Governor outlines goals in State of the State

By Gregory Hahn Times-News writer

BOISE - Idaho wanted specifics, and on Monday, Gov. Dirk Kempthorne provided them. After a campaign that some called vague and non-committal, Kempthorne outlined a broad plan that included more details of programs and costs than many observers could remember in a "State of the State" address.

Kempthorne asked for $2.5 billion to pay for immigration and early childhood development, and $5.5 million to boost first- to third-grade reading skills. He called for a comprehensive...

$100,000 to help train local deputies
He reiterated his desire to help poorer school districts pay interest on bond issues and challenged the Legislature to look again at lowering the supermajority needed to pass bond issues.

Kempthorne said he would prefer for a state recovery plan designed for "fish and people." The packed House chambers - including members from both the lower houses, Supreme Court and Appeals Court justices, other elected officials and a standing-room-only gallery - regularly interrupted Kempthorne's...

Please see PLAN, Page A2

Kempthorne's key points

CHILDREN

- ▶ $2.5 billion for early childhood development and immigration in a campaign headed by former Commerce Director James Howland.
- ▶ A scholarship program, summer program, and career counseling, along with career counseling, likely provided by First Lady Patricia Kempthorne.
- ▶ Full financial support for the state-funded Children's Health Insurance Program reauthorization by a special task force next fall.
- ▶ Phase-out of the marriage penalty on the state income tax to strengthen the family.

EDUCATION

- ▶ $5.5 million to improve reading skills for students in grades one through three.
- ▶ Reduction of the existing property tax to 60 percent for property owners.
- ▶ Construction bonds for primary and general education.
- ▶ Three-year program of construction bonds for economically distressed school districts.
- ▶ $30 million, in a pilot project, subject to renewal next year, to improve computer literacy systems in some college campuses.
- ▶ Discontinued financial incentives for teachers need to be improved.
- ▶ Three-year program of construction bonds for economically distressed school construction.
- ▶ A warning against forcing construction on districts simply to meet construction needs.

ENVIRONMENT

- ▶ Election of the Director of...

Dirk Kempthorne

Environmental Quality to clean up...

- ▶ No general fund support for the Fish and Game Department.
- ▶ Delay the opening of the new state prison set for October until at least mid-2000.
- ▶ Better penalties for drug dealers and vigorous enforcement of seizure laws.
- ▶ Three more state troopers and three more forensic investigators along with extra equipment and more training for the crackdown on drugs.

for an accelerated weed eradication program.

CRIMINAL JUSTICE

- ▶ Appointment of a justice and technology advisor, clearing the way for the state to secure National Science Foundation funding.
- ▶ An unspecified plan for improving the state's telecommunications system.
- ▶ Using 1998 pension plan savings to attract and retain high-tech workers on the state payroll.

TECHNOLOGY

- ▶ Appointment of a justice and technology advisor, clearing the way for the state to secure National Science Foundation funding.
- ▶ An unspecified plan for improving the state's telecommunications system.
- ▶ Using 1998 pension plan savings to attract and retain high-tech workers on the state payroll.

GOVERNMENT OPERATIONS

- ▶ Absorbing the Department of Administration into the governor's office.
- ▶ Pulling the relatively independent Federal Commission into the governor's office.
- ▶ A ban on state mandates with the warning, "if you're going to pass the bill, you better pass the bucks."

Officer faces charge

Charge includes making unwanted sexual advance

By Brian Haynes Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS - A Twin Falls police officer has been charged with making an unwanted sexual advance on the wife of another Twin Falls police officer in her Jerome County home.

Cpl. Bryan Krear is charged with disturbing the peace, a misdemeanor punishable up to six months in jail and a $300 fine. He faces a Feb. 22 court date.

The charge stems from a January 1998 incident involving Krear and Marianne Green, the wife of officer Jim Green, according to an affidavit by Lt. Dan Chatterton of the Jerome County Sheriff's Office.

Krear referred questions about the incident to Jim Munn, who said he couldn't comment on personnel issues for legal reasons.

In his affidavit, Chatterton said Krear was at Green's home Jan. 15 when he approached Marianne Green in her bedroom, ran his fingers through her hair and made a sexual advance, which is explained in graphic detail in the affidavit. Krear said he would perform the sex act if she weren't married to his friend and co-worker, the affidavit said.

Though Krear had been drinking, Marianne Green felt his remarks and actions were offensive and against her will, the affidavit said.

He filed an officer complaint with the Twin Falls Police Department. The internal investigation that followed in April upheld her complaints, and Krear was disciplined, the affidavit said.

During the internal and the Jerome County investigations, Krear admitted to the allegations, the affidavit said.

Tim Green and his wife intended to drop the issue once the internal investigation was over. But officer Green felt he was being targeted for retaliation by other officers so he and his wife filed the press charges, the affidavit said.

Chief Lee DeVore had no comment on the allegations of retaliation because he had no information, he said.

The Jerome sheriff's office began its investigation Dec. 30, after the Greens said they wanted the evidence against the Under Sheriff Jocelyne Roberts said.

Instant checks block 11,584 gun purchases

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The FBI blocked 11,584 gun sales during the first 41 days of its new computerized, instant-check system and took steps to catch 1,541 would-be gun buyers who were wanted for arrest, the bureau said Monday.

Most of the 11,584 denials were for prospective gun buyers who turned out to be convicted felons, and the FBI advised either the state or federal law enforcement agency that was seeking the person so it could attempt an arrest.

While the bureau did not have a total yet for the number of arrests actually made, it said they included a man in Oklahoma for...

Cassia OKs hog farm

Construction may begin as soon as March

By John T. Ruddy Times-News writer

BURLEY - Cassia County officials Monday approved a plan to build a 527-million hog farm south of Burley.

With this approval, construction could begin by March on a farm that would create 20 to 25 jobs and buy 70,000 to 80,000 bushels of local grain from growers.

"We're building an improvement to the public," Kamber's developer Brent Dame said Monday, after commissioners voted unanimously to approve the farm. "What we're building are the facts. The farm will create jobs. We're doing something for the state economy and we're not cutting any corners."

The next step is to get construction of the facility up and running. "We're not building a farm," Dame's plan said, with opposition from Twin Falls County...

Clinton, GOP clash over articles

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - President Clinton and House Republicans clashed in impeachment trial papers Monday. House Democrats claiming perjury and obstruction allegations fall short of high crimes and misdemeanors and, GOP lawmakers rebuffed: "If this is not enough, what is?"

Clinton denied "each and every allegation" in the House-passed articles of impeachment. The House, in papers filed a few hours later with the Senate, insists the evidence against the nation's 42nd president "overwhelmingly supports both charges," perjury and obstruction of justice.

The two documents were filed in advance of opening trial arguments, set for Thursday in the...

Plan

That approval spanned the political aisle and echoed for hours Monday.

"I thought he did real well," said Senate Assistant Majority Leader Sen. John Sandoy, R-Hagerman.

Kempthorne went out on a limb more than once, Sandoy said, sticking with his unpopular stance on the so-called nuclear supermajority, and by pinning his "personal reputation" on moving Idaho into the top 10 percent in immunization rates.

Some of the governor's proposals are sure to struggle in the Legislature, but the bold way he outlined his plans answered some people's concerns.

"I think we were all hoping for something more than a 'vision' speech," Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, said. "We've heard a lot of 'vision' speeches."

Magic Valley lawmakers of both parties found something to like in the address.

House Minority Leader Wendy Jaeger, D-Ketchum, was happy because the governor set high priority on reading skills.

Her Senate counterpart, Sen. Clint Stennert, D-Ketchum, was glad because Kempthorne put together a "progressive" program touching on "Democratic" issues such as immunization and early childhood development.

Cameron enjoyed hearing Kempthorne's refusal to forward general-fund money to the Department of Fish and Game.

Rep. Jim Kempson, R-Blaine, liked the fact that the governor planned to do it all without raising taxes.

Kempthorne's most unpopular stance, a more conservative approach could be a proposal to let local school districts hold bond issue elections that can pass with 60 percent of the vote — if districts

Trial schedule

How is what's ahead as the Senate prepares to consider the case for removing William Rehnquist from the presidency?

The trial will resume Wednesday with a vote set aside for the senators to vote on motions: if a motion to displace Rehnquist is filed, Clinton's defenders in the Senate, the White House and 51 senators voted in his favor, the trial would end. But no such motion is expected. It is Clinton is not convicted, "then no House of Representatives will ever be able to impeach again and no Senate will ever convict. The bar will be so high that only a convicted felon or a traitor will need to be concerned," the GOP prosecutor-lawmakers wrote.

"Can you imagine a future president, faced with possible impeachment, pointing to the perjurers, lies, obstructions and tampering with witnesses by the current occupant of the office as the feeling of many senators that such an early motion would be disruptive to the process. Then, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, the 13 House prosecutors (called managers) are expected to present their case against the president to the senators. They have a total of 24 hours to make their arguments, using evidence gathered during the House Judiciary Committee's impeachment hearings. There will be no interruptions for questions or witnesses.

not rising to the level of high crimes and misdemeanors? If this is not enough, what is?" Several of Clinton's defenders in the House said during the proceedings there that, even if proven, the allegations against Clinton did not warrant impeachment. And "even Republican senators conceded that a two-thirds majority of the Senate appear unlikely to convict Clinton and remove him from office.

for our small farm producers — but as we move from more antique technology to advanced technology, I think that we've advanced as human beings. Not in favor of the farm."

The new commissioners echoed the sentiment. "I would have voted the same; it will be a good thing for the community," Povlsen said. "My only concern is the overloading of the hogs, if that will be too many."

"I support it; it will be beneficial for the community, especially if they buy the seed locally," Crane said. "I don't think hiring employees will impact the community too much though."

Dame's facility would be built just outside city limits at 1300 South and 500 West, a building consist of three separate 1,200-sq-foot buildings.

Supreme Court upholds ruling

WASHINGTON — New York City's crackdown on strip clubs and smut shops survived a Supreme Court challenge Monday when the justices rejected a pair of appeals in which X-rated businesses and their patrons said their free-speech rights were being trampled.

The justices left intact regulations that prohibit sex-oriented theaters, bookstores, massage parlors and dance clubs from operating within 600 feet of houses, houses of worship, schools or each other.

About 150 establishments now face one of three options: move to some outlying industrial area, close down or change the nature of their business.

Presidential aides oppose clemency for spy

WASHINGTON — Presidential national security aides appear united in opposing Israel's request for clemency for Jonathan Pollard, the former U.S. Navy intelligence official who spied for Israel in the 1980s.

Clinton there are "no compelling foreign policy considerations" to justify releasing Pollard. Albright's views, combined with the known views of other senior Clinton aides, could seal Pollard's fate.

Albright's stance suggests she stood so significant impact on U.S. relations with Israel if Pollard remains in prison. His imprisonment almost derailed the U.S.-brokered Israeli-Palestinian peace agreement reached in October during talks in Wye River Plantation in Maryland. Under intense pressure from Israel Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, Clinton promised to take a fresh look at clemency for Pollard even though two previous reviews of the case, also requested by Israel, found no grounds to commute his sentence.

U.N. weapons inspectors will return to Iraq

WASHINGTON — Chief U.N. weapons inspector Richard Butler declared Monday his agency is "ready" and will return to Iraq, possibly by as little as two weeks.

Insps stopped cooperating with the U.N. Special Commission, or UNSCOM, last year, prompting the U.S.-led strikes Dec. 16-19 against Iraqi weapons sites and military and command centers.

Since then, Iraq President Saddam Hussein has challenged other U.S. and U.N. controls, including "no-fly" zones Western planes patrol over northern and southern Iraq.

In the latest U.S.-Iraq confrontation, U.S. Air Force planes fired missiles at two Iraqi air defense bases in separate incidents Monday after determining they were about to launch missiles.

Blood shortage prompts urgent call for donors

WASHINGTON — Severe winter storms have worsened the nation's usual post-holiday blood shortage, prompting an urgent call Monday for people to donate blood. Type O blood is the most urgently needed, because it is the universal blood type, meaning it can be safely transfused to most people in an emergency.

Nation in brief

The Red Cross reported having less than one day's supply of Type O blood on hand in 38 of the organization's 38 collection regions. The Red Cross provides about half of the nation's blood supply.

To locate the nearest blood center or to donate, call 1-800-GIVE LIFE or 1-800-BLOOD88.

United States, China open human rights talks

WASHINGTON — As China and the United States opened talks Monday on human rights issues, U.S. officials expressed deep concerns about an ongoing crackdown on pro-

State Department spokesman James P. Rubin said American officials will encourage China to ratify and abide by the U.N. Covenant on Civil and Political Rights during two days of talks at the State Department. Clinton signed the covenant last fall. Critics charge that repression has increased since then.

The treaty states that all people have the right of self-determination. It prohibits torture, cruel or degrading punishment and provides for freedom of movement, thought, religion and expression, among other things.

A recent wave of arrests in China has produced calls from some members of Congress for a more assertive U.S. policy on China.

Administration considers airport ticket tax hike

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration, which failed last year in a bid to raise an airport ticket tax from $3 to $4, may try to increase the charge to $5 as part of a bill to reauthorize the Federal Aviation Administration, The Associated Press has learned.

The passenger facility charge, or PFC, is a tax requested by local governments and earmarked for improvements at their airports. It must be approved by the Transportation Department.

PFCs are currently capped at $12 a ticket but would rise to a maximum of $20 a ticket under the administration proposal.

Octuplets' mom finally gets to hold 1 baby

HOUSTON — The mother of the Houston octuplets got to hold one of her babies for the first time Monday.

After a 30-hour delivery, the mother, Mrs. Cheryl Stender, gave birth to eight babies, all of whom remain in critical condition. One of the girls, China, was put on antibiotics Monday for an infection. Another sister, Chidi, also was being treated for infection.

Truck pulls down Heyburn power lines

HEYBURN - A truck making deliveries to a flower shop Monday afternoon hooked onto and yanked down power lines, knocking out power to the shop and several nearby buildings, Heyburn fire officials said.

The truck was making a delivery to Jill's Flower House when it hooked the power lines at about 2:15 p.m., said Mike Brown, Heyburn fire chief. It pulled the power lines, which ran the breaker box off the wall, yanked out part of the wall and part of the roof next door, at a four-apartment complex at 1571 J St. Brown. The wires shorted out, melting the wires' insulation, he said.

Bill Cooper, who owns the apartment complex and the building where the flower shop is located, said the truck's top apparently cleared the lines when it backed up, but some of the wires hung lower later, stretching across the front of the truck's trailer when it pulled out.

Apartment residents are staying with friends and relatives while without power, Cooper said. Brown said damage is about $10,000. The accident still is under investigation.

Maughan will head TF commissioners

TWIN FALLS - Dennis Maughan, who had been turned down before in a bid to head the Twin Falls County board of commissioners, got the position Monday.

Maughan was elected by his colleagues Monday to head the three-member board.

Maughan had been passed over once before for the chairmanship, but that was when he was a Democrat. The accident still is under investigation.

A year ago, Maughan changed parties to become a Republican. Maughan has said his switch does not represent a change in his politics, but rather he found his politics more closely matched the Republican Party.

He has no plans to do anything differently, but said the county faces a number of challenges. Full capacity, a needed expansion of the judicial annex at the courthouse and the juvenile justice facility.

Commissioner Carla Reed was chosen vice chairman.

Murder suspect to charge innocent plea

TWIN FALLS - The suspected wheelman in a July drive-by-shooting on the east side of the El Miragro Housing Complex is scheduled to change his plea.

Antonio Garcia, 19, will be in court at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday for a charged plea hearing. Garcia had pleaded innocent to charges of first-degree murder and conspiracy to commit first-degree murder. His trial was scheduled to be today.

Garcia was at the wheel of the car from which Nicholas Garcia, 14, fired the gun that hit a crowd of people, police records said. Javier Iruegas, 23, was in that crowd and was hit in the head. He died today.

Nicholas Garcia, who said he didn't aim at any particular person, pleaded guilty on New Year's Eve to second-degree murder. He faces up to 25 years in prison.

The third suspect, 17-year-old Antonio Ortiz Jr., pleaded guilty in early December to the same charge and is scheduled to be sentenced in a Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Leibs will recommend a 10-year sentence for Ortiz, who moved to the back seat of the No. 10 Nicholas Garcia could sit in the passenger seat.

Kimberly City Council looks at bike path

KIMBERLY - A meeting of the Kimberly City Council will begin at 7 p.m. today.

Old business focuses on an update on annexation. New business includes a bicycle path presentation by Twin Falls City Parks and Recreation Supervisor Dennis Bowyer. 1999 appointments and the Southern Idaho Regional Communications Center regarding radio frequencies.

Hospital joins new health company

By Pat Marcantonia
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The county hospital has become a partner in a new company that will own and operate the Physicians Center. The Magic Valley Regional Medical Center board announced Monday it will become a partner in the new Magic Valley Health Partners. The other partners are the St. Albans Regional Medical Center in Boise and the Physicians Center - the largest group of primary-care doctors in Twin Falls. The Magic Valley Regional board voted on the agreement late Monday night. Each partner chipped in $344,000 to purchase the Physician Center assets, which include accounts and equipment, said Terry Schulte, the new board chairman. That will be a one-time expense for the Physicians Center located in the new medical office building joining the hospital. In return, the community will receive coordinated patient care, reduced duplication and continued access to medical care, he said. The new company will contract with Saint Alphonsus Physician Services Inc., a separate company, to manage the practice; and with the Physician Center for professional services. The more than dozen Physician Center doctors will become employees as well as partners. The partners say their goals include sharing medical and business management, reducing costs and enhancing efforts to recruit and retain doctors. The Physician Center doctors are excited about the partnership because it will support primary care services and provides their group, and potentially other doctor groups, with expertise in managing physician practices. Physician Center representative Dr. Kurt Seppel said in a news release. The county-owned hospital began looking into such a relationship to maintain a Please see HOSPITAL, Page A6

ROAD WORK AHEAD

Road work on U.S. Highway 30 between Twin Falls and the Curry Junction at U.S. Highway 93 Monday. The $6.1 million project will widen the stretch of road to five lanes and is scheduled to be finished by November, the Idaho Transportation Department said in a news release.

Group wants recreation to flow on Snake

By Mark Heizer
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A group of Magic Valley residents and officials wants to get public opinion and policy flowing toward preserving recreation along the Snake River. Opportunities for public use of the river - especially in the Snake River Canyon - have been steadily drying up, Twin Falls

Consultant Mike Pepper told the Twin Falls City Council Monday. The Middle Snake River Recreation Work Group that Pepper represents, is made up of residents and elected and government officials. The group in the past several years has been working on a plan to preserve and improve recreation along the river, he said. Boating, fishing, hunting, bird watching and hiking are some of the city's $150,000 contingency budget to help pay for renovations at the police station. Renovations will include more evidence storage space and a new locker room for female employees. The council also gave the federal grant to hire a third community service officer. The city council voted last Tuesday to

Hog farm's relocation relieves resident

By N.S. Nokkentved
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - At least one neighbor opposed to a hog production facility proposed in Twin Falls County breathed a sigh of relief Monday.

The proposed hog facility apparently is on its way to Cassia County. "Better their yard," than mine," said Tress Hansen, a neighbor of the proposed Twin Falls County facility.

Brent Dame of Kimberly had proposed a 3,600-sow hog production facility with the capacity to produce 72,000 hogs annually.

Dame had planned to develop site about 10 miles south of Twin Falls. But neighbors appealed a September 1998 decision by Twin Falls County planners, who approved the project.

The proposed Dame to focus his site search elsewhere.

Monday morning, Cassia County commissioners approved a proposal similar to his Twin Falls County plan. As of Monday afternoon, Dame had not withdrawn his Twin Falls County proposal.

With the amount of money to be made in Boise, the site was bound to be approved somewhere.

When Twin Falls County Commissioner Dennis Maughan was surprised Cassia County commissioners approved the facility. That county has been open to economic development.

BSU, ISU will ask Legislature to fund more services in TF

The Times-News
and The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS - Boise State University will ask the Legislature for $15 million this year to improve and expand services in Twin Falls and Canyon counties. Idaho State University also has requested money to spend on the Magic Valley officials say.

The funding also would enable Boise State to hire more faculty and add more class sections to serve an additional 400 to 500 students at the Canyon County center during the next three years, Boise State President Charles Ruch said Monday during his state of the university speech.

Three years ago, the State Board of Education directed Boise State to offer upper-division business courses in Twin Falls. BSU spokesman Larry Burke said. But no additional funds were allocated.

Meanwhile, Bob Pearce, ISU vice president for financial services, said the Pocatello-based university has requested money that would affect its outreach centers in Twin Falls and Idaho Falls. ISU courses also are taught on the CSI campus.

In Twin Falls, students can obtain a bachelor's degree in accounting and management without having to leave the area, Burke said. Its first graduating class of five students graduated last spring, but usually 200 students per year take classes taught either in classrooms or via the Internet or video.

Those requests include: $106,000 to add faculty positions to expand its master's program in curriculum and instruction. $284,000 for a program to help community-college faculty work toward a doctorate of arts degree and conversely, to expand the internship for a doctor of arts with teaching experience at a community college.

More faculty in management, marketing, accounting and criminal justice administration. More classes in finance, economics, business communication, computer information systems and production management. Upgrading the part-time coordinator to full-time. Adding a student services coordinator to provide career, academic and personal services. $500,000 to allow people who have taken applied-technology programs at two-year or technical schools to better transfer to bachelor programs in business. $467,000 for more weekend and evening courses through the ISU system so people can more rapidly meet their educational goals. CSI has good facilities for the planned expansions, Pearce said.

1999 Legislature
counseling the number of faculty positions added would depend on the demand, he said.

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Supreme Court has upheld the Bonner County School District denial of back pay for teachers who were assigned extra duties. The high court unanimously held that the decision by their principal, David (Trent) Fullmer, to assign them to extra duties did not obligate the school board to follow a contract provision calling for additional pay in such cases. During the 1993-1994 and 1994-1995 school years, the four teachers, at the request of their principal, served as department chairmen at Sandpoint Middle School but received no extra compensation as the contract called for. The teachers were not aware of the agreement while serving as department chairmen and filed a lawsuit requesting back wages when learning of it. When denied by the school board, they sued. First District Judge James Michael up held the board, and the high court agreed, rejecting the teacher claim that the contract provision should be enforced. Only the board, not the principal, has the authority to hire the teachers. The Bonner County Supreme Court held, so the contract provision on additional pay need not be enforced.

Lawyers argue about Hollister's status

GONE FISHIN'

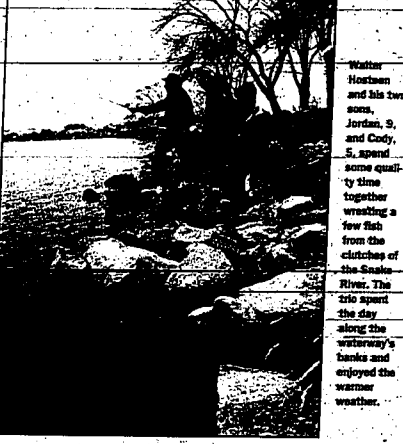

Kelly J. Seidel Times-News correspondent

HOLLISTER - The status of Hollister as a city has become central to arguments in a lawsuit against the city in 5th District Court. Both sides presented arguments Monday to District Judge Daniel Meehl in the lawsuit filed by Richard "Shorry" Self in September. Self and his Twin Falls lawyer, Lloyd Walker, contend that Hollister was not incorporated and therefore had no jurisdiction when it tore out its lawn, fence and sprinkler system last year to widen a road. Attorney Jacqueline Wakefield of Twin Falls said she argued for Hollister, argued her case for a summary judgment, saying "Self can't rest a case on mere speculation and that there was insufficient evidence for each element of incorporation." The Twin Falls County commissioners awarded incorporation to Hollister in July 1917, she said. But no one is still alive to testify in that matter, and the petition for incorporation presented to the county in 1917 is missing. Hollister also has a certificate of incorporation issued in July 1998, from the Idaho Secretary of State, she said. A 1908 state law, in effect at the time, required that 200 or more taxpayers must be living within the designated village or city and that the trustee for the incorporation be a resident taxpayer. The minutes of a 1917 county commissioners' meeting mention the boundaries as all of Sections 28. Walker and Wakefield argued about the definition of taxpayer. Walker maintained that this would have been property taxpayers, because there was no income tax at that time. He provided a deed showing that all of Section 28 was owned by the Twin Falls Land and Water Co., which was owned by Ira B. Perrine. He said in April 1907 to the American Water Works and Gas Co., owned by James S. and W.S. Kuhn of Falmouth, Pa., who deeded it to another of their corporations, the Twin Falls Salmon River Land and Water Co. on Sept. 13, 1909. The deed was recorded in Section 28 was owned by the Kuhn family corporation until 1937. "The court will obviously make whatever attempt necessary to avoid dissolving a city, but I don't think the consequences will be so bad if they do," Walker said. Wakefield argued that there is no way of confirming whether more than 200 taxpayers signed the original petition. She also said that no affidavits from qualified title researchers back up the deeds in question. Hollister Mayor Carla Edwards declined to comment and referred all questions to City Attorney Fritz Wenderlich who was unavailable for comment on Monday. Meehl said he would take the information under consideration, but he would not return a decision before making his decision.

Paperwork delays Burley doctor's arraignment

By David Lee Times-News writer

BURLEY - A delay in paperwork prevented Monday's arraignment of a Burley internal medicine physician charged with possession of methamphetamine and passing an illegal prescription. Charles Suits faces arraignment in Magistrate Court in Cassia County, and a preliminary hearing, on 10 a.m. on Jan. 26, said Bill Manning, Suits' attorney. A criminal complaint and affidavit had not been filed until Thursday, said Manning, who did not pick up the papers until Monday afternoon. Suits, 43, was arrested Dec. 31, 1998, in the parking lot of Cassia Regional Medical Center, where he leases office space, said Cassia County Sheriff Billy Crystal. He gave an illegal prescription of the painkiller Vicodin to an under-cover officer in exchange for 1.5 grams of methamphetamine worth about $150, Crystal said. Suits' wife posted $2,500 bond later that day, Manning said. Cassia Regional Medical Center is still conducting its internal investigation, administrator Richard Packer said.

Suits is treating patients at his office, but is not allowed to help emergency room patients, or any other new hospital patients, until hospital officials finish their investigation. Suits normally is part of the rotation of internal medicine physicians on call at the hospital, but he has been suspended from the rotation, Packer said. The hospital does not pay Suits, so his suspension does not affect his earnings, Packer said. Suits was suspended about six weeks ago for accepting medical charts updated, Packer said. Doctors who fall behind on updating charts usually are suspended until they bring their charts up to date. Other doctors have been suspended at the hospital for this reason, Packer said. Manning and Suits are proceeding on the basis that Suits is innocent, Manning said. Suits has received cards and letters from patients and friends offering support, and Manning's law office also has received calls from people supporting Suits, Manning said. Possession of a controlled substance is a felony. Passing an illegal prescription is a misdemeanor charge.

base of primary-care doctors by providing in-home services to doctors. The fees for reduced payments from insurers, but increasing practice costs, administrators said. Meanwhile, Physician Center doctors said they were losing doctors and spending more time on the business side of medicine. Saint Alphonsus' chief executive officer, Sandra Bruce said in a news release that joining doctors and hospitals will result in enhanced patient care in the Magic Valley. Saint Alphonsus was invited as a partner because of its expertise in running such management service operations, Schultz said.

"It's pretty pleasing we were able to pull it together," he said. But another new enterprise, a private outpatient surgery center in Twin Falls, also caused some financial concern for the hospital. Magic Valley Regional chief financial officer Ken Fry told the board it was too early to tell the effects of the new surgery center on county hospital revenue. Reduced revenue from a competitor was one reason, he said. But because Magic Valley Regional wasn't sure whether the private center was going to open, he said. The private Sawtooth Surgery Center opened Dec. 10 next door to the Grefenstam Clinic on Falls Avenue West. Sawtooth development director Ken Deibert said. But the management committee of the new center, which is owned by a group of local doctors, didn't want to comment on the operations at this time, he said. "We would hope for the preservation of our medical services to the community," Deibert said. In other business, new members took a spot on the board after approval by Saint Alphonsus County commissioners. Vera Maughan, David Johnson and Carl Snow replaced Craig Bennett, Ed Schaefer and Darrel McRoberts. Schultz also took the guest from acting chairman Dr. Mark McKain. "We've got some great people," Commissioner Dennis Maughan said. The board also voted to spend $50,231 for an upgrade and a new piece of equipment for an echocardiograph, which uses ultrasound to visualize internal heart structures. The hospital does about 80 echocardiograms per month on the average, with 20 of them involving children. The existing equipment is 10 years-old, and the update was needed for better images, administrators said. They will be able to increase the number of procedures for children with the new piece of equipment.

must provide $6,048 in matching funds. The department's two other service officers are usually busy in the field, Chief Lee DeVore said. The new service officer would help keep the station's front office open later on weekdays, and perhaps for a few hours on weekends, he said. "Community service officers" assist in helping with paperwork and investigations and taking reports. They do not have powers of arrest. The council also turned down a request from Twin Falls attorney Calvin Campbell to amend the city's pawn ordinance. Campbell asked that certain types of second-hand stores, such as used furniture shops, be excluded from the ordinance. One opposition of the ordinance is that store owners thumb their price while being in used items for sale. The ordinance is aimed at preventing thieves from fencing stolen property at pawn shops and second-hand shops. The council decided not to jump at another $24,000 grant which College of Southern Idaho Geography Professor Nancy Johnson said could provide the college, city and Twin Falls County with a computer mapping and data gathering system. The Geographic Information

System can produce computer-generated maps highlighting information such as population density, high-crime zones and land uses, Johnson said. Council members expressed doubts over the city being able to line up the necessary hardware and support from other agencies before the Feb. 15 grant application deadline. In other business, the council approved Chief Ron Clark permission to check into buying a new pumper truck. A new truck might cost as much as $275,000. Deibert called for action on a proposal to review CSI with private and police coverage, including traffic control, aerial video, investigation

City and CSI attorneys need more time to work out the proposal's details. "Approved a 50 percent fee discount for city employees using the city swimming pool. Approved the final plate of the Wolverson and Wright Subdivision, for ten lots of office space along the 400 block of Shoup Avenue West. Times-News writer Mark Helm can be reached at 324-6962.

Net shopping is a breeze

But online convenience stops at the return counter

The Associated Press
NEW YORK — So much for the Internet turning shopping into a point, click and buy experience.

When it comes to returning goods to online retailers, you still need to phone in, wait for a representative who can give you a return authorization number, pack up the items and ship to the post office.

It is easy to buy online, but it is not so easy to return something. That's where the convenience of the Internet breaks down," said Brenda Nashaway of Boston, who has returned books and shoes this year.

It was an incredible holiday season for Internet merchants, with sales soaring well above expectations. An estimated $3 billion was spent online during the holidays, nearly tripling last year's figures.

The Internet's convenience enticed many shoppers. With a computer in hand, they could buy from home, work or hotel, and had access to an unthinkable number of merchants. Within days, their purchases arrived, sometimes even wrapped with the attached.

But now that the holidays are over, consumers are seeing that the high-tech online world has some low-tech glitches — with returns topping the list.

Many retailers require consumers to notify them before sending an item back — that involves time on the phone to get a return confirmation number. Most insist on a prepaid, insured delivery method, which means waiting for a UPS, Federal Express or the post office.

While that is similar to catalog returns, many shoppers who were lured to the ease of the Internet simply didn't expect such hassles.

So many people tried buying this year, but they didn't check the return policies and now they're getting bitten," said Preston Gralla, author of "The Complete Idiot's Guide to Online Shopping."

Many online merchants hired outsiders to run their Web sites, but not all handle exchanges. Some means some shoppers are finding another unexpected inconvenience: They must first return the item and get a refund before purchasing something else.

Some merchants, like Shopping.com, will only accept the item if it is shipped in the packaging it came in, which means holding on to boxes and wrapping.

Victoria's Secret and Wal-Mart won't let shoppers return most goods to their real world stores. Frustrating for shoppers who chose to buy from the online retailers' Web sites because they assumed they could make returns in person.

"It's no wonder the consumers are confused," said Jim Daniels, chief executive of OrderTrust, which runs the online services for some well-known merchants like SkyMail and Carling City.

"Returns are a key element of customer service and quality. We have to get their arms around this issue this year. It has to be easier," he said.

After hearing consumers' complaints, some online retailers are already taking action. Amazon.com, for instance, has extended its holiday returns deadline until Jan. 31, instead of its usual policy of 30 days after purchase date.

Many others are agreeing to pay shipping for returns if a customer complains about the charges.

One new Internet mall, Buyonline.com, is going so far as to offer a no-hassle return policy. The site, scheduled to launch Monday with more than 100 small merchants, will send UPS to a shopper's home to pick up any unwanted item.

A multitude of programs to zap the millennium bug

By Mark Matthews
Staff Writer/News Service

Aside from fears that planes will fall from the sky and your mortgage holder will kiss you for 99 years of back-interest, there really is no reason to panic about the Year 2000 Bug. But there is a multitude of shareware programs that will help you determine whether you have anything to fear but fear itself about Y2K.

A new shareware and freeware collection, aptly titled Millennium Bug Extremator, has about 250 programs that will check your hardware and software for potential problems. There are programs that will look at ancient 286-class machines and fix Y2K problems on them. If you're using a Mac, you have nothing to worry about, since they are immune from the bug.

Millennium Bug Extremator sets itself up to a home screen, where you can scroll through descriptions of all the programs before installing them. The program has its own setup routine, which allows you to copy the files from the CD to your hard disk, one at a time.

Once you've determined that you don't have a hardware problem (2000 Toolbox Hardware Check does a quick and thorough hardware check), you can test your clock. Install Countdown to 2000, check your Visual Basic files for Y2K problems, check your BIOS in case you never thought possible, check your network, make sure your older version of Windows (3.11, for example) can't be the turn of the clock on Dec. 31, 1999, make certain your computer's clock is up to the new millennium, and for good measure, there are text files that will tell you about all the potential sky-falling dangers of computing in the 21st century.

Along the way, there are programs specially written for Packard Bell computers, Microsoft Access database files (don't minimize the potential paranoia here — you definitely want a database that will work next year), and tons of Y2K software. Frequently asked questions, answers to even the most basic question, which is: Should a computer illiterate like myself be worried about the Millennium Bug?

The answer might be that with so much hype about the millennium and with so many software engineers tinkering on the problem, you'd be a fool not to join the mass hysteria. Your grandchildren, years from now, will be sure to ask you what you did during the Millennium Bug Panic, and you can assure them you ran at least 150 software and hardware checks to make certain you were protected.

IRS launches Web site to alert taxpayers to errors

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Got a problem with the IRS? Maybe lots of other people do, too, and now there's a way to find out on the Internet.

The Internal Revenue Service is now posting "special taxpayer alerts" on its Web site to describe errors and other problems, and where they might live and what they can do about it.

"We know that even a little glitch in an IRS system can affect many thousands of taxpayers," IRS Commissioner Charles Rossotti said Monday.

The page — located in the "What's Hot" section at www.irs.gov — is part of an IRS effort to ease its just-completed overhaul of most tax computers to comply with year 2000 does not cause undue hardship for taxpayers.

The IRS has spent 18 months rewriting an estimated 50 million lines of code to be ready for 2000, when some computers could be affected if they mistakenly read the last two "00" digits as 1900.

"We're in excellent shape for this tax filing season, but we all know that glitches can occur in a system as large and as old as the IRS," Rossotti said.

Examples of possible errors include bogus tax credits, refund delays, incorrect IRS publications or failure to properly credit taxpayer accounts. The Web site will enable the IRS to let people know if their particular problem has wider implications and what to do about it.

But changes on the Web site the IRS had previously posted corrections to certain tax publications complete with links enabling people to download the new version.

Also Monday, the IRS unveiled a draft proposal providing $2 million in grants to organizations that set up legal assistance for low-income taxpayers involved in tax disputes.

Each low-income tax clinic must qualify for up to $100,000 in grants, which will be awarded this summer. The taxpayer would pay a "nominal fee" to be set later to recover the assistance.

"We want taxpayer assistance, tax dispute assistance to the poor and elderly, but not in a centralized clinic format that can also specialize in helping those for whom English is not the first language," said Marilyn Sussberg, IRS assistant commissioner for consumer services.

"The IRS already offers assistance to have the same opportunity to get help," Sussberg said.

The Millennium 450—Millennium II is the latest in a long line of reasonably priced, cutting-edge machines from Micron Electronics. It has 64MB of RAM, a 10GB hard drive, a 32X CD-ROM drive, a very respectable 17-inch monitor, a built-in 46.6 V-90 modem, an 8MB graphics accelerator, and a one-year, on-site service warranty. Perhaps the most impressive feature is that the price is $1,199. You can upgrade to a DVD-ROM drive, 128MB of RAM and a built-in Zip drive (with 10 free cartridges) for just $35.

The Millennium is an excellent choice for the home or small-business user in search of high performance, but it has some drawbacks.

Video display screens need subtle tweaking

By John Gilroy
Special to The Washington Post

Computer Q&A

Q: What is fulfillment software?
A: Some readers have visited Web sites that offer Microsoft programs such as Office 97 at inexpensive prices. Sometimes, these are marketed as fulfillment software.

Let's say you work for a large company, and need to buy 1,000 copies of an application. Rather than ship all those CDs, many software companies will send one and grant a license to make 1,000 copies.

Now suppose your office in Kuala Lumpur needs a copy of the program. Microsoft may provide an extra CD for that office. This is known as a fulfillment disk, meaning that Microsoft is completing the terms of the license. Microsoft labels these disks Microsoft Easy-Fulfillment or Worldwide Fulfillment and sends them in plain shipping boxes. They also are marked with "not for retail or OEM distribution," referring to Original Equipment Manufacturers, computer industry-speak for PC makers.

Occasionally these discs are offered for sale to anyone. From a legal point of view, you shouldn't buy them because they're being sold in violation of licensing agreements. On a practical level, these copies may be bogus and may not include all the files of the legitimate product. They might even contain viruses.

Q: Someone in my house altered my video resolution to 640 x 480, and now I can't see the buttons at the bottom part of the video screen that are supposed to let me change it back to 800 x 600.

A: Ah yes, the notorious "somebody." Around my house, that's normally me, though I am known to swear it's my children, the plumber or the pizza delivery guy.

Video screens display images in varying resolution, depending on how many pixels, or picture elements, are on the screen. What's happened is that a computer that was displaying at a sharp, standard setting in machines sold today has been changed to give a lower resolution.

The computer user reader asks about is now displaying only part of what it should. I'd recommend first going to the dials that control the width and breadth of the monitor's display. It may be that when you twist the vertical-control knob, the buttons that are hidden off the screen will come into view.

If that doesn't work — and it didn't for me when I tried it recently — you can change the software driver that controls the number of dots displayed on the screen.

Here's how: Go to Control Panel and locate the System icon. Double click on System and select Device Manager. Highlight Display Adapter and select Remove. Exit the program, shut down your computer, then turn it back on.

If all works as it should, the plug-and-play features of Windows 95 will kick in and you can follow the prompts and install the video driver that was there initially and gave 800 x 600 sharpness. It is highly unlikely that the original video driver has disappeared from your hard disk. However, if it has, dig out the CD or the floppy that came with the system and select 800 x 600 as the driver.

Jerome council should help taxpayers in sewer line deal

Like it or not, you've got to admit the Jerome City Council knows how to make a big decision in a hurry.

In a hastily called, little-publicized meeting between Christmas and New Year's Eve, the council made one of its biggest decisions of 1998. With scant public involvement, the council decided to negotiate an agreement that would allow Crossroads Ranch to tap into the city's sewerage treatment plant.

Crossroads is miles south and east of Jerome's city limits, so it's hard to see how this would serve the interests of city taxpayers. In fact, it could easily work against them.

We've said it before, but it's worth saying again. Jerome city taxpayers should be vigilant lest they wind up footing the bill for Crossroads.

Toward that end, the Jerome City Council should work for Jerome taxpayers, not out-of-town developers. This is crucial because the most influential player in this long-running saga, Jerome County Commissioner Roy Prescott, is working to boost the fortunes of Crossroads and other landowners near the junction of Interstate 84 and U.S. 93.

As things stand, the city stands to gain a mere $60,000, while Crossroads stands to gain something far more valuable: the luxury of having someone else deal with its sewage. Jerome city taxpayers, meanwhile, would lose some of their sewer plant's reserve capacity. At the same time, they would move closer to the day when they'll have to pay for an expansion.

Reserve sewage capacity is valuable. Just ask the city of Twin Falls, which is preparing to spend millions to expand its sewage treatment capacity.

Having excess sewage treatment capacity is essential for luring new industries — and their payrolls — to town. If there's nowhere to send the wastewater, prospective new industries will look elsewhere.

Keeping something in reserve also makes sense, because passage of stricter environmental rules can cancel reserve capacity with the stroke of a pen.

It happened in Twin Falls. Maybe it could happen in Jerome.

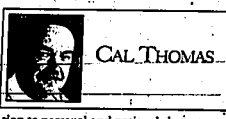

Laying pipe to connect Crossroads with the sewer plant could cost upwards of $3 million, but don't bank on Crossroads paying all of that tab, either.

Thanks to Prescott's ceaseless lobbying, Crossroads is likely to receive preferential treatment at every turn. Jerome city taxpayers need someone working equally hard on their behalf.

The Senate's predicament and opportunity

On the eve of the Senate trial of President Bill Clinton, who is the larger body politic, having such a difficult time with this case? It is because the moral plates that have supported our culture in times of stress — such as war and economic depression — are slipping. It is because work and actions no longer mean what they once meant. It is because so many are unwilling to judge the president's behavior, which they see as no worse than their own.

And so we have this point of tension. The past tags us as like Marley's ghost, pleading eternal principles, while musing in the land of "do your own thing" in the direction of materialism and self-focus. "If it doesn't directly impact my life, who cares?" is their creed.

When the news of what Monica Lewinsky and President Clinton did was revealed a year ago, ABC's Sam Donaldson, voicing a morality that is either past or quickly becoming obsolete, predicted that Clinton would be a goner "in days" and certainly by the end of that week. His prediction was wrong because Clinton's crowd argued that what the president did was no big deal.

To say that Bill Clinton should be held accountable and removed from office is to acknowledge that their own attitudes about extramarital sex, lying and inattention to personal and national character are a big deal.

So, the Senate is caught between a rock (moral and constitutional law) and a soft place (the mushy thinking of people who believe feelings trump justice).

In his book "Democracy and Human Nature," the late educator and university president Robert Maynard Hutchins wrote: "Equality and justice, the two great distinguishing characteristics of democracy, follow inevitably from the conception of men, all men, as rational and spiritual beings."

There was similar exalted rhetoric as senators gathered in their old chamber recently.

Many invoked history and called upon one another, in the words of Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., to disdain "any more of the salsacious muck which has already soiled the gowns of too many." Larry Flynt and his low-down friends aren't this high-minded.

While the question of whether witnesses will be called has been delayed until the end of the month (and they should be called, as in any trial), history, honor, justice and the law wait on the sidelines like the wallflower at the school dance.

In his first inaugural address on March 4, 1801, Thomas Jefferson said: "Equal and exact justice to all men, of whatever state or persuasion, religious or political." These principles form the bright contribution which has gone before us, and guided our steps through an age of revolution and reformation. The wisdom of our sages and the blood of our heroes have been devoted to their attainment. They should be the creed of our political faith, the text of civil instruction, the touchstone by which we try the services of those we trust; and should we wander from them in moments of error or alarm, let us hasten to retrace our steps and to regain the road which alone leads to peace, liberty and safety."

We have so wandered and it is time to retrace. Bill Clinton is not essential to the common well being of this country, but his removal from office is necessary if we are to begin to purge ourselves of infection. The Senate trial is as much about us and our honor as it is about the president and his dishonor. Who will be found wanting as he, and we, are weighed in the balance?

of a new bridge. It is usually there "forever." I paid it for years going to work, so I know it takes a long while, if ever, to be removed; and they call it "maintenance."

How to pay to construct a nice toll or toll-free bridge? Why can't we use some of our share of Idaho's tobacco money?

That's a tidy sum and would certainly build a beautiful bridge. Whatever the decision, I do hope that tolls, non-tolls and public opinion will be considered, as remember that we, the locals, will have to pay a toll as well as someone passing through.

If you commute daily, it does get costly in addition to your gasoline. Tolls or no tolls, it doesn't really matter much to me, as I don't travel that route often. However, it does deserve an in-depth study of areas with toll and non-toll bridges for our future needs.

Fish and Game hurts hunters

I watched the show "Viewpoint" with Mr. Mealey. Mr. Mealey spoke like a true politician, stating how he had surveyed 18,000 people and that they all wanted the Fish and Game to do more.

Do you think he misled these people by neglecting to tell them he would have to triple their license fees, raise tags and permit fees? Now he wants the sportsmen of Idaho to pay for another program, "non-game."

If the director is so worried about the fish, why not have a controlled fishery like the hunters?

Here is what Fish and Game will have us hunters do. With the new increase, you must buy a $25 to $30 license.

Then you send in an application along with $6.50 per species for a controlled hunt. If you are not drawn you must hunt a general zone. If you don't want to hunt a general zone or hunt anything else, you are stuck with a license you don't need or use.

At the present $7.50 for a license, it's easier to afford if you are not drawn, especially for a family of three or four.

Most general zones are overcrowded and overhunted, leaving just spike bulls, cows, does or small bucks. Most general seasons are 20 to 30 days long, less for controlled hunts.

The average family will only hunt six to eight days, due to school or their jobs.

I guess what our director is saying is if he raises the licenses, tags, permits, etc., then raise the taxes on the people of Idaho—the hunting will be better.

I personally would rather see younger hunters be able to afford a license and tags than be forced to go in another direction.

I'm afraid the Fish and Game is going to force both older and younger hunters away from this family outing and the Idaho tradition that has been handed down from generation to generation.

Mr. Mealey was the forest supervisor for the Boise National Forest. We all know the shape the timber industry is in throughout Idaho. How is he qualified to run the Fish and Game?

The "bill" for this raise will go before the state Legislature. I urge all hunters to contact their representatives, both in the House and Senate, and express their disapproval of increasing license fees and permits.

Californication Invades MV

According to recent news stories, Twin Falls has been Californicated. Again, Tom Courtney has assured the citizens of the Magic Valley that they are safe because he has ordered the destruction of more than 54,000 worth of confiscated guns.

This, in spite of a bona fide bid to purchase them from a local federally licensed gun dealer.

Courtney has stated the city does not need money.

Why suggest the city reduce taxes to the point where it does need money and adopt a more responsible fiscal program. According to Courtney, he does not want those guns to reappear on the streets. Since it has been the custom to sell similar guns in the past, where are the statistics to justify his actions? Surely, after all these years, there is a historical precedent to justify his much-labeled action. Unfortunately, all of the local news media jumped on his bandwagon without even a whimper of protest.

I do not believe another gun-grabber on the order of Charles Schumaker or Sarah Brady in a position of authority is beneficial to either Twin Falls or the Magic Valley. Since it is necessary if we do not need money, I fail to understand why there should be a committee begging for funds to cover the swimming pool.

Maybe the real question is, can Twin Falls do without income or could it do better to send Mr. Courtney back to California?

Dems to turn into 'Hustler' party?

Is this desperation or what? With every new bit of evidence against our president, a new tumble in the frequency to find someone on the other side of the aisle to hide behind; as though that excuses the misconduct.

Will the Democratic Party now become the "Hustler" party? There is ample evidence that Larry Flynt used White House sources to do his investigating. If the Democrats ever take back Congress, maybe Larry Flynt could become speaker of the house.

Proposed tax credit just another big hoax

President Clinton is fond of referring to "signature" programs, such as his AmeriCorps volunteer effort. A signature program, like a pretentious restaurant's signature dish, is said to capture the essence of the president's vision.

Well, Clinton last week unveiled the ultimate in signature programs - his so-called long-term care initiative. This program, ostensibly aimed at the dire and emotionally devastating medical needs of millions of frail and disabled Americans and their families, bore all of the marks of Clinton's signature - the cynicism, the tokenism, the cheap symbolic politics.

ROBERT KUTTNER

The proposal is utterly cynical, offering photo-ops to demonstrate that Clinton feels our pain, but falling so far short of a real remedy as to be a hoax.

Then, as frosting, Clinton adds a few hundred million dollars in grants for modest state programs of in-home care and to educate consumers on how to buy private long-term care insurance.

But private long-term care insurance with full coverage is astronomically expensive. Few older people at risk of needing the coverage can afford it, and few younger ones worry about it. This is precisely why needs like long-term care must be organized as social insurance - tax-supported with the risk shared across the entire population - if they are to work at all.

The whole program spends just over a billion dollars a year. This comes on the heels of a balanced Budget Act that the president signed, which cuts the Medicare budget by more than $20 billion a year, of more than 20 times the benefit of the new proposal.

The Medicare cuts fall especially heavily on guess which services - nursing homes, physical therapy and home health care. In effect, Clinton is giving one dollar with one hand and taking away $20 with the other.

Apart from the fact that this is one more cynical and farcical token program, bogus proposals such as this one do far deeper damage. They reinforce the message that the government isn't for real; that public programs don't really aim to remedy problems; they're just part of the show; and they just want cheap ways to pluck your hearstrings and pick your pocket. Could the Republicans say anything better?

Such programs had to be organized as universal, government-sponsored social insurance, because the private market could not efficiently address the need piecemeal. True long-term care insurance would have the entire population pay in relatively small sums and provide secure and decent services to those unlucky few who turned out to need the care. But Clinton's cynical tokenism undercuts that rebuilding support for comprehensive social insurance.

So this is a Clinton signature all right, but not in the flattering sense the president intends. It is the sort of program driven by focus groups and symbolic politics, utterly disdainful of whether it makes any real difference.

UI coach broke NCAA rules

Posting 2 football players' bail violated code

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — The University of Idaho violated NCAA rules when an assistant coach — who was later fired — posted bail for two players arrested after the annual Humanitarian Bowl win, Athletics Director Mike Robins said.

Dionicio "Junior" Monarrez Jr. apparently violated an NCAA rule prohibiting coaches from providing personal money to players when he posted bail for the players.

"We will self-report that to the NCAA," Robins said when asked about the violation by the Lewiston Morning Tribune.

Robins declined to comment further.

Monarrez was fired for his part in the scandal in Boise Dec. 30. Some Vandals players and coaches celebrated their 42-35 victory over Southern Mississippi.

When the bars closed, a fight broke out and reserve offensive lineman Keith Cossaboom, 22, of Spokane, Wash., was arrested.

In a separate incident, starting nose-guard Will Beck, 19, was arrested and charged with illegal consumption of alcohol, disorderly conduct and resisting and obstructing arrest.

UI officials had said earlier that an NCAA violation had been committed, but refused to disclose specifics.

It was unclear what action the NCAA might take.

The NCAA routinely declines to comment on whether it is investigating rules violations.

Salt Lake City may lose 2002 Games

IOC official expresses doubts that the city can raise $350M in time

The Associated Press

LONDON — The IOC official who blew the whistle on Olympic corruption said Monday the 2002 Winter Games could be in jeopardy because of the Salt Lake City bribery scandal.

Mark Hodler, the IOC's senior member, said it was possible the games could be moved elsewhere or canceled if Salt Lake can't raise enough money because of ongoing public and corporate support.

In a telephone interview with The Associated Press, Hodler also said two Salt Lake officials who resigned last week apparently tried to cover up cash payments made to IOC members during the bid, although he again described the Utah city as a victim of a corrupt system.

The 80-year-old Swiss, a member of the International Olympic committee executive board and head of the IOC's oversight panel for the 2002 Games, spoke a month after Salt Lake's efforts to secure the 2002 Games announced by bribery and cited widespread corruption in other campaigns for host cities, including the biggest scandal in Olympic history.

Hodler raised doubts about the ability of Salt Lake organizers to raise the remaining $350 million needed to meet their $1.45 billion budget if the scandal makes sponsors jittery.

"With the reaction in Utah and Salt Lake City, it's going to be difficult to find those $350 million," he said. "This is my main concern."

IOC leaders have said Salt Lake City won't be stripped of the games, and Hodler acknowledged it would be difficult to move to another venue only three years out.

MJ to hang 'em up

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan, regarded as the greatest player to ever draw an NBA history, will announce his retirement from the Chicago Bulls on Wednesday, The Associated Press learned.

Jordan's retirement was also reported by Sports Illustrated.

Jordan, whose final shot last season helped the Bulls their sixth championship of the decade, will retire for the second time in five years, a source said. He is expected to be inducted into the Hall of Fame.

There had been considerable speculation as to Jordan's future since NBA players and owners reached a settlement last Wednesday to end the owners lockout.

Salt Lake City Scandal

Salt Lake City Mayor Deedes Contended Monday the city won't seek reelection to a third term. Corradini said his decision had nothing to do with calls for his resignation Friday by two city council members citing his inactivity in the Olympic bid process.

"I had finally realized this, I'm convinced I could have won," the mayor said. "At the same time, you can't make a four-year decision based on a two-week event."

A group of state Democratic legislators called on local Olympic officials Sunday to reveal the full scope of the scandal by publicly disclosing all financial records.

"We are exposing the ugly rejections of bribery, greed and sleaze," said Utah House Minority Leader Dave Jones. "It's time to stop the tenuous shroud of information... Open the doors and let the sun shine in."

Tom Welch, who spearheaded Salt Lake's long campaign for the Olympics, says he did nothing wrong.

"We publicly disclosed all the money contributions out there as a part of the Olympic family, as an obligation we owe," Welch said. "It was the responsible thing to do."

But he said, "Theoretically, yes (it's possible)." Hodler noted there was a precedent. Denver relinquished the 1976 Winter Olympics after Colorado residents voted in 1972 against financing the event. The games were moved to Innsbruck, Austria.

Hodler said Lillehammer, Norway, site of the 1994 Winter Games, would be an alternative this time, along with 1998 host city Nagano, Japan.

Salt Lake City officials seem close to the bid committee, totaling $72,580 in fiscal 1994-95, and Olympic officials reported only $60,000 in government grants to the GC. The year before, the committee claimed $60,000, but received $30,000 from the city's office.

As many as a dozen IOC members may be asked to resign because of the scandal, IOC executive Anita DeFaccio said Monday.

"I can assure you that the IOC will start some action," DeFaccio said.

Robert Gault, chairman of the Salt Lake Organizing Committee, said Monday the SOOC officials passed investigating the scandal to its 10-member audit committee. He said the committee is "waiting to hear explanations that might cause us to resign."

MVCCHS conquers 1st win

By Eric Machack
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Christian High School Conquerors opened Monday's boys' basketball game with a prayer. Eight minutes later, it didn't look like they had one.

But although the Conquerors were down 10-1 after one quarter and 34-30 after three, their offense ignited in the final eight minutes and beat the Idaho School for the Deaf and Blind 47-42.

The win was the Conquerors' first of the season.

"The DB's defense smothered the Christians in the first quarter, causing four early turnovers. The Raptors took advantage of the turnovers, getting their offense going with four points by Erik Hansen."

"We started things off really slow," said MVCCHS head coach Bob Meyer.

"We got on our own court and got started in the second quarter," Meyer said. "I don't think they were ever really in control."

A changing of the guard for NFL coaches

Schottenheimer resigns; Reid, Rhodes land jobs

The Associated Press

NFL coaches were on the move again Monday as the league announced the hiring of Andy Reid and Ray Rhodes.

In the latest installment, Marty Schottenheimer was out at Kansas City, Andy Reid was in at Philadelphia and Ray Rhodes stepped in at Green Bay to replace his former boss, Mike Holmgren.

Schottenheimer's resignation came after a 7-9 season, his first losing campaign since he became an NFL coach in 1984. Considered a Super Bowl contender when the season started, Kansas City was beset by injuries and also because the NFL's most penalized team.

"After 10 years it's time to give someone else an opportunity to implement their plan," said Schottenheimer, 101-58-1 with the Chiefs. "I've decided to take a break, to take some time and relax."

There was no immediate word on Schottenheimer's successor.

The Eagles hired Reid, the Packers' quarterbacks coach, to replace Rhodes, and signed him to a reported $5 million, five-year deal. Both Rhodes and Reid coached with Holmgren and are close friends.

"Today the turnaround begins," Eagles owner Jeffrey Lurie said two weeks after he fired Rhodes following Philadelphia's 3-13 record — the Eagles' worst since 1972.

"This is the first step in putting the Philadelphia Eagles back on the map," the Reid said.

The 40-year-old Reid, who worked under Holmgren for seven years at Green Bay, became the second-year coach in the NFL after Oakland's Jon Gruden, 35.

Reid became the NFL's only head coach who has not served either as a college coach or as a coach since Dan Shell with the Raiders in 1989.

Rhodes worked with Holmgren in San Francisco, then moved to Green Bay as defensive coordinator for two seasons before returning to run the 49ers' defense for the '94 season. He was then hired by the Eagles, where he was coach of the line in '95 after his team went 10-6.

But Rhodes ran into front-office problems, working under four different general managers. Even Lurie took some of the blame for the Eagles' poor showing, saying he should have paid more attention to the front-office situation.

For Schottenheimer, the frustration culminated with a Monday night game

Solosabal hits OT winner for Pilot girls MVCHS

GLENN FERRY - Glenn Ferry's Jackie Solosabal hit the game-winning shot with 18 seconds left in overtime as the Pilot girls' basketball team defeated the visiting Hagerman Pirates 57-56 Monday night.

"Every time we got a lead, they would come back at us," said Pilot coach Diana Brock. "It was pretty exciting. Hagerman did a good job pressing us and we didn't handle it too well. Every time we would start ourselves on a run, we would turn the ball over."

The Pilots improve to 11-7. Their next conference game is against Goodline Jan. 21.

Local sports

The Indians shot just 20 times with Elizabeth Perez (nine points) and Stephanie Flores (two points) the lone scorers.

Shoshone 82

Shoshone junior Anna Cox led scorers with 24 points. Junior Elizabeth Buckley had 20 and freshman Monica Uhrig added 13.

Jackpot 11

JACKPOT - Shoshone's game with Jackpot Monday afternoon was a late addition to the schedule and a quick addition to the Indians' win column, 82-11.

"I guess it was our 'hedge' defense," said Shoshone coach Tim Chapman. "We got after them. That can't make any money without me," said Tyson, who is expected to make more than $20 million Saturday night.

Ticket sales, however, have been slow for the match, which falls between two big Las Vegas events.

Boys' basketball Murtaugh 67, Burley IV 53

MURTAUGH - Despite 21 points from Parker Lyons, the Burley junior varsity boys' basketball team fell 67-53 to the visiting Marquette Rebels.

Kyle Funk led Murtaugh with 14 points.

Continued from B1 Biggin combined for six points and their first lead of the game, but it didn't last long.

The Raptors struck back with six points of their own to retake the lead, adding two more to end the third quarter.

It looked like ISDB had control of the tempo going into the fourth quarter, but Jared Bell got the momentum back for the Christian School with two 3-point goals in a row. "We got lazy," Krueger said. "We do that sometimes. We made some mental mistakes, too."

MVCHS (4-0) travel to Bliss on Monday. ISDB (3-8) hosts Richfield today.

Coaches

Continued from B1 Rhodes' appointment solved a major problem for the NFL - he was one of just three black coaches in the league and most of the prospects for coaching jobs are white.

But, several black assistants remain in the running. Sherman Lewis, the Packers' offensive coordinator for the Chicago job; former Philadelphia defensive coordinator Emmit Thomas for Baltimore; Art Shell, the former Raiders coach and Atlanta's offensive line coach, for Cleveland; and perhaps one or two others.

In addition to Kansas City the Ravens, Bears and Browns were still searching for coaches.

When all the hiring is done, nine of 31 teams, including the expansion Browns, will have new coaches.

Tyson feels good

The champion even when it's not the champion," said 36-year-old Tyson, who begins his latest comeback Sunday night in a Memphis bout against Francis, Kosta in the MGM Grand Garden.

Typical of the fight, he is getting $20 million and Lennox Lewis is getting $10 million for their heavyweight championship fight on March 13 at New York's Madison-Square Garden.

$800M deal nets Redskins

Team goes for richest price in N. America

WASHINGTON (AP) — Since the franchise was born in 1932, there have been just three sales at the top of the Washington Redskins. Now some new faces take over.

With a bid of about $800 million — a North American professional sports record — brothers Howard and Edward Milstein and Daniel Snyder today won the fierce bidding war for one of the nation's blue-chip franchises.

There are few chances to live out a dream. Snyder said "As a lifelong Redskins fan, I'm thrilled to have the opportunity to make sure our local presence and traditions persist in the coming years."

The price breaks the $530 million Alfred Lerner spent last year for the expansion Cleveland Browns, a team for which Howard Milstein also bid. Media mogul Rupert Murdoch has a record offer of $1.1 billion pending for the English soccer club Manchester United.

The sale is subject to NFL approval and other conditions and is expected to close within the next 60 days, said a statement released by the trustees of the estate of the late Jack Kent Cooke.

The sale must be approved by three-quarters of NFL owners, who are expected to take up the matter during Super Bowl week at the end of the month. Morgan Stanley Dean Witter, which has been handling the negotiations, has kept the league apprised to help ensure the winning candidate would meet NFL requirements.

The deal stands to end 25 years of Cooke family control of one of the NFL's preeminent franchises. Jack Kent Cooke became majority owner in 1974 and assumed day-to-day operations from Edward Bennett Williams in 1980. Williams had run the club since the death of team founder George Preston Marshall in 1969.

Final details of the sale were completed at a meeting Sunday between members of the Milstein-Snyder group and the trustees, according to sources involved in the sale.

"This is a sad day for me and my family and our Redskins family. I had the desire and the will — even the ingenuity — but not enough money to keep the Redskins in my family. ... In the end, my family could not pay the price of our success..."

— John Kent Cooke

Redskins sold for record price

The Washington Redskins were sold for a staggering sum of about $800 million, a record in North America for a single team. Only the sale of the New York Knicks and Rangers was higher, because it included the Madison Square Garden television operation.

Rank	Team	Sale Price ($ million)	Principal buyer
1	New York Knicks/Rangers	$825	News Corp. and Liberty Media
2	Washington Redskins	$800	Howard and Edward Milstein and Daniel Snyder
3	Cleveland Browns	$530	Alfred Lerner
4	New York Yankees	$525	Cablevision Systems Corp.
5	Los Angeles Dodgers	$350	FOX Group

NHL's New York Islanders, but will not certainly have to sell that interest to comply with the NFL's cross-ownership rules. Howard Milstein, 47, is a noted New York real estate executive who bid $450 million for the Browns.

Snyder, 34, is chief executive of Snyder Communications in Bethesda, Md., a marketing firm that employs 8,000 people in 80 locations in 12 countries. It is particularly big in pharmaceutical and long-distance telephone marketing.

That the Redskins were to be put up for sale at all was the big surprise when the deal was reached after Cooke died in April 1997 at the age of 84. Instead of leaving the team to his son, John Kent Cooke, the elder Cooke instructed that the seven trustees of his estate sell the team and stadium and that the proceeds be used to establish a charitable foundation for children.

John Kent Cooke was determined to keep the team in the family, but struggled to keep pace in the bidding process because he lacked the personal wealth of the billionaires and mega-millionaires who were competing against him.

"This is a sad day for me and my family and our Redskins family," Cooke said. "I had the desire and the will — even the ingenuity — but not enough money to keep the Redskins in my family. ... In the end, my family could not pay the price of our success, and others could in these affluent times."

Unlike the very public sale of the Browns, the Redskins were sold behind a veil of secrecy. Prospective bidders were required to sign a confidentiality agreement.

Milstein's purchase leaves in doubt the futures of general manager Charley Casserly and coach Norv Turner. The Redskins haven't made the playoffs since 1992, and are 22-47 in five years under Turner. Sources at Redskin Park said both would have been retained had Cooke kept the team, which finished 6-10 in 1998.

Even though the process was secretive, most of the major contenders became known, including Baltimore Orioles owner Peter Angelos; Phoenix real estate developer Sam Grossman, who enlisted former coach Joe Gibbs as a minority partner; and Texas investor David Bonderman, whose group included shopping center developer Ted Lerner.

The final sticking point centered on what figure to release when the formal announcement was made today. The trustees statement listed the price as "approximately $800 million."

"It depends on how you count the money," one source told The Associated Press. "The price is $800 million, but the deal is $800 million. The group will pay $800 million, but will essentially get $50 million back right away from money in a Redskins bank account and other assets."

The Milstein brothers, who come from a successful banking family, own 45 percent of the

Finally! NBA season shows signs of life

NEW YORK (AP) — Amid widespread confusion over new salary cap rules, NBA training facilities were reopened to players Monday while league negotiators, the league and union worked to put the lockout settlement in writing.

"It's like my college poker games. They're making the rules up as they go along," said agent Keith Glass, one of several people around the league who described the situation as chaotic.

"The lockout will remain in effect until the agreement is finalized, with Jan. 18 set as the target date for opening training camps and allowing trades and free agents signings to commence."

In the meantime, general managers are being allowed to talk agents in anticipation of the frenzy that lies ahead. The problem, though, was that people were entering certain negotiations on terms differently.

"It's total confusion," agent MARK FISCHER said. "I've had agents tell me they want to stand certain rules to mean one thing, while I've been told the rules are the complete opposite. And these are significant things that are in dispute."

One of the settlement terms called for a salary cap of $30 million for the upcoming season, which was almost $2 million less than most teams had been expecting.

Also, it became apparent that changes in so-called "cap holds" — rules that determine how unsigned free agents are counted against their former teams' salary cap — would end up hindering player movement.

With everyone anxiously awaiting an end to the state of limbo, players were free for the first time in more than six months to use team facilities.

Only a handful showed up at many sites, making scrimmaging

Oakley, now a member of the Toronto Raptors, claimed to be in perfect shape.

"Tell the Lakers I'm ready. They don't have to worry about me being fit," said Oakley, who hopes to be traded to a contender like Los Angeles.

Coaches were not allowed to work with players Monday, which will remain the case until the lockout settlement is finalized.

Also, the league will not release the new schedule until then.

So much uncertainty combined with so much anxiety — as well as the anticipation over whether Michael Jordan will retire — should make for a busy week.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

OSU returns to AP poll after 6-year hiatus

NEW YORK — Ohio State's return to The Associated Press college basketball poll on Monday after a six-year absence gave the Big Ten a record-tying seven teams in the rankings.

The top six teams — Connecticut, Duke, Cincinnati, Stanford, Maryland and Kentucky — held their spots from last week, but there were some significant moves in the rest of the Top 25.

Wisconsin, Auburn and Iowa all made a jump at least five places, while Indiana, Arkansas, Purdue and Clemson all fell at least four spots.

Lady Vols reclaim AP No. 1 spot

NEW YORK — Tennessee returned to the No. 1 spot in The Associated Press women's basketball poll Monday, moving back to the position it held last season and the first week this season.

The Lady Vols, second the last five weeks, received 39 of a possible 41 first-place votes from a national media panel after their 32-31 victory at Connecticut, which had been No. 1, but fell to No. 2, just ahead of Purdue, the only team that has defeated Tennessee.

NCAA mulls cost-of-antitrust lawsuit

SAN ANTONIO — The NCAA is trying to distribute the cost among its schools of more than $57 million it must pay in an antitrust suit regarding coaches' earnings.

A U.S. District Court jury in Kansas City, Kan., last May awarded $67 million in damages to about 1,900 entry-level "restricted earnings coaches" in an antitrust lawsuit against the NCAA.

The court ruled the NCAA acted unlawfully in capping salaries of entry-level coaches at $16,000 annually.

McGwire's No. 70 headlines auction

NEW YORK — Celebrating the most remarkable home run season in baseball history, Guernsey's will auction off Mark McGwire's 70th home run ball tonight.

Besides McGwire's No. 70, Guernsey's is offering Hank Sosa's final home run ball of the season, No. 66, as well as Hank Aaron's last homer, No. 755, and Mickey Vernon's 500th homer.

Ski team member killed in Yellowstone

WEST YELLOWSTONE, Mont. — A University of Colorado ski team member was killed and another injured in a snowmobile accident in Yellowstone National Park, park officials said.

The two were on a rented snowmobile about five miles inside the park Monday when it went off the trail and hit a tree, said park spokeswoman Marsha Karle.

The woman, whom University of Colorado spokesman identified as Kristina Marie Johnson of Czechoslovakia, died at the scene of the 12:30 p.m. crash of head injuries, Karle said.

The man, whom the school identified as Casey Ward of Aspen, Colo., suffered a broken leg and a fractured jaw, Karle said.

NBA subpoenaed in ABL investigation

HARTFORD, Conn. — State attorney general Richard Blumenthal said Monday he has information that the NBA hastened the collapse of the American Basketball League by blocking the ABL's access to media and sponsors.

Blumenthal issued a subpoena to the NBA, which oversees the Women's National Basketball Association, a rival to the former ABL. The subpoena was part of his investigation into whether the NBA conspired to monopolize women's basketball, he said.

Picking stock symbol is not as easy as ABC

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Are you HOT for some stock in Starwood Lodging, a real estate investment company? Do you say AMEN when shares of the Christian Internet company Dixax Inc. rise? Does YUM whet your appetite to invest in the restaurant company Tricon?

Companies are having a little fun these days in selecting their "ticker symbols," the letter combinations that scroll across your TV screen during the financial news.

Symbols were first created in 1844 by telegraph operators trying to transmit prices rapidly. One-letter symbols were assigned to the most heavily traded stocks and still have a certain cachet, said Patrick Healy of the Issuer Network, Washington firm that advises companies on stock listings.

"They're easiest to remember and easiest to recognize," he said. A symbol of one, two or three letters means the stock trades on the New York Stock Exchange or the American Stock Exchange. A four-letter code indicates a Nasdaq Stock Market listing. Companies can ask for a specific symbol, and if it isn't already

Ticker what?

Ticker symbols may look like alphabet soup, but some spell a clear message.

Table listing various companies and their ticker symbols: Tricon, Global Restaurants, Western Beef Inc., The Smithland, Anheuser-Busch Cos., Coffee People Inc., Sunlight, Hut, Praxair, Odebrecht, Immuco Inc., Starwood Lodging Trust, YUM, EAT, BEEF, HAM, CAKE, BUD, VO, MOKA, EYES, RAYS, OO, PILL, BLD, AREN, HOT, HUH.

taken, the request is generally granted. The ticker symbol is not the same as the newspaper listing. General Motors Corp. is listed as GM for in many newspapers but is known as GM on the NYSE. Some ticker letters are easy to decipher: Dell Computer Corp. is DELL, CBS Corp. is CBS and Wang Laboratories is WANG. But who would guess that Venator Group, the former Woolworth Corp., is Z? Some companies choose ticker symbols that identify their premier products. Anheuser-Busch Co., maker of Budweiser beer, is BUD. Among eyecare companies, there's Vision Twenty-One Inc. (EYES). Sunglass Hut International (KAYS) and Oakley Inc. (OO).

Tricon Global Restaurants Inc., which spun off from PepsiCo Inc. in 1997, consists of three businesses: Pizza Hut, KFC and Taco Bell. It chose YUM as its ticker symbol. "We wanted to make people smile, and we wanted something that would be recognizable," said Lynn Tyson, vice president of investor relations. Similarly, Brinker International, the owner of Chili's restaurants, is listed as EAT. The Smithfield Co., producer of Smithfield ham, is ZZAM. Western Beef Inc. is BEEF and Chesapeake Factory is CAKE. It isn't necessary to know a business' ticker symbol to buy a stock, and company symbols are unlikely to affect its success on the stock market.

Starbucks sets sights on converting China to coffee

The Associated Press

BEIJING — With a whirling lion dance and whirling espresso machines, Starbucks is introducing cappuccinos and lattes to a nation of tea-drinkers.

Starbucks opened its first outlet in China Monday at a posh five-star hotel in downtown Beijing.

The Seattle-based company is betting that its style of coffee culture will appeal to urban Chinese who have readily welcomed McDonald's, Kentucky Fried Chicken and other Western chains. "Asians are fascinated with Western brands. We're hoping that enthusiasm will extend to Starbucks coffee," said Hu Dalin, chairman of H&Q Asia Pacific, a private equity firm that is part-owner of Starbucks' Beijing joint venture.

Starbucks began laying the groundwork for its move into China years ago.

Former Starbucks executive Lawrence Malz began distributing Starbucks coffee at Beijing hotels in 1994. His Seattle-based company, Borderless Investment Group Inc., teamed up with the Beijing General Corp. of Agriculture, Industry and Commerce to form Beijing Mei Da Coffee Co. Ltd., which will operate the Chinese Starbucks' outlets.

One company vice president, a Beijing native who once worked for the Chinese trade ministry, provided crucial local connections.

While the store's opening ceremony followed local rituals, with lion dances, speeches and huge paper flower wreaths, its menu service and decor are typical of outlets back in the United States.

Washington state — where Starbucks began — for training. The store offers a standard menu of pastries, roasts and brews, although the details might be adjusted to suit customer feedback, Malz said.

With prices considerably lower than those charged by other gourmet coffee shops in the vicinity, Starbucks is hoping to build its clientele among local Chinese, as well as foreigners.

A basic "short" cup of house blend, said for $1.10, compared with $2.66 at a nearby competitor's shop.

"We are trying to reach the average person. We don't want people to think of this as a luxury," said Hu.

Starbucks plans to open 10 stores in Beijing in the next 18 months.

A Starbucks employee offers coffee to customers at the opening ceremony of the Seattle-based company's first retail coffee store in Beijing Monday.

TWIN FALLS - When Renata Hadzic entered her picture of a crossing guard and a young girl in the Idaho School Boards Association (ISBA) calendar contest she thought winning was only a remote possibility.

In fact, the sixth grader at Bickel Elementary didn't even tell her parents she had entered the contest because she was certain that her picture would not be picked.

As a result, she was surprised when she was one of 42 students picked from throughout Idaho in the contest for kids in kindergarten through sixth grades.

"There were lots of people in Idaho that drew some pictures," Hadzic said. "I was real surprised when I got picked. I didn't think I would."

Her teacher, Sherri Johns, was not as surprised as she was excited. "When I found out what it was, I dug her around the whole school showing her off. I was very proud."

For the last two years the ISBA has chosen safety as its calendar theme. There is certain criterion the students must meet, but the rest is left to their own creativity.

Hadzic picked the crossing guard theme because she is a crossing guard. "That was the first thing I could think of," she said. "And the teachers always say how important it is to listen to crossing guards."

Entering the contest was optional for Johns' students. "I had four students enter," Johns said. "It's a thing where they leave it up to the teacher. It was entirely on her

FOCUS ON PEOPLE

Hospital's festival of trees was great success
TWIN FALLS - The Magic Valley Regional Health Foundation announced today that the 1998 Festival of Trees "It's A Rocky Mountain Christmas" was a wonderful success. The event was enjoyed by over 11,000 spectators.
The 14th annual holiday celebration held Dec. 31, 4th, 5th and 6th. Many organizations and civic groups, as well as hundreds of individuals assisted the foundation in presenting the event, which is centered around viewing beautiful Christmas trees, wreaths and a wide assortment of Christmas accessories that have been donated by both businesses and individuals from throughout the Magic Valley area.
The festival has become the largest medical fundraiser in the Magic Valley. This year's event grossed over $65,000.

Up to 300 wolves could face death

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Up to 300 wolves from the Yellowstone area could be killed unless a court ruling is modified or congressional action stops the purge. Defenders of Wildlife warned Monday.

The national conservation group led a leashed wolf into a hotel conference room to emphasize the plea for mercy.

The group, with 300,000 members nationwide, has asked the American Farm Bureau Federation, which won the 1997 court ruling against Idaho's National Park wolf releases, to withdraw its action. Unless that happens or unless Congress or appellate courts intervene, the wolves and their offspring would have to be recaptured and almost certainly killed. Defenders told reporters Monday.

"I really don't think it will get to that," said Bob Ferris, Defenders' Washington, D.C.-based special conservation director. "I really think the 10th Circuit (Court of Appeals) is going to rule in our favor."

But failing the 10th Circuit, Supreme Court or federal appeals court help, he said. "The simple truth is the wolves would have to be killed."

Ferris said nearly 200 of the wolves and their offspring live in the Yellowstone area, including some in nearby areas of Wyoming, Montana and Idaho. This spring, he said, the number may approach 300. Farm Bureau spokesman Joe Fields, interviewed at the bureau's national convention here, said it is unlikely the bureau would change its opposition to reintroduction of predators like the wolves. He said bureau delegates vote Wednesday or Thursday on the same anti-predator policy approved last year.

"Our people do not want more predators in or near their livestock," Fields said. In Casper, Wyo., U.S. District Judge William Downes ruled in 1997 that Canadian wolves introduced at Yellowstone could not have Endangered Species Act protection and would be native wolves. Downes, acting on the Farm Bureau's lawsuit, found the reintroduction illegal and ordered the wolves removed. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and Defenders of Wildlife appealed Downes' order, and Downes put his ruling on hold until the 10th Circuit acts. Defenders president Rodger Schlickelstein said Monday he believes the Circuit Court will rule by late spring or summer. A hearing for oral arguments by both sides is expected soon.

Energy secretary feels Nevada nuclear waste dump is ready to open

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — The federal government is still negotiating with the state on opening the New Mexico dump for plutonium-contaminated waste now stored in Idaho and other states.

But Energy Secretary Bill Richardson said the initial shipments from a federal facility in New Mexico could be made before the tentative opening date in mid-February for the $2 billion Waste Isolation Pilot Plant near Carlsbad.

"In my view, WIPP is ready to open," Richardson said. "The project has satisfied a number of health conditions at the state and federal level. I believe shipments can move forward."

The former New Mexico congressman, during a swing through his home state this weekend, also said he was working with New Mexico regulators on the state permit required to dump radioactive waste contaminated with other hazardous substances.

Currently, the dump is theoretically authorized to accept radioactive-only material, but Richardson would not say when the government would press that distinction by shipping 116 drums of Los Alamos National Laboratory waste to the facility without the additional state permit.

"We want to work with the state, not against it," he said.

A federal judge is considering that question, which is critical to the government's compliance with the 1995 nuclear waste deal it cut with former Idaho Gov. Phil Batt. Under that deal, shipments of waste must begin leaving the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory by April 30 or further dumping of high-level waste at INEEL will cease.

While New Mexico regulators agree the waste from Los Alamos is free of hazardous materials, they are concerned about Energy Department plans to ship more than the originally identified 116 drums.

"We will ensure that the interests of the state are protected," Richardson said. "It is my view that WIPP is safe."

Still, critics have sued over various procedural aspects of the dump's licensing and permitting, demanding that they done over — a process that could take two or three years if granted.

BPA looks ahead to deregulation

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Tired of waiting for permission from Congress, the Bonneville Power Administration is moving to restructure itself to meet the growing competition of a deregulated electricity industry.

Two years ago, Bonneville Power seemed besieged by difficulties including low electricity prices. But circumstances have now shifted. Now, the federal agency that sells electricity from federal dams in the Northwest is trying to adapt to a market it no longer controls.

Led by its new administrator, Judi Johansen, Bonneville Power has moved ahead with two unprecedented initiatives.

One calls for selling power directly to residential customers of investor-owned utilities, giving them a stake in the agency's survival.

The environmental community is also being courted with promises for an open-ended budget for recovery of endangered fish species.

Congress last year started working on legislation redefining Bonneville's role, but no progress is shown.

The last time Congress overhauled the agency was in 1980, when it passed the Northwest Power Act. It shifted the Depression-era focus on public power agencies and industry to benefiting residential customers of privately owned utilities.

"We're working under a 20-year act that doesn't fit the current market," said John Savage of the Oregon Office of Energy. "There is a policy vacuum in a sense. There is no guidance."

Johansen acknowledged that the outdated laws that never envisioned the need for deregulated policies. But the laws give her flexibility to build consensus to move ahead, she said.

"You've got a lot of industry restructuring, and it's going to push us to the edges of our authority in ways that I can't see speculate right now," Johansen said.

A handful of Northwest congressmen have tried to draft legislation reflecting the new atmosphere. But Bonneville Power is just one small part of a slow-moving debate over deregulation of the nation's $200 billion-a-year electric industry.

Warning signs help parents identify drug abuse in kids

DEAR READERS: Yesterday I

printed a letter from Gen. Barry McCaffrey (Ret.), director of the national drug control policy in Washington, D.C., in which he asked parents to act upon 10 New Year's Resolutions to Raise Drug-Free Kids. Space limitations prevented me from printing the warning signs he said parents should look for. Although there is no single factor for drug use, warning signs of a potential problem include:

- (1) Drop in academic performance
- (2) Lack of interest in personal appearance
- (3) Withdrawal, isolation, depression, fatigue
- (4) Aggressive, rebellious behavior
- (5) Hostility and lack of cooperativeness
- (6) Deteriorating relationships with family
- (7) Change in friends
- (8) Loss of interest in hobbies and sports
- (9) Change in eating/sleeping habits
- (10) Evidence of drugs or drug paraphernalia (e.g., needles, pipes, lighters)
- (11) Physical changes (e.g., runny nose, red eyes, coughing, wheezing, bruises, needle marks)

DEAR ABBY: Do you enjoy large, festive parties where the band is so loud you cannot hear the guest next to you speak? We went to a very expensive black-tie wedding that was the most of the guests left the room at various intervals throughout the evening in order to be able to converse with other guests without shouting.

The guests complained to each other about the loudness of the music, but no one felt they could speak to the host and hostess about it because they thought the loud music was their choice.

I spoke with the hostess about it today. She said she also thought the music was too loud, but she thought the guests were enjoying it.

Abby, is there anything guests can do about it? I am not complaining about music in general. It's only the very loud music I resent, which causes me to go home with a sore throat from shouting.

Do other readers agree? — ROBERTA BERENS, ENCINO, CALIF.

DEAR ROBERTA: I'm sure many readers will agree with you, depending upon their age. It's a generational thing. Young people tend to favor loud music, which explains why so many have hearing problems in their later years. And you asked the hostess or even the band leader to tone down the volume — your guests may have fallen on deaf ears.

Ponder this: "Many a man owes his success to his first wife — and his second wife to success." (Sean Connery)

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

"The best way I know of to win an argument is to start by being in the right."

WEST: K 7 5 4, Q 5 2, J 10 9 7, A Q 10 9 7. SOUTH: A Q, K Q 3, J 10 9 7, A J 3. EAST: J 10 9 3, Q 5 2, J 8 7 5, A J 3. NORTH: 4 3 2, A J 2, Q 10 9 7, K 10 9 7.

There was a lively post-mortem after South bid 4NT today's no-trump game. North agreed that South should have passed against East's club jack... South was his heart king and lost a low club for dummy's queen and East's ace.

Vulnerable: Both Dealer: South. The bidding: South West North East 1NT Pass 3NT All pass. Opening lead: Heart 10.

BID WITH THE ACES

South holds: 4-10 9 3. North: 1 4 3 2. East: J 8 7 5, A J 3. South: 4 3 2, A J 2, Q 10 9 7, K 10 9 7.

Other than the fact that the 6-nucleus wrecked, North's argument revealed "results analysis." South was on honor ground. East followed by the second club. South knew one more of East's cards than West's. Therefore, West was a 12-12 favorite to bid.

What did the astute kibitzer want to say? "Win the first heart with dummy's jack and run the club. If a heart to West's jack, you know will come. Then lead South with a spade shift, and South will be able to knock out the club without danger."

Who can argue with logic like this?
