Schools proceed with caution

Shoshone School Superintendent Max Excell tours the new Shoshone High School with Virginia Churchman and Stacie Briggs. Excell endured a hostage situation at his previous school in Wyoming.

M-C schools take on security issues

By David Lee
Times-News writer

RUPERT—School districts ask their colleague Max Excell, Shoshone School District superintendent, for advice about school safety.

He knows from experience what can happen. In 1986, Excell survived a hostage situation as an elementary principal in Cokeville, Wyo.

He ended an address to Minidoka County School District teachers last week with the comment: "We got through it. Correct preparation will help you get through it, too. You noticed I didn't say 'if.' It will happen, in some form here."

M-C area public schools have been preparing for the possibility.

With the new school year beginning this week, Cassia and

- Emergency response plan for the school
- Crisis to avert
- Little or no supervision and support from parents or a caring adult
- Wandering or being a victim of abuse or neglect in the community
- Bullying or being a victim of abuse or neglect in the school
- A history of mental health problems and problems
- Playing IV drugs, intranasal or intramuscular injection, needles and drugs
- Preferring reading materials dealing with violent themes, music and history
- School studies in writing, projecting anger, frustration and the dark side of life
- Involvement with a gang or an extended group on the fringe of peer acceptance
- Frequent depression, or significant mood swings
- A threatened or attempted suicide

Minidoka school districts want to take actions to prevent crises like the ones that took place around the county that school year, when students brought guns to school and opened fire.

"What we want to do is not so much react for that kind of event but raise the awareness level and look for signs," said Lew Roberts, operations director for Minidoka schools.

Security cameras adorn Minico High School, and every district building has an alarm system, Roberts said. Police check schools

Shootings raise concern, but schools should still be considered safe

By Jennifer Sandmann
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Some Magic Valley school districts are dusting off crisis manuals in preparation for the school year.

School safety is on par about everybody's mind since a wave of students opened fire at schools across the country in the past year.

The National School Safety Center in Fairfax, Va., reported 19 deaths nationwide in multiple killings, the deadliest at Peppertime University, tracked deaths through newspaper clipping services.

Rational precaution

The challenge facing local schools is to be cautious, but not to let the fear of making mistakes, teachers and parents stand to be on campus.

While school security is of importance, Twin Falls High School Principal Ben Allen said he doesn't want to worry the staff so much that it dampens learning.

"I'm not downplaying, because I think we've all learned it can happen anywhere, anytime," Allen said. "But then again, where's the line?"

Numbers of weapons found on campus have not increased at the high school, Allen said. But he finds himself considering more dangers than he did 10 years ago.

By the numbers

A study by the Justice Policy Institute, the research arm of a private, nonprofit agency that promotes prevention over detention, suggests schools remain the safest place for youth.

The institute characterizes school shootings as arduous but highly publicized. The study downplays the manner to simple odds: the chances of getting killed at school are slightly less than one in a million.

But multiple killings at schools have increased since 1992, the National School Safety Center reports. A couple of deaths were reported in each of 1992 and 1993. In 1994-95, 10 multiple slayings were recorded. Ten deaths occurred in 1995-96.

U.S. locks up assets of Islamic extremist bin Laden

The Washington Post

EDGARTOWN, Mass.—The Clinton administration is escalating the fight against international terrorism by moving to shut down the financial pipeline feeding Osama bin Laden's Afghanistan-based network.

"It's high time that those who traffic in terror learn they, too, are vulnerable," President Clinton declared Saturday.

In his weekly radio address, Clinton revealed he has signed an executive order giving bin Laden's Islamic Army and other of his main lieutenants on a list of terrorist groups: The move allows the Treasury Department to block all financial transactions between U.S. companies or individuals and the Saudi-born millionaire sworn to bin American targets everywhere.

In Nairobi, Kenya, a newspaper reported that three suspects being held in the truck-bomb attacks on two U.S. embassies in East Africa told police they ran, with bin Laden's backing, a fake fishmonger business as a cover for the plot. The Aug. 7 attacks in Nairobi and Dar es Salaam, Tanzania, killed 245 Africans and 12 Americans.

The three men confessed to recommitting the embassy in Nairobi for the bombers, the Daily Nation said. The newspaper said they told police they blended into the bustle around the embassy.

Administration officials met in Washington to prepare for a public campaign aimed at girding the public for what they expect will be a long and bloody war on terror following Thursday's missile strikes at targets in Afghanistan and Sudan allegedly connected with bin Laden.

HMO horror stories propel debate over patient rights bills

The Associated Press

Stephanie Ulrich has a horror story to tell about how two insurers wouldn't pay for the rehabilitation that helped her walk and speak again.

She has told the tale in thousands of newspapers. She has told it on Capitol Hill. She has told it on "Good Morning America." It has also been sent to 1,000 federal and state legislators and reporters, rolling off the fax machines of California senators last month as they pondered a bill giving patients the right to sue HMOs.

America's health care debate is being fought out via horror stories and personal anecdotes from both sides.

Consumer groups are marketing stories like Ms. Ulrich's in one-page inserts, complete with name and photo, in an effort to win support from legislators and the public for proposed ERISA reforms.

Managed care companies have long lamented "legislation by anecdote." But apparently compelling their personal stories hold the power to drive the health care debate, they are telling some tales of their own.

The patient advocacy group Consumers for Quality Care circulated Ms. Ulrich's tale as part of a daily ERISA "Casualty of the Day" campaign. The effort inspired an employee group, the Healthcare Leadership Council, to connect with its own daily fax to reporters and legislators, dubbed "Medical Miracles." And some U.S. Healthcare plans to weigh in with an advertising campaign this fall featuring member testimonials.

ACROSS THE NATION

Idaho: An area of weak high pressure produced sunny to mostly sunny skies across the state on Saturday. Some cloud cover was recorded over the north and extreme southeast. There were no rain or thunderstorms.

Elsewhere: Tropical Storm Erinette moved ashore in southern Texas during the night, hitting the town of Matagorda with 70 mph winds and a 70 mph gust. A tropical depression is expected to move ashore in the Gulf of Mexico on Sunday. It is likely to become a tropical storm.

Showers and thunderstorms developed across large areas of Florida. Rain was possible across parts of Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia.

Further north, a warm front moving across the northern Plains and northern Mississippi Valley produced showers and thunderstorms in eastern Minnesota, northern Wisconsin and Michigan's Upper Peninsula, with estimates of up to 2 inches of rain in some areas.

Air area of showers and thunderstorms also developed over North Dakota. Elsewhere, a few isolated thunderstorms and showers formed in the Ohio Valley.

Schools

During the 1996-97 school year, four deaths occurred. And the number rose to 19 in the past year.

The National School Safety Center sees common characteristics in juveniles charged with violence since July 1992. In most cases it found a troubled youth who had talked about problems with bullying and feelings of isolation, anger, depression and frustration.

The center cautions that no foolproof system exists to identify who might harm others or themselves.

Emergency plans

Schools across the state are working with police to enhance safety measures. Officers helped the district update its crisis manual over the summer.

When he was a principal in Coakville, Mo., in 1986, a couple carried a bomb into school and released a $208 million ransom. The bomb perpetrator was injured, the woman and 91 hostages. The woman's partner killed her and then himself.

Coeville, a town of about 300 people, didn't have a safety plan for its school but created one afterward.

Excell brought the Coakville plan to Sossboone. It includes a list of procedures such as a checklist for receptionists who take threatening phone calls. The list alerts them to details such as backpack access based on the phone. Other practices include keeping track of school visitors and limiting access to a main entrance.

Safety measures

Twin Falls School Superintendent Terrell Donich, president of the local chapter of the Idaho Association of School Administrators, said administrators might ask for such help.

They recently talked with Magistrate John F. Varin, a juvenile judge, and state Rep. Celia Gould-Riebel, across ways to provide safer campuses without violating students' rights, Donich said. But schools drafted a policy to handle threats made by students. Superintendent Richard Hill said. When one student threatened another this past school year, the district talked to both students, their parents and the school police officer, and documented it. Things cooled off.

In Twin Falls, the school district has equipped its schools with radios and has asked police to provide a safety review of its campuses.

"There may be some things we can do to lessen the accessibility without turning the place into a prison," Donich said.

But school district officials are not handling threats made by students. Superintendent Richard Hill said. When one student threatened another this past school year, the district talked to both students, their parents and the school police officer, and documented it. Things cooled off.

While schools have adequate recourse to handle disruptive youth, he said, follow-up appears to be lacking.

"When we do expel a student, there doesn't seem to be the resources to handle the problem," Donich said. "We expel 3 percent of students a year, and they are just out on the street."

A 1995 study by the private nonprofit National Crime Prevention Council found that 46 percent of students made at least one change in their daily routines as a result of personal safety, said a report by the National School Safety Center.

Eleven percent of those students said they moved home from school or cut class.

In an interesting twist about the nature of crime and a student's fear of it, the Justice Policy Institute noted that even though the FBI reported a 13 percent drop in homicides between 1990 and 1995, evening news programs increased coverage by 240 percent.

Reporter who visited Bin Laden's compound describes it rustic, basic U.S. military experts refer to the hilltop compound they thought in Afghanistan last week as Terrorism University, suggesting a Harvard-like elite for would-be bomb-throwers seeking to reach their skills.

Bin Laden's compound is described as a "MASH" site, said ABC correspondent John Miller, referring to the drab tents and muddy roads that formed the backdrop of the popular TV sitcom.

Miller, a former New York City Police Department spokesman, is thought to be the last journalist to possibly visit the last bin Laden camp.

at the camps that U.S. forces searched last week.

He and his crew spent four days traveling across mountains and rivers to meet bin Laden in May, providing a rare glimpse inside the network of camps that American intelligence officials say has housed as many as 600 terrorists at a time.

Miller saw two camps, both of which appeared to be active but extremely rustic training facilities. At first, he and his crew spent two days waiting for bin Laden inside a small house, a room lit by a single electric light bulb. They were guarded round-the-clock.

Finally, word came that bin Laden would see them. Troops loaded them into the back of a jeep and began what turned out to be a seven-hour journey up a thin, mountain road, ABC cameraman Kirk Bennett recalled.

It was 4 a.m. when they reached the second camp, which was little more than a clearing along a mountain ridge.

The crew was ushered into the larger building, where the only decor was a map of the world on one wall. Moments after they were in place, bin Laden pulled up in a jeep, his arrival signaled by a thunderous volley of gunfire.

"It was like World War III when he arrived and left," Bennett said. "Everyone started yelling and screaming and firing their guns."

"He was very mild-mannered, very soft-spoken," Bennett said. Then he quickly got down to business. "We believe the biggest thieves was the war and the terrorists are the Americans," he said. "The only way for us to fend off these assaults is to use similar means."

Morley said, "I don't think we're too cautious," he said.

At the same time, officials do not want to alarm students or parents, he added. That is why the district has not considered such extreme steps as metal detectors at building entrances.

"We're trying to keep low-key. We want the public to know we're working on this, but not scare kids to the point they think that's all we're doing," Morley said. "It's the difference between telling your child, 'Don't talk to strangers,' and having them run and hide from every strange face. It's a tough balance."

The Cassia County School District is finishing or has completed several new classroom buildings, including new Burley, Declo and Oakley high schools and a new technical center.

What about children?

Larry Harris, dean of Boise State University's College of Education, said children become afraid when they see violent events on the news or hear about them in the community.

Teaching youngsters responsibility is one way to explain the senselessness, he said.

But school district officials are not handling threats made by students. Superintendent Richard Hill said. When one student threatened another this past school year, the district talked to both students, their parents and the school police officer, and documented it. Things cooled off.

Despite Bowers trial, many await justice

The Associated Press

It has been 33 years since Oziel Moore and David Creed Rogers were ambushed on a deserted stretch of Louisiana Route 21.

Moore and Rogers, the first black deputy sheriffs in Washington Parish, were on their way to a midnight snack when a dark pickup truck with a Confederate flag sticker on the front bumper fell in behind their patrol car. Then the shooting started.

There was so many bullets coming, there wasn't a matter of seconds that he was hit and lost control and hit the tree, and they drove on by shooting," Rogers said last week, recalling that June night. "A shotgun blast knocked him over on me."

Rogers lost his right eye. Moore lost his life.

Next day, a man was arrested and a gun was found. Charges were filed, then dropped. The case languished and appeared to be dead.

After the verdict, members of Dahmer's family begged, his daughter Bettie had testified, "I just want my dad to have the same justice anyone else in America gets."

In 1991, charges were filed in another high-profile civil rights case, the 1963 assassination in Jackson, Miss., of NAACP organizer Medgar Evers. Byron de la Beckwith was convicted of that murder in 1994.

At the same time, authorities found new evidence in the 1966 firebomb death of Mississippi civil rights activist Vernon Dahmer. On Friday, former Ku Klux Klan leader James H. Bowers, 73, was convicted of murder and arson, and trials are pending for two others in the case.

After the verdict, members of Dahmer's family begged, his daughter Bettie had testified, "I just want my dad to have the same justice anyone else in America gets."

Oziel Moore's family feels the same way.

But since a tip in 1990, which prompted the FBI to dig up a concrete slab looking for evidence, leads have all but dried up. And at 63, Moore's widow is resigned to the possibility that justice won't come in her lifetime.

Whether or later, Moore will be prosecuted — by man or by Vernon Dahmer, 37, huge family found fatal East after the death of the 60-year-old Vernon Dahmer, a prominent leader of the Ku Klux Klan, Friday, in Hattiesburg, Miss., for a 1966 firebombing that killed a black doctor.

God," said Maevella Moore, a nurse who still lives in the house in Bogalusa where she and her husband raised their four daughters.

Others, too, feel the days of segregation in racial bias being led into court in wheelchairs for crimes committed long ago may be over.

"I think it's very possible that the Bowers case marks the end of an era," said Mark Potok, a spokesman for the Southern Poverty Law Center in Montgomery, Ala. "Without knowing what witnesses may come forward driven by pangs of conscience decades after these crimes, it's hard to say definitively that there won't be another case like this."

But certainly the cases where the evidence was obviously ignored or otherwise mishandled, we've seen the majority of them come to court, come to trial."

In both the Evers and Dahmer cases, there were multiple trials, multiple hung juries — twice freeing Beckwith after a five-year trial.

But both cases spawned something to help keep the memory of a record that was unimpaired in court, said Tennessee Circuit Judge D'Annunzio Baker of Memphis.

Baker, in a student possession of the era and one of the founders of the National Civil Rights Museum in Memphis, said the passage of time presents unique circumstances to both prosecutors and defense attorneys. Without a search of what occurred in an earlier trial, the lack of living witnesses and the passage of time could not find or even the strongest constitutional case.

"While these two cases are different, they are not too far apart. We may see more cases in the future, but most sadly we still see many others that will never be investigated and never be tried," said

Baker, who marched in Bogalusa with the armed Deacons for Defense and Justice in the summer following Moore's slaying.

Some had hoped that new leads in old murder cases might come from files released earlier this year of the defunct Mississippi State Sovereignty Commission that once spied on blacks, civil rights figures and anyone else who challenged segregation.

But the man who fought for 20 years to get those files doesn't see much practical use for them.

"The main thing the Sovereignty Commission files have done is to shine the spotlight on these deaths," said David Ingberstein, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union in Mississippi.

Indeed, the files didn't help the Dahmer case much, Potok said. It was the confession of a former KKK grand who was in a 12-year prison term and felt the need to

Televized euthanization yields big response for animal shelter

The Washington Post

GREENSBORO, N.C. — The black-and-white dog did not know it had only seconds to live, but television viewers did. A black and white dog, a 35-pound collie mix about 4 years old, swiftly crumpled over, its eyes closed, and became one of 40 unwanted animals put to rest at the shelter that day.

And one of an estimated 6 million to 8 million in the United States each year.

The broadcast was, according to animal protection groups, a television first. And its resairing every Friday night this month has brought a burst of international attention to the issue of euthanasia and the care of dogs — and to the man behind the radical measure, BJ Barnes, the sheriff of Guilford County, N.C., in central North Carolina.

"I was born out of frustration. The only thing I wanted to do was let people in Guilford County know they've got to do better," said Barnes, 47, a Republican who explains the use of periods with his initials. "I didn't start out trying to be the poster child for spaying and neutering."

The message certainly hit home. On the morning after the ground-breaking segment of his show, "Sheriff's Beat," first aired on Aug. 7, people lined up outside the county shelter, waiting for it to open so they could pick out new pets. Adoptions are up 300 percent, he said.

Local veterinarians are reporting more inquiries about spaying and neutering. And Barnes, a 6-foot-7 ex-Marine with a distinctive approach to his job, has found himself explaining his cause on radio talk shows and television programs around the world.

Somewhat to his surprise, support for the televised euthanasia has been overwhelming, he said, with animal protection groups applauding his guts in showing the unvarnished truth about what happens to unwanted pets. Only about 10 people have protested the death on camera, he said, disturbed about the possible impact on children.

"The important thing is that people understand the message he was trying to get across; not that the local animal shelter destroys animals, but that the community produces animals for which there are no homes," said Leslie Sinclair, a veterinarian who is director for companion-animal care at the Humane Society of the United States in Washington.

There are an estimated 66 million cats and 58 million dogs living in domestic homes, according to the 1996 National Pet Owners Survey, but not one knows exactly how many end up in the city streets with their expenses of the community. Every year, millions of such animals die.

Similar estimates show that in many, one time there are 40 million to 50 million free-roaming cats alone. Local animal shelter and animal protection groups have tried a variety of animal control methods, but the problem, The San Marcos, Calif., humane society, for example, launched a campaign a few years ago to bring the city full of the strays down to 100,000. The humane society, however, says that 75 percent of the dogs and cats that end up in shelters are put to death.

Lifeguard Kurt Chambers sits under the heavy surf warning flag during the final stages of Tropical Storm Charley Saturday in Galveston, Texas.

Storm soaks Texas coast; Hurricane Bonnie on way

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane Bonnie gained strength Saturday on a path that could hit the U.S. mainland after the weekend, while a weakening storm from the Gulf of Mexico poured as much as 9 inches of rain on the Texas coast.

With top wind growing to near 85 mph, Bonnie skirted south of the Bahamas on a west-northwest-erly track. Hurricane forecasters warned homeowners on the Atlantic coast to prepare for land-fall by Monday.

"We have a developing storm southeast of us in the peak of the hurricane season, and we all need to pay real close attention," said hurricane specialist Max Mayfield of the National Hurricane Center.

Elaine Tondreau in West Palm Beach wasted no time getting to the grocery store. "It could change direction but in case it doesn't, I just don't want to be the one struggling ... fighting for items on the shelves." Stores saw increased business from those stocking up.

Tropical Storm Charley crossed land along the Texas coast early Saturday morning about 30 miles north of Corpus Christi, and was downgraded to a tropical depression as it weakened. Tropical storm warnings had been posted from Brownsville to Sabine Pass.

Nine inches of rain fell during the night at the Texas coastal town of Matagorda, which also had wind gusts hitting 70 mph. Surfers took advantage of the waves this morning at Port Aransas. Farther north, Houston got only about one inch of rain.

Among the recent "Medical Miracles" headlines: "California Woman Praises Health Plan," "Clinic Helps Little Girl Beat Odds," and "Ohio Woman, Once Homeless, Now Plays in Symphony Orchestra."

The stories are anonymous, and they face stiff competition from patients willing to offer the consumer group stories of insurers who choose money over medicine.

Among the recent "Casualty of the Day" entries: "Cancer Patient Dies from HMO Delays", "HMO Delays Bone Marrow Treatment and Patient Dies", and Ms. Ulrich's story, "HMO Denies Hospital Care for Aneurysm, Then Rehabilitation Costs."

"I want the insurance companies to know that they're dealing with real people, and that real people shouldn't be treated this way," said Ms. Ulrich, a 23-year-old Southwest Texas State University graduate student whose slight slip reminds listeners of her ordeal.

"I want to protect people from what the insurance companies are doing."

Michael Freeman of the Washington-based Healthcare Leadership Council said the group started its "Medical Miracles" campaign to point out that in millions of daily transactions, patients are satisfied with their treatment.

"The health care system is not 100-percent perfect. There are mistakes made and tragedies are avoidable when they happen," she said. "But they're not anonymous incidents of the American health-care system, and that's what the authors of the human stories are trying to say."

Janice Grant, author of many of the "Casualty of the Day" cases, disagrees.

"The fact that managed care is failing in a dramatic way when patients get their own rights and admission their complaints are ignored," she said. "The HMO campaign is like the government industry winning a daily battle about all the things that don't explode."

After she suffered an aneurysm on her brain, Ms. Ulrich's insurer, WellCare — now part of Aetna U.S. Healthcare — declined to pay for a costly surgery in a rehabilitation center and wanted to put the then-22-year-old in an assisted home, she recalled.

In said that because of the aneurysm, she could not be discharged.

She can now walk and talk again after a rehabilitation program paid for under a Blue Cross and Blue Shield plan she joined later.

An Aetna spokesman said the company needed more time to review her files.

On the strength of such stories, Thomsen last year became the first state to allow individuals to sue their HMO.

In California, Democratic Assemblywoman Liz Biggers said the true tales of real people have helped her press for bills like the ERIC liability measure, she wrote. The legislation has been approved by the state Assembly.

"You want to use a variety of tools to get your message communicated to your colleagues, and you need to be creative. We use whatever we can," she said. "When you see a woman there with breast cancer talking about her problem, every legislator can relate. It could be his wife or her daughter."

John is an original, no doubt about it. Whether he's creating a rule in our local production of "Guys and Dolls" or whipping up a custom package of small business services, it's about the only guy around who could handle cash management responsibilities for my heating and electric business. In fact, my old bank could not even come close. John created an account that sweeps idle funds from a checking into a high-interest account. What's more, when I need operating capital, it's automatically drawn from a credit line. And now, with the burden of cash management off my shoulders, I can concentrate on my business and still make it to rehearsal on time. That's a good guy, even if he's a little bit of a ham.

Anxiety over violence runs high

Los Angeles Times

They are on the news almost every evening: sexual predators, workplace gunmen, fellow-home, takeover and home-invasion robbers, killers enraged on the road.

By the numbers, there are fewer and fewer of them. Yet fear of them has held steady. That fear has overwhelmed reality, causing many Americans to feel more threatened by crime even as the nation has become a safer place in which to live.

The reasons for that disparity are complex, and sometimes shockingly deliberate. Police stoke fear in part because they take crime seriously, but also to prime their budgets; politicians feel deeply about the issue, but also manipulate it to win votes. News organizations amplify fear by ratcheting up their crime coverage, even as crime declines, because it helps ratings. Security companies, theft-detection manufacturers and others tap into deeply held fears and end up taking a profit.

In some respects, the merger of profit and political advantage has turned the crime business into the domestic equivalent of what President Eisenhower once described as the "military-industrial complex." In that incarnation, the fear of Soviet adventurism was real and the enemy a dangerous one. But in their desire to combat it, military contractors, politicians and Pentagon brass congealed into a self-sustaining system.

In the new version, prison-guard unions, burglar-alarm companies and others, in effect, cooperate with politicians and police to perpetuate public fear of a domestic enemy, in this case crime. It too presents real dangers, but even as those dangers have waned, fear has persisted.

Crime rates notwithstanding, who today feels safer?

"The fear of crime is highly irrational and reflects a very

Prevention: How to Stay Safe

The National Crime Prevention Council has published a new book, "How to Stay Safe," which is a comprehensive guide to staying safe in your home, car, and community. The book covers a wide range of topics, including:

- How to choose a safe home and neighborhood.
- How to make your home safer.
- How to stay safe in your car.
- How to stay safe in your community.
- How to recognize and avoid dangerous situations.
- How to help someone in need.

The book is available for purchase or as a free download from the National Crime Prevention Council's website.

deep culture of ignorance of risk factors and safety," said Eric Sterling, president of the Criminal Justice Policy Foundation in Washington. "We're a nation of 230 million people. Much of the country is perfectly safe. Crime, particularly violent crime, is very highly concentrated ... and yet that feeling of fear lasts."

Fear can color political choices, favoring the efforts of politicians who promise to fight crime and hurting those who argue for social solutions. It can contribute to vigilance, and to tighter community links through such programs as Neighborhood Watch. But it can also lead to empty streets, barred doors and suspicion.

Where the fear of crime has ebbed perceptibly, such as New York City, the sense of newfound freedom of movement has helped spark an urban renaissance. But elsewhere, where fear persists out of proportion to crime, the potential benefits of that kind of turnaround are elusive.

Criminologists note that, in some extent, a sense of security will lag reality because fear persists on memory.

Even long after crimes occur, the names, even faces, of victims linger. Twelve-year-old Polly Klass is kidnapped from her bedroom, then raped and murdered. Three-year-old Stephanie Kubler is shot to death in an alley. Six-year-old beauty queen Jeribeth Ramsey dies of strangulation, her parents suspected in the crime, which occurs in the tiny town of Boulder, Colo.

"While memory fades over time, it gets kicked up every time you hear about a new crime that allows you to identify with the victim," said Alfred Blomstedt, a criminology professor at Carnegie Mellon University's Heinz School of Public Policy and Management. "Polly Klass could have been any of our daughters, and that mother sits up all of our concerns for our daughters."

In addition, police officials say it's not prudent to cut back on tough sentencing or a national police buildup, because law enforcement authorities believe they are largely responsible for declining crime. If police must, people they could relax about crime, the argument goes, violence would rebound, and the public would be in real danger.

Politicians bring another level of anxiety. Crime frequently becomes a campaign issue as politicians routinely tap into the public's fear. In 1988, George Bush increased Michael Dukakis for releasing criminals into the community. In 1992, Bill Clinton won office in part based on his pledge to put 100,000 more police officers on the nation's streets.

But why not let a candidate boast about crime drops, about increasing numbers of officers on the streets? About safer neighborhoods and schools?

"The answer: [That message] is not as strong and thus much less impact."

But that is where more true crime or "documentary" where the charge "It is liberating, it leads!" has become the current phrase for mammalian and bird news.

Wanda Toscanini Horowitz dies at 90

NEW YORK (AP) — Wanda Toscanini Horowitz, conductor Arturo Toscanini's daughter who nurtured and guarded her husband's "Madame" Horowitz, through his legendary but turbulent career as a piano virtuoso, has died. She was 90.

"To be the daughter of Wanda, I didn't have any choice. Because I could have been born to anybody," she once said. "But to be the wife of Horowitz, in that I take a little bit of pride."

Mrs. Horowitz died Friday in her Manhattan home. The cause of death was not immediately known.

She was born in Milan, Italy, the youngest of four children. As a child, she aspired to follow in her father's footsteps but gave up as a teen-ager when her talent fell short of her expectations.

She then went to work as an assistant to her mother, who oversaw the maestro's needs for his concert tours. It was in this capacity that she met Horowitz when he gave his first solo performance with Toscanini in 1923.

"She was intoxicated by his playing," said pianist Mercedes Selsor, a family friend who worked with Horowitz during his last recording.

Security barriers appear

WASHINGTON (AP) — Park Police placed concrete barriers around the Washington Monument and were searching tourists' bags Saturday because of heightened security following U.S. missile strikes on alleged terrorist sites in Afghanistan and Sudan.

Spokesman John Loveland said the so-called Jersey walls were put up because the monument is among the capital's few major public memorials that a vehicle can park near.

Another National Park Service spokesman, Lee West, said officials had been considering installation of barriers to keep away traffic as part of the monument's restoration project scheduled to end in 2000.

"Scaffolding is going up before too long, and we want to have a little larger safety zone," he said. Possible security threats because of Thursday's missile strikes advanced the schedule, he said.

Manual bag checks by Park Police began Friday, West said.

"That is definitely because of increased security due to those international events," West said.

But he added, "Everything is just precautionary."

Washington went into similar cautionary measures after the Oklahoma City bombing in 1995.

The two-block stretch of Pennsylvania Avenue in front of the White House was closed shortly after that incident. It remains closed.

Construction workers place concrete barriers near the base of the Washington monument Saturday in an attempt to bolster security around the structure in the wake of the American attacks on suspected terrorist targets and threats of retaliation by Islamic extremists.

Bin Laden carries jihad, survives Russian bombs, Afghanistan war

New York Daily News

The twin embassy bombings in East Africa and the two bombings in Saudi Arabia and the bombing of the World Trade Center all might never have been had a single mortar shell not fired on Oct. 19 near the Pentagon.

The shell was a big 120-millimeter, and it was just one of countless such rounds the Russians expended during the 10-year war in Afghanistan.

Osama bin Laden would have made a high-pitched whoosh as it burst from the mortar tube, but after that, it would have been silent, arcing high into the Afghan sky, plummeting quieter than prayer.

Not a whisper of warning would have come as it landed. A sickening crump should then have signaled the end of a 22-year-old man who had not yet had a chance to achieve infamy.

"I saw a 120-millimeter shell land in front of me, but it did not blow up," Osama bin Laden would later tell a British reporter.

Fate had another pre-emptive opportunity when a Russian plane dropped four bombs in his headquarters. None of the bombs exploded, and he must have been all the more certain that his destiny was determined by the God in whose name he was warring. He would later say that Allah granted him serenity, or tranquility, even when he was under fire from Russians seeking to capture him.

Osama bin Laden

"I was under bombardment, but I was so peaceful in my heart that I fell asleep," he would say.

"No, I was never afraid of death."

By the war's end, bin Laden stood intact on a battlefield where more than 1 million people had perished. Thousands upon thousands of his fellow freedom fighters had encountered functioning Russian ordnance and had their destiny reduced to a bloody heap.

"Many of them died, and I am still alive," he said.

His survival was surely too woven into God's plans for him simply to go home and resume being the pampered son of a billionaire-Saudi construction magnate. He would not have left in the first place if that was his true destiny. He had gone to Afghanistan as a volunteer in the fight against one superpower and as the Persian Gulf War now landed U.S. troops in Saudi Arabia, he saw the opportunity to double up on his destiny.

"I worship Allah, which includes carrying the jihad to raise Allah's word and evict America from all Muslim lands," he would declare.

With a band of his comrades, he headed for Sudan, and his "Ejirah for Construction and Development" built a 500-mile highway. He insisted at reports that he was at the same time establishing training camps, handling terror bombings, and sending U.S. troops in Somalia.

"The rubbish of the media and the embassies," he said in 1993. "I am a construction engineer and an agriculturalist."

Lawmakers respond to Clinton scandal, consider censure option

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Faced with the quandary of how to pass judgment on President Clinton's personal conduct, some lawmakers late last week renewed the call for a resolution condemning the president's relationship with former White House intern Monica S. Lewinsky.

The idea of a censure resolution, which Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., first broached in March, would have no legal ramifications but could save Congress's current political dilemma.

Trent Lott

"The exact, it would be every member of Congress. House or Senate, go on record as disapproving of the behavior in question," explained Thomas E. Mann, director of governmental studies at the Brookings Institution. "This is a route they may very well want to follow. It may provide a way out for them."

Rep. John J. LaFalce, D-N.Y., said the resolution would allow lawmakers to address the fact that Clinton had lied about having an affair without forcing the House and Senate to undertake impeachment proceedings. "You can't pretend you condone what's transpired. It's now clear, based on the president's speech, that the public and public officials were misled," LaFalce said. "Maybe a referendum would be in order, if it would bring the matter to a close."

ment. A motion of censure in the House forces members to relinquish their chairmanships, and the Senate ethics committee can make recommendations to each party "concerning a member's seniority or positions of responsibility."

But while a few Democrats have begun advocating this option, other members argue that Congress can make no decision until it receives a referral from independent counsel Kenneth W. Starr.

"I think Democrats who are talking about censure are trying to ensure that other, more grievous options should be headed off," said Rep. Timothy J. Roemer, D-Ind. "I don't think they should be dismissed automatically... I'm keeping all my options open on censure, on resignation, and hopefully, it will never get to impeachment."

Republicans are more reluctant to discuss the idea of censure publicly, and GOP leaders have yet to formally discuss that option. But some Republican members and staff have privately raised the prospect of proceeding with a resolution if the independent counsel's report does not contain any new revelations about Clinton.

Mann said many Republicans are concerned any investigation could appear partisan, and they're acutely aware that the American public has grown tired of the scandal.

Once again, Hillary forgives her man

Newsday

The first time presidential candidate Bill Clinton admitted to causing pain in their marriage during that by-now-familiar "60 Minutes" interview six years ago, Hillary Rodham Clinton sat next to her man. On Monday, when President Clinton went on television to confess to causing her even more pain, the first lady was nowhere to be seen.

Yet, once again, Hillary Clinton showed she was willing to sacrifice her personal privacy to help save her husband's political career. On Tuesday, hours after Clinton's political aides said she needed to make a public show of support to stem his slippage in the opinion polls after the presidential election, she made an "appropriate" relationship with former intern Monica Lewinsky, the first lady approved the release of a statement by her press secretary.

Hillary Clinton said her love for her husband "is steadfast and that she is committed to her marriage. Once again, she told the nation, if I can forgive him, you can too."

"It just gets harder, not easier," said Mandy Grunwald, a Democratic political strategist who has worked closely with Clinton since 1992.

The first lady offered the text shortly before she and the president — with daughter Chelsea the link between them — provided the news picture of the day.

A former Clinton administration official who saw the first lady that day described her as a "a little worn" but still "deeply in love" with her husband. "It breaks my heart, it is very sad to see her go through this. She is a victim."

After six years of watching the first couple, however, the public may not be so willing to accept the description being spun by White House insiders of Hillary Clinton as a "victim."

A USA Today-Gallup poll taken Tuesday night reveals a public with a differing, more cynical view of why Hillary Clinton may be standing by her man. While 40 percent said they believed the first lady is committed to their marriage, 34 percent said she was supporting her husband because "she liked being first lady" and Hillary Rodham Clinton acknowledges crowds upon arriving at Martha's Vineyard Tuesday. President Clinton, right, returns to Martha's Vineyard Friday for the remainder of a two-week family vacation, after he ordered attacks on terrorist installations Thursday.

Clinton settles into vacation after hectic week

EDGARTOWN, Mass. (AP) — President Clinton settled into full vacation mode — and out of the public eye — on Saturday.

No energy for golf even. "He's basically taking today off," White House press secretary Mike McCurry said. "The president had a very busy week and somewhat stressful week," he said.

Clinton rejoined his family for the 12-day respite on Martha's Vineyard early Friday evening, after a whirlwind shuttle, back to Washington to announce that U.S. missiles struck alleged terrorist camps linked to the embassy bombings in Africa.

In the time Clinton was away, his daughter, Chelsea, was about the island with friends from Stanford University, McCurry said. First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton has not been spotted outside the family's borrowed compound on Oyster Point.

As for strained family relations in the wake of Clinton's public confession Monday night to an affair with former intern Monica Lewinsky, McCurry said, "He's working on it. My guess is they still have work to do."

Presidential deceptions common in U.S. history

Knight Ridder News Service

In the annals of presidential lying, Bill Clinton finds himself in crowded company. The historical record of the presidency is "strewn with lies," notes Greg Bush, a professor of history for the University of Miami.

Not so common, though, are presidential retractions or expressions of regret like Clinton's partly remorseful, partly defiant speech to the nation Monday night.

For example, Lyndon Johnson died without ever saying he was sorry for pleading he would never send the sons of American mothers to fight in place of "Asian boys," revealed in the Pentagon Papers, he was planning to send troops when he publicly promised not to.

And some untruths — such as Ronald Reagan's penchant for claiming a combat role during World War II, which never happened — inspired more a sense of outrage among Americans than demands for retraction.

Only rarely have lies destroyed presidencies; Americans like to extend the benefit of the doubt to those men who have held the world's most difficult job, even while realizing that "lying has become too common among our public officials," says Alan Goldman, a UM professor of moral and political philosophy.

And something else: There's a very important distinction between either lying and misreading for security purposes, which is at least motivated by a judgment as to what's best for the country, and the sort of self-serving lying Clinton and Richard Nixon did, "which is pernicious." University of Wisconsin presidential scholar Charles Jones told The Los Angeles Times.

But dissemblings and deceptions have exacted a heavy toll on presidents' places in history and on the democratic system.

"Ever since the beginning of the Cold War, Americans have gotten the sense that they weren't being leveled with by their presidents," says David Colburn, vice provost and professor of history at the University of Florida in Gainesville.

"Clinton was the first president since the '50s with a chance to restore the credibility. But he has shattered that. He has confirmed our worst suspicions of presidential untruthfulness and once again magnified them."

Senator: Moms should stay at home

SALD LAKE CITY (AP) — A state senator's comment that mothers should stay home with their children has drawn fire from child-care advocates.

'There's roles and they're defined and they're defined by someone different than us... the role of motherhood is not my opportunity or responsibility. My obligations, and responsibilities are different and I think mothers are, too.'

Sen. Leonard Blackham, R-Moroni

— Utah Sen. Leonard Blackham, R-Moroni

'I don't think Sen. Blackham realizes how offensive his remarks were to the majority of parents in Utah.'

Rachel Fischer, child advocate

— Rachel Fischer, child advocate

"I don't think Sen. Blackham realizes how offensive his remarks were to the majority of parents in Utah," said Rachel Fischer, a program specialist with Utah Children, a child advocacy group.

Blackham's comments came last week at a meeting of a legislative child-care task force, which he co-chairs. The 17-member panel of legislators, state agency heads, business owners, child-care providers, and parents is working to present recommendations to the Legislature on the need for quality child care in Utah.

Blackham said, "And it kept bringing to mind that what most of these young mothers need to do is to be home with those kids in those first few years. It's best for the family, themselves, their children and society in the long run."

Blackham's comments, say advocates, and even some members of the task force, may reflect the religious and ethical beliefs of many Utah residents. But they do not reflect the reality of Utah's changing labor force where the number of working women — 62 percent — outpaces the national average of 59 percent.

Even in the senator's own eight-county rural district, the percentage of children under age 6 with both or their only parent working averages 49 percent, according to 1990 U.S. Census figures.

Zina Treanbach-Murray, a parent on the panel, interjected at one point during Blackham's speech, urging him to acknowledge that fathers also can be nurturing parents. She wanted wording in the panel's recommendations to reflect that position.

"I don't think so," Blackham responded. "There's roles and they're defined and they're defined by someone different than us... the role of motherhood is not my opportunity or responsibility. My obligations and responsibilities are different and I think mothers are, too."

"That's the natural way it is. So I respectfully disagree with you," Blackham said. "And I suggest that the wording be just that — mothers."

Consultant to lead Idaho plan for land management

LEWISTON (AP) — The Idaho Department of Lands intends to hire a consultant to plan the implementation of a land board task force report on state management of federal lands.

Democratic State Controller J.D. Williams said his and Republican Secretary of State Pete Coatsworth recommended the department hire task force member Joe Hinson of the American National Resources Group.

Hinson could lead a process to seek public input on the report and make recommendations over what to do with the land, Williams said.

The task force urged the Land Board to seek congressional approval of a plan to involve state management of federal lands, under a trust or cooperative plan.

"I think it is very important that we design a strategy now with the citizens of Idaho, other states, Congress and the administration," Williams said Friday. "We felt Joe was uniquely qualified to do that."

Hinson is a former executive vice president for the Intermountain Forest Industry Association, an organization that lobbied for Baitch Corp. during this year's legislative session.

Lands Director Stan Hamilton said he is working on a draft contract to pay Hinson up to $10,000 and reimburse any authorized travel expenses outside the Treasure Valley through the end of this year. Hinson would get $75 an hour.

Boise pays on injury claim

BOISE (AP) — Terms of a settlement between the city and an Oregon man who said police broke his leg after stopping on it will not be disclosed, although the settlement involved a payment to the man.

City officials will not say how much they paid Doug Haynes of Clatskanie, Ore.

The case was to have gone to trial Aug. 27, but City Council President Carolyn Terteling said the city's attorneys advised the council it was best to settle the civil case, which has now been dismissed.

"The chief and the police officers believe they were not at fault, and it seemed as if it were the best way to best settle," Terteling said.

City Councilman Mike Wetherall said the suit against the settlement, although he and other council members would not discuss the terms.

"I think we should have taken it to trial. It thought the city had a good, viable defense," he said.

In 1996, Haynes was in Boise on a business trip. Police were called to the hotel where he was staying to investigate a burglary.

report, Haynes said when he opened his door to ask what was going on, police threw him to the ground and an officer stood on his leg, breaking it.

In fight to restore salmon, dams become nemesis

Removing once proud symbols

GRANTS PASS, Ore. (AP) Dale Smith remembers thousands of silvery young salmon swimming in his family's pasture, left to die when Rogue River Dam was taken down from Savage Rapids Dam soaked into the grass.

"I would say, 'Dad, there's a lot of fish out in the pasture.' He would say, 'Yeah, they make good fertilizer.'"

For the old West of Smith's boyhood, salmon seemed an inexhaustible resource, and dams a heroic symbol of progress.

In the West, with entire salmon runs extirped and others from California to Washington state teetering on the brink, a sense of outlandish idea is gaining force. Tear down some of the nation's 75,000 dams to let rivers flow free and wild salmon rebound.

"People began to view this as the pyramids of Egypt, as things that were there forever," says Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt.

"But times change and values change. We need to think of dams as pyramids, but as instruments to deliver goods in the context of the culture, times and technology."

To save fish, Babbitt has taken a green-headed sledgehammer to small dams in North Carolina, California and Oregon and looks forward to knocking Edwards Dam on Maine's Kennebec River next summer.

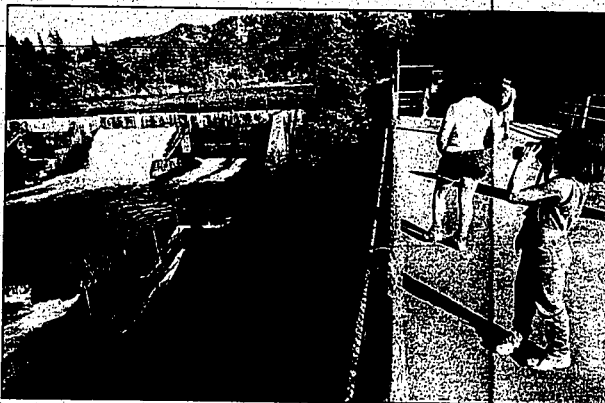

Last month, he knocked a dam from Jackson Street Dam in downtown Portland, a 12-foot-tall irrigation diversion that made Bear Creek, a tributary of the Rogue, an algae-clogged fish-killer for 30 years.

"There's a bunch of finger-pointing until there's enough of a crisis," said Eric Dirmer, an assistant professor of geology at Southern Oregon University who labored 10 years to build support among farmers, agencies and merchants to remove the Millard dam.

"Here like a drought brings all the water users together, now we have the fishery in enough of a crisis so we can get everybody to work together."

Two dams on the Elwha River in Washington's Olympic Peninsula are also targeted, and the Army Corps of Engineers is studying whether to breach four big dams on the Lower Snake River in Washington.

"It requires a bit of discussion

Tourists take in the view of the Savage Rapids Dam on the Rogue River in Grants Pass Ore., Aug. 12. The National Marine Fisheries Service, the federal agency charged with restoring dwindling salmon runs, has joined in demanding the Savage Rapids Dam be removed.

and inspection to get past this dam-are-forever kind of mindset," Babbitt says. "But surprisingly, it can happen quite quickly."

That may be true now, but environmentalists have been working 20 years to remove Savage Rapids Dam — once called the worst fish-killer in America by the Audubon Society — on a river that drew Western writer Zane Grey and movie stars Clark Gable and Ginger Rogers to fish for its salmon and steelhead.

Pressure mounted this spring when the National Marine Fisheries Service, having already declared the Rogue's cold salmon a threatened species, upped the ante and joined the state in demanding Savage Rapids be removed.

But undamming a river goes against the grain of history.

"To take out a dam is to develop. We don't do that in America," says John Baldwin, professor of planning and public policy at the University of Oregon. "We are going back to the caves and eating moss, is sort of what it represents in American culture."

New England dams spawned the Industrial Revolution. The West's huge hydroelectric dams, glorified by folksinger Woody Guthrie, helped pull the nation out of the Great Depression. Bonneville Dam on the Columbia River produced the power to smelt the aluminum that Boeing turned into bombers to help win World War II.

"In the 77 years since Savage Rapids was built, the logging and mining that once sustained southern Oregon have faded. Farms like the Smith family's 10 acres have sprouted homes that tap Savage Rapids' canal to water lawns and gardens."

The fishing has changed, too. When he retired as superintendent of schools, Smith expected to keep catching enough spring chinook to feed 100 guests at his annual barbecue.

"This year my buddy and I stuck with it six solid weeks, fishing for up to six hours a day, and we never caught a fish, Smith says. "Not one."

Savage Rapids' poorly designed fish ladders block salmon returning from the ocean. Young fish headed for the sea can spray into irrigation canals and turbines when protective screens fail. Behind the dam, three miles of slackwater inundates spawning habitat and leaves young fish vulnerable to predators.

Dams aren't the only problem.

The cyclical El Niño warming phenomenon disrupts the ocean food chain. Logging strips forest floors and sends choking silt into gravel spawning beds. Cattle eat trees and brush that provide shade and trample river banks. Urban development fills in wetlands, one pollutes water ways.

Upstream, the Rogue's headwaters, just Creek Unit preserves the forest, and holds that preserves some fish in the river, but wetland, fire, landslides, also cuts off miles of upstream spawning habitat. A hatchery south of Grants Pass is the loss is no more, the measure.

Sudan strike sparks wide-ranging criticism

By Robert D. McManus, Washington

CAIRO, Egypt — The U.S. air strikes against Sudan, one of the poorest African countries, are eliciting widespread skepticism in the Arab world, with many questioning whether the punishment was too harsh and too hasty.

Even Sudanese opposition leaders warned Saturday that the U.S. action might only strengthen the extremist Islamic regime in Khartoum. They also expressed doubts that the right target was picked when six Tomahawk cruise missiles slammed into an alleged chemical weapons facility in the capital.

Abdul Baqman Sayed, a former deputy general of the Sudanese armed forces now living in exile in Egypt, said Al-Shifa Pharmaceutical Co. was not among the facilities the opposition believed to be producing chemical weapons. For the last three years, the opposition has watched offhandedly weapons production at several other locations in Sudan, including a plant he traced only last week from the pharmaceutical facility in northern Khartoum.

"If the Americans took this step without enough information, they are causing more harm than good," he said. "I can only hope they knew what they were doing."

White House spokesman Michael McCurry said Saturday that the United States stood by Sudanese soldiers breathe through masks Saturday near the wreckage of a pharmaceutical factory in the outskirts of Khartoum that was hit by U.S. missiles Thursday.

its earlier intelligence that the factory made chemicals used in producing chemical weapons.

An American position figure in Cairo, Mohammed el-Moissim Hakim, said: "We want to change the government in Sudan and bring democracy, but we think the American attacks were not the solution. International laws should be respected."

The comments of the Sudanese opposition echoed the muted criticism in more moderate Arab states over the weekend. Egypt's foreign minister, Amr Moussa, told reporters in Cairo Saturday that the U.S. Security Council should have been consulted before the United States took action.

"No country can be a substitute for the Security Council, which will remain the only political authority mandated to maintain international peace and security," Moussa said.

In Amman, the lower house of the Jordanian parliament took a more militant tone, calling the air strikes "aggression against the sovereignty and territorial integrity of other countries."

Although the casualties were higher in Afghanistan, where at least 21 people were reported killed, the plight of impoverished Sudan appears to be eliciting far more sympathy. Sudanese officials said one person was killed in the attack on the factory and nine were wounded.

Notwithstanding Sudan's renegade status within the Arab world — or its alleged role in the 1995 assassination attempt against Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak — relations have thawed slightly in recent years because of the Sudanese government of Omar Hassan Ahmad al-Bashir and other Arab countries.

"It was a great mistake for the United States to hit Sudan the same day as Afghanistan," said Mohammed Salah, the Cairo correspondent of Al-Hayat, a respected London-based Arabic-language newspaper. "In these parts, people don't care about Afghanistan — it is not an Arab country. But Sudan, there is a feeling that they can't find food for their people. How can they possibly be making chemical weapons?"

Casino ready to open in Mideast

Los Angeles Times

JERICHO, West Bank — Rows of towering date palms are in place, along with glittering brass lamps and plush blue carpeting. And the slot machines are ready to go.

A luxury casino, the first in the Holy Land, is about to open here, in a sand-colored building that has risen like a mirage from the desert floor at the entrance to this biblical city. In a few more weeks, developers say, Jericho, best known for the blasts of Joshua's trumpets and their legendary impact on the city walls, will ring instead with the sound of slot machines and cash registers.

The opening of the Oasis Casino, tentatively scheduled for September, is the first stage in a $50-million resort complex that its Austrian developers say will include several hotels, restaurants and a golf course on the edge of ancient Jericho, a sleepy, sprawling town that has been under the control of the Palestinian Authority since 1994.

Authority President Yasser Arafat's cabinet, the government is hoping that the facility will attract thousands of Israelis and foreign visitors to Jericho and pour much-needed tax revenues into the authority's coffers. "We think this will be good for tourists and good for the Palestinian Authority too," said Miri al-Ali, Arafat's newly appointed tourism minister.

Israel has no casinos, and efforts to legalize gambling have long been opposed by the country's powerful religious parties. They are not alone. Islamic religious leaders in Jericho and throughout the Palestinian areas also have, for the most part, opposed the "haram" — prohibited by the Koran, they say.

"God said it is forbidden for Muslims to gamble," said Sheik Harb Jaber, the spiritual leader at Jericho's main mosque, just up the road from the casino. "It is an immoral idea."

Boasting to the opposition, in part, the Palestinian Authority has declared that Palestinians will not be allowed to gamble at the Oasis, although several hundred people from the area are expected to find jobs there, ranging from maintenance workers to croupiers.

The land for the casino project was donated by the Palestinian Authority. Casinos Austria, the developer, holds a 15 percent stake in the resort, an Austrian bank has 10 percent, and the rest is held by private investors, including many Palestinians, according to Alexander Tucek, the director general of Oasis. And with an eye to its likely clientele, the casino has engaged an Israeli company to handle public relations.

Sudan gamers few friends among nations

Neighbors hate Khartoum government

Los Angeles Times

Khartoum, Sudan — When it comes to international relations, Sudan is a hard nut to find one so universally despised as the government of Sudan.

Despite deep sympathy for the country's economic demands, its neighbors hate the regime in Khartoum. Many of its own people do, too. And for the better part of five years, so has the U.S. government, which took the extraordinary step Thursday night of launching a missile attack on a suspected chemical weapons factory in the Sudanese capital.

A minority has backed the Sudanese government and has become extremely fanatical," said James A. Baker III, U.S. secretary of state, in a speech last week. "The Sudanese government has become extremely fanatical."

It is not just that the military regime in Khartoum has one of the worst human rights records in the world, torturing political opponents, using starvation as a weapon of civil war and tolerating slavery among its own people. Sudan, one of the poorest countries in Africa, has more than 4 million displaced citizens.

But the troubles extend beyond Sudan's borders. Since overthrowing the last democratically elected government in 1989, the ruling National Islamic Front has tried to destabilize its neighbors in Uganda, Ethiopia and Eritrea and is accused of participating in an assassination attempt on President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt, Sudan's neighbor to the north.

Sudanese officials here in the Kenyan capital denied any link to terrorist groups and insisted that "tolerance, peace and respect for other opinion" is enshrined in their government policy. It went on to accuse the U.S. government of behaving like terrorists by destroying the Shifa factory in north Khartoum.

The mostly Arabic north looks to the Middle East for its ethnic and religious origins, while the predominantly black south is firmly rooted in African traditions. For the past 15 years, the two sides have been at war, as the Christian and animist south resists the Muslim government's bid to impose Arab culture and Islamic law on the country as a whole. Since independence in 1956, on-and-off-again fighting between the north and south has claimed about 1.5 million lives.

Although the Sudanese version of an Islamic state is significantly less restrictive than those in such places as Iran and Saudi Arabia, the demographics of Sudan are also far less homogeneous than most of its Middle East counterparts. Less than 40 percent of the population is Arab, and about one-third of Sudanese practice a religion other than Islam.

Pakistani witness to attack vows revenge

The Washington Post

PESHAWAR, Pakistan — Lying in a hospital bed, his head bandaged and his face hidden beneath a towel, a 22-year-old Pakistani man injured in Thursday's U.S. missile strikes in Afghanistan gave a detailed description Saturday of the attack on his Pakistan-run camp, and repeatedly vowed vengeance against the United States.

Mohammad Khalid, one of four Pakistanis brought to Hyrabad Medical Complex here Friday from the Baktal ul-Jihad al-Islami training camp near the Afghan town of Kabul, described himself as a mujaheddin, or Islamic freedom fighter, from Punjab. He said he had gone to the camp three weeks ago to get "religious training" and had not received any military instruction there.

Shaking with anger as he condemned the "cowardly" nighttime assault by U.S. forces on "innocent people," he described seeing a fireball in the sky just as he and a dozen companions were going to bed. "I heard a lot of noise, and I saw it coming. In my mosque and I martyred it," he said in Urdu, which was translated by a Pakistani journalist.

Khalid said he did not know how many others had been killed or wounded, but an Afghan doctor who traveled to Peshawar with him said two died "on the spot" and another six were injured. There have been unconfirmed reports of as many as 50 people killed in the raids, which struck in the areas of Kabul and Jalalabad, south of Kabul, the Afghan capital. Of the four brought to Hyrabad, doctors said one died almost immediately of severe burns and trauma, one was treated and released, and Khalid and another man were listed in stable condition.

In Kabul, an Italian colonel who was shot after the U.S. missile attack on Afghanistan died Saturday, the Italian Defense Ministry said in Rome. An Italian and a Frenchman were shot as they drove in Kabul Friday. The Afghan government said Saturday that two men have been arrested in connection with the shootings.

"I was not part of the jihad but now I will be," Khalid vowed. One burned eye peered out from under his towel. "We will take our revenge against the enemies of Islam, and we will teach the children of America not to tangle with the Muslims. This cowardly attack will not go unanswered, praise Allah."

Albanians arrest foreigners in move against terrorism

AP Wire

TIRANA, Albania (AP) — Police and intelligence agents raided several alleged terrorist safe houses and arrested 10 foreign nationals, including some from Arab countries, sources said Saturday.

The raids Friday night followed reports that Albanian intelligence agents and the CIA had launched a nationwide manhunt for suspects involved in terror attacks in Egypt, including the November 1997 massacre of 62 people in Luxor.

During the sweep, authorities found bulletproof vests, fake passports, maps, radio transmitters and electronic devices, a police source said on condition of anonymity.

Newspapers can publish lists, but parents must protect kids

No one should harbor a false sense of security about child sex abuse, now that lists of convicted abusers are appearing in the paper. A list can protect a child. Parents have to do that.

County sheriffs began releasing lists of registered sex offenders last week, as required by a new Idaho law. The Times-News plans to print the lists routinely.

These lists are an important tool for parents. They let you know whether someone with a sex-crime record is living in your neighborhood or working in a job that might affect your child.

We encourage parents to clip out the lists and keep them for reference.

But let's not kid ourselves. A list of former sex offenders is valuable, but it has built-in weaknesses that parents need to understand.

First, not everyone on a list is dangerous to children. Many kinds of sexual crimes — not just child abuse — can qualify a person for the state's registry. And while some former sex offenders will commit new crimes, many others are trying hard to be good citizens.

Unfortunately, no one can reliably predict which is which.

The list's biggest drawback isn't the names that are on it, but the names that are missing. Brand-new abusers who are just starting their predations aren't on it, naturally. Neither are veteran abusers who have avoided being caught — or those who were caught but never convicted.

So never assume that a neighbor, youth leader, babysitter or acquaintance is "safe" just because he or she isn't on the list. Check references, and ask how youth organizations screen their leaders and volunteers.

Here are some more suggestions from Children At Risk Evaluation Services at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center:

• Talk with your children every day. Learn about their activities, and ask about their feelings and concerns.

• Teach your children that their bodies belong to them, and that they have a right to say no when someone tries to touch them.

• Warn them that even adults, like a baby-sitter, uncle or teacher, might try to touch them sexually. Try not to scare them — emphasize that most grownups never do such things.

• Children may be too frightened to report abuse. So be alert to signs such as recurrent nightmares, fear of some person or situation or the genital area.

Talking to children about this subject is uncomfortable for most parents. But it's necessary.

Parents, we're proud to give you one useful tool to help protect your children. The real work is up to you.

Don't assume that a neighbor, youth leader, babysitter or acquaintance is "safe" just because he or she isn't on the list.

Doctors need freedom to offer dying patients relief from pain

RONALD A. CARSON

When a dying patient complains of unbearable pain, the doctor needs to be able to provide relief without fear of being sanctioned. People at the end of life have a right to treatment of moderate pain as well, since persistent discomfort erodes the quality of those last weeks and months.

Gradually, care for the dying has been improving. Public interest in hospice and other alternatives to high-tech hospital care has been on the rise. Barriers to effective pain treatment were beginning to come down. Then last month Congress got into the act with a proposal to require the Drug Enforcement Administration to revoke the license of any physician who intentionally causes a patient to die.

If it becomes law, the Lethal Drug Abuse Prevention Act of 1998, introduced by Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., and Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., will put a damper on progress now being made in providing pain relief to dying patients.

If the politicians who crafted this legislation truly want to prevent physician-assisted suicide, they're taking the wrong approach. Fear of unrelieved pain ranks among the main reasons people give for requesting help ending their lives. Intimidating doctors into being afraid with painkillers is not the solution.

Granted, the proposed bill allows physicians free rein in prescribing drugs to alleviate pain, but the amount of morphine, acetaminophen or other drugs and the severe pain of bone cancer may also represent respiration to a point that might be lethal. Physicians in fear of losing their licenses are likely to err on the side of caution and under-prescribe. And the message that this bill sends to patients and their families is that pain control is dangerous, that expecting to be comfortable near the end of life is unrealistic and maybe even immoral — that it's better for the dying to rough it out.

Last year the Supreme Court ruled that physician-assisted suicide was a matter for the states to decide. Since then, legislatures around the country have taken up that issue. Regardless where one stands on the question of whether physicians should be permitted to help dying patients voluntarily end their lives, a consensus is growing that your doctor should be able to ease your passage. What worries people most is the prospect of dying in misery. With good family support, good nursing care and adequate pain control, dying in misery is not necessary.

Adequate pain control has been an option since 1989, when Texas became the first of several states to pass an Intractable Pain Act that authorizes physicians licensed by the Board of Medical Examiners to prescribe or administer dangerous drugs to relieve intractable pain. Not that passing a law necessarily solves problems, but it can pave the way to a solution.

Despite the recent advance, the reluctance of physicians generally to relieve dying patients' pain is widely documented. Doctors need to be informed about what the law says and to be confident that they will not be punished for practicing state-of-the-art end-of-life care. State medical boards, which are responsible for disciplining physicians who abuse prescribing privileges, are bringing their members' knowledge of this issue up to date.

Our health care system still has trouble treating patients once treatment comes down to comfort, rather than cure. The art and science of palliative care, the comprehensive management of the physical, psychological, social, spiritual and essential needs of patients — finally are being introduced into medical and nursing school curricula and continuing education programs.

Public awareness of the need for end-of-life planning is growing. Choosing the right course when the choice is between prolonging life and maintaining life's quality happens one patient, one family member, one doctor at a time. More people are realizing how important it is to talk with those closest to them, and with their doctors, about how they want to be treated when the end is near. The ham-fisted proposal before Congress would stymie this hard-won progress.

When doctors say the pain is unbearable, doctors must be free to provide comfort. These very personal decisions should remain in the hands of those who have the biggest stake in their outcome — patients and their families — and the doctors and nurses entrusted with their care.

Next time, vote for average citizen

If we want to know what the president is really like, why not ask the people of Arkansas? Why did they not elect him governor again? I'm sure there was a very good reason.

Why did he not go to Vietnam? That is understandable. It did not blame any boy for not wanting to go, but was he any better than the other youth who were caught in that horrible trap?

There are a lot more hungry, poor, hungry people in Washington, D.C., that need to be kicked out. We are the people of America, so who will we vote for? Just an average American citizen.

F&G must survive on its budget

In response to the Department of Fish and Game's proposal to raise license fees, etc., the Fish and Game Department needs to learn how to live on a budget like the rest of us.

Raising the fees is not the answer to solving the problem; a few years down the road, they will want more. The Department of Fish and Game closed the deer season in Unit 54 (South Hills). The department issued 750 buck permits, which I was lucky enough to draw one. It should have closed the season on all deer. We spent three weeks camping in the South Hills and saw only a few deer, which is very unusual.

If the Department of Fish and Game gets its proposal approved, people on fixed incomes won't be able to go hunting or fishing. The legislators need to go back to the public on this issue and make the Department of Fish and Game live on a budget.

Don't treat young driver like a hero

It is just me or was something really wrong with the delivery of the article about the young man in the Times-Saturday, Aug. 15, Page B-2?

A young boy, age 8, took the wheel of his mother's car while she was in the store, started in and, as a result, the vehicle smashed into the store.

First off, thank God no one was hurt. I believe this was a normal child's mischievous act. I guess it's common, considering I did the same thing at age 11. Only I smashed into my dad's place of employment. My life changed before my eyes, and I'm grateful my dad spared my life.

The concern isn't so much what the boy did as how it was handled. This young man put his game on in the parking lot while he sits in the car as if it were his trophy. There's an need on elaborate on the mixed message sent to him: you can see it in his face.

The media has a real problem with being people's heroes. In writing stories, I don't blame the young man for being a normal kid; however, the adults in the situation didn't make a very wise judgment call in celebrating his heroism.

Changing tax system is the answer

I understand the frustration and anger expressed by Sandra Dee in her letter to the editor Dec. 26, 1997. She asked the question: "Is there someone out there who can tell me what my incentive should be for wanting to continue working, striving and contributing when my money goes into the pockets of people who are able to purchase things I'll never be able to afford?"

Of course, the main reason for this situation is simply that people have different levels of income. However, the financial situation of Sandra Dee and millions of others could and should be vastly improved by changing our tax system. Our present tax system is totally unfair for the working poor and middle class because it favors the wealthy.

I believe we should junk our present complicated and unfair tax system and adopt a simple progressive or graduated tax plan with no exemptions, no deductions, no exceptions, no loopholes, no special favors, period. This plan would be fair and would require the wealthy to pay their share of taxes for the first time in decades. It would also appreciably reduce taxes paid by the middle class and would eliminate taxes for the working poor. The income tax form this plan would be very simple and could be filled out by anyone without help from a tax consultant.

I also hope Idaho citizens will discontinue unfair tax systems such as the "Gift" tax and national "sales" tax. Both of these tax systems favor the wealthy and would be unfair for the middle class and working poor.

Congress has recently approved a so-called "tax reform" bill, and President Clinton has signed it. However, this bill does not solve our tax problems. It still favors the wealthy and is overly complicated.

Our incumbent congressional delegates have done nothing to provide a fair and sensible tax system. In the coming Nov. 4 election, I urge Idaho residents to vote for Bill Mauck for senator, Richard Stallings for congressional representative and Robert Huntley for governor.

Media thrive on Clinton's problems

I am embarrassed and outraged at the media, the public officials out to make a name for themselves, the lawyers, and those American citizens who are so shallow as to put up with what President Clinton is being put through.

Just one more great example of how we all seem to thrive on other people's problems. I remember standing at my desk, facing the flag and reciting the Pledge of Allegiance every morning and the proud feeling I gave me, even during times when I felt inferior in my situation. I was young, but I do remember. Don't you care?

Well now, we sure have a ton of new cable channels on TV. I want her to feel the same proud feelings I felt as a child regarding our president, government and flag. So I misdirected her questioning.

I grew up respecting JFK from kindergarten on. I remember standing at my desk, facing the flag and reciting the Pledge of Allegiance every morning and the proud feeling I gave me, even during times when I felt inferior in my situation. I was young, but I do remember. Don't you care?

Well now, we sure have a ton of new cable channels on TV. I want her to feel the same proud feelings I felt as a child regarding our president, government and flag. So I misdirected her questioning.

I do not condone adultery, but to me that is a very private and painful thing to have the whole country and world involved in. Clinton has not once from the start had a chance to just do his job 100 percent. Kenneth Starr and others made sure of that.

Clinton could've been one of our greatest presidents, given a fair chance. Everyone should've backed off and stayed out of his personal life. They've tried everything else to no avail, so that's just what it's boiled down to, his personal life.

Are we trying to push the first family over the edge? Put yourself in their shoes. This has just gone way too far. Why aren't more Americans outraged? Are we all just getting by on gossip and juicy garbage Hollywood-style?

My 7-year-old daughter has asked me some questions regarding what she's overheard on TV. I want her to feel the same proud feelings I felt as a child regarding our president, government and flag. So I misdirected her questioning.

POOR

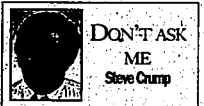

Sometimes Utah is just too weird

Lord knows, we Idahoans have our peculiarities. But at the risk of offending our good neighbors to the south, we're not even in the same league as Utahns.

If you disagree, then tell me why fluoridation of drinking water - an issue settled every where else in 1962 - is the hottest political debate in the Beehive State at the moment?

It seems that the argument isn't so much over whether fluoridation is good or bad, but rather whether it marks the rising tide of the New World Order.

What's more, the Logan Herald Journal - Utah's fifth-largest daily newspaper - last week editorially endorsed legalizing polygamy. That same month after the state's governor, Mike Leavitt, allowed as to how it might be unconstitutional for Utah to actually prosecute serial 1-d-ers.

It all makes you wonder how so many flat-earthers can live in a place with so many mountains.

Conventional wisdom among Utah-baters blames the Mormons, who make up nine-tenths of the Beehive State's population, for Utah's eccentricities. But I don't think religion has much to do with it.

Look, there are almost 8 million Latter-day Saints who live outside the boundaries of Zion, and their conduct by and large is exemplary.

For that matter, most of the nearly 3 million Utahns are folks you'd be proud to have as your neighbors. It's just that there are more than a few that you wouldn't.

And let's face it: A state that's essentially built around a giant salt lake is gonna attract some wing nuts.

The Crumps, for example, My forebears arrived along the Wasatch Front back when Brigham Young's assurance that "this is the place" seems to be all the reasoning.

These folks had emigrated from England and Sweden, places where there were actually trees and grass, to a treeless stretch of badlands that didn't look at all like the real estate brochure.

Imagine, smack in the midst of the biggest desert on the North American continent sits a 70-mile-long lake full of water that you can't drink.

Seems to me that subsisting on brine and rabbit droppings these years has made Utahns strange.

Some of them show up at our family reunion every August.

There's my cousin Earl who is stockpiling Vestaline against the day when Arab terrorists blow up all of our oil refineries and he's forced to run his truck on petroleum jelly.

There's his sister, LaTrece, who's convinced that only ginkgo supplements will save her family from selenium poisoning.

There's her aunt's best friend, Beulah, who is running for the Utah Legislature this year as a "free-will independent conservative" - a wing to get Robert Rorford out of the state.

A story makes the rounds at my family's reunions about a shirtrial relative who was born in Germany, emigrated to Salt Lake City, and eventually settled in the Arbon area near Pocatello just before World War II broke out.

It seems not the slightest penny in the wishing well, but he was convinced that Hitler knew where he lived. The Germans were coming in submarines, Hans would probably be a rich Saxon baron, to "drop bombs on us."

In case you're wondering, Hans is buried in Utah. I don't know about the bums.

Tuesday is the entry deadline for the first annual Don't Ask Me Ugly Truck Contest. (And remember, it's a contest to be ugly.) We'll print the worst examples in the paper and not tell people where you live.

Send your entries to Ugly Truck Contest, The Times-News, P.O. Box 548, Twin Falls, 83303.

All we need is a picture of the truck and a one-sentence explanation of why you're degrading Idaho's landscape.

State suspects 5 sites of contamination

By Pat Marcano/Twin Falls Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - State environmental specialists have narrowed the list of possible contamination sources to Rock Creek.

The five suspected sites are agricultural and domestic sources, said Mike McManis with the Idaho Division of Environmental Quality in Twin Falls.

"We're trying to refine and identify sources," he said. "We've got a complex of a number of different contributors, each one a different contributor."

Meanwhile, the Federal Environmental Protection Agency is deferring to the state about the contamination.

The EPA has not launched an investigation, but it isn't ruling that out.

Another round of testing revealed fecal coliform levels still exceeding state standards, so health warning signs will remain up at Rock Creek Park.

The state standard for fecal matter - from waste of warm-blooded animals - is 500 parts per 100 milliliters.

In an effort to find the domestic suspect, namely septic systems, the state will test next week at four points along the Orchard Tunnel.

The city also is attempting to track older septic systems through city records.

The EPA is deferring to the state about the contamination.

The EPA will step in if asked, she said, or if state investigators "drop the ball" by not taking action against a polluter.

If the Idaho agency finds the source of the contamination is a "point" source that has a federal permit to discharge waste into the water, "We'd expect DEQ to refer that case to us," Fromm said.

The EPA can provide criminal investigators to find polluters.

Investigators can set up surveillance to find "midnight dumpers" - people illegally discharging waste.

Violators can be subject to fines and imprisonment.

This is the third year in a row the level of contamination has risen and fallen in short periods of time in the summer, a pattern Fromm said sounds "pretty suspicious."

Rock Creek hazards spoil summer fun

By Jennifer Sandmann Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - August picnics at Rock Creek Park this year don't include swimsuits and water fights.

Health officials first posted signs July 29 warning of health hazards associated with the water.

Julio Castro, 18, of Rupert didn't see the postings Saturday. He had caught three fish before he realized the water was contaminated.

He packed up his gear and headed for Hagerman.

Cousins Jessica and Ashley Reichel and their friend Melissa Long, all 12 and from Hansen, expressed disappointment about not being able to float inner tubes down the creek.

"This year I won't let them anywhere near it," said Brook Long, Melissa's mother.

The girls say the thought of contaminated water doesn't make them eager to jump in, anyhow.

And once the warning is rescinded, they don't plan on testing out the water soon.

The warning signs caution that fecal coliform levels exceed state standards. All water sports are discouraged, including fishing, though proper cooking of the fish can kill bacteria.

Risk of infection occurs when the water comes into contact with the eyes, nose, mouth or even a cut.

Symptoms of infection could include diarrhea, fever and a headache.

Brian McFarland, of Twin Falls, also picked up the park Saturday. His children - Hunter, 4, and Parker, 17 months - are too small to play in Rock Creek's water.

But he doesn't consider it a place he'll be bringing them to swim when they are older.

"I've always thought it was kind of nasty, myself," he said.

The nearby-looking water and the thought of industry upstream don't make it an inviting place to swim, McFarland said. He avoided it as a kid.

Hagerman high school will mark new era

By Gina Mulder Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN - After three bond issue elections in four years, construction on the town's new high school is officially under way.

On a Friday morning groundbreaking ceremony, students from all grades, local dignitaries and community members gathered at the north end of the football field to witness what Superintendent Lee Mitchell called "the beginning of a new era in Hagerman."

The new era to which Mitchell referred was the commencement of construction of the new school building.

Mitchell said the new facility would help implement a higher standard of education in the Hagerman School District through upgraded technology and improved learning environments.

"We are putting a dream into practice," Mitchell added.

State Sen. John Sandy, R-Hagerman, offered words of thanks and appreciation to a community that worked hard to pass the $3.5 million bond issue last spring to pay for the project.

Sandy, a 1965 Hagerman alumni, said the building will bring fresh educational opportunities to Hagerman students.

With enhanced learning opportunities, the building's Hagerman children will have a better chance at succeeding later in life.

The bond issue election held last May marked the third time the school district had approached the community for financial support for a new facility.

The two elections failed to garner the two-thirds majority needed to pass.

However, a more suitable proposal and the tireless efforts of community members who believed in the plan helped make this election successful, A.H.Hoe Committee Chairman Mike Deley said.

Deley, also of Hagerman High School, said he helped organize a grass-roots movement that canvassed Hagerman's neighborhoods, disseminating information about the bond issue.

"I want to thank those people who simply cared for the bond issue. It was your help that made a difference," he said.

Mitchell said at the ceremony were members of the School Board, each donning a white construction hat and golden shovel.

Board members were ready to throw the first few yards of dirt, designating the beginning of construction.

With preconstruction formalities out of the way, construction of the new 38,815-square-foot school will begin on what is now the school's football field just west of the existing 73-year-old school.

The school will temporarily move its football field to the city's Colliary Park.

Construction will be divided into two phases.

Phase one is scheduled for completion next May and will include 12 classrooms, administrative offices and the library/multi-media room.

Construction on phase two should be finished by next fall and will add another four classrooms, a multipurpose room and a music center.

Other tentative plans for next year are to build a 5,000-square-foot vocational-agricultural building, renovate the school's cafeteria and improve the locker rooms below the gymnasium.

Times-News correspondent Gina Mulder can be reached in Wendell at 536-6649.

Hagerman School Board members Deborah May, right, and Connie Herbert say they're excited to see construction begin on the district's new high school.

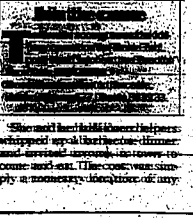

With help from friends, Rupert woman hopes for transplant

By David Lee Times-News writer

DECLO - Renie Earl of Rupert has needed a kidney transplant for 18 years. She has known Krisi Leoni for seven months.

This seven-month friendship may be what helps 51-year-old Earl live for many years to come.

Saturday night, Leoni and her co-workers threw a fund-raiser for Earl at Leoni's edge-of-town eatery here, the Brandin' Iron Cafe.

size toward Earl's surgery. Earl's relatives made items to be raffled off. Her sister Lynda Burrus loaned a long-sided quilt.

Daughter-in-law Bonnie Hathaway wove a Afghan. Daughter Denise Martin, who owns B.Z. Pawn in Burley with her husband, Mark, donated "two pickup loads of stuff" to be auctioned off.

Earl said, including six guns, four bicycles, a cell phone and breadmaker. But the biggest gift to come from Earl's relatives is a kidney from her son Jim Hathaway, Bonnie's husband. He has passed preliminary tests to show his kidney matches Earl's needs, and an operation may come in as little as six weeks.

"I can't wait," Earl said. "I have one-third of a kidney left. I'm so tired, I have absolutely no energy left."

The operation and necessary testing likely will cost about $30,000, however, and fundraising only began Saturday night. Earl plans to have the operation at the Latter-day Saints Hospital in Salt Lake City and still is on a national and LDS list for kidney donors in case her son's kidney fails to be a match.

Chronic nephritis, or deterioration of the kidney, is not hereditary.

Burton works at Leoni's cafe, and when Leoni heard the operation could be coming up she decided just a week ago to hold the benefit dinner.

TWIN FALLS

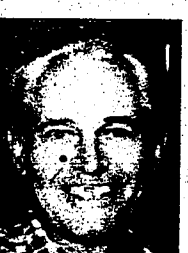

Eric N. Lancaster

Eric Nathaniel Lancaster, 12, died Thursday, Aug. 20, 1998, at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center in Twin Falls from heart complications suffered while playing soccer.

Eric was born Aug. 6, 1986, in Twin Falls, to Brian and Connie Himpfle Lancaster. He attended school in Lincoln Elementary and at Oregon Trail Elementary, and was registered as a seventh grader at O'Leary Junior High School. Eric was a member of the Boy Scouts and participated in the Pinewood Derby, where he was grand champion two years in a row. He loved soccer and was a member of the Twin Falls Twisters and was named Most Valuable Player on defense. He also enjoyed snowmobiling. He was a member of Twin Falls Reformed Church. Eric loved life, lived it to the fullest and never met a stranger.

He is survived by his parents, Connie and Brian Lancaster of Twin Falls; his sister, Shawna Lancaster, also of Twin Falls; his grandparents, Tom Lancaster of Filer, Phyllis Bortner of Twin Falls, and Ken and Wilma Himpfle of Filer; a great-grandmother, Margaret Ramsey, and of Filer, and numerous aunts, uncles and cousins. The funeral will take place at 2 p.m. Monday, Aug. 24, 1998, at Twin Falls Reformed Church at the corner of Grandview and Pole Line Road in Twin Falls. Pastor Charles Vriesman will officiate. A private family burial will precede the service at the Holy RCOF Cemetery. Friends may call from 5 to 8 p.m. today at White Mortuary in Twin Falls. The family suggests memorial contributions be made to the Magic Valley Youth Soccer Association, in care of White Mortuary, to a charity of the donor's choice.

Gene R. Shaff

Gene Richard Shaff, 70, of Twin Falls, died at home Friday, Aug. 21, 1998, after a short bout with cancer. He was born May 15, 1928, in Filer, the son of Charles and Edna Filer. He attended Pocatello High Grade School and graduated from Filer High School. During the Korean War, he served in the Army. On Jan. 31, 1954, he married Helen Jean Engels in Twin Falls. Gene was a member of the Filer American Legion Post No. 47, the Masonic Lodge Filer Chapter No. 58, and the Royal Arch Masons Buhl Chapter No. 21, and Twin Falls Council No. 7. He was also a member of the Twin Falls Gun Club, Jerome Rod and Gun Club, and the Twin Falls Rifle and Pistol Club. He also enjoyed snowmobiling, riding his horse and fishing. He is survived by his wife, Helen of Twin Falls, a son, Don (Mary Ann) Shaff of Heyburn, two daughters, Sandra (Ferry) Hunsley and Janet (Clayton) Clough, both of Twin Falls, and five grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his parents, one sister, two brothers, one daughter and one grandson.

A funeral will take place at 10 a.m. Wednesday, Aug. 26, 1998, at home in Twin Falls. Burial will follow at Sunset Memorial Park with military rites conducted by the Filer American Legion Post No. No. 47.

Friends may call from 4 to 8 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 25, 1998, at White Mortuary. The family suggests memorial contributions to the Shoshone Hospital for Grippled Children, Memorial Fund - Friends of the Fair, Fair Avenue at Virginia, Selt Lake City, UT 84102.

Ruby B. Jardine

Ruby Bernice Kambirch Jardine, 91, passed away Friday evening, Aug. 21, 1998, at her home surrounded by her family after a courageous battle with cancer.

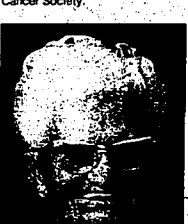

She was born Oct. 31, 1916, at Buhl, Idaho, the daughter of John D. and Edith Arda Duffield Kambirch. Ruby was raised in Buhl and graduated from Buhl High School in 1934. Ruby married Carl Green Jarboe at Buhl. They lived in Buhl, Idaho and Nevada. They were later divorced. Ruby returned to Buhl with her children to the old home of her parents. To support her family, she did housecleaning and became a dog and cat breeder. She went to work for Mountain Bell in the Buhl office in 1955 as a telephone operator and was later transferred to the Twin Falls office. She moved to Twin Falls in 1969 with her daughter, Sonnie, and her mother. She retired from Mountain Bell in February 1979, missing only two days in 24 years. She was very grateful for her job and took a sabbatical.

After retirement, she loved to travel with her friends and family. She was a great companion for the crew, making sure she never slept a day, making the crew mess something. She loved working in her garden, especially with her roses. Her family always came first and was a source of pride and joy. Ruby was a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Ruby is survived by her four children and their spouses, Jack (Foggy) Jardine and Richard (Coco) Jardine, all of Twin Falls, and Frank (Tut) (Sandy) Jardine and Sonnie (Dan) McGahey, all of Boise; her sister, Ruth Wallington of Jerome; her one grandchild and their spouses, Jeff C. (Janelle) Jardine, (Richard) Schraft, Neil, Arna and Brooke Jardine, Jeff A. Jardine, Brenda Wardle, Jack and Jim (Lisal) McGahey; her 10 great-grandchildren, Brady, Kelsey, Marcus and Casson Jardine, Ezzaine, Kyee and Madison Spratt, Ashley and Taylor Wardle, and Colin McGahey; her niece, Julie Ann McGahey, and family; cousins and countless friends. She is preceded in death by her parents.

Ruby had a sense of wit and never missed an opportunity to call it as she saw it. Her family and friends will always think of her as the classiest lady as she taught them how to live and how to die. She will be missed by all that knew and loved her.

A service will be held at 11 a.m. Tuesday, Aug. 25, 1998, at the Kimberly LDS Stake Center. Friends may call from 10 to 10:45 a.m. before the service in the Relief Society room. Burial will be at the Buhl Cemetery.

Edith Knight

Edith Knight, 98, of Twin Falls, died Friday evening, Aug. 21, 1998, at Twin Falls Care Center in Twin Falls.

Edith was born Aug. 11, 1900, in Cowden, Ill., the daughter of Winfield and Olive Mae Ledbetter Montooth. She grew up and was educated in Illinois until moving to Kimberly, Idaho, with her family in 1915. Edith graduated from Kimberly High School in 1919, where there were only 19 students in her class. She married Thomas Knight on Oct. 30, 1919, at Kimberly. She lived in Moscow, Idaho, for two years while Thomas attended agriculture school. They returned to Twin Falls, where they purchased a farm. Edith had resided in Twin Falls until the time of her death. Thomas retired in 1961 and passed away in 1981.

Edith was a member of the Methodist Church since age 9. She was also a member of the Order of Eastern Star and the Knoll and Pomona granges. She was past state and national officer in the Disabled American Veterans Auxiliary.

Edith is survived by one daughter, Virgil (Floyd) Clark of Leticia, Colo.; seven grandchildren; 15 great-grandchildren; two great-great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her husband, Thomas; parents; one daughter, Ollamae Armstrong; two brothers, George Montooth and Roy Montooth; and one great-grandson, Aaron Simpson.

The funeral will be held at 10 a.m. Tuesday, Aug. 25, 1998, at the First United Methodist Church with the Rev. James Frisbie officiating. Burial will follow at Twin Falls Cemetery.

Arrangements are under the direction of Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls. The family suggests memorial be given to the First United Methodist Church in Twin Falls. Contributions may be mailed to funeral chapel staff or mailed to Reynolds Funeral Chapel, 2486 Addison Ave. E., Twin Falls, ID 83401.

BUHL

Ruth E. Grubbs

Ruth Elizabeth Walden Grubbs, 96, of Buhl, died Friday, Aug. 21, 1998, of natural causes. She was born Nov. 17, 1901, at Trum (Huntsville), Ark., the daughter of W.R. and Nan Fowler Walden. On Nov. 18, 1923, she married Roy Grubbs in Huntsville. Ruth and Roy moved to Buhl in 1947. Ruth was an avid gardener and loved to sew and quilt, hoping that her children and grandchildren would follow her example. In the fall, Ruth earned the fruits of her labor and was a great cook, passing along her knowledge and recipes. Ruth's house was a safe haven to neighborhood children who called her grandma.

Survivors include her sister, Alice Ledbetter of Springdale, Ark.; a brother, Merl Walden of Filer; two sons, Robert (Guthrie) of Bliss and Gene Grubbs of Filer; grandchildren, Lane Grubbs of Buhl; Anna (Larry) Muse, Nancy (John) Banyai and Danny Grubbs, all of Twin Falls; Susan Walden of California; Donna (Greg) Davis of Bellevue and Randy (Penny) Grubbs of Filer; 12 great-grandchildren; three great-great-grandchildren; a sister-in-law, Violet Walden of Castilore and Julia Outland of Huntsville, Ark.; brother-in-law, Otto (Paulina) Grubbs of Huntsville, Ark.; and special friends, Janet Riggs and James Klein. She was preceded in death by her husband in 1980; four sisters; five brothers; a son and a great-granddaughter, (Randy) Banyai.

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 25, 1998, at the Farmer Funeral Chapel in Buhl. Burial will follow at the West End Cemetery. Friends may call from 10 to 11 a.m. Monday at the Farmer Funeral Chapel.

HEMBURN

Betty L. Butters

Betty Lou Butters, 66-year-old Heyburn resident, died Thursday, Aug. 20, 1998, at the St. Luke's Regional Medical Center in Boise.

She was born Aug. 27, 1932, at Vale, Ore., the daughter of Frank and Della Gray Zerk. She attended schools in V8le and Burns and graduated from Ontario High School in Ontario, Ore. She married Bill McManus and was later divorced.

She married Ralph Butters on April 16, 1964, at Idaho Falls. She had lived in California, Washington and Oregon. In 1988, she moved to Heyburn, where she had since resided. She loved antiquing and owned and operated the Tin Horse in Burley. She was a member of the Beta Sigma Phi Sorority.

Homeowner opts not to join lawsuit

Pilot crashed into Idaho woman's house

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A woman whose home was destroyed by a fiery plane crash is not a party to a lawsuit filed against the representative of the pilot's estate.

The suit was submitted in Mountain Rieg's name on behalf of her insurance company, said Brian Watkins, the attorney who filed the claim. State Farm is seeking to recover money it paid Rieg after the accident, he said.

Idaho law allows insurance companies to ask for damages in the name of the policy holder after they have paid the insured's claim, Watkins said.

While Rieg is listed as a plaintiff filed in 1st District Court, she is not involved in the suit.

Rieg said Thursday the family of the pilot has gone through enough grief. She does not plan to seek damages from the estate of George Freije.

"As far as I am concerned, there is no way I am going after that family," she said.

Freije, 73, and his 48-year-old passenger, Dean Cox, both of Spokane, died in the Feb. 26 crash. The plane — built from a kit — crashed and burst into flames, destroying the five-bedroom home.

Rieg was out of town.

The complaint alleges Freije flew "negligently and carelessly." Federal administrators have not determined a cause — but a claim filed in Spokane against Freije's estate was rejected without explanation last month, prompting the suit, Watkins said.

James Freije is the estate representative and listed as the defendant.

2 studies will explore effects of nuclear tests

BOISE (AP) — Two soon-to-be-released reports could help reduce fears about the possible health impacts of Cold War nuclear projects, but those close to the studies say the results may be inconclusive.

The first report, due in June, is now expected in September or early October, comes from a year-long examination of dust from nuclear tests in the Nevada desert. The second is a study of releases from plutonium processing at the Hanford Reservation in Washington from 1944-72.

For those living downwind of Hanford and the Nevada tests, the hope is they and their physicians will become confident about the impacts of exposure to radioactive iodine-131.

Iodine builds up in the thyroid gland, and I-131 is a suspect in thyroid disease among people exposed to high levels of radiation.

Two Idaho residents were picked for a panel to study last year's reports by the National Cancer Institute, which said millions of Americans were exposed to radioactive fallout from 50 atomic tests.

Idaho Division of Health Administrator Richard Schulz, picked by the National Research Council to represent state health officials, said the report will guide state and federal policies on such things as screening fallout victims.

But Schulz cautioned that those exposed to the fallout will get a definitive answer as to whether they are more likely to develop thyroid problems.

Newspaper carrier allegedly started fires to lighten load

KENNEWICK, Wash. (AP) — A 19-year-old newspaper carrier ignited two small fires near his route in a bid to lighten his load, because he didn't want to work when home, officials said.

The boy was arrested Thursday on suspicion of first-degree arson and two counts of reckless burning after admitting to starting the fires in east Kennewick, said Mack Yaden, the city's fire marshal.

He was also arrested on suspicion of two counts of residential burglary for unrelated break-ins. Prosecutors have yet to determine charges.

None of the fires caused serious damage, but one scorched the side of a house. The boy is believed to have started that fire by throwing a flaming phone book onto a porch, Yaden said.

Burley will try Grissom in September

BURLEY — Michael Scott Grissom, 38, of Jerome, will be tried next month on charges of obstructing justice by giving a false report in connection with the death of 5-week-old Camryn Reign Bennett.

The trial will begin at 9 a.m. Sept. 17 in 5th District Court in Burley. Prosecutors say Grissom gave police a false account in March, and said Camryn had been kidnapped in a Burley parking lot. Medical examiner's reports say the baby apparently died from being smothered. While he slept on a Jerome motel room bed, Grissom's arm ended up covering the baby's head.

Jerome County dropped a charge of felony injury to a child against Grissom after the court determined there was not enough evidence to warrant a trial. Grissom still faces a charge in Lincoln County stemming from the burial of Camryn in the desert near Elsie, Idaho.

Grissom Thursday was a key prosecution witness in a preliminary hearing in a first-degree murder case against Martin Fernandez.

Utah employees attempt to ban transsexual from women's restroom

PROBLE, Utah (AP) — Several women employed at the county courthouse here plan to go to court to stop a transsexual worker from using their bathroom.

Last year, the women asked the Lincoln County Commission for a meeting to discuss their concerns about county planner Nicole Cline's use of the women's restroom.

But the women say they never received a response from commissioners, so they have filed a motion of intent to sue the county.

"All we wanted was a meeting to discuss our concerns and we never got that," said Ann Shosted, a clerk at the justice court.

She said 80 percent of the women working at the courthouse petitioned commissioners for a hearing, but the commission "never gave us the time of day."

A notice of intent to sue must be filed because the women are seeking damages from a government entity. The notice claims Cline is guilty of misdemeanor recklessness and should be forced to stop using the women's bathroom.

"Our research indicates that the male employee has no right to use the female restroom facilities," according to the complaint.

The women claim Cline's "actions have caused severe mental stress and have created a hostile work environment for the female employees at the county complex."

Cline, who said she has lived as a female since April 1997 and plans to have a sex-change operation, scoffed at the women's allegations. "I don't think they've suffered at all," Cline said. "They need to come walk in my shoes for a day. I've got a Ph.D. in sexual harassment and emotional distress."

Ex-prison guard sues former boss after getting fired

SPokane (AP) — A former prison guard is suing his former boss, claiming the wrongly fired him after police found a crack pipe in his car.

Rubert J. Oliveira, who worked at the Shrikey Heights Correctional Center, was fired by prison Superintendent Kay Walter in February 1995 because of a police report about the pipe.

His lawsuit seeks unspecified monetary damages.

Walter's lawyer, Assistant Attorney General Brian Ernst, failed to get the lawsuit dismissed Friday.

Superior Court Judge Michael Donohue ruled that Oliveira had a right to file the lawsuit and name Walter as the sole defendant.

Oliveira, 37, who had worked at the prison six months when the incident occurred, claims the pipe belonged to a hitchhiker.

According to Oliveira, a stranger asked him for a ride to the bus station, but on the way, asked to have a sex-change operation. After the man got out of the car, Oliveira said he scanned driving away when he was stopped by police.

Owners of floating homes wait in limbo

HEYBURN STATE PARK (AP) — Four families with floating homes are caught in the swirl of uncertainty around court rulings over ownership of Lake Coeur d'Alene.

The Idaho Parks and Recreation Board in 1990 sold the owners of 28 float homes the structures must be torn down or moved from Heyburn State Park by 2010. The board wanted removing the homes would allow more park visitors to use hidden Lake at the southern tip of Lake Coeur d'Alene.

While most of the owners said they are pondering what to do, four families last year bought 20 acres of adjacent property just outside the park. They grouted pilings into the lake in front of the park and towed their homes into place, building floating boardwalks to link the homes with the land.

State law since 1974 has banned new float homes, but it allows existing ones to be moved on the same lake, as long as the owners obtain permits from the state Department of Lands.

Bill Schuurs and the three other owners did not apply for "encroachment" permits until after they already had moved their homes from the park.

The state was close to approving encroachment permits when U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge ruled the Coeur d'Alene Tribe owns the southern third of the lake not including the park.

Counties lose expected money for jails

BLACKFOOT (AP) — Revenue that counties anticipated getting for housing state prisoners dried up after the state was slow to use county jail space.

Bingham County is one of many that had planned its 1997-1998 budget around money they thought they would get for housing state prisoners.

During budget talks last year, Bingham County commissioners and Sheriff Doyle Holt estimated they would offer about 50 beds to the state to house its prisoners for $35 a day. And Commissioner George Katsanevas said they projected $650,000 would be coming into the county, a projection that was added to their budget.

In anticipation of the state prisoners, Bingham County added 26 beds to some single-bed cells last year and hired five extra jail employees, Katsanevas said. But, when the fiscal year began, the state sent no prisoners. By Christmas, when beds were still empty, the county had lost about $400,000 in projected revenue, he said.

The money they were banking on has contributed to an estimated $850,000 deficit that the county is carrying over to the 1998-1999 fiscal year, Commissioner Wayne Brower said. The county is paying it off with reserve money in this year's budget, he said, resulting in a freeze on 220 county employees' wages.

GOLDEN EAGLE VOLLEYBALL

Six-shooters

Golden Eagles begin the long road to a sixth title this week

TWIN FALLS - The College of Southern Idaho Golden Eagles have reloaded and are ready to take aim at their sixth straight national title, but don't go mistaking the words "national championship" to coach Ben Stroud just yet.

Having won 221 of their previous 222 matches, the Golden Eagles start the season as the No. 1-ranked NJCAA team in the country, but the man who has been named Coach of the Year five years running considers August a time for fundamentals and conditioning.

"We want to compete and win, but we have a long way to go. We have some kids who have a long way to go in their conditioning," Stroud said.

"We're a brand new team. It's going to take a long time for this team to get where we're going. We haven't really talked about (a sixth straight championship). We're waiting to get organized and see what we look like, and then we can see what kind of goals we can set. This team can be a really good team, but we do have some weaknesses."

The Golden Eagles' starting six will speak at least three languages and feature two lefties. The squad returns only one full-time starter: outside hitter and preseason All-American Soraya Santos. And the Golden Eagles have a large hole to fill at the setter position where they lost two All-Americans, 6-2 Hai Yan Wang and 6-3 Flavio Gabimio.

While Wang has taken her wares to Hawaii Pacific University, Gabimio is back and will work the sidelines this year as CSI's new assistant coach.

Brazilian Fabiana Abreu (6-2) and Idaho's Holly Foster (5-9) will set for the Golden Eagles. Stroud expects the duo to turn a question mark into a strength as the year progresses.

Abreu is a lefty who was considered one of the best passers in Brazil; while Foster, who played on two state championship teams at Shelby, has the right stuff according to her coach.

"She has to get over the jitters and we run a quicker offense than she's used to, but Holly's going to be a good setter," Stroud said.

Along with the athletic and spunky sophomore Miriam Colon (5-9), who started occasionally on the back row last year, three newcomers will fill out the Golden Eagles' starting six: 6-2 Brazilian Roberta Robert, 6-3 Russian Anna Popenko, and 5-11 Californian Brooke Jolley.

Robert, like her fellow countryman, is a lefty and she brings a boatload of grit and power to her outside hitting position.

CSI volleyball coach Ben Stroud and last year's hardware.

"It's really unusual to have two left-handers," Stroud said. "It's really tough to read and block left-handers." Jolley played middle blocker in high school and was scheduled to attend Boise State University before coming to CSI. She'll have to adjust to her outside hitter role for the Golden Eagles.

Stroud's story

Coach Ben Stroud has led the CSI Golden Eagles to five straight NJCAA national titles, posting impressive records in each of his championship seasons:

1997	61-1
1996	60-0
1995	65-0
1994	62-3
1993	44-10

Overall record (13.5 years): 587-110
 Five-time NJCAA Coach of the Year
 American Volleyball Coaches Association 1997 Coach of the Year
 Coached six All-Americans
 Coached first team to post 65 wins in a season
 Coached 1997 match win streak from September 1994 to September 1997.

Popenko is a seasoned player who has the tools to dominate. She'll roam the court for the Golden Eagles and is equally adept at passing, hitting and blocking.

Stroud said this year's squad is distinct from teams in recent years.

"I'm not sure this team is as athletic, and we don't play above the net like some of the teams we've had, but this team does some things really well," Stroud said. "We got really good ball control, good defense, and we're going to be a really good serving team. And we have some people who can really bring it."

Returning sophomores: 5-8 Rachele Ross and 6-0 Lisa

"This team does some things really well. We got really good ball control, good defense, and we're going to be a really good serving team. And we have some people who can really bring it."

- Coach Ben Stroud

Buggenthies will provide help from what will be a very thin CSI bench.

With the departure of 6-5 Darci Georgeson, who redshirted last year but left the team earlier this month for unspecified reasons, the Golden Eagles have only nine players. CSI's lack of depth could be the team's biggest challenge as the season progresses (see story, page C-2).

The Golden Eagles start the season Aug. 27-29 at the Utah Valley Invitational, before returning home to host the Applebee's Invitational September 4-5. After their brief home stint, the Golden Eagles hit the road for the remainder of the month.

The Golden Eagles open their Scenic West Athletic Conference North Division schedule Oct. 2 with a home match against No. 22 Ricks College. The Vikings were the team that broke the Golden Eagles 190-match winning streak last season and will again offer the Eagles their stiffest challenge in the SWAC North.

No. 7 Utah Valley State is the top team out of the SWAC South. The Golden Eagles will travel to Orem Sept. 18.

The winner of the North Division earns the right to host the regional tournament Nov. 13-14. At the national level, Miami-Dade Community College at Wolfson, the team the Eagles have beaten in the last three championship games, again sits waiting for the Golden Eagles at No. 2 in the preseason poll.

Golden Eagles will play numbers game

By Francis Davis
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Golden Eagles head into the season as the No. 1 ranked junior college volleyball team in the country, but one thing worries coach Ben Stroud — their depth.

"I like these guys because they're really competitive. When the real matches start, they're going to get better," said Stroud, whose team saw its first action of the season Saturday in a scrimmage against Treasure Valley. "The only thing that really scares me is our depth. But we're just going to have to play. My hands are tied."

Stroud's hands are tied because the Eagles head into the season with only nine players. Six-foot-five Daye and Georgetown left the team for unspecified reasons during the first week of practice. Stroud said the insurance will hurt his squad.

"There was no reason they left. I will rely more on preseason All-American Soraya Santos to play the inside.

"I like these guys because they're really competitive. When the real matches start, they're going to get better."

—Coach Ben Stroud

She just decided she didn't want to play," Stroud said. "We'll miss her. I think she would have led the nation in blocks."

In the absence of Georgetown, the Eagles

"(Georgeson staying) would have allowed us to put Soroya on the outside, where we trained her all last spring, but it's not going to work that way," Stroud said.

Recently, Twin Falls alumna Amanda Young tried out for the squad as a walk-on and Stroud confirmed he is looking to pick up a player to fill out his slender roster.

Stephanie Martin, a freshman from Mesa, Arizona, will redshirt this year. Martin is a 6'3" middle blocker who should benefit immensely from a year of work with the CSI regulars.

Former CSI All-American Flavio Gabinio has joined the Golden Eagles as an assistant coach and is available to practice with the team, but even including Gabinio and Martin, the Golden Eagles are still one player shy of a fielding a full six-on-six scrimmage.

Stroud feels the Eagles will be hurt most by their lack of numbers early in the season. This week, CSI travels to Orem to play in the Utah Valley Invitational Aug. 27-29. The team can expect to play four or five matches on the first day of the tournament, severely stretching its bench.

"It could affect us early," Stroud said. "That's a lot of matches to play in one day."

Times-News sports writer Francis Davis can be reached at 733-0931, Ext. 239.

Meet the 1998 Golden Eagles

Rachelle Ross

Height: 5-8
Position: Outside hitter
Class: Sophomore

Hometown: Vale, Oregon
Coach Stroud: Rachelle's the kind of kid who's a leader on the team. She's the kind of person who will keep your team together through the season.

Roberta Robert

Height: 6-2
Position: Outside hitter/setter
Class: Freshman

Hometown: Curitiba, Brazil
Coach Stroud: I like Roberta's attitude. She likes to compete and is really tough. She's a big hitter and good defensive player and has good ball control.

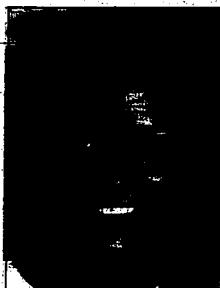

Miriam Colon

Height: 5-9
Position: Defensive specialist/outside hitter

Class: Sophomore
Hometown: Miami, Florida
Coach Stroud: Miriam is small, but she is an outstanding athlete. She's very quick, has great ball control and is a really good defensive player. She brings a spark that a team needs.

Soraya Santos

Height: 6-1
Position: Outside hitter

Class: Sophomore
Hometown: Victoria, Brazil
Coach Stroud: I think Soraya has a chance to be one of the best players we've ever had here. Fundamentally, technically, she's great. She's a real smooth athlete. She can jump, hit with power, and has shots. She's going to be great this year.

Brooke Jolley

Height: 5-11
Position: Outside hitter

Class: Freshman
Hometown: Bakersfield, Calif.
Coach Stroud: Brooke's a good athlete and a good blocker. We're moving her to a new position and she has a great attitude.

Fabiana Abreu

Height: 6-2
Position: Outside hitter/setter
Class: Freshman

Hometown: Sao Paulo, Brazil

Coach Stroud:

Fabiana's got all the skills. She hits with power, has nice hands and sets the ball well. I think Fabiana is going to take over this team.

Lisa Bruggenthies

Height: 6-0
Position: Outside hitter/right side

10

Class: Sophomore
Hometown: Bellingham, Wash.
Coach Stroud: Lisa's very athletic. She's improved a ton since last year. She's one of the players we're counting on to contribute this year. She's a big blocker.

Anna Popenko

Height: 6-3
Position: Outside hitter

Class: Freshman

Hometown: Moscow, Russia

Coach Stroud: She's a great athlete. She's been playing the game a long while and she's going to carry a load for us in terms of hitting and blocking. She gets up a big block.

Holly Foster

Height: 5-9
Position: Setter

13

Hometown: Shelley, Idaho
Coach Stroud: Holly's going to be a good setter. She's a really good competitor. A tough kid.

IN BRIEF

Gooding golfer holes home course Saturday

GOODING — Lonnie Scruggs hit career hole-in-one No. 1 Saturday on the 125-yard ninth hole at Gooding Golf Club in the morning. The 3-wood shot was witnessed by Mike Ward, Bill McInyre and Bob McInyre.

Burkett leads after 1 round at TF Muni championship

TWIN FALLS — Gary Burkett shot a 2-under-par 67 Saturday to lead the men's championship flight after one round at the Coors Club Championship held at Twin Falls Municipal Golf course. Tracy Frank was one stroke back and Scott Jerome and Brent Kleinkopf shot 70s. John Irwin, Greg Lanting and Carl Sklavos were four strokes back, with Aaron Curtis at 72.

In the women's championship flight, Melissa Venn and Virginia Dandjeh shot 78s and have an 11-stroke lead over Deborah Venable and Mary Foxall. Frank Juliano's 76 leads the men's first flight by one stroke over Jon Elvemann and Mark Fischer, while Kay Wilson shot a 93 and leads the ladies first flight by four over Julie Blandford. Ed Mason's 80 topped the men's second flight.

UI coach gives positive reviews after scrimmage

MOSCOW — The reviews were positive Saturday afternoon after the University of Idaho football team completed its first full-contact scrimmage of the fall. "It's a good start," coach Chris Tomney said. "The first time we've had a scrimmage. There were a lot of new faces out there. The new faces, particularly those in the receiving corps, made a positive impression on the coaching staff and the 300 fans who lined the field in front of the Kibbie Dome. Sophomore Jeffrey Townsend pulled in four passes for 78 yards and true freshman Chris Lacy had two for 34.

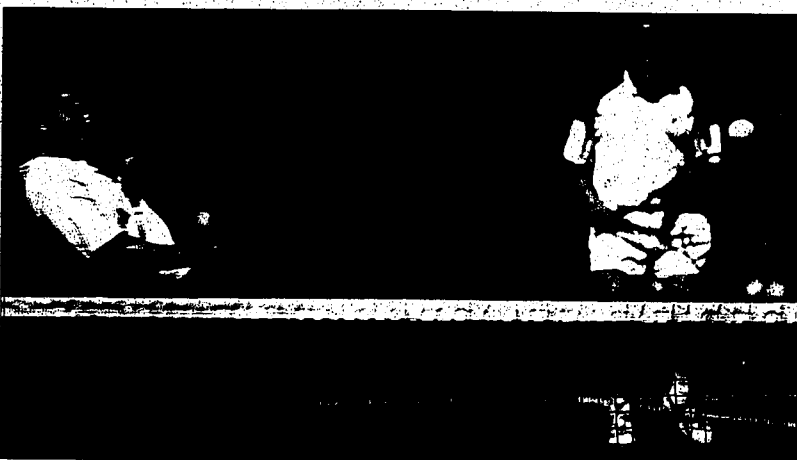

Quarterback Ed Dean had a bit of a rocky start before settling in and connecting for 87 yards after completing 4 of 13 passes. With John Welsh also contributing a solid effort, Vandal quarterbacks connected on 15 of 37 passes for 172 yards in the two-hour workout. Senior running back Joel Thomas was held out of the scrimmage as a precautionary measure as he recovers from a dislocated knee. The top outing among all players was that of true freshman Jordan Kramer, who carried the ball seven times for 45 yards.

Sophomore Anthony Tenner, one of the top five carries for 40 yards as the backfield topped 31 carries for 167 yards. The team opens Sept. 5 against Eastern Washington.

Former NFL quarterback's former son dies of cancer

POST FALLS — Andrew Rypien, the 2-year-old son of former NFL quarterback Mark Rypien, died Saturday of complications arising from a brain tumor. "No other details involving the cause of death were immediately available. The family said a vigil would be held Monday and a funeral Mass on Tuesday. Rypien signed a contract with the Falcons as an experienced backup to starter Chris Chandler, but left the team because of his family's health problems.

Unseeded Perry shines at Open

Tennis player feels right at home

By Jeff Brannon, Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Former Park Falls High School tennis player Perry played a lot of tennis on Frontier's courts and on city clay courts in the nice weather. Then he moved to the city. On Saturday, the unseeded park resident took the consolation serving up a 6-1 victory in an unseeded singles consolation match against Mike Muller. Perry defeated Muller 6-3, 6-0.

"I served well," Perry said. "I don't always serve well, but when I do, it just adds to my game." Kaut qualified for the quarterfinal showdown on a first-round bye and a straight-set victory over Twin Falls' Mike Euller, 6-3, 6-0. Perry, a summer pro in Sun Valley and a winter pro in Palm Springs, Calif., had the match in hand late in the second set, but sought a referee's presence the remainder of the way after he and Kaut disagreed on consecutive calls. Recreational tennis, even at the tournament level, often finds competitors judging shots deep and wide or their own, in good faith, without an official present. An ATP Tour hopeful who played tennis at Jerome High School until he graduated in 1992 and later at College in Utah, Perry then found a rhythm battling the powerful Kaut and simply stayed with it. "He liked high balls, so I hit low," Perry said. "It might be the opposite tomorrow (against Randolph) — I don't know." Perry and Kaut will meet again today in the men's open doubles final, and the pair will take on Kaut and Randolph in a noon match to decide the title.

Peter Saad, of Kansas City, Mo., sends off a hard shot sent right at him as he and partner Sean Timoney of Twin Falls play Doug Kaut and Jeff Randolph in the second round of open doubles. Kaut and Randolph won the match, 6-2, 4-6, 6-1.

Temperatures remained in the mid-80s throughout the morning Saturday. Across Twin Falls at the tournament's several other venues, the temperature and the action — heated up as the day wore on. In women's action, top-seeded 40 single Shelley Dingman of Twin Falls will face unseeded Jeane Cannon of Boise at 8 a.m. Dingman rode her first-round bye to a second-round victory over Twin Falls' Katie Riedl 6-3, 6-4. Cannon beat Twin Falls' Kathy Hieb 6-3, 6-3, then dispatched Murtaugh's Kathy Metzger 7-5, 6-3 to make today's final. Women's 4.0 doubles feature a top-10 pair. Please see OPEN, Page C4

Japanese-American braved threats on field after WWII

YONAMINE — Bowler and district official How on the player on the field on the court. "Once, a couple of times disrupted out of the field and threatened to hit him on the spot. I was then opposing him. Another Japanese American came in. This one is about Wally Yonamine, the first Japanese American to play professional baseball in Japan after World War II. The harassment was not so much racial, although Yonamine did go to the land of his ancestors with some trepidation. As a Hawaii-born native (second-generation Japanese), Yonamine wasn't sure how he would be accepted when he joined the Tokyo Giants in 1951. He was the first "foreigner" to play in Japan and it was only six years after the end of the war. Green Bay revisits Super Bowl anguish

The Associated Press

GREEN BAY, Wis. — The Green Bay Packers revisited their Super Bowl nightmare this week as they prepared for Monday night's exhibition against the Denver Broncos, the team that, as Derrick Mayer fretted, "took away our rings." But as far as revenge, forget it. The Packers won't seek up one scintilla of vengeance in a preseason game where the primary concern for both teams is keeping their starters healthy. "We're not out for revenge. We're out to play a football game and get better," quarterback Brett Favre said. "We have things we have to get done. It'll be a lot of fun. I just want to go out and play well as do the other guys."

That would be a turnaround from San Diego, where the heavily favored Packers fell victim to Denver's constant blitzing and Terrell Davis's steady running in a stunning 31-24 defeat, ending the NFL's 13-year reign. Linebacker Seth Joyner said nothing will ease that pain. "I don't care if we go out there and beat them 50-0, that doesn't erase what happened in the Super Bowl for anybody," he said. "I just think it's a good opportunity for us to go in against a good football team and see where we are at this point." But Joyner admitted both teams have a little extra incentive. "No doubt it's going to be a hard-nosed game. They're going to want to prove that their win was no fluke and we want to prove that we just had a bad day," he said. "But I don't care what happens in the game, there's nothing that can ease last January." Nevertheless, coach Mike Holmgren, who last track of downs in the closing minutes of the Super Bowl and inexplicably ignored Pro Bowl halfback Dorsey Levens in the fourth quarter, is eager for the rematch. "Well, it's not just another preseason game, but there's no revenge factor," Holmgren said. "Why it's very important is that we're playing a real good football team and it'll be a good gauge for where we are. "And we're playing in a place that has a great homefield advantage for the Broncos. That's good for us to get our younger players used to that a little bit. So there's a lot of key things about this game, but revenge isn't one of them."

Marin wins Goody's 500 to end Gordon's bid for record

WINSTON CUP modern-era record with his fifth consecutive victory. While Marin led the most laps on the way to defeating teammate Jeff Burton, Gordon battled an ill-handling car all night. "Not only did he wind up in fifth place, about one-half lap back, but he never challenged for the lead. It ended Gordon's streak of 14 consecutive races in which he led at least one lap, a run that stretched back to the Texas 500 in April. Marin's fifth victory of the season and 27th of his career was especially gratifying since it came one week after he failed in his bid to win a race in memory of his father, Julian, who was killed in a plane crash two weeks ago.

Marin was unable to hold off Gordon in the late stages of last week's race at Michigan. It represented another example of Marin having a good finish during Gordon's streak but losing ground to him in the season points battle. This time, Marin came to Bristol trailing Gordon by 97 points, but trimmed his deficit to 67.

Unit bests Sosa; McGwire hits No. 52

CHICAGO (AP) — Randy Johnson didn't get to face Kerry Wood, but he did strike out Sammy Sosa.

Johnson allowed two hits in seven innings for his fourth victory in five starts with Houston and Manny Alvarez went 4-for-5 with his 30th homer as the Astros beat the Chicago Cubs 9-3 Saturday.

Craig Biggio and Bill Speier also homered for the Astros, who won their 50th game and moved 8 1/2 games ahead of the Cubs in the NL Central. Chicago entered the game tied with the Mets for the lead in the NL wild-card race.

Johnson (4-1) didn't allow a hit after the second, walked three and struck out nine, including Sosa in the third. The left-hander gave up Glennell Hill's fourth homer and a single to Scott Servais.

Sosa went hitless in five at-bats — 0-for-3 vs. Johnson — with one sacrifice, leaving him with 49 homers. He traded Mark McGwire, who played Saturday night, by two homers.

Mets 9, Diamondbacks 4

NEW YORK — Mike Piazza hit his major league-leading fourth grand slam, made a sliding catch into the Arizona dugout and threw out a runner trying to steal.

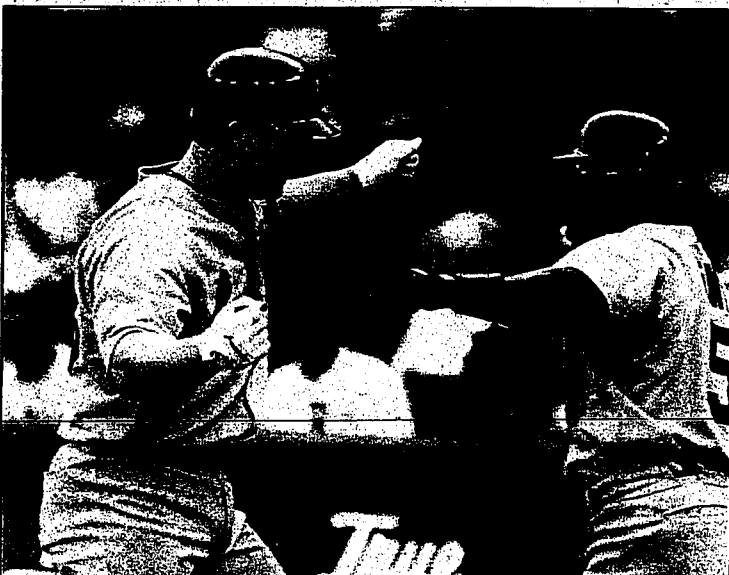

The Mets, playing their fifth game in less than 48 hours, called from an early 4-0 deficit. Bobby Jones (9-7), pinching on three days' rest for the first time this season, helped New York take a one-game lead in the NL wild-card race over Chicago.

Piazza hit the Mets' first slam of the year, keying a six-run second inning against Andy Benes (11-12).

Braves 7, Dodgers 5

ATLANTA — Walt Weiss and Gerald Williams each hit two-run singles and Chipper Jones hit his 30th homer in a game that included a second-inning brawl.

In the second inning, Atlanta's Andres Galarraga was hit by Darren Dreifort's pitch and charged the mound. Galarraga swung at Dreifort's head as he lunged toward the pitcher and the two players fell to the ground as both dugouts emptied.

Braves starter Denny Neagle (12-11) picked up the win, allowing three runs and six hits in five innings. Kerry Ligtenberg pitched a perfect ninth for his 22nd save, and now has allowed an earned run in 20 games — a span of 19 1/3 innings.

He has recorded 15 straight saves since May 27.

Phillies 6, Rockies 1

PHILADELPHIA — Paul Byrd (2-0) pitched a five-hitter for his second straight complete game. Byrd, claimed from the Braves on waivers on Aug. 14, never had a complete game before his four-hit shutout against Houston on Monday. Pedro Astacio (11-13) had a two-hit shutout with two puts in the fifth, then gave up Scott Rolen's three-run triple and Rico Brogna's two-run homer.

Reds 4, Expos 0

MONTREAL — Steve Parris (3-3) pitched a three-hitter for his second career shutout, sending Montreal to its 10th loss in 12 games.

Parris retired the final 17 in a row after allowing back-to-back singles with one out in the fourth. He got his other shutout on Aug. 15, 1995, a seven-hitter in a 6-0 win at San Diego while with Pittsburgh.

Montreal rookie Jeremy Powell (1-4) gave up all four runs and four hits in two innings.

Pirates 14, Cardinals 4

PITTSBURGH — Mark McGwire lowered his countdown to single digits. McGwire broke Rube Rutt's record for homers in three consecutive seasons with his 52nd this year. He has 33 games to match Roger Maris' record of 64 homers set in 1961.

McGwire powered an 0-2 pitch by Francisco Cordova (12-10) into the right-center stands in the first inning, a 477-foot drive that was the longest in Three Rivers Stadium this season. It was only his third opposite-field homer all year.

McGwire nearly hit his 53rd in the seventh inning, bringing the flashbulb-popping crowd out of their seats again as center fielder Adrian Brown ran down his long drive a few feet short of the wall. Bobby Witt (2-3) took the loss.

Giants 5, Marlins 4

MIAMI — Pinch-hitter Marvin Benard's RBI single capped a three-run rally in the ninth inning, and Jeff Kent hit a sacrifice fly in the 10th for San Francisco.

The Giants, trailing 4-1, scored three times with two out in the ninth against Antonio Alfonseca. In the 10th, pinch-hitter Stan Javier led off with a single against Brian Edmonson (3-3). Rich Aurilia sacrificed and center fielder Adrian Brown ran down the bases, and Kent's sacrifice fly gave the Giants their first lead.

NFL's 2nd pick upstages Manning

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Ryan Leaf, the second pick in the NFL draft, was 15-for-24 for 172 yards, set up one touchdown and ran for a score as San Diego routed Indianapolis for its third straight preseason victory.

Indianapolis Peyton Manning, the No. 1 overall draft pick, was 11-for-21 for 123 yards, but twice had passes intercepted by Mike Dumas as the Colts dropped to 1-2.

San Diego, helped by Indianapolis turnovers, scored on its first five possessions of the second half. The Colts and Chargers will play again in Indianapolis in a regular-season game Oct. 4.

Steelers 28, Falcons 22

MORGANTOWN, W. Va. — Richard Benjamin rushed for 120 yards and two touchdowns on six carries in the Pittsburgh Steelers' 28-22 exhibition victory over the Atlanta Falcons on Saturday night. Hunsley, a former Winston-Salem State star battling for a roster spot as backup running back, capped off two third-quarter drives with touchdown runs of 1 and 47 yards and added a 62-yard bomb.

The game was played in Morgantown, about 75 miles south of Pittsburgh, because of scheduling problems in Pittsburgh and Atlanta. The Steelers improved to 2-2 in the preseason, and the Falcons dropped to 1-2.

Bengals 33, Lions 19
CINCINNATI — Neil O'Donnell made his claim as Cincinnati's starting quarterback job, completing 15-of-18 passes for 147 yards, including a 40-yard touchdown pass to Bernard Scott.

Incumbent Jeff Blake, who played only two series in the second half, threw a 45-yard pass to Chris Dearinger that set up Bernard Scott's 1-yard touchdown drive with 2:09 to play. Blake was 2-of-3 for 51 yards.

Patriots 20, Redskins 17
LANDOVER, Md. — Phil Dawson, claimed off waiver Friday, kicked a 41-yard field goal with 2:30 left to push New England past Washington.

Dawson, who also made a 37-yarder, was signed to kick in place of Adam Vinatieri, who has a groin injury. Dawson was released Tuesday by Oakland.

Patriots quarterback Drew Bledsoe was 15-for-26 for 153 yards. Washington's Gus Protoro was 15-for-28 for 177 yards. Michael Westbrook, playing his first exhibition game after he was left bedridden by a knee infection, had five catches for 74 yards.

The Patriots improved to 2-2. Washington is 1-2.

Vikings 25, Panthers 22, OT

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Gary Anderson made a 26-yard field goal with 7:59 left in overtime as Minnesota beat Carolina to improve to 3-0 in the preseason.

Carolina kicker John Kasny had a chance to win it in regulation, but his 42-yarder with five seconds left bounced off the right goal post — his first miss in 12 attempts this exhibition season.

The Vikings tied it at 22 with 3:32 left in regulation on Tony Blain's blocked punt for a touch-down, and a two-point conversion. The Panthers are 2-1.

Oakland sweeps Detroit, stretches win streak to 6

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Ben Clevinger was 3-for-4 with three RBIs and Tom Candiotti (9-14) pitched a six-hitter as Oakland completed a doubleheader sweep 7-0 and 7-1, stretching the winning streak to six.

In the opener, Gil Heflin (1-0) won in his first major league start since 1995.

Oakland matched its longest winning streak of the season. The Tigers have lost five straight and 15 of 21.

Clevinger, 5-for-8 in the doubleheader, doubled twice off Frank Castillo (2-2) in the second game.

T.J. Luthnow got a save in the first game, and Brian Muehleir (12-10) won the laster.

Colts 6, Indians 3

BALTIMORE — With one-punching change Saturday, the Baltimore Orioles went from seeing singles to being fed slaps. They also went from the throes of another crushing defeat to a much-needed reversal. And in the game's most critical moment, they benefited most by doing nothing.

For the second time in less than 24 hours, a balk helped the Colts escape the oncozen of a game. On this day, the guilty party was the Cleveland Indians' Doug James, who finally got the chance to be a hero as a relief pitcher.

James allowed the go-ahead run to score in the sixth when he committed a two-out balk with the bases loaded, and Cal Ripken homered off him on an inning line to give the Orioles a 6-3 victory before 48,138.

In danger of reverting to form, the Orioles (69-61) avoided their first three-game losing streak since being swept in New York before the break. They also moved within 7 1/2 games of the Boston Red Sox in the American League wild-card race (pending the outcome of the Red Sox's game Saturday night).

Scott Erickson (10-9) capped this league-leading ninth complete game, summing seven hits, including Murray Zimmerman's 30th home run. Facing the tying run he set the previous night. Next on the list is Babe Ruth at 2,873.

Royals 3, Devil Rays 2

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Jose Rosado (7-9) overcame a first-inning jam to allow just three hits in eight innings. Jeff Montgomery pitched the ninth for his 28th save in 32 chances, allowing Fred McGriff's 15th homer.

Kansas City is one shy of its season-high four-game winning streak (May 24-25). "The Devil Rays (49-78) fell to a season-low 29 games under 500.

Wilson Alvarez (5-13) allowed two runs and five hits in seven innings, striking out eight and walking two.

Program aims to develop businesses in 2 counties

MOUNTAIN HOME—A new organization called the El-Wyhee Business Association has been established to promote positive programs of work and activities to help develop the business community of Elmore and Owyhee counties.

The association said it is managed by business owners and managers to coordinate the efforts of commercial, industry and the professions for the purpose of maintaining and strengthening a sound and healthy economic climate.

The organization was started in January by Ed Walter, a small business owner, who said he was tired of various organizations seeking donations from businesses for their events, but not returning to support those businesses.

He started out with a few other business owners and managers and held monthly meetings to gather information and ideas about promoting their businesses. In May, they had coordinated the efforts of 256 businesses and published "The Mountain Home Merchants Guide," listing the businesses by the products and the services they provide. The purpose was to give customers and other businesses a better idea of what these businesses had to offer, Walter said.

The group put together a business/customer acquaintance day in Mountain Home in April where over 25 businesses demonstrated their products and services. They also are planning trade shows and events designed to help promote the businesses. The association has planned an auto, sports and recreation expo on Sept. 26.

In October, "A Taste of Heaven" is being organized by Willie and Irene Heckathorn from Shorty's Salvage. Restaurant owners will set up food booths so the public can sample the different kinds of food available in the two counties. This event will also have musical entertainment.

For more information on the El-Wyhee Business Association, contact Sue Willis at 587-1129.

Sun Valley resort ranks among top meeting sites

SUN VALLEY—The Sun Valley resort has been judged among the top meeting sites in the western United States by Martin Bright-Troussier, vice-president and publisher of Meetings in the West Magazine, one of the industry's most highly regarded publications, the company said.

Sun Valley received a "Best of the West" award after analysis of the resort's meeting space, guest rooms, staff service, food and beverage, amenities and activities by a panel of top national meeting planners.

Wallace Buffman, resort general manager, said it was a great honor to their entire staff, from Bill Clifford, the director of sales, to the catering department to the bell staff and housekeeping.

Century 21 joins ranks with network of investors

TWIN FALLS—Century 21 Greater Valley Property of Twin Falls has joined the Commercial Investment Network. The network, a division of Century 21, is a national network of Century 21 offices specializing in the sale and marketing of commercial investment properties. This includes business opportunities, land for development and farms and ranches. The network has approximately 300 offices with over 800 members.

By participating, the local office can offer national referrals to customers who wish to make a commercial property investment, said Stiefle Klein, co-owner of Great Valley Properties. On-line services and teleconferences are used to find the properties or business opportunities, be they across town or the country, he said.

The average list price of a commercial property handled through a network broker falls between $500,000 and $2 million.

Get out of jail — fast!

Jack Green of Wendell often works straight out of the trunk of his car preparing to post bail for his clients. Green's job keeps him on call 24 hours a day, never knowing when the next phone call will send him to a nearby jail.

Bail bondsmen help people get released from jail quickly and for a price

By Steve Koehler
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL—Bail bond—get it out of Jail Free card.

But if you've suddenly been sent directly to jail and want out quickly, it might be the next best thing.

A number of Magic Valley counties provide bail bond service, a business that runs round-the-clock and commonly has agents up in the middle of the night.

"Weather controls the business," said bail bondsman Jack Green of Wendell. "When more people are out, there are more people out making mistakes. Weekends are usually the busiest."

Green, one of 2,000 agents for nationwide Fast Bail Bond Inc., is assisted by his wife and daughter, who act as general manager and file clerk, respectively.

"A bondsman not only gets people

The prices they live by

A code of ethics drafted by the National Professional Bail Agents of the United States is adopted by professional associations across the United States, including Professional Bail Agents of Idaho. The code states that bail agents should not accept business from anyone who is not a member of the association. A statement issued earlier by a bail agent says they are not to be held responsible for the actions of anyone who is not a member of the association. Bail bondsmen are licensed for surety, and may not sell property or auto insurance.

out of jail," said bondsman Bill Tilson Sr., "he also is like private law enforcement to make sure his client appears in court."

Tilson, who served 17 years as a deputy sheriff, does business as a Bonickman Inc. in Twin Falls. He also acts as a "runway agent" to pick up defendants who failed to appear in court. "This work is done at no cost to company, but can be costly to the defendant if the bond is not returned."

A defendant or his relative usually initiates the call for bail bond service, said Green, a former banker. It's unethical or illegal for bail agents to openly solicit business or judge court outcomes.

Bails generally fall between $300 to $2,000, Green said. But he's handled bails as high as $500,000.

Cost of a bail bond is a non-refundable premium of about 10 percent of bail. That would be $500 for bail of $5,000, Green said. But he's handled a release fee which can add to the cost.

The premium goes to the insurance company, and the agent gets a percentage of that.

The agent's mileage cost usually is included in the normal service area, Green said, which for him is within 30 miles of Wendell.

Bail bondsmen are agents working for insurance companies, Green said. And like a bank loan, the bond is secured with collateral.

But not everyone who asks for a bail bond gets one.

Tilson listed reasons for turning down requests: the potential client doesn't have collateral or cash; has a history of failure to appear in court; or has left the area of another bondsman's bail and was picked up here.

A person without assets who hitchhikes into town is a worse risk than a resident property owner, Tilson said. However, the majority of clients make good on their court appearances.

The type of clientele has changed over the years, said 15-year bail bondsman veteran Freda Aslett of A-1 Bail Bonds in Twin Falls. Violent crimes have increased, but she estimates peo-

What's behind Wall Street's turmoil?

By Tim Smart
The Washington Post

Q: What caused Friday's turmoil on Wall Street?

A: The immediate reason was Russia. The country downed its currency earlier in the week, but Friday Prime Minister Sergei Kiriyenko scared investors around the world when he told the Russian parliament, "This crisis has only just begun."

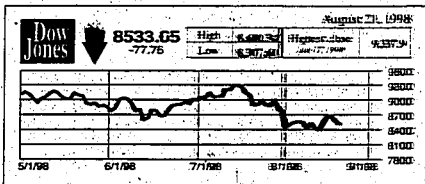

Q: But is Russia that important a player in the world economy?

A: Not really. But there is a growing concern, especially among investors who deal in Russia and other so-called "emerging markets," that the problems that erupted a year ago in Asia are now spreading around the world and will soon afflict other regions, such as Latin America.

These problems include plunging currencies, troubled banks and dwindling prices for key export commodities, such as oil in the case of Russia and Venezuela.

Q: How does that affect the United States?

A: In an indirect but important way. Foreigners buy a lot of American goods, such as Coca-Cola and Boeing 747s. With their currencies weakened, foreign buyers can afford fewer of these goods. That eventually means lower profits for the producers of these items. And stock prices ultimately are a reflection of the earning power of companies.

Q: So if U.S. companies export less, they earn less and their stocks lose value?

A: Exactly, but there's another desultory effect of a weakening global economy. That is when foreign exporters, such as electronic component makers in South Korea, decide the only way they can maintain their own profits is to find world markets with their products, which are now cheaper because of devalued currencies. Manufacturers in the United States then have to match those prices, which also erodes their profits. Either way, through reduced exports or lower domestic prices, the companies lose some of their profits.

Graphics software, using inkless pen, draws attention

By Joe Kinsinger
The Oklahoman

Ordinarily, to be good at computer graphics, you first must master the mouse.

You can be skilled at drawing the perspective, dimension and shading with pencil and paper, but knowing how to make a mouse do the same things is quite a different matter.

Or, you could use Pablo, a new computer accessory that lets you create graphics and edit images using the same hand-eye coordination skills that you first learned in kindergarten.

The Pablo is an electronic drawing tablet — accompanied by an electronic pen — that, plus input to your computer, the inkless pen takes the place of your mouse. Putting the pen to the tablet lets you "draw" images that appear in real time on your computer screen.

The tablet, which has an 8-inch-by-6-inch drawing surface, also comes with a transparent plastic overlay to use when combining images with the electronic pen.

The Pablo didn't come me into a classroom, but I did find it easier to turn my abstract-scratch doodles into computer graphics, which I can now post on the Web or e-mail to my mom.

With the pen, the Pablo is made by Keyboard Inc., a Minneapolis-based company that also sells another electronic tablet called the SketchBoard. The two products are identical — both sell for a suggested $99 — but the SketchBoard comes in a bright blue color along with Disney Interactive software aimed at children ages 5 to 14.

The Pablo comes with two software packages aimed at somewhat older — shall we say "mature" — audiences.

But let's face it: You have to be a kid at heart to use the Pablo or the SketchBoard. They're both designed to have fun with graphics. It's hard to envision either product passing Q: Is that it?

A: That's the economic effect. But markets also tend to reflect psychological conditions. And lately there has been a lot of uncertainty both here and abroad. I don't see what the economic outlook in Asia. Then President Clinton's growing legal and political problems. In the last couple of days, the worry has been the threat of terrorism, and increased international instability.

Q: Isn't it a bit far-fetched to equate a drop in the Dow with cruise missile attacks against terrorists in Afghanistan?
A: Not as much as one might think. Remember how the market initially fell at the outbreak of war with Iraq in 1991? Then, there was a sharp rebound. In international travel, which hurt the U.S. airline industry.

Q: OK, but isn't the U.S. economy in good shape at the moment, and aren't consumers spending like crazy? Wouldn't that be good for stocks?
A: Yes, consumers have been spending more. One of the effects of the Asian crisis and slackening global demand has been an oversupply capacity of manufactured goods and commodities such as oil. That has led to a steep drop in prices for these goods. This, in turn, has helped keep inflation low in the United States and led to a decline, indeed declining, interest rates. It's one of the forces propelling the seven-year-old economic recovery.

Q: That's good, right?
A: That's good, right?

A: Certainly, and it helps explain why the stock market has just about doubled in the past three years. But there are two forces in opposition. One is the strong domestic demand, fueled by low inflation and moderate interest rates. That has led to the strongest housing market we have seen in years, not to mention record automobile sales. The flip side is that a weakening global economy means sagging demand for U.S. goods, which eventually could undermine the strength of the U.S. economy.

Q: But is this a buying opportunity then?
A: It takes a strong stomach to buy stocks when everybody else is selling. Still, if you thought Coca-Cola Co. or Microsoft Corp. was a good buy when the Dow was at 3,300 and change in July, then it is an even better buy today with the market down roughly 10 percent from its peak.

Q: What should the individual investor do?
A: It depends on your goals. The markets are definitely more volatile today than a year or two ago. Long term, stocks have outperformed returns of keeping cash in the bank or buying bonds. But that doesn't mean stocks can't go down sharply at any given point in time. The key question to ask is whether you need the money anytime soon or you can afford to hold on, say for retirement in a couple of decades.

In the meantime, be prepared to suffer through some stomach-churning days along the way.

Higher costs lead to decreased income at Jackpot operations

The Times-News

LAS VEGAS — Ameristar Casinos Inc. announced its Jackpot Properties, Cactus Pete's Resort Casino, and The Horseshu Hotel and Casino, had operating income of $3.0 million and $4.6 million, respectively, for the three and six months ending June 30, compared to $3.1 million and $5.3 million, respectively, for the corresponding periods in 1997.

This decline in operating income was the result of slightly higher costs in all areas and a lower table games win percentage which was partially offset by higher slot revenue.

Ameristar's total net revenue was reported at $66.7 million, income from operations of $2.7 million and a loss per share of $0.12 for the three months ending June 30.

For the second quarter of 1997, the company's overall net revenues were $52 million, income from operations was $8.1 million and earnings per share were $0.15.

For the six months ending June 30, net revenues were $101.6 million, income from operations was $15.1 million and earnings per share were $0.27. For the six months ending June 30, net revenues were $128.1 million, income from operations before preparing costs was $6.8 million and loss per share before preparing costs was $0.10.

After the write-off of $10.6 million in preopening, pre-tax costs related to the opening of The Reserve Hotel Casino on February 10, loss from operations was $3.8 million and loss per share was $0.45 for the six months ending June 30.

ple charged with driving under the influence have decreased 60 percent because of stricter laws.

"We get quite a few DUIs and possession-of-marijuana defendants," Green said. Others include, people accused of driving with a suspended license, methamphetamine possession and battery.

Jail overcrowding could be reduced if sheriffs encouraged non-violent defendants to use bail bond services, Aslett said. Overcrowding by those sentenced for a nonviolent crime, such as driving with a suspended license, could also be reduced by use of probation bonds which allow the convicted inmates to go to work.

Computerization also is part of the bail bond business, said Tilsen's partner, Chris Rodriguez, who has a criminal justice degree and worked as a paralegal for 20 years before becoming a bail bondsman. She said they use e-mail to communicate with bail agents across the country to find "skipppers"—those who have jumped bail.

"Bail agents elsewhere will assist us," she said.

muster with a professional graphic arts department.

The Pablos' top software programs are called Art Dabbler and Goo Special Edition. With Art Dabbler, think of the basic Microsoft Paint program on steroids and command it to create images with the Paint tools, such as a pen or a spray-paint can, but it also "contains tutorials" on how to create your own cartoons and animations. It's just the kind of program to set budding Walt Disneyes on their way.

Goo is a graphic editing program that lets you alter pre-loaded images. You can, for example, call up a picture of your sister into the program and draw a pencil-thin moustache. Or you could add lifelike devil's horns to an image of your brother.

Mom is bound to be impressed with that kind of talent.

The program that comes with the SketchBoard is called Disney's Magic Artist. It lets kids draw freehand graphics on the screen. It also comes with more than 300 pre-loaded images and backgrounds that give young artists something to play with.

Installing the Pablo is simple. Pull your keyboard plug from its port on our computer and attach it to a connector linked to the tablet. Then plug the tablet back into the keyboard port along with another cable that goes into a serial port. (Make sure you have an open serial port before you buy the tablet).

The installation is a breeze for people with newer computers that use the small 6-pin keyboard connectors.

If you have an older computer that uses the large 5-pin connectors, you'll need a couple of gender-changing adapters to make everything plug in correctly.

Kidboard will send you the adapters free if you call the company's toll-free number. I found what I needed at a local computer outlet for about $17.

For amateur artists wanting to get more out of the graphic capabilities of their computers, both the Pablo and the Sketchboard are worthwhile accessories.

And for anyone with an upcoming family reunion, they'll definitely put a few tricks up your sleeve.

Manufacturers move into northern Idaho

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) - Susan Harris and her husband, Ronald Prior, only employ 15 employees to build custom wheel chairs.

Yet when labor analysts look at the growth of manufacturing jobs in Idaho's Panhandle, they point to companies like 21st Century Scientific Inc. The Los Angeles concern moved to Coeur d'Alene eight year ago. The couple said they were looking for low living and labor costs. "When we were on the road, my husband would say, 'Every place we visit is nicer than where we live,'" Harris said.

Small and medium-sized manufacturing concerns are adding jobs in northern Idaho. Manufacturers employ 300 more people than they did a year ago. In the last decade, decade-long increase in such jobs in the five northern counties.

The Panhandle added 1,500 manufacturing jobs in the last decade, a period when the nation lost more than 400,000 to automation and lower labor costs overseas. Manufacturing accounts for about 62,000 nonfarm jobs in northern Idaho.

In addition, the Panhandle growth occurred despite downturns in the timber industry, traditionally the dominating manufacturing sector.

Growth in manufacturing really drives the economy," said Kathryn Tacke, a state labor analyst in Coeur d'Alene. "Retail operations don't expand much if you don't have manufacturing jobs."

The northern region mirrors the state, which also has experienced dramatic growth in manufacturing over the last decade, said Alan Porter of the Idaho Department of Commerce. Idaho gained about 20,000 jobs over the last decade, many related to high-tech industries.

Cheap energy, low workers' compensation rates and the state tax structure tend to attract manufacturers, he said.

Jobs Plus in Coeur d'Alene, the area's largest economic development group, has made manufacturers its primary focus, president Bob Potter said. It has been involved in recruiting 52 small and medium-sized companies over the last decade, he said.

Wood products accounted for 60-70 percent of manufacturing jobs in the Panhandle from 1976 to 1992.

Delay sought in grocery store buy

HELENA (AP) - Montana's congressional delegation has asked the Federal Trade Commission to delay the sale of 13 Montana stores to Smith's Food and Drug Centers Inc. as part of Albertson's Inc. buyout of Bireley Food and Drug Stores Co.

The Montana Food Distributors Association, which represents most Montana-based grocery and convenience stores, asked the delegation to send the letter after member efforts to buy the stores were rebuffed.

The letter to FTC Director Robert Pitofsky, dated Aug. 19, asks that the September deadline for approval of the purchase be delayed to allow further review.

Make retirement planning "SIMPLE".
Savings for the future is important. That's why Farm Bureau Insurance offers a number of ways to plan for your retirement. For most sources, a SIMPLE IRA may be a smart choice.
A SIMPLE IRA from Farm Bureau will help you defer taxes on the funds you save today.
Call your Farm Bureau Representative today and find out how to determine if a plan can help make your retirement planning easier.

Give a kind word to a teacher today

It's back-to-school time - and I'm ready to lead the cheer for teachers everywhere. Brave souls. We surely should appreciate them more.

A few years ago, an elementary teacher told me about a student who was misbehaving in her classroom. The teacher sent the boy to the back of the room, to sit by the faucet, but then she caught him keeping a tally of the number of kids going to the faucet - and offering candy to the one who would make the most trips.

Another time, a student who hadn't done his homework couldn't tell the teacher what "L" meant in Roman numerals. So the teacher sent the student to the encyclopedia to look up the answer. When the teacher realized the child was taking too long - and discovered him reading about Robin Hood and listing all the words in the encyclopedia that began with the letter "R" - she made him stand in the hall.

And these are the good kids.

LIFE AND TIMES

Teachers also have to deal with the obnoxious brats among us, and with the really troubled kids who are just plain mean.

Children used to grow up in a world with absolute standards for behavior; certain things were right and other things were wrong. Parents, teachers and church leaders all reinforced the same values. But today's youth are growing up in a society that doesn't elevate morality, except when it's convenient.

No wonder kids are confused.

One study of young people in churches reported that 85 percent of them tend to reason, "Just because it is wrong for you doesn't mean it is wrong for me." And 66 percent of the kids said they had lied to their parents or another adult within the last three months.

These children are the ones with the religious training.

What's a teacher to do?

A friend of mine, who teaches school in Ohio, has tried all sorts of incentives to get her students to behave. One year, she told the kids she would throw them any kind of party they wanted if they could get 100 "good behavior" marbles in a jar. When she agreed to a "pet party," flaccid her own marbles.

The day of the party, there were dogs dragging kids down the halls, fish splashing water on library books, birds springing their buddies from cages and rabbits doing who knows what.

"Even the well-behaved kids are a handful," my friend concluded at the end of that day.

Tell me about it.

I've spent my life raising kids who hold staring contests with their guinea pigs and tell the same jokes 50 times in a row and always forget where the napkins are. Along the way, I've picked up loads of tips on how to prepare, such kids for a successful teen-

1. Create an environment at home that models a love of learning. How often do you have your children seen you reading? Heard you talking about something you have learned? Discussed ideas and issues with them? While these are things to have started from Day 1 with your child, you can still implement them in your home now.
2. In whatever way works for you, make sure your child knows that while all grades are vitally important, he or she is more important to you than his grades.
3. Ask them their opinion on important issues of the day. You may be surprised to find out what kind of brain they have in there.
4. Make sure there is nothing blocking your child from learning. One example of a block could be a learning or information processing disorder, or something like attention deficit disorder.

Another block to learning can be the use of alcohol and drugs. Part of the process of drug abuse is that kids begin to lose interest in things that were once important to them. If they are drunk or high in school, they do not want to learn and they can't.

5. Focus on process, not product. The right answer, the "A" paper is always secondary to what the child learned by doing it. Twenty-five hundred years ago, Plato remarked that success was the pupil of fail, ure.

It's all right to be upset when your child doesn't put forth maximum effort, but it's your job to figure out when he or she has.

6. Know the names and philosophies of the following people who influence your child's life: the principal, assistant principals, the guidance counselor and, most important, the teachers.

7. If a discussion about grades has become a battleground during a particular time of day, declare that time off-limits for grade talk, unless the teen brings it up. For some families that time is the car ride home, or right after school. For many it's the dinner table.

Many families have reported better digestion after declaring dinner time off-limits to grade talk.

8. Once you have done all this, simply put them in charge of school. Make them responsible for their performance at school. This may be particularly difficult, because this can be one of those situations where things may get worse before they get better.

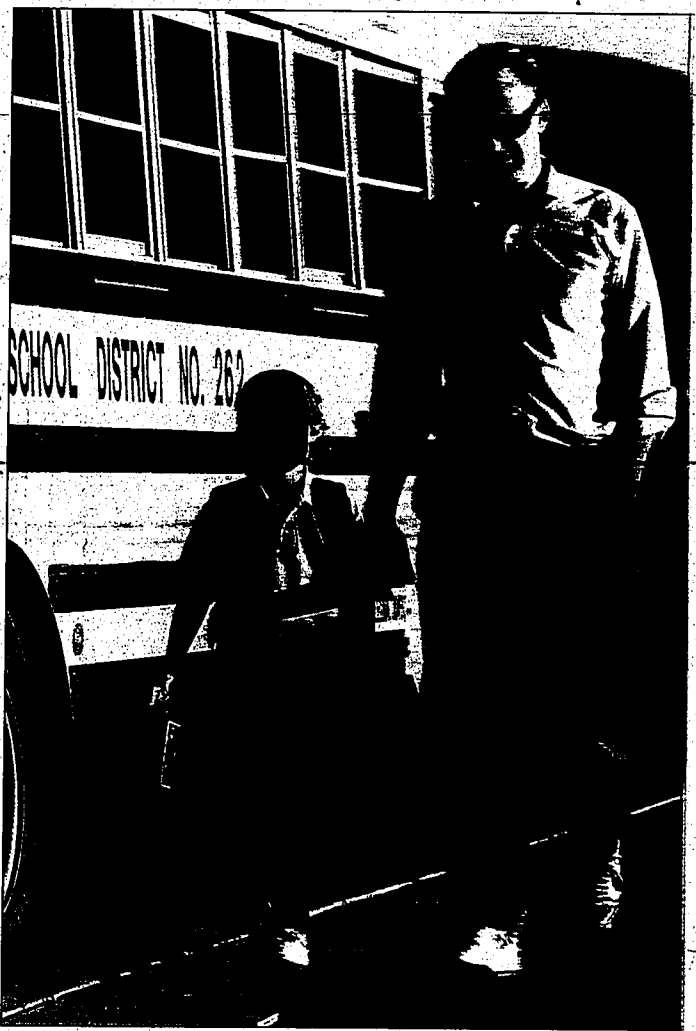

This is especially true if you have been pushing and pushing over the past few years. There may be a decline in performance as they learn how to be in charge of themselves with school.

Wanting your children to excel in school is a good and natural thing. There comes a time, however, when the ball is simply in their court, and it's up to them.

The most important thing for parents to remember is that school eventually needs to become more important to them than it is to you.

Help! What's for dinner?

When everyone in the family is asking what's for dinner, what's the answer? If your answer tends to be peanut butter and tuna fish, have we got a deal for you.

The Times-News is going to send a professional chef into someone's home on Monday, Oct. 19, to prepare the evening meal. The catch is that you can't go out and buy extra food. The chef has to use the stuff that's normally in your refrigerator, freezer or pantry. If you want to be the lucky family, send us a letter telling us why you need help in the kitchen. Include names and ages of your family members. Deadline for entries in the "chef-for-a-night" contest is Sept. 30.

The Times-News will publish a story, with photographs, revealing the results of the dinner. In the story, the chef will share tips for meal ideas and recipes.

How to affair-proof your marriage

Here are some key techniques for affair-proofing your relationship, recommended by Phillip Skoss, a Miami marriage counselor, Lori Gordon, a Bendville, Fla., family counselor, M. Gary Neuman, a Miami Beach, Fla., psychiatrist, and Don David Lusterman, a New York City psychologist:

• Avoid intimate relationships with co-workers. "There's nothing abnormal about finding another person interesting or appealing," Neuman says. "But mutual respect for your marriage, you have to ...avoid it from your marriage."

• "Don't have emotional energy for your partner." Lusterman says. "Showing close friends support, social activities with several friends, and a good sex life are all essential to a healthy marriage."
• "Don't have a night out week." Make a rule that you and your partner can talk about anything except children, business, or anything else that could cause a fight.
• "Don't have a 'date' night." In many relationships, one partner tends to lead and the other to follow. Take turns in leading your marriage together.
• "Don't have a 'date' night." One of the greatest gifts you can give to your kids is to let them see you and your partner love each other.

...from the school year. ...had damaged some school property, and the official wondered if the behavior indicated emotional problems. "Just try telling the child not to do that anymore and telling him what you will do if he does," the psychologist said. The administrator was disappointed. He wanted something profound. But the psychologist contends that the common sense approach often works best. Some of today's parents are wearing themselves out trying to analyze their kids' behavior. My parents never got that tired. They just told me what behavior was right, and they tried their best to behave like that themselves. In a book titled "Really Important Stuff My Kids Have Taught Me," there is a great truth: "It doesn't matter how fast you are running with the ball if you are going in the wrong direction." Three cheers for the parents and teachers who are staying on the track. Denise Turner is assistant features editor at The Times-News.

Cashless office worker gets credit for everyone's lunch

DEAR ABBY
Abigail VanBuren

DEAR ABBY: I work in a small office. My colleagues and I occasionally go out together for an informal lunch. We always evenly divide the bill. Invariably, one of my colleagues waits until everyone has contributed his cash portion before collecting the cash and paying the entire bill with his personal credit card.

On the last two occasions, I stated my displeasure with this practice. Most recently, he grew very angry when I criticized him. My contention is that he lacks the courtesy of asking if anyone objects if he uses his personal credit card. Essentially, others could save a trip to the ATM and accrue frequent-flyer miles by using their credit card.

My colleague claims that he carries very little cash and sees nothing wrong in his actions. Everyone's goal is to preserve office harmony. If I am in error by objecting to my colleague's practice, I owe him an apology. Perhaps you can advise.

— CURIOUS ABOUT CIVILITY

airline credits he is accruing, arrange to alternate with him, putting the lunch bill on your card in the future.

DEAR ABBY: Your Father's Day tribute, "Father Talked to Me," struck a deep chord. The need to speak out yelled up within me and I found myself rewriting as I read. This poem was not a struggle to compose; the words flowed like water. They have been locked in my heart since childhood. I hope you will print it so others like me will know they are not alone.

— NATIVE OF NEW ORLEANS

No Place Like Home
My father never seemed to care.

And when I shined was never there.
He criticized from A to Z, but never complimented me.

Accusing, belittling, constantly. We were never friends; we were always at war.

He showed me no love, not what fathers are for. My childhood, akin to something like hell. The cursing and taunting I remember quite well. I was beaten with whatever he had in his hand.

A broomstick, a board, or an old frying pan. When his workbench I'd hide, and I'd cry.

While praying to God to please let him die. Each day I lived in fear, really perplexed. I never knew what would set him off next.

I could tell no one - I had no recourse. For he threatened I'd be the cause for divorce.

My lifetime's achievements were accomplished alone.

Because for some kids, there's no place like home.

P.S. An ironic footnote: When his time came, my father died in my arms.

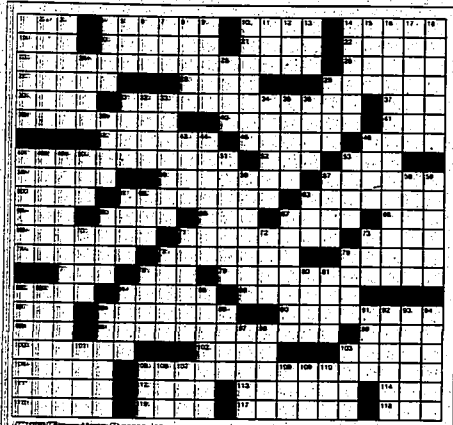

DEAR NATIVE: Your poem touched me deeply. I'm sure it will be meaningful for others who cannot give voice to the pain of their daily lives. Perhaps simply knowing that they are not alone will provide some comfort. Bless you, and them.

Dumb idea: Teen coed slumber party

Q. Which is the dumbest thing you've ever heard concerning teenagers?

A. Actually, there are two dumbest things:

The first was a coed slumber party for a group of teenagers.

According to the article, which came from a website, the coed slumber party was sweeping the country.

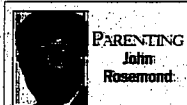

Typically, an unprovoked, uninvited act of promiscuity will have a slower emphasis on the night of a high school dance.

After the dance, the invited girls will meet at the host's home, bringing sleeping bags and "appropriate" sleepwear.

As the festivities begin, the invited girls slip into something comfortable. A floor mat on the house is suggested.

The girls are promised a search television set and popcorn or sludge to their own rooms.

They fall in sleep, sometimes in boy-girl pairs, and the next morning, sleeping bags that have been stripped together like nothing goes on.

PARENTING
John Rosemond

One parent was quoted in the story as saying, "They're not going to have sex in front of our noses, much less right under our noses!" Are today's parents really so stupid?

Apparently, some of them are.

The second dumbest thing was the first report from the federally funded (to the tune of $25 million) that once belonged to you and me, National Longitudinal Study of Adolescent Health, which surveyed some 90,000 students in grades seven through 12.

The primary finding: Teens who have strong emotional attachments to their parents are much less likely to use drugs and alcohol, attempt suicide, engage in violent behavior or become sexually active at an early age.

My reaction to this revelation was, of course, they've got to be kidding! In other words, the researchers in question spent $25 million of our tax dollars money to tell us what we already know: to wit, if you demonstrate unconditional love to a child—even if he/she does act like a jerk some times—the youngster is less likely to develop problems than a child whose parents are unaffectionate, critical and rejecting.

Jerome Class of '63 comes home again

FAMILY CIRCLE

JEROME - Thirty-five years ago, 114 Jerome High School seniors marched into the school gymnasium to receive diplomas. As a gift to the Jerome High School, the 1963 graduating class gave an almost life-size painting of the school mascot, an orange and black striped tiger painted by Georgia Klueder, mother of graduate Douglas Klueder.

"Since we were 1963 graduates, many of us served in Vietnam," said Thompson. "We are fortunate to have lost only one. There is an overall common thread among our class. We are a happy bunch and are very proud of our children who have become responsible, living adults."

Counselor foresees divorce with 80-90 percent accuracy

The Baltimore Sun

CRYSTAL CITY, Va. - The lights dim and soon two couples are arguing on a color television screen, their 26-inch-wide conversation in a noisy, irritating, embarrassing - in other words, classic married life.

One woman is upset that her husband wastes his football all weekend. "It's not right," she tells her spouse, who can only shrug and look heavenward. The other wife scolds her husband for "not once in 10 years" pouring detergent into the washing machine before putting in a load of dirty laundry.

The video ends, and Howard Markman poses the big question: "So which of these couples is going to divorce?" The audience of marriage counselors sniffs it out pretty easily: Mr. and Mrs. Tige. Their conversation was too negative, they say. At one point, the husband claims he had "not really thought" about when laundry detergent should be dispensed.

"Whatever you do," Markman says with a grin, "if you've been hearing about something for 10 years, don't tell your wife you've never thought about it."

In this case, predicting divorce was no great trick. But in his research on marriage at the University of Denver's Center for Marital and Family Studies, Markman has done much better. After 21 years, he claims he can predict with an "80 to 90 percent" certainty when newlyweds are headed for divorce.

Forecasting divorce is not his goal, of course, preventing it is. But the fact that marital strife is so predictable demonstrates what Markman espouses: Teach people how to be married, and you raise the odds of success.

"It's far easier to keep happy couples happy than rescue them from the brink of divorce," the professor says. "There's always magic and chemistry at the beginning of a relationship. The key is to help couples avoid doing things that actively erode the chemistry."

How does your relationship measure up?

Can your relationship be saved? Denver's relationship experts use this test to predict if your relationship is headed for trouble. Evaluate the following statements for yourself, not your partner, using a 3-point scale:

Nightclubs attract the 'perpetually 39'

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — A lounge singer is crooning the lyrics to Eric Clapton's "Change the World" as John Tarinelli glides onto the dance floor with a white-haired woman, his latest in a string this summer night.

The 72-year-old holds her in his arms and swings her around until the last notes of the song fade out. Grinning ear-to-ear, he escorts his partner back to her table before he finds another dance partner.

"I try to stick with people around my age. I would feel like I'm fool dancing with a lot of those young girls," he says.

At most bars, Tarinelli, with a perpetual smile and a graceful dance step, might have trouble finding women his age to dance with, but not at Chances Are.

Debbie Newman and Patrick Coughlin, an over-40-year-old couple, dance to the music of entertainer Steve York in Scottsdale, Ariz.

For the last five years, the suburban Phoenix restaurant and bar has been quietly attracting a middle-age and senior crowd intent on sharing a drink, dancing the night away and occasionally starting a romance.

Harriette Rader, the club's manager, says Chances Are didn't begin that way. In fact, the original owners hoped the name would be a reference to off-track betting.

The off-track betting never materialized, and the management has since installed a second dance floor to accommodate the busy weekend nights.

The name Chances Are has taken on a different meaning under the lighted red hearts over the main dance floor. "Nobody knows that better than Barry Finstad, 51, and Robert Kania, 53.

Three years ago they came to Chances Are separately and were introduced by friends. It was Kania's first time there. But once he met Ms. Finstad and knew she frequented the place, he started coming often.

"He was smitten at first sight," says Ms. Finstad, laughing. "Well, he's not denying it."

The couple continues to visit Chances Are, together now. And whenever possible, they spend the entire evening dancing.

Ted Bobrow, a spokesman for the American Association for Retired Persons in Washington, D.C., says clubs like Chances Are have been around for years, but more of them could be on the way.

"With people remaining healthier and more active as they age, it may become more popular," he says. "It's not so surprising when you think about it. People continue to be interested in socializing. It really knows no age boundaries."

Entertainer Steve York performs as over-40-year-old couples dance at the 'Chances Are' nightclub in Scottsdale, Ariz., this summer.

What do parents owe their kids?

When I was growing up, I guess one could say we were poor.

I can remember the various houses we lived in, and they were often pretty disreputable. Our cars (one at a time in those days) were always second-hand, and our clothes, except for those Mom made, were often hand-me-downs.

But I can't remember ever thinking that we were really poor because we only knew a couple of families that were better off than we were. I guess when everyone is poor, together, you just don't notice.

We had no fancy toys — I remember little glass cars that were filled with candy. They were heavy glass, and, after the candy was gone, we spent long hours playing in the dirt with them, even though nothing on them moved or worked.

Our toys, generally, were hand-made or pretty cheap. My first bike was second-hand, and I was 10 when I bought it with spud-picking money. I can remember how thrilled I was to be able to ride the two and one-half miles to school instead of walking.

Did our parents feel guilty because they couldn't provide more? If they did, I never knew. Did we feel deprived? I can honestly say no, because we were happy with what we got, and, besides, almost everyone we knew had about the same or less.

What we had in abundance was love. We felt cherished, cared for and protected. I don't remember ever being afraid that everything would not turn out fine. I just knew it would.

Did we work hard? You bet. Milking cows, hoeing beans, doing household chores were all a part of daily life. Did we resent it? No. It was just part of what each did to help the family.

Today, mainly because of the affluence of the times, and the influence of TV and the movies, I think young parents often feel inadequate and guilty. They feel that if they are not providing the latest gadgets for their children they are depriving them of what they need.

So very often we see greedy, demanding children that we ourselves have made because we don't want to "deprive" them of anything — especially if "little Johnny" down the street has one.

Children are excellent at laying guilt trips on us, and I know I was as glibly as the next in trying to get everything material for my own.

But what, really, do we owe our children? Do we owe them everything material that we can provide, or do we owe them something else?

My personal opinion is this: We owe our kids a good and decent life, a life in which they are not deprived of basic needs, but one in which they appreciate the hard work it takes to obtain these needs.

We owe them an education that will provide them with a decent living. We owe them examples of how to be a good worker, a good husband or wife, and a good parent.

We owe them the right to make mistakes, so that they can learn to avoid them. We, as parents, cannot "fix" everything and make it right. If we try, our children may become selfish and greedy adults, living in an unreal world.

And we owe them love most of all — which includes kindness, caring, and empathy with their problems — a love that is there for always, for all their lives.

It is a debt that will be repaid in full.

SOCIAL SECURITY Q&A

Knight Ridder News Service

Q. I have difficulty walking and my doctor has told me I must use a wheelchair. Will Medicare pay for the cost of a wheelchair?

A. Medicare Part B medical insurance helps pay for durable medical equipment such as wheelchairs, walkers and other equipment prescribed by a doctor for home use. Contact your Medicare carrier listed in "Your Medicare Handbook" for more information.

Q. My son is 20 years old. He works at a job where they pay him "under the table." I keep telling him that not only is this illegal, but it will affect his Social Security retirement benefits in the future.

He says that he'll have plenty of time to pay into Social Security to get benefits. Do you have any information I can give him to stress the importance of paying into Social Security? A. The importance of Social Security is often underestimated by young people. Many young people, like your son, only think of Social Security as a retirement program.

But, Social Security is more than retirement. Social Security also provides survivors protection worth over $300,000 to an average family and provides disability protection worth almost $200,000.

Please call Social Security at 1-800-772-1213 and request the booklets, "Understanding The Benefits" and "Basic Facts" for detailed information to give to your son.
