Sheriff has no suspects; thieves grab heifer calves

By Mark Heinz
Times-News writer

JEROME — Cattle rustlers who struck this week southwest of Jerome apparently weren't greenhorns.

"They must have been fairly clear about our schedule," said C Bar M Dairy owner Jan Ledbetter.

Fourteen three- to five-month old heifer calves disappeared from a pen checked on periodically throughout the night, she said.

Tire tracks indicate the thieves knew to avoid impassable mud holes and other obstacles on the dairy. And they also knew just where to park to be near the calves' pen while still staying out of sight.

The C Bar M was among three dairies hit late Tuesday or early Wednesday, according to a Jerome County Sheriff's Department report.

The L Bar M lost 40 one- to two-month-old calves, while 16 calves aged four to five months were stolen from the DeKruif Dairy, the report says.

The thefts were all probably committed by the same rustlers, but there were no suspects Friday, Sheriff Jim Weaver said.

Only heifer calves were taken, probably because they are worth far more than bull calves, he said.

The total estimated value of the stolen calves is $17,100.

"It must have been quite a project to move 40 200-pound animals without."

Buhl legislator proposes ban on 'date rape' drug

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

BOISE — A Buhl legislator wants to outlaw a so-called "date rape drug" known as gamma hydroxybutyrate before it becomes popular in Idaho.

Republican Rep. Celia Gould is asking the Legislature to consider the drug a Schedule One controlled substance, like heroin, so law enforcement officials have the ability to stop people from producing and selling it. Schedule One penalties include up to life imprisonment and up to $25,000 in fines.

Experts say that, in small doses, the drug creates euphoria and relaxation, but higher doses can lead to amnesia, comas or death.

Already police in Moscow are hearing reports of the drug being sold and circulated among students at the University of Idaho.

UI campus police say they have heard no reports of date rape involving the drug. But students usually take it with other drugs or alcohol, which enhances the health risks.

"We haven't made any arrests partly because the laws are very vague about this particular drug," said Chief Dan Weaver of the Moscow Police Department.

House approves dozen charter schools for state

The Associated Press

BOISE — Legislation authorizing charter schools is headed to the Idaho Senate after winning overwhelming approval in the House Friday.

At the request of chief sponsor Rep. Fred Tillman, R-Boise, the House voted 61-4 for a bill allowing up to 12 charter public schools in the state starting next July.

The schools would be public, would have public school funding from the state and would be subject to some restrictions, such as using certified teachers, having open enrollment and meeting special education requirements.

But they would be freed from most of the constraints on regular public schools, and sponsors said they hoped that would lead to innovation and experimentation to improve education.

Similar bills have died in the past in the Senate, but this year, Senate Education Chairman Gary Schroeder backs the legislation and its chances of passage are considered good.

Tillman told House members the legislation has "tremendous support" after a series of statewide hearings last year.

One sponsor, Rep. Pot Bietter, D-Boise, said several groups have approached him with plans to form charter public schools. He raised three possibilities:

- Formation of a conservative, traditional school, with uniforms, stressing the classics and Latin.
- Another group wants to combine an Asian language, perhaps Japanese, with English in the first few grades, with the goal of producing bilingual students.
- A group is interested in art and music, and may seek a charter to operate a small school centered on development of music skills and other arts.

New York couple marks 80 years of life together

The Associated Press

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. — Paul and Mary Onesi's marriage has survived two World Wars, the Great Depression and — perhaps more astoundingly — 80 years of uncelebrated Valentine's Days.

No flowers. No boxes of chocolates or heart-shaped candies.

"Not even a romantic picnic at the falls that make their, hometown America's 'Honeymoon Capital.'"

Mrs. Onesi, 93, just shakes her head when asked how she and her 101-year-old husband celebrate February 14 — like many couples from their generation, the Onesis relationship is more sensible than sentimental.

"If you have trouble, you go talk about it, argue, and get over it," Mrs. Onesi said.

In the living room of their tidy apartment hangs a plaque given to them on World Marriage Day three years ago, honoring them for being the longest-married couple in the country.

Paul Onesi waves off the accomplishment as if it doesn't merit so much interest. It is the marriages that don't work that get his attention. He thinks there are far too many of those.

"In our family, no one ever wanted to get divorced because no one wanted to tell them," said Laura Cerrillo, one of the couple's 28 grandchildren.

The Onesis were married in an era when most marriages lasted.

"It was different before," Mrs. Onesi said.

Mary Corsaro was 13, and Paul Onesi 21 when they were married in a small family ceremony in Clymer, Pa., on Aug. 6, 1917.

"I was so young," Mrs. Onesi said, trying to recall.

She gave birth to their first child a year later. Five more would follow, all born at home.

"My mother lived next door. Every time I had to cook something I asked her," she said. She continues to cook today, baking three loaves of bread before sitting down to talk one recent afternoon.

The children are all parents and grandparents themselves now. The Onesis have seen their five of their kids celebrate their 50th wedding anniversaries.

Picabo's medal bid on hold

Storm delays downhill race; new date uncertain

The Associated Press

HAKUBA, Japan — Rain, snow and lightning delayed Picabo Streets' bid to become the first U.S. skier to capture two gold medals in an Olympics since 1952.

The storm wiped out the women's downhill and the men's super-G this morning (Friday night MST). And it may be two days before her opportunity arrives, that depends on the rescheduling.

"I'm standing here with water in my pants," U.S. women's head coach Herwig Demtschar said from the course, where Americans trained for the slalom portion of the women's combined event.

And maybe the Italian skiers had the right idea.

They ducked the rain and lightning that wiped out two more Alpine races, driving down the mountain to visit the Buddhist temple in Nagano and, quite likely, pray for better weather.

The women's downhill was called off barely after dawn, as snow fell on the top of the course and rain soaked the finish area. The men's super-G became a casualty two hours later, as lightning flashed through a gray sky.

Street, who won the women's super-G, is among the favorites in the downhill. She won silver in the 1994 Olympic downhill in Lillehammer.

The only U.S. skier to win two races in an Olympics was Andrea Mead Lawrence, who as a teen-ager won the slalom and giant slalom at the 1952 Oslo Games.

Demtschar said the delay should not bother Street and her teammates.

"She's doing fine. There's no problem," he said.

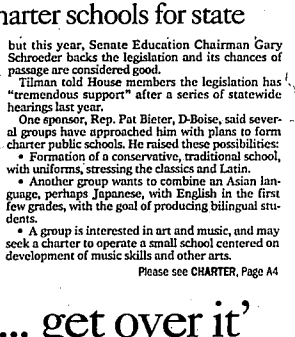

"We are used to this."

The postponements mean organizers can toss the original schedule for the first week of Olympic Alpine races in the garbage. Not a single race has been run as planned so far, and four days have been complete washouts.

Now, with more bad weather on the way, organizers have to get out their pencils and start crossing out plans for the second week of these soggy Olympics.

Snow and rain were forecast to continue during the day. Then, after a dry night, the precipitation was

Drug

"That's why we are certainly supporting this legislation. It would give us a tool to more actively seek out people who are doing more harm with this drug."

Idaho law already includes penalties for rapists who drug their victims.

It might be hard to quantify how often rapists use the drug. Tests often don't look for it. Victims may not be able to identify their attackers because the drug causes amnesia.

It also is tough to quantify problems resulting from the drug because of the nature of date rape itself. Women may be reluctant to come forward because they blame themselves for accepting a date, said Evelyn Mallea, a Twin Falls clinical social worker.

"Even though she said no, she feels somehow she contributed to it," Mallea said.

The drug originated in southern California and was popular among body-builders as a growth hormone. In 1990, the federal Food and Drug Administration banned the drug, but its popularity had spread nationwide, and it has become especially prevalent at "rave" parties.

At least three or four overdose victims are treated in Denver hospitals monthly

ACROSS THE NATION

Idaho: Mostly cloudy skies covered the state with a few sunny breaks reported in the central mountains and southwest. Precipitation varied from snow at Mullin, Spencer, Idaho Falls and Reburg, to mixed rain and snow at Pocatello, to rain at Burley. Afternoon temperatures were generally in the 30s and 40s in the Panhandle.

West Coast: A few showers hit the Pacific Northwest with snow showers over the Cascades of Oregon and Washington and in the higher elevations of Idaho, Wyoming and Utah. Arizona had scattered rain showers.

Midlands: High pressure across the eastern Rockies and Great Plains brought fair and dry weather to the region. A cold front was pushing southward through the northern Plains, bringing colder temperatures. A few light snow showers fell on western North Dakota. Snow also fell on central Wisconsin and northern Iowa.

Southeast: Showers dampened Alabama, Georgia, Florida and South Carolina. The rainfall was light and no flooding was expected.

Northeast: With a cold front pushing through the Great Lakes region, a few lake effect snow showers fell on western New York off Lake Erie. Cold air created strong winds and low wind chills.

Retired presidential guard faces grand jury questioning

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice and Treasury Departments agreed Friday night to limit grand jury testimony of former Secret Service officer subpoenaed to tell what he knows about President Clinton's relations with White House intern Monica Lewinsky.

The agreement with White-water prosecutor Kenneth Starr was made after the Justice and Treasury departments agreed on procedures of the Secret Service are not disclosed, the Justice Department said in a three-paragraph statement.

The statement did not spell out exactly what restrictions were to be put on the questioning of former Secret Service uniformed officer Lewis H. Linn.

It also did not indicate that this agreement would necessarily apply to grand jury questioning of any other Secret Service agents or officers. An active or former officer also has been subpooned by a grand jury investigating whether Clinton and Lewinsky had an affair and broke the law by trying to cover it up.

"The Justice and Treasury Departments and the Office of Independent Counsel will continue to discuss these issues as they may arise," the statement said in an apparent, but unstated reference to the possibility that other presidential guards might be questioned.

The statement said the two departments agreed not to object to limited questioning of Fox, who is retained after Starr agreed to ensure that techniques for protecting the president and his family are not disclosed.

Fox's lawyer says his client saw Ms. Lewinsky visit Clinton in the Oval Office in 1995 but the retired officer is not sure whether the two were alone. It is not known what investigators hope to learn from the other officer.

The notion of tightlipped Secret Service agents and officers being compelled to testify about Clinton's private actions drew resistance from government officials concerned that the level of trust between presidents and their protectors would be jeopardized.

Treasury and Justice officials sought to limit the scope of questioning to what Secret Service members might know about those outside the first family, said officials who spoke on condition of anonymity before the agreement was announced.

Under such an arrangement, agents theoretically could be questioned about what they observed or heard from Ms. Lewinsky or others who came in contact with the first family.

But it was unclear whether Starr pressed for or obtained the right to seek more specific testimony involving Clinton's actions or words, an area that administration officials had promised to resist.

There was no sign of an agreement to bring Ms. Lewinsky before the grand jury, although the former White House intern was back in Washington after a 10-day visit to California.

A scheduled grand jury appearance by Ms. Lewinsky this week and an earlier appointment for her to give a deposition in the Paula Jones sexual harassment lawsuit both came and went without producing any testimony.

Clinton: Objections won't stop attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — Russia's "nyet" will not stop a U.S. attack on Iraq, President Clinton said Friday, and two of his top national security advisers sought to prepare the public for casualties.

With little sign of a breakthrough on the diplomatic front, Clinton said "I hope and I pray" that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein gives up his resistance to unlimited U.N. weapons inspections. Otherwise, he said, a U.S.-led military operation will "significantly diminish" Iraq's ability to regenerate the arsenal of deadly weapons it was developing at the time of the Persian Gulf War.

A day after Russia's defense minister publicly rebuked the United States for threatening Iraq, Clinton said he respects Moscow's view but added, "Nyet is not 'no' for the United States under these circumstances."

In Baghdad, Iraq's deputy foreign minister accused the Clinton administration of fabricating charges against Iraq and of itching for a fight.

"We are a nation that wants peace," said Riyadh al-Qaysi, the deputy foreign minister. He delivered a point-by-point rebuttal to a National Press Club speech Friday by Sandy Berger, Clinton's national security adviser.

Berger accused Iraq of "lies, deceit and runarounds" in seeking to defy U.N. inspections that are designed to verify that all Iraqi nuclear, chemical and biological weapons have been destroyed. Al-Qaysi said all such weapons are gone and that Washington can show no evidence to the contrary.

"This (U.S.) campaign is being conducted on the basis of lies and deception and should not be taken by anyone in the world as being a justifiable basis for war," al-Qaysi said.

Berger's speech was designed in part to prepare the American public for the possibility of the biggest bombing campaign against Iraq since the Gulf War.

"No military mission is without risk or cost," Berger said. "Even the best-prepared and best-equipped forces will suffer losses."

Russian lab develops anthrax strain that might defeat vaccine

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. scientists want a new form of anthrax developed in Russia that may be able to elude the vaccine shots American troops soon will get.

The organism — the first known genetically engineered potential biological warfare threat — is an altered form of anthrax, a disease that normally afflicts animals such as cattle and sheep, but can cause severe illness and death in humans who inhale large doses.

"This is a Trojan horse," said Col. Arthur Friedlander, chief of the Bacteriology Division at the U.S. Army Medical Research Institute of Infectious Diseases in Frederick, Md. "This is coming in as anthrax, but it's got other bullets in it — different bullets."

He said the Defense Department is working through diplomatic and other channels to get the Russians to share this new organism and other naturally occurring strains of anthrax with U.S. experts in the field.

Friedlander and other biological warfare experts are confident that the American vaccine, based on a protein called protective antigen, can protect troops against any anthrax strain that relies on this protein to facilitate damage to white blood cells.

They are more uneasy about the Russian organism, which contains two non-anthrax genes that change the organism and may alter the way it causes disease. If this is the case, it is conceivable that the current American vaccine might not be effective, Friedlander said.

"We need to get hold of this strain to test it against our vaccine," Friedlander said. "We need to understand how this new organism causes disease and we need to test it in animals other than hamsters that the Russians used."

The American vaccine was given to about 150,000 troops during the 1991 Persian Gulf War. No inoculation program was initiated for troops currently deployed in the Gulf in the latest dispute with Iraq, said Rick Sonntag, a spokesman for the U.S. Army Medical Command at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

Slide shoves patios, garages downhill

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Green cushions from Reti Vaughn's patio furniture sat in mud at the bottom of the 35-foot-deep gully. Several yards away, her hot tub gazebo and barbecue kettle stood as if untouched on a bed of concrete that was once attached to her patio.

It was a rude awakening Friday for Mrs. Vaughn, her husband, Lou, and neighbors in four other Canoga Park homes damaged by an early morning mudslide that sent hundreds of cubic yards of earth cascading down a hill of ranch-style homes.

"There was a 'bang' and then immediately a loud noise that I didn't immediately recognize," Lou Vaughn said. "I knew it wasn't an earthquake because there was no shaking whatsoever. Then there was this rushing sound for about three seconds."

He looked out his bedroom window and the patio was gone. City clean-up crews worked through the day to shore up the shaly hillsides of Pine Hill Estates with sandbags and plastic tarps as California braced for more rainstorms over the weekend.

The mudslide was caused by recent heavy rains soaking the saturated neighborhood of 250,000 homes in the San Fernando Valley, said David Keim of the city Department of Building and Safety. Five homes were red-tagged, or deemed too unsafe to enter.

The mudslide was one of many that hit the state in recent days from rainstorms that pounded beaches, rivers and hills. In northern California, a 100-foot-thick slab of hillside threatened to slide into a neighborhood in Rio Vista along the Russian River, where three homes have been destroyed, three damaged and 140 evacuated.

Gov. Pete Wilson signed executive order Friday giving $15 million to storm-damaged counties, and allowing people who lose their jobs because of the storm to begin collecting unemployment benefits faster than usual.

A total of 31 counties were in a state of emergency Friday as Amador, Sacramento, Fresno and Solano counties were added to the list.

Charter

The Minidoka County School district may use the legislation as a way to set up an alternative night school, he said.

"It's very exciting legislation," Bietser said.

Voting against were Democrats Justin Judd of St. Maries and Bert Marley of Inkom and Republicans Tim Ridinger of Shoshone and J. Steven Haidley of Chubbuck.

Judd said she was worried about the possible effect on rural areas. If a number of students left the regular school system for a charter school, it might hurt a district's ability to keep another school going, she said.

The legislation allows one charter school application from each school district, but no more than two in each of the state's six regions. Applications would be made to local school boards. If a charter is denied, the group can appeal to the state Board of Education.

If a region doesn't use its allocation of charter schools, other areas may try for that charter.

"It gives us the ability to bring some competition and choice into the marketplace of schools," said Rep. Lee Gagner, R-Idaho Falls.

Married

Onesi left Italy when he was 15, coming through Ellis Island and eventually going to work in the Pennsylvania coal mines. In one town, he boarded at the home of Mary's older sister, Rose. It was Rose who suggested Mary and Paul marry.

They moved to Niagara Falls in 1927 and Paul went to work at Union Carbide Corp. Despite all the modern conveniences that have come along during the past eight decades, the Onesis choose to live relatively simply. They have never gotten a microwave oven, and family members know better than to pick out gifts like pasta or bread makers for them.

They did give in to television, though, and are known to bicker over the stations. It's one of the few things left to argue about after so many years together.

NATION IN BRIEF

Babbitt tells employees he'll fight allegations

WASHINGTON — Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt promised Friday to fight allegations he lied to Congress and blamed his problems on a corrosive, antagonistic, bitter culture that has settled over the town.

Several hundred department employees greeted Babbitt with sustained applause as he arrived at the department auditorium to discuss the investigation of charges that he misled Congress in connection with a proposed Indian gambling license.

"Here I am... and here I'm going to stay," the secretary declared. "...I'm going to fight this out to the bitter end and we will be vindicated." At a General Janet Reno asked a three-judge panel Wednesday to name an independent commission to investigate allegations that Babbitt misled Congress in his explanations concerning the Interior Department's 1995 rejection of a casino license for three Wisconsin Indian tribes.

Satcher sworn in as U.S. surgeon general

WASHINGTON — Dr. David Satcher, an African-American born into poverty in the segregated South, was sworn in Friday as surgeon general.

He promised to "make the greatest difference for those with the greatest need," adding, "I know the American dream does not end when it comes true." Satcher said at a White House ceremony.

Satcher, appearing in the traditional surgeon general's uniform for the first time, fills an office that has been vacant for more than three years. Dr. Joycelyn Elders was forced to resign Wednesday. Satcher said he will emphasize early childhood health, opposition to teen smoking and drugs and the need for exercise and good nutrition.

Navy chooses admiral for post at academy

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Rear Adm. John Ryan was chosen to become the next superintendent of the U.S. Naval Academy.

The name was forwarded this week by Navy Secretary John Dalton to Defense Secretary William Cohen, who is expected to pass the recommendation to President Clinton. The Senate would have to confirm Ryan's promotion to the 152-year-old academy, which trains Navy and Marine officers.

Ryan, 42, would succeed Adm. Charles Larson, a four-star admiral who is leaving the academy in June. Larson has worked to toughen standards after a series of scandals involving misconduct by midshipmen.

2 doctors will accompany Glenn into space

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Two doctors will accompany Sen. John Glenn, NASA's newest and oldest astronaut, into space in October.

One of them is a heart surgeon. The other is trained in emergency medicine.

"No, no, no," NASA spokeswoman Jennifer McCarter said when asked if the doctors were assigned for the benefit of Glenn, who will be 77 at the time of the space shuttle flight. "It's coincidence."

NASA announced last month that Glenn, who became the first American in orbit 36 years ago next week, would return to space aboard Discovery as part of a study on aging.

Drugs, alcohol played no role in Bono's death

CARSON CITY, Nev. — Toxicology tests ruled out drugs and alcohol as factors in the ski accident that killed Rep. Sonny Bono.

Tests revealed small amounts of Valium and another mild sedative in Bono's bloodstream. But the amounts would have been unlikely to impair his skiing, said Lee Cantrell of the California Poison Control System in San Diego.

No alcohol and no narcotics showed up in the tests released Thursday by the Douglas County sheriff's office.

The 42-year-old former entertainer was a Republican congressman from Palm Springs, Calif.

Conservancy defends killing of goats, pigs

SANTA CATALINA ISLAND, Calif. — Hundreds of goats and pigs at Santa Catalina Island were shot and left to rot in the sun by sharpshooters in low-flying helicopters as part of a program to make more room for native species.

Animal rights groups harshly criticized the killings as inhumane and unnecessary.

"I firmly believe the public does not want to see wildlife murdered like this," said Bill Dyer of Venice, a spokesman for In Defense of Animals.

State cracks down on Little Havana coffee shops

MIAMI (AP) — Jaime and Mirna Bianchi open their Roma restaurant in Little Havana before dawn on weekdays and wait for their regulars to slide up to the coffee window for a morning jolt of caffeine.

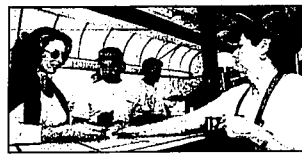

The sidewalk window, an institution in Latin America, is not just a place to argue politics. For the cost of a potent cup of Cuban coffee, you can find out who ran off with whose wife or husband, who died, who got burglarized, arrested or fired.

The state, however, sees the open windows as a health violation and recently began insisting that proprietors install sliding glass or screens to separate the chef and his food from the customers.

Cuban-Americans in Little Havana see this as a cultural blunder. "This is just stupid," said Mrs. Bianchi, who is from Cuba.

She and her husband, who was born in Colombia to Italian parents, opened the restaurant in 1966, a few years after hundreds of thousands of Cubans fled to Miami to escape Fidel Castro's Communist rule.

"This has to have been dreamed up by someone who has never traveled outside Florida," she said in Spanish.

The state Department of Business and Professional Regulation contends the coffee windows violate the health code by being open continuously.

Warnings were issued three months ago and businesses that refuse to comply could face fines of up to $1,000 a day.

One coffee shop owner said it would cost him $25,000 to bring his restaurant up to code.

Doug Phillips, a state spokesman, said no restaurants have been shut down over the rule, and inspections are so infrequent it could be months before any shops are fined.

Miami-Dade County is more than 55 percent Hispanic. In the heart of Little Havana almost all Marta Velozes, left, receives her morning coffee from Yolanda Martinis through the coffee window of Cafe Roma early Friday in Miami, Fla.

The signs are in Spanish. The coffee windows in South Florida range from small, distressed wood counters to elaborately tiled counters 50 feet long.

At many of them, the outrage over the crackdown flowed as freely as the thick, sweet "cafecito" sold for 35 cents an ounce.

"Cultural gestapo," said Gustavo Lorenzo.

"Are they trying to start a revolt, or what?" asked Osvaldo Moñeda.

"Dumb," said Esteban Lamela.

Woman thought to be 6th victim of serial killer

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — An hour after 200 people prayed and dropped rose petals from a bridge to remember five women apparently slain by a serial killer, police said there was a sixth victim.

Although law enforcement officers declined to release latest victim's name, a family member told The Spokesman-Review the body was that of Sunny Oster, 41, one of several missing women sought by the task force. She hadn't been heard from since October.

Her body was found last weekend and linked to the serial killer Thursday. Before the announcement, a mostly female crowd gathered at Riverfront Park in downtown Spokane for a vigil.

All six victims may have been involved in drugs, prostitution or both, said police Capt. Chuck Bown, a commander of a city-county task force investigating the killings.

The women all died of gunshot wounds, and their bodies were found in rural areas, Bown said. Authorities would not say whether there are suspects.

Five of the victims were found in the Spokane area, in eastern Washington near the Idaho line. The other was discovered in December in a field south of Tacoma, which is nearly 300 miles to the west.

Batt drives for more disability pay

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Phil Batt wants the Legislature to authorize higher minimum payments for seasonal workers disabled on the job.

Under current law, the payment could be as low as $3.50 per week, if a seasonal worker making $200 per week with no work history were injured the first week on the job.

The House State Affairs Committee took the first step toward boosting the payment on Friday, voting introduction of legislation encouraged by Batt. It sets a minimum of $66.45 per week, no matter how much a seasonal worker is making or his or her previous work history.

Spokesman Rep. W.W. "Bill" Deal, R-Nampa, told committee members Batt read a newspaper story about an injured farm worker who qualified only for a payment of about $11 per week, and decided to seek a change.

The governor convened an advisory committee, which backed the idea of a minimum payment of $66.45 per week. That's based on 15 percent of the average wage earned by seasonal workers, $443.

Deal said current disability payments, which can extend to 52 weeks, are based on past work history and current wage.

The legislation would not change payments for workers making more per week, or with a longer work history.

the same number of elderly and disabled residents would lose licenses. The department also would get about $3,000 more from the federal government because the state gets about $7 from federal sources for every license it sells but nothing for the licenses it gives away.

About 70,000 fishing or hunting licenses were issued free during the budget year that ended last July 1.

Butte County to benefit from federal money

The Associated Press

Butte County will get a full-time sheriff's deputy thanks to $72,633 from the federal government, part of a new round of grants totaling about $64.3 million to hire more than 900 police officers and sheriff's deputies. The money is part of the Clinton administration's initiative to put 100,000 additional community policing officers on the nation's streets, the U.S. Department of Justice announced Thursday.

Proposal would increase costs for seniors

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Wildlife Federation is betting that senior citizens will not mind paying a little more for hunting and fishing in Idaho.

Along with Republican state Sen. John Anderson of Boise, the federation is proposing that Idaho residents 65 and older pay $3 for a hunting license and $7 for a fishing license. They currently pay nothing.

For a combination hunting and fishing license, the charge would be $10, compared to $4 now. Senior citizens also pay nothing for deer, elk or bear tags, but the Wildlife Federation proposal would charge them between $5 and $20, depending on the type of tag.

The fee increases could generate up to $770,000 for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game if the same number of elderly and disabled residents would lose licenses. The department also would get about $3,000 more from the federal government because the state gets about $7 from federal sources for every license it sells but nothing for the licenses it gives away.

Task force won't suggest sites for state oversight

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Land Board task force studying possible state management of federal lands does not intend to recommend sites for pilot projects.

"To say, 'We are going to the Clearwater National Forest and (a) this ranger district,' no, we are not going to do that," said task force co-chairwoman Sen. Judi Danielson, R-Council.

"Rather, it will recommend options for the Land Board to decide about projects, she said Thursday. Her group has looked for ways for Idaho to be involved in the management of millions of acres of federal ground.

Task force member Jay O'Laughlin, director of the University of Idaho Policy Analysis Group, said the task force could suggest the national forest supervisors meet in a closed-door executive session with the Land Board.

"That would allow the supervisors to express their feelings about potential projects and whether they would be willing to manage a forest public land trust, O'Laughlin wrote in a memo to Danielson's group.

The health and productivity of timber resources are good selection criteria, O'Laughlin said.

Northern Idaho's Clearwater, Nez Perce and Panhandle forests and southwestern Idaho's Boise and Payette forests are timber-rich, he said. The presence or absence of endangered species is not a useful guideline for projects, nor is the amount of wilderness, he said.

The federal government would still own the land, but it would be managed as a trust, financed with money from timber sales and grazing. The trust would be supervised by a board.

Radio station stunt causes power outage

BLACKFOOT (AP) — An eastern Idaho radio station's Friday the 13th stunt turned unlucky, knocking out power to about 3,000 people.

Residents of rural Blackfoot and Fort Hall lost electricity about 8 p.m. Dozens of customers' lights went out without power Friday afternoon.

The problem was four red-and-blue foil helium balloons that became entangled in power lines after being released during an on-the-air wedding ceremony at KLCE-FM.

When the power lines arced there was a loud boom and fireball that rained sparks down on the station's parking lot. The radio crew and the couple ducked inside the station. No one was injured.

No damage estimates were available, but Idaho Power Co. officials said the radio station could be liable for damages.

"I'm probably scared some people talk to death," Idaho Power spokesman Russ Jones said. "We'll try to determine who's responsible and we'll send them a bill."

KLCE morning host Mark Roberts bought a ministerial certificate over the Internet for $5 and performed the outdoor ceremony. The bride and groom were identified only as Jay and Michelle.

Co-host Amy Rose said the couple walked under a ladder and broke mirrors during the ceremony. "They did everything to defy superstition in the name of their love, but no one thought anything would happen until the explosion," Rose said.

Group wants lawmaker to renew vow

BOISE (AP) — Despite having repeatedly restated her pledge that this is her final congressional-campaign, Republican Rep. Eileen Chenoweth is being asked by a national group to sign her term limits pledge again.

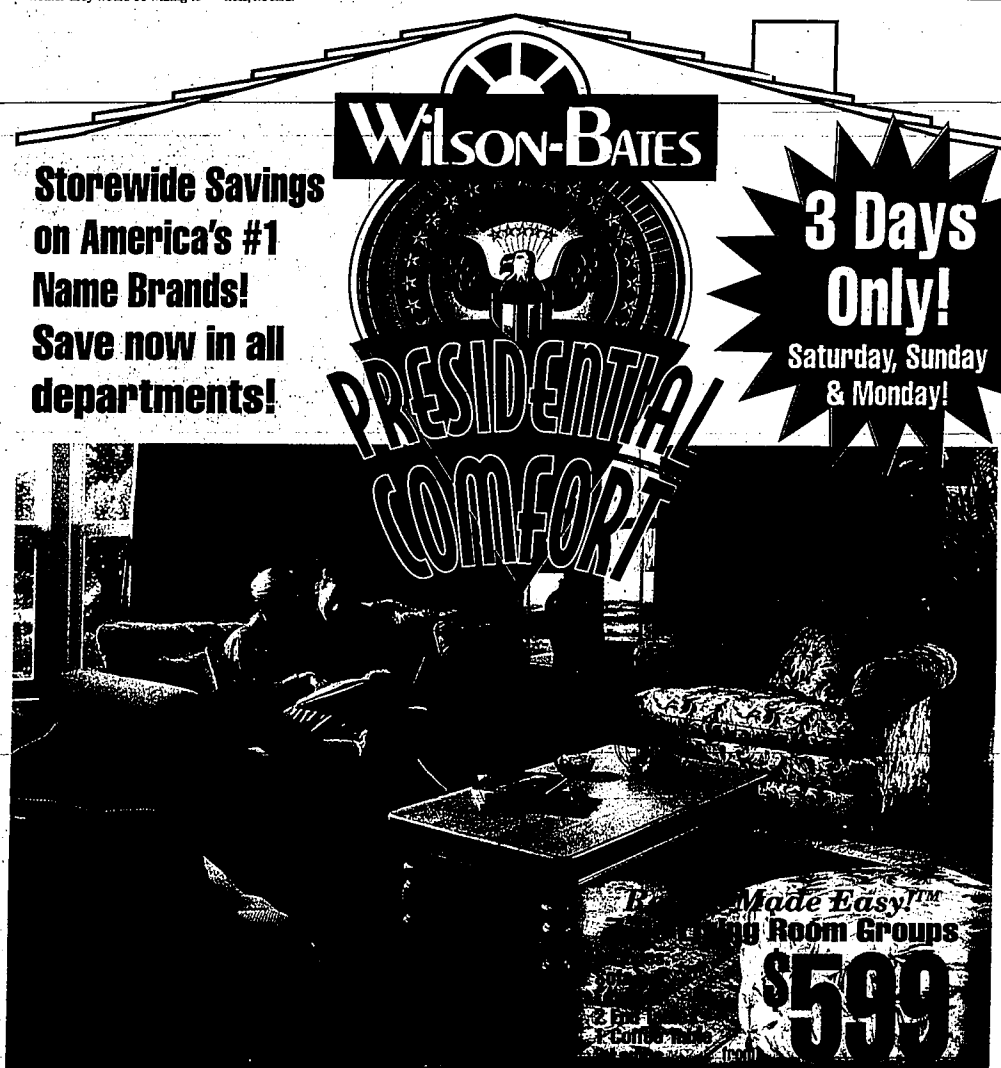

"We don't have any indication whatsoever that she is not going to abide," said U.S. Term Limits Director Paul Jacob, who writes to Chenoweth to seek her assurances that she will retire from office in 2000.

In public appearances over the past four months, Chenoweth has stated at least six times that she intends to serve no more than three terms as she promised during her initial congressional campaign in 1994.

Heavy truck opponents weigh in

Law would make school officials immune to suits

BOISE - School officials trained to identify students they suspect of using drugs would be immune from lawsuits under a proposal approved this week by the House Education Committee for legislative debate.

The proposal, sponsored by Rep. Wendy Jaquet, D-Ketchum, also would make it a crime for a school official to harass a student in the name of drug intervention. The Education Committee voted unanimously Thursday to introduce the proposal. Earlier the committee voted down the bill, worried it was not legally sound.

Jaquet said the Idaho attorney general's office reviewed the proposal, which will be printed and available to the public. Hearings will be scheduled next week.

Soroptimists opt not to have 'Chocolate Affair'

TWIN FALLS - For the first time in 12 Valentine's Days, there won't be a "Chocolate Affair" today.

The local Soroptimist International chapter scrapped plans for this year's smorgasbord of sugar, said Midge Albrecht, who organized the event last year.

"The Soroptimists' membership is down a little bit, and Valentine's Day falling on Saturday this year, we decided not to do it this time," she said.

Since 1987, the chapter has packaged and sold chocolate treats on Valentine's Day to benefit local charities, including Valley House and the Boys and Girls Club of the Magic Valley last year.

Bill would not allow kids with records to enter school

BOISE - Rep. Wendy Jaquet, D-Ketchum, won committee approval this week to introduce a proposal that would allow school boards to prevent out-of-state students from entering school if they have records of misbehavior or criminal conduct.

The House Education Committee earlier rejected the proposal but said Jaquet could return to the committee with changes. Jaquet removed a provision that would fine parents $300 if they refused to hand over a student's prior school records.

The committee voted unanimously to introduce the bill. Hearings will be scheduled next week.

Police watch suspicious man; arrest results

TWIN FALLS - A car burglary suspect was in the wrong place at the right time Friday morning, police say.

Twin Falls police officers happened to be driving through an alley in the 500 block of Second Avenue North about 8:50 a.m. Friday and noticed a man half in, half out of a car parked in the alley, police reports said. The man appeared worried and appeared to be hiding his hands, according to officers' statements.

Suspicious officers circled the block and saw the man walking toward Main Street with what appeared to be a car stereo under his arm, wires dangling, the reports said. Officers drove to the car and found wires hanging from the car stereo slot in the dashboard.

They radioed other officers, who found the suspect in the 400 block of Main Avenue North. The man was no longer carrying the radio, the reports said, but was carrying a syringe and wire cutters.

Officers arrested the man, identified as David Arthur Wesley Jones, 37, on suspicion of burglarizing the car and having drug paraphernalia and burglary tools, the reports said.

He was being held in Twin Falls County Jail Friday on $5,000 bail.

Compiled from staff reports conference held by Idaho for Safe Highways, a group opposing the truck weight bill.

Motorists wouldn't realize the trucks are longer until they attempt to pass them, Kade said. The maximum truck lengths of 105 feet wouldn't change under the bill, but 90 percent of the trucks in Idaho are shorter than that, said Rode, a board director for the Owner Operator Independent Drivers Association.

The bill faces a hearing before Kempton's House Transportation and Defense Committee Monday afternoon.

"The bill would designate two stretches of state highway on which trucks could weigh up to 129,000 pounds. Currently trucks can weigh up to 105,000 pounds.

Heavier trucks could move from Ashton to Craters of the Moon National Monument, over to Shoshone and Twin Falls, then to Jackpot, Nev. The other would be a segment of highway in southeast Idaho, east of Interstate 84.

The Legislature would decide three years after the projects started whether to continue them, expand them, or let the projects expire.

Critics see other problems with the bill:

- In Nevada, studies showed that heavier trucks put 30 to 40 percent more stress on bridges than recommended by the federal government, said Garth Dull, a former director of the Nevada Department of Transportation.

- This bill, and others that might follow, could make Idaho a conduit for trucks between Canada and Mexico, at the expense of state commerce, said Rep. Kent Kuna, R-Poccellito, a former locomotive engineer for Union Pacific Railroad.
- "This is the camel's nose under the tent flap," Kuna said.
- Kempton said his proposal may reduce the number of trucks on the highways because trucks would be allowed to haul more cargo. Additional axles would redistribute the weight, making them safer.

Pound fans make dream come true

Pound Association holds cash to buy poet's Hailey birthplace

HAILEY - After Tuesday, the Era Pound Association expects to hold the title to the house where international literary figure Era Pound was born in 1885 and plans to restore the property to its Victorian-era elegance.

The house was home to Pound for only 18 months, but throughout his time as a writer, editor and promoter of the arts in Europe, Pound called himself "The Idaho Kid."

Most recently, the white building at 314 Second Ave. S. in Hailey was home to journalist Roberta McKercher, who wrote "Blaine Talk" in the Wood River Journal for many years. McKercher died in 1996, and she stipulated in her will that the house could be sold to the fledgling Pound Association.

Antarctica, meteorites lure Filer woman

By Sam Felman
Times-News correspondent

FILER - One Filer woman is a detective in the search for clues about the universe.

Gretchen Benedix was a meteorite hunter at the South Pole.

She recently spent 54 days in Antarctica with the ANSMET Program - Antarctic Search for Meteorites - and 41 days were in the ice fields.

Gretchen Benedix of Filer looks through a meteorite called the "Tucson Ring," which is on display at the Smithsonian's museum of history.

Adventure on ice

Hunting meteorites in Antarctica is not for the faint of heart.

In a short stretch of the summer months - Idaho's winter - the weather is mild enough to attempt such a feat. During summer the sun never sets. The normal average temperature is 0 degrees Fahrenheit. Winter can plunge to minus 100 degrees or colder.

Benedix said the awesome beauty of the continent sustained her when she was lonely. "Antarctica is absolutely gorgeous."

"The mountains looked like they just rose out of the ice," she said. She loved the ice fields - a beautiful, blue, frozen ocean.

Benedix missed by one day Idaho's Sen. Larry Craig's fact-finding mission to Antarctica.

"Antarctica presents an environment unlike any other on the planet and lots of important and fascinating work is being done down there," he said. "I had an opportunity to see much of that work firsthand and came away more convinced than ever that America needs to invest in the kind of pure research Gretchen is involved in."

ANSMET, established in 1976, is funded by the National Science Foundation's Office of Polar Programs, NASA and the Smithsonian Institution.

Benedix's eight-member meteorite-gathering team led its successful search, gathering more than 1,000 meteorites, Benedix said, and named the area it searched "Foggy Top." It's part of the Queen Alexandra Mountains near Beardman Glacier.

BURLEY - Next year's Burley High School juniors and seniors had the chance this week to register for college credit next year at Cassia County Regional Technology center.

Close to 140 students signed up, along with 111 students from Raft River, Declo and Oakley high schools. The total enrollment of nearly 250 has made district administrators happy.

Slightly more than 270 students would be ideal, said assistant superintendent Jerry Doggett. But enough students registered that staff positions won't need to be cut, and not so many signed up that the district would have to deny classes to some students.

"It's almost exactly what we were hoping for," Doggett said.

A portion of the technology center is under construction. It's paid for in part by the $21.9 million bond issued voters passed in March 1996. Other tech center classes will be held next door at Burley High School.

Burley High School sophomore Dustin Holt, 17, front right, and Joe Alvarado, also 17, decide what high school classes to take next year, Cassia County School District wrapped up registration this week for its new technology center.

Computer classes

Computer classes for the Cassia County Regional Technology Center are available for students in grades 9-12. The classes include:

- Advanced word processing applications
- Advanced graphics and manufacturing technology
- Database management systems
- Electronic mail and Internet technology
- File management and residential construction hour morning classes every other day and travel back to their own high schools during lunch hour. Burley students will take classes the rest of the week.

Students can earn college credit through the College of Southern Idaho for all tech classes, said Gaylen Smyer, who will be the tech center's director. They can earn a variety of vocational certificates through welding and manufacturing courses and health occupations.

Tech classes are open to all Cassia County juniors and seniors. Students from outlying schools will take three-

Chances run out for felons

VALLEY IN BRIEF

Judge revokes probation in 2 meth cases

By Penelope Reedy
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Two convicted felons, Richard Palmer and Monte Westmoreland, were told Friday they have been given more than enough chances to serve successful probations.

The men failed, however, and in separate violation hearings, Judge George Granata Jr. revoked their probations.

Palmer, 37, told the court he has been in and out of jail for the past 25 years on forgery and drug charges. Court records say he has broken both parole and probation repeatedly.

County Prosecutor Howard Smyser said his conferences with probation authorities convinced him Palmer is likely to offend again.

Palmer's attorney, Gara Newman, reminded the court that although Palmer is charged with possession of a controlled substance, his wife made the buy. She also said that until his son was born, Palmer said he hadn't had a good reason to live. Now he wants to be a good father.

Palmer violated probation by not informing his probation officer of a change of address. Palmer's attorney insists Palmer left a recorded message for his probation officer, but mistakenly gave him the wrong address.

With tears in his eyes, Palmer told the court he'd never been in a drug treatment program, that he'd never admitted he had a problem with drugs. He also said he didn't believe he was a threat to society.

"You of all people had to know with your record by violating probation you'd be in big trouble," Granata said.

Granata said he had no choice but to revoke Palmer's probation. He reinstated his prison retaining jurisdiction for 180 days. He is recommending drug treatment.

Smyser said drug use has a "ripple effect" in the community and usage and trafficking affect everyone. He said it is his policy to favor probation whenever possible for drug users rather than prison terms.

Westmoreland, 25, who was chased down and handcuffed after running from police at Kmart Jan. 2, admitted to failing to show up at Genesis House, a drug rehabilitation program in Seattle.

Smyser told the court he believed Westmoreland's intent to clean up his act and get help was nothing more than a "hollow claim," a way to get out of jail and run.

Palmer's defense Robert Crandall said Westmoreland fully intended to complete probation and get within a short distance of Genesis House when he "got scared."

Crandall said Westmoreland is concerned his decision would affect others' chances of going to Genesis House, and he didn't want that to happen because of his example.

Crandall also said Westmoreland believes he needs to get out of Idaho, that there are too many people who influence him here and too many drugs are too close available.

Granata revoked Westmoreland's probation and reinstated his 1 1/2- to 5-year prison sentence on both his charges to run concurrently.

Jerome sheriff reports 1998 getting off to a busy start

JEROME — Jerome County sheriff's detectives have made 21 arrests since Jan. 1, mostly drug-related. Sheriff Jim Weaver said Friday.

Fifteen of the arrests have been for drug charges, while almost all the others were for related crimes, such as thefts to supply drug money, he said.

Officers have recovered a total of 21.5 grams of methamphetamine, three grams of cocaine and five grams of marijuana, Weaver said. The drugs have a total street value of about $1,655.

Ten guns have been seized during arrests this year, he said.

penalties of up to six months in jail and a $1,000 fine. A second conviction is punishable by up to one year in prison and a $2,000 fine, and the third conviction is punishable by up to 15 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Juveniles may soon be getting tickets for breaking curfew

BOISE — The House Judiciary, Rules and Administration Committee Friday voted to introduce a measure that would allow law enforcement officials to give tickets to youngsters who violate local curfew ordinances.

The proposal, sponsored by Rep. Wondy Jaquet, D-Ketchum, would bring immediate consequences to violators and help lower juvenile crime rates, Jaquet said. The committee voted unanimously to allow the proposal to be printed and available for the public. Hearings will be scheduled next week.

Judge reinstates prison term to protect unborn child from drugs

BURLEY — Out of concern for the unborn child of a 7 1/2-month pregnant woman, District Judge George Granata Jr. revoked the mother's probation Friday.

Maudie Marie Stoll, 25, convicted of possession of methamphetamine, came before the court on a probation violation and left the courtroom for jail. Granata refused her attorney's request for 48 hours to get her affairs in order.

"I'm convinced she'll continue using drugs during the rest of her pregnancy. Hopefully in custody that won't occur," he said.

Cassia County Prosecutor Howard Smyser said since being sentenced in September 1996, Stoll has had several probation violations.

"I think she is using drugs," he said, "and I'm concerned about her pregnancy. She needs to have a positive approach to who she is in life."

Stoll's attorney, Public Defender Robert Crandall, told the court he was requesting another six weeks after her baby is born, stating that if Stoll has the baby in jail, the county would be responsible for paying medical bills and care.

Smyser said if Stoll's sentence was reinstated and she received a rider, the state would be responsible for the child during that time.

Granata reinstated Stoll's 1- to 3-year prison term and retained a 180-day jurisdiction. She will serve at the Postlelle Women's Correctional Center.

ling Ezra Pound Association if one of her four children was able to buy the house.

The association plans to restore the house, which is listed on the national historical register.

President Florence Blanchard said the organization would dedicate the property to the interests of the state.

During World War II, Pound made anti-American broadcasts from Italy. Although he was found innocent of treason, he was imprisoned in a mental institution for 7 years. Pound's daughter, Jennifer Wilson, who donated $255,000 to buy the Pound birthplace, said Pound's many interests could provide fodder for stimulating programs in a number of areas.

"He had a controversial career," Wilson said. "He was called anti-Semitic, yet had many Jewish friends. He was considered a traitor, but he maintained he was a patriot. Many things about his career could be illuminating for this community. We're proud of his contributions."

Last week Jack Hemingway, oldest son of the Nobel Prize-winning author Ernest Hemingway, spoke to the public about his father and Pound. Jack Hemingway said Pound was an unusual and complicated character but never considered insane by the writer of "The Old Man and the Sea."

In addition to literary readings, lectures and workshops on topics triggered by Pound's work, the grounds of the Pound birthplace would be a memorial to McKercher. The garden, visible from the street, is to be named Roberta McKercher Garden.

"People wouldn't have to come into the house to enjoy and celebrate Bert," Wilson said. "They can just drive by and remember her role in the community."

Ice

The searchers ride snowmobiles, making swipes over the snow. Wind, a meteorologist is found, the location is mapped exactly, and the rock — never touched by human hands — is placed in a sterile jar.

Meteorites are numbered, cataloged and sent to Johnson Space Center in Houston to be dried and stored under "clean-room conditions." Chips are sent to other labs for testing.

Benedix said the group's members got along surprisingly well — considering there was no real bath for 41 days. They were lucky Antarctica had a mild summer, she said. "Why, it even got up to 22 degrees."

The coldest while she was there was minus 4, she said, and the average was 4 above.

Camping in the cold, she was used to for the few extra degrees.

The biggest hassle was extra clothes, she said. Each person was allowed to wear more than 30 pounds of clothing.

Teams over the years have created a new vocabulary, she said, and words like "poo-glove" and "snoo-zup." Team members relax by playing cards or reading. Food was OK but either frozen or out of a can.

old, winds, old ice — makes it a perfect place to find meteorites that are thousands or millions of years old, scientists say.

Ralph P. Harvey, principal investigator for ANSMET, writes, "As the East Antarctic ice sheet thins toward its margins, the continent's topography is occasionally blocked by mountains or obstructions below the surface of the ice. In these areas, old deep ice is pushed to the surface and can become stagnant, with very little outflow and consistent, slow inflow."

When such places are exposed to strong winds, he writes, massive deflation removes large volumes of ice and prevents snow accumulation while leaving a deposit of meteorites on the surface.

Studying old meteorites can help scientists theorize how the universe formed and give them a glimpse of what other planets, stars and moons are composed of.

Harvey says "finding otherworldly things" on Earth is less expensive than gathering samples in space. Hunting meteorites at subzero temperatures with a strong wind and no modern comforts is worth the time and discomfort.

The ANSMET specimens are currently only reliable, continuous source of new, nonterrestrial extraterrestrial material," he writes, "and will continue to be until future planetary sample-return missions are successful."

Benedix, 29, is the daughter of the Rev. Gary and Vicki Benedix of Ellettsville, Ind., minister of Peace Lutheran Church.

Born in St. Louis, she lived in the Philippines, Eden and San Diego before returning to Ellettsville when she was 12. After graduating from Filer High School in 1986,

Trucks

Information is sketchy on whether heavier trucks cause more accidents, Kempton said. According to the federal Office of Highway Safety, there are fewer accidents but more fatalities on the road involving all vehicles, such as highway speeds and truck weights have risen.

He disputed the idea that heavier trucks will drive slower, citing his experience driving in Utah and Nevada where heavier trucks are permitted.

"I don't see those guys running at speeds lower than the speed limit, unless conditions are bad," Kempton said.

And he said his proposal is unlikely to make. Heavier trucks will simply pass around Idaho to other states which will allow them. He said his bill is backed by producers of potatoes, sugar beets, processing plants, and truck drivers.

"Why come into Idaho when you've got to download a 129,000-pound truck?" Kempton said. "That would be like packing your car as heavy as you could get to get to Grandma's house, then unloading half of it to finish the trip."

Times-News writer Liz Wright can be reached in Boise at 345-5198.

Fakes

have a security strip and a watermark that can be easily seen by holding the bill up to light, Trent said.

The suspect in the Buhl fakes is described as a white male, 30 to 40 years old, with a dark beard, dark collar-length hair, and glasses, Trent said. He is about six feet tall, with a slim build, weighing 170 to 180 pounds, she said.

If you have information on the counterfeiters or the suspect, call Buhl Police at 543-4200.

Fake bills can be identified by feel — they're paper, not cloth as a real bill is, and the ink will smear under thumb and forefinger, say Twin Falls police investigating the fakes. Marking pens similar to the one the clerk used to spot the fake are available from local office-supply stores.

If you see a fake, keep it, police say — it's critical evidence. Get the best description of the suspect you can, and notify police immediately.

Tech

classes. A student who becomes a certified nursing assistant would gain college credit and work experience while waiting to get into a nursing program, Smyser said.

Weber State University in Utah, in fact, requires students to have that background to get into its nursing program.

"We're hoping we can expedite the educational process by giving them those skills and credentials before they even leave here," Smyser said.

The health occupations classes can serve as a background for any career in the health industry, he said.

Burley High school sophomore Nicole Fenton, 16, said she is headed for law school. She wants to work at a law office to gain experience and help pay for college. She is enrolling in a computer application class next year to learn skills that will help her at the office and with her school work.

Sophomore Dustin Holt, 17, enrolled in the automotive service technology course. Holt will be able to earn college credit and he hopes it will help him get into a technical school.

The tech center is geared toward industrial certification but more Idaho schools are providing open-ended technical training that allows students to go on to earn a degree in high school, counselor Phyllis Hendrickson said.

Earning college credit in high school is a bargain for parents and students, she said, and helps prepare students for college classes.

Offering students technical skills and certificates is a growing focus for Magic Valley educators.

"Ninety-five percent of your kids in the senior class will tell you that they're going to college," Hendrickson said.

But only about half end up going, she said.

Nearly 80 percent of Idaho's population had graduated from high school or the equivalent by 1990, the U.S. Census Bureau says, but continued on to post-secondary education, but only 17.7 percent earned at least a four-year degree.

U.S. lugeers break 34-year drought

Pairs teams capture silver and bronze; Germans keep gold

The Associated Press

NAGANO, Japan — Talk about being low. Two years ago, Mark Grimmette and Brian Martin had to pay their own way to their first World Cup luge race. And last month, with the Winter Olympics looming, Chris Thorpe broke a bone in his right wrist while training with doubles partner Gordy Sheer.

Talk about being high. On Friday, both teams won medals — Thorpe and Sheer the silver, and Grimmette and Martin the bronze — to break the United States' 34-year Olympic jinx in the sport. "I think breaking my hand helped," said the 27-year-old Thorpe, of Marquette, Mich. "It distracted us a little bit. We knew we were definitely at a disadvantage, and we started to go up from there."

Some in the crowd seemed to be gasping for air as the last run began Friday with both U.S. teams in medial contention. Heck, another Olympic disaster — remember

"I didn't breathe for an hour," said Ron Rossi, executive director of the U.S. Luge Association. "A lot of people have been working for a long time, some of us 20 years, to get us over the hump."

These four sliders have excelled in the sport like no one else before them in the United States. Sheer and Thorpe became the first team members to win a World Cup title, winning four races to lock up the 1996-97 title. And Grimmette, of Muskegon, Mich., and Martin, of Palo Alto, Calif., succeeded them this year with a simi-

IN BRIEF

Leforgee takes over TF High School tennis

TWIN FALLS — Tennis instructor Mike Hutchings has resigned his coaching position at Twin Falls High School. Jason Leforgee, a teacher at the high school, will take over the duties of varsity tennis instructor.

Meat and Money shoots set this weekend in Burley

BURLEY — The Burley Trap Club will hold Meat and Money shoots starting at 11 a.m. today and Sunday.

The Club will also have Meat and Money shoots Feb. 21 and Feb. 22 at the range, 850 W. 50 S. on Milner Dam Road.

Meat and money shoots are $3 and guarantee cards are available. Competitors shoot against same ability level participants.

A Pick Your Buddy 60 bird shoot with a combined 48-year maximum team will start at 11 a.m. on Saturday, Feb. 28. Teams can have any number of partners and shoot a variety of yards which are added to be 48 or less.

The entry fee is $25 and the pay is $50/$20. A $5 Belt Buckle shoot off, miss and out, will be held following the buddy shoot.

Town hall meeting will focus on tennis for fun

TWIN FALLS — There will be a Play Tennis America Town Hall meeting Wednesday at 7 p.m. at Maxie's Pizzeria. Special guests include Ann Slocomb and Susan Luna of the Internominate Tennis Association as well as Becky Lenhart, the executive director of the ITA.

The meeting will include an informative presentation about the United States Tennis Association's Play Tennis America Program and the community wide effort to introduce this great game to new players.

At 5:30 p.m. on the same day, there will be an organizational meeting for the 1998 men's and women's summer leagues. Captains and interested players should attend.

For more information contact Carrie Reed at 324-8839.

Mushers trip No. 1 Indians

Ketchum, Carey gain wins in Northside Sub-District Tourney

By Matt Pember
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — The Northside Conference sub-district tournament continued Friday night and almost everything went off according to plan.

Almost everything. Third-seeded Ketchum beat Bliss 53-42 and second-seeded Carey beat Dietrich 70-45.

The one surprise of the evening was Camas County defeating the top-seeded Shoshone 51-45. The Indians beat the Mushers both times, the teams faced each other in the regular season.

Camas was out for revenge. The Mushers took control early. Dusty Blodgett hit two 3-pointers and drove coast to coast for an easy layup to give Camas a 7-point advantage at the end of the first quarter.

In the second, the Indians tied the score at 15, but the Mushers scored five points in the final 30 seconds of the half to take a 5-point lead into the locker room.

In the third, Indian Drew Payne's six points kept the Indians within five of Camas.

Only one word can describe the fourth quarter — INTENSE. Both teams wanted the win, and both teams showed it.

In the first three minutes of the fourth quarter, the Indians went on a 7-2 run to bring themselves within one of the Mushers.

But soon Camas' tough half-court defense and Jordan Rice's domination of the boards took the Indians out of the game.

Shoshone gave up some key turnovers and were forced to play a fouling game. The Mushers hit 5 of 6 free throws down the stretch to bring the score to its final tally.

SHOSHONE (40) — Tows 5 0-0 in, 10pts 3-1; 2 Points 2-2; Roberts 6-6; Blodgett 6-2 3-1; Miller 1-2-4; Lockwood 1-0-2; Totals 19 8-10 21

Carey 70, Dietrich 45

It looked like it was going to be a close game ... for about eight minutes.

The Blue Devils took the early advantage, but Carey managed to stay close. When the buzzer sounded to end the first quarter, the score was tied at 11.

Then the Panthers got hot. To start the second, Carey went on a 9-2 run. In the third, to prove that the second wasn't a fluke, the Panthers went on a 15-2 run. By the end of the third, Carey was up by 22 points.

Four Panthers scored in double digits and proved to be unstoppable from the field.

The one bright spot for the Blue Devils was the play of Ruben Vasquez, who scored all eight of Dietrich's points in the third and added eight more in the fourth.

Carey's Greg Edwards led all scorers with 22 points, including two 3-pointers. The Panthers face the Mushers on Monday for

Johnson powers CSI past Citrus; Eagles keep winning

The Times-News

LAS VEGAS — There's definitely no hex on the CSI basketball team on the Dixie College diamond. The Golden Eagles are 3-0 and have won all three games on the field where last year's season ended.

On Friday, CSI defeated Citrus College 116 behind a grand slam from Coeur d'Alene freshman, Ben Johnston and four innings of four-hit left from lefty sophomore Toby Dart.

Citrus entered the game ranked 10th among California junior colleges.

"To tell you the truth, we expect to win every game," assistant coach Boomer Walker said of his team's philosophy. "That's the kind of attitude these guys have taken. (Citrus) tried to intimidate us with a few things and our guys didn't let it get to them."

Onahua, Neb., freshman Game Grant went 3-for-5 from his leadoff spot in the CSI order. Catcher Grig Merritt had a two-run single in the first, and pinch-runner Casey Nelson stole second and third and scored the third run on James Close's base hit.

Johnson's grand slam came with CSI leading 7-4 in the top of the seventh. Sophomore reliever Matt MacLeod gave up a two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth for the final Citrus runs.

Merritt finished 2-for-4 and was Citrus' infielder Eddie Guerrero was 2-for-4 with a double.

The two teams met again Sunday in Las Vegas, CSI, which beat Dixie Thursday in the same tournament, returns to St. George Monday for a doubleheader with the Rebels.

The Golden Eagles take on Salt Lake CC today in the final day of competition of the Dixie Tournament.

Coach quits after Raptors ship star guard to Blazers

The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — In a day of major upheaval for the Toronto Raptors, star guard Damon Stoudamire was traded to the Portland Trail Blazers and coach Darrell Walker resigned Friday.

Stoudamire was dealt away in a six-player trade that brought another headache to the Raptors. Kenny Anderson, acquired from the Blazers along with Gary Trent and rookie Alvin Williams, was adamant that he would not play for Toronto.

Walker, who had coached the Raptors since the start of the 1995-96 season, was replaced on an interim basis by Butch Carter. "I just thought that if they were going to trade Damon, they were going in a different direction than I wanted to," Walker said. "I don't mind coaching an expansion team, but I wanted to see some light at the end of the tunnel. I don't see any light."

The two major changes came just one day after the Raptors were sold to the company that owns the NHL's Toronto Maple Leafs. The NBA franchise's third season also has included the departure of general manager Iiah Thomas in December after a failed bid to purchase the team. "It's just crazy," said 18-year-old rookie Tracy McGrady, the youngest player in the league. "I guess this is my introduction to the NBA. I'm and to get it over with in my rookie year."

McGrady was one of only eight Raptors in uniform as Toronto played the New Jersey Nets on Friday night.

"We're going to play a zone and hope NBA officials don't show up. We're hoping for college officials," Carter joked. Wait Williams and Carlos Rogers were manager Eric Grunfeld apparently never improved his offer either he was warned that Stoudamire could get away. "I don't know how close we were. That's for them to say," Grunfeld said.

Mouth guards play vital role in high school sports

I noticed in "Da Ref" on Friday, Feb. 6, a question from Martha in Malta about why those "poor dears" (girls playing basketball) must be forced to wear those big tooth guards.

Maybe Malta is too isolated, but Kent McClary should know better than to say what he did about the mouth guards.

Although there's a sparkling new track in Park City, Utah, for the 2002 Winter Games, the one in Lake Placid - the only other existing track in the country - is falling apart and in dire need of a $20 million makeover.

Seahawks Smith sentenced to jail after injury accident

KENT, Wash. (AP) - Seattle Seahawks running back Lamar Smith on Friday was sentenced to four months in jail for the 1994 car accident that broke teammate Mike Frier's neck and left him paralyzed below the waist.

Seattle running back Lamar Smith was the driver in a 1994 car accident that left a teammate paralyzed from the waist down.

Smith's attorney Allen Ressler said he had asked for an extraordinary sentence of 30 days in jail with at least 10 days converted to community service. Prosecutors, however, said the attorney wanted at least 20 days of community service as part of the sentence.

THE QUAD QUESTION Put this in your halfpipe

Top U.S. skater faltered on key jump

NAGANO, Japan (AP) — And now, Todd Eldredge faces the great quad question.

After skating an immaculate short program, Eldredge must decide whether to include the four-spin-to-win move in Saturday's 4 1/2-minute free skate that will decide the Olympic figure skating gold medal.

The quad is part of the program of all the other top skaters — Elvis Stojko of Canada and Russia's Ilia Kulik and Alexei Yagudin. Each has landed it in competition, something no American skater has managed.

Eldredge, who practices the jump, tried his first one with medals at stake in the nationals last month and came close before losing it on his landing. He compensated for the crash with an otherwise flawless routine to win his fifth championship — the most for an American skater since Dick Button won seven in the 1950s.

Still, Olympics are a significant gap in Eldredge's resume, a place where he has never medaled. To change that, he may have to resort to the challenging move that has raised the bar in figure skating.

The long program highlights CBS-TV's Saturday night coverage of the games. The network will show men's and women's hockey and Nordic combined skiing in the afternoon, and will package the women's combined downhill, the women's 500-meter speedskating, men's cross-country skiing and the first two runs of the two-man bobsled with the figure skating at night.

The freestyle program accounts for two-thirds of the final mark in figure skating and its content is entirely up to the skater. "You have to have the whole package," said Eldredge, who was third following the short program. "If you do all the triples and a quad, and don't have the artistic, the program is lacking somewhere. It's more a question of whether another triple axel is more important than doing the quad. If you do two triple axels and eight triples and all the spins and you have all that, I still think the quad is more of a bonus factor."

Eldredge would like to believe that judges prefer a more balanced package of traditional jumps and spins without the glitz of the quad. That said, he also knows the other skaters almost certainly will include it and that could make a medal difference.

For the record, he practiced the quad on Friday. And he missed it. Eldredge's teammate, Michael Weiss, has taken the jump a step further, incorporating a lutz, which forces the skater to change directions after taking off. He came close to connecting on it at the nationals and he will try it Saturday, although his 11th-place standing after the short program has him out of medal contention.

So what is Eldredge to do? Much of his decision will depend on what the others show the judges, what he feels he needs when it's his turn to skate.

"Kulik skates before me, so I will know what he does and I will know what I have to do," Eldredge said. "If he does the quad and I don't, I will have to step it up in another area. There is 4 1/2 minutes of skating out there besides that jump."

NAGANO — Bummer. We had another scandal here at the Winter Olympics (Official Motto: "64 Events; Zero Indoor Toilets").

The scandal involved snowboarding, the hot new sport that was added to the Olympics for these Games in hopes of attracting members of Generation X (which, in Celsius, is Generation H). What happened was, a Canadian snowboarder named Ross Rebagliati won the men's giant slalom, but then, during routine drug testing, he tested positive for a banned substance: Monica Lewinsky.

No, I promise that is absolutely my last Monica Lewinsky joke until I think of another one. Rebagliati in fact tested positive for marijuana (or, as it is known in slang lingo, "acid"). For a while it looked as though he might be disqualified, but finally the International Olympic Committee decided to let him keep his medal on the grounds that, in the words of the official IOC statement, "He can't remember where he put it."

While this scandal was going on, I went out to see the other Olympic snowboarding event, which is called the "halfpipe" (insert your marijuana joke here). I happen to be something of an expert on snowboarding, having taken one lesson on a hill in Idaho chosen especially for its great natural hardness. I was nervous at the start, but I found it to be a truly exhilarating experience from the moment I stepped onto the board until the moment, three billionths of a second later, when the buck of my head slammed into the hill hard enough to set off earthquake alarms in Peru.

HUMOR

The Olympic snowboarders did quite a bit better. They came zigzagging (insert another marijuana joke here) down a big "U," shaped gully carved into the snow, hurdling up the sides and performing spectacular tricks with names like the "360," the "540," the "720," the "1080" the "Cosing" and the extremely difficult "Slingshot the Hot Bunny," which is when the snowboarder, while hanging in midair, gets his or her nipples pierced. These are classic, traditional maneuvers that have been part of snowboarding since the very early days of the sport (Jan. 12 and 13, 1995).

During each run, big loud-speakers blasted music selected by the competitor, with the most popular performers being rappers, Jimi Hendrix, and of course the Captain and Tenille, whose "Muskrat Love" is a huge favorite with these "shredders." At the end of the run, the competitors received scores from the judges based on amplitude, rotation, landings, technical merit and bagginess of pants.

It was a cold and rainy day, but thousands of enthusiastic Japanese spectators were on hand to not actually watch the event. I am serious: The way it was set up, most of the spectators could not see any part of the halfpipe. They had to watch the competition on one of those big outdoor TV screens. It was like buying a ticket to the Super Bowl and discovering your seat was located outside of the stadium.

Anyway, however you watched it, this was definitely the finest halfpipe snowboarding competition in Olympic history. The only bad thing was that the gold medals were won by a woman from Germany and a man from Switzerland. This is not fair! Where do these people get off, being foreigners? This is supposed to be an AMERICAN sport! We Americans INVENTED Jimi Hendrix!

In fact, the U.S. athletes are not winning many medals here. It is a severe blow to our national pride. (Insert your Monica Lewinsky joke here.)

Organizers warn volunteers about media

NAGANO, Japan (AP) — Volunteers at the Nagano Winter Olympics have been warned — beware of journalists.

Nearly 10,000 reporters, cameramen, broadcasters and media technicians have converged on Nagano for the Winter Olympics, which will be seen in a record 160 countries.

And almost halfway through the games, the onslaught has changed the city.

Police now spend much of their time posing for photos, Buddhist priests have learned to smile on cue, schoolgirls ham it up — giving all the while.

Such attention is new to Nagano, and officials here are taking great pains to both welcome the media and see that they give the world a favorable impression of the city.

The first task at hand — know the enemy.

Volunteers in an official training course conducted before the games for national Olympic committee assistants, for example, were given materials with the following advice:

"Don't take it personally if you are spoken to loudly or even with a threatening tone. They are just trying to do their job as quickly and efficiently as possible.

"Instead of breaking down and crying, shout back!"

The course, sanctioned by the Nagano organizing committee, noted that because journalists tend to work under heavy pressure and strict deadlines, they may give the impression of "being always in a hurry and at times quite demanding."

"They may speak very directly, which could be interpreted as rude," it said. "Never show a lack of respect."

Olympics

Sweden upends U.S. squad; Norwegians vie in skiing

NAGANO, Japan (AP) — A combination of snow, rain and lightning was enough to cancel Fiebo Street's shot at a second gold medal. The elements weren't enough to stop Bjorn Dahlie's bid for more gold — that took a spectacular effort from one of his teammates.

Dahlie, vying to become the first Winter Olympian with seven gold medals, nearly pulled it off. But Norwegian teammate Thomas Algard came on strong at the end of the 15-kilometer cross-country freestyle to deny Dahlie the victory.

Dahlie did not go down easily in a rainstorm that pounded the Snow Harp course. Algard's race of victory was more 1.1 seconds ahead of Dahlie after their pair skied shoulder to shoulder for the last half of the race. Vladimir Smirnov of Kazakhstan took the bronze.

Dahlie's finish gives him six golds and four silvers in his career, equalling Raisa Smetanina's total (4 gold, 5 silver, 1 bronze) for the most Winter Olympic medals.

The ski course in Hakuba continues to be a meteorological dream and a skier's nightmare. The Saturday (Friday night EDT) weather featured a little bit of everything: snow at the top of the mountain, rain at the bottom, lightning somewhere in between.

HOCKEY: Maybe the U.S. hockey players need a reminder that though their NHL break continues, their Olympic break is over.

In the first Olympic game featuring most NHL players, defending gold medalist Sweden defeated the United States 4-2 Friday while the Czechs defeated the Americans, opened with a 5-0 whipping of Belarus.

At the right start, we know that," said Canadian star Wayne Gretzky. "America and Sweden had a much tougher battle. Tomorrow's final is a must for the Americans. The U.S. team won the 1996 World Cup with a victory over Canada."

"Thank God the way the system goes, everyone goes to the quarterfinals," said U.S. captain Tim Tachnuk. "We're disappointed, but the fourth game is all that matters." Chris Chelios and Mike Modano scored for the United States, while Daniel Alfredsson scored twice on assists by Peter Forsberg to lead Sweden.

Sweden's Mats Sundin flips a shot past U.S. goalie Mike Richter, the fourth goal of the game Friday at Big Hat Arena in Nagano. Sweden upset the U.S., 4-2.

"I think the U.S. learned how difficult it can be," said Swedish goalie Tommy Solo of the New York Islanders. "But they're still the favorite."

DETROIT RED WINGS: Heldout Sergei Fedorov might linger since the Russian, playing his first game since June, scored less than two minutes into the game as the Russians blitzed outmanned Kazakhstan 9-2.

And goalie Dominik Hasek of the Buffalo Sabres had no trouble adjusting from the NHL to international play, posting a 30 shutout as the Czech Republic beat Finland 3-0.

CURLING: The drama, the excitement — this is Olympic curling. The U.S. men's team, faced with a do-or-die last shot by captain Tim Somerville, defeated Japan to move into the Olympic semifinals against favored Canada. Somerville made a perfectly placed tap to disorient the host team.

FIGURE SKATING: ZZZZZZZ. The terminally dull compulsory dance competition, nearly five hours of waltzes and tangos on ice, ended with the Russian pair of Irina Gorshuk and Yevgeny Platov in first place. Fellow Russians Anjelika Krylova and Oleg Yuryashvili were second, followed by Marina Anisina and Gwendal Peizerat of France. Elizabeth Funsalan and husband Jerod Swallow of Pontiac, Mich., were in seventh place.

The original dance (30 percent) is Sunday night and the free dance (50 percent) is Monday night.

SPEEDSKATING: The first-ever women's 500-meter race, a two-round event, opened with Canada's Carrianna Le May-Doan setting an Olympic record of 38.39 seconds for first place.

Chris Witt of West Allis, Wis., staggered off the line and struggled through the first turn, but managed to hold on for sixth place after the

U.S., Canadian women's teams face final rehearsal before 'Gold' game

NAGANO, Japan (AP) — It's the last game of the last day of the preliminary round of Olympic women's ice hockey. It won't have any effect on who goes to the medal games — but the teams are the United States and Canada, which will play next week for the gold.

Cammi Granato U.S. captain, ready to play

Will they hold back, resting up for the game that counts? Or will the longtime rivals go all out, seeking the psychological edge of being the only undefeated team in the running? "I don't think any game against Canada can be meaningless. We've got to play for these games no matter what," forward A.J. Mieszkowski said Friday. "I don't think it's possible to hold back. The competition's so fierce that I really don't think we're programmed to do that. I honestly don't think we could."

"If you can go into the gold medal game undefeated, it can do wonders for a team." Canada has been the world's best since 1990, when it won the first Women's World Championship. The United States always has been second. But the gap is closing. At the world championship last spring, the gold medal game went to overtime for the first time as the United States matched Canada goal for goal in the regular game. In 13 exhibition games before the Olympics, the United States has won six as well as the invitational Three Nations Cup. Many games were decided by just one goal.

Both teams race through the competition — except for perennial third-place Finland — at any tournament. For the United States, the Winter Games were no different. But Canada struggled a bit, defeating China and Sweden by the unusually close scores of 2-0 and 5-3.

Canadian coach Shannon Miller spoke of team injuries and said she might rest four players Saturday. She gave her team the day off Friday while the United States stuck to its practice schedule.

"I think she tries to come up with excuses. I do," Mieszkowski said. "We've had times that we've been down, but they've played well. You can't take away from what the winning team does."

There's always a concern that, if the teams go all out Saturday, more injuries could put players out of commission for the most important game. "I don't think we're going to play cautiously. I just think we're going to play the game and let the chips fall where they may," coach Ben Smith said. "If we win, we're not going to be too excited and if we lose we're not going to be too excited."

Nike project begins to raise eyebrows

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — One of the feeblest stories of the Nagano Olympics began two years ago with a brainstorm at Nike's marketing department: What if we transform a core of Kenyan runners into cross-country skiers?

Now Nike's backing of the two athletes may have backfired, with some accusing the company of going too far to put its swoosh on a good story.

"These are not athletes clearing hurdles to reach their Olympic dreams," wrote Detroit News columnist Bob Wojnowski. "These are marketing pawns financed by well-heeled publicity-seekers."

Details of Nike's involvement began to emerge even before one of the great photo moments of the game — Kenyan cross-country skier Philip Biot crossing the finish line first in the 10-kilometer race Thursday and being

"People forget, we are a business, and part of our objective as a business is to get attention."

— Steve Miller, Nike executive

embraced by the gold medal winner from Norway.

Nike, which had its signature swoosh on Biot's hat, collar and sweater, hatched the idea two years ago to send Kenyan distance runners Bolt and Henry Biot to Finland to learn cross-country skiing.

They would be like the celebrated Jamaican bobsled team at the Calgary Games in 1988. Nike paid for their move and spent a reported $200,000 for their lodging and a Finnish coach. The athletes even got custom ski uniforms, courtesy of the company.

Nike spokeswoman Marsha Benson said Nike has financially backed Kenyan runners since 1991 and the move into cross-country skiing came out of a series of meetings between Nike and Kenyan running officials.

It was Rudy Chapa, Nike's vice president for U.S. sports marketing, who first suggested cross-country skiing. Benson said Nike also sponsors top Finnish athletes. Finnish runners travel to Kenya to train. Why not use Kenyan runners to Finland to ski?

Steve Miller, a senior Nike executive in Japan, conceded that less idealistic goals also figured into the company's support. "People forget, we are a business, and part of our objective as a business is to get attention," he said.

Clinton detractors keep busy

Hillary Clinton believes there is a "vast conspiracy" to damage her husband's reputation and ultimately make it impossible for him to continue as president.

She may know something the rest of us don't know. But from where I sit, I don't think President Clinton's problems are caused by a vast conspiracy.

First, let me say it could very well be true that all of his problems are caused by his own appetites. But until definitive information to the contrary comes in, let us assume that our president is an innocent man and that forces outside the White House are creating this current mischief.

We know, for example, the Rev. Jerry Falwell made two videotapes in 1994 accusing President Clinton of murder, drug smuggling and cocaine addiction. The videos also said Clinton and his operatives made planes crash, set houses on fire and murdered "countless people." Now, if people were saying those kinds of things about you, wouldn't you believe there was a vast conspiracy against you?

FAITH TODAY
Clark Mowbray

So Hillary may have oversteered the size of the conspiracy, but there are a lot of other people who would do just about anything to force Bill Clinton from office.

In the early days of Clinton's presidency, I would not have believed talk of a conspiracy against him. After all, a conspiracy takes organization, and hateful people generally aren't patient enough to organize. But there is increasing reason to believe that powerful and wealthy conservatives have become linked for the purpose of damaging Bill Clinton's presidency.

I am merely an observer of this mess, but one wonders, for example, where the money for Paula Jones' defense is coming from. Further, is she no more than a pawn in a high-profile game in which the stakes are the keys to the White House?

Then there is the matter of the lawyers who stepped forward to defend Jones. The Rutherford Institute attorneys representing Jones have many ties to Christian right-wing organizations. In fact, the Rutherford Institute has represented Falwell in legal matters and consistently has tried to demonize Clinton.

The institute's president, John Whitehead, has accused Clinton of plotting to "slaughter innocent unborn children" and "criticized him for open promotion of 'homosexuality, abortion, promiscuity and sexual experimentation among our young people.'" In another newsletter, Clinton is accused of "sweeping, anti-religious policies."

These quotes from Whitehead and his institute are brought to us by Americans United for the Separation of Church and State, a Washington-based, liberal watchdog group that monitors several right-wing organizations. Barry Lynn, president of Americans United, says his organization has files on the Rutherford Institute that date back 10 years.

Another curious piece of information supplied by Americans United involves a secretive organization called the Council on National Policy. Apparently, this 500-member group meets behind closed doors to set the concealed agenda for the rest of the nation. There is big money in this group. The organization's reported membership reads like a Who's Who of American business and religion.

According to the Institute for First Amendment Studies, Pat Robertson, owner of the Christian Broadcast Network and host of the "700 Club," a nationally syndicated television talk show, is a member. So are Oliver North, a talk show host who lied to Congress during the Irangate investigation; James Dobson, president of Focus on the Family; Bill Bright, founder of Campus Crusade for Christ; North Carolina Sen. Jesse Helms and Mississippi Sen. Trent Lott as well as Edwin Meese, former attorney general in the Reagan administration. Whitehead, too, is a member.

There may not be a conspiracy against the Clintons, but there are many people who want to see them politically destroyed.

Surprisingly, a good many of these people are motivated by their religious beliefs. They believe they are on God's side in this battle. And much too often, that means the end justifies the means.

Monk heads for Oregon after being elected abbot

By H.R. Welke
Times-News correspondent

JEROME - A beloved monk left an indelible mark on the Magic Valley community before being elected abbot of Oregon's Mount Angel Monastery.

Father Joseph served and lived at Ascension Priory, near Jerome, for six years. He returned for a visit this month - as Father Abbot Joseph - to give encouragement and support to the Magic Valley monastery.

Being elected an abbot at age 74 was confirmation of Father Abbot Joseph's abilities, since the job is usually filled by a much younger man. The new abbot is in charge of the spiritual and temporal conditions of Mt. Angel Abbey, a seminary with about 150 students and a college and school of theology with about 40 students working on theology degrees. He also oversees a community of 30 priests who do apostolic work.

In addition, Father Joseph supervises and assists with the Priory Monasterio Nuestra Senora de los Angeles in Cuernavaca, Morelos, Mexico.

In describing his work, he said, "We strive for the immortality of people. We all need to find our way to God, and there is more than one path. Monasticism is one of them."

To describe the work and purpose of the monks, he used quotes from Acts 2: "And they were continually devoting themselves to the apostles' teaching and to fellowship, to the breaking of bread and to prayer. And everyone kept feeling a sense of awe, and many wonders and signs were taking place through the apostles. And all those who had believed were together, and had all things in common, and they began selling their property and possessions, and were sharing them with all, as anyone might have need."

Father Abbot Joseph recently visited Ascension Priory in Jerome County. The 74-year-old was elected to the position of abbot in July.

In a recent Ascension Priory Journal, Father Joel wrote, "Father Abbot Joseph is missed for his laughter, his straightforward talk and for his wisdom. He is also missed in the greater community, as he was an active member of the Rotary Club in Jerome and the Jerome Ministerial Association."

Added Ascension's Father Bonifacio Lantz, in a phone interview, "He is very much our spirit leader and we are pleased to have Abbot Joseph visit us. It makes a strong connection and sign of the support and good wishes of the Mt. Angel Abbey."

Father Abbot Joseph was born in San Francisco in 1923. He served in the U.S. Army and is a 1945 graduate of the University of Portland. He studied for the priesthood at Mt. Angel Seminary. He entered monastic life as a novice in 1951, making his first vows in 1952 and taking his final vows in 1955. He was ordained a priest in May 1956.

He worked in the seminary as a prefect and professor, served as superior and procurator of the abbey for five years and was dean of the theology school from 1970 to 1973. In 1975, he moved into the parochial ministry with an assignment as associate pastor of the Sacred Heart Church in Tillamook, Ore.

He has served as director of ministries and clergy personnel director for the Archdiocese of Portland and pastor of St. Paul's Church in Eugene, Ore. He came to Ascension Priory in 1991, where he served as formation director, guestmaster program director and oblate director.

A gifted mosaicist, Father Joseph crafted several beautiful mosaic wall hangings for Ascension Priory and for a monastery in Mexico.

Woman meets guardian angel before her death

By H.R. Welke
Times-News correspondent

JEROME - Do we have guardian angels? We sure do, and some of them look just like the good neighbor across the street.

Last month, a Jerome woman told her family and friends that she owed her life to a concerned neighbor named Alvin Taylor.

For eight hours, Laura Stoltz was trapped in the alley behind her home in near-freezing temperatures and with rain, sleet and snow pounding down on her. Until her guardian angel appeared.

At about 2 p.m. on Jan. 14, the 85-year-old woman noticed that strong winds had blown her garbage can lid down the alley. Going out to pick it up, she slipped, lost her balance and tumbled over into the ditch. The slippery mud made it impossible for her to get up. For a long time, she called out for help, but the blustery, cold wind drowned out her pleas.

At about 10 p.m., neighbors across

Laura Stoltz thought about her warm and loving family while she was trapped in the cold.

The street noticed the widow's lights weren't on and the curtains in her living room were still open. Neighbor Alvin Taylor was concerned. He grabbed a flashlight and went across the street to the Stoltz home. The back door was ajar, but Taylor found no one. He searched the house, the yard, the driveway and behind the garage.

Then he called 911. Police officer Jay Gardner quickly arrived, and together the men continued searching. There were no tracks in the fresh fallen snow to indicate Stoltz had been outside walking around.

Thinking the woman might have gone to a function at the United Methodist Church, Taylor called her pastor. But Pastor Jack Bynum said, "No, Laura isn't at church and hasn't been here."

Unable to find any sign of the woman, the police left and the neighbor went home.

"It was almost 11 o'clock and I should have gone to bed, but I just couldn't," Taylor explained. "Something, it must have been God, kept telling me that Laura was in trouble and needed help. I just had to go back over there and look some more."

The cold wind was even more fierce by that time. Searching through the dark night, Taylor retraced all the places he had already searched, then went down the alley. About 60 feet from the Stoltz back gate, he found Laura Stoltz, shivering and still struggling to get up.

She looked at Taylor and said, "Mr. Taylor, can you help me?" Once again 911 was called, the ambulance and police quickly arrived and the weakened woman was transported to St. Benedict's Family Medical Center. Her temperature had dropped to 87 degrees by that time.

Stoltz spent a few days in the hospital to regain her strength and then returned to her home. For a long time, she had worn a life-line alarm, but she wasn't wearing it the day of the fall.

"I just went out to get the garbage can lid and was coming right back," she said after she was released from the hospital. "Taylor saved my life; he

Young Catholics define essentials of faith in poll

By David Briggs
The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Helping the poor and believing Jesus Christ is present in the Eucharist are essential to being Catholic.

What's not essential? Celibate male priests, except those who oppose the death penalty, or support for organized labor.

A poll of 701 post-baby boom Catholics sought to gauge what is non-negotiable about their faith. It found them agreeing with older members in putting their elements first, but more inclined to accept married and women clergy and lower ecclesiastical status with Protestants.

"There's no doubt, after looking at this data and at other data, that the younger people would be willing to reexamine things that older sociologist Dean Hoge of Catholic University of America.

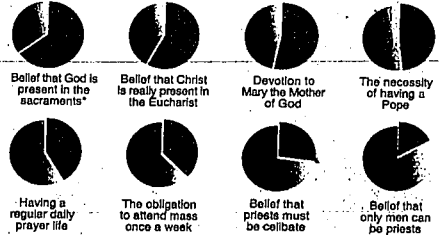

He joined CU colleague William Dinges, Sister Mary Johnson of Emmanuel College in Boston, and Juan Gonzalez of the University of California at Hayward to commission a telephone poll as part of a larger study of young Catholics.

Princeton Survey Research Associates interviewed the Catholics aged 20 to 39 last fall. The results, released to The Associated Press, show that "the sacraments are very strong, and almost the central identity of what Catholics are all about," Hoge said.

Asked what issues were essential beliefs, 65 percent of respondents identified

How essential is each of these elements to your vision of what the Catholic faith is? A look at a survey of Catholics 20-39 years of age:

God's presence in the sacraments, while 58 percent cited Christ's presence in the Eucharist.

Other key aspects of Catholic faith were devotion to Mary and the saints, the necessity of a Pope, and weekly obligation to attend Mass.

Not all church teachings or rules are held in high regard, according to the survey. Only 17 percent deemed it "essential" to believe that priests must be male, and only 27 percent that they cannot marry. Another 25 percent considered a male priesthood - and a celibate one - to be "important" but not essential. Twenty-two percent saw opposing the death penalty as essential to being Catholic. The pollsters gave a margin of error of 4 percent.

Young Catholics also expressed an openness to other Christians. Forty-eight percent said in their mail beliefs today's Catholics are essentially no different from Protestants.

At the top of the hierarchy are core teachings found in the Nicene Creed such as the divinity and humanity of Jesus and his resurrection, followed by concern for the poor. But many Catholics see other issues - the death penalty and female ordination - as non-critical aspects of faith.

Christians find strength in one another at awards show

WOODBIDGE, Va.— I learned a lot watching Christian celebrities parade down a long red carpet into the recent WoW Inspirational Awards.

The first thing I learned is that it's hard not to stare at Evander Holyfield's ear, looking for the one that Mike Tyson took a bite out of. Actually, he took bites out of both in their heavyweight championship fight, not that you can tell anymore. That's why the highly Graham aide who picked up his boss' statue for best nonfiction book whispered "Which one is it?" as Holyfield waded through the crowd and into the awards show.

The next thing I learned is that Boone needs to pray for his tailor. I know it's been awhile since Boone, 63, became a teen idol with his 1957 hit, "April Love." But is a shiny black leather tux really the way to regain the limelight?

I also learned it isn't easy saying "So-and-So" on the INSPIRATIONAL AWARDS which will be right back.

"Don't let anybody think I took four years," Fox TV football host James Brown confessed to the guy who got the stars to tape a promo for this night devoted to famous people with Christian faith.

NBC-TV turned its cameras on her courtside in L.A. as she watched her Lakers beat the Bulls.

The Charlotte, N.C.-based Inspirational Network, which invented the award, did so partly to win viewers. When Steve Gattlin — not even the most famous of the country-singing Gattlin Brothers — is your biggest prime-time draw, you've got a definite ratings challenge.

There were enough gaffes to fill a bloopers show. Comedian Fred Travalena landed in Awards Show Hades. On stage in front of 2,000 people to present the WoW to Fiction Book of the Year, he opened the envelope to discover he had been handed the name of Bible of the Year. Oops. I appreciated the concerns of those who think Christianity deserves better than an awards show starring John "The Dukes of Hazzard" Schneider. If he asked the audience to scream "WOW!" one more time, I was going to make him sit that orange car he crawled into on his silly old show.

But the more I watched Christians savor their night, the more I realized something good was going on. Here, finding strength in one another, were stars of the Christian culture and the fans who are drawn to their light.

Many years after his fame peaked, it was poignant to see Boone attract a crowd because of his faith. It was neat to hear Holyfield say he'd rather talk about God than boxing. It was startling, then moving to stand beside 12-year-old Sheila Flynn of Glen Burnie, Md., as she screamed for her heroes walking in the door.

At that moment, life was good.

Faith, good works go hand in hand

To Mike Nielsen: Have you read all of your Bible? You say that Christians are saved by faith and not by good works. You are only partly right. Without the Savior's atonement, we would be lost to one who will make it to heaven. However, good works and repentance are necessary, too. Read in James 2:14-18 and 20 where it says that faith without works is dead. "Show me thy faith without thy works, and I will show thee my faith by my works."

Think about it, pray about it and do something about it. See you in heaven.

Someday people will face reality

Every now and then someone will say, "The devil made me do it." This seems quite natural for someone to blame everything they do on someone else.

This big bad devil, who only exists in some people's minds, really started something when he told someone they could live forever.

Now we have all these different religions with their ideas and rules on how to accomplish this. Civilizations, like evolution, change ever so slowly, but they do change. And in the not-to-far future, more and more people will be able to face reality.

Mormon controversy can't be left alone

In response to Bert Eames' letter of Jan. 31, "The Mormons are not Christians," controversy is an important issue which should not be left alone. This is not a matter of who is right or wrong, but of what is true.

Christianity is not a subjective, feel-good system but a system based on objective truth.

As Christians, it is imperative to distinguish ourselves from any system, including the LDS Church, which differs from the essential truths of the Bible.

The Bible was written by different classes of people, including political and military leaders, a fishermen, a doctor, a tax collector, etc. II Peter 1:20 tells us that "no prophecy of scripture is a matter of one's own interpretation." By the grace of God we are able to study and understand the true meaning of scripture. II Timothy 3:16 tells us that "all scripture is given by inspiration of God," and II Timothy 2:25 tells us that by studying God's word, we will be equipped to rightly interpret what is true.

No amount of political turmoil can ever cause God to disappear. Moral arguments are by no means petty, morality stems from the very nature and character of God. God is alive, and so is his truth. As his followers, we are obligated to take a stand for his truth.

Mainline Christians grasp at fragile unity

Others are ready to call it splits

By Michael E. Young
The Dallas Morning News

Last year, it was Amendment B. This year, Amendment A. And next year, almost certainly, the issue will be back with a different name, a different designation, but the same intent.

So predicts Dr. James R. Edwards, a Presbyterian scholar and professor of religion at his denomination's Whitworth College in Spokane, Wash.

"The real issue is the authority of Scripture, the authority of Jesus Christ."

—James R. Edwards,
Presbyterian scholar

The issue, whether non-ordainees should be ordained to the ministry of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), at its heart, the question concerns Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Lutherans and Methodists and just about every other mainline Protestant denomination.

"It's only the symptom. The real issue is the authority of Scripture, the authority of Jesus Christ."

And that issue has so divided his church for so long, he said, that a complete break could be the best and maybe the only solution.

"It's like divorce. No one wants divorce. But there comes a time when it's the lesser of two evils," Edwards said. "We who continue to live in the denomination see we're not going to be able to move beyond this."

His is a drastic view of the debate that has eroded mainline denominational unity. But open schism is a notion increasingly common within American churches as the fighting over sexual questions and gender roles wears on.

"The conversation is out in the open in the church, and it has been," acknowledged Gay Morthenson, an official with the Episcopal Church in Dallas. "But while this is being talked about, we have to be careful we aren't seduced by the conversation. We can't be working toward unity in the church."

But it is unity possible when the dividing issues are a denominational amendment. The cracks in the breaks are mended when surveys show that significant majorities of mainline congregants support the amendment. "But while this is being talked about, we have to be careful we aren't seduced by the conversation. We can't be working toward unity in the church."

While acknowledging that his denomination is "in a terrible shape," Rosberry remains optimistic. "On good days, my faith tells me this is the Lord's church and he will work it out."

Statistics show that people have abandoned mainline denominations by the thousands in recent years, some leaving organized religion completely and others moving to more conservative churches. The exodus has been noted in Anglican congregations, which switch denominations or give up their affiliation.

According to the 1996 Yearbook of American and Canadian Churches, full membership in the Episcopal Church fell more than 125,000 between 1990 and 1994. In 1994, the Presbyterian Church lost more than 98,000 members, the United Methodist Church lost 62,000, the Evangelical Lutheran Church almost 14,000.

But during that same period, overall church membership in the United States increased by a half-million people, most conspicuously in more conservative groups, such as the Roman Catholic Church, up 332,000; Southern Baptists, up 215,000; the Mormons, up 93,000; and the Assemblies of God, up almost 53,000.

"We have little social scientific data that identifies the specific reasons for changing churches from those making the exodus from the mainline," said Paul Thigpen, assistant professor of religious studies at Southwest Missouri State University.

But since the drain is in the liberal-to-conservative direction, we can reasonably assume that liberal challenges within the mainline churches to the traditional standards of morality are contributing to this denominational shift.

Over much the same period that mainline churches have lost membership, new nondenominational movements have drawn hundreds of thousands of people. Donald E. Miller, a professor of religion at the University of Southern California, tracked three of those new church movements — Calvary Chapel, the Vineyard Fellowship and Hope Chapel.

"They tend to be very conservative, but I think in some ways that's attractive to people who have had moral, Miller said. "In contrast, in a lot of these sinking mainline churches, there's a lot of bickering going on regarding issues like sexuality, for example, that are the core of people's search for meaning."

Last year, the Presbyterian Church struggled with a long and often nasty debate over Amendment B, the so-called "fidelity and chastity amendment." It would have required church leaders to live "either in fidelity within the covenant of marriage between a man and a woman or in celibacy," he said. Anyone refusing to do so couldn't be ordained or installed as a deacon, elder or minister.

Amendment B was finally approved by a majority of presbytery, 97-74, after what Jerry Van Marter, director of the Presbyterian News Service, called "the most mean-spirited debate I've ever seen in the church." And then within a few months, a softer version of the amendment was introduced at the Presbyterians' General Assembly, and the whole process began again.

The new version, Amendment A — commonly called the "fidelity and integrity amendment" — announces the specific restrictions and instead of "and integrity" requires "fidelity and integrity in marriage or singleness, and in all relationships of life."

Those who are ordained officials shall acknowledge their own sinfulness, their need for repentance, and their reliance on the grace and mercy of God in carrying out the duties of their office," it states.

Traditionalists were livid. "You cannot believe the anger and the frustration of the denomination on this," said Edwards of Whitworth College. "The mistake is to think we've settled this. I'm blown away to see Amendment A come up. Now I believe it's not 'Beat Amendment A and that will settle it.' It will be back."

According to polls conducted by the Presbyterian Church, roughly 80 percent of its members favor the ordinance of non-ordainees, which would include homosexuals, said Van Marter.

The Rev. Todd H. Wetzel, executive director of Episcopalians United, said a similar poll in the Episcopal Church determined that 86 percent of those respondents opposed ordination of non-ordainees, which would include homosexuals and some percentage opposed same-sex unions.

Mormons look towards Nagano

Representatives ponder what role church will play when Utah plays Olympic host

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — The Mormon church has sent representatives to Nagano, Japan, to learn how the ancient temple city is hosting the world's biggest winter sporting event.

While being going to the various venues and just seeing how the Japanese are doing things," Bruce Olsen, managing director of public affairs for the church told a Standard-Examiner's reporter in Ogden.

On Monday, Olsen and two other representatives of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints toured the main press center where the Salt Lake Organizing Committee has an office. Reporters from three Utah newspapers, some of the 8,000 journalists estimated to be in Nagano for the Games, also work from the center.

Olsen, who said he has been impressed with the enthusiasm of the Japanese public, also said the church is not yet sure what role it will play in the 2002 Games.

"We're as a church in the position of learning what we can and then if the Olympic committee asks us to do something, that will be presented to church leaders and we will undoubtedly do everything we can to make the Salt Lake City Olympics a successful event."

Salt Lake Organizing Committee Vice President Shelley Thomas said SLOC is often asked about the Mormon church by reporters.

"The church is very much a focal point of Salt Lake City," she said. "The church has expressed to us that their interest in the Olympics is that we present a unified community."

One resource of the church in particular — its many returned missionaries who are bilingual — will be helpful, Thomas said.

LDS president embarks on visit to Africa

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Gordon B. Hinckley embarked Friday on the first visit by a Mormon church president to Central Africa since the white stone for a faith that until 20 years ago excluded blacks from its priesthood.

Hinckley, 87, planned to fly first to Nigeria, followed by stops in the capitals of Ghana, Kenya, Zimbabwe and South Africa, where he also will visit Durban and Cape Town.

During his six-day tour, Hinckley's audiences outside South Africa will be made up primarily of blacks who have joined the Utah-based Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints since 1978.

On June 9 of that year, the church's governing First Presidency, citing a revelation from God to then-President Spencer W. Kimball, lifted the priesthood ban and missionaries quickly began proselytizing across the color line in Africa and elsewhere.

While the church first sent missionaries to South Africa in 1853 and to white-ruled Rhodesia in 1950, Mormons in southern Africa numbered fewer than 7,000 in 1978. Since then, with missionaries targeting all races and expanding their presence into Central Africa, the church's membership has grown to roughly 100,000 in all of Africa.

"The church is growing in South Africa as it never has before," said Dale LeBaron, professor of church history at Brigham Young University.

Members, now outstrips South Africa with its 24,400 Mormons.

There are nearly 15,000 church members in Ghana, 6,700 in Zimbabwe (the former Rhodesia) and 2,400 in Kenya, according to the church's latest figures.

Robust membership gains in Africa and among blacks in Latin America and in contrast to the faith's far more modest success converting significant numbers of African Americans.

In her 1994 book, "Black Saints in a White Church," BYU history professor J. Morgan Kousser gives the church solid marks for its efforts to break down cultural and racial barriers confronting African blacks who convert to Mormonism.

"Yet the church's image has been that it is racist," she wrote. "The lack of contact of Utah Mormons with African Americans sometimes fulfills expectations on insensitivity and cultural differences."

It was church founder Joseph Smith's successor, Brigham Young, who taught that descendants of the Biblical Cain were cursed with a black skin and barred from the priesthood. Later leaders cited an ambiguous scriptural reference to support their belief that blacks somehow had been less righteous in a pre-mortal existence.

By the 1960s, though, when the policy faced a firestorm of public protest — civil rights activists targeted church-owned BYU with demonstrations and boycotts — church leaders were simply stating the reasons for the racial ban were known only to God.

Religion can be a public affair, theologian says

code name for spirituality. It's all over the place. And the more it's all over the place, the safer you are. You're not dealing with a single monolith dominating public life. Now, what are the consequences? It's always better to have all the voices at the table instead of behind the door.

When blacks began speaking up for blacks and being heard, things changed. When all the ethnic, racial and religious groups speak up, then you deal with the other very differently than you do if you are talking about them or not listening to them. When we talk to each other, we get consensus and change. That can only happen in the public zone. Another consequence is we'll understand the dynamics of what to do with America better. More than half the American people are in regular volunteer activities, and 70 to 80 percent of that is done on the basis of religious impulse. So if you want volunteering, you better have religion. But what do you do, for example, when a particular group is very effective in a kind of dead end as a fad and go off with the market when it isn't as productive as originally promised? That is, when holistic and alternative medicine don't keep us alive forever, when thinking the right thoughts don't necessarily bring the spouse or children back, when getting in tune with the universe doesn't do all it's promised. In other words, when we keep avoiding the meaning of suffering and limits in life, which today's spirituality and marketplace version — does.

Q: What current trends in American religion most fascinate you and make you most eager to learn how they'll play out that hot.

A: Will spirituality come to a kind of dead end as a fad and go off with the market when it isn't as productive as originally promised? That is, when holistic and alternative medicine don't keep us alive forever, when thinking the right thoughts don't necessarily bring the spouse or children back, when getting in tune with the universe doesn't do all it's promised. Q: What have been the consequences of many Americans saying, for the last 50 years or so, that religion is solely a private affair?

A: First, I'd like to talk about why we are able to talk about public religion now. The biggest difference between 1958 and 1948 or '49 is this. Back then Americans thought this was a Christian nation or a Judeo-Christian nation or a Protestant nation. If you have just two or three contenders, it's very dangerous. What's happened in America in these 40 or 50 years is we wake up now and there are several million Muslims. So we're not Judeo-Christian. Since the 1965 immigration laws changed, there are great numbers of Asians coming in with their religions. We're learning that Mormons are all over the nation. That makes a very different mix. This has been accompanied by religion that's gone non-institutional, which usually is (a) informed by religion. The question of cloning, issues of "in vitro" fertilization. I need hardly mention abortion, sexuality, homosexuality. All of these are as old as the prophets and the book of Leviticus in our culture. And they are not going to be addressed unless we smoke outside sources.

Religion can be a public affair, theologian says

For decades, theologian and historian Martin E. Marty has been one of this country's most influential interpreters of religion. Marty turned 70 last week, and the University of Chicago honored him by establishing the $6 million Martin E. Marty Center, to study the role of religion in American public life. The following is an edited interview with Marty.

Q: Where do you see the point of tension between private and public religion in America today?

A: An honored American phrase is "religion is a private affair." We've been saying that for half a century at least. There are some good reasons. The individual's relation to God, private prayer, meditation, making sense of a chaotic world, looking for meaning, dealing with terminal illness, rejoicing when a baby is born, waking up at 3 a.m. and thinking how little you are, dealing with intellectual problems. A lot of Americans think that exhausts what religion is. But there are very good reasons these years to deal with religion in public life. One, we should be realistic and accurate in our assessments. Many of the major things in public life are religious in origin, both formal and institutional and private and personal. There is almost never a medical ethics story that makes perfect sense unless you finally about religion or

Tibetan huts may be remnants of kingdom

The Washington Post

PARIS — On the world's highest plain, in the outer reaches of Tibet, French explorer Michel Peissel was tracing ancient trading routes when he stumbled upon a cluster of curious, mud-brick, dome-shaped structures made of mud and brick.

Though they were unusual, Peissel, an ethnologist and anthropologist, did not suspect the structures were the remains of a lost, pre-Buddhist kingdom of Shang Shung.

"These houses could be remnants of that ancient mysterious kingdom," said Peissel.

Mike Camway of Magic Valley Distributing, right, presents a check for $4,201 to Mark Rivers and Dave Burnett, KQFC air personalities, in the 'Country Cares for St. Jude Kids' radiothon in Boise. The event raised more than $139,000 for the St. Jude Children's Research Hospital.

COMMUNITY EVENTS

Being on target pays off

BURLEY - The Burley Trap Club will hold "Meat and Money" shoots starting at 11 a.m. Saturdays and Sundays, today through Mar 1 (except for Feb. 28), at the range, 850 W. 50 S. on Milner Dam Road. Meat and money shoots are $3; guarantee cards are available. Competitors shoot against same ability level participants. A "Pick Your Buddy" 60-yard shoot with a combined 48-yard maximum team will start at 11 a.m. on Feb. 28. Teams can have any number of partners and shoot a variety of yards, which are added to be 48 or less.

The entry fee is $25, and the pay is $0/20/20. A $5 "Belt Buckle" shoot off, miss and out, will be held following the buddy shoot.

Valentine dinner planned

TWIN FALLS - Susan Brown will be entertaining at a Valentine Dinner from 7 to 9 p.m. today at Kelly's in the Canyon at the Canyon Springs Golf Course.

Dancers learn new steps

HAILEY - A Valentine Contra dance will kick off at 8 p.m. today at the Hailey Grange Hall. The Wood River String Band will accompany caller David Quinley. All dances are walked through, so no prior knowledge of dancing is necessary.

This is the dance group's third year. Approximately 35 to 60 people show up to these dances, which occur on the second Saturday of each month.

Families and singles are welcome. A $5 donation is required. For more information, call David Quinley at 324-7509 or send e-mail to quinley@magicklink.com.

Shooters earn trophies

TWIN FALLS - The Twin Falls Gun Club is sponsoring a 125-bird handicap beginning at 11 a.m. Sunday at the club, located on North Washington at the canyon rim.

Trophies will be awarded to each yardage group. Bring your own gun and ammunition. Families are invited. For more information, call 734-0639.

Hobbs earns Eagle

TWIN FALLS - Patrick Hobbs has earned the Eagle Scout Award through the Boy Scouts of America. The award will be presented to Patrick at a court of honor set for 7 p.m. Sunday at the Twin Falls LDS 11th ward church, 847 Eastland Drive.

Patrick earned 26 merit badges in a variety of areas. His Eagle Scout service project involved siding and re-roofing one of the homes for Valley House. He worked with Valley House to complete the project. Supplies were donated by Anderson Lumber and various citizens of the Twin Falls community. Patrick was assisted by troop members, friends and family. A total of 81 man hours were used to complete the project, which provides a warmer and drier place for someone to live. Patrick, 15, is a sophomore at Twin Falls High School. He is a member of Troop 3, sponsored by the Twin Falls LDS 11th ward, and the son of Dr. Randall C. and Deborah Hobbs. His interests include football, truck, singing and outdoor activities.

Annual banquet slated

JEROME - Ducks Unlimited has planned its annual Jeromite banquet for Feb. 21 in the blue building at the Jerome County Fairgrounds.

Dinner, featuring peach wood-smoked prime rib or Alaskan king crab, will be catered by the Snake River Grill. The raffle and auction will feature many fine prizes.

A sell-out crowd is expected. Early bird registration is due by Monday. Everyone is invited to help celebrate 61 years of Ducks Unlimited efforts of conserving waterfowl on the North American continent.

For more information, call Randall Rector at 324-5425 or Dave Ritchie at 324-8427.

College tips offered

TWIN FALLS - Students and parents interested in learning more about college are invited to attend Albion College student and with Admission Counselor Josh Ritchie to gain a better understanding of the college's activities, student life, academics, admission procedures and expenses.

College night is an opportunity for high school students to meet with current Albion College students and with Admission Counselor Josh Ritchie to gain a better understanding of the college's activities, student life, academics, admission procedures and expenses. For more information, call the Albion College of Admission Office at (800) 224-3246.

New CSI classes begin

TWIN FALLS - The College of Southern Idaho's Leadership and Entrepreneurial Training Center is offering two classes that begin soon.

Speaking to Be Heard, a workshop on interpersonal communication skills, will meet from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Wednesday in Room 277 at the Taylor Building. The session's aim is to improve communication among supervisors, co-workers and clients. Colin Randolph will be the instructor. The fee is $69.

Dealing with Change and Cultural Shifts will meet from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Feb. 25 in Taylor 276. Colin Randolph is the instructor. The workshop will show the forces of change and how to help organizations and employees adapt and change these stressful times into workplace opportunities. Cost is $89. For more information, call 733-9554, Ext. 2450.

Masons plan evening

TWIN FALLS - The Masonic Night Ball will be held Feb. 21 at the Weston Plaza Hotel, 1350 Blue Lakes Blvd.

The evening will begin with a no-host cocktail hour from 6 to 7 p.m. Dinner will be served at 7 p.m., and the College of Southern Idaho Big Band will perform dance music for all ages from 7 to 11 p.m.

CLUB PROFILE

TWIN FALLS WRESTLING CLUB

Purpose: The Twin Falls Wrestling Club is an organization for wrestlers ages 5 and up to learn freestyle and Greco-Roman wrestling, the styles used in Olympic competition. Although freestyle wrestling bears a resemblance to the in-style practice in American scholastic and collegiate programs, there are major differences between the national and international styles. The objective of the club is to make wrestling vigorous, dynamic and spectacular.

The Twin Falls Wrestling Club is a member of USA Wrestling. Wrestlers receive the USA card with membership and the USA Wrestler Newsletter.

Meets: from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays March 1 through April 29.

Dues: $35 per season.

For more information, call Celeste McMillan at 734-8526 or Debbie Garner at 734-5480.

Profile your club

The Times-News would like to profile your organization. Send your information along with your name, a photo and your phone number to April Crnich, Community Editor, P.O. Box 248 Twin Falls, ID 83301.

The menu for the evening is roast boned beef with demi-glaze sauce or chicken coron bleu, baked potato, green beans, rolls and cherry or apple cobbler.

Cost is $30 per couple plus $15 per person. Proceeds will go toward the CSI band trip to the Switzerland Jazz Festival.

The public is invited.

Winterfest under way

ARCO - The annual Craters of the Moon Winterfest is planned for Feb. 21.

The event is held in mid-winter each year to give families an opportunity to enjoy the monument while its covered in snow. Available activities include sledding, snow sculpting, snowshoeing and cross-country skiing. Children also have the chance to create nature crafts. Rental skis and snowshoes are available on a first-come, first-served basis.

Guided snowshoe walks begin at 11 a.m. 1 p.m. and 2 p.m. Entertainment at 12:30 p.m. features local singer Chandos Brewer and the Cary High School music group "To the Max." A lunch of hamburgers, chili and homemade pie will be available, courtesy of the Gold Wing Road Riders Association. Artwork from various schools will be on display at the visitor center.

All activities will be held between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. at the Craters of the Moon National Monument, located 18 miles west of Arco on Highway 20/26/93. Participants should bring their own tubes, skis and snowshoes if they have them. Dress in warm clothing and bring winter gloves, hats and boots. For more information, call (208) 527-3257.

Craft fair booths available

RUPERT - A few booths are still available for the Mini-Cassia Spring Craft Fair scheduled for from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. March 21 at Minico High School.

Booths must offer handmade crafts. Like the fall fair, the spring fair will fill two gymnasiums. Crafters from Idaho and Utah are expected to display a large variety of items. More than 7,000 people attended the fall fair, which is the second largest Idaho fair in English as a second language. For more information, call Jean Phillips at 438-3223.

Bounty up for grabs

TWIN FALLS - Old or damaged child car seats can now be turned in for a reward through the "Child Safety Seat Bounty" program, sponsored by the South Central District Health Department and the Idaho Department of Transportation. The program will run through April 30.

Individuals are encouraged to turn in unsafe car seats and receive a $5 bounty. Car seats may be dropped off at the Health District office in Twin Falls, any Head Start Center or at the fire department in Twin Falls, Buhl or Kimberly.

If your car seat is more than 10 years old, has missing parts or has been damaged in a car crash, it should be replaced. For more information, call Mary Valentine at 734-5900, Ext. 214.

Bake-off contest begins

Beverly Hansten-Healy of Nampa, daughter of Vinora Hansten of Twin Falls, has been chosen to represent Idaho in the Pillsbury Bake-Off Contest. Hansten-Healy is among 100 finalists chosen to compete in the contest and is the only cook selected from Idaho. When not creating culinary concoctions, she is the extension home economist for Owyhee County in Marsing. She created eight concoctions for the Bake-Off and says her entry is a closely guarded secret until the contest results are in. The competition will be held Feb. 21-24 in Orlando, Fla. The top prize is $1 million dollars.

WORLD IN BRIEF

German president to get new Mercedes

BONN, Germany — Germany and Daimler-Benz are giving German President Eduard Shevardnadze a new car to replace an armored Mercedes limousine damaged in an assassination attempt.

The blast destroyed the four-story building at Santos Dumont airport, about one week before Carnival, a raucous four-day celebration that attracts hundreds of thousands of tourists to Rio.

The cause of the fire was unknown, said Elba Bruno, a spokeswoman for the government airport management company Infraero.

WTO says European beef ruling was unfair

GENEVA — The European Union has unfairly banned imports of hormone-treated beef from American ranchers, the World Trade Organization said Thursday.

The U.S. beef industry has complained about the 1988 ban by the 15-nation EU, saying it has cost the industry $250 million in lost exports to Europe each year.

The Europeans are worried about the threat to human health of eating the meat. The United States insists there is no valid research showing any health risk from the six hormones, which are fed to 90 percent of U.S. cattle to enhance growth.

In its action Friday, the WTO ruled in a ruling by an appeals board. The board upheld the findings of an independent panel that the EU's ban on imports of beef treated with growth hormones was illegal because it was not supported by a proper risk analysis.

Iranian cleric says Rushdie must die

TEHRAN, Iran — Iran's chief prosecutor renewed the death sentence against British author Salman Rushdie on Friday, saying "the shedding of this man's blood is obligatory."

Atyollah Rouhollah Khomeini said in a Feb. 14, 1989, fatwa, or Islamic decree, that Rushdie should be killed for allegedly insulting the Prophet Mohammed in his book "The Satanic Verses."

Since then, Rushdie has lived largely in hiding and under the protection of the British government.

Iraq dispute shows strain in U.S.-Russia ties

MOSCOW (AP) — The U.S.-Russian split over Iraq underlines how ties between Moscow and Washington have cooled as the Russians try to reassert themselves as a world power.

While there is no danger of reviving the Cold War rivalry that dominated the world for more than 45 years, the diplomatic honeymoon that followed the collapse of the Soviet Union in 1991 is coming to an end.

Both Moscow and Washington value good relations, but there are likely to be more and more disagreements as Russia goes its own way.

Russia's opposition to the use of force in Iraq is the latest in a series of foreign policy disputes with the United States. Moscow bitterly opposes NATO expansion in east Europe, and Parliament has blocked the START II missile-reduction treaty with Washington.

Moscow also is building links with China, saying the world must not be dominated by the United States.

William Cohen Boris Yeltsin

President Boris Yeltsin and other top Russian officials have unleashed a barrage of warnings on U.S. military strikes against Iraq. Yeltsin said last week a U.S. attack could lead to world war and his defense minister, Igor Sergeev, publicly warned U.S. Defense Secretary William Cohen in Moscow against attacking Iraq.

At the heart of Russia's opposition are two issues.

On one level, the issue is mostly pragmatic. Iraq, an old Soviet client state, owes Moscow billions of dollars for weapons that can't be paid until U.S. sanctions end.

For updates on this topic... Visit The Times-News Online at http://www.mgicvalley.com and click on The Wire.

Russia, its economy in chaos, desperately needs the cash and also hopes for big new contracts with Iraq when sanctions end.

The second issue, emotive and unpredictable, is Russia's status in the world. Many Russians yearn for the days when Moscow was the world's other superpower.

The fact that Russia has lost much of its power makes the need to play a major global role all the more pressing for many Russian officials. And envy of its old rival, the United States, is rising as Russia's power continues to decline. Russian officials dismiss suggestions they would aid Iraq against the United States. Moscow backs United Nations efforts to strip Iraq of weapons of mass production, but says only a diplomatic solution can work.

Foreign Minister Yevgeny Primakov, who formed close ties in the Middle East as a Soviet diplomat, has pushed for a Moscow-backed solution on Iraq to help restore Russian influence in the region.

The Russian government has neither the desire or power to risk a major confrontation with the United States. Yeltsin considers good relations with Washington a foundation of his foreign policy.

But the Russian government and many politicians will be stridently critical of the United States if they believe they are being treated as second-class Russian nationalists will use resentment of American power to boost their calls to revive Russia as a great power.

U.N. chief will send mapping teams to locate Iraqi sites

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Searching for a diplomatic solution to the Iraq crisis, U.N. chief Kofi Annan said Friday he was sending a "technical team" to Baghdad to map the eight sites the Iraqis have placed off-limits to U.N. arms inspectors.

Annan made the announcement after meeting for more than an hour with representatives of the five permanent Security Council members — the United States, Russia, Britain, France and China.

The U.N. secretary-general said the meeting produced "large areas of common ground" among the five. Russia and France urged a diplomatic solution and oppose a U.S. military attack. Annan is under pressure from Russia, China and Arab countries to go to Baghdad himself and negotiate with the Iraqis. The secretary-general said he had no plans to do so at this time.

"I also informed the permanent representatives of my decision to send a technical team to Baghdad this weekend to work with Iraq to map the presidential sites urgently," Annan said. "I expect them to conclude this task within three to four days."

U.N. officials said the team would include two mappers from the U.N. office in Vienna. In Moscow, Russian Foreign Minister Yevgeny Primakov urged Annan to go to Baghdad to negotiate a peaceful end to the crisis.

"We believe that this is a very important moment for the Secretary-General of the United Nations, Kofi Annan, to visit Iraq," Primakov said. Russia has staunchly opposed use of force against Saddam Hussein.

In Paris, a French diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity, said France was also encouraging the secretary-general to go.

Annan has been resisting such pressures until there is a clear sign Iraq is willing to meet U.S. and British demands for unrestricted access to all suspected weapons sites by members of the U.N. Special Commission.

The commission, known as UNSCOM, has been trying for seven years to determine if Iraq has hidden or destroyed weapons, issued in 1991 after the Persian Gulf War, to destroy all long-range missiles and mass production of chemical weapons.

That is the main condition for lifting crippling economic sanctions imposed in 1990 after Saddam invaded Kuwait, triggering the Gulf conflict.

U.N. spokesman Fred Eckhard said Annan is "first trying to reach agreement among members of the Security Council on the approach that could be taken with Iraq."
