only undefeated team and the AFC West leader, against their long-time rivals, the Raiders (2-4), who are mired in the division.

The Broncos have won all four games against the Raiders since Mike Shanahan took over as coach before the 1995 season. Shanahan coached the Raiders to an 8-12 record before getting fired midway through the 1995 season.

But the last three games have been decided by a total of nine points, including last season's 22-21 Denver victory at Oakland, and that leads Shanahan to be cautious, despite his team's perfect start.

"This team is by no means overconfident," he said. "They feel good about what they've done, but they know how competitive and how tough it is to win. Everyone's complimenting the heck out of us. As long as you don't swallow it, you're all right."

The six victories in the season's first six games matches the Broncos' club record for the start of a season set in 1977 when they finished 12-2 and went to the Super Bowl, before losing to the Dallas Cowboys 27-10.

The overall club record for con-at St. Louis, Washington at Tennessee, Detroit at the New York Giants, Miami at Baltimore, and Pittsburgh at Cincinnati.

Buffalo is at Indianapolis Monday night, and Chicago, Green Bay, Minnesota and Tampa Bay are off.

The weekend began Thursday night with Kansas City beating San Diego 31-3.

In its six games, Denver has shown a balanced attack, led by Terrell Davis and John Elway. The Broncos have outscored their opponents 156-72.

Davis is the AFC's top running back with 776 yards and six touchdowns, and already has five 100-yard games. Elway, who needs 678 yards passing to match Fran Tarkenton (47,003) in second place on the NFL career list, is third in the AFC this season completing 96 of 168 passes for 1,291 yards with 12 touchdowns and five interceptions.

Elway also needs 507 yards of total offense to join Dan Marino and Tarkenton as the only players with 50,000 yards overall.

"To sit here and get overexcited about what we've done so far, it would be a little too early for that," Davis said, recalling last season's stunning first-round playoff loss to the Jacksonville Jaguars 30-27.

Oakland poses a big threat offensively, with the NFL's best passing attack at 269 yards per game. Jeff George leads the AFC in passing and yardage, with 114-of-208 for 1,743 yards, and is second in the conference with 14 TD passes.

Tim Brown leads the AFC with 40 receptions and 609 yards receiving. In his last 11 games against the Broncos, Brown has 67 catches for 990 yards and eight TDs.

But Oakland is second-worst in the NFL on defense, allowing 381 yards per game.

The 49ers (5-1) will take a five-game winning streak against the Falcons, who posted their first victory of the season last week after five losses.

In the absence of injured All-Pro Jerry Rice, the 49ers have learned to spread the ball around to more receivers, and the running backs have taken a more prominent role in the West Coast offense, rushing for 375 yards in the past two games.

Unbeaten Cougars eye home field advantage

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) - Here's some bad news for the rest of the Pac-10: Longtime rival Washington State is moving into the more hospitable portion of its schedule.

After going 9-0 and winning three road games, the No. 13 Cougars will play four of their final six in Pullman. That begins with today's 2-p.m. homecoming game against California (2-3, 0-2).

"This is like a second season for us," WSU coach Mike Price said. "We're going into the second season finer and better-tuned than the first half of the season."

The Bears have not won in Pullman since 1979 and are last in the Pac-10. This is California's 1,000th football game since 1882. Their record is 545-403-51, but they are backing into the milestone, having lost games number 997, 998 and 999.

"I think the attitude of the team is upbeat," first-year coach Tom Holmoe said. "They know they have the potential to play better if we can eliminate mistakes and big plays."

"This is a game that I know we have a chance to win," Holmoe said.

The Bears have scored more than 30 points three times, and are third in the Pac-10 in total offense, averaging 425 yards per game.

Junior quarterback Justin Veddler is averaging 272 passing yards a game and has thrown nine touchdowns with six interceptions. His primary target is Bobby Shaw, who has caught 39 passes for 641 yards and seven touchdowns. The Cougars counter with Ryan Leaf, who is averaging 310 yards per game with 14 touchdowns and six interceptions.

Washington State running back Michael Blackwell has a career-high 214 yards on 25 carries against the Bears last year. This season he's averaging 106 yards per game.

"He is one of the better running backs in the conference," Holmoe said.

Even though the Cougars are undefeated and first in the Pac-10 at 3-0, WSU defensive tackle Leon Bender has first-hand knowledge that there is no guarantee of success.

The Bears were 5-0 last year when they went to Pullman and lost 21-18 in the spot. They lost five of their remaining six games to finish 6-6.

"People are not going to roll over and die because we're undefeated," Bender said. "They're going to come in pumping on all cylinders."

This is the 61st meeting between the two schools. While Cal leads the series 35-20-5, Washington State is 10-4-1 since 1959.

Washington State defensive tackle Gary Holmes will not start on Saturday because of a chronic back injury that grew worse during a long car trip last weekend. Price said, "Rob Stier will start in his place, although Holmes is expected to see some action, Price said.

Florida at Auburn: Whole new game

The Associated Press

The circumstances sure have changed surrounding today's game between No. 6 Auburn and No. 7 Florida.

Florida, no longer unbeaten, Auburn's claiming a national title and both teams are courting on freshmen.

What looked like a premier matchup two weeks ago took an unexpected spin when LSU handed the Gators their first Southeastern Conference loss in six games.

New Auburn (6-0, 3-0 SEC) has a chance to give Florida (5-1, 3-1) consecutive losses for the first time since 1992, effectively ending the Gators' hopes of winning a record-tying fifth straight SEC East title.

"We know to win the SEC East we've got to beat Auburn," wide receiver Jacques Green said. "We lose another game, we'll be out of the SEC East."

The loss at LSU left the Gators tied with Tennessee atop the SEC East. Florida already has beaten the Volunteers, so winning its remaining SEC games would put the Gators in the conference title game.

"If winning the East Division and getting to the championship game is extremely important to our players, we know now that we've got to play all out and play smart every game," coach Steve Spurrier said. "I don't think we knew that in the past."

For Auburn, the game put the Tigers in the thick of the national championship hunt and in control in the SEC West, where they lead LSU by one game.

"I felt that before the season that to have a chance against Florida, we would have to be

No. 2 Nebraska, No. 21 Georgia Tech at No. 3 Florida State, No. 4 North Carolina at North Carolina State, No. 15 Iowa at No. 5 Michigan, Mississippi at No. 8 LSU, No. 9 Tennessee vs. Alabama at Birmingham, and No. 10 Washington at Arizona.

Also, Indiana at No. 11 Ohio State, No. 12 Michigan State at Northwestern, California at No. 13 Washington State, No. 14 Texas A&M at No. 20 Kansas State, Oregon State at No. 17 UCLA, Fresno State at No. 18 Air Force, No. 19 Georgia at Vanderbilt, No. 21 Wisconsin at Purdue, and Arizona State at No. 23 Stanford.

No. 16 Oklahoma State, No. 22 Virginia Tech and No. 23 West Virginia have the weekend off.

Florida is placing its confidence in the hands of quarterback Jesse Palmer, who will make Gators history by becoming the first quarterback to make his debut on the road and the first freshman QB to start under Spurrier.

Auburn suspended starter Doug Johnson on Wednesday for a violation of team rules. Palmer has played in only four games, completing 90-155 passes for 145 yards and three touchdowns.

Auburn expects freshman running back Deontarius Carter to carry some of the load.

Because of injuries and a below-par running game, Bowden decided to forgo Carter's redshirt year five games into the season and the heralded recruit ran for 93 yards on 12 carries last week against Louisiana Tech.

It also will be a big game for Auburn quarterback Dameyune Craig, who would like nothing more than to avenge last season's 51-10 loss to Florida.

Rice becoming Cadillac of its new conference

The Associated Press

For 34 straight years, Rice never won more than six games in a season - a streak that was broken last year when Ken Hatfield led the Owls to a 7-4 record.

"That campaign, which included wins in six of its last seven games, earned Rice the widespread admiration around our new conference, the Western Athletic Conference. The praise continues."

Rice, which upset BYU 27-14 last week, visits unbeaten New Mexico in a key conference game tonight. The Owls are 4-2 overall and 2-1 in the WAC's Mountain Division, right behind UNM's 6-0 overall mark and 3-0 WAC log.

Against BYU, Benji Wood and Michael Perry rushed for 167 and 132 yards, respectively, but Hatfield directed praise elsewhere.

"Our defense really was the star of the game," he said. "We held BYU scoreless for the last 38 minutes of the game. It is something I wasn't sure would happen anywhere."

"They move the ball very well against everybody. Anybody that beats BYU the way they did has everybody's attention in this conference."

Rice-UNM is one of seven conference games in a busy weekend schedule that also sees Fresno State visiting unbeaten and No. 18 Air Force, Colorado State traveling to rival Wyoming and Hawaii playing at Brigham Young.

Resurgent UNLV is at San Diego State, Texas-E Paso entertains San Jose State and Oregon is at UTI in a contest of winless teams. Utah plays at Oregon in a non-conference game, and Southern Methodist is idle.

Deal would change phone landscape forever

September numbers show strong economy

The Associated Press
NEW YORK — If GTE's $28 billion bid for MCI is successful, the combined entity could alter the phone business in a far more profound way than the recent spate of proposed mega-marriages between telecommunications companies.

Needs of telecom giants

Big phone companies aim to sell a variety of services including local, long distance, Internet access and wireless to be fully competitive in the growing telecommunications industry. A look at what each still is missing:

distance companies and big regional phone carriers. This summer it tapped AT&T Corp.'s hopes of merging with SBC Communications Inc., a $17.8 billion regional-phone company formed by the marriage of Southwestern Bell and Pacific Telesis Group.

AT&T and SBC had been in discussions when FCC chairman Reed Hundt publicly blasted the proposal, saying it would stifle competition in areas served by both companies.

GTE, a unique hybrid of local- and long-distance services, doesn't face the same restrictions that shackle the nation's five regional Baby Bells, which are barred from getting into the long-distance business until they open their local-phone markets to rivals.

The FCC this year has rejected proposals to enter the long-distance business by SBC and Ameritech Corp., which sells local phone service in the Midwest.

But South is preparing a third proposal to sell long-distance service. The rules were intended to prevent the same abuse of monopoly power that resulted in the breakup of AT&T Corp. in 1982, fracturing it into Baby Bells and the long-distance Ma Bell.

"I think it's a big 'if,'" said Christine Heckart, a Tulsa, Okla.-based telecommunications consultant with TeleChoice Inc.

"Once the FCC approves GTE-MCI, it really opens the door. And I think it's maybe a case of worms that won't want to go back into the box."

The FCC already has expressed its opposition to marriages between long-

Broader stock measures also recovered from more staggering losses, including that would have been a record one-day slide for the technology-heavy Nasdaq market.

The market's downturn has come amid a crescendo of jitters about inflation, corporate profits and a potential trade war, all of which have been exacerbated by the glare of media reports about Sunday being the 10th anniversary of the stock market crash of Oct. 19, 1987.

Coming on top of Thursday's 119-point plunge by the Dow, it was hard not to recall the scary two-session selloff immediately before Black Monday.

Aside from the eerie timing, however, there are few parallels to be drawn between then and now, analysts insisted again. Furthermore, even with the sharp retreat, the Dow is still up more than 21 percent this year.

"To look for any sign in today's price action that 10 years ago is a ranch," said Charles White, portfolio manager at Avator Associates. "This is the will of worry that we must climb. But it doesn't feel like the beginning of a cataclysmic event."

Japanese owners have put the 67-year-old Chrysler Building up for sale.

Psst! Hey buddy - want to buy a $200 million building?

NEW YORK (AP) - At his desk a few hundred feet below the Chrysler Building's celebrated crown of vaulted, polished steel, Bernard Goldberg dreams of a hotel like no other.

With 1,700 rooms, it would be among the largest in New York; at 67 stories, the tallest in the country with its Art Deco detail, the most stylish anywhere.

Everyone in the world would be calling and saying, 'You have to get me in,' says the hotel developer.

Goldberg's proposal is perhaps the most ambitious, if not quixotic, of the bids being taken seriously since the landmark skyscraper was put up for sale earlier this year.

A broad field of potential buyers, which included Donald Trump, has narrowed to just Goldbergs - a Chrysler tenant and a few others. Other finalists are said to include Goldman Sachs & Co., Lithman Spector Properties and Vornado Realty Trust of Saddle Brook, N.J.

Once known to some of the giants of the aviation, steel and railroad industries, the Chrysler Building is about 75 percent occupied today, with line firms, advertising agencies, insurance companies, even dentists.

INVESTMENT TO BID

The Housing Authority of American Falls will receive bids for their Line 255P Interim Rental and ADA Upgrade until 2:00 PM, pre-qualifying local time, on the 5th day of November, 1997, at 290 1/2 Third Street, American Falls, Idaho 83411, at which time and place all bids will be publicly opened and read aloud.

Scope of Work includes: Interior remodeling of one dwelling unit, including but not limited to: the addition, repair, or replacement of kitchen cabinets, fixtures, floor coverings, mechanical systems and the addition of ceiling and relocation of some electrical. Exterior installation of handrails to existing ramps and replacement of some preformed metal roofing.

Proposed forms of contract documents, including plans and specifications, are on file at the office of The Housing Authority of American Falls, at 290 1/2 Third Street, American Falls, Idaho and are also available at Ratliff Architects, Chartered, 301 South Hayes, Pocatello, ID 83204.

Copies of the documents may be obtained by depositing $25.00 (Twenty five Dollars) with the Housing Authority of American Falls for each set of documents so obtained. Such deposit is refundable.

A certified check or bank draft, payable to the Housing Authority of American Falls, in an amount equal to five percent of the bid shall be submitted with each bid. The successful bidder will be required to furnish and pay for satisfactory performance and payment bond or bonds, or separate performance and payment bonds, each for 50 percent of more of the contract price.

Attention is called to the provisions for equal employment opportunity and payment of not less than the minimum salaries and wages as set forth in the specifications must be paid on this project.

As permitted by state law and required by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development: a. Retainage: 10 percent not 5 percent. b. Interest will not accrue on retainage, and c. Bonds or securities may not be substituted as is provided in the form of retainerage. d. This contract is located by the Section 3 regulations 24 CFR 103.

The Housing Authority of American Falls reserves the right to reject any or all bids or to waive any irregularities in the bidding.

THE HOUSING AUTHORITY OF AMERICAN FALLS IS AN EQUAL OPPORTUNITY EMPLOYER.

No bid shall be withdrawn for a period of 60 days subsequent to the opening of bids without the consent of the Housing Authority of American Falls.

We invite Minority Business Enterprises (MBE) and Women Business Enterprises (WBE).

THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff

Dear Mr. Wolff:
LHO opens one diamond and my partner jumps to three spades. We play weak jump overcalls, so a jump to two spades would be weak. How should I interpret the jump to three spades? No one was vulnerable.

Our Mom, Haleigh, N.C.

ANSWER: The jump to three spades is also a pre-emptive bid. Instead of a six-card suit and little defense, the higher jump should be based on a seven-card suit and few defensive values.

Dear Mr. Wolff:
Duplicate, vulnerable vs. non-vulnerable. LHO opens one diamond in third seat and partner doubles. RHO bids one no-trump and I open two hearts. After two passes, RHO doubles. Is this double for penalties or takeout?

Getcha, San Mateo, Calif.

ANSWER: This is a penalty double. RHO has a good hand for his original pass, and you can expect him to have an excellent heart holding.

Dear Mr. Wolff:
Partner opens one diamond and I respond one heart. He makes a jump shift to three clubs and I raise to four clubs. If he bids four diamonds, is he promising a super diamond suit or is he cue-bidding an ace?

Which Mine? Salem, N.C.

ANSWER: Your raise to four clubs establishes clubs as the agreed trump suit. Partner's four-diamond bid shows diamond control and a desire to investigate slam possibilities. If you have the heart ace, you should cue-bid yourself.

Dear Mr. Wolff:
LHO opens a weak two hearts and my partner doubles. RHO raises to three hearts and I hold: ♠ Q-9, ♣ J-10-3-2, ♦ K-J-9-8, ♠ J-3. What's my best action at duplicate?

My Turn, Livingston, Texas

ANSWER: There are no good actions available. The possibilities are three no-trump, four diamonds and pass. I favor a timid pass in hopes of a plus score. Partner's double may be based on distribution instead of a wealth of high cards. The bidding coupled with your heart-holding strongly suggests partner is very short in hearts.

Dear Mr. Wolff:
I open one club at duplicate and LHO overcalls one spade. Partner raises to two clubs and RHO bids three spades. Would you risk three no-trump with ♠ A-5-3-2, ♥ K-J-6, ♦ K-7, ♣ A-K-6-5-2? Neither side was vulnerable.

Snake Eyes, Pembroke Pines, Fla.

ANSWER: No. I would not. I prefer four clubs. Partner rates to have a singleton spade and club support. In view of his limited single raise, I would not expect him to have what you might need to win nine quick tricks at no trump.
