Trials strain finances

County could go bankrupt if taxes aren't raised for trials, officials say

By Brian Haynes
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—An expected and uncommon series of murder trials has strained the county's coffers, and if voters don't approve a property tax raise the county could go bankrupt, a county official said.

"I've never cried about lack of money, but I wouldn't want to put the county in danger of bankruptcy," Twin Falls County Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said.

With its current budget and cash reserves, the county doesn't have enough money to cover the cost of three murder trials in the coming months, he said.

The solution, raising $1 million in property taxes through the next two years, requires voter approval to break the annual 3 percent cap on taxes, he said.

The vote would have to take place next month to get the money in next year's budget, Hempleman said. Once the budget is published in late August, it cannot be changed.

Before spending $20,000 to conduct a vote, the county will survey voters. If public opinion is low the vote will not take place, Hempleman said.

If the public doesn't approve adding $1 million in taxes, the county would find itself in dire financial straits, County Clerk Bob Fort said.

One option would be issuing registered warrants, which allows the county to borrow money from banks. The county would cover its expenses for this year, but the borrowed money would be subtracted from next year's budget and the county wouldn't be able to cover the loss, he said.

The county could also ask the Legislature for emergency money, but not until it asks voters to increase taxes. Even if the Legislature approved extra money, Please see TRIALS, Page A2

High court throws out line-item veto law

Defeat for NEA

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court rejected a line-item veto law as the solution to the historic struggle for control of federal purse strings Thursday, striking down the power Congress gave the president to cancel specific items in tax and spending legislation.

President Clinton, who briefly held unprecedented authority over federal spending, said he was "deeply disappointed" by the highest court's 6-3 ruling declaring the 1997 law unconstitutional.

Members of Congress pledged to go back to the legislative drawing board and try again — even though the court's decision said the president cannot have such line-item authority unless the Constitution is amended.

The law that was rejected "gives the president the unilateral power to change the text of duly enacted statutes," Justice John Paul Stevens wrote for the court. "We do not lightly conclude that (Congress) action was unauthorized by the Constitution."

Clinton was the first president to exercise such a veto, an authority sought in vain by most of his predecessors. He used the power 82 times last year, but Congress negated his veto 38 times.

SPLISH, SPLASH

Robby Kolb, 11, of Twin Falls didn't mind the heavy rain and hail that poured over Twin Falls Thursday afternoon. The deluge of rain left puddles along Third Street North that were too hard for many neighborhood children to resist. Thunder storms hit other areas of the Magic Valley, as well. One storm left a 4-foot diameter hole on streets in Gooding, while gushing water sent manhole covers popping out of place around the city.

Training range expansion weathers fight

By Sean Gorman
States News Service

WASHINGTON — The proposed expansion of Mountain Home Air Force Base's training range appears headed to safe passage in the Senate, after an effort to derail it failed on a narrow vote Thursday.

Sen. Dirk Kempthorne, R-Idaho, and supporters blocked an amendment offered

After vote, critics and supporters still debate bill — B1

By Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., to kill the proposal.

Kempthorne and other range proponents say the new range would enhance training for the 356th composite wing housed at Mountain Home.

Critics have derided the Kempthorne amendment, saying the range isn't needed and will greatly increase low-level air traffic and disrupt wildlife, Shoshone-Paiute Indian rituals and recreational activities.

The range proposal, which Kempthorne attached to the Defense Authorization bill, transfers land for a 12,000-acre bombing range for dummy ordnance in Owyhee

Health company closure affects Gooding, Hailey

The Associated Press

BOISE — Small businesses have told a federal hearing on fair regulations that government red tape slows their progress and in one case, halted a home-health company.

"Home is where the heart is, and the heart has been ripped out by the federal government," said Verlene Kaiser of Boise-based Community Home Health, Idaho's largest home-health provider.

She announced to the Thursday hearing of the Northwest Region, Regulatory Fairness Board that Community Home Health is going out of business. That affects operations in Salmon, Challis, Hailey, Gooding, Boise, Weiser and McCall, about 500 patients; and 150 jobs.

Company officials said they are working to arrange care for their patients.

The boards were established by the Small Business Regulatory Fairness Act in 1996, and comments are reported to Congress for when it sets federal budgets.

Clinton gently lectures China on sensitive human rights issues

The Associated Press

XIAN, China — After being welcomed in the grand style of ancient emperors, President Clinton gently lectured China on human rights Thursday and rejected criticisms of his attempt to strengthen relations.

"We have a powerful ability to help each other grow," he declared.

Clinton's high-stakes journey through China began amid reports of detention or harassment of several dissidents, a matter U.S. Ambassador James Sasser planned to raise with government officials on Friday.

Clinton also will urge President Jiang Zemin to allow freer political dialogue without government interference, said national security spokesman P.J. Crowley. The White House registered a protest over the denial of visas to three Radio Free Asia reporters.

Beginning a nine-day visit, Clinton was treated to an extravagant celebration of costumed warriors and dancers who converted to thunderous drums among a blaze of red lanterns. The welcome was based on Tang Dynasty traditions dating to the 7th century.

Xian Mayor Feng Xichu gave Clinton a ceremonial key to the city, introducing Clinton and his wife, Hillary, as "Mr. President and Mrs. President."

"A new day is dawning for the Chinese people, for China's greatness lies, as always, with its people," the president said. His remarks were heard by several hundred invited guests, but tens of thousands of people stood silently on the streets to glimpse Clinton's 50-car motorcade.

"Respect for the worth, the dignity, the potential and the freedom of every citizen is a vital source of America's strength and success," Clinton said. "In this global information age ... a commitment to providing all human beings the opportunity to develop on their full potential is vital to the strength and success of the new China, as well."

The first presidential visit since the 1989 Tiananmen Square crackdown, Clinton's trip is intended to help stabilize U.S.-Chinese relations after years of grudging distrust. With little expectation of any breakthroughs, officials said the symbolism of Clinton's trip likely will outweigh the substance.

President Clinton and first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton are greeted by two Chinese children with a gift of flowers at the airport in Xian, the ancient imperial capital of China, Thursday.

Court: Disability Act covers HIV

Justices rule feds need not pay for 'indecent' art

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a decision praised by gay rights advocates and the disabled, the Supreme Court ruled Thursday that people infected with HIV can sue under a key anti-discrimination law even if they have no visible AIDS symptoms.

The 5-4 ruling said a woman whose dentist refused to fill a cavity in his office because she was HIV-positive is covered by the Americans With Disabilities Act, the 1990 law that protects the disabled against discrimination in jobs, housing and public accommodations.

"HIV infection, even in the so-called asymptomatic phase, is an impairment which substantially limits the major life activity of reproduction" and therefore qualifies for coverage under the disability law, Justice Anthony M. Kennedy wrote for the court.

It was the high court's first ruling involving the human immunodeficiency virus, which causes AIDS.

President Clinton praised the decision, saying it "reinforces the protections offered by the landmark Americans With Disabilities Act for Americans living with HIV and AIDS."

Jennifer Middleton, of the American Civil Liberties Union's AIDS Project, predicted the decision will help people with other disabilities — such as cancer, epilepsy and diabetes — who sometimes have had trouble convincing lower courts they are covered by the disability law.

In action, the court ruled: • The government need not subsidize art it considers indecent, restoring a law that requires public venues to be considered when handing out grants.

The 8-1 decision was praised as a blow for decency by some who had criticized the National Endowment for the Arts for giving money to several high-profile makers of erotic art. Others said the ruling could chill creativity on the edges of the cultural mainstream.

The White House prosecutor Kenneth Starr is not enrolled in a lawyer's status of a conversation with then-deputy White House counsel Vincent Foster nine days before his death.

In a 5-3 decision, the court said that "it has been generally, if not universally, accepted for well over a century, that the attorney-client privilege survives the death of the client in some such cases."

Starr now must look elsewhere for evidence of false statements regarding First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton's involvement in the White House travel office inquiry.

Judge issues injunction against abortion law

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A federal judge on Thursday blocked a state law from taking effect that would ban a controversial type of late-term abortion, saying the language in the legislation was unprecise.

U.S. District Judge Robert E. Payne's injunction is effective until a lawsuit challenging the law goes to trial, which is scheduled for Aug. 18. The law was to take effect next Wednesday.

State Attorney General Mark Earley said he would immediately appeal the decision. "Virginia's statute ... is supported by an overwhelming majority of Virginians," he said.

INTERNET FRAUD

Russ Bodoff of the Better Business Bureau On-Line Council of Better Business Bureaus Inc. in Arlington, Va., appears as a witness Thursday before a House subcommittee on Telecommunications, Trade and Consumer Protection on Capitol Hill. The panel was holding hearings on fraud on the Internet. The Federal Trade Commission told the panel that it set up 11 intentionally deceptive sites on the World Wide Web, part of a campaign to warn gullible consumers about scams and schemes perpetrated online. For an example of an FTC "teaser site," visit <http://www.iaa.net/business-ops/success>.

Panel votes to restore NEA funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a setback to conservatives, the House Appropriations Committee Thursday unopposedly directed a Republican effort to kill the National Endowment for the Arts next year.

On a near party-line roll call of 31-27, the panel voted to provide $96 million in 1999 for the agency, the same amount it received this year.

The endowment, which provides grants to artists, is an annual congressional budgetary program. Many conservatives say the arts should support themselves and criticize some of the commercial works produced by agency-supported artists, while many others believe supporting the arts is a worthwhile federal investment.

Joining Democrats were five Republicans: Reps. Michael Forbes of New York, Rodney Frelinghuysen of New Jersey, Jim Kolbe of Arizona, John Franks of Illinois and James Walsh of New York.

The committee could vote again on the issue later in the day. But one way or the other, the issue seems destined for a vote when the full House considers the bill after it returns in mid-July from recess.

IRS overhaul bill could cost billions in taxes

Knight Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — The highly popular bill to temper the abuse of taxpayers by the Internal Revenue Service could cause a dramatic dip in federal tax revenues at the same time that costs for Medicare and Social Security begin to soar 10 years from now.

The bill, which passed the House overwhelmingly Thursday and is expected to sail through the Senate next month, could lead to a loss of as much as $46 billion between 2008 and 2017.

Those figures are based on assumptions by Congress' bipartisan Joint Taxation Committee, which assessed the cost of the reform provisions and the tax breaks in the bill.

But the legislation is so appealing to voters — and has become a political cause for Congress in the upcoming mid-term elections — that few dared oppose it. Even those who acknowledge the long-term fiscal downside say they'll vote for it and hope for the best.

Florida residents leave after evacuation

ORLANDO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Hundreds of residents streamed out of a wooded neighborhood Thursday in a process of slow pickup trucks and trailers filled with pets, clothes and valuables as a wildfire moved toward their homes.

A voluntary evacuation had been in place in the Plantation Pines neighborhood for the past two days, and most residents had ignored it. That changed this morning as the fire moved closer to the neighborhood of dirt roads where many families keep horses and other animals.

"It's like walking on Kellogg's Corn Flakes — it's so dry, it's crumbly on you," said Robert Johnson as he left his log cabin with his wife, Linda, and their three dogs. "You could see the smoke rising in the trees from very low. You could still smell their acrid odor."

More than 50,000 acres of woodlands, scrub and dried-out meadows have burned in Volusia County. The area has had 3 inches of rain since April, about

An unidentified runner uses a wet towel on her face to shield her from the smoke from the Florida fires at Daytona Beach, Fla., Thursday, a foot less than expected. June is normally the wettest month for much of Florida.

Starr subpoenas Linda Tripp to testify before Whitewater grand jury

WASHINGTON (AP) — Linda Tripp, whose tape recordings of Monica Lewinsky triggered a criminal investigation of President Clinton, was subpoenaed to testify before the grand jury next week, one of Tripp's lawyers said Thursday.

Word of her appearance comes as Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr tries to negotiate an agreement for the cooperation of Ms. Lewinsky, the former White House intern who alleged a presidential affair and cover-up in conversations with Tripp.

McDougal's sentence reduced

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A federal judge on Thursday reduced Whitewater figure Susan McDougal's sentence to time served and ordered her to 90 days home detention.

U.S. District Judge George Howard Jr. said he decided to lean "to the side of compassion and mercy rather than strictness."

She faces trial on embezzlement-related charges in California July 13 and is to be tried in Little Rock for criminal contempt on Sept. 28. Mrs. McDougal was convicted as part of the Whitewater investigation in 1996 with then-Gov. Jim Guy Tucker and her former husband, Jim McDougal. She was convicted of four felony fraud counts involving an alleged loan from a federally backed lending company.

Senate votes to restrict administration base closings

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, voting 67-31, on Thursday passed legislation to restrict military base closings that have cost tens of thousands of jobs since the end of the Cold War, while 49-45 today to make it harder for the Clinton administration to shut additional bases. The action, opposed by the administration but supported by both Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., and Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., would withhold congressional approval for the Pentagon's plan for two new base-closing rounds in 2001 and 2005.

Furthermore, it would require the Pentagon to complete earlier ordered base closings before contemplating new ones.

How they voted

Larry Craig (R-Idaho) and Dick Durbin (D-Ill.) were among the 49-45 majority of the Senate to approve an amendment to the defense bill making it more difficult for the administration to close additional military bases. Clinton vote: 4 "yes" vote was a veto threat; most members on base closings; and a "no" vote was a vote to continue the present policy. Voting "yes" were 17 Democrats and 32 Republicans. Voting "no" were 24 Democrats and 21 Republicans.

Phyllis Van Huss sorts through grocery coupons Friday at home in Independence, Mo., while she pays monthly bills. She is watching every penny now that both she and her husband are collecting unemployment while laid off from their jobs on the assembly line at the General Motors plant in Kansas City, Kan.

Tough times: GM workers feel the pinch

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — General Motors employees Phyllis and Don Van Huss had a choice: Wyoming or Las Vegas. Would they take their July vacation, timed to take place during GM's annual shutdown, in God's Country or Sin City?

But soon after the United Auto Workers went on strike at two parts plants in Flint, Mich., — eventually idling nearly 152,000 GM workers across North America — the couple's vacation choice was made for them.

Instead of enjoying open skies or lake machines, they will probably be spending much of the summer clipping coupons at home.

For the Van Husses and thousands of laid-off GM workers nationwide, it could be a long, costly summer. For the Van Husses, it could be an especially bad one: They've turned off the air conditioning to save money. "We'll probably exhaust our savings later this month or early in July," Mrs. Van Huss said.

She is an exterior inspection worker at GM's Fairfax plant in nearby Kansas City, Kan., where workers assembled the Pontiac Grand Prix and Intrigue models before the plant ran out of parts. Her husband put together chassis at the same factory.

About 3,000 Fairfax workers were laid off. Many of them, including the Van Husses, have applied for unemployment benefits.

"I think we'll make it," Mrs. Van Huss said, "but it hurts."

A yard sale that would have helped the couple pay for vacation will instead pay creditors. They are spending less on groceries and skipping their once-frequent trips to the movies.

Ramsey family interviewed

DENVER (AP) — More than a year after their last interview with authorities, the parents of JonBenet Ramsey are talking with investigators from the district attorney's office. The slain girl's 11-year-old brother also reportedly was interviewed.

"Interviews are under way" with John and Fatsy Ramsey, DA spokeswoman Suzanne Laurion said. While confirming the parents' interviews, Ms. Laurion would not confirm media reports that 11-year-old Berke Ramsey was interviewed in Atlanta, where the family now lives, earlier this month.

The interviews come just weeks after police investigators turned their case over to the district attorney.

Syphilis rate hits record low

ATLANTA (AP) — The syphilis rate in the United States has plummeted 84 percent since 1990 to the lowest level on record, gutting health officials within striking distance of stamping out the sexually transmitted disease.

The rate of new cases in 1997 was 12 for every 100,000 people, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported Thursday. That is the lowest level since health officials started tracking the disease in 1941.

"This tells us that we have a unique opportunity to eliminate syphilis," said Dr. Lyn Finelli, a CDC epidemiologist.

Syphilis reached epidemic proportions in the United States in 1986 and peaked in 1990 at 20.3 cases per 100,000. Rates have been declining since then, in part because of increased funding for treatment, Finelli said.

Changes in sexual behavior to avoid AIDS — such as using condoms and having fewer sex partners — have also reduced syphilis, she said.

The number of new cases per year dropped 83 percent between 1990 and 1997, from 50,578 cases to 8,551.

ASNE withdraws award to columnist

BOSTON (AP) — The American Society of Newspaper Editors withdrew the 1998 Distinguished Writing Award it gave to Patricia Smith, the Boston Globe columnist who was forced to resign after admitting she made up people and quotations.

The ASNE acted Thursday at the urging of the Globe's editor, Matthew V. Straub.

It was the first time the association withdrew an award since it began presenting them in 1979. Smith, 43, resigned from the Globe last week.

Verdict on welfare reform will be a long time coming

The observers who want to declare Idaho welfare reform an unqualified success - or those who would casually call it a violation of human rights - would do well to listen to one of the plan's architects.

"We never expected welfare reform to be clearly defined as to success or failure," Gov. Phil Batt said in an article in The Times-News Sunday. "We knew it was a transition."

He's right. If anything, Batt is understating the case. Idaho's welfare reform, which passes its one-year milestone next week, aims to reach for life, person by person, in case by the thousands, Idaho is trying to teach reform welfare clients to get along with the help of the state.

The job is really that simple, and it indeed that complicated. A task with so much potential for individual triumph or individual failure doesn't lend itself to a blanket statement about success. Especially this early on.

Certainly, Batt sees some promising signs one year into welfare reform. So do we. Idaho's welfare caseload has dropped by 75 percent in a year. That trend, in human terms, means there are almost 3,000 Idaho families who have gone off welfare.

Three of every four former welfare recipients say their self-esteem has improved since going off state assistance, according to a survey.

Those are some encouraging numbers. But they tell only part of the story. At one point in time, Sunday's asked whether these families say off state assistance, and whether reform makes a long-term improvement in the lives of those trying to stay out of the system.

There are questions about welfare reform that can only be answered in time.

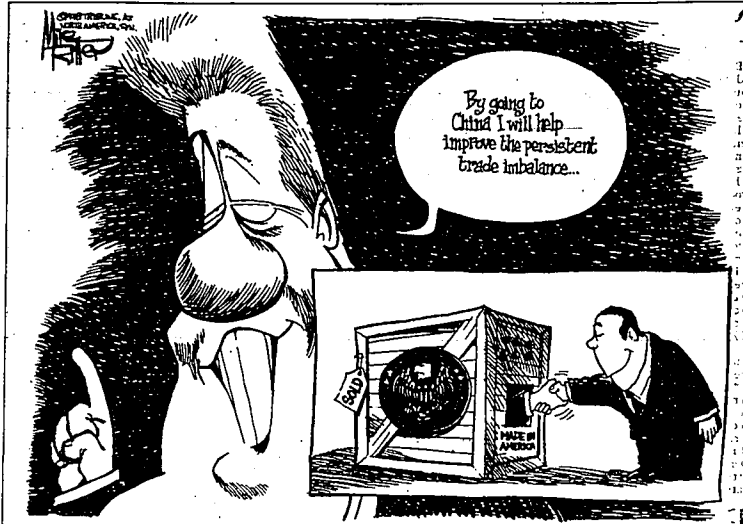

According to state Department of Health and Welfare numbers, only about half of the people getting off welfare are working - and that's when the state's economy has been booming, scoring if welfare reform prepares people to work, the jobs need to be there. Batt himself wonders if the Legislature should relax one of the most controversial components in Idaho welfare reform, its two-year lifetime cap on benefits.

This does not sound like a man who wants to curtail the human rights of Idaho's poor. Yet that's the claim leveled by the Kensington Welfare Rights Union, an advocacy group planning a lawsuit in one year. New York City is curbing welfare reform, such as Idaho's plan.

The group's lawsuit states as misguided, and its basic policies seem way off base. The group's basic criticism is Idaho's emphasis on moving people off welfare means some are working. From here, the lawsuit states as the most humane thing government can do for welfare recipients.

Welfare reform is an attempt to fix a flawed system that had been in place for decades. That won't occur in 12 months. But Idaho's plan has shown promise in one year. It deserves a chance to deliver.

Congress doesn't have the little guy at heart

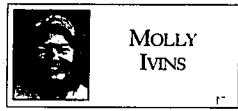

Well, as they used to say in Nam, there it is. Congress just took part of our budget surplus and gave it to the rich folks as yet another tax cut just for them. They did the same thing last year, only this time, they've added insult to injury.

In addition to leaving in a special tax cut for the super-rich, Congress added a new capital gains tax break by reducing the amount of time investors have to hold stocks and bonds to qualify for the best capital gains tax rate. According to a New York Times report on legislation that would rewrap the Internal Revenue Service, this holding period would go from 18 months to 12 months. When investors don't have to hold their stocks and bonds as long, it discourages long-term investment and encourages speculation, which is not only unfair but stupid.

However, looking on the bright side, if you have more than $17 million to leave your happy heirs, there's good news for you. It seems there was a mistake - oops - and as a consequence of this little error, those with estates of more than $17 million will each save $200,000 in estate taxes, costing the Treasury $880 million in revenue over the next 10 years.

After the Treasury Department noticed the mistake, officials moved to fix it, but to no avail. Rep. Bill Archer, R-Houston, insisted on leaving the inadvertent tax break in place.

This is especially discouraging because Archer had been showing symptoms of being a good guy. He put up a noble effort to get rid of the ADM subsidy - that's the ethanol subsidy that exists because Archer-Daniels-Midland (no relation to Bill) is such a big campaign contributor. Despite Bill's best efforts, this outrageous piece of corporate welfare was extended through 2007 as part of the new highway legislation.

Concerning the little "error" in favor of the $17 million-plus crowd, Archer spokesman Ari Fleischer told The New York Times: "When the Democrats controlled Congress and drafting errors worked against the taxpayers, the Democrats let them stay in the law. Now, when one works against the government and for the taxpayers, we're in no rush to correct it." Well, sure, that makes everything right and fair, doesn't it?

Archer was also behind the reduced waiting period to cash in on capital gains, and now, he and House Speaker Newt Gingrich want to lower that tax even more than they did last year, from 20 percent to 15 percent. What this means is that earned income (the kind you work for) will be taxed at a higher rate than unearned income (the kind you get by clipping coupons), thus making life easier for the rich and harder for the rest of us - who will, of course, be bearing an even larger share of the total tax burden. Isn't this fun?

The rationale for cutting capital gains taxes is that it encourages investment. As you know, the stock market is already in the Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan's phrase "irrationally exuberant." What else can these guys do to set up a stock market crash?

As though this weren't enough mischief for one week, the House of Representatives voted to repeal the entire tax code on Dec. 31, 2002. Not, you understand, that they have anything to replace it with or any earthy idea of how to do so. Majority Leader Dick Armey wants a flat tax; Archer wants a national sales tax; Steve Forbes wants it all on a postcard. These folks are full of simplistic schemes.

To vote to repeal the entire tax code four years in the future without any plan for how or what to replace it with is so amazingly irresponsible, it's sort of hard to take in.

There is one simple thing about taxes to keep in mind: Taxes are complicated. Not as complicated, I grant you, as the gallon-page tax code we have now. But before you buy into some simplistic nostrum, think about it a while. Income taxes, property taxes, sales taxes, corporate franchise taxes, business taxes, royalty payments, earned and unearned income, progressive vs. regressive taxes, import-export taxes, payroll taxes, value-added taxes - now think of a system that's both equitable and simple.

One of the very few simple facts about taxation in this country is that for almost 50 years now we have gradually shifted more and more of the tax burden away from corporations and onto individuals. Guess why. Almost two-thirds of the money in American politics comes from organized corporate special interests, and believe me, they get what they pay for. If I were you, I would not let a Congress bought and paid for by corporate special interests rewrite the tax code.

Misuses of power don't help crime

At what point do the people we choose to protect us decide that they are above our supervision? Shortly after I returned to Idaho from the University of Idaho to help my parents on their farm for a week, my best friend and I were driving around Shoshone at 12:30 a.m. talking. The one duty police officer left obligated to stop us. The officer told us that he called us over for "suspicious activity." We had broken no laws. We were not gathering anyone, yet this officer felt it was reason enough. The only crime that we had committed was not being there in the past. This police officer also felt that it was his responsibility to check not only my driver's license and registration but the driver's license of my passenger as well.

When did Shoshone turn into a police state, where the servants of the people have the freedom to harass anyone they choose? Does the Shoshone Police Department now require residents to check in with them if they have left the area for a couple of months?

If the officers' fear is vandalism and theft, maybe they should start by asking a few questions instead of harassing people. In a small town, the law enforcement could be pointed in the direction of the corrupt.

If the local police officers became more involved in the community and the schools instead of abusing their power that we the people have given them, then maybe vandalism and theft would not be plaguing this and other small communities.

It is sad for me to talk about a town I grew up in and loved in this manner. If people do not take action against these and other misuses of power, they will continue to grow. I think that there is something wrong with the law enforcement of a community that is a person stopped for a seemingly innocent reason, just so that the license and registration can be checked on an unfamiliar vehicle. It is sad.

Should media not cover case?

I read in The Times-News the fact that Jimmy V. Thomas couldn't get a fair trial because of all the publicity, now isn't that a shame. Shame on the media that they are covering this case. Why the "public" should see the media for their coverage, thereby keeping us duly informed of the murders, snubbers, perjury, snubbers, gang activity, drug problems, etc., etc., etc.

What is a soul to do, not listen to the radio, watch television or read the newspapers? Looks like to me the malcontents are getting where as to their rights, and what does John Q. Public do for an excuse, look the other way? I think not, it's about time they call what is right and what is wrong wrong.

When you see a case, that is wrong, you need to pay according to the law. The criminals can't bring all the way to wherever they are being kept at our expense. The poor taxpayer just keeps getting abused all the time. Move over, case, better play area, better food.

I know some of what I think about the whole case, but I am sure there would be a change of mind, so I will keep it in my mind and will wonder where is it all going to end. Do you have a workable conclusion to this problem?

Founding fathers support prayer

As a historian, I'm bothered when people try to support their ideas by using erroneous historical "fact."

William Halffner contends that we don't understand why (those) who wrote our Constitution wanted a separation of church and state. He says this to support his assertion that prayer (God) doesn't belong in our government schools. He may believe religion doesn't belong in school, but he can't say our founders would support him. In fact, nearly all would be against him.

Not only were prayer, Christian ethics and morality espoused and revered in government institutions, they were thought indispensable in the education of children. As written in Article III of the Northwest Ordinance - ratified by the same Congress which framed the First Amendment, and signed by George Washington -

"Religion, morality and knowledge, being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged." In other words, they believed that the schools were proper in encouraging "religion, morality and knowledge."

What else was said about school and religion? Gov. Morris said, "Education should teach the precepts of religion and the duties of man towards God." Daniel Tompkins said, "As guardians of the property, liberty and morals of the state, we are therefore bound by every injunction of patriotism ... to patronize public improvements and to cherish all institutions for the diffusion of religious knowledge and ... promotion of virtue and piety."

Another statement by Benjamin Rush is quite clear: "The only foundation for a useful education in a republic is to be laid in religion ... without religion, I believe that learning does real mischief to the morals and principles of mankind." Also clear is Daniel Webster's statement, "A profound religious feeling is to be instilled and pure morality inculcated under all circumstances. All this is comprised in education."

This entire page of The Times-News could be filled with quotes from scores of founding fathers showing they believed in the value of prayer and teaching the Bible's morals and ethical lessons in government schools. So find another way to support the idea that prayer in school is bad and destructive. The words of our founders' just won't support you. Perhaps you can use the downward spiral our schools have taken since prayer was deemed unconstitutional in 1963 as the shining example. And aren't we better off since kids aren't bothered by those nasty Ten Commandments?

Voters decide who will lead Northern Ireland into new era

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Knowing their choices could make or break their province's historic peace agreement, Northern Ireland's voters selected the people Thursday who will govern their divided land in a new power-sharing Assembly.

The implications for the peace process couldn't be greater in the election, which begins the process of returning government power from London to Belfast after a bloody generation of conflict.

The new, 108-seat Assembly is the central plank of the April 10 accord. Unlike the previous Protestant-dominated parliament that the British abolished in 1972, the Assembly is designed to ensure that neither Protestants nor Catholics can impose their will on the other side.

The guiding spirit of our agreement means that there can be no victories by either side, because in a divided society, victory is not solutions," John Hume, leader of the Social Democratic and Labor Party, said after casting his ballot in his native Londonderry.

A policeman stands inside as a voter leaves a Belfast polling station after voting for the new Northern Ireland Assembly Thursday.

Blast kills Spanish politician

RENERIA, Spain (AP) — A bomb attack blamed on a Basque separatist group — ETA — killed a local politician Thursday in northern Spain, six months after his predecessor was shot to death by the same group.

Authorities said Manuel Zamarrero, a Popular Party councilor in the northern Basque town of Reneria, was killed and his bodyguard was injured when a bomb exploded as they walked past a parked motorcycle.

ETA, a Basque language acronym for Basque Homeland and Freedom, has killed nearly 800 people since launching its campaign for an independent Basque state in 1958.

Authorities believe the bomb was planted on it by the Basque separatist group, ETA. Interior Minister Jaime Mayor Oreja told reporters in Madrid.

"Everything points to this being an ETA attack," Mayor Oreja said.

If ETA is responsible for the latest killing, Zamarrero will be the sixth town councilor linked to the ruling Popular Party who has been killed by the group over the last year.

ETA has targeted party councilors in apparent retaliation for the hard anti-ETA line taken by the conservative government of Prime Minister Jose Maria Aznar.

Balcony collapse in Russia kills 23

MOSCOW (AP) — A balcony collapsed Thursday onto the crowded floor of a sports stadium during the national wrestling competition in southern Russia, killing 23 people, officials said. Thirty-nine others were injured.

The balcony was holding about 100 spectators when it fell about 16 feet onto the spectators below, said Col. Alik Petrov of the Emergencies Ministry.

Indonesia, IMF sign revised bailout deal

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Fearing that growing economic hardships could spark new riots, Indonesia and the International Monetary Fund announced a revised bailout deal Thursday loaded with fuel and food subsidies for the nation's poor.

The deal — the fourth struck by Indonesia and the IMF since October — calls for tough reforms while balancing the social needs of tens of millions hit hard by the region's worst financial crisis in 30 years.

Wednesday's agreement opens the way for the resumption of a $43 billion IMF-led rescue package, badly needed by an economy expected to shrink by more than 10 percent this year.

But even more international aid might be needed, said Hubert Neiss, the IMF's senior official in Asia.

Batt agency defends stance on project

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Gov. Phil Batt's nuclear waste watchdog is defending the administration's longstanding opposition to a plan to process plutonium against concerns that it threatens the future of the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory. Kathleen Trever, who runs the state's INEEL oversight program, reiterated contentions that there was no guarantee that anyone would use the fuel to be created out of the plutonium from dismantled nuclear bombs. "There is no signature on the dotted line that if these rods were to be made, they would go somewhere," she said. "The state is not going to be a long-term repository. That's not something we can support."

The Energy Department has officially eliminated INEEL as a candidate for $500 million plant to produce the so-called mixed-oxide fuel for nuclear reactors. The department prefers the Savannah River Site in South Carolina for the plant with a second facility to actually extract the plutonium from the bombs in either South Carolina or at the Pantex facility in Texas.

"We lost one of the few nuclear projects that are available," said John Tanner, a member of a group of engineers and scientists seeking new projects for INEEL. "By passing up a chance to get a project in that area, we're really looking at shutdown of our major mission."

But Batt made it clear within days of the announcement in December 1996 that INEEL was one of four potential sites for the project that he believed locating either facility in Idaho would violate the unprecedented 1995 agreement with the government that called restricted additional waste dumping for a court-enforced timetable for removing more waste from INEEL.

Governors seek control of resources

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Western governors want more control over natural resources with less meddling by federal regulators.

And they intend to formalize that stand at the Western Governors Association annual conference in an eight-point declaration authored by Oregon Democratic Gov. John Kitzhaber and Utah Republican Gov. Michael Leavitt.

The meeting in Alaska that runs through next Tuesday will mark the first time the governors have committed to a single vision for solving western environmental problems that range from saving salmon in the Northwest to cleaning up the air over the Grand Canyon.

While supporting strict federal laws like the Clean Water and Clean Air acts, the governors want to help establish national standards and set their own courses for achieving them.

Clean-environment goals, they argue, can be would be better achieved through local collaboration rather than courthouse confrontation.

"This environmental approach sets a framework that we can all work toward," said Marilyn Heiman, special assistant on natural resources to Alaska Gov. Tony Knowles. Knowles is the chairman of the Western Governors' Association.

Investigator disputes chief ranger's story

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — The former chief ranger at Yellowstone National Park is strongly denying the allegations of sexual harassment that led to his demotion and transfer earlier this year.

But the ranger assigned to investigate the claim against Dan Sholly is not buying the story that Sholly's only purpose was to console his secretary, Susan Perkins, a month after her husband died in a snowmobile accident.

Tomie Lee, chief ranger at Glen Canyon Dam National Recreation Area in Utah, told Administrative Law Judge James Casek that she found Perkins credible in her investigation. Lee concluded that Sholly entered Perkins house without any clear invitation and kissed the woman several times.

Lee said Sholly initially denied French kissing Perkins but then said his tongue may have accidentally gotten into her mouth.

"I've never heard of any adult male or female accidentally French kissing anyone," Lee testified.

Following the investigation, Yellowstone Superintendent Michael Finley demoted Sholly, who had been chief ranger for 12 years, and transferred him to Florida.

Police charge trio in store burglary

TWIN FALLS - Three Californians were arraigned Thursday on burglary and gun charges after being caught with 18 printer cartridges from a local office supply store.

Juan Manuel Barreto, 28, and Maria Carmen Nunez, 33, each face four counts of burglary and one count of grand theft. Anna Alvarez, 18, faces three counts of burglary.

According to a police report: Employees at the Office Supply noticed the cartridges missing Wednesday afternoon and called police. They described the suspects, who were spotted at three other office supply stores.

The suspects were stopped by Magic Valley Mall security and arrested when the missing cartridges were found in the suspects' van.

Inside the van police found more printer cartridges, some of which were taken from stores in Burley and Rupert. A typed list of office supply stores around the state was found with some stores highlighted and checked.

Clos Office Supply was one of the stores visited. Lists of Utah and Wyoming office supply stores were also discovered.

Kimberly schedules citywide cleanup project

KIMBERLY - Residents are encouraged to clean up at a citywide cleanup project.

Trash containers will be located at the 20th anniversary yard located on the north side of U.S. Highway 30. Residents can use these containers for everything except grass, tires, batteries, oil and pesticides.

Water heaters, refrigerators with freon removed and other large metal objects will be accepted but should be kept separate from non-metal garbage.

The yard will be open from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. today and Saturday.

License plates support CSI, other Idaho schools

TWIN FALLS - Starting Wednesday, license plates with logos and names of your Idaho colleges and universities can be purchased at the Idaho Transportation Department.

The plates cost an extra $50 per year. Of this fee, $25 the first year and $35 each year thereafter will be used to fund scholarships at the school.

Available schools are the College of Southern Idaho, University of Idaho, Idaho State University, Boise State University, Lewis-Clark State College, North Idaho College and Eastern Idaho Technical College.

Personalized plates are also available for $75 the first year and $65 each succeeding year.

Applications are available at county assessor's offices. An application form also can be mailed to customers who call ITD at 208-334-8649.

Oakley man found electrocuted in field

OAKLEY - An Oakley man was found dead Wednesday in an open field near a sprinkler limb he was working on.

Lance J. Reeves, 23, was discovered lying in a field east of Oakley. Neighbors, including 17-year-old Julie Robinson of Heyburn discovered the body.

Other farmers working in the area noticed Reeves' pickup in the field, but thought someone had picked him up.

Burns on Reeves' body led County Coroner Paul Young to believe Reeves died of electrocution. Reeves is believed to have died between 10 and 11 a.m. Wednesday.

Prosecutor considers bid for district judge

BURLEY - Cassia County Prosecutor Stephen Bywater said Thursday he is considering applying for the vacant 5th District judge position in Cassia County.

The spot is vacant after George Granata Jr.'s death, and has been temporarily filled by various available judges until the Idaho Judicial Council makes its final decision. The deadline for applicants is July 6.

Gem critics pan range amendment

By N.S. Nokkintved Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Opponents of a proposed Air Force training complex in Owyhee County Thursday criticized Idaho Sen. Larry Craig and Dirk Kempthorne's statements on the proposal. The Senate Thursday narrowly rejected a challenge to a Defense Authorization bill amendment, introduced by Kempthorne, to set aside nearly 12,000 acres of public land in eastern Owyhee County.

"To those opponents of this - have you called your president? Have you called your Secretary of the Interior? Have you called your Secretary of the Air Force, your Director of the Council of Environmental Quality?" Kempthorne said Thursday, pointing to bipartisan support for his amendment.

Backers cite widespread support

For more information on the Air Force range issue, visit The Times-News Online. Go to <http://www.magicvalley.com> and click on the Newslink icon.

"If you have, I think you would get a very clear message: this is a priority, and this issue goes forward and it should go forward," he said. The Owyhee Canyon Lands Coalition, however, noted that Air Force officials have argued in federal court that a new message in Idaho is not needed to maintain combat readiness of the 366th Wing at Mountain Home Air Force Base, but would improve training efficiency. The Air Force proposal includes 10,600 acres for a practice bombing range; 640 acres for a simulated bomb target area; four square target sites; and scattered electronic emitter sites. These areas would form an electronic combat training complex that covers about 1 million acres. The proposal also expands military airspace over Idaho and northern Nevada.

Craig noted that "every environmental law was met." But critics say the Air Force has never explained the cumulative effects of training for the wing at Mountain Home as ordered by a federal judge in 1995. And the concerns of the Shoshone-Paiute Indian tribes have not been met.

"The citizens of Idaho who have had the opportunity to participate fully in the decision of the training range at Mountain Home Air Force Base," Craig said. "After 2 1/2 years we now have a plan that the administration, the Congress, the Air Force, and, but more importantly, that Idahoans agree upon."

The Canyonlands Coalition, which includes more than 25 environmental and recreation groups, countered that 86 percent of public comments on the range opposed the proposal.

Idaho wildlife officials were disappointed that the legislation did not include legislative intent for funding long-term monitoring.

ON THE ROAD AGAIN

The five stars painted on the front of Gene Van Asch's Airstream trailer represent more than 25 years as part of the camping club. Van Asch and his group stopped in Twin Falls on their way to a rally in Boise.

Airstreamers stop in TF on way to rally

By Rachel Denny Times-News correspondent

EDEN - Retirement is a time to travel around the country and meet interesting people, Marilyn and Gene Van Asch say.

The best way for them to do that is in their Airstream travel trailer. The Van Asches, from Minnesota, joined 1,800 Airstreamers heading to Boise for the 41st Wally Byam Caravan Club International Rally.

On the way, the Van Asches' silvery, streamlined trailer arrived this week at Anderson's Camp and parked with about 30 others from Minnesota, Texas and elsewhere. The occupants Thursday afternoon were sleeping after a day's travel, shopping in Twin Falls or gawking at Shoshone Falls and other sights.

The few who hung around the campground exhibited camaraderie - dismissing plans for the night's dinner and comparing Airstream models.

The rally is held in different locations every year. This is the second time the rally has been in Boise, which first hosted it in 1986.

The rally runs June 28 through July 4. A July 1 celebration helps Airstream owners from Canada celebrate their national independence.

Throughout the rally there are craft and hobby shows, entertainment and activities for teen-agers. Though most Airstream owners are retired, many bring their grandchildren, Marilyn Van Asch said.

In fact, the Van Asches have traveled for 28 years and used to take their children along all the time. Today will be their 12th day on the road this trip.

"Our kids grew up Airstreaming. It's a really good family thing," Marilyn Van Asch said. "My kids were really thrilled with it. They made great friends."

The best thing about Airstreaming, Gene Van Asch said, is the people they meet.

"You get close to them," Gene Van Asch said. "By traveling to the international rally we get close. Meeting new people, going to new places, and meeting old friends is really the best thing."

In addition to the international rally held every year, rallies are held around the country all year. Many people live in their Airstreams year-round, Marilyn Van Asch said, and many live in Airstream parks.

That's where the Van Asches will head in about 17 days - home to an Airstream park.

"This is our way of life until we get so old we can't do it anymore," Gene Van Asch said. "We're not full-timers, but we're close."

Let the roaring begin: Regatta opens

By David Lee Times-News writer

BURLEY - The timing couldn't be worse for Gus Schade.

Last year, he and all other boat racers missed the Idaho Regatta due to flooding. The festival of speedboat racing returns today, but Schade injured his leg in a May race, meaning he has been reduced to spectator.

Schade's still making the most of his time here.

"I'll see if I can be a turn judge," he said, while sitting with his head leg propped up on one of his crutches. "Or I'll make a general nuisance of myself in the (racing) pits, probably."

Schade still made the trip here simply out of habit.

"We've been here every year since the first Regatta," he said. "It's just an annual event for us." Boat racer registered Thursday arriving in the lobby of the Burley Inn, which was a new experience for rookie racer Hal Jones.

A Regatta spectator for more than a dozen years, Jones will race here for the first time this weekend. "It's gonna be great," Jones said. "Ever since I started coming here, I've dreamed of doing it in. Now it's happening." Veterans racer James Gregory echoed the excitement.

Contractor hopes to avoid pitfalls of nuclear waste treatment

By N.S. Nokkintved Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A nuclear waste treatment contractor at INEL hopes to avoid the kind of trouble that halted work on another waste cleanup project.

BNFL Inc., the U.S. subsidiary of a British company, hopes to avoid the troubles that marred a Lockheed Martin subsidiary in controversy over its contract to clean up plutonium-contaminated waste in Pit 9 at the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory.

That contract was cancelled earlier this month.

BNFL has a fixed-price contract to build and operate a plant to treat plutonium-contaminated waste to prepare it for disposal in a New Mexico facility, two company officials told The Times-News editorial board Thursday.

But the company plans to use only technology that has been proven operationally, and the detailed contract clearly spells out the risks, such as what happens if the New Mexico facility doesn't open.

This waste is more well known than the buried waste in Pit 9; inventory records are better and the containers - mostly intact - are neatly stacked above the ground.

Company officials are confident but aware that there is always an opportunity for something to go wrong, spokesman Cal Ozaki said.

The contract would total $1.18 billion if all the Energy Department's options are carried out. The plant would treat 65,000 cubic meters of waste - enough waste to

Bodily retires as superintendent

By Rachel Denny Times-News correspondent

EDEN - Arlyn Bodily may take a low-key approach to his retirement, but his colleagues and former students have plenty to say about his 35-year career.

They say Bodily has spent those 25 years making students at the Valley School District successful.

Bodily's last day as Valley superintendent will be Tuesday. When he leaves, he will leave behind a legacy of paying attention to the district's special cultural needs, and paying attention to its students.

Over the years Bodily helped make technology a reality for students, and helped pave way for a new school, said Valley's new superintendent, Laurel Nelson. And he made sure everybody was learning along the way.

"People at all levels got the opportunity to see new things, and to research them," Nelson said.

With all the changes he made as superintendent he always kept in mind what would be good for the children, former student Sidney Brooks said.

"He liked people and people like him," Brooks said. "It think he made an impact on a lot of people's lives. He was a person who would always sit down and listen."

"If he didn't think that something was right for you to do, he would direct you in

GF residents protest dog-license rate hike

By Linda Black
Times-News correspondent

GLENN'S FERRY — After intense public discussion, the Glenn's Ferry City Council tabled a proposal that would dramatically increase license and impound fees for all dogs residing within city limits.

A large group of residents attended a public hearing Wednesday evening, most of them to protest the rate increase.

Currently, a male, spayed or neutered dog costs $5 and a female dog costs $12 to license. Annual impound fees are $15, plus a $200 charge each day the dog is in the pound.

Under the new proposal, fees would have jumped to $20 for regular dog licenses, and $15 for neutered or spayed animals. The city also proposed ratcheting impound charges to $20 for first-time offenders, $30 for the second offense and $40 for the third offense of the same animal, plus a $5 per-day charge for feed and maintenance.

Several residents complained the increased cost for a dog tag was excessive. Glenn's Ferry property owner Oliver Gregersen said the increase would hurt the community's low-income residents.

"Most people live here to avoid the rules and regulations of larger cities," Gregersen said.

Christine Pherneton came to the meeting armed with license and impound fee statistics from nine other southern Idaho communities. None of the towns on her list had rates as costly as Glenn's Ferry's proposal.

Councilwoman JoAnne Lanham agreed the hike was too much.

"I feel that most of the proposed fee increases are exorbitant," she said.

Council members said the city would like its animal-control department to be self-sufficient and drain less expense from the general fund.

Mayor Glenn Thompson said the increased impound fees would help deter owners who let dogs roam large.

But both the mayor and council expressed willingness to renegotiate the rate structure. The council unanimously tabled the resolution for further research.

A second public hearing will be held to address modifications to the resolution.

New 'Summer Showcase' theater season takes off in Glenn's Ferry

By Rod Rees
Times-News correspondent

GLENN'S FERRY — The Historic Opera Theatre in Glenn's Ferry offers its new season of "Summer Showcase" variety shows and traditional slapstick melodrama.

The Summer Showcase presents a different program every Friday evening throughout the summer. And this year's melodrama is a hero-and-villain production called "The Great Ice Cream Scheme or Robin Boskins to the Rescue!" served up every Saturday night through Aug. 29.

Tonight the featured act will be Professor Tim MacNeil's old-time comedy magic show, "Using Old West heritage, MacNeil's bumbling, bombastic, but lovable 'professor' performs tricks with cards, coins, ropes, handkerchiefs and his rabbit Thurstone. MacNeil has presented more than 1,500 magic shows throughout Idaho.

Officials release new, improved catfish at Milner

BURLEY — About 20,000 fingerling catfish were released at Milner Reservoir. The 6- to 8-inch channel catfish were released by Idaho Power Co. biologists as part of the utility's federal license to run the 92-year-old Milner Dam.

This is the second year larger fish have been released, an Idaho Power release said. In years past, 3- to 6-inch fingerlings were stocked. Biologists hope the bigger fish will have a better chance at survival.

Though the water is warm enough for catfish to survive, it's too cold for them to spawn.

Mini-Cassia counties hash out jail budgets

By Penelope Ruddy
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Misperceptions about the proposed budget for a transportation officer and concerns about pay raises brought Cassia and Minidoka county commissioners together Thursday to iron out some issues.

"I don't want to fully informed about what was going on with this transportation officer," said Minidoka County Commission Chairman John Rensberg.

Cassia County Prosecutor Stephen Bywater said a budget subcommittee would consider whatever commissioners have to say before making recommendations on July 14. Commissioners in both counties must agree on a budget by July 27.

The subcommittee is made up of the two county prosecutors, as well as both sheriffs, county clerks and bailiffs.

"The bailiffs keep us informed about how things are working and what the needs are," Bywater said.

Besides escorting inmates to court dates, transportation officers are responsible for inmate transport to and from psychiatrist, dentist, and doctor appointments.

Last month, Cassia County Sheriff Billy Crystal assigned former Cassia County Undersheriff Terry Bingham to the transportation officer's job. Bingham will continue being paid by Cassia County at his regular salary of $38,200 until Oct. 1.

Jail supervisor Dennis Dexter has proposed a $25,000 transportation officer's salary for the past three years, but it has never been implemented.

The $25,000, Bywater said, is the starting salary another transportation officer would cost the two counties.

"But if Bingham continues in the job, he'll cost more," Bywater said, "but Minidoka County wouldn't be expected to cover the excess."

Starting salary for regular detention officers is "around $19,000 with benefits," Minidoka County Prosecutor Rick Bollar said. A hiring committee would expect a transportation officer to have more training, especially in firearms.

"I understand Bingham is working out well," Bywater said. "We want to work out the most efficient long-term way to solve this problem."

Recommendations the subcommittee are considering include one or more additional personnel and a holding cell in Minidoka County.

"With Bingham performing the job for a few months, this gives us a chance to weigh our needs," Rensberg said.

At the session, Cassia County Commissioner Chairman John Adams announced his county would raise salaries for all law enforcement officers and dispatch by $1,000 plus 3 percent.

Adams said that this raise will increase pressure from detention personnel for raises, as well as from Minidoka County law enforcement.

He said detention personnel received a $500 increase last year and now, since learning of the law enforcement raise, they are asking "their other $500."

"That's how they're seeing it," he said.

Bywater and Adams said pressure from citizens helped the city and county decide to give law enforcement the increase.

"We've been losing officers," Bywater said. "Generally people feel officers need a raise."

"As intertwined as these two counties are," Rensberg said, "we need to strive to be equal as law enforcement goes."

Rensberg acknowledged citizens are "fed up" with raises in taxes — "property taxes in particular."

Minidoka County Commissioner Larry Harper said the work law enforcement and detention personnel do is significant and important.

"I'd like to pay them as much as we can," he said.

Gooding's loss may be Cassia's gain

Ruling may have an impact on dairy ordinance

By Kurt Fridemann
Times-News writer

BURLEY — A recent decision handed down by the late District Judge George Granata and verified by District Judge J. William Hart effectively threw out Gooding County's newly created dairy farm zoning ordinance, and that may have an effect on county zoning statewide.

That's the case in Cassia County, where commissioners have been considering their own changes to the county's zoning ordinance, and were anxious for a decision on Gooding County's case.

"The ruling will definitely have an impact on how we will interpret our zoning," said Commissioner Paul Christensen.

"We want to stay within the realm of the workings of the court."

Cassia County is considering creating specific spots where a new dairy farm would not be required to go through an elaborate permitting process, and more stringently limiting the number of animals per acre. Gooding County's animal unit clause was deemed reasonable.

"We are glad it has been settled," Christensen said. "It will certainly help guide us in the direction we need to go."

Don Farley — an attorney for Hall, Farley, Oberrecht & Blanton, the Boise firm that represented Gooding County — said the decision gives counties a better base for building ordinances. And that will make it harder for groups to sue successfully, as the Idaho Dairymen's Association did in the Gooding County case.

"It will be difficult to re-attack the issue," he said.

The decision will be used as a template for each new ordinance, he said. Because very little within Gooding County's document was found inappropriate, counties will have less to fear in the form of legal action.

"(The dairymen) had their day in court and most of the ordinance was deemed valid and acceptable," Farley said. "You don't get getting a lot of bites at the same apple."

The 64-page court decision found only a few sections of Gooding County's ordinance invalid or inappropriate, and ruled that most of the document was legal. But parts of the ordinance were deemed an unreasonable burden or a direct violation of Idaho's Right to Farm Act, and that prompted the court to rule in favor of the dairymen.

The court found the ordinance invalid use of the county's police power.

Cassia County Prosecutor Stephen Bywater said the case would be educational for his county, and others developing their own regulations.

"It will be good to have a decision on the same issues we all need guidance on," he said. "We will study the decision and evaluate it as it relates to our own ordinance."

Options include treating up to an additional 120,000 cubic meters of waste from other INEEL incinerators and other out-of-state government facilities.

The priority is to treat Idaho waste, Ozaki said.

Cassia County intends to treat all of the 65,000 cubic meters to meet criteria for disposal at the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant in New Mexico, he said.

The Idaho plant would treat one ton every 30 minutes, 24 hours per day, 365 days per year incinerated and the ash turned into a glasslike substance.

Critics, however, are concerned about plans to incinerate plutonium waste.

"All reasonable people should be concerned about the incineration of radioactive waste," said Beatrice Brailford, of the Snake River Alliance's Pocatello office.

The alliance, a statewide nuclear watchdog group, wants the government to consider carefully what it is spending more than $1 billion to treat this waste, she said.

About 22 percent of the waste would be incinerated, Ozaki said.

It may be the only way available to treat wastes that include PCBs, organic solvents and sludges. But the company has no desire to incinerate any more waste than it must.

BNFL is in the process of securing environmental permits and expects to begin construction early next year and begin operation in 2003.

A public hearing on the Energy Department's impact statement on the project is planned in Twin Falls in early August.

the right avenue. He was for education and he wanted people to better themselves. He was a pillar of the community."

Nelson agreed.

"Before he jumps on a bandwagon he always investigated it to make sure it would be good for the kids," Nelson said. "It doesn't really matter what people wanted to do as long as it's researched well and as long as he's sure it will benefit the kids."

"If it's not going to benefit the kids it's not something we need to be doing."

Bodily reached many children by making them feel important.

"He treated everyone as an individual," former teacher Neil Cross said. "He knew who the children were, who their grandparents were. He recognized them as people, not just numbers. Not just problems."

Whatever the children needed, Bodily would try to give it to them. And that, Nelson said, is what made him a successful administrator.

"I've watched him on a number of occasions take students into his office to get to know them and make things work for them," Nelson said. "He's very good at individualizing the program to meet the needs of the kids. He provides the atmosphere and the resources to make the kids and staff do their best."

Bodily, however, wants little attention for his retirement. He declined to be interviewed about his retirement, and said he didn't want district staff to throw him a going-away party or pay too much attention to his retirement.

"It was a great staff in x-ray and all the departments I had to deal with. Keep up the good work!"

A commitment by the Air Force to provide $435,000 over four years was welcomed, but it doesn't cover any long-term monitoring, said Tracy Trent, chief of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game's natural resources bureau.

"As long as the range operates, there should be monitoring and mitigation," Trent said.

Hunters who buy licenses should not have to pay for the extra work created by Air Force training operations, he said.

Kempthorne aide Mark Snider said Congress would be unlikely to support a commitment to fund long-range monitoring without a specific plan, dollar amount and time span.

The bill passed the Senate Thursday night and will go to a conference committee to settle differences between the Senate and House versions of the bill.

Kempthorne will be a member of that committee.

Regatta

"The Burley Regatta is one of the best we race at," he said. "It's a race you always want to do good at. I was bummed big time (from last year's cancellation), very depressed."

LaShawn Stevens of Michigan will see the Regatta with a sense of wonder this year; it's her first boat race.

"It should be a lot of fun," said Stevens, who only recently befriended boat racers.

What have they told her it's going to be like?

"Lots of people," she said,

"and really loud boats."

Stevens' friend, Teresa Ingram of Ogden, Utah, has watched boat races on lakes before, but will see the Regatta for the first time. Her boat-driving friends have been hyping the race up to her as well.

"They said this is the best race, the funnest and gets the largest crowds," she said. "It's also very dangerous and crazy on the river."

"So," Ingram said, "it should be very exciting."

Jerome benefit shoot will fund handicapped horseback riders

By Terrell Williams
Times News correspondent

JEROME — Try your aim, and help those less fortunate to ride horses in the mountains this summer.

Helping Hands Freedom Trails is having a benefit sporting clay shoot from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday at the Jerome County Rod and Gun Club. The club is 5.8 miles north of the blinking traffic light on U.S. Highway 93 across town.

With a $10 entry fee, each person makes the rounds to six stations to shoot at about 40 flying clays with a shotgun.

Janette Stacy of Jerome, secretary of HHFT, said the entire shoot takes about an hour or less to complete.

At each station, she said, clays are blown into the wind from the air at different angles, directions and heights. At one station, called "the rabbit and the bird," one of the clays comes up in the air and the other rolls across the ground.

"It's just all different sizes crisscrossing in front of you," Stacy said. "It's a heck of a lot of fun. It's a lot more fun than just shooting at plain old clays they throw up in the air."

Most people bring their own shotguns, she said, but guns will be available for those who need them. As they travel through the course, usually in groups of four, shooters earn points at every station. At the end of the day, score cards are tallied and winners get prizes.

Participants also can win door prizes. And tickets will be on sale for a drawing to win a gun case and other prizes.

Stacy said the shoot raises money for HHFT, which will hold its ninth annual camp at Pettit Lake south of Stanley Aug. 7-9. Handicapped adults and children are given horse rides in specialty saddles and wagon rides in wheelchair-accessible wagons. Volunteers provide the horse and manpower, but funding is needed for food and other expenses.

HHFT president Barry Lehman said the budget for the three-day camp this year is $8,500. HHFT also is buying a new specialized saddle costing $3,500. Donations, including a $2,000 grant from the Idaho Horse Board, have been coming in at a good rate, Lehman said. He said HHFT has goals of putting on additional events each year at locations closer to home for those who cannot attend the overnight camp.

For more information, call Lehman at 734-7768, or Stacy at 324-5603.

'Hooves and Horns, Bulls and Barrels' rodeo raises funds for Gooding church

By Leandra Reuble
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — Rodeo is usually about going for the best ride possible, scoring points and making a little money.

On Saturday in Gooding, it's about a little more: Raising money to help build a new parish hall.

"Hooves and Horns, Bulls and Barrels" starts at 7:30 p.m. at the Gooding County fairground.

Admission Saturday night is $2 for adults and $3 for children 12 and under; all profits are donated to St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church in Gooding toward a new hall.

"Pat spouted off one day," said Juanita O'Maley. She and husband, Pat, run Slash T Rodeo Co. and provide professional rodeo stock for events all over Idaho. Pat O'Maley thought of doing a charity rodeo for their church. Juanita has been busy organizing that since.

Events will include mutton bustin' (sheep riding) for the youngsters, bull riding, barrel racing and an exhibition of Mexican bullfighting.

Because the rodeo is a charity, cowboys will not compete to gain overall points in any association. Instead they'll compete for cash purses, the amount dependent on the number of entries. O'Maley said she capped the bull riding and barrel racing at 30 competitors and the mutton bustin' at 10.

St. Elizabeth's will sponsor a food booth at the rodeo.

Mike Nelson, chairman of the church finance committee, said it needs about $400,000 for the new hall. He said he wasn't sure whether it would start construction before it has all the money or wait until it raises the full amount.

The building fund already has a good start, he said.

"Bull riding is going to be the next NASCAR as far as sports," Nelson said. If nothing else, he said, the rodeo would give young guys a chance to practice skills for professional rodeo.

If the church's rodeo is successful, Nelson said, organizers probably will try to hold one next year.

I would like to thank all my friends and relatives for making my 50th birthday super special. All the cards, letters, phone calls, "Over 60's" party at CSI; the relatives who traveled many miles to be here. All who attended the Open House have made it a memorable occasion. One I'll always treasure. Thank you all.

THE BURLEY HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATION PARTY WAS A GREAT SUCCESS!

We would like to thank the following business and individuals who donated support to the event held at the school gym, May 27 1998. We recognize that some wished not to have their names printed or any recognition at all and we so appreciate that. We apologize if a business or individual is not listed due to record keeping on our part. Once again a BIG THANKS!!!!

U-SELECT HEARING AID SERVICE

834 ADDISON AVENUE • TWIN FALLS, IDAHO 83301
208-734-6881 TOLL FREE: 1-800-944-9644

Do you HEAR and UNDERSTAND as well as you should? Are you reluctant to try the new hearing aid because of the bad experiences you had or heard about from your acquaintances? If so, it's understandable, hearing aids were large, difficult to wear and hard to adjust to. They were not good on the phone and they were impossible to use in crowds because of noise. To make things worse, hearing aids, in the past, had to be replaced as your hearing changed. Simply put, hearing aids in the past were not very satisfactory.

We can't change the bad experiences of the past! We CAN change your hearing in the future.

Once in a while, in our industry, an expense that is so exceptional, we feel the public should be notified as quickly as possible... That change has occurred:

PHILIPS HEARING INSTRUMENTS
a leader in programmable hearing aid technology has just introduced, after years of testing and fine tuning, a hearing aid so remarkable it could change forever the way people with hearing problems hear.

PHILIPS HEARING INSTRUMENTS proudly announces the only CIC hearing aid that is PROGRAMMABLE, has a SOFT SHELL and is controlled by YOU with a REMOTE CONTROL. The M11 CIC SOFT SHELL PROGRAMMABLE hearing aid is PHILIPS HEARING INSTRUMENTS' UNIQUE in design it will change the way you hear and understand in virtually every situation; BECAUSE:

It's SIZE and POSITION:

Completely in the canal enables you to hear with less amplification. Less amplification means, less BACKGROUND noise, less DISTORTION, better high frequency emphasis enabling you to hear SOFT sounds better.

This is what it looks like.

This is what it looks like in your ear.

It's PROGRAMMABLE:

Technology enables the CIC to be programmed to your specific hearing problem and then reprogrammed as your hearing needs change.

It's made with a SOFT SHELL:

With our exclusive soft shell design, the CIC will be more comfortable to wear than any hearing aid ever made. With this design, you will also experience less feedback and better telephone use (no squealing or feedback).

This is how you control it.

Of it's built-in WAX GUARD:

Phillips' patented Cerumen protector keep ear wax from ruining internal parts, causing fewer repairs thus, extending the life of your aids.

It has a REMOTE CONTROL:

With the remote, YOU control your listening environment. In noisy situations, you can switch to a program that enables you to hear and UNDERSTAND better, in noise. When listening to music, you tune to a program that will enhance the fidelity. When watching television or talking with friends or loved ones, switch to a program that enhances this portions of your hearing.

With these features, the M11 CIC Soft Shell Programmable hearing aid can enable you to hear and understand better in every situation, even in noise. You will soon discover by wearing this hearing aid, they do not have to be large and cumbersome. M11 CIC and that hearing aids with the soft shell are more comfortable to wear. With the programmable features, your hearing aids can be reprogrammed time after time to give you the best hearing possible, even as your hearing changes. Using the REMOTE CONTROL, you control the listening level, so you will UNDERSTAND better in ALL SITUATIONS!

Flames are hollow. Jupiter has 16 moons and - what a waste! - no lovers. "Asu" - meaning "sunrise, east" - was the early Assyrian name of the east coast of the Aegean Sea. It spread to cover the whole continent. And turned into the name "Asia." Historically, 75 times as many men as women commit robbery. Q. Is there any mammal in North America more prolific than the rabbit? A. Only the field mouse. A rabid skunk might attack anything that moves. Anything. Russian medical researchers after lengthy studies decided these seem to be what contribute most to the longevity of their healthy elderly people: Hard work, marriage, children, living in high places, eating moderately, drinking well water, and aging a lot. Q. Can you list the four state capitals named after U.S. presidents? A. Lincoln, Neb., and Madison, Wis.

DIDN'T YOUR WIFE TELL YOU TO COME STRAIGHT HOME?

SHE DOESN'T SCARE ME!

YOUR MARTINI, SIR TWO OLIVES?

UH-OH!

UH-OH WHAT?

THERE YOU ARE!!

WHAT'S WHAT?

Q. What does "Barbados" mean? A. "The Beards." Big trees there appeared to be bearded. To the Portuguese sailors who named the island. Q. Women are better than men at keeping secrets, are they not? A. Gender has nothing to do with it, the psychologists now say. What counts is order of birth. Older children learn to keep secrets from younger children who learn to tell secrets to get attention. Think back. Who was the tattletale in your family? Q. How long should it take me to grow an entirely new toenail? A. About 10 months, if typical. Calculators say just the salt in the earth's oceans is plentiful enough to buy the entire United States a meal deep in it.

Jerome benefit shoot will fund handicapped horseback riders

By Terrell Williams
Times News correspondent

JEROME—Try your aim, and help those less fortunate to ride horses in the mountains this summer.

Helping Hands Freedom Trails is having a benefit sporting clay shoot from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday at the Jerome County Rod and Gun Club. The club is 5.8 miles north of the blinking red light on U.S. Highway 93 east of Jerome.

With a $10 entry fee, each person makes the rounds to six stations to shoot at about 40 flying clay birds in six groups.

Bonnie Stacy of Jerome, secretary of HHFT, said the entire shoot takes about an hour or less to complete.

At each station, she said, clays of various sizes are sent into the air at different angles, directions and heights. At one station, called "the rabbit and the bird," one of the clays comes up in the air and the other rolls across the ground.

"It's just all different sizes crisscrossing in front of you," Stacy said. "It's a heck of a lot of fun. It's a lot more fun than just shooting at plain old clays they throw up in the air."

Most people bring their own shotguns, she said, but guns will be available for those who need them. As they travel through the course, usually in groups of four, shooters earn points at every station. At the end of the day, score cards are tallied and winners get prizes.

Participants can also win door prizes. And tickets will be on sale for a drawing to win a gun case.

Stacy said the shoot raises money for HHFT, which will hold its ninth annual camp at Petric Lake south of Stanley Aug. 7-9. Handicapped adults and children are given horse rides in specially saddled and wagon rides in wheelchair-accessible wagons. Volunteers provide the horse-and-manpower, but funding is needed for food and other expenses.

HHFT president Barry Lehman said the budget for the three-day camp this year is $8,500. HHFT also is buying a new specialized saddle costing $3,500. Donations, including a $2,000 grant from the Idaho Horse Board, have been coming in at a good rate, Lehman said. He said HHFT has goals of putting on additional events each year at locations closer to home for those who cannot attend the overnight camp.

For more information, call Lehman at 734-7768, or Stacy at 324-5603.

'Hooves and Horns, Bulls and Barrels' rodeo raises funds for Gooding church

By Leandra Reuble
Times News correspondent

GOODING—Rodeo is usually about going for the best ride possible, scoring points and making a little money.

On Saturday in Gooding, it's about a little more: Raising money to help build a new parish hall.

"Hooves and Horns, Bulls and Barrels" starts at 7:30 p.m. at the Gooding Community Fairgrounds.

Admission Saturday night is $7 for adults and $3 for children 12 and under; all profits are donated to St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church in Gooding to fund a new hall.

"I'm spruced off one day," said Juanita O'Maley. She and husband, Pat, run Slash T Rodeo Co. and provide professional rodeo stock for events all over Idaho. Pat O'Maley thought of doing a charity rodeo for their church. Juanita has been busy organizing the event ever since.

Events will include mutton busting (sheep riding) for the youngsters, bull riding, barrel racing and an exhibition of Mexican bullfighting.

Because the rodeo is a charity, cowboys will not compete to gain overall points in any association. Instead they'll compete for cash purses, the amount dependent on the number of entries. O'Maley said she capped the bull riding, and barrel racing at 30 competitors and the mutton bustin' at 10.

St. Elizabeth's will sponsor a food booth at the rodeo.

John Nelson, chairman of the church finance committee, said it needs about $400,000 for the new hall. He said he wasn't sure whether it would start construction before it has all the money or wait until it raises the full amount.

The building fund already has a good start, he said.

"Bull riding is going to be the next NASCAR as far as sports," Nelson said. If nothing else, he said, the rodeo would give young guys a chance to practice skills for professional rodeos.

If this year's charity rodeo is successful, Nelson said, organizers probably will try to hold one next year.

I would like to thank all my friends and relatives for making my 90th birthday super special.

All the cards, letters, phone calls, "Over 60's" party at CSI; the relatives who traveled many miles to be here. All who attended the Open House have made it a memorable occasion.

One I'll always treasure. Thank you all.

THE BURLEY HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATION PARTY WAS A GREAT SUCCESS!

We would like to thank the following business and individuals who donated support to the event held at the school gym, May 27 1998. We recognize that some wished not to have their names printed or any recognition at all and we so appreciate that. We apologize if a business or individual is not listed due to record keeping on our part. Once again a BIG THANKS!!!!

U-SELECT HEARING AID SERVICE

834 ADDISON AVENUE • TWIN FALLS, IDAHO 83301
208-734-6881 TOLL FREE: 1-800-944-9644

Do you HEAR and UNDERSTAND as well as you should? Are you reluctant to try the new hearing aid because of the bad experiences you had or heard about from your acquaintances? If so, it's understandable, hearing aids were large, difficult to wear and hard to adjust to. To make things worse, hearing aids, in the past, had to be replaced as your hearing changed. Simply put, hearing aids in the past were not very satisfactory.

We can't change the bad experiences of the past! We CAN change your hearing in the future...

Once in a while, in our industry, a change occurs that is so exceptional, we feel the public should be notified as quickly as possible... That change has occurred:

PHILIPS HEARING INSTRUMENTS

a leader in programmable hearing aid technology has just introduced, after years of testing and fine tuning, a hearing aid so remarkable it could change forever, the way people with hearing problems hear.

PHILIPS HEARING INSTRUMENTS proudly announces the only CIC hearing aid that is PROGRAMMABLE, has a SOFT SHELL, and is controlled by YOU with a REMOTE CONTROL. The M11 CIC SOFT SHELL, PROGRAMMABLE, hearing aid from PHILIPS HEARING INSTRUMENTS is so UNIQUE in design it will change the way you hear and understand in virtually every situation, BECAUSE:

It's SIZE and POSITION:

Completely in the canal enables you to hear with less amplification. Less amplification means, less BACKGROUND noise, less DISTORTION, better high frequency emphasis enabling you to hear SOFT sounds better.

It's PROGRAMMABLE:

Technology enables the CIC to be programmed to your specific hearing problem and then reprogrammed as your hearing needs change.

It's made with a SOFT SHELL:

With our exclusive soft shell design, the CIC will be more comfortable to wear than any hearing aid ever made. With this design, you will also experience less feedback and better telephone use (no equalizing or feedback).

Of it's built-in WAX GUARD:

Phillips' patented Cerumen protector keep ear wax from ruining internal parts, causing fewer repairs thus, extending the life of your aids.

It has a REMOTE CONTROL:

With the remote, YOU control your listening environment. In noisy situations, you can switch to a program that enables you to hear and UNDERSTAND better, in noise. When listening to music, you tune to a program that will enhance the fidelity. When watching television or talking with friends or loved ones, switch to a program that enhances this portions of your hearing.

With these features, the M11 CIC Soft Shell Programmable hearing aid can enable you to hear and understand better in every situation, even in noise. You will soon discover by wearing this hearing aid, they do not have to be large and cumbersome. M11 CIC and that hearing aids with the soft shell are more comfortable to wear. With the programmable features, your hearing aids can be reprogrammed time after time to give you the best hearing possible, even as your hearing changes. Using the REMOTE CONTROL, you control the listening level, so you will UNDERSTAND better in ALL SITUATIONS!

Wendell keeps old curfew, defends new parking law

By Steve Koehler
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL - The city will keep its curfew, despite its variance with the county's, and will press ahead to enforce a new parking ordinance that has irritated longtime residents.

City officials Wednesday explained their reasoning for keeping Wendell's curfew at 10 p.m. during the school year and 11 p.m. in summer - despite Gooding County's new, year-round midnight curfew.

Police Chief Phillip Cowell praised the county's curfew because it promotes countywide enforcement. But he said Boise's curfew is 11 p.m., and much of Wendell's vandalism happens between 9 p.m. and midnight.

"I don't see a reason to give (youths) an extra hour to get in trouble," said City Councilman Connie Bjorn.

Police are flexible, Cowell said, and allow reasonable time to get home from after-curfew school activities.

"We don't have a problem with curfew," Cowell said. "Last year we issued two citations."

Also, officials responded to residents' complaints about suddenly receiving warnings for illegal parking on residential streets.

Cowell said city law, like state law, requires motorists to park with traffic flow, and parallel to and at the edge of the 40-foot-wide roadway. Beyond the roadway, motorists may park at an angle to the street.

New residents complain of natives' dangerous driving resulting from illegal parking, Cowell said, and youths learn bad habits from their parents. He said a new driver's education graduate nearly caused a head-on accident Wednesday after being parked on the wrong side of the street while visiting - vehicles nose to nose - with a friend.

Complicating the parking issue are Wendell's poorly defined streets. Since they were Fire Chief Red Orr, praised for keeping the city's annual fireworks show.

The citizens of Wendell have come through again. Orr said, "We've got our $10,000 show, no problem."

planted in 1909, vanished sidewalks and encroachment by lawns, gardens and pastures have blurred property boundaries and street rights of way - 70 feet for north-south streets, 80 feet for east-west streets and 90 feet for Main and Idaho.

Many streets are without curbs, so police use street center pins to measure off the roadway. The roadway often is 22 feet of pavement - because the paving machine is 11 feet wide - plus 9 feet on each side.

Officials discussed implementing long-range programs to install curbs and gutters and pave streets to their full widths - an expensive endeavor that likely would eliminate parking violations.

Mayor Gwen Rost and Councilman Karl Serr said residents will need time to adjust to the new parking law, and police are issuing warnings, not tickets, to first-time offenders.

In other city business:

July 3 will be a holiday for city employees.

- City Superintendent Paul Isaacson said streets are being patched in preparation for the August resurfacing.
- Farmers Group Insurance agent Don Bunn presented a $250 check from Farmers to Wendell Fire Chief Red Orr. Orr said he previously has used such money to buy fire department equipment, but this year the money will go to Wendell QRU, the city's volunteer emergency medical service. The money came from Farmers' Community Sponsorship program.

Cassia bus driver to represent Idaho in national competition

BURLEY - A Cassia County School District bus driver will represent Idaho in a national bus safety competition in Washington, D.C., next month.

Of 28 competitors, Roy Smith was one of the top three finalists in the state competition held earlier this week in Nampa. Other national representatives are Gary Sharp of Nampa and Jeffrey Corrington of Pocatello.

The drivers took written, pre-trip and driving tests; in the latter, drivers negotiated buses around tight obstacles and challenges.

Soul of a spinmeister

Sun Valley rep explores genius, demons of 'Atwater'

By Kristan Kennedy
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Republican campaign strategist Lee Atwater, modern political spin genius, could capture the hearts of swing voters and rock 'n' roll wannabes (who had mortgages) with a perfected Madison Avenue shine.

Among his coups were painting Kitty Dukakis as a "speed freak" and husband, Michael, as a "card-carrying" member of the American Civil Liberties Union. But his early death proved to Atwater and the world that images don't matter much when it comes to death.

Playwright Robert Myers' "Atwater: Fixin' to Die" opens here tonight and stars Bruce McIntosh as the man best known for the words he put in other people's mouths. It runs through Sunday at the nextStage Theater.

On the political stage, Atwater became famous as a strategist for the likes of George Bush and Ronald Reagan. Some politicians speculate that had Atwater's life not been cut short by a brain tumor, Bush would have fended off Bill Clinton in 1992.

Atwater's political theatrics are well documented in history and on stage with this production. He devised the Willy Horton ads against Dukakis and brought Clint Eastwood to life through George Bush's lips. "Read my lips ... no new taxes" was a Republican National Convention speech.

Atwater worked for the moment, not for the future.

Strangely, his honest side burst forth not in politics but on the stage of rock 'n' roll. (Although he wasn't above combining the two.) Armed with an electric guitar and an American-flag backdrop, he hopped across stage capturing hearts of undecided voters. His un-Republican tendencies and fondness for the Rolling Stones and B.B. King actually furthered his genius at political spin and family values. Atwater was anything but a poster child for the GOP, but he could write the copy and shoot the photos.

"Fixin' to Die" examines the two sides of one of this century's most talented political operatives. Atwater's life and "influence" on American politics will be played out by actor Bruce McIntosh, who's toured nationally with the one-man production.

The play starts all pretense that Atwater was a conservative at heart. His ways of manipulation were blatantly liberal, gleaming material from John Cougar Mellencamp and the ACLU as he worked miracles for Republicans.

It was all cut short at age 40 when brain cancer took over.

Times-News correspondent Kristan Kennedy can be reached at 788-5457.

Bruce McIntosh plays Lee Atwater at the nextStage Theater June 26-28 in Ketchum.

Classic car club shifts its gears

But it's the same cruise

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The name is enmeshed in a trademark lawsuit with a former sponsor, but the Classic Cruisers still get around. So the Ellen-based vintage car club's sixth annual grand cruise is called The Attack, not Hot Summer Nights as in past years.

Participants and spectators won't notice much difference. It will be hours of styling, Detroit-fashion. About 250 cars senior to — and quite probably in better shape than — yours are expected to participate.

The centerpiece will be what organizers Stacy Krutson claims will be biggest car cruise in Twin Falls' history. It leaves from the Turf Plaza on Falls Avenue at 9 p.m. Saturday, travels west on Falls to Washington Street North, north on Washington to Pole Line Road, east on Pole Line to Blue Lakes Boulevard North, south on Blue Lakes to Falls and west on Falls to the starting point.

A party and street dance will follow at the Turf Plaza. If you can't make it, there's another one tonight in the parking lot in front of Muggers's Brewpub, 819 2nd St., starting at 8 p.m. Much of the rest of the weekend will be given over to a succession of show 'n' shines — hey-look-me-over events among the polished-chrome set — culminating at the Sports Center at 622-2231.

Eddie Murphy is not Rex Harrison

By Julie Hinds
Knight Ridder News Service

If that talking Chihuahua gets you every time, you'll appreciate the Taco Bell commercial-ness of "Dr. Doolittle," the latest remake from Eddie Murphy.

The movie stars a scruffy mutt, not a lizard-loving, culturally insensitive rat dog. Otherwise it's identically prefabricated to sell you a product that's cheap and tasty.

Cheap because most of the humor comes straight from the litter box. Picture "Dr. Doolittle," the latest remake from Eddie Murphy. The movie stars a scruffy mutt, not a lizard-loving, culturally insensitive rat dog. Otherwise it's identically prefabricated to sell you a product that's cheap and tasty.

Not that there's anything wrong with that. When a movie is built around incompatible birds and neurotic tigers, it's better to have on the monkeyshines (although an unknown gets the key part of the Jack Daniels-swilling "drunk monkey"). To judge by the dialogue, these animals have put in years working the L.A. comedy clubs. "I am Keyser Sose," announces a pit bull who's a "Usual Suspects" buff. "Dead dog walking!" yells another pooch when his fellow inmate takes that long stroll down the pound.

them be as glib as possible. Who wouldn't like Rock as a feisty guinea pig and Shandling as an insecure pigeon? As a laconic mutt, Macdonald hasn't been this funny since he got yanked from his "Saturday Night Live" Weekend Update gig (see "Dirty Work" for proof, or then again, don't). If only some of the animal hipness had rubbed off on the people. In the routine morality play that is the plot, Murphy is John Doolittle, a general practitioner who had his childhood ability to converse with creatures scared out of him by an un-sympathetic father (Ossie Davis). Murphy gets in trouble on a late-night drive, as usual, when his character grazes a dog. The bump on his head, sustained during the accident reawakens his skills, and soon he's rapping to raccoons, owls, goats and more. His family, naturally, thinks he's flipped. His medical parners are concerned that his behavior will ruin their incipient deal to join an HMO. Although Murphy is mellow and appealing as a work-preoccupied father, his performance takes a back seat to his four-legged co-stars. He doesn't get any flashes of comic brilliance as in "The Nutty Professor." The closest his nutty doctor comes is when Murphy performs CPR on a flutulent rat.

I KNOW THIS MUCH IS TRUE
WALLY LAMB

Lamb's 'This Much': At 900 pages, it's just way too much

By Carole Goldberg
The Hartford Courant

"We grow unspeakably close to, unspeakably distant from, our brothers. We love them, but he never goes away, his absence as tangible as the ghost pain of an amputated limb."

That's John Edgar Wideman writing about brothers in the June issue of Esquire. There could just as well be commenting on Wally Lamb's "I Know This Much Is True" (Regan Books, $27.50).

The unspeakable closeness of twin brothers is the theme of Lamb's new novel. As the book that follows his hugely successful "She's Come Undone," which was catapulted to best-sellerdom by Oprah Winfrey's praise, it arrives amid very high expectations and largely fulfills them. It opens like a thunderclap and carries you swiftly along through its nearly 900 pages. Though it begins toward the finish, so much is so very good about this book that you're inclined to forgive it.

Dominick and Thomas are born in Connecticut as 1949 twins and 1950 begins. They are identical twins, they are as unlike as if they had been born in different continents.

Dominick is a scrapper, a kid who learns early — and often that acting tough is the only way to get by in a world dominated by the likes of his unfeeling stepfather, Ray Birdsey. Dominick carries that toughness into manhood where it becomes a shield against the pain of mourning a child, losing a wife and witnessing his brother's agony. But while it protects, that hard shell also constricts his future.

Thomas is sweet, scared and doomed. Ever the victim of Ray and other bullies, he pores over his treasured Bible and book of Catholic martyrs, sacred soil that nurtures a blooming schizophrenic paranoia that turns Thomas into a tortured saint who welcomes a martyrdom of his own.

The boys are born fatherless. Dominick's search for his identity — who is his father? how is he the same or separate from his loved brother? how can he love if he doesn't really know who he is? — are the puzzles he must solve in the middle of life in order to go on.

Thomas's problems are more daunting. Slipping into insanity as a college student, he is a cursed Cassandra who sees the truth and speaks that truth in mad metaphors few can, or want, to understand. Horrified by the Gulf War, he stages a bloody sacrifice to capture the world's attention. As usual, the world sees but turns away, unheeding, in disgust.

Both characters are wholly believable in the way they act and think and speak. Realistic portraits are Lamb's forte, and he gives us many powerful ones here. Perhaps his most original and fascinating character is one who appears throughout the book through the eyes of his self-glorifying memoir, "A Great Man from Humble Beginnings," as the pompous title has it. He is the boys' maternal grandfather, Domingo Onofre, who is

Tempestuous is right. Here is another bully — a vain, sanctimonious little man steaming with resentment and self-pity. # Company of Fools considers the dilemma of that social-climber Jack

By Kristan Kennedy
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Jack is a dreamy boy of no means. To fill his long days he sits in a barn and lets his mind wander ... up a whimsical seasonally where life has no limits and hardship is overtaken by fantastical dreams ...

"If you've forgotten the rest, Hailey's Company of Fools will refresh your memory starting next week as it brings Jack's dancing giants back to life in a critically acclaimed adaptation of "Jack and the Beanstalk."

This exciting adaptation of the classic fairy tale stars Anna Genesha as Jack, the center of the story about a family that has fallen on hard times. Fools' artistic director Rusty Wilson writes the not-so-brilliant poem. Danielle Kennedy plays his, slightly smarter and co-dependent wife Marilyn Tiede rounds out the local cast as the beanstalk.

For Company of Fools, this marks their second major production this summer. Having just come off Tom Noonan's adult tone "What Happened Was ...," Jack is a humorous in content and design.

This particular adaptation is a musical written by Douglas Jones and scored by Ron Barnett. Cyril W. Randall, a part-time Wood River Valley resident and big Company of Fools fan, is underwriting the production.

Jones lives in Richmond, Va., and is best known for his collaboration with Charles Forman on "Amie." He's written more than 20 plays and will be working here with Fools' for this production and the upcoming Hemingway Project. He teaches English at the University of Virginia. His children's shows have been seen throughout the United States.

Set design is by John Glenn and Justin Rowland.

Denise Simone, Company of Fools manager said, "Jack" is more than just a fairy tale.

"Jack is a celebration of the power of the imagination and the joy of reading," she said. "It shows that dreams are for all ages."

Truly, in this version of Jack,

Rusty Wilson, as the Giant, sings a variety of 'Ft Ft Ft Fun' with the help of Jack's men played by Danielle Kennedy.

when the going gets tough, down here on earth, Jack's mind makes him to look and schemes about his reality of poverty and struggling working parents.

The story starts out with Jack's mother trying to win no one's milk from a hungry baby. Birth cost and Jack's family don't have enough food on their plates.

"This is the first time we've been able to tell our entire community the history of a child's production," Simone said. "We've done smaller shows just for Jack, but this is the first time a production of this scale has come together for the community."

Celebrated jazz man, daughter open Sun Valley Center series

By Margot Higgins
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — The Sun Valley Center for the Arts' 1998 Twilight Jazz series opens Wednesday with a jazzman who's something of an icon in Idaho.

Blues pianist Gene Harris will return to Sun Valley accompanied by his daughter, Niki. The Harris duo will perform outdoors at the Sun Valley Resort's River Run Lodge.

Harris, a sometime Boise resident who made his local reputation as the musical director at a Boise hotel, has 40 years of jazz recordings on his resume. Hailing from Benton Harbor, Mich., he began playing piano at age 4. By age 6, he was performing.

"Even though I was making a lot of money when I was 7 or 8, it didn't register in my mind that I would always be doing this," Harris said. "Later on, I boxed, ran track, and was in the paratroopers while in the military (1951-54). You can run but you can't hide from music; it's in your bones."

In 1958, Harris moved to New York City and was signed to the Blue Note record label in a group called "The Three Sounds." They went on to make 35 records.

He was one of the first players to synthesize bop rhythms and harmonies into an accessible style, making the group one of the most popular jazz bands of the 1950s.

In the 1970s, Harris met bassist Ray Brown in Boise, and Brown asked him to record on the Pablo label and join his trio.

Now on the Concord Label since 1985, Harris spends six months of the year touring worldwide.

"Jazz is bigger than it has ever been. I've been to Russia, Japan, Scotland, Ireland, Paris and London at all kinds of festivals," he said. "It doesn't matter whether we perform in Korea, Italy or Monterey. The people always seem to feel the music and enjoy what we do."

His latest release, "In His ed to record a gospel album for some time and now I finally have."

Niki Harris, a jazz vocalist, was a backup singer and choreographer for Madonna for 12 years. She's also worked with Anita Baker, The Righteous Brothers and Stevie Wonder and on movie scores with Whoopi Goldberg and Robert DeNiro.

In the past two years, Niki has worked as a soloist, recording and touring with her own group and well as with her father.

"To have the pleasure of performing with your child is one of the greatest treasures," Harris said. "It is unbelievable to share the stage with your son or daughter. Words cannot explain it."

The series will continue on July 8 with two-time Grammy Award-winning vocalist Diane Schur and conclude with a concert by Keb' Mo' on July 19 at Trail Creek Cabin.

Displays of male affection may not be what they seem

DEAR ABBY: I have a gripe to air, and I hope you will consider printing it.

A few times a year, my adult son is allowed to visit me from his residence in a group home for the mentally disabled in another state. Despite his severe handicap, "John" is a loving, affectionate and loving son, of whom I am quite proud. Therein lies the problem.

When we are walking together in public, John will often grab my hand, as he did when he was a child, innocently unaware of the social taboos against such behavior.

Many times I have had to endure stares, snickers or outright insults from strangers who

DEAR ABBY
Night Vision

apparently interpret this hand-holding as homosexual bonding.

The emotional trauma of our separation due to divorce, distance and his institutionalization is enough pain for both of us. I don't want to forcibly remove my hand from my son's simply to avoid the mistaken notions of thoughtless people who have no idea what it means to suffer a cognitive disability.

Perhaps if there are any such judgemental souls among your legion of readers, they will think twice the next time they see two grown men holding hands in public.

—OHIO FATHER

DEAR FATHER: People who sneer, snicker or insult strangers in public are hardly the kind of individuals who should be judging someone else's behavior. I hope they recognize themselves in your letter and, as you said, think twice before assuming anything and expressing any form of disapproval. People should never judge another until they have been down the same path.

Lipinski will skate Sun Valley

The Times-News

SUN VALLEY — Olympic gold medalist Tara Lipinski will headline the Sun Valley Ice Show on July 11, the Sun Valley Company said this week.

The 16-year-old Lipinski, who defeated fellow American Michelle Kwan for the ladies' figure skating gold at the Winter Olympics in Nagano, Japan, in February, will headline in the Sun Valley appearance amid commitments with the Tour of Champions, with which she now skates professionally.

Her appearance continues a tradition of skaters following up gold-medal winning performances by skating at Sun Valley the following summer. Katsunori Satoh did so in 1994, as did Kristi Yamaguchi in 1992 and Katarina Witt four years earlier.

Lipinski has skated Sun Valley twice before as an amateur. Ticket prices are (with a buffet dinner) $79-$82 for adults, $61-$64 for children; (bleachers) $36-$51 for adults, $33 for children. All bleacher seats are reserved. Tickets are on sale from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. all week at River Run Day-Lodge in Ketchum, 622-2231, and from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. the day of the show at the Sun Valley Sports Center. For more information, call the Sports Center at 622-2231.

Hazelton touches off 4th celebrations a little early

The Times-News

HAZELTON — Folks in Hazelton just can't wait for Independence Day.

So as they do every year, they'll get a head start Sunday night.

Hazelton's Fourth of July celebration will be held in City Park, capped by a fireworks display at dusk.

Before that there will be a full day of food, sand, sun, including a carnival with a Ferris wheel, and a 6 p.m. parade through town.

The festivities actually start tonight when the carnival, sponsored by the Hazelton Revitalization Action Team, opens at 5 p.m. It'll remain open until 10 and reopen at noon on Saturday.

Food booths and game booths will open at the same time. A bike-decorating contest for kids is planned for Saturday.

The parade will form up at Hamilton Square on the west end of town at 5 p.m. and roll at 6. The grand marshal this year is Gerard Baker.

The Hazelton Volunteer Fire Department will set off the fireworks. The display is sponsored by the Hazelton Lions Club and the city of Hazelton.

George Clooney stars in this week's new movie 'Out of Sight'

Combined wire services

Movies playing in south-central Idaho this weekend. Opinions are by Los Angeles Times and Knight-Ridder Newspapers reviewers. Ratings by the Motion Picture Association of America are: (G) for general audiences; (PG) parental guidance urged because of material possibly unsuitable for children; (PG-13) parents are strongly cautioned to give guidance for attendance of children younger than 13; (R) restricted, younger than 17 admitted only with parent or adult guardian; (NC-17) no one younger than 17 admitted.

Twin Falls

- "Can't Hardly Wait" — Harry Efland and Deborah Kaplan offer a fast and funny take on high school graduation as a largely unanticipated reality check as senior class gathers for a raucous and revealing celebration. Jennifer Love Hewitt heads a nifty ensemble cast. (PG-13 for teen drinking and sexuality, and for language.) (Twin Cinema)
- "City of Angels" — This story of an angel (Nicolas Cage) who falls in love with a heart surgeon (Mickey Rourke), is attractive as well as off-putting. It manages to leave a pleasant afterglow for those in the mood for its kind of loving. (PG-13 for sexuality, including language and some nudity.) (Grand-Vu Drive-In)
- "Deep Impact" — A glorified made-for-television special — with more expensive special effects — that stars a hunking comet that threatens to wipe out life on Earth. Tea Leoni is the reporter who breaks the story, Morgan Freeman is a calm, compassionate president, and Robert Duvall is an aging astronaut leading a mission to detonate the comet in space. Director Mimi Leder is charged with keeping things human. (PG-13; violence, language.) (Twin Cinema)
- "Dirty Work" — Norm Macdonald plays a lunxom who starts up his own prank-for-hire business. Macdonald's dead-give-a-damn sensibility is good for a few laughs, but television personality Bob Saget directs with an eye toward blinding obviousness, and in terms of performance and production value, this is strictly direct-to-video stuff. (PG-13 for crude sexual humor and language.) (Twin Cinema)

• "Dr. Dolittle" — Eddie Murphy succeeds Rex Harrison as the physician who talks to the animals. The director is Betty Thomas ("The Brady Bunch Movie" and "Private Parts"). (PG-13 for crude humor and language.) (Twin Cinema)

• "Godzilla" — "Independence Days" Roland Emmerich reworks the Japanese '50s monster movie with tremendous panache and a blithe spirit as the immense amphibian arises from the South Sea once again, this time to wreak convincing havoc on Manhattan. With Matthew Broderick, Jenia Reno, Maria Ptillo and Hank Azaria. (PG-13, for sci-fi monster action/violence.) (Twin Cinema)

• "Hope Floats" — Although it's fun, too cutesy-psycho on the edges, this is at heart a strong mother-daughter drama, beautifully acted by Sandra Bullock and Gena Rowlands under Forest Whitaker's caring direction. With Harry Connick Jr. as the requisite small-town Sensitive Hank and Mae Whitman as Bullock's bright, spunky daughter. (Thomas, (PG-13 for thematic elements.) (Twin Cinema)

• "The Horse Whisperer" — Although there is a considerable amount of impressive work in Robert Redford's screen version of Nicholas Evans' best-selling novel, the film is overly reverential, not to mention overly long. Kristin Scott Thomas, usually the most reliable of actresses, is uninvolved. (PG-13, for a disturbing accident scene.) (Twin Cinema)

• "Mulan" — This accomplished piece of feature animation is graced with a feisty heroine, based on the Chinese legend of young woman who masquerades as a man to defend her family's honor. But Mulan is no match for the film's excessive reliance on formula in its dramatic structure that drags everything down. (G.) (Twin Cinema)

• "Object of My Affection" — Jennifer Aniston is a straight social worker who falls in love with her gay roommate, Paul Rudd, and it's difficult to decide what's cuter, the cast or the premise. But director Nicholas Hytner and writer Wendy Wasserstein transcend the superficial to explore interesting ideas about modern relationships and preoccupations in interesting ways, and the supporting cast of Nigel Hawthorne, Alan Alda and Allison Janney is superb. Rated R, sexual theme, language. (Grand-Vu Drive-In)

• "Odd Couple II" — Felix and Oscar's children are getting married — to each other — and the former roommates run into a series of misadventures on the way to the wedding. Old pros Walter Matthau and Jack Lemmon relax and have fun with Neil Simon's script, creating plenty of laughs to go around. Rated PG-13; Felix says a very bad word, twice. (Motor-Vu Drive-In)

• "Out of Sight" — Screenwriter Scott Frank follows "Get Shorty" with another Elmore Leonard adaptation, about prison escapee George Clooney and hostage Jennifer Lopez. Directed by Steven Soderbergh. (R.) (Twin Cinema)

• "Perfect Murder" — An update of Alfred Hitchcock's classic thriller "Dial M for Murder" starring Michael Douglas, Gwyneth Paltrow and Viggo Mortensen that tries hard to be trashy and potent without more than sporadic success. (R for violence, sexuality and language.) (Twin Cinema)

• "Six Days, Seven Nights" — Part sex comedy, part screwball romance, part adventure yarn, all familiar, this well-worn standard benefits greatly from credit star performances by Harrison Ford as a beer-around South Pacific pilot and Anne Heche as a snippy, New York magazine editor who has to depend on him when their plane crashes. (PG-13 for language, sensuality and brief violence.) (Twin Cinema)

• "Titanic" — James Cameron's epic story of love aboard the doomed ship. Superior production design and action sequences clash painfully with dialogue so cliché it makes you weep in frustration. Leonardo DiCaprio and Kate Winslet star. (PG-13 for disaster related peril and violence, nudity, sensuality and brief language.) (Motor-Vu Drive-In)

• "The Truman Show" — Jim Carrey gets the role of his career in the adventurous, unnerving, even daring story of Truman

Burbank, the unknowing center of a television program about his life that everyone on the planet is watching but him. Sharply conceived by writer Andrew Niccol and directed with enviable grace and restraint by Peter Weir, this is the rare film that manages to be emotionally involving without losing the ability to get laughs and raise sharp satiric questions. (PG for thematic elements and mild language.) (Twin Cinema)

Burley

• "Dr. Dolittle" — Eddie Murphy succeeds Rex Harrison as the physician who talks to the animals. The director is Betty Thomas ("The Brady Bunch Movie" and "Private Parts"). (PG-13 for crude humor and language.) (Twin Cinema)

• "Mickey" — Disney animation returns to top form with a triumphant, gorgeously rendered work that speaks to children with rare eloquence about identity and coming of age. A very different Disney heroine saves China, defies stifling convention and finds her true place in the world. (G.) (Century Cinema)

• "Out of Sight" — Screenwriter Scott Frank follows

"Get Shorty" with another Elmore Leonard adaptation, about prison escapee George Clooney and hostage Jennifer Lopez. Directed by Steven Soderbergh. (R.) (Century Cinema)

• "Six Days, Seven Nights" — Harrison Ford and Anne Heche star in this pleasant enough throwback to the Hollywood romantic comedies of yore (albeit with a few modern touches). It's full of creaky clichés, and comes with another impossibly whiny performance from "Friends" guy David Schwimmer, but its two leads are smart enough, and cute enough, to make a go of it. (PG-13 for profanity, adult themes, sexual situations.) (Century Cinema)

Coming Wednesday: 'Armageddon'

Bruce Willis leads the cast of 'Armageddon.'

Movies

• "The Truman Show" — The idea of everyday life as the ultimate soap opera is not an original one, but it has been ingeniously re-imagined in this sharp, detailed satire about a unsuspecting suburbanite, wonderfully portrayed by Jim Carrey, whose "life" is actually the longest-running television series in history, stage managed by a God-like director (Ed Harris). Director Peter Weir goes long but not deep; this plays like a long-lost episode of "The Twilight Zone." Rated PG-13; violence, language. (Century Cinema)

• "The X-Files" — Not great, but a solidly creepy thriller that brings Agents Scully and Mulder (Gillian Anderson and David Duchovny) to the big screen, poking their flashlight in dark places, bumping into sticky corpses, accusing their brooding mugs against evil conspiracies in high places. PG-13 (violence, profanity, lethal aliens) (Jerome Theater)

(PG-13 for language, sensuality and brief violence.) (Jerome Cinema)

• "The X-Files" — The intrigue for Mulder and Scully centers on the bombing of a Dallas office building in a film that also serves as the culmination of the TV series' season. (PG-13 for some intense violence and gore.) (Jerome Cinema)

New York Daily News

Call it deJa vu doom. On May 8, an asteroid hurtled into movie theaters everywhere. Earthlings were terrified. Americans were slammed into outer space in an attempt to blow up the heavenly object. The movie was called "Deep Impact." On Wednesday, another asteroid will hurtle into movie theaters everywhere. Earthlings will be terrified. Americans will be blown into outer space in an attempt to blow up the heavenly object. The movie is called "Armageddon." So far, "Deep Impact" — starring Tea Leoni, Morgan Freeman and Robert Davall — has made earned more than $130 million at the box office in North America, making it one of the biggest movies of the year. That success might undercut the audience for "Armageddon," which stars Bruce Willis, Ben Affleck and Liv Ullmann.

But surprisingly, many industry sources believe that the second asteroid movie of the summer will not be hurt by the first. Some predict that savvy marketing could make "Armageddon" the No. 1 movie of the summer, raking in upwards of $200 million in ticket sales.

"I don't think the fact that these are both asteroid movies will matter," says one exhibitor on the West Coast. "When you boil it all down, how different are one crime or police dramas from one another? Frequently, the buddy pictures are interchangeable."

• "The Truman Show" — Peter Weir's hauntingly funny requiem for the television age starring Jim Carrey as the only man on the planet who doesn't know he's the star of TV's longest-running series. PG (existential themes) (Ski Time 4 Cinema)

• "The X-Files" — Not great, but a solidly creepy thriller that brings Agents Scully and Mulder (Gillian Anderson and David Duchovny) to the big screen, poking their flashlights in dark places, performing autopsy on sticky corpses, bumping their brooding mugs against evil conspiracies in high places. PG-13 (violence, profanity, lethal aliens) (Ski Time 4 Cinema)

Shoshone

• "Tarzan and the Lost City" — Casper Van Dien, the iron-jawed young bug-killer of "Shanghai Troopers," inherits the loincloth in this quasi-official, completely dispensable sequel to "Greystoke: The Legend of Tarzan, Lord of the Apes." Jane March, who has more teeth than Cheech, plays Jane, reimagined as an equal partner. Rated PG; violence. (Shoshone Showhouse)

The Washington Post

New videos in Twin Falls-area stores this week:

• "Mr. Magoo" (PG) — Leslie Nielsen makes a spectacularly funny Magoo. In this dopey chaser, based on the idiosync and middle-aged animated character. As Magoo, his clueless nephew Waldo (Matt Keeslar) and his trusty bulldog set out to nab a gang of jewel thieves, their exploits are barely enough to sustain a four-minute kiddie cartoon. And what director Stanley Tong ("Super Cop") knows about comedy would fit in a cyanide capsule. Contains cleavage.

• "Fast, Cheap & Out of Control" (PG) — Errol Morris' nonfiction film is a watchable if not exhilarating attempt to identify haunting similarities among four subjects obsessed with animals, including lion tamer Dave Hoover, topiary gardener George Mendonca; Ray Mendez, who studies hairless mole-rats; and MIT scientist Rodney Brooks, who designs robots that seem to have lives of their own. Morris' content is overshadowed by his sleight-of-hand stylistics: a dizzying potpourri of black-and-white film, color film, video, 16mm, 35mm, Super8 film and stock footage, rendered into kinetic candy by the rapid-fire editing. Contains nothing objectionable.

• "The Postman" (R) — Director-star Kevin Costner falls head over heels in love with himself in this nihilistic, post-apocalyptic drunker about a loner who picks up a mail bag and becomes a reluctant sperm donor, role model and inevitably a godsend to what's left of America. "You're a godsend, a savior," proclaims a survivor in the year 2013. "No, I'm just the postman." Costner responds, oh so humbly. Postscript to Costner: Get over yourself. Contains violence, crude language and sex scenes.

• "Welcome to Samajevo" (R) — Without its timeliness, and authentic documentary material, this fictionalized account of a British TV journalist and the child he tries to rescue from Sarajevo is an average journalistic-war-time movie. But if the film (loosely based on journalist Michael Nicholson's factual narrative, "Natasha's Story") loops along a formulaic track, its gruesome footage (filmed during the 1992-1995 Bosnian war) pulls us into a dimension far deeper than the movie. Contains disturbing violence, nudity and profanity.

Twin Falls group Sometimes Y cuts CD

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Sometimes Y's music is hard to define, band members said. Now with their first CD release, people can judge that sound for themselves.

It's a group of local musicians with original music. Their CD, released last week, is comprised of lyrics by guitarist and lead vocalist Justin Bailey.

Bailey's dad played John Denver songs to him and then eventually taught him how to play guitar. Later he performed in the Madrigals at Twin Falls High School, which he said was a "good learning experience."

Although Bailey studied music at Linfield College, he basically taught himself how to play and write.

His music is easier to listen to than to explain.

"Everybody has their own opinion of what we are," said Zak Frantz, who plays saxophone and sings background vocals. "I feel we're pretty based in folk, I see my end in jazz. I try to add a little bit of jazz to Justin's folk-based sound."

What makes this Sometimes Y work, Frantz said, is how well the four members work together.

"Everybody is 30 percent of the band," he said. "We give it that 120 percent."

Drummer Robert Moffitt and bassist Adam Crafts are the other members of the group.

Fans energize Third Eye Blind

The Baltimore Sun

For some bands, a successful single is not always the blessing it seems. Audiences come out not because they like the band, but because they like that one particular record. After a while, the band begins to resent The Hit and secretly longs for the day they won't have to play it.

Fortunately, that hasn't happened to Third Eye Blind.

Even though the group's first single, the raucously infectious "Semi-Charmed Life," was a fixture on pop radio last fall, the group never got sick of playing it. Quite the opposite, says singer Stephan Jenkins.

It helps that the San Francisco-based quartet knew it had other songs that were just as strong. Indeed, Third Eye Blind's recent single, "How's It Gonna Be," is a Top-10 hit.

But what really made the difference was the reaction it got from audiences each night. As Jenkins puts it, "We had huge turnouts very early on for the band," he says. "Shows sold out, and everybody in the audience knowing all the words. Of the whole record."

What makes the difference, says Jenkins, is that there's more to Third Eye Blind's music than just a bunch of catchy tunes. As he sees it, the audience's response is actually an embrace of what the songs are saying.

"We make these worlds where the people in them are flawed, but somehow redeemable," he says. "People make a connection to that, and that's really what's happened with Third Eye Blind."

"How's It Gonna Be" is a case in point. As Jenkins explains, the song is about the sort of feelings that emerge between lovers as a relationship comes to its end.

"How's It Gonna Be" deals with a question that we ask ourselves whenever a relationship ends: "What does that mean?" he says, over the phone from a tour stop in Rolla, Mo. "What it means is that you (two) are no longer intimate, and the transition from friends to acquaintances is a brutal one. Because it reminds us, I think, of all things ending."

IN BRIEF

Valley beats Shelley for 1st win in over 8 years

VALLEY — The Vikings won their first game in over eight years Thursday, beating Shelley 8-7 in the first game of a doubleheader.

Will Black threw a complete game and Kasey Fryer was 3-for-4 with two doubles and a single. Derek Bem sacrificed in AJ Meyer for the winning run in the bottom of the seventh to give the win to the Vikings.

The win was Valley’s first of the year after reinstating its program after an eight-year hiatus.

“It was good for the kids,” said assistant coach Ben Meyer. “The kids were a little down and frustrated and it was good for them to see how fun winning is.”

Shelley won the second game 12-9. Valley sees action next on Saturday when it hosts Wood River in a doubleheader.

Jerome Roping Club sets event for Saturday

JEROME — The Jerome Roping Club’s annual Father’s Day roping event is set for this Saturday at the Jerome Ropero grounds. There will be two classification 13 and under and 13 to 18.

Break away roping begins at 9 a.m. with barrel racing at 10, followed by the Father and Son roping contest. Call Steve Bartholomew at 326-6546 or WJ Bueak at 324-4689 with any questions.

Candleridge plays host to 104 junior golfers

Candleridge played host to the Idaho Junior Golf Association Wednesday. The field consisted of 104 boys and girls from the ages of 5 to 13.

Sam Federico took the girls’ under-7 title with a score of 15 over three holes. The boys’ under-7 winner was Conner Lee with a 13.

The 8-and-9-year-old girls played five holes with Rian Fisher winning with a score of 29. Tim Merritt was the 8-year-old boys’ winner with a score of 24. Jessi Lancaster shot a 38 over nine holes to claim top honors for the under-10-and-11 girls. The boys’ 9-year-old winner was Cory Paulsen with a score of 45.

The girls’ under-12-to-13 winner was Monica Venn with a 42 over nine holes. The 10-year-old boys’ winner was Chase Altmece with a 46 over nine holes.

The 11-year-old-boys’ winner was Michael Konrad with a 39 over nine holes. The 12-year-old boys’ winner was Troy Merritt with a 36 over nine holes.

Trustees agree to Horse Park offer for Calumet

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Trustees for those who claim ownership of the Calumet Farm property have agreed to accept a $2.7 million offer that would keep the collection on display at the Kentucky Horse Park, a lawyer said.

Compiled from staff and wire reports

Dave Bingham, Patrick Harper and Patrick Cizmama are three of the four West River Valley athletes who will represent Idaho in the upcoming Discovery Channel Eco-Challenge, an international event held in Morocco this October.

Burley finishes 1st day of tourney undefeated

By Darren Clow
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A number of individual efforts highlighted a stormy, off-delayed first day Thursday at the Donnelly’s Sport Invitational American Legion baseball tournament at Twin Falls High School and Harmon Park.

Between downpours, Jerome’s Nathan Prescott had another two-homer game and his team had an 11-run inning. Bobbi’s T.J. Cline took one out of the high school park before dawn had even broken. Twin Falls’ Bobby Trivitt threw a seven-inning two-hitter, and two Burley hunters guided the Bobcats to a tournament-leading 20 percent.

Burley beat Jerome, 10-7, and Idaho Falls, 8-2. Buhl beat Twin Falls, 10-0, before losing to Caldwell, 6-3. The Cowboys then lost to Roy, Uhhly’s second squad, 6-5, and Jerome rallied to beat Roy’s first squad, 16-8.

In other games, Marsh Valley beat

Idaho Falls and Roy 1, and Bear Lake fell to Roy 2 and Caldwell.

Today’s 10 matches began at 8:15 a.m. The two-day results will determine seeding for Saturday’s games, beginning with the ninth-place game at Harmon Park at 9 a.m. through the championship at the high school at 2 p.m.

Buhl 10, Twin Falls 0, 5 m.

Buhl scored eight second-inning runs on four hits, including Cline’s home run.

“For a 15-year-old, he sure can swing it,” said Buhl coach Gary Kramen, who also laid praise for pitcher Jeremy Walker, who held the Cowboys to one hit before yielding to reliever Vic Storchelard in the fifth and final inning.

Walker set the tone for us when he’s on the mound,” Kramen said. “The crowd loved and gas things going.”

The loss continued a rough losing streak for Twin Falls.

“Buhl did a great job,” said Cowboys coach Nick Baumert. “That’s how baseball was meant to be played. They do the little things that we’re not doing right now.”

Jerome 16, Roy 18

Present, who has hit the first six homers of his career this week, capped in the first for 3 RBIs and led off the sixth with another, beginning an 11-run rally that capped the lead and ended the game.

Roy II 6, Twin Falls 5

Roy scored four unearned runs in the second inning on four Cowboy errors, and held Twin Falls scoreless until the fourth. Ben Meehl singled in Scott Kiammen and Joel Osborne singled and scored on an error.

Roy, meanwhile, played Travis Pursitt, as the winners were able to get anything going after their early runs. The Cowboys tied the game in the fifth on a Jeremy Hinchey sacrifice fly and a Harmon RBI single.

Jon Brumbeck led off the seventh with a walk and scored on another Hinchey single, but Roy used two Twin Falls’ errors to put across the tying and winning runs in the bottom half inning as the stanzas returned.

“Buhl did a great job,” said Cowboys coach Nick Baumert. “That’s how baseball was meant to be played. They do the little things that we’re not doing right now.”

Jerome 16, Roy 18

Present, who has hit the first six homers of his career this week, capped in the first for 3 RBIs and led off the sixth with another, beginning an 11-run rally that capped the lead and ended the game.

“(Present) had two grand slams in one game last week,” said Jerome coach Tom Hinchey. “He scored 13 runs and he had 10 RBIs. You’re not supposed to have guys like that.”

“The funny thing is that he works so hard to do (Thursday) was his first time out on running around the bases.”

Jerome sent 16 batters to the plate in the final inning for 11 runs on six hits, four walks and one hit by error.

Burley 10, Jerome 7

Jerome pitchers accounted for nine walks and four hit batters in the morning.

U.S. soccer team ready to head home after final defeat

NANTES, France (AP) — An utter, total wreck of a World Cup for the United States ended Thursday night with a 1-0 loss to top-tier European team American soccer to its lowest point in more than a decade.

The Americans, who came to the tournament with the goal of showing Europe that U.S. soccer has come of age, instead proved how far they have to go.

The United States (9-3), already eliminated by a 2-1 loss to Korea, is guaranteed of finishing no better than 30th in the 32-team field and could wind up dead last.

While the U.S. team showed flashes of improvement from four years ago in brief stretches, all in all it was an embarrassment for a nation that has spent millions of dollars trying to build up its program to a world-class level.

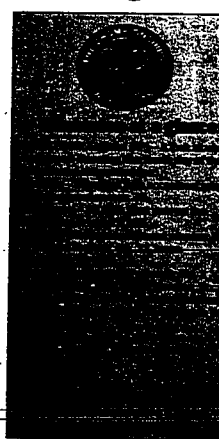

In 1994, when the United States was the host of the World Cup, the team advanced to the second round. Some players had called about making it to a quarterfinal this year.

It was a team that progressed steadily since 1985, when it was eliminated for the ninth straight time in World Cup qualifying, faces a period of reassessment and uncertainty.

A defeated Andre Agassi gulps his loss at the end of his fifth U.S. Open match against Germany’s Tommy Haas, on Wimbledon’s Centre Court Thursday. Haas won the match 6-4, 6-4, 7-6 (4), 6-4.

Agassi, the 1992 champion who came to Wimbledon this year intent on showing his skills to Jordan’s venture into baseball. “So I have to give myself at least a year just to see whatever my best may be. Right now, I feel like I have a lot more to do with some of these defeats than my opponents do.”

No. 1 Victoria Erglis struggled in a 7-6 (2), 6-4 victory over Elena Makarova, a 7-6 (2), 6-4 victory over Elena Makarova, a 7-6 (2), 6-4 victory over Elena Makarova, a 7-6 (2), 6-4 victory over Elena Makarova.

Adventure

Continued from D1. Among Harper's more difficult kayaking experiences was the first no-paddle descent of Big Falls on the South Fork of the Payette river, a class VI run. Ritz, 40, has a background in nordic skiing. She was a member of the U.S. ski team from 1981-84 and still teaches the skill in Sun Valley. Ritz is a three-time participant in the Race Across America, a 3,000-mile, nine-day bike marathon. Dave Bingham, the oldest team member at 43, has a background in kayaking and climbing and is a former champion of NRC's International Survival of the Fittest. He's also the author of a guidebook detailing climbing adventures in the City of Rocks. The common thread uniting all four Team Idaho members is the Sun Valley ski team - along with the mental makeup required for success in endurance sports. "You have to be internally motivated to be good at cross-country skiing and that carries over into other sports," said Ritz. The Moroccan race will encompass various topography. Along with the Saharan desert, it will include dense bush, the 13,000-foot Atlas mountains, and the coastal waters of the Atlantic. The race requires not only extensive physical skills, but also serious map reading, as well. The racers are required to haul all their own equipment and will be disqualified if they leave equipment or waste of any kind behind. They will be given a starting point and a finishing point, along with designated drop spots for food and equipment, but it will be each team's job to navigate from check point to check point and find the holy grail of a finish line. Because of the cooperative nature of the race, where each team is only as strong as its weakest link, teamwork is key. "The most difficult part of the race is compatibility, getting along with one another, and making the right decisions. Without a plan you're going to be in trouble," said the veteran Casimira. Team Idaho is preparing for the unique group dynamics bound to emerge when four people through their lot together in such a grueling endeavor by lubricating the aid of a group therapist. Another challenge will be the Berber law which requires all skin to be covered, ensuring the athletes will be clothed head to foot as they muster their way over the stony desert terrain. Team Idaho is expecting rain, lots of it, but it wouldn't be a race without it, according to Casimira. The team expects to sleep an average of only four hours a day, with dehydrated fruit, peaches, and gallons of water on the menu. "It's a man does this race without any pain, it would be worth nothing," Casimira said. "I think of the race like breaking out of prison. You devise a plan, follow through with it, and get to freedom." Casimira's analogy goes a way toward answering the question of what drives right-thinking souls to enroll on a far continent and submit themselves to grueling measures of pain. The answer has little to do with adventure, or even individual insight, and everything to do with freedom. The athletes work a type of freedom not available in ordinary adult life. It's the type of freedom known only to children when life is play and goals are reduced to who can finish first - or in the case of the Eco-Challenge, who can simply finish. "The race is kind of like being a kid, but playing in your back yard," Ritz explained. "You just go out on your back yard, anytime - you're in Missouri," Harper said. ## Tiger might miss cut in Western Open

Kraft leads the tourney—one he wasn't supposed to play in

LEMONT, Ill. (AP)—Greg Kraft had eight birdies and shot a 5 on par 67 Thursday to take the lead after the first round of the Western Open. Not bad for a guy who three days ago didn't know he was going to be playing. "I didn't really practice this weekend, figuring I had this weekend off," said Kraft, who was given a sponsor's exemption Monday when Darren Clarke withdrew. "Maybe that's what I needed, to take a full week off instead of just part of a week."

Vijay Singh was tied with Kraft going to the 18th tee, but his drive on the par-4 hole went into deep rough and he put his second shot into a sponsor's tent. He two-putted for bogey and a 68.

U.S. Open champion Lee Janzen picked up three strokes over the last five holes to join Singh and Joe Durant and 4-jumper.

Jim McGovern and Steve Flesch were two shots behind Kraft in the $2 million, Motorola-sponsored tournament. With the temperature in the 90s, humidity making it feel like it was over 100 and a gusting wind, most of the rest of the field struggled just to stay around par at Cog Hill's Dubsred course.

Tiger Woods' troubles continued, as he finished nine strokes off the leader at 4-over-par 76. Unless he makes a major move today, the defending champion is in danger of missing just his second cut since turning pro in August 1996.

"A Right now, I'm not looking too good," Woods said. "But there's three rounds left. Hopefully I can rally, put something good together on the weekend."

Kraft's best career finishes were seconds in the 1993 Disney Classic and the 1994 Western Open, when he bogeyed the 18th hole to finish one behind Nick Price. With the ball seeming to go his way all day, Kraft said he couldn't help but think back to 1994.

He missed the cut in 1996 and 1997.

Some of the shots I hit back in '94 and some of the breaks that I got today that I didn't get then, you know?" he said. "I gave him (Price) the opportunity to win it. I didn't close the deal. But it happens."

Kraft didn't seem to make any bad decisions Thursday. He was at even par after the seventh hole, and then moved atop the leaderboard with four straight birdies on Nos. 8-11. He birdied 15, 16 and 17 to go 6-under, but finished his round with a bogey. "I got very lucky," he said. "It seemed like whenever I was up first, it really wasn't an opportunity to get a feel for someone else's ball. We seemed to guess right."

Woods, on the other hand, couldn't get anything right. His swing hasn't felt comfortable all year, and he hoped coming to Cog Hill might snap him out of a slump. Instead, he had his ugliest round in weeks. Starting off the back nine, he made the turn at 2-over and then double bogeyed the par-3 second hole and bogeyed No. 4. He birdied only two holes and didn't get his first one until No. 5, his 14th hole.

"I just didn't have a feel for my swing today," he said. "I couldn't get a flow for the greens, my flow for my stroke. My feel was just not where it needed to be."

Woods has won just one event, the BellSouth Classic, and wasn't in contention in the U.S. Open last weekend. His spring of major championship rounds in the 70s is now at 14.

Karl Malone meets his twins for 1st time

MONROE, La. (AP)—Utah Jazz star Karl Malone talked with two of his children for the first time this week while visiting his native north Louisiana.

Cheryl and Daryl Ford, 17-year-old twins who live in Metairie, La., hometown of Summerfield, told The News-Star newspaper in Monroe that their father came to town Tuesday and wanted to talk.

"It meant a lot to me," Cheryl Ford said. "I'm glad he finally came around."

Said Daryl Ford: "It's going to be some hard feelings for a while. But eventually we'll get over it and let bygones be bygones."

The twins were born June 6, 1981, the summer after Malone graduated from Summerfield High School and before he entered Louisiana Tech.

The twins said Malone discussed why he had never contacted them and apologized.

"He said he wanted to spend some time with us and be a daddy," Daryl said.

Cheryl said, "It went well. But I'm keeping it between me and

Malone and his wife Kay have four children, Kadee, 6; Kylee, 5; Karl Jr., 3; and Karlee, who was born in May. Bonita Ford, Cheryl's and Daryl's mother, told the newspaper she had mixed feelings about Malone's appearance.

"I just hope he's for real," she said. "I hope he's ready to be this daddy."

Cheryl Ford, who will be a senior at Summerfield next school year is a 6-3 center for the Amateur Athletic Union's Monroe Magic. The team left Monroe Wednesday for a tournament in Indianapolis on a bus chartered by Malone.

The twins and their mother were in an Indianapolis and could not be reached for further comment. Attempts to reach Malone through his attorney were unsuccessful Thursday. Cheryl Ford was recently selected to play for the Junior Olympic Team. She is being recruited by Louisiana Tech, Tennessee and Arkansas, among others.

Daryl Ford, a 6-3, 198-pound forward, helped lead Class C Summerfield to the Top 28 basketball tournament last season. Cheryl's brother, Tim Malone, knew about their basketball accomplishments.

"He's been paying a lot of attention," Daryl said.

IOC commission begins examination of 2002 games

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—An international commission of 10 members from 10 countries will examine the site of the opening and closing ceremonies for the 2002 Winter Games on Thursday as part of a three-day inspection of Olympic preparations.

Followed by an entourage of reporters and staff from the Salt Lake Organizing Committee, the IOC Coordination Commission members stepped over boards and around piles of dirt, wire conduit and stacks of stone at Rice Stadium.

"We will have this finished by Aug. 20, and the first football game is Sept. 12," said Randy Turpin, vice president of facilities management at the university. Under the plan, Rice Stadium is in the final stages of a $43.5 million expansion.

The renovation will increase seating capacity from 32,500 to 46,500, with room for 5,000 additional temporary seats for the Olympic ceremonies.

A new three-tiered press box houses luxury spectator suites and is intended to accommodate the horde of media expected to cover the opening and closing ceremonies.

"It looks like a very cozy stadium," commission member Anny DeFrantz, a United States representative and vice president of the IOC, told Turpin as they looked over the stadium from a cluttered platform.

DeFrantz and about two dozen other commission members are here for a progress report on preparations for the 2002 Winter Games. But unlike past visits, the commission will be pressing for details on how organizers plan to pull off the Olympics.

In addition to touring venues, commission members are also meeting with organizers over telecommunications, environmental concerns, marketing, finances, security, accommodations and other aspects of the games.

Commission chairman Marc Hodler, an IOC member from Switzerland, said the commission wants to help SLOC improve on past Olympics, and he was encouraged by how preparations are being handled.

"There are not many challenges here," Hodler said, referring to the skiing, sledding and skating sites developed before Salt Lake City was selected and the current expansion of roads, highways and light rail.

He said one of the biggest challenges facing organizers is handling the media. The games will cover the increasing costs of information and telecommunications services.

"It becomes more and more expensive every year," Hodler said.

Organizers will not disclose what they plan to spend on telecommunications until they have completed their budget due in October.

While commission members want answers, they also have realistic goals four years before the event and want to give advice as well.

"We want them to understand the scope of their responsibility," DeFrantz said, noting commission members don't expect to get an answer for every question. "Sometimes the best answer they can give us is 'I don't know.'"

The meeting continues today with final site inspections. The opening in Kearns. On Saturday, the IOC will inspect either Snowbasin Ski Area near Ogden site of the downhill and super-G skiing events, or Park City area venue for giant slalom and slalom ski races as scheduled.

Stewart got off on the better start with birdie on the first two holes. He ran into some problems midway through the round, then birdied the 18th hole to finish at even-par 72.

Janzen was one stroke over par after the last five holes and tied for second at 68, one stroke behind Greg Kraft.

"We had a good time," Janzen said. "We didn't talk about golf."

Williams sisters flex their muscles at Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP)—Centre Court at Wimbledon was introduced Thursday to the astonishing physique of Serena Williams, who wore a sleeveless dress that revealed rippling shoulder muscles visible from the top row.

On Court 1, Venus Williams also flexed her muscles, slamming a serve at 125 mph—the fastest ever recorded in women's tennis.

Even Serena was impressed when informed of her older sister's achievement.

"Jeepers. Wow. No," Serena said. "I'm behind. I don't know if I can catch up with that. She's much bigger than I am. She's taller and she might have more power."

She might. The issue could be settled soon, because the sisters are now a battle of 16-year-olds, sweeping the final nine games to eliminate Mirjana Lucic 6-3, 6-0. Venus beat Barbara Schett 6-1, 6-2.

Serena's next plays Virginia Ruano-Pascual, while Venus faces Chanda Rubin or Tara Snyder.

Venus has won the two previous showdowns between the sisters, but she's won about a rematch.

"Serena is definitely a juggernaut," Venus said. And how do you stop a juggernaut? "Just become a bigger one yourself," Venus said. "I guess you have to become a nemesis for anyone in her path if she keeps smashing 125 mph serves. She learned of the achievement after her brush from Serena, who was told about it by the media."

"I wasn't going for any big ones today," Venus said, "so that was a surprise."

The serve, an ace in the third game of the second set, broke the previous record of 123 mph by Brenda Schultz-McCarthy at Wimbledon last year. Williams' previous best was 122 mph at the Lipson Championships this year.

Serena's best is 112 mph. The fastest serve in men's history was 143 mph by Greg Rusedzki at last year's U.S. Open.

Venus anticipates that her speed will continue to improve.

"I've just turned 18, so I'm just going to get stronger," the 6-foot-1 1/2 Williams said. "I would imagine that my peak would be at 22 or 23. In the last year, I gained 9 mph on my serve."

Against Schett, Venus also showed foot speed and finesse. She won one point with a deft forehand drop shot, then won the next with an ace. On match point, Williams hit a lunging backhand, then raced to the other sideline and ripped a running forehand winner down the line.

Billie Jean King says Rios' comments were 'diabolical'

WIMBLEDON, England (AP)—Margaret Court's final appearance at Wimbledon didn't sit well with six-time women's champion Billie Jean King.

The sullen Rios, the Australian Olympic runner-up and No. 2 seed at Wimbledon with a professed aversion to grass, was eliminated Wednesday by Francisco Clavet, then ripped Wimbledon as "just another tournament."

"It's horrible when you see Rios in the last couple of games in his match and he doesn't care," said King, a Hall of Famer and commentator for HBO.

"He was diabolical in his criticism of the tournament. He has no appreciation of history or his heritage or the people who came before him."

Steffi Stalker: Police at Wimbledon reportedly are keeping a close watch on a 35-year-old Egyptian who tossed candy at Steffi Graf on Monday after her first-round win.

Graf denied she knew the man, although the British tabloids claimed she was a stalker. Asked about it, Graf said, "I am not aware of that. There was somebody who threw sweets yesterday."

Next Becker: Alan Jones, one of Britain's four national team coaches, predicts teenage Russian Marat Safin will be the next Boris Becker. This despite his first-round, four-set loss to Andre Medvedev at Wimbledon.

"The boy has everything," Jones said. "He's 6-foot-4 with great power, he's technically sound, he has a big serve, he moves well and he's mentally tough. He's good enough to become No. 1 in the world and if he can just get a little more grass-court practice he could win Wimbledon next year."

On Here: You only have to look at the surnames ending with the suffix "ov" to see the influence of eastern Europeans on women's tennis. In the 128-women's draw at Wimbledon, 16 players had last names that ended that way. They represented countries such as the Czech Republic, Slovakia, Russia, Bulgaria and Ukraine.

England vs. Croatia: Goran Ivanisevic predicts Croatia will beat England if they meet in the second round of the World Cup. "At least, England—I mean, the defense—is not tough to attack," he said. "It's a lot of holes, so we can speak with our attackers."

Janzen, Stewart are together again

LEMONT, Ill. (AP)—With 18 holes to kill on a hot, steamy afternoon, Lee Janzen and Paul Stewart were together again for the first time since their kids, the jinxes in Florida, even what it's like to ride a motorcycle.

Anything but the U.S. Open. "I didn't see we were supposed to talk about it? He won and I finished second," Stewart said Thursday after the first round of the Western Open.

Stewart led the first three rounds of the U.S. Open last week only to have Janzen overtake him on the final day and win by one stroke. When Janzen won his first U.S. Open in 1993, he did it by beating Stewart.

And in a strange — some might say cruel — twist, Stewart and Janzen were grouped together for the first and second rounds of the Western Open at Cog Hill's Dubsred course.

"I didn't faze us at all," Stewart said.

"I would say it was somewhat awkward," Janzen said. "What are the chances of us being drawn on together?" Friends for a long time, the

Knicks swap Oakley for Camby

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Knicks weren't shopping Charles Oakley around the NBA. But when the Toronto Raptors mentioned Marcus Camby, the Knicks decided they had to make a trade.

"So Camby moved to New York Thursday in exchange for Oakley, second-round draft-choice Sean Marks from California and cash considerations."

It was a swap of age and experience for youth and potential and the Knicks felt compelled to make it.

"Marcus fits a need for us to become younger and more athletic in the front court," general manager Eric Grunfeld said. "He is the league in blocked shots and gives us versatility and youth. He has a tremendous up side."

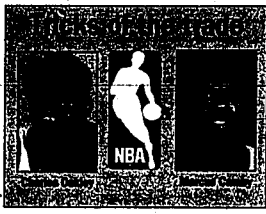

Age was becoming a factor for New York. After trading all four of their picks from the past two drafts, the Knicks' youngest player was 27-year-old Allan Houston. Camby is 24.

"This gives us more flexibility, makes us more intimidating in the defensive end and more athletic than we've been in the past," Grunfeld said.

"The price for Camby, who was the second choice in the 1996 draft, came cheap. Oakley, 34, has been one of the anchors of the Knicks' frontcourt for the past decade, after being acquired from the Chicago Bulls in 1988, when Camby was 14 years old.

It was the second major off-season move for Toronto GM Glen Grunwald, who earlier acquired 35-year-old Kevin Willis from Houston.

"As one of the NBA's best defenders and rebounders, Charles Oakley gives us a phys-cal presence and mental toughness that is unsurpassed in our league," Grunwald said. "Charles Oakley has never missed the playoffs." Raptors coach Butch Carter said, "He brings an expectation level we hope to match."

Grunfeld said parting with Oakley was difficult. "We have tremendous respect for Charles and what he has meant to the franchise," Grunfeld said. "It was a difficult thing to do because of what he has meant to the franchise. We have very strong feelings. We grew up together and we've been through a lot of battles together. It's never easy to part with someone of his character."

Still, Grunfeld said Camby's potential made it impossible to ignore the deal. "This was an opportunity to get youth and get more athletic," he said. "You always make changes. You always explore opportunities and options to improve for the short term and the long term. This came about fairly quickly and a player of his potential doesn't come along that often."

Camby led the league with 3.65 blocks per game last season and averaged 12.1 pts and 7.4 rebounds. But injuries limited him to 63 games in each of his first two NBA seasons.

Oakley averaged 9.0 points and 9.2 rebounds per game for the Knicks last season. Knicks coach Jeff Van Gundy called Oakley "a huge factor" in the Knicks success over his 10 seasons in New York.

"I think he'll go down as one of the great Knicks," he said. "That tells you how highly we feel about Marcus Camby, as well."

"When guys put it on the line for you and play as hard as Charles did for our team, you feel great sentimental thoughts about the guy. I love Charles Oakley a whole lot."

Van Gundy said he hadn't thought about the loss of Oakley, a 6-foot-9 power forward and the addition of the 6-11 Camby would affect his lineup. "I think Camby's a power forward in a different body," he said. "We have to see how to best take advantage of his talent."

As part of the deal, the Knicks agreed to pick up part of the $10 million balloon payment Oakley is due to receive next season. Grunfeld refused to disclose the financial details.

Oakley's gritty play often has led to hard fouls and disciplinary by the NBA. With him headed to another team, Van Gundy noted that reputation.

"I want to make it clear," he said, "Charles Oakley does flagrantly foul now."

NBA star pleads guilty to child endangerment

NEW YORK—Basketball star Anthony Mason pleaded guilty Thursday to two counts of misdemeanor child endangerment as prosecutors dropped more serious statutory rape and sex abuse charges against him.

Mason, 31, and a friend, Will Duggins, 24, were accused in February of having consensual sex with two young girls, 14 and 15, at a house in the Laurelton section of Queens. Duggins pleaded guilty to one count of statutory rape and one count of child endangerment and was sentenced to five years' probation and 800 hours of community service.

Mason, a Charlotte Hornets forward, was ordered to serve 200 hours of community service with the homeless at the Progressive Baptist Church in Charlotte, N.C.

He could have received two 4-year prison terms if convicted of both counts of statutory rape, a felony, and a concurrent 90-day term if convicted of sex abuse, a misdemeanor.

Eric Lindros signs one-year deal with Flyers

PHILADELPHIA—The Philadelphia Flyers signed Eric Lindros to an $8.5 million, one-year contract extension, avoiding the embarrassment of having their marquee player on the restricted free agent list as the signing period begins.

Lindros, whose original signing with the Flyers in 1992 provided a study in contract disputes and arbitration, faced a signed copy of the deal for 1998-99 on the team Wednesday night. The team expected to receive the originals Thursday.

Hawks center indicted on federal drug charges

JACKSON, Miss.—Center Greg Anderson, who played for the NBA Atlanta Hawks last season, was indicted by a federal grand jury on four drug and money laundering charges, federal prosecutors confirmed Thursday.

U.S. Attorney Brad Pigott said in a statement that Anderson, 34, a 10-year NBA veteran, was accused of possessing, distributing, and conspiring to possess and distribute cocaine with intent to distribute, one count of money laundering and one criminal forfeiture count.

Authorities refused to say whether Anderson was in custody or being sought by FBI agents. He lives in Pearlant, Texas.

Hasek wins NHL players' vote as best player

TORONTO—Buffalo Sabres goalie Dominik Hasek held his distinction as the NHL's best player, in the view of his fellow players. Hasek won Thursday's second consecutive Lester Pearson Award, given by the NHL Players' Association and decided by a vote of union members.

Hasek was expected to win his second straight Hart Trophy as the NHL's Most Valuable Player at an NHL awards gala Thursday night. He also won the Hart last season.

The Sabres had a 33-23 record with Hasek in goal, and he had a 2.09 goals-against average and a .932 save percentage. He led Buffalo into the Eastern Conference finals where it lost to the Washington Capitals.

Balcony collapses at wrestling meet, killing 22

MOSCOW—Wrestlers and spectators frantically lifted huge chunks of concrete to try to save people crushed beneath a balcony that collapsed at a meet Thursday in southern Russia, killing 22 people.

Thirty-nine others were injured as the 160-foot-long balcony packed with more than 100 people—mostly children—fell with a roar 16 feet onto the crowded floor at the Russian National Freestyle Wrestling Competition in the city of Nalchik.

The two wrestlers on the mat at the time stood up and stared in disbelief at the collapsed balcony, which had been festooned with a red banner saying, "Welcome participants of the competition!"

Bell of the bowl: AT&T to sponsor Rose Bowl

LOS ANGELES—The Rose Bowl, the last holdout in college football's sponsorship game, changed its name on Thursday to the "Rose Bowl presented by AT&T."

The four-year deal was arranged by ABC-TV, which is paying $19 million for the rights to televise the Jan. 1, 1999 game. Financial terms of the AT&T package were not immediately available.

Jazz acquire, then trade Mohammed

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—The Utah Jazz got their hands on Kentucky center in Narr Mohammed—for a few minutes.

After taking Mohammed at No. 29 in Wednesday's NBA draft, the Jazz shipped him to the Philadelphia 76ers for a future first-round pick, which may be used sometime between next year and 2002, depending on how high the pick is in the draft.

"It was the headliner of fans gathered at the Delta Center to watch the proceedings and saw 6-foot-10, 240-pound Mohammed, who scored eight points as Kentucky's starter in last spring's NCAA championship game, slip to 29. He had been projected to go in the top 10 or 15 of the draft."

"I was a little surprised Mohammed was still on the board," said Jazz vice president of basketball operations Scott Layden. "But it created a lot of buzz because of interest in the pick. That's for sure."

Going into the draft, Layden suggested the Jazz would be happy to trade the pick and avoid picking the mandatory three-year contract worth about $1.5 million to an untested rookie taken with the final pick in the first round.

Though five other teams made late moves in the draft, the Jazz about acquiring Mohammed, Utah decided to deal with the 76ers.

By doing so, the Jazz saved money for possible use in the free agent market or on future first-round picks, which they continue to stockpile.

Utah could have as many as four next year—its own, the one acquired from Philadelphia and one each from earlier deals with Orlando and Miami. According to Layden, the trade was not a reflection on Mohammed's ability or potential. Rather, it was what the Jazz wanted to do in order to "keep all our options open and give us more flexibility" in their effort "to win immediately—right now.... That's our focus."

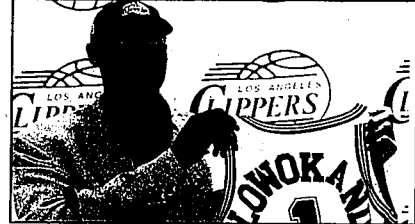

Mohammed had one year of college eligibility remaining. But he decided to make himself available for the draft after averaging 12 points and 7.3 rebounds during his junior season.

"I was a school record 75 shots, and finished fifth on Kentucky's all-time list. Despite the trade the 76ers, however, the Jazz did not one player from the draft."

"With the 57th pick—next to last in the second round—Utah took Xavier power forward Torrance Braggs."

Braggs averaged 20 points and 10 rebounds in two seasons at San Jose City College. Braggs was a two-year starter after transferring to Xavier.

"He is a physical, powerful guy who gives you a full day's work," Braggs was the MVP of the Portsmouth Invitational Tournament, where he averaged 23.3 points and 11.3 rebounds. He averaged 13.3 points and 8.3 rebounds in the Nike Desert Classic.

Michael Olowokandi, the first overall pick in Wednesday's NBA draft, holds a Los Angeles Clippers jersey during a news conference in Los Angeles, Thursday.

Size does matter in the NBA

Knight Rider News Service

VANCOUVER—The most underdog folks in General Motors Place Wednesday night might have been Michael Olowokandi's parents. It's one thing for your son to go from playing recreation basketball in London to Pacific University, where he went from project to curiosity to NBA prospect in all three seasons. But all the way to the No. 1 pick in the draft? That's a made-for-TV movie.

"I don't think that they can fully appreciate the significance of all this," said the 7-1, 265-pound Olowokandi, who like Hakeem Olajuwon, was born in Nigeria. "They're still struggling with the whole basketball idea."

Olowokandi, an OES matter, was the No. 2 behind Arizona lead guard Mike Bibby. Surprise. The bad news is, he's headed to the Los Angeles Clippers, who haven't managed a draft pick since right when they were the Buffalo Braves. Olowokandi doesn't even know the identity of his new coach. But he doesn't have a problem, which seemed to be a big deal for a guy who already has traveled farther than most.

"I'm still in disbelief," said Olowokandi, who averaged 22 points, 11 rebounds and nearly three blocks last season in the Big West. "I think it's going to take me a week or so, maybe even longer, to get over it."

"The last five minutes (before his name was announced) felt more like five hours. To look up and see my name in the No. 1 spot, I guess like (Clippers general manager) Elgin Baylor said, there is a lack of availability of centers in the league. I really didn't have a chance to get up to all this. My agent never lies to me. He kept telling me that it was a dome deal. But that was him talking. Here we are, and I still can't believe it. Anything can happen. Now, it's up to me."

He capped his round with an unlikely baird, diving to the mat then sending his ball onto a wooden bridge beside the 18th.

"The ball was half an inch down a crack," Torrance said. "I could have had a double-birdie. It could have gone anywhere."

Torrance hit it cleanly, and the ball cleared two mounds and ran to just over 13 feet from the pin. He drained it for a birdie four.

Montgomery was into trouble on the lightning-fast greens, taking 36 puts and making only one birdie. He pulled his second into a hazard at the 12th, too, penalty drop and double-bogged. He found water at the 17th to drop another shot.

"It's a really fun run to a day," Montgomery said. "I'm fine mentally, not suffering. I just had an unlucky day."

Larry Nelson quietly does his thing on Senior tour

CLEFTON, N.J. (AP)—Name the leading golfer on the Senior PGA Tour and there's a good chance Larry Nelson won't be on many lists.

It's something Nelson has come to expect. Despite winning 10 PGA Tour tournaments, including three majors—two PGA titles and a U.S. Open—Nelson has been overlooked throughout his career.

"Had I done in the '50s what I did in the '80s, it would be a different story," Nelson said Thursday after shooting a 5-under-par 67 on the Upper Montclair Country Club in his final practice for the $1.1 million Clefton Hills Golf Classic, which starts today.

With the popularity of golf now, Nelson would be more well known with average fans. That was a different time, though. "There is a difference between being enlightened and other people being put in front of you," Nelson said. "There have been more notable people with less credentials and that has nothing to do with me. It doesn't bother me coming in unheralded."

Nelson, 50, is now enjoying his first full year on the Senior Tour. The rail-thin Georgian has won four and finished in the Top 10 in each of the 25 events he has completed. His $843,528 is No. 3 on the tour's earnings list this year and his 70.15 scoring average is in third.

Besides Hale Irwin and Gil

Morgan, Nelson is the only other multiple winner on the tour.

Besides Nelson, only three other members of the Senior Tour's Top 10 money leaders are playing in this 54-hole event, which is being held in conjunction with a tournament for NFL players. Jay Sigel, Dave Stockton and Dana Quigley, who tied for second in a playoff's AT&T Canada Senior Open, are the other Top 10 players competing.

Torrance takes 2-shot lead in French Open

LEVYANCOURT, France—Scottie Scheffner fired an under-par 64 Thursday and took a 2-shot lead after the first-round of the $900,000 French Open.

Tied for second at 66 were Eduardo Ramirez of Argentina and Spain's Pedro Linhart. France's Jean Van de Velde and England's John Bickerton tied 67 to share fourth.

Colin Montgomerie of Scotland, one of the tournament favorites, was 10 strokes back after an opening 74 over the 71-hole Alibon course at the National Golf Center.

The 44-year-old Torrance, berling for an exemption into his 27th straight British Open, began with three consecutive birdies. He had six birdies overall, including a 106-yard drive to eagle the par-five 14th for his best round of 64. "I played lovely golf," Torrance said. "I need at least a top three finish to get an Open exemption."

Torrance is playing his 589th European Tour event, in his 28th season, a record.

Wood River driver shines at speedway

By LYNN BAIRD
Times-News correspondent

WOOD RIVER — Dan Hammerbeck and his wife, Alison, make the long drive from the Wood River Valley every Saturday night that the Budweiser Street Stocks run and they have been doing it for several years. Hammerbeck won Rookie of the Year in his first season of racing a Chevrolet Nova, the car he still drives. Last year, he won the season championship with a win in the main event the last night. This season has started out slow by the Hammerbecks' standards and they find themselves in fifth place in the point standings with no wins.

"I think everything that can go wrong has," said Hammerbeck. "At least, I hope so. Our poor performance is not from lack of trying."

Race fans look for them to get the car back in the winners circle soon.

When they are not racing, the Hammerbecks enjoy water skiing in the summer and snow skiing in the winter.

However, the enjoyment of the NASCAR racing keeps competitors coming back even when they are not winning. They keep their race car and equipment in show condition and will make the effort to get the car finished back on top.

Hammerbeck's business, Hammerbeck Electric, takes a lot of his regular working hours but many other hours are dedicated to the racing effort.

The No. 99 Chevrolet and all the other Budweiser Street Stocks will chase the checkered flag this Saturday evening. They will be joined by the Mountain Dew Modifieds, NAPA Auto Parts Pony Stocks, and Dairy Queen Thunder stocks.

Racing begins at 7 p.m. with McDonald's time trials at 6 p.m. Reserved seat tickets are available by calling 734-3700 weekdays or at the Speedway Saturday night for the NAPA 150 NASCAR Northwest Tour Race September 19.

Sooner this year, shortly after his 41st birthday, Mast decided it was time to acquire it. Mast caught a plane for Phoenix and reported for Road Racing 101.

"It always seems that I have struggled in qualifying on road courses," said Mast, who last year failed to make the field at Sears Point in Sonoma, Calif., the site of Sunday's Save Mart/Kragen 350. "Come to find out once I got there, it seems like I was ahead, the only guy out here who had never been to one of those schools. I just got showed."

Sears Point and Watkins Glen in New York, which will host its Winston Cup race on Aug. 9, are the only two road courses on the schedule — and the only times all NASCAR drivers make right turns. Both tracks also lack the high-banked turns found in oval tracks.

Now that he has been through the road-course school, Mast — in his second season with owner Butch Mack after six seasons with Richard Jackson — regrets not doing it earlier.

"Everything I have been doing wrong, I have been doing wrong for seven years," he said. "And after going to the school, I realized there were a lot of things I have been doing wrong. Road racing is 180 degrees different from oval track racing in the way you do things, or at least the way I was doing things."

"On a road course, you use your brakes to do the same thing the banking does on an oval course," he said. "On the higher banked tracks, you just hold it wide open, turn the steering wheel and slam the car into the banking. If you come out on the other side, you didn't wreck."

"Road racing is more hitting the marks just right and not overturning the turns. You have to be disciplined enough to make sure you hit everything just right."

After spending time in the classroom in Phoenix, Mast went out in a car driven by his instructor, Bill Cooper.

"To ride around the course semi-fast for a few laps and he showed me the braking points and the shifting points," Mast said. "Then, he took off and went really fast. After a couple of laps to get over being scared to death, you can start paying attention to what he's telling you."

Next, Mast took the wheel and tried to apply what he had learned, with Cooper beside him offering advice. Eventually,

Rick Mast takes a right turn in Phoenix

In a road race, drivers must learn new ways to handle the lower banks and right turns on faster courses like Sears Point Raceway in Sonoma, Calif., site of this Sunday's Save Mart/Kragen 350.

Cooper got into another car and followed Mast around for several laps.

"Toward the end of the first day, I thought I was doing pretty good," Mast said. "Then he would get in behind me and just start beating on my bumper. I could not shake this guy. By the second day, he could still hang with me but he wasn't bumping on my bumper. I still wasn't as good as him, but I was a lot better."

Improving on a school's course in Phoenix is fine, but Mast needed to apply what he'd learned where it would do him more good. So after the California 500 in early May, Mast stayed in California and went to Sears Point for a test.

"He couldn't come on the first day of the test," Mast said. "His day's went me to go out there and run fast that day because he didn't want me doing the same old things. I told him I had to shake the car down, because it was a new car. He told me that if I was going to run fast, he was going to tell my crew chief not to let me go out."

Mast waited for Cooper to arrive, and they went onto the newly configured course in a rental car to get a feel for the right lines, the right places to brake and shift and the areas where Mast might change how he had been running. When Mast took his race car on the track, Cooper watched from various spots, then offered suggestions.

"One thing that helped was just getting out there running lap after lap," Mast said.

"During practice before a race, you're out there turning a few laps and you don't have time to work on getting better in this turn or on this part of the race track.

"The school and the testing gave me confidence. I know there are things I learned that I will be thinking about when I am out there practicing, different things from what I used to think about."

"If I do them well, the car will go faster."

Telecommunication merger seen as boon to consumers

Los Angeles Times

The $46.5 billion megamerger announced Wednesday by long-distance powerhouse AT&T and cable giant Tele-Communications Inc. is expected to bring to the telecommunications industry the intensified competition and consumer choices that Congress promised two years ago when it deregulated the phone and cable industries.

Announcing the deal in New York, TCI chairman John Malone declared that the union would eventually have an impact on "every consumer in the U.S. and the world."

While Malone's statement might be an overstatement, the deal will have far-reaching consequences and sent shock waves Wednesday through the communications and cable industries.

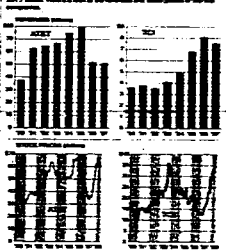

The all-stock transaction, which was announced by the two companies after only 12 days of concentrated negotiations, would transform the architecture of AT&T. The world's largest long-distance company, AT&T was forced out of the local telephone business by court-ordered break-up 14 years ago; this deal promises to bring the company back into the local residential business.

"This is the first telecommunication megamerger that has very clear pro-consumer attributes," said Brian Adamiak of the research group, a Boston-based research firm.

The deal, which must be approved by

A look at AT&T and TCI

AT&T and TCI are expected to be the largest telecommunications merger in U.S. history.

Washington regulators and shareholders of both companies before it can be consummated in 1999, would create a giant with $56 billion in revenues and the most extensive package of communications services at a time when telephone, cable and computer industries are converging. The potential is huge for companies that can offer such services as new technologies allow more data to be sent ever faster through cable, satellite and telephone systems.

Analysts said the deal, if approved, eventually could push Washington to relax rules banning local phone companies into the long-distance business, and could encourage the Bell regional operators to speed their investments in new technologies to use their copper wires to deliver high-speed access to the Internet.

Despite two-year old deregulation of the telecommunications industry, competition has yet to lower cable and local phone rates. Most local phone companies retreated from forays into the cable television business because of the unexpectedly high costs of entry. Cable companies confronted technical difficulties in equipping their systems for delivering phone service.

The purchase is part of an intensive effort by new AT&T chief executive C. Michael Armstrong to use the cache of AT&T's name to enter the lucrative local phone market as a hedge against the cut-throat price-cutting and customer-hopping of the long distance market.

"We are merging with TCI not just for what it has but what we can be together," said Armstrong.

Both companies expect that bundling services will increase their popularity with consumers, expanding their customer base while reducing the customer churn that is a growing problem for communications companies. One analyst estimated that AT&T spent nearly $2 billion last year in marketing and promotion to find new customers and keep old ones.

Dow post small gain, but most stocks slip on profit-taking

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Dow industrials clung to a slim gain, but most stocks fell Thursday as investors locked in some profits from the record-setting rebound of recent days.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose just 11.71 to 9,935.58. The blue-chip barometer, which rallied a combined 212 points on Tuesday and Wednesday, peaked near midday with a 101-point gain, pulling back almost as soon as it bobbed above 9,000. Without a big gain from Union Carbide, up 4 1/4 to 52 1/4, the Dow would have finished the day with a small loss.

Broadier stock indicators suffered modest losses as the technology group stumbled after a three-day rally that helped push the Standard & Poor's 500 to a record high for the first time in two months.

With no major developments to steer the market in either direction, Thursday's downturn was described as a normal spurt of profit-taking after such a sharp advance.

"The market, as of last Tuesday, has reversed course and is in a recovery trend — and maybe a new up-phase — after the gradual correction phase from April to June," said Richard McCabe, chief market analyst at Merrill Lynch & Co.

The market's sudden rebound, most pronounced in the technology-heavy Nasdaq composite index, took hold last week as the United States intervened in the currency market to bolster the sagging Japanese yen.

The buying picked up steam this week as money managers, looking to spruce up their portfolios before the impending close of the second quarter, scurried to add popular, beaten-down names to their holdings.

Koret closure will eliminate 104 jobs

The Associated Press

PRICE, Utah — Koret of California Inc. is closing its plant here on Sept. 1, eliminating 104 jobs.

The company has been the city's sixth-largest employer. Gerald Mills, plant manager for the San Francisco-based woman's apparel company, said the loss of the $2.5 million payroll will have far-reaching effects for the Castle Valley area.

H. Richard Purdum, a vice president of the 1,500-employee company, blamed the closing on increased global competition and the high costs of domestic production.

Koret remains profitable but was making necessary cuts to stay competitive, he told The Salt Lake Tribune.

The Price plant, which opened in 1968, makes women's polyester blend pants and shirts for department stores.

Koret clothes are designed in California, but now will be made almost entirely under contract at plants in Mexico, Korea, Indonesia, Hong Kong, the Dominican Republic and Canada, Purdum said.

Many plant workers — many of them single mothers with no other sources of income — blamed the closure on trade

Merger

into the $110 billion local phone market. Without its own lines, AT&T and other rivals at first leased neighborhood wires and other equipment from Baby Bell companies. AT&T's Armstrong was particularly frustrated by the state-mandated, but he talked out of another way to connect directly to residential customers.

Using TCI's cable lines, AT&T plans to bypass the Baby Bells and provide customers packages of long distance, local and wireless phone service, as well as cable and high-speed Internet access.
"This is what the doctor ordered," said Anthony Ferrugia, an analyst at A.G. Edwards in St. Louis.
But there is room for doubt.
Before AT&T can make good on its plan to use its own fiber, it has to solve technology problems as well as finance the upgrading of TCI's far-flung cable network, most of which cannot yet handle two-way signals.

"Despite all of TCI's chest-pounding about advanced technology, they are the laggard in the cable industry," says a senior analyst at Forrester Research in Cambridge, Mass. "AT&T will have to upgrade the network, and that means billions of bucks and several years of maintenance."
TCI planned to spend $1.8 billion over the next three years to prepare its facilities for telephone and high-speed Internet delivery. AT&T plans to accelerate those plans by 20 percent to 30 percent.

WordPerfect moves from Utah to Canada

OREM, Utah (AP) — WordPerfect, founded in Utah 19 years ago and once the maker of the best-selling word processing program in the world, is being moved to Canada by parent Corel Corp.
Corel announced Wednesday that it will transfer its software division here, eliminating most of 530 jobs and bringing an end to the operation that was once WordPerfect Corp.
The move, which is expected to save the struggling software company about $33 million annually and cut its workforce by 20 percent, was announced after Corel said it had endured another money-losing quarter.
The Ottawa-based company reported a net loss of $9.3 million in the quarter ending May 31.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff
NORTH: 8 6 5 3, A K 7 5 2, A K 8. SOUTH: K Q 7 4, 9 6 4, A Q 6 3, 8 4.

What should South do when a foul trump break reveals one more loser than he can afford? The last thing he should do is surrender. He might as well play on. His luck cannot get worse, and perhaps a miracle might save his aces.

South takes dummy's club ace and leads a trump, covering East's 10 with his queen and losing to West's ace. Another club goes to dummy's king, and South leads another trump, gasping for air when East discards. With three obvious trump losers and no place to put his losing heart, how can he possibly make his game?

It doesn't look good, but it's no time to concede. South should win his trump king, leaving West's high trumps at large. With nothing to lose, South cashes dummy's diamond king, and ruffs dummy's two top hearts. Next, he ruffs dummy's last club and cashes his ace-queen of diamonds.

When West follows suit, South has won his ninth trick, and dummy still has two trumps. Now, when South leads his last diamond, success is ensured. If West ruffs, one of dummy's trumps will score the game-winning trick. And if West discards, dummy's ruff does the same thing.

How did the "miracle" take place? Declarer refused to surrender, eventually finding a little luck to offset the uncertainty of a break. After South's diamond queen cashes, the defenders must score two of their obvious winners on the same trick.

ANSWER: Three no-trump an easy raise. Opener promises 18-19 HCF, more than enough to produce a game.

South holds: A J 9 2, 10 3, 10 8 2, Q J 10 7. North holds: K Q 7 4, 9 6 4, A Q 6 3, 8 4.

BID WITH THE ACES
South holds: A J 9 2, 10 3, 10 8 2, Q J 10 7. North holds: K Q 7 4, 9 6 4, A Q 6 3, 8 4.

SALES
If you are reading this ad, if you are unhappy, you are either out of work, or you just have a 1997. Do you want a career? Do you want to earn $30,000-per year? Do you want a benefit package second to none? I am going to hire 4 people this week to sell 4 people this week in the Twin Falls area with funeral arrangements. The people I am looking for must be honest, sincere, self-motivated, and be willing to visit every person you talk to the same way that they would want to be treated. I work strictly above the board, and I expect the same from the people that work with me. If you have these qualifications, I would very much enjoy talking to you, and explain the benefits our company has to offer you. Call Andrew at 733-3145 on Monday June 29, 1998 between 10:00 a.m. & 5:00 p.m. to schedule your interview on Tuesday 6-30 or Wednesday 7-1. No resumes please.
