House elects Newcomb speaker

By Gregory Hahn Times-News writer

BOISE — In a short, moving exchange on the House floor Thursday afternoon, U.S. Rep. John H. Newcomb was elected speaker of the Idaho House of Representatives.

Jaquet, Stennett take over in party shake-up

By Gregory Hahn Times-News writer

BOISE — Thursday was a big day for Blaine County Democrats.

In upsets over longtime party leaders, Rep. Wendy Jaquet and Sen. Clint Stennett were each named minority leader in their respective houses.

"Change is difficult," Jaquet, Ketchum, said soon after emerging from the caucus meeting Thursday. "But we're at a point where change is needed."

Wendy Jaquet and Clint Stennett were named minority leaders in their respective houses Thursday.

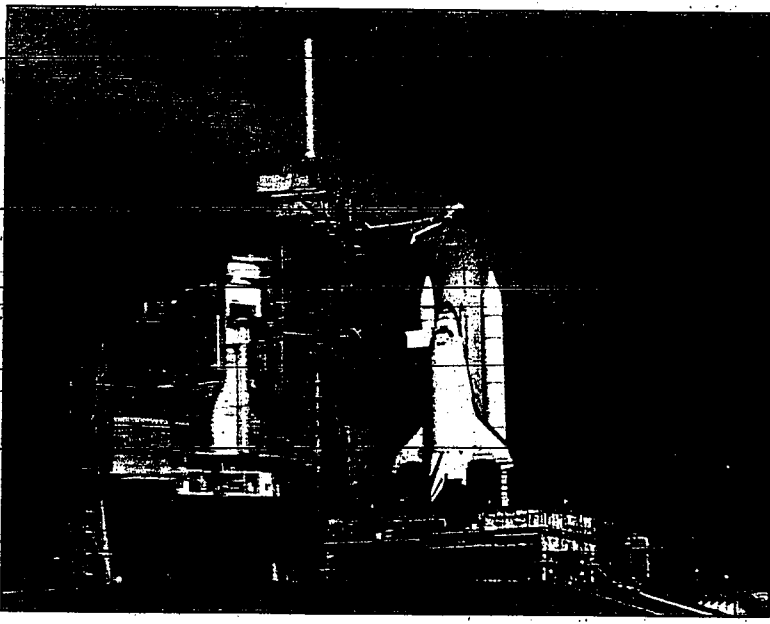

Jaquet, who unseated 18-year leader Rep. Jim Stockhoff of Sandpoint, said she sees the

Clinton opens loans for new city water standards

The Associated Press

NEWPORT, R.I. — President Clinton employed the sparkling blue Management Buy as a backdrop Thursday to announce new federal drinking water standards aimed at filtering out impurities and helping communities upgrade their treatment systems.

"When it comes to the water our children drink, Americans cannot be too vigilant," Clinton said to a crowd standing in Fort Adams State Park beside the bay. "So today I'm announcing new standards — to give our families greater peace of mind with their water."

The president announced the release of $775 million in low-interest loans to states so communities can improve their treatment systems.

The $775 million, included in the fiscal 1993 budget, provides low-interest loans to local governments that must upgrade facilities to bring them into compliance. Another $248 million is being released to state drinking water monitoring and enforcement programs. Most water treatment facilities must comply by December 2001. Smaller systems serving under 10,000 people have two more years to meet the higher standards.

New Mexico OKs shipments

But judge's order still blocks waste site

The Associated Press and States News Service

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — The state of New Mexico has removed a major impediment to the federal government meeting its first major deadline under the nuclear waste agreement Idaho Gov. Phil Batt signed three years ago.

State environmental regulators cleared specific Energy Department plutonium-contaminated waste for transfer to the $2 billion Waste Isolation Pilot Plant near Carlsbad.

The decision essentially creates a process for the government to begin moving radioactive waste that is not contaminated with other hazardous substances to the underground disposal facility.

That is critical for federal compliance with the April 30, 1993, deadline to begin moving plutonium-contaminated waste out of the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory.

Failing to meet that deadline would halt shipments of Energy Department high-level waste to the INEEL.

Thursday's news. "Craig is pleased that the New Mexico Environment Department has approved this shipment from LANL," Craig spokesman Will Hatt said. "Obtaining the (New Mexico hazardous waste permit) will be an important step for us meeting Idaho's agreement to get waste out of Idaho."

But annual transfer of radioactive-only waste to the New Mexico dump rests with U.S. District Judge John Garrett Penn in Washington, D.C., who had issued an order in August blocking any transfers until the process was developed to separate radioactive-only waste from so-called mixed-waste that is contaminated with other hazardous materials.

Today spells end of Scrabble plant

Game will continue, but factory won't make tiles

The Associated Press

FAIRFAX, Va. — Hasbro Inc. is hanging a CLOSING sign in the Milton Bradley Wood Products Co. which — for the last 20 years — churned out 4 million a day of those little wooden Scrabble tiles.

The reason is a 10-point worth business. Hasbro spokesman Mark Morris says the company began looking for the most efficient way to make each product and decided to put out of the business of producing the tiles itself. Milton Bradley is a Fairport division.

Eighty-seven people are losing their jobs after doing their part to make the little rectangles that litter coffee tables in one of every three American homes. Scrabble sells 1 million to 2 million copies in North America every year and is a 30-year-old favorite guaranteed to turn-up under Christmas trees and come out of closets during snow storms.

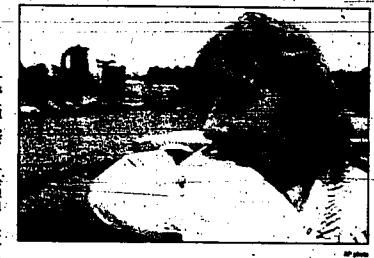

"Sometimes it was hard to believe that we still had to make them," says Harold Wright Jr., who worked at the factory for 8 1/2 years. "But the order just kept getting bigger every year."

In a testament to the game's popularity, President Clinton and his wife play Scrabble on vacation. When Americans were held hostage in Iran nearly 20 years ago, they made a Scrabble game out of paper to help pass the time.

Morris says Hasbro is still considering contractors both in the United States and overseas and hasn't decided where its tiles will come from after today.

But some folks in Fairfax find it hard to believe that a company would close one plant before finding another, and they've convinced the tiles will come from overseas.

Rose Seger ponders the imminent closure of the Milton Bradley Wood Products Co. Thursday in Fairfax, Va. She's worked there for 14 years.

QUEENSBURY, N.Y. (AP)—An 8-year-old girl who says she has HIV-positive status has finally found a troop she can call her own after seven other Girl Scout troops rejected her. Quashawn Donovan was invited to join a Brownie troop led by a man who heard news reports about the girl in this Adirondack Mountain town about 45 miles north of Albany. Quashawn's mother, Dianne Donovan, said Thursday that Quashawn is excited about joining the troop, she says she's still upset by the reactions of local troop leaders to Quashawn's membership.

Clinton gathers advice on Pollard

Israelis want spy released from prison

Jonathan Pollard
Serves prison sentence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Moving toward a swift decision in a politically explosive case, President Clinton has set a Jan. 11 deadline for law enforcement and national security officials to recommend whether to grant clemency to convicted spy Jonathan Pollard.

While Clinton promised Israel he would take a fresh look at Pollard's case, U.S. legal and intelligence communities have bitterly opposed releasing him from prison. Nevertheless, officials said Thursday they would review the matter anew.

"I have no reason to expect that there will be major changes in the advice he gets from some quarters but I think we just have to let that play out," Pentagon spokesman Kenneth Bacon said. "The Pentagon has opposed Pollard's release in the past, Bacon noted, and he said he was not aware of any new information.

National Security Council spokesman David Leavy said the president "will make a decision in a timely manner" after receiving recommendations.

Pollard, a former Navy analyst, is serving a life sentence for passing thousands of highly sensitive national security secrets to Israel in 1984 and 1985. Israeli leaders regard him as a patriot who risked his neck for Israel's security and paid a heavy price — 13 years in prison so far. Israel has granted Pollard citizenship in hopes of improving chances for his release.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu in October sought Pollard's freedom in a last-minute demand in the Mideast peace agreement at Wye River Plantation on Maryland's Eastern Shore. The issue almost derailed the accord until Clinton promised to take a fresh look at clemency.

Netanyahu's policy adviser David Bar-Ilan said in Israel, "We never comment on such decisions. We hope Pollard will be reinstated. It's an American decision."

FAA fears potential of sparks, orders airlines not to let fuel tanks run dry

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government-ordered airlines Thursday to keep fuel in the center tanks of Boeing 747s out of concern that a prematurely going part in some fuel pumps could throw off sparks if used when the tank was dry.

The Federal Aviation Administration also ordered airlines flying the 747-400 series, planes that have unique turn-up tips on their wings, to stop using a fuel tank in the base of the plane's tail for the same reason.

While investigators believe the explosion that derailed TWA Flight 800 in 1996 was caused by a spark in its empty center fuel tank, the FAA was quick to say that the accident was not caused by the part covered in Thursday's order.

"The reason we say that is because that part was recovered and there was no damage to it," said agency spokesman James Spillane.

Worldwide, there are 2,000 of the jumbo jets. The FAA orders apply immediately only to the 204 U.S. registered 747-400s. The FAA also ordered airlines to report all U.S. registrations in emergency cases.

The part involved is a pump that pumps normally operate for at least 20,000 hours before they are removed. Recently, some pilots received warnings for low fuel pressure on their displays and then saw their breakers in the cockpit. When mechanics investigated, they found pump fires only 200 hours after operation.

Houston dumps booklet for errors

HOUSTON (AP) — City officials had to throw out 2,000 full-color booklets about the mayor's youth program because they were full of typos, misspelled words and grammatical errors.

"I was horrified," Councilman Orlando Sanchez told Thursday's Houston Chronicle. "It touts education, but the number of fragmentary sentences and misspellings were astounding."

The newspaper reported that the 14-page booklet was written by Mayor Lee Brown's 567,000-a-year director for youth services, May Walker. The mayor's office said the inhouse printing costs totaled $2,100.

The cover contained a punctuation error in the mayor's name, calling him Lee P. Brown.

Inside, nearly every page contains at least one error. Among them: spelling teachers as "teach," library as "libary," millennium as "millenium," and using the word "national" for "national."

Fragmentary and incoherent sentences appear throughout the brochure.

Copies of the booklet were distributed to city offices, and an electronic version was posted on the city's Internet site, but they were hastily recalled by the mayor's staff once errors were noticed.

Jay Aiyer, chief-of-staff-for-Brown, said the booklet was published prematurely. He said a draft was submitted to the mayor's office and returned to Walker for correction of the errors, but that her office apparently thought the draft had been approved for publication.

A message left at Walker's office Thursday by The Associated Press was not returned.

Man with bizarre history rams sister's door with horse

FARMINGTON, Utah (AP) — An Idaho man well-known for his threats and bizarre conspiracy theories has been charged with trying to ram down the door of his sister's Centerville home with a horse.

Ronald Marshall was booked into the Davis County jail on Saturday after his sister called police saying Marshall had been drinking and was attacking her front door while riding a horse. Marshall has a history of mental problems, police said.

Marshall had been in an argument with his sister and her husband.

"Our understanding was that he tried to run his horse through her front door," Major said.

Marshall has been charged with attempted burglary, criminal mischief, simple assault and DUI for riding a horse while intoxicated.

Davis County Sheriff's dispatch supervisor Karen Wright first started hearing from Marshall in March. Within two months, dispatchers logged 143 calls from the 49-year-old man from Challis, and on another occasion, he sent a 67-page fax to the dispatch center.

Officials said Marshall sent letters accusing dispatchers, officers and attorneys of participating in conspiracies and committing vulgar sex acts.

The Davis County Attorney's Office took out a protective order against Marshall after he harassed a receptionist.

Deputy County Attorney Steven Major said Marshall's fixation on Northern Utah began when a Kayville woman who is Marshall's biological daughter located him in a search for her parents.

Vending supports schools

BOISE (AP) — Students may plunk only 50 cents into vending machines for candy and soda pop, but school administrators have nonetheless come to rely on vending machine money to fund student activities and programs.

Without those funds, which supplement accounts financed by districts or student fees, many nonacademic activities would be canceled, or students would be required to pay more to participate, administrators say.

"Students pay minimal activity fees," Lowell Scott Middle School Principal Karen Ritchie said.

At Ritchie's school, vending machine money amounts to about $7,000 for the Meridian school, funding incentive awards, school assemblies, student certificates and school signs.

Lawmakers consider Internet sales tax

BOISE (AP) — State legislators have been encouraged to create a plan to make sure Idaho gets its fair share of the tax from Internet sales, estimated at $30 billion worldwide.

Dan Bucks, a member of the Multistate Tax Commission, told legislators at the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho conference Wednesday that states need to adopt uniform, multistate taxing procedures to collect the sales tax.

If they do not, businesses may start looking toward the Internet as a haven from the sales tax, weakening considerably the base for the tax, Bucks said.

Bucks predicts that within five years a quarter to half of all sales could come through the Internet. He quoted one MIT economics professor who predicted that by 2010 half of retail sales will arise because of competition from

Internet sales

Idaho currently taxes Internet sales from those companies that exceed a minimum threshold of business in the state.

The ideal solution would be for Congress to adopt a uniform system that exempts small sellers and establishes uniform rates, Bucks said, but the Supreme Court has rejected similar attempts due to complex state sales tax laws.

Court convicts Idaho man in bank scam

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Executives of the Bank of San Pedro in California, including an Idaho Panhandle man, have been convicted on federal charges of defrauding the bank of millions of dollars and contributing to the institution's demise.

Chief executive officer, president and bank director Lance Darryl Oak of San Pedro, regional vice president Keith Michael Congleton of Sandpoint and attorney William Peter George Double of Torrance, Calif., were accused of setting up Real Estate Financial Instruments Exchanges Inc. — a bogus company used to buy groups of mortgage loans.

The defendants then sold the loans to the bank at an inflated price.

Money earned from the sale was laundered through bank accounts in Hong Kong, England, Switzerland and Mexico, federal prosecutors said.

After losing $2.3 million in the deal, the bank was ordered closed in July 1994 by the California State Banking Department.

Congleton was also found guilty of four counts of bank fraud.

A herdsman leading camels loaded with Kenya's only mobile library arrives Tuesday in the village of Bulla Itin, 240 miles north-east of Nairobi, Kenya. The camels are used to carry the mobile library to reach children on roads impassable for even 4x4 vehicles.

Camels carry books to isolated children

Kenya's mobile library goes places. 4x4s can't reach

BULLA IFTIN, Kenya (AP) — The camels arrived Tuesday while 10-year-old Sahara Mount Abdi sat in a tent reading about Kenyan geography — from a book the animals had just delivered.

"It is a good book," the fourth-grader said. "It has good stories from many places."

Sahara was among two dozen ethnic Somali schoolchildren who had gathered under an acacia tree to wait for Kenya's only Mobile-Camel Library. Two camels had delivered 200 books in four wooden boxes to Bulla Itin, Somali for "village that is becoming enlightened." A third camel refused to carry a load, and straddled leisurely at the rear of the little convoy that wound through the bush of northern Kenya.

As soon as the tent was pitched and the books displayed on wooden shelves, the waiting children plopped down on thick grass mats that were also used to cushion the loads the camels carried. "All of you will have to tell me what you have read," librarian Joseph Otieno said in Swahili. The children chose from novels, picture books and educational texts, and read for the next two hours, some occasionally seeking Otieno's help with difficult English words.

The children speak Somali with their families and learn in both Swahili and English in school. In 1996, Wycliffe S.O. Oluch, the Kenya National Library Service's head librarian in Garissa District, was seeking an efficient and inexpensive way of delivering books from the main library in Garissa town, about 240 miles east of Nairobi, to outlying villages and nomadic settlements.

The roads in the region are so bad even four-wheel drive vehicles get stuck in the sand. The inhabitants are spread thinly in clusters of dome-like thatch huts or are on the move in search of pasture for their goats, cattle and camels. Vehicles were impractical and too expensive, Camels, Oluch said, were the natural choice.

"We also wanted to use something that was common and already with the local community," he said. "Camels are widely used in semi-arid northern Kenya because of their ability to carry heavy loads over long distances without requiring water. They also provide meat and milk, and are easy to manage."

Genie, normally shy, was brought to Bulla Itin, said Oluch, who is predominantly Muslim, and the camel in question.

"They say if you look at a camel from a certain angle, the camel speaks Arabic in Swahili," Oluch said.

But only third-through seventh-graders can take time from school in session. During vacation, everyone is on their own terms.

"First and second-graders are not mature enough, and eighth-graders are getting ready to leave school, which would make it difficult for us to reach them," Oluch said.

Muhammed Farah, a teacher at Bulla Itin Primary School, said the camel library supplements what the children read in school but broadens their access to information.

By now, however, the camel library is the only one. Garissa is the only library capital in northern Kenya that has a library to supply the books.

Russians may resort to printing more rubles

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia's currency slid to its lowest point in months Thursday amid fears that the nation has started printing money to make up for a loss in foreign aid.

The ruble's fall came a day after International Monetary Fund chief Michel Camdessus left Moscow without promising to free up frozen loans that Russia badly wants to dig itself out of its latest economic crisis.

Without the money, dealers warned Thursday, Russia's government has run out of alternatives to printing rubles. Some reported signs that the money-printing has already begun.

Printing money can cause high inflation. But Russia owes billions of dollars to workers, pensioners and foreign creditors and has warned repeatedly that it would resort to printing money unless it gets more foreign loans.

The Central Bank cried to support the currency. Thursday, spending hard-currency reserves to buy rubles on the currency market — a move that usually increases the demand for the ruble and drives its rate back up.

Despite the bank's efforts, traders said the currency still fell to its lowest rate since September 20 to the dollar, from 19.1 on Wednesday.

The IMF and other lenders froze a $22.6 billion aid package to Russia after the government defaulted on its treasury debt and devalued the ruble in August.

The speaker of the lower house of parliament called Thursday for breaking with the IMF and cranking up the money-printing process.

"Look how they are mocking our government, sending our group after another," said Gennady Seleznev, a Communist.

Bomb in western Algeria kills 14

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — A bomb exploded at a market in western Algeria on Thursday, killing 14 people and injuring 23 in the sixth attack in a week.

The explosion took place in Ein Delfa, about 80 miles west of Algiers, police said. They gave no other details, and hospital officials could not immediately be reached.

The attack came despite a visit by U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan that was aimed at ending violence in the divided Western Sahara that borders Algeria.

The Muslim holy month of Ramadan, which begins on Dec. 20 this year, has been marred by waves of violence since an insurgency erupted in 1992 after Algeria's military-backed government canceled elections Islamic fundamentalists were poised to win. This year has been no exception.

A mother cries in the arms of a Roman Catholic nun after the remains of her child were found Thursday at the orphanage in Manila, Philippines.

Flames kill dozens in Philippine orphanage

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Trapped behind metal window grates, children screamed for help as the flames drew closer. Neighbors frantically tugged at the padlocked main gate but could not break in.

The result was a tragedy. A pre-dawn fire tore through an aging orphanage in Manila on Thursday, killing at least 28 people, mostly children. Two other children were missing and presumed dead.

Investigators said faulty electrical wiring may have triggered the blaze.

The dozens of children at the Catholic-run Babay Kalinga orphanage had been looking forward to a Christmas party on Friday. Instead, the Christmas decorations were scattered, along with toys and children's clothes, among the burned debris.

"I'm afraid my playmates were burned," said Brian De Mesa, 5, who survived along with his twin brother. "I saw their burned bodies. I don't want to go back."

About 70 people were inside the orphanage in a slum area of Manila's Paco district when the fire broke out at 2 a.m., fire officials said, adding that three-fourths of the orphanage was already ablaze when they arrived.

"We couldn't even go near because of the intense heat," said Maj. Fabito Cordeta, operations chief of the Manila Fire Department. "A few seconds after we arrived, part of the roof collapsed."

Thirteen dead children were found huddled together in one room. In another, a dead adult was found clinging to two children, all charred beyond recognition.

Rescuers gingerly lifted the bodies of small infants wrapped in blankets from the remains of the orphanage, which includes a two-story main structure and two cottages, all built between 1953 and 1977.

Staff members said the fire spread so quickly that they did not have time to rescue many children.

"I was sleeping on the ground floor when I was woken up," said Corina Bellosillo, a teacher. "Already, the ceiling was on fire and the stairs going up to the second floor were burning. I wanted to go upstairs to save the babies, but my companions pulled me back."

The orphanage also cared at night for children of working parents, who slept outside while they waited for word of their children.

"It was my only joy," said Anabel Sambrano, 21, whose 48-month-old boy died in the blaze. "I heard about the fire on the radio and rushed here, but it was too late. I want my baby."

President Joseph Estrada visited the gutted building Thursday afternoon and pledged to help the orphanage recover. "I will raise funds personally. I will do everything I can to rebuild this place," he said.

Faulty equipment or lax enforcement of fire regulations are responsible for many deadly fires in the Philippines.

Police arrest 11 for fire at wedding

CALCUTTA, India (AP) — Police arrested 11 people Thursday after they set fire to a tent at a Calcutta museum where an industrial tycoon's son was getting married.

Members from the youth wing of the opposition Congress party set the fire to protest the government's decision to let steel magnate Lakshmi Mittal celebrate the wedding of his son there. No one was injured.

The protesters had shouted slogans before committing the arson, saying the party Mittal put on Wednesday night at the grounds would damage the museum.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Survivors celebrate news of trial

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands — Survivors of the Bosnian war's worst massacre expressed joy Thursday that a top Serb military leader charged with orchestrating the killings would soon stand trial.

Gen. Ratislav Mladic was arrested Wednesday by 155 members of the NATO peacekeeping force in Bosnia. He is the only senior Serb military officer accused of war crimes.

He arrived late Thursday at The Hague, where the Yugoslav war crimes tribunal has indicted him in October on charges of genocide, war crimes and crimes against humanity. An arraignment date has not been set.

Guards kill 8 ethnic Albanians

HELRITSADE, Yugoslavia — In the worst breach of the Kosovo cease-fire, Yugoslav border guards killed eight ethnic Albanians on Thursday, adding new urgency to the efforts of the U.S. State Dept. to bring to a permanent peace.

Several other ethnic Albanians were reported to be in custody. Christopher Hill presented Serbian Foreign Minister Milosevic with a request plan for the future of the Serb province.

Hill said some reports suggest being made, but warned that one was a premium because of

China: Dissidents deserve arrest

BEIJING — Two prominent dissidents arrested this week are suspected of endangering national security, China's government said Thursday in the clearest sign yet that it intends to block their campaign to form an opposition party.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Zhu Bangzao refused to say how Xu Wenli and Qin Yongmin endangered the state or specify what laws they broke. The arrests Monday of Xu and Qin and the accusations against them and Wang were the sharpest action Chinese leaders have taken since dissidents began pushing to set up and legally register the opposition party in June.

Religious council averts boycott

HARARE, Zimbabwe — The World Council of Churches began its 50th anniversary assembly Thursday with multicultural pomp and a worship service that Orthodox church delegates from Russia and Greece refused to attend.

The festivities opened with a sermon and a trumpet heralding a biblical reading from Leviticus 25: "You shall harrow me this year and you shall proclaim liberty throughout the land to all its inhabitants."

North Ireland politicians dash hopes of deal

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Northern Ireland's major Protestant and Catholic parties clashed Thursday, hours after apparently agreeing on the next steps toward making April's peace agreement a reality.

Rival wings of Irish Catholic opinion, the moderate Social Democratic and Labor Party and militant Sinn Fein, accused the British Protestant party, the Ulster Unionists, of retreating from commitments made early Thursday in negotiations.

The Irish prime minister, Bertie Ahern, had planned to travel to Belfast to demonstrate support for the package.

EDITORIAL

It's time to punt as debts rise for university athletics programs

Let's see if we've got this straight. Intercollegiate sports at the University of Idaho lost $329,000 during the last fiscal year. The sports program at Idaho State University is expected to lose more than $200,000 in the current fiscal year.

That's what the schools reported to the state Board of Education last month. Now the board wants to know why the athletic programs are spending money they don't have.

It's a good question. This is real money — more than half a million dollars that someone will have to pay — for the sake of playing games against other schools.

Sports money isn't necessarily public money, thanks to the largesse of booster clubs and alumni associations, but that's not the point.

The real issue is whether Idahoans are satisfied with the thousands of dollars in sports debts. Idaho is a small, fiscally conservative state that's kept education and school sports in perspective. The former is essential, but the latter is a luxury.

Sports programs have traditionally been modest here because money is tight and we cherish well-rounded minds over well-muscle bodies.

Though the results are the same, sports programs in Moscow and Pocatello are hemorrhaging money for different reasons. Without getting too technical, ISU can't win for losing. Both the football coach and the athletic director got fired recently. Meanwhile, some of ISU's "student-athletes" find their way into courtrooms as often as opponents' end zones.

ISU's sports programs are victims of bungling and fan apathy, but the University of Idaho's losses stem from delusions of grandeur. A few years ago, the school decided that NCAA Division 1-A wasn't a big enough stage for its talents — so it applied for Division 1-A status and joined the Big West Conference.

Hubbub. Big name competition and more exposure. Playing Division 1-A ball also means big-league expenses, which is why the Vandals are running in the red.

In fairness, the losses stem from lost game revenues while waiting for 1-A status.

Big schools didn't want to play the Vandals because those games wouldn't have counted toward bowl invitations.

Still, getting sacked for a loss while awaiting hefty gains in the future strikes us as poor policy for our state universities. Idahoans expect sound fiscal management from public institutions, so maybe it's time for an intentional grounding — rather than another fumble.

The issue is whether Idahoans are satisfied with how their three universities running up hundreds of thousands of dollars in sports debts.

Prisons equal pork in politicians' eyes

Six prisoners break out of a Texas state prison in Huntsville, one goes awry, and the Department of Corrections responds by suspending a work program for prisoners. Not that the work program had anything to do with the escape — the prisoners were in the station yard at the time. But why should we expect the decision to make any sense? Nothing else about the American prison system does.

In the current issue of The Atlantic Monthly is a major investigation of just how out of control and increasingly corrupt America's prison system is. But in order to understand the mistakes being made in responding to the cry for more prisons, you first have to understand why we think we need them.

Eric Schlosser reports: "The prison boom of the United States is a recent phenomenon. Throughout the first three-quarters of this century, the nation's incarceration rate remained relatively stable, at about 110 persons per 100,000 people. In the mid-1970s, the rate began to climb, doubling in the 1980s and then again in the 1990s. The rate is now 445 per 100,000. Among adult men, it is 1,100 per 100,000. During the past two decades, roughly a thousand new prisons and jails have been built in the United States. Nevertheless, America's prisons are more overcrowded now than when the building spree began, and the inmate population continues to grow, by 50,000 to 80,000 a year."

has actually fallen during the prison boom: in 1980, about half the people entering state prison were violent offenders, in 1995, less than a third had been convicted of a violent crime.

The enormous increase in America's inmate population is the direct consequence of the sentences given to non-violent offenders — mostly drug offenders. Crimes that in other countries would lead to community service, fines or drug treatment (or would not be crimes at all) are punished here with increasingly long prison terms, the most expensive of all possible options.

industrial complex is a set of bureaucratic, political and economic interests that encourage increased spending on prisons, regardless of actual need. "It is not a conspiracy, it is a confluence of special interests — politicians, both liberal and conservative, who have used fear of crime to gain votes; impoverished rural areas where prisons have become a cornerstone of economic development; private companies that regard the roughly $35 billion spent each year on corrections not as a burden on American taxpayers but as a lucrative market; and government officials whose political careers have expanded along with the inmate population."

The prison-industrial complex includes some of the nation's largest architectural and construction firms, Wall Street investment banks and companies that sell everything from security cameras to padded cells available in a "vast color selection."

Perhaps the most alarming conclusion is that the prison-industrial complex is not just a set of interest groups and institutions. "It is also a state of mind. The lure of big money is corrupting the nation's criminal-justice system, replacing notions of public service with a drive for higher profits. The eagerness of legislators to pass 'tough-on-crime' legislation — combined with their unwillingness to disclose the true costs of these laws — has encouraged all kinds of financial inproprieties."

And naturally, Texas is cited as a prime example. Molly Ivins is a columnist for the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Is winning that important?

How many readers spotted the real story on the sports page the other day? It wasn't that the College of Southern Idaho International Volleyball team won again, it was a small article at the bottom of the page. Someone finally said loud and clear, and The Times-News reported it. Chants of USA, USA represent the feelings of many, many residents in the Magic Valley.

How old are these women that CSI recruits? How many years of club-college ball have they played before they become CSI freshmen? Have they completed pre-education to qualify as college students? How do they maintain eligibility when they can barely speak the English language?

Who is paying for their education — can they all be from wealthy foreign families? What benefit will we get from "tax" investment in them when they fail to advance our future as teachers, scientists, mothers and college supporters? Will next year's team have six foreign starters?

Mr. Stroud has proved that he's a fair, open-minded, proctor and promoter. But what is happening to all of our local and even regional USA talent?

Website is a valuable resource

What a great website! I was in search of an ordinary from two weeks ago and your site made everything so easy to find.

Kudos to your designer: ELIZABETH CALVOY Lake Elsinore, Calif.

God loves those who believe

To Bert Eames, regarding your "Bible" (as you put it) as to why it is that Christians are so hypocritical and why it is that Christianity is so "evil."

It's evident that you do not understand Christianity in all. All you can do is point out the so-called "flying tongue" of God and mistakes that people make. All people have fear of God, including Christians. That is why we all are in here.

Real Christians do not have homosexual practices. Real Christians do not use God's grace as a license to sin. Real Christians love, forgive and try to live up to what they believe, although we are not always perfectly successful at doing so.

So why are you blaming a holy, righteous God for the mistakes of men?

Yes, the Bible is full of murder and bloodshed, so is the nightly news. God didn't give us the Bible to paint a beautiful picture of an ugly world.

Mr. Eames, God loves you and wants you to see his love for you in Jesus' death on the cross. He died for the sins of the whole world. John 3:16 says it best: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Please accept him today.

Sidewalks save innocent lives

Kudos to the City Council for getting something done at the high school about the cross-walk and making our streets safer!

My 7-year-old daughter was hit on Filer and Quincy the same day as young Mr. Bobbs. I attended the City Council meeting in hopes of something being done about that area of Filer as well as at the high school.

All I am asking is for someone from the city to assess the situation. Do you know that the kids that walk to school from Jefferson on down are walking in the street and aren't a sidewalk on one side of the road?

Do you know that oftentimes, people are speeding down the street, concentrating on getting to work, school or wherever and not paying attention to children that may be trying to cross to get to the side where there is a sidewalk? The city is concerned about saving a buck where it can, but I hope it isn't at the expense of our little ones as well.

My daughter is 7 years old, and I can't begin to describe the terror that I felt when I got that phone call to come to the scene of an accident, your daughter has been hit by a vehicle! I got there and she was lying in the street, lights flashing, my other daughter crying, and saying how it happened so fast! My 7-year-old still has the effects of the two skull fractures she suffered, and I certainly am not placing blame on the man that hit her — she was late for school and hurrying to cross to get to the sidewalk — and there you have it. Please, City Council, do something something out of our side of Filer... well! Aren't our children worth it? RAMONA SEITZINGER Twin Falls

I cannot help but feel President Clinton has the most comical position in America. I am certain that before he retires for the day to his private quarters in the White House, he pauses, begins to laugh and think "got'em again."

I grew up in Twin Falls, but have since moved away as a service member.
Over the past eight years, my wife and I have had the opportunity to live in several states, and I have had the opportunity to visit several countries throughout the world. I have been limited in my ability to keep up with what's happening in my hometown over these years.
It seems strange that now that I'm so far away from home as a person can be, I am able to actually read my hometown paper via the Internet. Technology is a wonder to behold.
Being in a nation with such limited freedom makes a person deeply grateful for the blessings of liberty we Americans often take for granted.
Being here at this time of year makes me think often of my family. I have had to leave behind temporarily to perform my duties. I find myself noticing the little things that make life what it is.
It is a pleasure to be able to read the paper I grew up with. It reminds me of my home and family.

Beware of hog farms
Unlimited hogs and dairies—why?
The Twin Falls County commissioners can't deny the hog factory on Dec. 7 without a costly lawsuit because of state law? Ask Gooding County.
Twin Falls County commissioners have virtually no control over the odor, flies, sewage facilities and sewage land application of hogs and dairy factories?
The United States Environmental Protection Agency and Idaho Department of Environmental Quality have delegated virtually all responsibility for animal factory sewage to the Idaho State Department of Agriculture?
The same Idaho State Department of Agriculture who had its Director Takasugi running to be president of the Farm Bureau while he had the sole ludicrous signatory responsibility on the nefarious "Dairy Waste Guidelines"?
The Dairy Waste Guidelines your legislators approved before they had the benefit of input from the public, the counties and the municipalities.
The same Dairy Waste Guidelines that still have no supervised land-application criteria for raw sewage or the associated odor.
At this very moment, an animal factory-friendly set of non-dairy animal waste rules is being negotiated behind closed doors by your state agencies based on input from the animal-factory industry.
They can grow with virtually no restraints anywhere on agricultural-zoned land until state laws are passed to empower your county and municipal elected officials to initiate a moratorium on the further unbridled growth of this abusive industry and bring it under control as you see fit?
Right-on Farm legislation and misused emergency Temporary Rule Legislation, et al., have rendered you and your local elected officials helpless against this industry.
Last year a few brave souls stopped several bad bills and their sponsors: Property Rights (Rep: Kempton); Consumptive Water Use (Lewis Eller), Right to Use (Rep: Strubbs). They will be back, so you had better support new state legislation to stop this industry during the next legislative session or accept total defeat.
Contact your municipal, county and state elected officials and find out how to participate and support new legislation now to stop this invasive problem that is a threat to our traditional agriculture and our future quality of life in southern Idaho.
As the publicity unfolds on this new restrictive legislation during December and January, get involved and, better yet, go to Boise this winter with your municipal and county officials and make yourself heard in front of your state legislators.
The animal-factory lobby will!

Having just read your editorial on the Jerome School bond proposal, several things come to mind.
Would you consider these facts:
That Jerome schools are seriously overcrowded and this condition is affecting everyone who lives in Jerome County?
That passing the school bond has been a uphill battle from the start? Those concerned about our schools have spent a great deal of time and effort to identify, educate and notify the taxpayers of the problems and the cause.
By virtue of three failed attempts to pass this bond, these citizens are well aware of the voting video, and I need not remind you that a majority of those voting agreed with the need for a new school all three times!
That Jerome County supports the College of Southern Idaho International with property taxes that could better serve the residents of Jerome by use in our own schools.
Makes no mistake, the college was and is a good idea, but we need to prepare the students of Jerome in order for them to effectively use those facilities; and with 500-plus students using a school built for 250, it puts the staff and students at a definite disadvantage.
We need help!
Your paper's editorial sounds negative and upper-handed. We who support the school bond are open to all the positive help we can get.
We would thank you in the future when you decide to impart to us some of your wisdom that you respond with the positive and proactive aspects of our situation and not the big city "ours is better" attitude you so often report.

Jerome council tables animal ordinance

JEROME - After it drew criticism at a meeting Tuesday, the Jerome City Council has tabled a proposed ordinance to limit residents to three pet animals. The City Council is not sending the ordinance back to the planning and zoning commission, city administrator Jon Cecil said. The current animal control ordinance will remain in place. It allows any combination of four dogs or cats or in a residential property. A kennel permit is required to keep more animals, but the permits are issued only in commercial zones.

TFHS stage set for state drama meet

TWIN FALLS - Hundreds of Idaho high school students will compete in the state drama competition that begins at 10 a.m. today at Twin Falls High School. Students will compete in solo or ensemble performances of original or published pieces. And they will enter technical competitions that include set design, lighting and other aspects of stage production. The meet will conclude Saturday evening.

City to auction about 50 bikes Saturday

TWIN FALLS - Almost 50 bicycles, three cars and miscellaneous items are up for auction Saturday at the Twin Falls Police Department. Many of the bikes were found and never claimed by the owner, so the police auction them to raise money. The cars and the bikes, which include mountain bikes, dirt bikes and 10-speeds, will go to the highest bidder. The auction begins at 1 p.m. in the police garage at 356 Third Ave. E.

Ski Patrol looks for help at Pomerelle

ALBION - The National Ski Patrol is looking for more volunteers to help patrol Pomerelle Ski Area. The nonprofit organization provides patrolling at resorts around the country, and patrol members work several days a month promoting safe skiing and rescuing injured skiers. To become a member of the patrol, people must take and pass a 50-hour class on outdoor emergency care, and know how to ski on any condition. People will have to buy some materials for the class.

Kimberly man wins $6,000 with scratcher

BURLEY - Max Wheeler of Kimberly considers Mr. Gas a lucky place to buy lottery tickets. He won $6,000 on the Double Doubler scratch ticket last week when he decided to purchase tickets at the Mr. Gas while on his lunch break. In 1995, Wheeler won $1,000 on the scratch game Money to Burn, which he also bought at a Mr. Gas station. On his most recent winning, Wheeler bought a string of nine Double Doubler tickets and won on the first ticket by matching three 1,500 numbers. The prize level box revealed "double doubler," which quadrupled his prize to $6,000. There are no remaining top prizes available for the Double Doubler in the Idaho Lottery ends a scratch game once the last top prize has been claimed. As of Tuesday, players had 180 days to claim any Double Doubler prize.

Judge orders psychiatric evaluation

Rape suspect in Burley case to undergo examination despite protests

By David Lee Times-News writer
BURLEY - A Gooding man, charged in connection with the July 30 rape of a Burley woman, will undergo a psychiatric evaluation against his will, District Judge Monte Carlson ruled Thursday. The trial is scheduled to begin Dec. 14, and the evaluation is not expected to change that timetable. Dean Allen Harrell, 33, is charged with breaking into the victim's house at around 3 a.m. July 30 and beating her while raping her, court documents said. The victim's eyes were swollen shut. When police reached Harrell in Okley the following morning, he was wearing clothes with blood stains on them. Harrell pleaded innocent to the rape charges at his Sept. 11 arraignment. Bond is set at $150,000. Kerry McMurray, Harrell's attorney, filed a motion Nov. 25 for Harrell to have a psychiatric evaluation. McMurray told Carlson Thursday that Harrell has been withholding information from him, and McMurray wanted to be sure Harrell know what was happening to him. "If the defendant lacks understanding of what's going on in the trial, then he needs a psychiatric evaluation," McMurray said. Cassia County Deputy Prosecutor Howard Sawyer argued against the motion, saying Harrell knows what is happening. "This is just an unimpeachable defendant who chooses not to work when he can't," he said. Harrell also said he did not want the examination, and said his attorneys were not working with him.

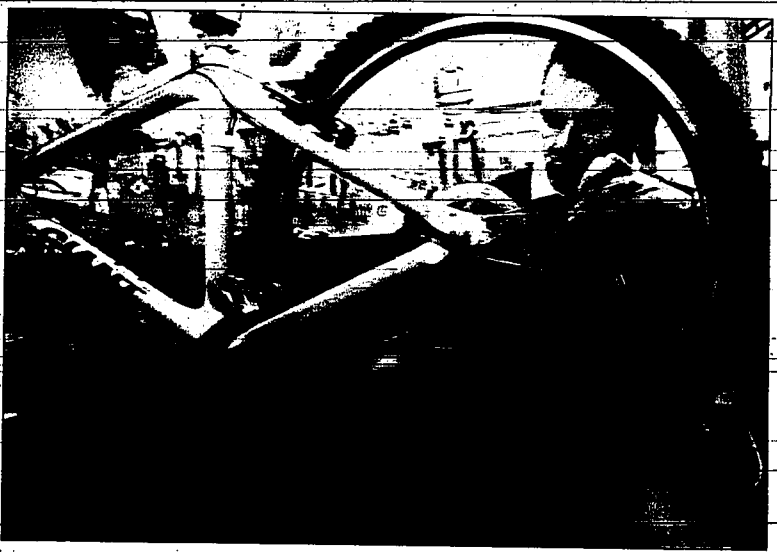

"They're the ones saying I'm holding something back," he told Carlson. "I'm innocent and it's their job to believe me. The evidence presents itself." Carlson said he would grant McMurray's motion for an examination, but was more open with McMurray's other requests. Carlson admitted as evidence a video-taped interview between Cassia County Sheriff's detective Randy Kidd and Harrell. In the interview, conducted the morning after the alleged rape, Harrell

Veteran police sergeant gives up badge to buy bike shop

By Brian Haynes Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS - When he became a police officer, Tom Parker lived to work the streets. He would have done it 24 hours a day if he had the choice. But after 14 years of police work, eight with the Twin Falls Police Department, the enthusiasm faded and he realized he had to make a change. After much agonizing, Parker decided to chase the American dream. The sergeant left the security of a regular paycheck and bought Blue Lakes Cycles.

Tom Parker fine-tunes a mountain bike in his shop on Blue Lakes Boulevard Thursday. After working eight years working for the Twin Falls Police Department, Parker is taking on a new challenge, owning Blue Lakes Cycles.

"I like being home every night," Parker said, "I like putting the kids to bed and getting up with them in the morning."

You can't put a value on that. That's what life's about. Being there for your family. And that's something Parker the police officer had little time for. Long into night, Parker often found his eyes between seeing his wife, son and two stepdaughters.

"People say it's not the quantity of time, it's the quality of time," he said. Please see PEDALS, Page B3

Company won't cover defense of sexual harassment charges

By Pat Marcantonio Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS - An Iowa insurance company claims its policy doesn't cover the defense of sexual harassment lawsuits filed against a Twin Falls couple and their business. The United Fire & Casualty Co. of Cedar Rapids wants a 5th District Court to rule to that effect. The company filed the request last month against Ed E. and Donna Eldredge and their business, R.V. Park Map Inc., which produces campground directories. "They are trying to get out of paying," said Ed Eldredge about the insurance lawsuit. United Fire & Casualty said it denied any obligation to further defend R.V. Park Map against the harassment claims or to pay any resulting damages, under the terms of the insurance policy. The company wants the court to rule that United Fire & Casualty has no liability, and to delay further action on the harassment lawsuit until the issues it raised have been tried upon. Ed and Donna Eldredge and R.V. Park Map were sued by Opal L. Palmer of Twin Falls in April in 5th District Court. Palmer claimed Ed Eldredge

Hemingway festival plans draw attention

By Susan Bailey Times-News correspondent
STAN VALLEY - Members of the 100th Street Hemingway Centennial Celebration in the Stan Valley-Ketchum Chamber of Commerce Vacation Planning Committee already received dozens of phone calls from around the country.

To get involved
Contributors wanting to promote events for the Stan Valley-Ketchum Chamber of Commerce call (208) 738-3622 or (208) 594-2927.

Tourists, scholars, and writers have expressed an interest in the celebration scheduled for the 10th birthday of the Nobel Prize-winning author, Jack Kerouac. Kerouac, former director of the chamber. The author is named twice a year as a patron for the Stan Valley resort area. The writer, Kerouac traveled to live there in 1955. Hemingway's wife was born on July 21, 1901, and killed herself at his Ketchum home in 1961. He was a frequent visitor to Stan Valley on the resort's early days. He wore part of "A Farewell to Arms" while staying at the Stan Valley Lodge, and frequently hunted and fished in the region, often with his children or Bullwinkle Indians. The chamber is sponsoring a group of organizations planning more than a week's worth of memorial events including plays and readings and is removing Hemingway school. Among the scheduled events: "The Author's Hemingway's Chamber of Commerce Summer Institute in Stan Valley. The program for high school teachers statewide will focus on Hemingway and the birth of modernism." Community Library lectures will cover the politics of the 1920s and the music of the early 20th century. A production of "The Last Flapper," an enactment from the life of Hemingway's friend Zelda Fitzgerald, will run July 25 to 31 and Aug. 5 to 8 at the Library Theatre in Hailey. The New Theatre Company of Ketchum plans to stage the play "Paper" on July 26. Director David Harnick said he also hoped to work with the Magic Lantern Cinema to present a festival of movies adapted from Hemingway short stories and novels. Writing contests could be held, including contests for middle school and high school students. A posthumous book, edited by Hemingway's 42-year-old son, Patrick, and scheduled for publication in 1999, could be featured in a reading at the Community Library. More ideas may be in the works, including a tour of the Hemingway House in Ketchum, renaming a street in the author's honor, gathering old friends who knew Hemingway, and exhibiting historic photography of Hemingway's life. Many events will not be finalized until March 1999, Walker said.

Burley schools share traditions

By Lorraine Cavener Times-News writer
BURLEY - Long ago a poor Mexican family who had no gift to give the Christ child picked some weeds. When they set them on the altar on Christmas Day, the weeds turned to poinsettias. The tradition of giving the poinsettia grew to become important in Hispanic culture. The tradition was shared Thursday between two Burley schools. I AM Learning TWD Learn, a private Christian school, joined with the Newcomer Center which shares the same building. The private school teaches academic subjects, and a process of learning. The Newcomer Center teaches English to children who know little or no English. The two schools, in the former Southwest Elementary School building, traded bits of their cul-Rayetta Wright, a teacher at I AM Learning TWD Learn private school in Burley, helps Danielle Wright, her daughter and student, while Amy Anderson works on her project. They are making Christmas stars, as the group learns Christmas traditions.

Jackpot sewer problem raises concern

By Sam Feldman
Times-News correspondent

JACKPOT, Nev. — Lynn Forsburg of Elko County Community Development warned commissioners that the state of Nevada will send commissioners a letter concerning nitrate problems in Jackpot's sewer lagoon.

Monitoring wells are allowed to show up to parts per million of nitrates, Forsburg said. Current levels are 17 parts per million, up from 5 parts per million a few months ago.

Several factors could cause the problem and several methods could solve the problem. Forsburg said his office and the state have been working closely to come up with the best solution.

Commissioner Roberta Skelton asked whether the community development group actually planned on changing the lagoon system.

"It makes sense to do it right," Forsburg said. "We need to take whatever action is necessary."

Commissioners agreed the problem needs to be solved for the long term.

Forsburg said sewer lagoon monitoring wells have had no effect on drinking water, which is of good quality.

In other business, Jackpot is one small step closer to a public and school library.

The Elko County School District, the library system and county commissioners have been considering combining the libraries to better serve students and residents. The school district is working on a proposal to present to commissioners.

Jackpot is served by a bookmobile, which arrives twice per month, and the school library is at least one third too small for the school.

HOLD YOUR HORSES

A horse trots alongside Morten Livestock Inspector Eric McCaffree's station wagon as he inspects a horse. The horse was one of two that escaped from a pasture and narrowly avoided being struck by traffic on U.S. 92, while also eluding passersby who tried to capture them. McCaffree, who heard a report that the horses were loose, stepped out with his hand and escorted the wayward equines down a side road to a nearby corral, where they could be held until the owner could collect them.

Water line ownership issue confuses Hagerman council

By Gina Mulder
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — An incident involving two dead muskrats trapped in a south end drainage and irrigation pipe didn't just raise the system's water level; it raised questions about who owns the damaged water line.

A wastewater pipe on the east end of South Avenue — plugged by the two wayward creatures and several tree roots — forced water out of the line, spilling it over two blocks along the south end of East Avenue last week, Hagerman Superintendent Richard Scroggs told City Council members Tuesday night.

While city officials wade through the legal issues, Mayor James Norwood said "minorities and pedestrians should use caution while traveling along the stretch of South Avenue, until repairs are completed."

"It could be a hazard for someone who isn't aware of what's going on over there," Norwood said.

The line in question doubles as a drainage line and an irrigation system to a few south end residents. Repairing the system should be simple, requiring the removal and replacement of about 200 feet of 12-inch pipe. The cost is estimated at $2,800.

But before repairs can begin, city crews must shut off water flowing through the pipe, a little less than 30 gallons per minute. This provision is, across areas of concern where the water is contaminated.

City engineer Don Shover said he would contact residents to establish a water user association if any legal claims over ownership in the system become necessary.

Shover says the water user association would be responsible for the water, but he is not sure if the residents are ready to take on the responsibility of a water user association.

"The water user association would be responsible for the water, but he is not sure if the residents are ready to take on the responsibility of a water user association."

Explosion injures worker, shuts down Moab road

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The main highway leading to the popular redrock recreation mecca of Moab was closed today Thursday after a fuel pipeline ruptured and exploded, hospitalizing a worker and damaging the roadway.

Traffic was rerouted from U.S. 191 to State Road 126 until a 30-foot, red-orange trench burned out and crews could repair the singed pavement. Utah Highway Patrol and Grand County officials said.

The road was expected to be reopened by 9 a.m. MST today, Julie Centa, a spokeswoman for D. Williams Companies, the Tulsa, Okla.-based energy company that owns the pipeline, said the cause of the explosion was still under investigation late Thursday.

Construction crews for Mid-America Pipeline Co., a Williams subsidiary, were installing a new pipeline parallel to the existing one.

Police said it appears trenching equipment cut a gash in the 10-inch pipeline carrying natural gas liquids, such as ethane, propane, butane and natural gasoline, at 9:45 a.m.

Camas commissioners redo zoning ordinance

By Rachel Demoy
Times-News correspondent

FAIRFIELD — Camas County commissioners are updating and changing a zoning ordinance drafted in the 1970s.

The updated ordinance should be completed by spring, County planners have already made their recommendations.

The ordinance will govern land use and where development can take place, commission chairman Mark McLam said.

Commissioners have had the county planners' proposal for about four months, but they've been unable to focus on the plan, due to farming season.

"This is going to be an important thing for us to get done during these winter months, and have all the drainage improvements that we can get completed before the spring," McLam said.

"This ordinance is a whole lot better than the old ordinance that we had in the 1970s. It's a much better ordinance and it's going to be a lot better than the old ordinance."

attempts to bribe the victim and having sex with her.

Questioning Kidd on the stand, McMurray said Kidd was trying to cause a confusion out of Harrell's mind. "I said he wanted only 'the truth'."

The 30-minute video then was shown in court. In it, Harrell said she met the victim at a Burley bar the evening of the attack, but denied the accounts of witnesses who said they saw him at her house later that night. Eventually, Harrell admitted to having sex with her when he was questioned about the presence of blood on his pants and underwear.

"Everything happened so fast," Harrell said in the videotape, adding that the punches were an "accident."

"I honestly don't think I hit her that hard," he said.

Smyser said the tape should be allowed because Harrell knew he was a suspect when he was questioned, and Harrell drove from Oakley to the sheriff's department for the interview.

Carlson also admitted as evidence photos of the victim's injuries.

McMurray argued that because Kidd downplayed the photos during his videotaped interview with Harrell, telling him the injuries weren't as bad as they looked, the photos should not be used against Harrell.

However, Smyser argued that the photos still show a use of force.

Finally, Carlson decided not to admit video identification as evidence. The victim had listened to a tape of Harrell speaking, but was told it was the voice of the suspect; Carlson said this was "too suggestive."

years as a cop that's not true. Quince and quality go hand-in-hand."

Palmer worked as taking his toll on Parker and his family, so the wife's decision to end her career he had spent most of his adult life building.

He bought Blue Lakes Cyclery because he likes bikes and customer service, and the opportunity to buy it came at the right time.

Parker was good friends with former owner Elmer Blankie when they began talking about a deal more than a year ago. Parker was reluctant and backed off, but the idea wouldn't go away. He lost a lot of sleep thinking about it before deciding to go for it.

at didn't make any sense, but on a personal level I reached a point that I needed to challenge myself in a new way," Parker said.

Parker's last day on patrol was Oct. 30.

Parker's departure leaves a void of experience, training and leadership in the department. Capt. Jim Munro said,

"He's going to be big-time missed by myself and other members of the organization," he said. "If he walked in the door today, he would be welcomed back with open arms."

The department will be testing next week to fill Parker's position.

"I'm sorry to see him go," said Capt. Jim Munro, who supervised Parker his first few years with the department. "Tom was a good officer, a good sergeant and a good employee."

Parker will miss the camaraderie he shared with his fellow officers, and he'll miss the excitement that comes with being a police officer.

But at least he won't be living to work anymore. He will be working to live, he said.

"I'm making life better not just for me, but for my family," he said.

sexually harassed her by touching her, making obscene remarks and calling her at home.

Palmer also said the defendants wrongfully fired her in December 1997 after she refused to submit to sexual advances and asked for a written job description.

Palmer has requested a jury trial and an unspecified amount of damages for mental, emotional and physical pain. She also wants $250,471 for lost wages and permanent injunction against Ed Eldridge from contacting her or her family.

The Idaho Attorney General's office filed a separate lawsuit in April on behalf of the Idaho Human Rights Commission. On Nov. 20, 1997, the commission determined there was probable cause to believe sexual harassment had been established in the case. The commission claimed Palmer's civil rights had been violated and she suffered humiliation and embarrassment.

The commission asked the court to award Palmer more than $100,000 in damages.

The harassment lawsuits were consolidated in May. That joint case is in pretrial activities.

In June, the Eldridge's attorney denied the harassment allegations and asked the lawsuits be dismissed on several grounds. The insurance company also has asked for attorney fees and costs.

children gave handmade paper stockings - representing the American culture of gift giving. The Newcomer Center children gave pennies.

The children also sang Christmas songs to each other in their native languages - songs, which the respective groups will perform at Burley's Festival of Trees at the Burley Inn.

"We are learning Spanish as part of our curriculum," said Jackie Lee, a teacher at the private school. "And they are learning English."

In addition the groups broke a piñata and filled paper stockings with candy from the broken piñata.

The gift and song exchange was an extension of another Christmas tradition for children at the private school.

"We want to do a service for them," said Amy Anderson, one of the students in the 6 to 11-year-old class at I AM Learning TWO Learn.

Doing a service is doing something for another person, she said.

"We made a gift from the heart," Lee said.

Service is emphasized at the school. At one point, children made Christmas stars to give to family members.

"Secretly do a good deed for someone in your family. Then leave the Christmas Star on their pillow," Lee said.

The philosophy was practiced when students brought the paper stockings to Newcomer Center students.

"I liked it because I was helping other people," said Jessica Howard.

"It helped us get to know them better," said Tiffany Lee, a 12-year-old student.

"I liked the happiness and joy it was a nice feeling," said Nic Anderson, 15.

Kayleen Babbitt, liked the cultural aspect of the gift exchange.

"It was cool. We got to learn something about their traditions and show them ours of gift-giving," she said.

Children at the Newcomer Center liked the candy the best.

"We got the candies. I liked them and hitting the piñata," said Jose Cuevas, a Newcomer Center kindergarten.

Police, FBI investigate cross burning incident

MOSCOW (AP) — Police have started an investigation into the cross burning and fire bombing at the home of an activist who protested against the Aryan Nations parade in Coeur d'Alene. An FBI agent from Thursday was assigned on Thursday to assist the local police investigation. FBI supervisor Bill Albrecht of Coeur d'Alene said. Prosecutors said that, depending on what evidence is collected, suspects could face life in prison, if convicted. "Attempting to burn the house in itself would be a big-time felony," Latah County Prosecutor William Thompson Jr. said Wednesday. Using a destructive device or bomb to destroy property carries a maximum sentence of life in prison and a $25,000 fine. Police Capt. Don Langerher said it appears a Molotov cocktail was thrown at Lori Graves' home and ignited on the front steps. Graves, 29, found the cross burning about 20 feet in front of the house. She also found a note calling her "a disgrace to your race" and warning her to stay out of Coeur d'Alene. Langerher said police are interviewing several people, but have no suspects.

Utah town ends garbage pact with polygamists' firm

NORTH SALT LAKE, Utah (AP) — City officials have decided to sever relations with a garbage company run by the Kingdome polygamist clan due to ongoing service interruptions and the company's poor safety record. Since 1993, A-1 Disposal has been cited for 245 state and federal safety violations and paid $15,000 in fines to the Utah Department of Transportation. It wasn't until an injury accident on Monday — apparently caused by a faulty truck with faulty brakes — and subsequent news stories that city officials learned of the firm's safety record. "We didn't know we could get that kind of information," said City Manager Collin Wood. "We were as surprised as anyone." A-1 Disposal has held the municipal garbage collection contract with the Davis County city since 1986.

Governors forum opens with water issues talk

PHOENIX (AP) — Western governors assembled Thursday for their winter meeting, opening with a water issues discussion that included warnings that population growth is a dominant factor in fighting over the all-important resource. Newcomers to Oregon are flocking to suburbs, and rural areas will lose political clout in redistricting after the 2000 Census, said Gov. John A. Kitzhaber. That means, Kitzhaber told 10 fellow governors or governors-elect attending the opening session, that farmers and other direct users of rural resources must acknowledge the legitimacy of recreation-oriented urban dwellers opposing to clear-cutting of forests or use of pesticides. "You can ignore it at your peril," he said. "They vote and they've got money and they're increasingly active." Rita Pearson, Arizona's director of water resources, said population growth makes reliability of water supplies an increasingly important consideration in water policy decisions. Whereas farmers could allow fields to go unplanted in drought years, water managers more and more have to take into account the steady increase in urban populations, she said. "You can't tell a residential customer to turn off the spicket — they need it," said South Dakota Gov. Bill Janklow and others appealed for unity among Western states, particularly when challenging unfavorable federal policies. "They really think the West is their playground. They don't want it developed," he said. After Thursday's brief opening session, the meeting is scheduled to go into high gear Friday morning with discussions on a wide array of issues, including international trade, a proposed regional presidential primary election, outer continental shelf revenue sharing and open lands initiatives. Friday afternoon, the governors will begin a summit on environmental issues, including their advocacy of a doctrine of trying to find middle ground on controversial issues.

Authorities end search for clues in deaths

ROOSEVELT, Utah (AP) — Authorities investigating the deaths of a couple whose remains were found scattered on a remote ranch have finished searching for clues along two rivers. Officials had hoped to find an alleged murder weapon along either the Strawberry River or Couer d'Alene River in Idaho. But Duchesne County Sheriff Sgt. Wally Hendricks said a search of a two-mile stretch of the Strawberry River last month "uncovered nothing." The result was the same along a section of the Couer d'Alene River.

F&G OKs long-term bear plan

BOISE (AP) — A federal bear management plan which runs until 2010 has been approved by the Idaho Fish and Game Commission amid rumbles in the 1996 conflict over hunting methods will emerge in the next election cycle.

More F&G sessions, hunt management, and the spring bear hunt.

Fish and Game Commission Steve Mealey said the method are only part of an array of ways to alter the bear population in a certain region.

"If you want the population to go up, there's a lot of ways to do it," Mealey said. "The tools will stay in the box. We may use them all or we may not."

Opposition to the three-hunt modes did not abate with the 1998 vote. Idaho Coalition, United Bear Bears founder Lynn Brumman said the issue remains on the agenda. The commissioner has not addressed that frustration, and it may well prompt another referendum in 2000.

CLB's first two years ago, Idaho Wildlife Council executive Rick Clower, has said his forces will start lobbying legislators to promote a constitutional amendment in 2000 which would require a three-hunt system to change wildlife management.

Included in the bear plan is a package written by Mealey and Lisa and Chase Hines, owners of Beeman which handle management of the hunt with management of their prey species in the area.

"It makes sense," Mealey said. "The way we're going to do this is by convincing the legislature."

The plan prohibits the number of male bears over five years old from falling below 20 percent of the total population in a given year, average in a "stable, unimpaired unit." That territory which may taken several hunting units as a permit of passage.

Opposition to the plan reserves the flexibility of allowing the older males to drop below 20 percent as an experimental bear to gauge the effects.

Commissioners back fall monkey hunt up month

BOISE (AP) — Idaho hunters get a more chance to hunt wild monkeys in the spring, although a new fall hunt will be limited to 400 people in the state.

The Idaho Fish and Game Commission on Thursday approved allowing a second spring tag valid in the last two weeks of the hunt, as well as extending the season to May 15.

Upland bird manager Tom Hemker told the commissioner that the turkey harvest state-wide has increased from 1997 to 2,000 this year.

Any suitable habitat in the state has turkeys, he said. Complaints about depredation by the upland birds are starting to arrive with their increasing numbers.

Biologists had suggested allowing a controlled fall hunt in areas which have a general spring hunt.

Justice Department rips FMC's media campaign

POCAHELLO (AP) — The U.S. Justice Department's lead lawyer said the company deserves credit for changing its attitude toward federal environmental laws.

But Deborah Meyer was angry when she learned about FMC's $40,000 media campaign heralding the company's environmental goals to reduce air and land pollution from its Pocatello phosphates plant.

She said the November 1997 consent decree FMC signed with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and Justice Department.

The decree requires FMC to pay the U.S. Treasury a record $118 million penalty, mainly for hazardous waste violations, and to spend $150 million through 2002 to resolve more than a decade of pollution problems.

It also stipulates that any time FMC mentions any of the 563 million in air pollution reduction and other supplemental environmental projects it is installing at the plant, the company must mention the work stemmed from an enforcement action for alleged violations of federal environmental law.

Space port pitch hits snag

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's Dec. 9 pitch to secure the contract for the space port may well be used to launch a new possible space port in the state's east end.

Commerce Director Tom Arnold said the sessions in Valencia, Calif., will be conducted in a room-to-room basis of the private companies handling the project to complete.

The delay until sometime before the year-end likely pushed the selection of the site for the space port in 2000.

"The December is a reasonable time to complete to replace NASA's aging space stations. It will launch vertically and land horizontally as a shuttle does now. Plans call for two space ports located in two separate states.

State officials believe the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory is a front-runner for a launch site and 1,000 support jobs, 1,000 assembly jobs and 1,000 short-term construction jobs that come with it.

Idaho is one of 18 states chosen by Lockheed Martin Skunk Works to submit proposals for the space port. State officials are touting Idaho's clear air, latitude, elevation, work force and the fact the federal INEEL controls much of central Idaho.

Feds search gun shop in wolf shooting probe

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — New Mexico gun shop owner Jess Carrey makes no effort to disguise his dislike for a federal program aiming to restore Mexican gray wolves to the wild in the Southwest.

He acknowledges writing letters to the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service expressing his position. But he says his opposition hasn't extended to taking up arms against the wolves.

Still, he said the government considers him a suspect in the latest wolf shooting earlier this month. He told the Tucson Citizen he was informed of that last week by agents who searched his gun shop in Reserve, N.M.

Officials like report cards for hunting

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Fish and Game Commission supports fine-tuning mandatory hunting-report cards sportsmen send in, but the board says it stands behind the need for information about big game.

Steve Huffaker, Fish and Game wildlife division chief, told the commissioners Thursday that more than 103,000 hunters purchased elk tags this year, while 38,000 had sent in their cards by last Friday. Nearly 50,000 of the 100,000 who bought deer tags have submitted their forms.

This is the first year for the mandatory cards designed to let game managers adjust regulations for the following year. Sportsmen can include their comments and complaints with the reports, and Fish and Game has received 890 letters so far. Some were peppered with hurt language — "folks have used this as a vehicle of what they think," Huffaker said.

The most complaints, 303, were about the lack of game in regular and controlled-hunts this year, poor management of the hunting areas, and agency biologists who told the hunters the game populations were high when they saw few animals.

Experts: Silver prices will rise

SPOKANE (AP) — Silver prices could more than double in the next year, but gold will likely stay low, financial experts told the Northwest Mining Association convention on Thursday.

Precious metals prices have been hurt by the same economic forces that hampered the Asian and Russian economies, but things are looking up, some experts contend.

"We are at the bottom of a depressing run," said Douglas Silver, an analyst for Balfour Holdings. "Things are changing."

He pointed to the recent merger of Mobil and Exxon, indicating business confidence, plus low unemployment in the United States, lack of inflation and good retail sales so far for the Christmas season.

Mining companies require large investments, and a strong U.S. economy will provide money for investors, Silver said.

Silver said the price of silver, which is around $4.60 per ounce, is too low given the worldwide supply and demand. Silver approached $7 an ounce earlier this year.

"It's going to double or triple in the next 24 months," Silver said.

That earned premiums for similar metals.

But gold prices at around $280 per ounce are likely to jump sharply after predictions.

Mining companies should expect the surge to increase production, and instead look for new large deposits, he said.

Copper prices will also continue low, and major producers must cut production, Silver said.

While predicting that Russia and Japan will raise their economies, Silver said "some America is surrounded with mining companies."

Wife admits to manslaughter

SODA SPRINGS (AP) — A Grace woman accused of killing her husband has pleaded guilty to involuntary manslaughter.

Rhonda Renee Cole, 32, changed her plea in return for prosecutors dropping a first-degree murder charge.

She will be sentenced Jan. 15.

Cole was accused of shooting her husband, Tim, 43, in the chest with a rifle on the day after Christmas last year.

Leading with the long ball

By Damen Clow
Times-News Staff

TWIN FALLS — On the basketball court, College of Southern Idaho sophomore Cecilie Bates rarely makes bad decisions. But she made what she called "the biggest mistake of my life" before the season started, when she and a handful of Golden Eagles decided to dye their hair.

"I had streaks in it last year and liked it," Bates said. "I thought blonde wouldn't be too much different, but it was."

Her new locks (which are slowly returning back to their natural light brown) notwithstanding, the 5-foot-10-inch guard has changed little from the freshman that was among the Scenic West Athletic Conference leaders in 3-point shooting last year, often igniting the offense with runs of 10 points in a few short minutes.

Bates' job is to shoot the long ball, and so far this season she leads the conference in both 3-pointers and 3-pointers attempted.

Where she has changed, according to head coach Joel Bates, is mentally.

"Shooters are a rare breed anyway," Bates said. "Every great shooter is pretty fragile in terms of consistency, and Cecilie is working through those moments much better."

One of only three returning players from last year's team, Bates has noticed a change in her teammates' attitudes ("They just want to win football") and the depth in this year's edition.

Then there's the added responsibility of being a leader on a team that includes nine freshmen.

"I'm probably putting a lot more pressure on myself," Bates said. "I have to come out and be ready for every game."

Bates agreed, and noted that the stability that Bates and fellow sophomores Jessica Gibbs and Sarah Nelson bring to the floor is invaluable to his team.

"She has knowledge, and there are moments where she's able to impart that knowledge," the coach said. "She's willing and able to take that role."

Bates, who will turn 20 two weeks from Saturday, has lived in Oregon, Connecticut, Georgia and Idaho, and began playing YMCA basketball in the third grade, influenced by three brothers two older and one younger.

"I'd always be out there shooting with them," she said. "I've seen home videos of that and they're horrible."

A former sport athlete at Borah High School, Bates received numerous mailings from college during her final years as a Lion.

"I always got letters but I never returned them," Bates said. "But like most Golden Eagle women before her, she chose CSI because of its campus and its coach."

When she leaves campus and coach, Bates hopes to enter into a career of physical therapy or athletic training.

"We always played sports in our family," she said. "It's one thing I know."

She has changed, according to head coach Joel Bates, is mentally.

"Shooters are a rare breed anyway," Bates said. "Every great shooter is pretty fragile in terms of consistency, and Cecilie is working through those moments much better."

One of only three returning players from last year's team, Bates has noticed a change in her teammates' attitudes ("They just want to win football") and the depth in this year's edition.

Then there's the added responsibility of being a leader on a team that includes nine freshmen.

"I'm probably putting a lot more pressure on myself," Bates said. "I have to come out and be ready for every game."

- ### QUESTION AND ANSWER
1. You're about to play your 10th road game of the year. What do you like best about road trips?
 "When it's just the girls, you have the whole bus to yourself and you get to relax and get cozy."
  2. What do you like least about road trips?
 "When it's with the guys, they get their own seat and we have to share. It's not fair."
  3. If you could transport one thing from Boise to Twin Falls, what would it be?
 "Good Times. They have the best fries."
  4. You're pretty aggressive on the court. Who do you think would win a Celebrity Deathmatch between Coach (Joel) Bates and Coach (Mark) Mendenhall?
 "Well, because he's scrawny and he gets hunkered down really well, and his headlocks are killer."
  5. You share a surname with Hollywood's most famous psycho. Are you going to see the remake?
 "I've never seen that Norman Bates one. But I love horror movies. I'll probably go see it."

JEROME — Battered by a barrage of 3-pointers, the Jerome High School Lady Tigers rallied to a 57-47 win over Twin Falls at home Thursday night, overcoming a late Bruins rally that cut their margin-leading to three points.

With hot-handed junior guard Becky Thibault twice dialing in from downtown, Jerome had led by as much as 15 points in the game.

Jerome's success was aided by four free throws by Thibault and three more by sophomore guard Dusy Schvaneveldt. Schvaneveldt complemented Thibault's mastery behind the arc with two 3-pointers of her own to finish with 11 points. Schvaneveldt and Nikki Marrons each added 11 more. Marrons all in the first half and the Lady Tigers coasted to a record of 6-1.

The Bruins, led in scoring by Bird's 13 and 11 from sophomore guard Chrissy Pais, fell to 0-6.

"I was real happy with the way they came out and played the second half," Bruins coach Lawrence Pfeiffer said. "Hopefully, they've convinced themselves they can play with anyone in this league."

The Twin Falls loss comes one day after the Bruins dropped a close contest to Pocatello after holding a lead through three quarters. Thursday night, as close as they got, they never led.

Snow fell outside as the game ended.

Tyson awaits ruling

Report may lead to more prison time

By Mike Tyson

INDIANAPOLIS — Mike Tyson's probation officer will file court papers by Monday that could lead to the former heavyweight champion returning to prison.

George Walker, the chief probation officer for Marion Superior Court, said Thursday it appears Tyson violated terms of his probation as a result of his no-contact plea to misdemeanor assault charges in Maryland on Tuesday.

Tyson served three years on a 10-year sentence in Indiana for raping a 15-year-old girl in 1992, and his probation expires in March.

Judge Patricia Gifford, who presided at Tyson's trial and will decide if Tyson violated his probation, was out of her office Thursday and unavailable for comment.

"The judge can do everything from nothing all the way to imposing the original suspended sentence, and anything in between," Walker said. The judge also could modify the sentence or place new conditions on Tyson's probation.

The prospect of Tyson going to prison again comes as he nears a return to the ring. He has a fight planned for Jan. 16 against Francisco Botha in Las Vegas, his first bout since his boxing license was revoked for biting Evander Holyfield's ears during a 1997 title fight. He was reinstated by Nevada authorities in October.

Walker said his petition would not be a recommendation regarding possible prison time for Tyson.

"What we actually say on the petition is to give the facts, the facts we all read in the paper," Walker said. "We want to go ahead and get this on the record... We bring it to the court's attention, and then all the legal stuff kicks in."

Tyson's probation was reviewed last year after the Holyfield bout, but no action was taken.

Tyson is undergoing psychiatric treatment, one of the conditions that led to reinstatement of his license by the Nevada Athletic Commission.

The two men Tyson scuffled with in Maryland already have reached a settlement with the boxer to avoid a civil suit.

Eagles spoil Vermeil's homecoming

By Tommy Bowden
Times-News Staff

PHILADELPHIA — On a night when Dick Vermeil came back to the Vet, Frank Fryar found his way back to the end zone.

Fryar caught his first touchdown pass in nearly a year, a 61-yarder from Kurt Dettmer, in the third quarter of the Philadelphia Eagles' 27-17 victory over the Rams Thursday night.

It was Vermeil's first game at Veterans Stadium since he last coached the Eagles in 1982. Like Vermeil's old Eagles coach, the Rams didn't quit when Fryar's TD gave Philadelphia a 13-10 lead with 7:16 left in the third.

Tommy Banks hit J.P. Thomas — one of a backpedaling of receivers carrying the lead for injured Isaac Bruce — for 41 yards to the Eagles' 32 June 17-14 with 11:04 left.

After Philadelphia punted, Banks hit Thomas again with a 17-yard completion on third-and-12. But the drive stalled, and Jeff Wilkins' 52-yard field goal attempt was wide left with 4:15 to go.

Though most of the fans had left Veterans Stadium, the game still meant something to Vermeil. The 62-year-old coach slapped his clipboard against his legs when the ball fluttered wide.

In a final march, Banks hit Thomas for 17 yards to the Philadelphia 35 on a fourth-and-2 play as time expired.

Dettmer, who had the Eagles' first two TD passes to wide receivers last week in a 24-16 loss at Green Bay, was 17-for-33 for 169 yards and two more TDs. He hit Freddie Solomon for a 7-yard score to make it 7-0 early in the first.

Duce Staley rushed 28 times for 99 yards for Philadelphia, which snapped a seven-game losing streak on national TV. Banks was 22-for-37 for 255 yards, and Amp Lee had five catches for 71 yards. The Rams (3-10) lost their fourth straight and seventh in eight games.

Fryar, who had the longest rush of his career on a 32-yard end-around in the first quarter, got open down the right sideline on third-and-9 from the Rams 33 midway through the third quarter. The 36-year-old receiver broke a tackle, got a block from receiver Jeff Graham and sprinted down the sideline.

Fans stood amid thousands of empty seats at the Vet to cheer Fryar, who hadn't scored a touchdown since Dec. 7, 1997 against the New York Giants. One last surge got No. 80 over the goal line.

Philadelphia Eagle Frank Fryar catches for 32 yards Thursday night.

Holtz takes over South Carolina program

Robinson heads to UNLV, while Bowden leaves Tulane for Clemson after 11-0 season

By Tommy Bowden
Times-News Staff

The time was right for Lou Holtz. Out of coaching since leaving Notre Dame in 1994, Holtz is leaving CBS Sports' analyst position to take the head job at South Carolina, and new work's interest are reported Thursday night.

"Holtz has said CBS Sports will be replacing Bob Schrier as head football coach of the Gamecocks," CBS SportsLine said.

South Carolina Athletic Director Mike McCoey would not confirm that a deal had been made, but a source in the administrative office of the athletic department said the school would have an announcement later in the evening.

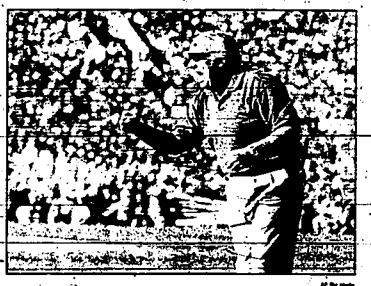

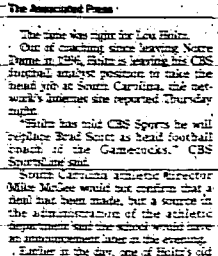

Earlier in the day, one of Holtz's old rivals, John Robinson, got back into football. The former two-time Southern California coach became the head coach at UNLV, which went 0-11 this season.

Two other head coaching spots were filled Thursday with Tommy Bowden, who guided Tulane to an 11-0 record this year, taking over at Clemson; and Carl Frank, a former assistant to Steve Spurrier at Duke and Florida, returning to Duke.

In all, seven new head coaches have been picked this week.

Also Thursday, coach George O'Leary signed a new contract with Georgia Tech. The deal is a six-year rollover, meaning O'Leary always has six years remaining on the deal unless he is fired.

McEnroe to face 'disgrace'

LONDON (AP) — John McEnroe comes face to face this week with the man he once called "a disgrace to the human race."

George Grime was in the umpire's chair at Wimbledon 17 years ago when McEnroe launched into his famous "You cannot be serious" tirade.

Who knows what will happen when Grime umpires McEnroe's matches at the ATP Seniors Tour of Champions, which runs Thursday through Sunday at London's Olympia arena?

"There are only two umpires in this tournament, so I can hardly avoid him," Grime said.

Grime, now 60, first came across McEnroe in the quarterfinals of Wimbledon in 1977 when Mac was just 17.

"What a polite young American, I thought, although I knew that he was being given some of my colleagues a bit of trouble early in the tournament," Grime recalled in Thursday's Daily Telegraph.

"By 1981, he had become a real fireball and had earned the Grime was in the chair when McEnroe played Rod Flavel in the 1981 semifinals.

"When McEnroe shouted, 'You umpires screw me up,' Grime gave him a code violation warning."

"Later, he looked at me and said, 'You are a disgrace to mankind.' It was abusive and everyone heard it," Grime said.

Say it ain't so, Oh Holtz Investigation may lead to lifetime ban for Japan's all-time home run leader

TOKYO (AP) — Say it ain't so, Oh.

An elaborate sign-stealing scheme has Sadaharu Oh in the middle of an investigation that could result in a lifetime ban for the all-time home run king.

Oh, who hit a record 868 home runs in Japanese baseball, now manages the Daiei Hawks. Three accused Hawks players have denied any part in the scam, and Oh was astounded by the reports.

"I can't believe it. I'd like to believe my players," he said Thursday.

While Oh has not been directly implicated in the allegations, he could be banned for life if the investigation finds that the team was behind the scandal.

Japanese custom often requires those in leadership positions to step down after a scandal, even if they are not directly involved.

According to the charges, which surfaced Wednesday, a Daiei team employee monitored TV cameras around Fukuoka Dome that were focused on the opposing catcher.

Japanese media reports said the employee picked up the pitches and relayed them by walkie-talkie to a youngster in the stands who then relayed information to the batter by using a megaphone.

Holding the megaphone in front of his face meant a fastball. Holding it to the right meant a curve or a slider, and to the left a forkball.

The three players questioned — infielders Koichiro Yoshinaga and Shikato Yamaoka and outfielder Noriyoshi Omichi — all denied the allegations, according to Japanese media.

"There is no factual evidence to suggest that I'm involved. I told the team that I didn't do it," Yamaoka said the Kyodo News agency.

The Pacific League will convene a special meeting of its board of directors Dec. 9 to discuss the results of Daiei's internal investigation and decide what measures to take, news reports said.

In American baseball, sign-stealing is an acceptable practice, with coaches on many teams, admired for their expertise in intercepting signals for pitches the school decides against it. South Carolina went 1-10 this year, its worst season in 106 years of football, and fired coach Brad Scott on Nov. 22.

Holtz spent 11 years at Notre Dame. He won a national championship with the Irish and his overall record there was 100-33-2.

Holtz said recently that his wife's health was a primary concern before he would take another job. Both Holtz are undergoing treatment for throat cancer.

In late November, he said: "I feel that God wants me to coach, otherwise he wouldn't have put the desire in me. I do enjoy coaching at the college level, but will not be active until my wife is well."

Holtz was an assistant at South Carolina from 1966-67. The 63-year-old Robinson was formally introduced Thursday and took over a team that went 0-11 in 1998.

Robinson, fired by USC following the 1997 season, replaces Jeff Horton, whose team went just four games in the last three seasons and has lost 16 straight. He reported will receive $350,000 per season under a three-year contract.

"It's ridiculous for us to make some lofty predictions," said Robinson, who "coached the NFL's Los Angeles Rams for nine years before stints at USC. "But UNLV football will be on the move. We are going to be second to none and we're going to recruit the best players possible."

The Rebels will begin play next year in the new Mountain West Conference.

Bob Stoops, also a Florida assistant, was selected Tuesday at Oklahoma. On Wednesday, Kirk Ferentz, assistant coach for offense for the NFL Baltimore Ravens, was hired at Iowa; and David Cutcliffe, an assistant at No. 1-ranked Tennessee, took over at Mississippi.

Bowden, whose brother, Bobby, is longtime head coach at Florida State, replaces Tommy West. He was fired after the Tigers' 3-8 season.

"Fifteen years ago, I kind of designated eight schools that were south of the Mason-Dixon line and east of the Mississippi where I would like to retire," Bowden said. "At the top of that list was Mississippi State."

Because Clemson is in the ACC, Bowden will coach against his father.

"An assistant will coach Tulane against Brigham Young in the Liberty Bowl Dec. 31.

for mobility, cheered alongside her coach, Michelle Skyles, and the momentum just grew.

The Lady Tigers maintained a 12-point cushion the duration of the second period, and took a 36-18 lead and an 18-point edge into the locker room at halftime.

Their lead would have been greater had it not been for relentless rebounding by Twin Falls' McCale Ashbrenner, who pulled down a game-high eight boards on the night.

"We played pretty well most of the first half," Skyles said. "It was a tough game."

Conversely, the Bruins showed little offensive intensity through the first two quarters. And Pfeiffer let them know at every timeout and in the halftime locker room.

"I don't know what happened," Pfeiffer said. "We practice halftimes in practice. We practice timeouts in practice. And we practice starting the game with intensity in practice."

His halftime pep talk worked, however. Twin Falls trimmed the lead back to 13 with two quick buckets by Paiz, the second a beautiful finger-roll to cap a slashing drive across the paint, and trailed by only five at the 4:00 mark in the fourth quarter.

Thibault drained the final of her four 3-pointers at that point, however, then took to the line to fend off the Bruins' last gasp. Twin Falls' shooting went cold the final minute of play, the Bruins were forced to foul, and Jerome scored the final seven points of the evening.

Skyles couldn't ask for a better scenario's heading to HELLERS Saturday and Pocettoello Thursday.

"I don't want to play 32 minutes and trailed by only five at the 4:00 mark in the fourth quarter.

While her long-range shooting drew center stage Thursday, Thibault was near-perfect at the line, too, shooting 5-of-7. Jerome and Kendrick West led Martins in rebounding with four apiece, and Martins added three first-half steals.

Bingham is due back after Christmas.

The Bruins, meanwhile, continue to hunt their elusive first win of 1998. The road remains challenging for Pfeiffer's squad in the coming two weeks — the Bruins will play six games within that span, including Highland to town next week for a crucial showdown.

"We had great team effort tonight," Pfeiffer said. "When everybody played, but everybody contributed."

Who's No. 1?

Analyst doubts Fiesta's claim

The Associated Press

All season, ABC has billed the Fiesta Bowl as the undisputed national championship for college football. Without an upset on Saturday, one of the network's analysts says that's not fair.

If No. 1 Tennessee beats Mississippi State in the SEC championship, No. 2 Kansas State beats Texas A&M in the Big 12 title game, and No. 3 UCLA beats Miami, one of those deserving teams will be watching the Fiesta Bowl on Jan. 4.

"I wouldn't be one percent comfortable calling the Fiesta Bowl the national championship game," said ABC analyst Todd Blackledge, who will co-host the network's studio coverage Saturday and the Bowl Championship Series selection show on Sunday.

That's a far cry from all the promotion ABC has been dedicating to that game since last year, when Michigan and Nebraska couldn't play in a bowl and ended up splitting the national title.

The network assured fans that wouldn't happen again. But two days from now, that may be the scenario.

Kansas State, which is third in place in the BCS, is the team most likely to win the Fiesta Bowl. Compounding the problem is that the Wildcats are the No. 1 team in the Southeastern Conference, which will automatically crown the winner of the Fiesta Bowl as its champion.

"Grant Teaff, as executive director of the coaches, made a calculated risk that there wouldn't be three undefeated teams," said ESPN analyst Lee Corso, himself a member of the American Football Coaches Association. "That was a good percentage risk, but it may not work out."

"I think this will be addressed during the season, and one of the possible changes is to vote after the bowl games for the No. 1 team."

But Blackledge says that could be too late, especially if Kansas State wins the Sugar Bowl and coaches would have no choice but to drop them.

"It strikes me as unfair," said Blackledge, who votes in the Associated Press poll. "The balance of that is they still have the opportunity to be voted No. 1 in the other poll. So it is possible they have absolutely no choice but to drop them."

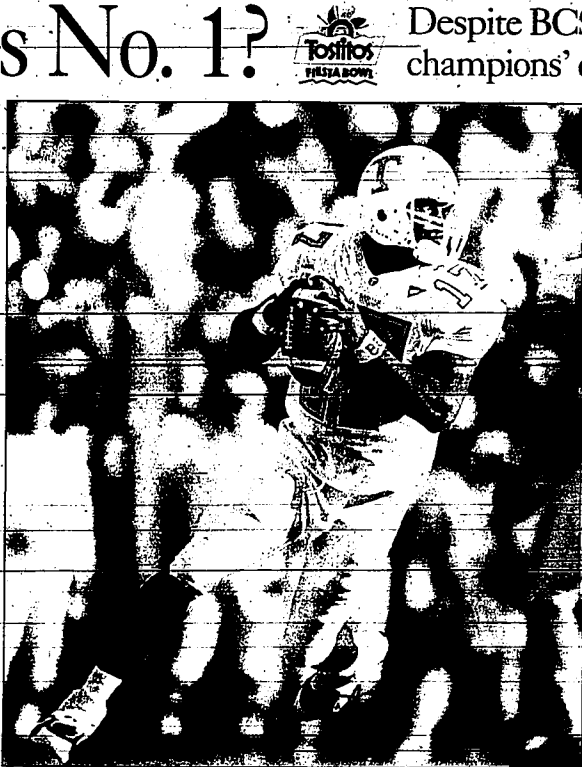

ABC analyst Bob Griese sees no problem with Kansas State being left out. He says coach Bill Snyder's decision to schedule Northern Illinois, North East Louisiana and Indiana State in the non-conference season should put the Wildcats behind UCLA and Tennessee.

"I can't play Miami and Tennessee at conference, and Tennessee traveled to Syracuse. I think Kansas State may be the best team, but if someone shows up left out of the mix, it should be the team with the weakest schedule," said Griese, who will call the SEC championship Saturday night. "In this scenario, it is Kansas State."

While Blackledge says he would consider voting the Wildcats No. 1 if they won their bowl game, it won't be impressive to Griese as the winner of the Fiesta Bowl. Griese says that's not fair.

Tennessee quarterback Tee Martin looks for an open receiver during the Volunteers' 41-0 win over Vanderbilt Saturday.

Tee time at Tennessee Volunteers' QB fills Manning's shoes nicely

ATLANTA (AP) — Tee Martin is two victories away from taking the Tennessee Volunteers to heights they could only dream about with Peyton Manning as their quarterback.

"It's the No. 1 Vols defeat Mississippi State in Saturday's Southeastern Conference championship game, they'll likely play for the national championship in the Fiesta Bowl."

So much for having to rebuild in the post-Peyton era. "It's going how we dreamed of it going," said Martin, the junior who replaced Manning this season and guided the Vols to the first 11-0 regular season in school history. "We may not have dreamed it to be like this, but we expected it. One of our goals was to be where we are right now."

When Manning left for the NFL after giving the Vols four brilliant seasons, one expected Martin to fill the void so completely. Even when star running back Jamal Lewis sustained a season-ending injury in the fourth game, Tennessee never faltered on its way to the SEC East Division title.

Martin points to "our cohesiveness, how close we are. We're a team that likes each other, we enjoy playing with each other. It's not where the offense wants the credit or the defense wants the credit."

Certainly, though, Martin deserves credit for presiding over the seamless transition from Peyton's Place to Tee Time. Or, in other words, his ability and work ethic to be an outstanding quarterback," coach Phillip Fulmer said. "But he's just taken off. ... I wouldn't trade Tee for anyone right now."

After a stumbling start, Martin has risen to become the second-rated quarterback in the SEC. The Vols averaged only 359.6 yards in their first five games, but they've jumped to 434.5 over the last six.

"I didn't know for sure how Tee would manage himself, how he would respond when things were not going well," Fulmer said. "But Tee has been so unflinching during the whole process. Whether it's battling the clock or battling pressure from different people, whatever has come up, he's handled it very well."

Despite their unbeaten record, the Vols have lived on the edge. In the view of some, they're downright lucky to be where they are.

Tennessee needed a last-second field goal to beat Syracuse 34-33. Four fumbles by Florida helped the Vols defeat their longtime nemesis 20-17 in overtime. Tennessee appeared beaten by Arkansas after an inexplicable fumble handed the Vols a 28-24 victory.

Lucky? Probably. But good fortune usually is a key element in any championship season. Nebraska finished No. 1 last year after scoring on a pass that deflected off a receiver's foot. Colorado needed five downs to win a game that was necessary for its title in 1990.

"The '13 word isn't even coming into our minds," Tennessee cornerback Steve Johnson said. "We've fought through a lot of adversity to get to 11-0. I don't think anybody expected us to be 11-0."

Likewise, hardly anyone expected No. 23 Mississippi State (8-3) to be in the SEC championship game for the first time.

LSU was the preseason favorite to win the West, but the Tigers faltered badly. Arkansas was rolling toward the title game, winning its first eight games, before the devastating loss to Tennessee was followed by a 22-21 loss to Brian Hazzelwood's team, which won the SEC championship game with seven seconds remaining.

"You shouldn't underestimate anybody," Bulldogs defensive end Edward Smith said. "We set our goals high."

The Bulldogs have the SEC's top rusher in James Johnson (1,345 yards, 6.1 yards per carry), but he is questionable for Saturday night's game at the Georgia Dome, because of groin and shoulder injuries.

Despite BCS system, many may dispute champions' claim to 'undisputed' title

UCLA should handle Miami

Knight-Ridder News Service

PHILADELPHIA — UCLA was originally supposed to play at Miami on Sept. 20, but because of George's intervention.

At first, UCLA wasn't even allowed to play at Miami. But the network's Vols, however, aren't their fate, which is more than Kansas State fans would want to see.

Interference? Offensive coordinator David Cardiffie just became the new head coach at Wisconsin.

Tennessee 27, Mississippi State 17.

UCLA 31, Miami 24.

The 10-0 Bruins, who haven't lost in 16 months, had a narrow points lead over Kansas State for the second spot in the Bowl Championship Series standings. The top two teams, as of now, will go to the Fiesta Bowl in January for the national championship.

The worst the Pac-10 champion can do is make their first Rose Bowl appearance in the stadium.

The 7-3 Horned Lovers lost their last two games, the best and worst loss in program history. The Orange Bowl, the game was the most important they've faced this season. Which is what might seem to be the Fiesta Bowl, even if they don't clock the Aggies, who are coming off a two-point win over Texas.

The team met last season, 84-50, in 1995.

"I think we simplified the defense," said defensive coach Bob Toledo. "I don't think we've done anything to make us a better team."

How about the players? "They're really," he said. "The teams have met twice. UCLA has won both, 27-10 in the Fiesta Bowl, the game was 39-37. Three years ago in Los Angeles, it was 31-8."

About the only thing that McNown's front five is the second best in the nation in terms of sacks. McNown has piled up 10 sacks, records set by the all-time Pac-10 career total offense leader, perhaps the most impressive statistic is that he has been sacked a Pac-10 low 10 times, or 10 games for a total of 50 yards.

Knight-Ridder News Service

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The Kansas State fans were nervous. Their Wildcats had another winning football team, just as they had throughout the decade. But there had been no conference championship.

Nebraska saw that. The dreaded Cornhuskers ruled the conference with three straight championship seasons. Kansas State had come close but couldn't overcome the big red beast to the west.

It was 1934. A. H. 1934. Bonnie and Clyde gunned down TWA proudly announced its new 19-hour coast-to-coast service with only 11 stops. The Great Depression continued its grip.

K-State fans could tell you something about depression. In a time before scholarships, integration, two-platoon football, something never changed: The Wildcats had played Nebraska 18 times since 1911 and had won only once.

Never had Kansas State won a conference championship — it was then the Big Six — and there was no reason to think Nebraska wouldn't push its string of unbeaten conference seasons to four.

But something happened that year that hasn't happened since. Something Kansas State has a chance to accomplish Saturday when it meets Texas A&M in the TWA Dome in St. Louis for the Big 12 title game.

On that day, Kansas State will try for its second conference championship of the 20th century.

"I don't remember what we thought about before the season, but I know Oklahoma was the team to beat," George Rankin said.

Rankin was a sophomore wingback in 1934. He didn't play much. He became a three-year letterman starting in 1935.

"I wasn't a hot shot or anything," Rankin said. "I guess you'd call it redshirting today."

So Rankin, 83, who lives in Castle Rock, Colo., watched the season develop mostly from the sideline. Many of the top players were young, including quarterback Lee Ayers, a junior-college quarterback, and sophomore fullback Maurice Elders, feeling do remember a different feeling about the team because of its new coach.

Price takes lead with 67

3 others finish 2 strokes back

SUN CITY, South Africa (AP) — Nick Price shot a 5-under 67 and took a two-stroke lead over Mark O'Meara, Justin Leonard and Bernhard Langer in Thursday's first round of the Million Dollar Challenge.

The defending champion finished with consecutive birdies, over the windswept par-72, 5,597-yard Gary Player Country Club course.

Price was at 70, while Tiger Woods had a 72 in the elite 12-man field of the world's top players vying for golf's largest single prize.

"This course likes me," said Price, who also won the event in 1993 with a record 24-under. "It makes me focus a lot more than I do normally."

Price is coming off his third victory in four years at the Zimbabwe Open, closing with a course-record 9-under 63.

Price is a game of momentum, he said.

O'Meara, winner of the Masters and British Open titles and playing in the twosome ahead of Price, held the lead briefly after a quick start on the back nine.

He birdied Nos. 11, 13 and 14 to reach 4-under, but he gave the lead back when Price birdied 14 and O'Meara birdied 15.

Els birdied each of the first four holes to go 4-under, but gave it nearly all back with bogeys at 6, 11 and 17. He also birdied 10.

"It was a long course," he said of the layout that was battered by heavy rain earlier and a day when swirling winds made things even more difficult.

Woods started with a birdie at No. 2, but dropped to 2-over by the turn with a bogey at 7 and a double bogey at the par-4 eighth.

"I'm very pleased with the way I'm striking the ball," he said. "It feels like I'm making progress."

Woods said playing in South Africa for the first time was spe-

Appleby leads Australian Open; Norman is 1 back

ADELAIDE, Australia — The tragedy of his wife's death last summer continues to weigh heavily on the mind of Australian golfer Stuart Appleby.

"I have lived the nightmare for four months," Appleby said Thursday. "One minute I'm good, one minute I'm bad."

Renay Appleby, a promising golfer who caddied for her husband, died in a London traffic accident following the British Open.

Appleby returned to play in his native Australia for the first time since the accident Thursday, shooting a 3-under-par 69 for the second round lead in the Australian Open.

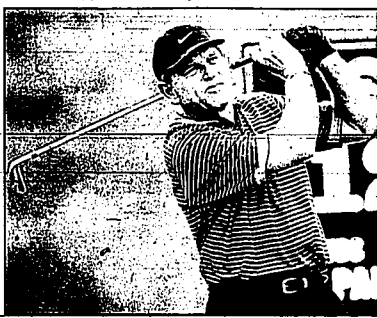

Only 13 of the 126 players in the Open broke par on the difficult Royal Adelaide Course.

Appleby, who will play in the International team in next week's Presidents Cup matches at Royal Melbourne, had birdies on Nos. 10 and 14, bogeyed Nos. 14 and 15, then closed with two birdies to take the lead.

"I'm generally pretty happy with the day," he said. "I'm under-golfed a bit, so I'm trying to get enough good shots in the bag."

Australian Greg Norman, playing his first regular tournament since surgery on his left shoulder in late April, was tied with countrymen Peter Senior and Kenny Bruce, Canada's Rick Gibson and New Zealand's Stephen Scallion, one stroke behind.

Norman, who has won this event five times, struggled through a double-bogey 7 on No. 9.

"I think it's going to be hard for anyone to go around this course without two or three bogeys," said Norman, also headed to Royal Melbourne next week for the Presidents Cup. "I don't care how good you are hitting the ball, the course forces you to play defensively."

England's Nick Faldo had six bogeys in a 77. He told organizers that he "just played badly" as he rushed off for the driving range.

John Huston shot a 75, one better than U.S. Presidents Cup teammate, Fred Couples. Paraguay's Carlos Franco and Australia's Craig Parry, members of the International team, opened with 75.

Mallon-Pate, Cochran post 20-under pars

PALM HARBOR, Fla. — Golfers needed shopping carts to haul away all their birdies Thursday in the first round of the JCPenney Classic.

They came, they played, they scored like never before in the event that pairs LPGA and PGA Tour pros in team competition. The Meg Mallon-Steve Pate and Cindy McCurdy-Russ Cochran teams posted tournament-record-tying 10-under-par best-ball 61s to share the first-round lead at Inisrubric.

In the JCPenney Classic's 27-year history, only three previous times had 61 appeared on a scorecard.

"It was a perfect day," Pate said. "There was virtually no wind, the greens were soft and this format is a lot easier than the alternate shot."

Everybody agreed. Just one shot behind the co-leaders are Vickie Odegaard-Jim Carter and Tracy Hanson-Doug Barron. Two shots back are Susie Redman-Ted Tryba, Carlin Nilsmark-Chris Perry, Rachel Netherington-Rocco Modiano and Carrianna

Matthew-Dan Forsman and Beth Daniel-Doug Martin.

Fifty-one of the 52 teams broke par. LPGA player of the year, Annika Sorenstam and husband David Eichel — a controversial pairing in that Eichel turned pro to compete in the event with his wife — finished at 70 and were the only team to make a double-bogey.

"We teed off late and saw people were going low," Mallon said. "Our whole group was playing well, making some birdies, and we were under their right wing."

Mallon-Pate made it look easy with a steady 31-30 that featured seven birdies by Mallon and three by Pate.

"I had a nice aggressive aim at every putt because we were both there close," Pate said. "You know one or both of us were going to make it."

"We never had to play a hole by ourselves all day. I don't think we were ever in jeopardy of making a bogey."

Jordan rejoins labor talks as season slips by

6 hours at the table produces no progress for players, owners

NEW YORK (AP) — Late in the lockout game, Michael Jordan checked back in.

Jordan made a surprise appearance at the NBA labor talks Thursday, but whether it might mean any end to the season remains to be seen.

His presence was promising, however, since the league had said he wouldn't get involved again until discussions began.

NBA Vice President Steve Nunn said a new contract will be announced in the next few days.

Jordan had wanted to be there to listen to it, agent Steve Falk said.

After about six hours of talks, however, neither side said anything new on the table.

Jordan later came out for an evening, and it was unclear if he would return. He did not comment on his participation.

from NBA headquarters, where the league and union were muddled in a conference room trying to end the five-month dispute that threatens to wipe out the entire season.

The sides spent the first two hours merely "reading each other out," commissioner David Stern said, then went back to work after breaking a lunch. The bargaining session was the first in 22 days with mutual representation committees in attendance.

If the owners and players can't come up with a solution in the next couple of weeks, the entire 1996-97 season will be canceled. Stern has steadfastly refused to reveal on what date it will be too late to save the season.

Jordan's arrival marked the first time the last-minute negotiators met. He spent about 1 1/2 hours at the bargaining table and helped try to broker a deal.

came there on Nov. 20 and called a meeting with negotiators in the next couple of days, however, he proposed changes to free agency rules were a "deal-breaker" and the owners then said the union rejected on its acceptance of a complicated tax formula.

Pressure for a settlement and great over the fate of the season increased in recent days, with former union president Isiah Thomas among those to suggest that the season could replace Billy Hunter and Patrick Ewing as its

"The one message I know he [Jordan] is delivering emphatically is that people like Isiah can get out of the sidelines and criticize, but when you are in the game it's harder," Falk said.

The first order of major business Thursday was to decide whether to continue negotiating under the framework that the sides had discussed in two previous sessions — a six- or seven-year agreement with a complicated "escalator" system in the final three or four years.

The proposal put on the table Nov. 20 would include players having 10 or 15 percent of their paychecks withheld if spending on overall player salaries exceeded a certain percentage of revenues.

The players have asked for a 30-50 split, while the players have had many of their concessions to reaching 50 percent.

The owners moved to 52 and 53 percent on Nov. 23.

Sampas finishes No. 1 for 6th time

Passes Connors' mark from 1974-78

NEW YORK (AP) — Pete Sampras is sure that his record of six consecutive years at the world's No. 1 player will never be broken.

"I know what it takes to do it and I don't see anyone in today's game having the consistency, having the durability that it takes to be No. 1, not only for one or two years, but for six years," Sampras said in a telephone interview Thursday.

Sampras had shared the mark of five successive years at No. 1 with Jimmy Connors, who did it from 1974-78. Sampras needed a closing surge, playing six consecu-utive weeks in Europe "this fall, to hold off the challenge of Chilean Marcelo Rios."

"You need the game, you need the heart, and you also need the mind," Sampras said. "Some guys have two of three. Some guys have a little of the three, but in order to do it for six years, you need everything."

Despite his record-breaking year, this season was a bit of a disappointment for Sampras. He won only one title, his first in a single season since 1991. After winning a record-tying fifth Wimbledon, he remains one away from tying Roy Emerson's all-time mark of 12 Grand Slam singles titles.

"This year was a little inconsistent," said Sampras, whose record in the majors — U.S. Open semifinals, Australian Open quarterfinals, French Open second round — reflected his uneven season.

The season also ended on a bittersweet note for Sampras when, after clinching the No. 1 ranking, he lost in the semifinals of the ATP World Championships to Alex Corretja of Spain.

"I had mixed emotions when I left there," said Sampras, who intends to rest until around Christmas and before preparing for next month's Australian Open.

Gordon vows not to cry at show

NEW YORK (AP) — Jeff Gordon vows there will be no repeat of the crying that nearly brought NASCAR's annual awards show to a halt last year.

Gordon will accept his third Winston Cup championship trophy tonight.

The first-cup came in 1995 and Gordon shed tears as he made his speech during the awards presentation, which is televised live by ESPN. He won again in 1997 and was even emotional, sobbing and barely able to get through prepared remarks that he said he had worked on for most of the preceding week.

"I think I'll walk off the stage if I start crying again," Gordon said. "There's a time and a place when you can get away with that. I think that time is over for me."

Gordon said NASCAR has brought in a professional to work with him and the other drivers who will be on stage Friday night during the presentations.

"It's important to me to thank everyone and make sure the fans can enjoy the moment with us," Gordon said. "Hopefully, I can just enjoy it this year, and maybe bring some humor to it, too."

Alarm delays launch

THE UNIVERSAL alarm went off at the launch of space shuttle Endeavour on Thursday, forcing the postponement of NASA's first space-station mission.

NASA said it would try again to launch the shuttle and station mission on Wednesday.

The shuttle alarm halted the launch, which had been scheduled for Thursday. The cause of the alarm was not immediately clear.

The shuttle alarm was triggered by a problem with the orbiter's main engine. The engine was shut down for safety.

The shuttle was launched on Friday. The launch was successful.

Study: Cooling stroke victims helps recovery

DALLAS (AP) — Lowering stroke victims' body temperature with cooling blankets and other means can significantly improve their chances of survival, researchers say.

German researchers who took steps to reduce the temperature of 25 people who had suffered severe strokes found that 14 survived instead of the expected five.

And in a separate study, Spanish researchers found that people who suffer high fevers within 72 hours of a stroke have a higher death rate than those who do not.

"The most important question to me is how we can deliver hypothermia very, very early in stroke events," said Stefan Schwab, lead author of the German study and head of the University of Heidelberg's neurological care unit.

The two studies were published in Thursday's issue of Stroke, a journal of the Dallas-based American Heart Association.

In the Spanish study, 297 stroke patients had their temperature taken every two hours for three days. Among the 153 patients with high temperatures (over 99.5 degrees) in the 72-hour period, 35.8 percent died within three months. Only 1 percent of those who had a normal temperature in those 72 hours died in the ensuing three months.

Moreover, researchers found that 91 surviving patients who had high temperatures in the first 24 hours suffered greater brain damage than 67 others who did not.

The German researchers found that certain cooling techniques reduced brain temperature and helped relieve pressure on the brain, which can be caused by swelling or fluid buildup. Techniques included fanning, the patient with cool air and using cooling blankets that contain tubes filled with chilled liquid.

Dr. Hal Uchino, a professor of neurology at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas, said the overall findings are encouraging but need to be repeated on a larger scale.

"It is a very good study suggesting that hypothermia may be of benefit," he said.

U.S. abortion rate holds steady for 1996 at 20 per 1,000 women

ATLANTA (AP) — The U.S. abortion rate held steady in 1996 at its lowest level in two decades, the government reported Thursday.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said there were 20 abortions per 1,000 women ages 15 to 44 — the same rate as in 1995.

States reported 1,221,585 abortions in 1996, an increase of less than 1 percent from the year before. It was the first time abortions have not declined since 1990, when the total was more than 1.4 million.

Since abortions were legalized nationally in 1973, rates increased steadily until 1988, when they reached 25 per 1,000 women ages 15 to 44. Abortions leveled off through 1992, when rates began falling again.

The CDC said the decline may have been caused by a drop in unwanted pregnancies. Abortions rights supporters have said there are also fewer clinics performing abortions.

Camera finds Martian snow

NASA critiques shots taken by cell specialist, botanist

The Baltimore Sun

There is a common perception that snow is a common feature of Mars. William M. Kater and Eric Erb have captured some of the most striking images of snow on Mars.

Greenbelt, Md. NASA scientists came to the Beltsville researchers last year looking for help designing sensors for facilities that would measure the depths of Mars' icecaps.

Midwaves emitted by Mars change during the seasons depending on the snowpacks, so the planet's snowpacks and icecaps can be measured with microwave signals.

But to design effective sensors, NASA had to know something about the size and shape of the snow crystals that covered Mars' polar ice caps.

Foster said numerous aerial photographs have been taken of Mars' icecaps, but that none show the shape or the size of the snow that forms them.

"We know that it's white, it's nearly as bright as the snow on Earth, and the feeling is that it's very weak and brittle."

earthbound flakes. Scientists say most of the differences between the two types of snow can be traced to Mars' chiller climate.

For one thing, Martian snow is not made from water but from carbon dioxide — a compound that exists as a gas in Earth's atmosphere.

On Mars, which is considerably farther from the sun than Earth is, winters are much longer and get so bitterly cold — more than 200 degrees below zero — that carbon dioxide commonly freezes into solid crystals.

Nobody had ever visualized CO (carbon dioxide) crystals before," Wergin said, adding that he was intrigued by NASA's request last year but knew there was no way to bring snow back from Mars.

So Wergin and Erb took commercial dry ice — frozen carbon dioxide used to chill everything from medical supplies to meats — and raised the temperature of the dry ice so it would "sublime," or convert into a gas.

They then stirred the gas to the temperatures of the Martian winter: minus 240 degrees Fahrenheit.

At that temperature, the carbon dioxide gas turned into Mars' brittle, white snow, and Wergin and Erb photographed it, just as they had done four years ago with early snow.

In 1994, they published articles in several scientific journals reporting that they had created three-dimensional, microscopic photographs of snow.

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Chorale will reprise a holiday tradition Saturday and Sunday.

Now in its 27th year, the group will present its annual Christmas show, featuring the music of Camille Saint-Saens, John Rutter and Daniel Pinkham.

More than 100 voices make this concert the group's most popular.

Featured soloists are soprano Serena Jenkins-Clark, mezzo-soprano Camille Cox, alto Crickler Harrison, tenor Jack Van Buren and baritone Robert Newman.

Music will include Saint-Saens

Joyful sounds

- ❑ When: The Magic Valley Chorale will present its annual Christmas concerts.
- ❑ Where: College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Center auditorium, Twin Falls.
- ❑ When: Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 3 p.m.

"Christmas Ocarina," Rutter's "Joy to the World" and Pinkham "Christmas Cantata."

Three times annually for a quarter century, the chorale has brought together between 70 to 130 members together to sing a variety of choral works and oratorios — including Georg Friedrich Handel's "Messiah" every third year.

In the past, the group has done such works as Johannes Sebastian Bach's "The Passion," Vaughan Williams' "Hodie" and Felix Mendelssohn's "Elijah," among other oratorios.

The chorale's highlight came in 1993, when nine members went to New York City and sang Rutter's "Magnificat" with 300 other singers.

Directed by College of Southern Idaho music professor Carson Wong since 1980, the group is open to anyone who can read music and match pitch.

The chorale will be accompanied this weekend by pianist Sue Miller and the Magic Valley Chamber Orchestra.

Carson Wong will lead the choir in unusual arrangements of classics such as "The Twelve Days of Christmas."

Christmas lights parade twinkles in downtown TF

By Rachel Denny
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Historic downtown Twin Falls has one of the few light parades in southern Idaho, this year the theme for tonight's Christmas Lights Parade is "A Christmas Carol."

Organizers of the sixth annual parade wanted to put a little romance into Christmas.

"One of the reasons is we wanted to bring back the romance of Christmas to our downtown," said Teresa Charbonneau, Historic Downtown Business Improvement District events coordinator.

Charbonneau, who was an observer for many years before working on it, said that watching the expressions of the children at the parade is priceless.

"It brings together a wonderful event where your family can come together and enjoy the awes of Christmas," she said.

"It's funny when you sit and watch the parade, all the kids faces light up. It's just a wonderful, magical time of year to enjoy your children."

"There's nothing quite like the ambience of Old Towne and Downtown to bring out the little kid in all of us," she said.

This year there will be over 30 businesses participating in the parade, and 30-of-those-have-returned-from-previous-years.

"There's a sense of excitement in

If you go

To the parade will start at the corner of Fifth Avenue West and Second Street West at 6:30 p.m. and wind its way through the downtown area back to the starting point.

decorating the floats and putting together costumes," Charbonneau said.

"There's a lot of energy flowing."

Downtown BID director Randy Bombardier said that this will be the first time he sees a lights parade, and it's a great concept.

"I think in the future we need to build on these and do what we can to enhance our corner of the world," he said.

He believes that Twin Falls has something special in the parade.

Ard Charbonneau added, it's short enough that little kids can go to it.

"It's short enough you can have your children out with merchants, and take part in downtown events," she said.

After the parade, awards will be given to various floats and entries, weather permitting the band BCC will play a variety of music from Christmas to show our love with merchants, and take part in downtown events," she said.

Many businesses will be open until 8 p.m.

Alfred Hitchcock, one presumes, is chortling from the grave.

In a move normally reserved only for movies assured of a critical crucifixion, Universal Pictures did not prescreen Van Sant's reverent remake of Hitch's classic "Psycho," which opens nationwide today.

The studio attributes this decision to Van Sant's plan to slavishly follow in the master's footsteps: Hitchcock refused to prescreen the 1960 original, on the grounds that reviewers might give away the thriller's shocking twist.

According to the director, the new "psycho," which stars Vince Vaughn as the creepy motel manager originally played by Anthony Perkins, and Anne Heche as the embezzler unlucky enough to stop at his place for the night, is virtually a shot-for-shot remake of the original.

Van Sant has referred to it as "a forgery. Like we're making a copy of the Mona Lisa or the statue of David."

There are differences, however. Most notably, the new film is in color instead of the original black-and-white.

The film's famous shower scene — which featured Janet Leigh in the original — is said to be more explicit, with the nudity and violence that Hitchcock originally implied.

Hitchcock had originally attempted to film the opening scene of Leigh and her lover in a cheap hotel room via a helicopter shot, but abandoned it when the technology of the time proved unreliable.

Coasters coast in to Cactus Petes

The Times-News

JACKPOT — From "Yakety Yak" to "Charlie Brown," the Coasters will be singing chart-toppers since the 1950s. Next week, Billy Richards' Coasters will be on stage at Cactus Petes Resort Casino.

The four original Coasters met in Los Angeles' black ghetto and started singing in small clubs during the early '50s. They raked up hits on both the R&B and the Top 10 charts. Among the hits are "Poison Ivy," "Along Came Jones" and "What About Us?"

Billy Richards, who has sung, recorded and toured his entire adult life, hooked up with the Coasters in the 1960s. Under his leadership, the group has made numerous TV appearances on shows such as "America's Funniest People," "American Bandstand" and "Sha Na Na." The group has also done commercials for Federal Express, Church's Fried Chicken and Pease see COASTERS, Page 2

The Mozart Effect: Music enhances brain's ability for academics

Knight Ridder News Service

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Five-year-old Destiny Blair would rather watch violinist Vanessa Marcu perform on TV than pop star Vanessa Williams.

Her mother, Nicolette Scott, isn't sure what shaped Destiny's musical preferences, whether it was the music she heard in ballet classes or the viola she heard her mother practice at home. She just knows that her daughter likes classical music.

Obviously, Destiny is broadening her cultural horizons at a young age.

But recent studies have suggested she also might be building her brain.

Now, most of us have heard about studies that show children who get a steady dose of classical music while they're young have better test scores.

What the new studies say is that some classical music enhances concentration and facilitates higher-brain functions like spatial reasoning.

The tests, conducted in the early 1990s at the University of California, showed that 36 undergraduates scored higher on spatial tests after listening to Mozart's Sonata for Two Pianos in D Major. Those effects, dubbed "the Mozart Effect," lasted 10 to 15 minutes.

Putting it into practice
How seriously have the Mozart Effect and other studies showing beneficial effects of classical music been taken?

In Georgia and Colorado, through programs endorsed by state leaders, newborns get a classical music CD or tape in their hospital gaily bags.

Hudson Valley Community College in New York has established a "Mozart Effect" Study Area, where students can earn credit for exams while listening to Mozart and other composers of the Classical Era (mid-18th to mid-19th century). Students who studied for finals in the room said they had never done so well.

An elementary school in suburban Denver played Mozart while students took the Iowa Test of Basic Skills and reported that test scores rose 4 to 8 percentage points.

At Arlington Elementary School in Lexington, Ky., music teacher Andrea Frasure is making tapes of Mozart for other teachers to play during certain periods of the day.

"Children have expressed an interest in music and its effects on learning," said Frasure, who's trying to use the study results in work with students from age 4 to fifth grade.

years, both have realized that students with special needs generally excel in other areas as well.

Other teachers, sitting with Frasure, are continuing ways to apply Mozart Effect research in school. From playing music in the background to studying it in depth.

"I hear that the students are more confident," she said. "It affirms the mind of the students and their desire to learn."

It is still unclear how Mozart Effect findings should be used. Is simply listening to the music enough as some studies suggest, or do you need to do an activity while listening to attempt to identify the complexities of the music?

Frasure is a passive listener and would have an affect, but active listening is where most expanding benefits are derived.

"The thing that I take from the Mozart Effect is the idea that music requires you to use parallel processing simultaneously taking things such as pitch and harmony."

— Andrea Frasure, schoolteacher

"The thing that I take from the Mozart Effect is the idea that music requires you to use parallel processing simultaneously taking things such as pitch and harmony," she said. "It affirms the mind of the students and their desire to learn."

The general consensus is that the composer's complex, changing melodies, combined with the general emotional neutrality of his music, enable some of the benefits made in the brain that improve test scores.

French physician Alfred Tomatis, who has done research contributing to the Mozart Effect's claims, has linked into the question of why Mozart has such a marked effect. He keeps coming up with the same answer.

"He has found that complex, a listener-to-listener or auditory exposure to the composer, the music of Mozart invariably called listeners' attention to spatial perception and allowed them to express themselves more clearly — communicating with both their hands and mind."

Don Campbell writes in "The Mozart Effect," a sort of bible of the theory. Campbell asserts "Clarity, the rhythmic, melodic and high frequency of Mozart's music stimulate and charge the creative and motivational regions of the brain. But perhaps the key to his genius is that, at all times, it is just and simple. His wit, charm and simplicity allow us to locate a deeper wisdom in a naive, childlike voice."

Others say the jury is still out. "What if you were to repeat the same experiment with a musical sample that was equally complex but less well-known — like Stockhausen or Sun Ra," ethnomusicologist Elizabeth Miller writes in her book, "When the Brain A-Tunes In." "The jury answers to these questions, we can't give Mozart the credit of the cognitive marker."

TWIN FALLS — Musician Braun will perform a free holiday concert Saturday from 2 to 3 p.m. at the Magic Valley Mall.

Braun, a Clayton musician best known for his long-standing country act with his sons, will sing many holiday favorites and some of his own material.

The Twin Falls appearance is the first of several around the state to promote his new CDs, "Stanley Stomp" and "Buck Divo, Far Too Times Tunes." "Stanley Stomp" is Braun's first solo effort in 10 years. The music is rich with Gem State references and humor. Braun's oldest sons, Willy and Cody and their band, Redneck Rally, sat in as the studio musicians on the CD.

ARTS IN BRIEF

In his other CD, Braun becomes the singing cowboy golfer and takes on alter-ego "Buck Divo" with goofy golf songs. Buck Divo's first collection of golf tunes was released in 1996.

Both CDs can be purchased from Idaho Records or area media stores.

TWIN FALLS — The Portland, Ore.-based John Nilsen Trio will perform tonight at the United Methodist Church, 360 Shoshone St. E.

Nilsen just returned from a concert tour of England. He has recorded 12 albums. The show is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. A free-will offering will be taken.

BUHL — The Buhl Christmas Lights Parade will be held Saturday night at 7 p.m.

Participating downtown merchants will host open houses during the afternoon and evening, and the Buhl Kiwanis plan a chili feed from 5 to 7 p.m. at the West End Senior Citizens Center.

The Buhl Arts Council plans a gallery walk during the evening, with artwork displayed at the Buhl School District office, Cosmic Jolt, Grandstrand's Grill and the senior center.

KEYTCHUM — The Rev. Iris K. Barratt will present a free lecture and sign her new book, "The Divination Workshop: An Expert's Guide to Awakening the Power and Wisdom of your Soul" from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Thursday at Iconoclast Books, 100 First Ave. N.

The book is a hands-on collection of exercises to develop the skills to ask the right questions, determine the most beneficial solutions and enhance every aspect of life, including health, career, relationships, personal safety, risk-taking and timing.

Barratt is the author of many articles and tapes on divination, hypnotherapy, forgiveness, personal enrichment and healing. For more information, call 726-1564.

Theater company is 'plaid' all over

By Steve Crump Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — It's sort of about the '90s.

The New Theater Company will begin its fifth season Saturday night with a production of Stuart Woolf's tribute musical, "Forever Plaid."

The rockin' retro to doo-wop and bebop is the story of four unlikely heroes whose dreams of musical glory come true when they miraculously debut on earth.

This endearing harmony group was "snuffed out in mid-code" in a collision with a school bus of eager teenagers who were on their way to see the Beatles' debut on "The Ed Sullivan Show" in 1964.

Now through a hole in the one-way mirror, a socio-technical world of these needy cronies came back to life to show they never got to perform in life.

This nostalgic comedy includes songs such as "Love is a Many Splendored Thing," "Crazy 'Bout You Baby," "No No Not Much," "Three Coins in a Fountain" and "Mama's Reverend."

The cast, directed by Patry Parsons and choreographed by Susan Mogen, includes Paul Spaans, Eric Larson, David Blumfield and Russ Kirk with accompaniment provided by Joe Fox, Jeff Riew, Ted Dyer and Dorinda Rendahl.

Plaid
What: The New Theater Company will present Stuart Woolf's "Forever Plaid."
Where: Sun Valley Grand Hotel
Room: (Mainly the Old House)
Q: When: Tonight through Tuesday and again Dec. 10-13, 8 p.m.
Q: How much: Tickets, which are $15 for adults and $10 for kids 18 and under, are available from the Grand Old Bookery, 1000 N. Ketchikan, Read All About It in Haley, and the Sun Valley Resort.

The New Theater Company was created as an avenue for locals to use their talents in contemporary theater.

Founded in September 1994 to present a production of Steven Dietz's "Lonely Planet" as a benefit for the effort to prevent the passage of an anti-gay-rights initiative, the company has gone on to produce Terrence McNally's "A Perfect Gamosh," A.R. Burney's "Sylvia" and Jeffrey Hatcher's "Three Viewings."

The troupe next plans a production of a "shaggy dog comedy," "Picasso at the Lapid Age," written by comedy Steve Martin. It's scheduled for Feb. 19-24.

Company kids stage a holiday variety show

By Rachel Denney Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — In the spirit of Christmas, the Junior Musical Playhouse will present a musical Christmas concert and variety show complete with religious and secular tunes.

"The kids have worked up a lot of their old songs," co-organizer Cindy Koffer said. "And they've worked up a group act and put it together into a show."

Participants are ages 7-18 and this is really a chance for younger kids to get the hang of show biz.

"Most of the kids are younger," Koffer said. "This is where they learn how to do the summer show which is limited to big kids. They are little troopers and their enthusiasm rubs off on you. When kids do it they get young."

"Another organizer, Karen Fothergill, said that the show will be a great compilation of many talents."

Some of them will be funny comedy pieces and some will be serious," she said. "Some kids will dress up like elves or reindeer. Some kids will accompany themselves on the piano or other instruments, but mostly it's just singing."

Tunes that will be heard include "Allie the Elf," "Santa's Visit," "Zebra's No," "Who Child is This?" and "Silent Night." The show will include solos, small group performances, and a variety of acts by the entire ensemble.

But seating is limited. "We sold out last time we were in the Presbyterian Church," Fothergill says.

"To encourage people to get their tickets in advance so they don't have to miss it."

George Martin, Beatles' producer, plans retirement

The Baltimore Sun

All George Martin wanted to do was find a day job that would let him make music in the evenings. What he ended up doing was helping revolutionize the world of popular music.

From 1962 to 1970, George Martin was the "fifth Beatle," the producer who saw to it that the genius of John, Paul, George and Ringo made it onto vinyl for all the world to hear. His crisp production, not to mention his careful shepherding of the group's talent and energy, played a huge role in creating the second great revolution in rock 'n' roll.

But the Beatles took up only a small part of George Martin's 46-year career. Before them, he was one of England's foremost producers of jazz and comedy records. Since the group's breakup, he's continued working with the best of rock, including Xzibit, Bush, Peter Gabriel and Elvis Costello.

Last month, MCA released what the 72-year-old Sir George promises will be his last album as producer. "In My Life" is a 12-track compliment of Beatles songs featuring some decidedly different voices. Goldie Hawn cooing "Hard Day's Night," Jim Carrey crooning through "I Am the Walrus," Rubin Williams wailing "Come Together" and the grounds-as-well-as some traditional singers such as Phil Collins on "Goldie's Slumber" and Gillian Triggs crooning "I'm a Woman" are among the highlights.

"I'm a woman" is the title of a two-hour documentary on the making of "In My Life." So Sir George consented to those he usually doesn't resist — talking about his career. In that practice, mellifluous British accent, Beatles fans have come to know the spike about his nearly five decades in creating life with the Beatles and why he's chosen now to call it a career.

On cruise that traveled: "In choosing to make a final production, my first thought was to say, 'I'll make this an album of my own stuff — I've done quite a lot, and I can write some more and do a personal album.' And then I said to myself, 'You idiot, why do you want to do that? No one is going to listen to it... So forget that one.'"

On choosing the lineup for "In My Life": "I was working on a television program called 'The Rhythm of Life' — a fairly serious look at music, and one of the people I met was Colin Dixon. We spent a morning together, and I got on very well with her. "She asked me what I was doing, and I said I was making my last record. And I thought, 'Wait a minute, I don't know you very well but, would you like to do a track?' A bit cheeky, but she said, 'I'd love to.' And that was super.

"Then I thought of all those people I really admire. I've always admired Robin Williams immensely, and Goldie Hawn and Jim Carrey too... And actually during the casting, he became fun — who could I get to do so and so. On the results: "It was a good, fun thing to do. In approaching this album, I'm not looking to break new barriers, I'm not painting the Sistine Chapel, you know what I mean? ... If you're going to go out, let's go out on an album which I shall remember with affection."

Glam just isn't what it used to be, but it still inspires

The Hartford Courant

NEW YORK — New film "Velvet Goldmine" takes its name from an obscure David Bowie B-side recorded, but never released, during his early '70s Ziggy Stardust era, only to resurface two decades later as a bonus song on the "Ziggy Stardust" CD reissue.

By then, Bowie had undergone more plastic surgery on his person than perhaps any rock star ever. He continuously re-created and reinvented himself, moving from the glittering alien starchild of "Ziggy Stardust" to the blue-eyed soul of "Young Americans," through gender ambiguity and ultimately his '90s role as a sleek, sly stadium pop star with new-wave hits "Let's Dance" and "Modern Love."

"Velvet Goldmine" plays more as a glam-rock fantasy than a straightforward biopic, which makes the film's connections between its glam icon Brian Slade (Jonathan Rhys-Meyers) and his American idol Curt Wild (Ewan McGregor), and the real-life friendship between Bowie and the so-called "Iggy Pop," almost irascible. Writer-director Todd Haynes ("Safe," "Poison") insists "Velvet Goldmine" is more fiction than fact. Indeed, glam rock's very nature lends itself to pretending and striking poses. As much about style as sound, equal parts real and fantasy, glam-rock was based on dressing up, sexual ambiguity and blurred personas like Bowie's Ziggy character.

However, while inspiring talk of a glam-rock revival in both the fashion and music worlds, "Velvet Goldmine" ultimately suggests that glam-rock failed. Slade, the Bowie-like character, morphs into a corporate, stadium rock star by the '80s. The fans touched by glam-rock's openness as teenagers become the conservative voters who elected Ronald Reagan and

Jonathan Rhys-Meyers and Ewan McGregor star in 'Velvet Goldmine.'

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

Yet the soundtrack of "Velvet Goldmine" is so strong that it almost undoes the film's bleak depiction of that decade. Perhaps glam didn't fail since the musicians who pioneered what became alternative rock — such as R.E.M.'s Michael Stipe and Sonic Youth's Thurston Moore — all took inspiration from Bowie, Iggy Pop, Lou Reed and Rory Mullen.

Stipe, the film's executive producer, helped assemble the soundtrack, as well as all-star bands for Slade, and Wild. Slade's 'Venus in Furs' includes Radiohead's Thom Yorke, ex-Suede guitarist Bernard Butler, and Roxey Music's Andy McKay. Wild's 'Wydle Rutz' features Moore, Minutemen's朱元璋 Mike Watt and the Strokes' Ron Asheton. In addition, glam-friendly bands like Pulp, Shudder to Think and Grant Lee Buffalo contribute new glam-inspired songs to the soundtrack, while Blackstar, Teenage Fanclub and Elastica pay tribute to essential artifacts like the New York Bulls' "Personality Crisis."

Kiss hopes to out-Kiss Kiss again

The Hartford Courant

By the time the smoke cleared all the theatrical blood and theatrical blood was mopped up, Kiss generated $130 million on its bestselling 1996-97 comeback tour.

"They even put us on the cover of 'Rolling Stone,' which is pretty huge. I thought 'I'd never be on the front of,'" says Paul Stanley, the guitarist and singer who paints a star over his eye in Kiss makeup. The next step was going straight to the studio, where Stanley, 43; bassist Ace Frehley, 47; and drummer Peter Criss, 50, recorded their first album together in 20 years. And the tour that accompanies the "Psycho Circus" album necessarily has to be bigger than the last one.

"Certainly last time around, nobody was disappointed by what they saw," Stanley said. "But this time we're incorporating 3-D technology into the show." The band members, of course, have always operated in such dimensions. But for this tour, he says, "We have massive screens, including a 22-by-40-foot screen behind us, and at key points in show, the audience puts on their 3-D glasses."

"The effect?" "I gotta say, by all appearances, if we got closer to you, we'd get arrested," Stanley says.

It's all part of upping the ante at a Kiss show, something that would be a problem even on the comeback tour.

ple's gimmicks of whimsy did."

Kiss' renewed by '70s Kiss concert "remember massive lightning systems that in all honesty didn't even" Stanley says. "We had a massive lighting system composed of seven cases at the time, but five guys with colored lights in the state of the art."

Stanley says the current show includes Simmons flying up to a lighting crane, Frehley shooting tracers from his guitar, and Stanley flying out on the midway when he wants to do that. "I'm not going to cause structural damage."

But the biggest difference from the last tour will be the new song, that sound like they were written with weapons in mind.

In making "Psycho Circus" with producer Bruce Fairbairn, Stanley says, "the intention was only to make sure we didn't make a self-consciously retro album — an album to mimic what we had done before."

"The repertoire was the spirit and chemistry we saw on tour, as opposed to doing the 'Son of Strutter'."

Criss' reaction has been mixed. "I'm not sure about the album cover, other than it's the worst."

And a music-publishing company has filed suit, claiming one song sounded a bit too familiar. Six Palms Music Corp. filed suit last month, saying the song "Dremin'" credited to Stanley with former Kiss guitarist Bruce Kulick, borrows too much from the 1971 Alice Cooper anthem "Eighteen."

Older audiences create film variety

Knight Ridder News Service

A recent ranking of the most powerful people in the movie business showed that nearly all of the industry's top 20 power brokers were 55 or older.

Tom Hanks stars in the blockbuster "Saving Private Ryan." The movie is about a small band of soldiers during WWII who have orders to rescue a young American soldier who's captured by the Axis forces.

The reason is simple. You get to be among the most powerful people in Hollywood by understanding and catering to your audience, and in the movie business, the audience is young.

People 60 and older represent only 9 percent of the movie-going audience in the United States, according to statistics compiled by the National Business Association of America.

But the industry is not just about young people. The success of "The Sandlot" and "The Hot Chick" shows that there is still a market for older audiences.

And getting movies to a younger crowd means giving the audience characters with whom they can identify. Young characters are more appealing to younger audiences.

lished the idea that age-inclusive movies have extra box office zip — an idea that becomes more important as Hollywood becomes more mindful of an aging audience.

"It wouldn't be so categorical to say that Hollywood doesn't make movies for or about old people, or that it doesn't care about that audience. The studios do care," said Tom Borys, a box office analyst at AC Nielsen. EDI.

Especially as that audience becomes more important to the bottom line. While people 60 and older account for only 9 percent of the total audience, that segment has grown substantially from 1987 levels, when it represented just 5 percent of the market.

Disney's 'Prince' calls forth a plague of songs

The Washington Post

DreamWorks is dreaming big with "The Prince of Egypt." When the studio's much-ballyhooped animated feature opens Dec. 18, it will have been preceded by not one, not two, but three soundtracks from its music division.

"The Prince of Egypt: Music From the Original Motion Picture" (DreamWorks)

This album features an evocative score by Hans Zimmer ("The Lion King") and several theatrical songs by Stephen Schwartz, who did "Pocahontas" and "The Hunchback of Notre Dame."

"Through Heaven's Eyes" gets a double reading, once in a staid pop setting by Brian Stokes Mitchell and later as lively soul singer R&B by K-Ci and Jodeci.

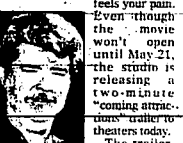

That, analysts say, has pushed studios toward more history-based material ("Apollo 13," "Schindler's List") toward movies that feature older performers (the Lemmon-Matthau "Grumpy Old Men" franchise) and subject matter suited to older people.

Try to sneak a peek at new 'Star Wars' film

And a nation full of older citizens who'd just as soon read a book. "Movies are aimed mostly at people 18 to 24 years old because they go to the movies most often. You tend to find most of the products aimed at that age group," observed Paul D'Arpa, president of Exhibitor Relations, a company that tracks the box office performance of Hollywood movies.

And getting movies to a younger crowd means giving the audience characters with whom they can identify. Young characters are more appealing to younger audiences.

Patrick Stewart's Picard finds love in 'Insurrection'

The Orlando Sentinel

NEW YORK — Are those stars in the eyes of Capt. Picard? You bet your sweet photon torpedo they are. In "Star Trek: Insurrection," the latest chapter in the intergalactic film series, the foursquare father figure of the U.S.S. Enterprise develops a deep, personal relationship with something other than his beloved starship.

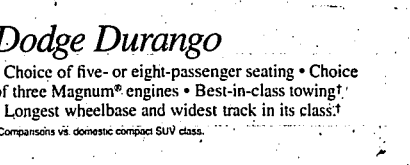

Patrick Stewart

"It has a charming romantic storyline for the good captain, which makes a change," revealed Picard's alter-ego Patrick Stewart, with a mischievous smile. "I'm feeling very good about it."

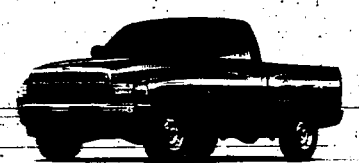

Returning to the topic of movie's romantic themes, Stewart cautioned that it would be wrong to assume that Picard falls gleamingly head-over-heels for anyone as mundane as a human female. "I don't get involved with Earth people," he said with a humorous frown. "If the best idea were simply to tell me to consider 'I have nothing to say to Earth people,' she's a beautiful alien."

WEEKEND

Movies

 you'll know just how the guys (oh PG-13 violence).
 • "Foxy" — Vince Vaughn hands Anne Heche her room key in director Gus Van Sant's scene-for-scene homage to the Hitchcock classic. (R for violence and sexual nudity.)
 • "Ringsmaster" — Writer Jon Bernstein and director Neil Abramson take a shared, funny look at the kind of people eager to appear on the Jerry Springer show and why. A sharp, clever job. Featuring Springer himself. (R for strong sexual content and for language.)

• "The Rugrats Movie" — The beloved precocious babies of the seven-years-running TV series make the move to the big screen with warmth and style as Rugrat hero Tommy has to cope with a new baby brother and then a wild adventure in the forest with his pals. (G.)
 • "Rush Hour" — Jackie Chan and Chris Tucker are delights in this mismatched-cop film where the Hong Kong detective duo can't wait for any obstacle to meet the LA detective who can talk his way past any obstacle. PG-13 (language, violence, drugs)
 • "The Siege" — A political thriller about Arab terrorists targeting New York has more plausibility than most due to expert performances by government operatives Dennis Washington and Annette Bening, but once Bruce Willis' Army general takes over the city, believability takes a body blow. (R for violence, language and profanity.)

 • "Soldier" — Kurt Russell is all pumped up with warlike energy as a former soldier who uses his training to protect a band of interplanetary castaways. Rated R, violence, language.
 • "There's Something About Mary" — The Farrelly brothers

("Dumb & Dumber") return with a romantic comedy about stalking, which certainly will tickle audiences who prefer to see people slip on bodily fluids instead of banana peels. Ben Stiller mopes amusingly as a loser carrying a limp torch for beautiful doctor Cameron Diaz, and Matt Dillon is hilarious as the "stinky" detective Stiller hires to find her. Rated R, language, comic violence, pervasive gross-out.
 • "Very Bad Things" — A gleefully twisted black comedy about a bachelor party that goes terribly wrong. Christian Slater, Jon Favreau and Cameron Diaz lead an unrestrained ensemble cast in this variously fun, macabre, excessive, grotesque and decidedly dark vision of what people can get up to. R (violence, gore, sexual situations, nudity, profanity)

 • "The Waterboy" — This latest Adam Sandler comedy follows a leaden predictable path that will be familiar to anyone who's seen a recent sports movie, or any Sandler movie. Miserable underdog rises to top, falls, is redeemed. Kathy Bates and Henry Winkler co-star. (PG-13 for language and some crude sexual humor.)

• "What Dreams May Come" — Robin Williams dies, goes to heaven and gallops out to hell to be with his wife. Eye-popping, heart-breaking, mind-bending, gut-wrenching and, finally, life-affirming. "What Dreams May Come" takes organs and emotions hostage until a cathartic finale that doesn't so much just tears as pump them. PG-13 (grotesque, gore, death, mature themes)
 • "The Wizard of Oz" — The little girl from Kansas (Judy Garland) returns to theaters in a digitally restored print of the 1939 classic.

Who but Farley, with his Falstaffian leer, could make the phrase 'shaking hands with President Jefferson' sound so pitifully, hilariously obscene? Contains slapstick violence, elementary-school profanity, a bare backside and jokes about marriage."

"Sliding Doors" (PG-13) - Very nearly the perfect date movie, "Doors" features an adorably British-accented Gwyneth Paltrow as a woman whose life splits off into two separate paths as she rushes to catch a subway train. The script has wit and charm to spare and Peter Jackson's clever direction keeps the fanciful premise from ever collapsing. Scottish actor John Hannah is particularly winning as Paltrow's impossibly perfect love interest in her alternate unit.

"This movie is for anyone who believes in romantic destiny... dull realists need not apply. Contains sexual situations and lots of delightfully British vulgarity."

BACKBEAT

The Canadian quintet, 'Barenaked Ladies,' have released their fifth album 'Stunt.' The new CD combines their affinity for humor crafted with gorgeous pop melodies. The result is a solid album.

Cool 'Stunt': Barenaked Ladies dredge up hit CD

The Dallas Morning News

Barenaked Ladies singer-guitarist Steven Page laughs at the fame wrought by "Stunt," the album that put the band in the spotlight after four previous efforts and years of relentless touring. Overnight success? Hardly.

"I had a guy driving some arched-truck-stop-the-moaning and say, 'Hey, aren't you from that video?' Or people often stop and say, 'Hey, you're the 'It's Been a Year' guy, as opposed to the rapping guy." I love the fact that we can do what we always did, and all of a sudden our audience is a hundred times bigger than it ever was.

"That video" is called "One Week," the "Stunt" single that reached No. 1 (and a firm spot in MTV's rotation). But the sweetly irreverent Toronto band was at it long before—the mainstream caught up.

Some know them as "that macaroni and cheese group," a rep earned from fans who hyl' boxes of the stuff on stage during a key clip of the "ditty" "I'll Have $1 Million" Ozbots hear the name, and identify them as those funny Canadian guys who suddenly made it big.

Well, they are funny. And they are Canadian! But they've also been crafting gorgeous pop melodies and thoughtful lyrics since before their 1992 major label debut, "Gordon," went platinum in their home country.

They're a longtime live phenomenon, winning audiences with goofy rap medleys, various tones of undress and an all-too-rare sense of musical humor.

So will success go to their heads? "Not bet your Knut dinner on it."

"We didn't have to change our style for The Man, which was kind of cool," says Page. "I just get a kick out of the fact that this is so big, although I don't even notice it sometimes. We're still kind of invisible enough that we can wander around the streets and no one cares. But then at night we go to some arena and play to 15,000 people. It's kind of fun."

Timing is a funny thing. "Gordon" was a pop gem, boasting some of the finest harmonies and sharpest lyrics this side of R.E.M. But it also slanted toward the silly, with songs such as "Be My Yoko Ono" and "Box Set" poking fun at pop culture with gentle glee. The ladies were mistaken by many for a novelty act.

N64's Zelda sets new standard for system

By Roy Basava Knight Rider News Service

Format: Nintendo 64 on a 256-megabyte cartridge, an industry first.

Estimated selling price, manufacturer: $69.95, Nintendo.

Category: 3-D adventure/RPG.

Players: One. Accessories used: InterAct's Rumble Pak. Recommended age 6 and up.

How the game works: Just like Legend of Zelda: Link of the Past on Super Nintendo, this version starts with Link, a young elf from the magical Kokiri Forest, standing in the rain. A cinematic cutscene shows Link watching in fear as an evil knight leaves Hyrule Castle on horseback, carrying with him Zelda, a young elf princess. Link runs to the lowered drawbridge and tries to cross the moat, but his path is blocked by Ganondorf, a thief with a greedy grin. Thus begins Link's adventure on the N64, a use many weapons—a sword, spells, a shield, arrows and some special ones best left unweilded.

Your ultimate goal is to save Zelda and defeat the evil forces that attacked her, while leaving the world in darkness.

Great action, full picture. Using the Rumble Pak, which is recommended, allows the graphics to surpass Nintendo's own "Mario 64," with endless landscapes, gorgeous cities and dark dungeons. These Nintendo games even the best 3-D game, "Zelda" runs at between 24 and 30 frames per second, which goes beyond the standard of 30 frames, thus, less, and character, and a lack of seamless animation.

Sound effects are cutting edge. Depending on what you hit with your sword, you hear a cool sound—clank or metallic. The game is also alive with bird calls, animal noises and footsteps.

Tip: You meet a horse early in the game, but you can't ride it until you're a little older. Then just jump on the horse with the B button. With the 3-D stick, Link can ride in any direction, and you can vary the speed of his horse.

To use the sword, press the A button; Link draws his sword and carries it in his left hand. Press the button again and he swings the blade horizontally. Pressing the button three times performs two swings and one downward slash. For clues and walk-throughs, get Nintendo Power Magazine's "The Legend of Zelda: Ocean of Time Player's Guide" ($10.99) or visit the Web site at www.nintendo.com.

The verdict: "Legend of Zelda" sets a new standard for 64-bit animated games.

Taxpayers can still take steps in December to lower IRS bill

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — December is a busy whirl of holiday shopping and visits with family — and the last chance for millions of taxpayers to make crucial end-of-year decisions that could reduce their tax bills come April 15.

"Now is the time to make sure you have done everything to minimize the taxes due," said Sandra Soltes, a partner with the accounting firm Blackman Kallick Barstien.

For the most part, taxpayers need to make their tax moves by Dec. 31 to realize the benefits from 1998. There are some exceptions — an estimated $35 million in 1996 — have the most advantages of capital gains taxes.

Some moves are simple, such as making sure the January mortgage payment is made in December to deduct the interest on this year's return. Others are complicated, such as selling poorly-performing stocks to take advantage of capital gains tax rules.

The single plan can reduce or defer tax for at least one year, said Michael Wolf, managing partner at the Grant Thornton accounting firm. "To be effective, the plan must be tailored to your circumstances."

Still, tax advisers point out things to consider for millions of middle-class taxpayers.

Converting a regular individual retirement arrangement, or IRA, to a new Roth IRA is one such item. Roth IRAs are advantageous for many people because withdrawals are tax-free if they are made after age 59½ and the money has been in the account at least five years.

"There is an upfront tax on the amount converted. But if the conversion is made by Dec. 31, the tax can be spread out over four years instead of just one. That installment plan disappears on New Year's Day."

To make the conversion, adjusted gross income must be less than $100,000 for individuals and couples. For people at the cusp, a few steps in the coming weeks could ensure the level is reached.

For instance, a self-employed person could defer an income payment until January or a wage payment until December 31 to delay that end-of-year boost.

"You have to be in a situation where your income is flexible," said John Gardner, senior manager at the KPMG Peat Marwick accountants.

Minimizing adjusted gross income, a taxpayer's earnings before itemized or standard deductions or personal exemp-

IRS aims for 80% electronic filing

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Buried by mountains of paper, the Internal Revenue Service announced an ambitious goal of having 80 percent of taxpayers file their income tax returns electronically by 2007.

Several steps toward that goal, ranging from payment-by-credit card to the use of personal identification numbers in place of signatures, will be available on a limited basis in 1999. But officials say far more must be done to increase filing by telephone and computer.

"The majority of returns today are still filed on paper," IRS Commissioner Charles Rossotti told an advisory panel Thursday. "Most of what we have to do lies ahead of us."

The IRS is pushing electronic filing to reduce errors, speed processing time and provides better security for private information. For the taxpayer, refunds can arrive in half the time compared with paper returns.

Tax deadline

The IRS will accept late returns through Dec. 31, 1998. The deadline for filing returns is Dec. 31, 1998.

About 20 percent of taxpayers, or 24.6 million, filed electronically in 1997. That amount is expected to increase over the next few years. The IRS officials say progress might slow without technological improvements, such as production that have "more public appeal."

For example, the requirement that taxpayers sign returns on a computer program to their tax returns simply means that the IRS will mail them in. Late returns are not accepted if they are not prepared in the way the IRS determines.

The IRS is conducting a two-year pilot project this year to reduce tax issues by using PINs to authenticate for signature.

Tips to minimize 1998 taxes

If you make a resolution to act before New Year's Day

1. Maximize your 401(k) contributions: Contribute as much as you can to your employer's retirement savings plan. You can make an individual retirement account contribution after Dec. 31 up to $2,000 in 1998. A rollover savings account also can make a $2,000 IRA contribution.
2. Look at IRAs: Even if you already contribute to an employer retirement savings plan, you can make an individual retirement account contribution after Dec. 31 up to $2,000 in 1998. A rollover savings account also can make a $2,000 IRA contribution.
3. Adjust your W-2: Match the federal income tax your employer-withholds from your paycheck to your actual tax bill. If you overpay, you can get a refund; if you underpay, you can avoid a penalty.
4. Buy bonds: Consider buying some of your investment funds in municipal bonds. Interest on the bonds is free from federal income tax. If you invest in City bonds, the interest also is free from state income tax.
5. Offset income: If you can, use your 1998 income to offset your 1997 income. You can't carry back a loss, but you can carry forward a loss up to 10 years.
6. Offset income: If you can, use your 1998 income to offset your 1997 income. You can't carry back a loss, but you can carry forward a loss up to 10 years.
7. Shift income: Transfer assets to a child, but watch out for the kiddie tax. Or have your child do legitimate work at your business.
8. Give a gift: Charitable donations generally are deductible if you itemize deductions. Also, you (and your spouse) can give up to $10,000 a year to any number of people free from gift tax.
9. Add up medical bills: If your medical expenses are nearly 7.5 percent of your adjusted gross income — you can deduct those expenses over that threshold — move up medical appointments to this year.
10. Bunch deductions: Group business, investment or tax expenses in alternating years so you can qualify to itemize them as deductions.
11. Take losses: Sell some loser stocks that you don't want anymore. You can wipe out realized capital gains and ordinary income up to $3,000. Make sure your sale isn't a "wash" — that is, don't sell a stock and then buy it back on the same day.
12. Switch funds: You can avoid a capital gains distribution (and tax) from your mutual fund if you sell your fund shares before the distribution date.

For investors, the key is to avoid a net capital gain or loss reported. Taxes are imposed on net gains, but a deduction of up to $3,000 is permitted for a net loss.

1. Wow, it works!
2. One word: Value. Flexibility. Immediacy. Economy. Performance. Price. (OK. OK... a bunch of words.)
3. Putting posters on all those utility poles just takes too much time.
4. Did we mention it works?
5. You're not afraid to admit you like making money.
6. Come on, we dare ya. Just try to get better results anywhere else.
7. It's faster than a speeding bullet. (Haven't we heard that somewhere before?)
8. Three words: Results. Results. Results.
9. It sells stuff. Even wierd stuff.
10. You're just plain smart. Period.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"As is our confidence, so is our capacity"

—William Hazlett

One of the marks of a champion is his judgment in making difficult bidding decisions. Put your trust in West's chair and examine the bidding. Would you sacrifice at five hearts, or would you elect to defend-against-South's spade game?

Against vulnerable opponents, West finds the sacrifice tempting since East's jump to three hearts promises length in hearts, some distribution and little defense. However, sacrifices do not come cheaply. And whatever the penalty, the opponents remain vulnerable and therefore favorites to win the rubber.

When Dr. John Fisher held West's cards, he opted to defend against the vulnerable game. If you agree with Dr. Fisher's decision, how would you defend after your heart king cashes and partner plays a noncommittal five?

Dr. Fisher relied on three heart ever tricks his side could win in trumps or diamonds could not disappear. What could go away on dummy's diamonds was a trick in clubs. Obviously, a club shift was vital at trick two, but which club to lead?

Dr. Fisher chose the club queen. Dummy's king would win a club trick whichever club he led, so why not concede it early rather than late? This confident shift destroyed South's game. Dummy's king won; but when East won his trick ace, his club return trapped South's jack, and South suffered a one-trick set.

Note that leading the ace and another club at tricks two and three won't do. South's only option is to finesse to his jack, and instead of one down, he scores 10 tricks.
