Package forces evacuation

Dressed in protective clothing, a member of the Explosives Ordnance Disposal team from Mountain Home Air Force Base prepares a suspicious package for detonation Monday on the steps of the Twin Falls police headquarters. Discovered Monday morning at the building's front door, the unmarked package was treated as if it were explosive.

By Brian Haynes
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls police received an unexpected package at their doorstep Monday morning — one that sent nearly the whole department into the street.

The shoebox-sized package wrapped in plain brown paper was stuffed in an ash can near the police station's front door. It was suspicious enough to evacuate most of the building, close off streets and call in a bomb squad.

Three men from the Explosives Ordnance Disposal team from the Mountain Home Air Force Base arrived to handle the possible bomb.

While nearly two dozen officers watched from the street, a bomb squad member donned a protective suit and inspected the package. An X-ray was inconclusive, and they decided to blow up the package.

The bomb squad attached a small explosive device and a wire to the package and set up a U-shaped wall of sandbags on the sidewalk. Then a bomb squad member hiding behind a tree across the street pulled the package behind the sandbags.

"Fire in the hole!" someone screamed a second before the package was blown to bits. There was no secondary explosion, which meant the package wasn't explosive.

But that doesn't mean no crime was committed. "At this point we're going to investigate it as if it were a true crime," police Sgt. Don Hall said.

An unmarked package found at the front door of the headquarters of the Twin Falls Police Department, treated as a bomb, was found not to contain any explosives.

"It was either a false alarm or somebody playing a hoax," Times-News staff writer Brian Haynes can be reached at 733-0931. Ext. 238.

Computer virus is no friend

'Melissa' disturbs computer systems across the country

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — E-mail systems at thousands of companies and government agencies around the country were swamped Monday by a cunning virus called "Melissa" that disguises itself as an "important message" from a friend.

The virus began to show up Friday and spread rapidly on Monday by making computers fire off dozens of infected e-mails. Although the virus apparently causes no permanent damage to a computer, its effects were far-reaching.

In Portland, Ore., city government slowed to a crawl. The e-mail network at Lockheed Martin, the aerospace company in Bethesda, Md., was overloaded.

Michael Vatis, a federal prosecutor and director of the National Infrastructure Protection Center based at FBI headquarters, said military and government computers were sabotaged, along with thousands of other institutions' systems.

"It is important that computer crime is not just dismissed as kids fooling around," Vatis said. "There are real consequences for real people." The FBI is investigating, he said. Vatis would not comment on whether investigators had any leads, or on where the name Melissa came from.

The Melissa virus comes in the form of an e-mail, usually containing the subject line "Important Message." It appears to be from a friend or colleague. The body of the e-mail message says, "Here is that document you asked me to send. Don't show it to anyone else" with a winking smiley face formed by the punctuation marks.

Attached to the message is a document file. Once the user opens that file, the virus digs into the user's address book and sends infected documents to the first 50 addresses.

School weapons bill vetoed

Amendments to Rep. Hansen's bill prove fatal

By Gregory Hahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A proposed Idaho law that originated in the Twin Falls Police Department was vetoed by Gov. Dirk Kempthorne Monday, and the officers who had pushed for the measure are glad.

"I'm happy as can be," said Sgt. Dan Hall, who had traveled to the Statehouse to testify in favor of the original bill with O'Leary Junior High School Resource Officer Jim Tuttle. The bill, sponsored by rookie Rep. Randy Hansen, R-Twin Falls, was intended to keep adults from carrying guns and other weapons on school grounds — a ban in effect for students for several years. Two amendments pushed by Idaho members of the National Rifle Association were added in the Senate, though, allowing students to keep guns in their cars in school parking lots and letting concealed weapons permit holders carry in schools for the first time.

The changes had broad support in the legislature, but Tuttle and Hall were joined in their opposition by law enforcement and school officials from across the state. "In my opinion," Hill said, "it made our children more at risk than they were."

The protests came after the amended bill passed both houses, and Hansen, who championed the idea in his first bill as a legislator, said he didn't know how the Twin Falls officers felt until it was too late.

Hansen could not be reached Monday for comment. In a three-page veto message addressed to House Speaker Bruce Newcomb, R-Burley,

NATO targets Serb troops; spokesman points to indications of genocide in Kosovo

The Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Ground-attack jets took off for Kosovo on Monday as part of NATO's expanded attacks on the Serb forces carrying out a "scorched earth policy" in the separatist province.

While tens of thousands of ethnic Albanian refugees fled neighboring countries, specialized A-10 "Warthog" planes were spotted taking off from Aviano Air Base in northern Italy. The A-10 is a low- and slow-flying tank-killer aircraft that could be used to strike Serb ground forces.

Air raid sirens blared Monday evening in Belgrade, the Yugoslav capital, and two detonations shook Pancevo, six miles to the north, marking the beginning of a sixth night of bombing.

As new atrocities were reported in Kosovo, Russia's prime minister announced he was going to the Yugoslav capital of Belgrade on a peace deal, and rallies for and against the airstrikes took place in London, New York, Prague and other cities.

NATO spokesman Air Commodore David Wilby said the latest air attacks targeted Serb and Please see KOSOVO, Page A2

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — This time, they made it stick.

The Dow Jones industrial average climbed past 10,000 Monday and finally had enough momentum to stay above the milestone through the closing bell. The 103-year-old index closed at 10,006.78, up 184.54 points, and the floor of the New York Stock Exchange began a long-awaited celebration.

NYSE chairman Richard Grasso, New York Mayor Rudolph Giuliani and John Prestbo, index editor for Dow Jones & Co., banged the gavel symbolizing the close of the trading day and then began tossing baseball caps with "Dow 10,000" embroidered on the front.

"It's a moment to uncork the champagne and celebrate what a truly phenomenal bull market this has been," said Hugh Johnson, market strategist at First Albany Corp.

News that several big corporate mergers may be in the works helped send the Dow over 10,000 Monday. But, at a post-close press conference, Grasso gave credit for the milestone to investors who have poured money into stocks — either directly or through mutual funds or pension plans — for the past decade. The Dow is a barometer of 30 major companies.

"The stock exchange had nothing to do with Dow 10,000. It had to do with the huge number of participants in the marketplace," Grasso said. "I want to send thank yous to the 70 million Americans who participate directly in equities and another 130 million who participate indirectly." The Dow achieved its first five-digit close after four failed attempts earlier this month.

Prosecutors file murder charges against Nichols

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Terry Nichols, serving a life sentence for his federal conviction as a conspirator in the Oklahoma City bombing, was charged Monday with first-degree murder in state court and could face the death penalty if convicted.

Nichols, 43, is in prison for the deaths of eight law enforcement officers. District Attorney

Bob Macy had long promised to file state charges in the deaths of the 160 other people killed when a truck bomb tore through the nine-story office building.

Macy filed 163 counts against Nichols. In addition to the 160 first-degree murder charges, he accuses Nichols of one count of first-degree manslaughter for the death of an unborn child, one count of conspiracy to commit murder and one count of aiding and counseling in the placing of a substance or bomb near a public building.

Nichols was convicted in federal court in Denver on Dec. 23, 1997, for conspiring to bomb the building and eight counts of involuntary manslaughter in the

Subway cuts the common courtesy

NEW YORK (AP) — The city that invented the New York subway is apparently in too much of a hurry to say "please."

In an attempt to speed up subway service, conductors have been ordered to stop saying "Please" when addressing riders over the speaker system.

"That means dropping the word from the phrase, "Stand clear of the closing doors."

"If you add five seconds at every stop by saying 'please' at the end of 60 stops, you're four or five minutes off schedule," Al O'Leary, a spokesman for the New York City transit authority, said Monday.

Riders were, well, not pleased.

"It's nonsense!" said Lynnette Taylor as she got off the D train at Rockefeller Center.

Missile system test fails for sixth time

WASHINGTON (AP) — A weapon designed to knock enemy missiles out of the sky failed its sixth direct-hit attempt Monday, raising questions about the technological feasibility of a defense system that is now a national priority.

Pentagon officials in charge of the Army's Theater High-Altitude Area Defense missile program put a positive spin on reports of spaying all targeting, radar and launch systems together for the first time. And they predicted a complete success soon, although they couldn't say exactly what caused the miss.

"Everything seemed to work very well with this exception, obviously, of what happened relative to the closing end."

'At some point you have to wonder if this is in the category of developing fusion power.'

— John Pike, scientist game for the missile," Lt. Gen. Lesley Jyles, director of the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization, told a Pentagon news conference.

Officials of the program were skeptical, however, given that the Pentagon has spent more than $50 billion on research and limited testing on missile defense with few results, dating to the Reagan administration's ambitious space-based "Star Wars" system.

"At some point you have to wonder if this is in the category of developing fusion power," said John Pike of the Federation of American Scientists. "The fact is, even the smallest malfunction means you missed the target, it says something about how difficult this is to do. Everything has to work exactly right or it doesn't work at all."

The THAAD is designed to strike enemy missiles at altitudes of 300 miles and higher — just the kinds of weapons nations such as Iran, North Korea and Pakistan are developing, raising the threat to U.S. troops and allies overseas.

Microsoft bristles at suggestion

WASHINGTON (AP) — On the eve of secret negotiations in an effort to settle antitrust charges, Microsoft bristled Monday over indications that it might be asked to surrender the lucrative blue prints for its Windows operating system.

"There are laws in this country that protect the copyright of all companies that create intellectual property," spokesman Greg Shaw said.

Microsoft was expected to meet here Tuesday with lawyers from the Justice Department and 19 states, in what is alleged to be an effort to force Microsoft to settle antitrust violations. Both sides are under orders from a judge to negotiate, although experts agree that any settlement is unlikely.

The trial, in a lengthy recess, is tentatively scheduled to resume April 12 but may not continue until the end of the year.

"I do think the most likely result here is that we'll be back at trial," Wisconsin Attorney General Stephen Hauke, a lawyer with the New York Attorney General's office who heads the states' legal team in the trial, has openly discussed requiring Microsoft to settle its operating system blueprints to other software companies.

The veto stamp comes down

GOV. DIRK KEMPHORNE decided Monday on the fate of the final 15 of the 402 bills that came before him this year. Here's a run-down.

He vetoed a five-year extension for managed care plans to be covered by the guaranty association that protects claimants if a plan becomes insolvent. It plans can legitimately show problems in meeting the Dec. 31, 2000, deadline. He would consider an indefinite next year.

He vetoed provisions in state bingo regulation because the bill deleted Lottery Commission authority over what is still illegal gambling in the state.

He vetoed granting authority for insurers, primarily Blue Cross and Blue Shield, to make rate adjustments annually rather than every five years based on age of the insured.

He signed a continuation of parimutuel betting on dog racing similar to that from other states beyond the previously agreed-to sunset date, June 30.

Elimination of dog racing simulcasts as part of a 1996 deal to end live dog racing in Idaho amid reports of cruelty to the animals.

He signed a controversial land-use planning bill that critics claimed severely weakens the ability of the public to participate in — and effect — planning and zoning decisions.

The Idaho Conservation League maintains one provision — repopulating a requirement for planning and zoning reports to base findings on findings of fact and conclusions of law — is unconstitutional.

The governor acknowledged those concerns but said he believed other sections of Idaho law allow court challenges of questionable zoning decisions. And feeling that, he promised to consider new legislation to restore what he called a more fair review.

Kosovo

Yugoslav units involved in atrocities in Kosovo, a province in Serbia, the main republic in Yugoslavia.

"There are indications genocide is unfolding in Kosovo," said James P. Rubin, the State Department spokesman, citing reports of summary killings and people being forced from their homes at gunpoint.

Wilby said NATO had received reports that Fehmi Agani, an ethnic Albanian negotiator at recent peace talks in France, was "executed" on Sunday and that others had gone into hiding.

Four other prominent ethnic Albanians were also reported executed in the Serbs' "scorched earth policy," NATO said.

The Serbian Media Center in Pristina, the Kosovo capital, claimed later there was no evidence to support the accusations.

Pentagon spokesman Ken Bacon, speaking in Washington, said five U.S. aircraft, including five B-1 bombers, would soon join the mission. The western allies want Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic to stop his campaign against Kosovo's separatists and accept a peace plan that calls for 28,000 NATO troops to enforce the accord, including 4,000 Americans. His refusal to accept the peacekeeping force triggered the NATO airstrikes.

Ethnic Albanians make up 90 percent of Kosovo's 2 million people inhabitants. Serbs, however, consider Kosovo theirs because it was the birthplace of their culture.

Bill

Kemphorne said the bill started as a "well-intentioned effort," but he thought the final product endangered the state's fundamental commitment to provide safe schools.

Kemphorne wrote that he didn't have a problem with the concealed weapons exemption, and though he acknowledged the other language was intended to accommodate young hunters, he added the state owes parents, teachers and students a school environment "free from potential violence."

"While many of us fondly recall the days when gun violence on our school campuses was unheard of, the unfortunate reality is that even in Idaho, it has changed," Kemphorne wrote.

NATO steps up assaults, but with no end in sight

WASHINGTON (AP) — With NATO's air assault now aiming at Yugoslav ground forces and with armed Serbs clearing ethnic Albanians out of Kosovo, analysts and members of Congress are struggling with America's limited options for leading NATO out of the latest Balkans crisis.

The Clinton administration so far has revealed no strategy beyond more missiles and more bombs.

"We feel like we have a NATO-led military air strike campaign that over time will allow us to reach our military objective," White House spokesman Joe Lockhart said Monday. "There's no way to put a timetable on this."

The loss of a $45 million U.S. stealth fighter, apparently downed by a Serb missile, and little sign of retreat by Yugoslav leader Slobodan Milosevic has Balkans experts debating the need for a ground assault — a dangerous escalation both NATO and President Clinton are openly trying to avoid.

Two former National Security Council officials, one from the Clinton administration and one from the Bush administration, concluded Monday at a Brookings Institution seminar that ground war is inevitable if Milosevic is to be stopped.

"What this portends for the United States is a very nasty, counterproductive result from whatever our declared strategy tries to achieve," said Bruce Johnson, senior fellow at the Hudson Institute.

NATO boosters in Congress are counting on the pounding to render Milosevic too weak militarily to abuse Kosovo.

Rep. Ike Skelton of Missouri, senior Democrat on the House Armed Services Committee, said Milosevic "is going to wake up one of these mornings and find he hasn't got a military. When the Serbs in Kosovo see their godfather in shambles, there's not much they can do."

on the ground.

"Everything we say to reassure the American public and the Congress undermines the force of our words and our actions, undermines our prospects on the battlefield," said Haas, now a Brookings analyst.

Marine navigator pleads guilty to obstruction, conspiracy charges

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — A Marine navigator pleaded guilty Monday to obstruction and conspiracy charges for destroying a videotape that recorded the flight of the jet that clipped a ski gondola cable in Italy.

The government accused Capt. Joseph Schweitzer, 31, of destroying the tape he shot before his radar-jamming EA-6B Prowler hit the gondola cable during a low-level training flight in February 1998. All 20 people inside the gondola were killed.

The military decided to try Schweitzer and the pilot, Schweitzer of Westbury, N.Y., made the plea after an afternoon court hearing that last several hours at Camp Lejeune. Col. Alvin Keller, a military judge, was to ask Schweitzer some questions about the case before announcing whether he would accept the plea, which was likely.

"Joe is the type of guy who wants to stand up and take responsibility," said Dave Beck, Schweitzer's civilian attorney, in an interview before the hearing. "There were some bad mistakes made after the accident and they made bad decisions."

The court-martial of Schweitzer had been scheduled to begin late last week with jury selection. But legal maneuvers and discussions between government lawyers and Schweitzer's defense team delayed it.

The jet pilot, Capt. Richard Ashby, 31, of Mission Viejo, Calif., was acquitted by a military jury at Camp Lejeune of manslaughter and other charges on March 4.

Manslaughter counts against Schweitzer were dismissed after the acquittal. But Schweitzer and Ashby both faced the obstruction of justice and conspiracy charges because of the videotape's disappearance.

Each charge carries a maximum five-year sentence. A military panel will be chosen as early as Tuesday to participate in a sentencing hearing.

Whites leave welfare rolls faster than others

WASHINGTON (AP) — Across the country, whites are leaving welfare more quickly than blacks, Hispanics and American Indians, raising crucial but sensitive questions about whether America's ambitious overhaul of its welfare system is leaving minorities behind. A strong economy and tough new rules have combined to move people of all races off welfare in unprecedented numbers. But across the country, the proportion of racial minorities on assistance has grown, in some cases dramatically, according to a 50-state Associated Press survey. Exceptions exist, but they are rare. The findings point to how much tougher life can be for many minorities, even compared with other poor Americans. Welfare researchers and state officials say the disparity is understandable given that minorities are more likely to live farther from many welfare offices, the figures are alarming. "It just leads to more discrimination between classes, between races and between ethnicities," said Bruce Katz, who studies welfare issues at the Brookings Institution. "It just sort of entrenches the social fabric." In 33 of 42 states, the proportion of white welfare recipients had dropped since 1994, when caseloads peaked nationally, the AP survey found. In the other 9 states, either the number of minorities is too small to be meaningful or such statistics are not kept. In Utah, the number of those on welfare has been stable. Idaho does not keep welfare statistics on a basis of race. Of the 16 big states, 14 have had whites leave welfare faster than blacks or Hispanics. Take Ohio, where blacks on welfare now outnumber whites for the first time. In 1995, 54 percent of people on welfare were white, 42 percent black. By this year, 53 percent were black and 42 percent white. The share of whites on Nevada's rolls has dropped since 1994 to 47 percent from 56 percent. Blacks grew to 38 percent from 30 percent, and Hispanics edged up to 13 percent from 11 percent. And in the Dakotas, American Indians have come to dominate welfare. In North Dakota, they grew to 56 percent from 28 percent in 1993. In South Dakota, they jumped to 77 percent from 54 percent over five years.

Prospective jurors gather for cops' trial

NEW YORK (AP) — Jury selection began Monday in the trial of four police officers accused of brutality in the shooting death of an unarmed black man. Scores of prospective jurors gathered in Brooklyn federal court and were given questionsnaires seeking to measure their knowledge and opinions of the highly publicized Amherst Louisa case. Defense lawyers had unsuccessfully asked for a change of venue, venue because of intense media coverage.

Challenge to the big guys

Bookseller says anyone can be successful with Internet business

The Associated Press

CEDAR FALLS, Iowa — Linda and Lyle Bowlin are mounting a modest challenge to book-selling giant Amazon.com — and demonstrating, perhaps, the democratic power of the Internet — from the comfort of their own home.

"There isn't a reason why anybody else out there can't open up a business on the Internet and be successful," says Bowlin, sitting in what used to be his dining room but now houses two computers and stacks of book orders.

Since November 1997, Bowlin, formerly a grocery produce manager and now a professor of small-business development at the University of Northern Iowa, has been selling books over the Internet, first as a hobby that evolved to only selling books, now as a business that supplies best sellers.

Bowlin found he could buy from Amazon.com's top wholesalers for about the same price if he ordered at least five copies of the same book.

And with his 18-year-old daughter doing the accounting, he is handling the shipping and Bowlin managing the Internet site, their low overhead meant they could sell for less than Amazon.com.

Recently, New York Times columnist Thomas Friedman cited Bowlin's business — positively you.com — as an testament to the power of the Internet and evidence that some Internet stocks are overvalued.

"There aren't 20,000 people who can produce software like Microsoft, but

'There aren't 20,000 people who can produce software like Microsoft, but there are 20,000 who can set up bookstores or vitamins stores or video stores.'

—Lyle Bowlin
businessman

there are 20,000 who can set up bookstores or vitamins stores or video stores," Bowlin says. "That's where the stock market missed the boat."

Bowlin says his startup costs were about $2,500.

Sales have grown from about $400 a month to $4,000 a day. Books lie in neat rows across the living room floor, boxes of padded mailing packages are stacked ceiling high against a wall, and the coffee table doubles as a shipping table.

"This isn't my hobby, this is work," Mrs. Bowlin laughs as she places books in mailing packages and slips handwritten mailing labels on them.

Analysts say it is difficult to say what Bowlin's success proves and what effect such businesses will have on big Internet stocks. But one analyst says it illustrates how the Internet allows anyone to compete with big, established businesses.

"When you're online, you are immediately a multinational company in the sense you have multinational reach," said Robert Hormats, vice chairman of Goldman Sachs International. "But it also means that established companies have to take competition from places they never dreamed of and companies that perhaps did not exist a year ago."

Bowlin's business volume is nowhere near Amazon.com's 1998 sales of $609 million and he admits that he alone will not compete head-to-head with the book-seller. But with an estimated $24 billion book market, there is plenty of room for others like himself, Bowlin says.

"There are about 5,000 independent bookstores out there and with a little extra investment they can be incredibly successful," Bowlin says. "En masse, they pose a real threat."

John Hooks, a computer systems and science professor at Pace University in New York, says Internet stock is not overvalued because it represents the expected earnings of the Internet of the future.

Moreover, Hooks says, "the buying public is not interested in transacting because they represent the expected earnings of the Internet of the future."

Bowlin, who is also director of the Small Business Development Center at UNI, plans to hire people and move the business out of the house soon. He says he is weighing offers to go public that could help people take his company private.

"I'm an entrepreneur," Bowlin says. "That's the nothing worth with that."

Finance officers predict strong corporate earnings this year

The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — As small investor interest in stocks seems to be waning — temporarily, of course, and more from weariness than fear — America's corporate finance officers have offered bullish news.

On average, said the officers, the corporate earnings involved are likely to grow strongly this year, which is the ninth year of an almost unparalleled, wealth-spreading expansion.

This is the sort of poll that has real meaning for stocks. Unlike all those other explanations for rising stock prices, this one makes fundamental sense, because profits power prices.

It is worthy of attention for other reasons, too, most importantly because chief financial officers aren't inclined toward undue optimism lest they mislead stock analysts, who are unforgiving. You might think they exaggerate, however, when you see their views expressed as percentages, as in the analysis of 371 responses to a Financial Executives' Institute and Duke University poll.

This survey showed that 68 percent of chief financial officers anticipate earnings this year that will beat those of 1998, and not just barely but by an average of no less than 15 percent.

Such things aren't supposed to be happening, since anyone who was trained in the old school knows (why, it's right there in the text books) that pressure on profits builds late in an expansion.

Reading from such texts, it sounds reasonable: As expansions age, employers must hire less efficient help. Wages rise,

Japan's slump may force liquidation

Knight Ridder News Service

TOKYO — Chiunuo Komatsu's mother always used to wash her face three times. First to wash the vegetables, then to scrub the floor, and finally to wash the plants.

Komatsu, 77, uses it twice: for the vegetables and the plants.

"It is part of the Japanese culture to say," she said.

And with scrimping like that, Japan has been able to amass an estimated $12 trillion in savings.

The bulk is invested in Japan. Still, Japanese investors hold more than $166 billion in U.S. stocks and bonds and are the largest foreign holders of U.S. Treasuries, with more than $276 billion worth as of December.

But with the country in an economic slump that has lasted eight years, there is concern that Japanese may be forced to liquidate much of its holdings, which would flood the U.S. market, sending bond prices down and their interest rates up sharply.

"I would have said this could never happen but, as the recession continues, it

of a Third World mired in

All we know that top corporate

Various surveys show that worker loyalty and productivity will also have been rising in recent years, ending a hiatus.

Figures from The Economic

while real (inflation adjusted)

how will they handle their stocks?

Very big bucks are involved.
The Census Bureau's wealth gatherers all sorts of business and economic statistics, estimates that consumer assets grew 60 percent, or $15 trillion, in the 1990s.

Of that $15 trillion of relatively new assets, $8 trillion results from stock market gains. That gives some idea of how rich Americans are now.

In the short term, these assets bolster confidence of consumers, who are fearless in their buying.
Their strong consumption

And a strong economy keeps stocks high.

It all ties together in what you

Whatever, it doesn't work without all the parts — all of them.

And it's why any good news, as welcome. There's just too much bad news out there.

It's time to use local ammo in the abiding war on drugs

Like a Roman conqueror, anti-drug activist Milton Craigh came to Idaho, he talked, and then he left. Now it's time for Idaho residents to press ahead in the war on drugs.

Craigh has dramatically raised public awareness about drug addiction. He's a high-profile guy and we don't begrudge him $175,000 for three appearances in Idaho. It takes money to wage war.

"If he saves one person from having their life destroyed, it's worth it," said Jerome County Sheriff Jim Weaver.

Cynics might dispute Weaver's claim, arguing that no ratty doper could possibly be worth $175,000. That's the wrong way to measure the value of prevention.

Instead, look at the cost to society when someone with a drug problem winds up in prison - at an average annual cost of around $25,000. It only takes seven years for an imprisoned person to chew through $175,000 in public money. But more than one person goes to prison every year for drug offenses.

In addition to paying for imprisonment, society also loses the economic contribution and workplace productivity of workers who wind up in prison.

Make no mistake, many of today's drug addicts are out there in the workforce. Estimates are that 70 percent of all substance abusers are employed. Local businesses know some of their employees may be high while on the job. That's a concern because workers who are high are liable to injure themselves - and others. As long as there are lawyers and liability laws, business owners stand to lose everything if a stoned worker injures an innocent bystander.

About 600 Magic Valley employers require some sort of testing to ensure their employees aren't on drugs. Business owners can make a strong argument for drug interdiction, but it's an argument that should include everyone.

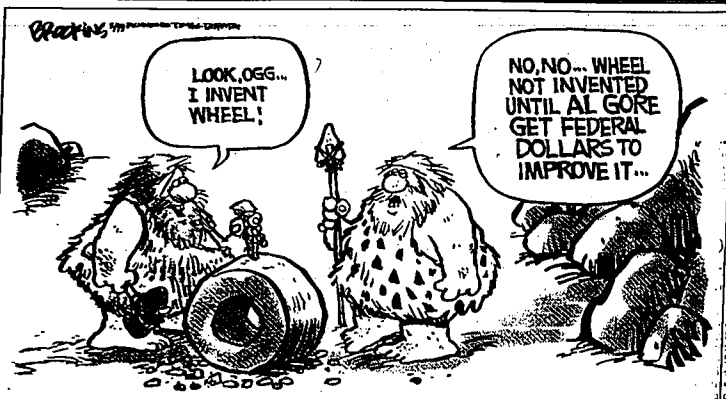

Local school districts could be powerful role models in this regard. As things stand, a handful of Magic Valley school districts have drug-testing policies for students involved in extracurricular activities. Students are tested but teachers aren't, which is too bad because children are quick to seize on the hypocrisy of adults.

Life is a journey, but drug abuse is a dead end for users and society alike. Craigh has helped crystallize the issue and brought public awareness to a new high. For that, we are thankful.

Now it's time to tackle the more difficult, and more expensive problem of weaning our friends, family and employees away from drugs.

Three Mile Island - 20 years later

HARVEY WASSERMAN

Twenty years ago, on March 28, 1979, Three Mile Island Unit Two began spewing lethal doses of radiation into the lush central Pennsylvania countryside. The first signs of spring had brought out the budding foliage in Goldsboro, a few hundred yards across the Susquehanna, came out to now their laws.

They were all grossed with radiation. "I was cutting the grass and suddenly experienced a strange, metallic taste," one storeowner told me two decades ago. He then developed a serious case of asthma.

To this day, no one knows how much radiation escaped during this terrible accident, where it went, who ingested it or what the health effects were. On assignment from Rolling Stone Magazine, I visited the area a year after the meltdown. Three Mile Island's owners were venting krypton gas from the stricken containment dome. A local paper ran a cartoon, depicting a plant official saying there was no danger from the release, behind him Superman fell out of the sky.

Until 1979, the general public believed a reactor accident was virtually impossible. But then Three Mile Island's owners lied and the wrong pages were closed.

It might have been much worse. A hydrogen bubble had formed that could have driven the northeastern United States its very own Chernobyl. As company officials denied there was any melting of radioactive fuel, virtually all of it was running like molten lava. Nine years later, robotic cameras confirmed that more than 90 percent of the rods had melted.

In the year after the incident, mutations, still births and premature deaths devastated local farm animals. The Pennsylvania Department of Health exonerated the plant, but a team of Baltimore reporters meticulously refuted its report. They compiled an apocalyptic picture of what had happened to the region's livestock.

Meanwhile, the infant death rate in nearby communities soared. Down syndrome turned up in frightening numbers among local newborns.

Cancer clusters surfaced precisely where investigators showed radiation leakage probably touched down. The companies guilefully paid out at least $15 million in compulsory damages, always insuring that the recipients keep quiet.

In 1984 an angry, frightened populace voted 3 to 1 against the restart of Three Mile Island's Unit One, which had sat idle since the accident struck its younger sibling. But President Ronald Reagan forced the reactor back on cost anyway.

After 15 years, Judge Sylvia Rambo dismissed a class-action lawsuit brought by 2,000 families who claimed they had loved ones injured as a result of the accident. The judge said there was insufficient evidence to warrant a jury trial. Those cases, of course, were unheeded.

Meanwhile, Unit One is about to be sold for about $25 million, essentially a junkyard price. Throughout the United States, utility companies are using the deregulatory process to force ratepayers to foot the bill for their expensive, failed nuclear plants. Then the companies can write them off - essentially for scrap. Having peaked at about 120, the number of operating reactors is now 104, and many soon slip to double digits.

But in California and Pennsylvania, Illinois and Massachusetts, ratepayers are being stuck with "stranded cost" charges meant to compensate reactor owners for the billions they sunk into these plants, much of it for cost overruns incurred after Three Mile Island.

These companies blame the Feds for imposing the extra safeguards. But it's been 20 years since the atomic power Superman fell out of the sky. Maybe those who brought him down ought to foot the bill.

Harvey Wasserman's forthcoming book "The Last Energy Wars" will be published in the fall by Severn Stories Press.

Callen's proposal is a bad idea

The Times-News printed a new proposal by Jerry Callen to run a highway on several miles right down the middle of the canyon.

Some people have waves sloshing between his ears? Local people fought long and hard to protect the canyon by stopping the Auger Falls power project and the proposed Highway 200 bypass. I suggest trudging the entire area with a freeway? I'm not saying that a new bridge isn't needed, but just build one to get the traffic through with minimal disruption, using existing roads as much as possible.

If you think the power project sank in a river of protest, until the Idaho Transportation Department tries to float the Snake with this cast-iron canoe. Next, I have heard an unsubstantiated rumor about the proposed Highway 200 bypass and would like to know if there is any truth in it. I have heard that the reason the ITD conceived the cross-country proposal was because it declined to negotiate with a prominent landowner, who owns a substantial part of the required land for the Pole Line-2400 route because he is demanding an exorbitant amount for his land. Will the ITD, the landowner or perhaps a Times-News reporter please fill us in on the truth of it? It seems a bit absurd that the ITD would pave acres of farmland and actually build a bridge over Rock Creek Canyon. I can't seem to come to a fair agreement with one man.

Thanks for 'Taste of Home'

I would like to thank The Times-News for bringing "Taste of Home" to Twin Falls once again. They are so enjoyable and they can't seem to miss any of them. Sunny is a delight to listen to and is funny. Also, Suzann with the teasing between them, I didn't win anything but that's all right because the entertainment was great, and I have attended all "Taste of Homes" that have come to Twin Falls. And thanks to the sponsors also.

The only one on March 24 was we were in the second row and we couldn't see on the mirror thing what Sunny was doing unless the can of cherries or soup, etc., was being put into the bowl, but we couldn't even see the bowl. We knew what she was doing, but we couldn't see her doing her thing. And the TV monitors on the side of the stage were too far to one side to see and were fuzzy. Being the TV monitor in a little more on stage instead of by the wall. The other years were great how they were set up. Also, the parking is awful. I had fun and enjoyed it very much anyway and will be there again next year.

P.S. Times-News, why doesn't everyone who takes the paper get all the sale ads that other Times-News papers do on the same day. I'm in Region 5 and don't get Sears, etc., when Hazelton and others do? Why? A lot of people want to know why? We pay the same price as they do. Also, some stories, etc., aren't in some papers as others on the same day. They would also like to say thank you big time to my paper carries, the Teles in Hazelton. My paper is always here by 5 a.m. or earlier. Thanks a lot, gals. JOAN HITE-BARKLEY

Shoshone repair is dangerous

Be it known, if any damage whatsoever to my automobile(s) caused by the open trenches and severe hole diggings on Shoshone Street, I will hold the city of Twin Falls and all contractors involved in said project fully responsible for any repairs or replacements. When I come to Twin Falls, I am required to travel on and about Shoshone Street 90 percent of the time. True, I could and do enter Twin Falls by alternate routes, but I still have to travel down and across Shoshone Street. These trenches and holes are worse than normal potholes throughout the city. Surely, with the expertise these contractors claim, there must be a better, safer way of doing the job. Maybe they just feel that they are immune to the welfare of drivers and damage to their vehicles.

Giving credit where credit is dubious

PHILIP E. CLAPP

A handful of utility companies could receive a retroactive windfall potentially worth up to $11 billion, courtesy of the U.S. Congress, for their role in curbing global warming pollution. Unfortunately, they won't actually have had to reduce any pollution to get the money, because a nice bit of red tape is leaving the rest of the country to shoulder the burden of the problem.

Sens. John Chafee, R-R.I., Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., and Connie Mack, R-Fla., have introduced a bill to encourage companies to take early action to reduce carbon-dioxide emissions, the primary form of global warming pollution. This otherwise laudable effort at establishing a market-based scheme of trading pollution credits - much the same as the process that has reduced acid rain in the U.S. - nonetheless contains several critical flaws.

The key problem lies in giving credits for reductions claimed for 1991-1996, under an old program of the Department of Energy. Truly cut pollution allowed companies to claim emissions reductions that existed solely on paper. An analysis of the DOE program shows that only 3 percent of the claims represented real emissions reductions.

Yet allowing valuable, tradable credits for such past creative reporting does nothing to gain a win-win situation.

In fact, the Senate bill gives just 18 of the potential claimants - all utility companies - credits for past actions that amount to a whopping 20 percent of the commitments made by the U.S. to cut global warming pollution. If valued at $100 per ton, the level at which such acid rain pollution credits are traded, the bill's commercial Light would gain $2.5 billion in credits, Tennessee Valley Authority $1.8 billion, Duke Power $1.4 billion and Southern Co. $1.2 billion.

Yet these companies, and others, have reported extremely questionable practices, did not follow any standardized reporting practices, will not have their claims audited by any state or federal agency, and could have claimed activities that were counted twice.

But the biggest problem is that although the companies get money and a pat on the back for allegedly doing something good, they didn't have to reduce global warming emissions. All they had to do was report that if they hadn't taken certain actions, pollution would have been higher.

While slowing the growth of emissions is a positive step, this is like someone not overdrawing his bank account. It's good that he didn't go into debt, but it doesn't mean he spent less than the year before. And although certain companies - especially some of the large electric utilities - stand to gain a windfall, we still have to actually reduce the same amount of pollution as before, placing a larger burden on the rest of the utility sector and, indeed, the rest of U.S. industry.

The Senate bill also allows verification of past claims by a third party, but gives no further guidelines. This leaves open the possibility that a trade association, for instance, might validate the claims of its member companies. And as is now standard, the legislation fails to deal with double counting, whereby the same commercial customer might have claimed credit based on reduced electrical usage, while the utility also claims the same credit for reduced generation.

Furthermore, most companies clearly made questionable claims. Centurion Illinois Light Co. held seminars at which people completed questionnaires about energy use and received information on potential savings from energy conservation.

Finally, CO<sub>2</sub> emissions reductions claims based on what a typical customer might do, although the company never checked to see what changes the customers might have really made, are also companies have made emissions reductions claims based on tree-planting programs, on the theory that such activity reduces carbon dioxide from the atmosphere. Yet there is no scientific consensus on the details of such processes. And two companies - Cedar Falls Electric and Osage Power - even claimed credit for the same plantings for providing shade that would decrease air-conditioning usage.

The real danger is that failing to fix the Clean Air Act's market-based trading system to reduce global warming pollution into a paper sham.

The best legislation proposed by Congress to address the problem will set the standards for allocating pollution credits and, beginning to deal with the issue.

Without fixing the bill we could end up with the worst of all possible worlds - an expensive system that exists only on paper and allows companies to claim they are reducing emissions, yet leaves global warming unchecked.

An arms race – against whom?

The century about to end will go down as an age of tremendous progress in science, technology and organization. It also will be remembered as a bloody time when the fruits of knowledge were enlisted to kill on an unprecedented scale.

With the end of the Cold War, one might hope that in the next 100 years humanity might devote more its exploding knowledge and limited resources to solving daunting problems: persistent poverty, environmental degradation, diseases old and new. Those hopes haven't been dashed – yet. But there are disquieting signs, including regional wars and the proliferation of ethnic conflicts.

Because of its unmatched power, trends in U.S. perceptions and policies will make a huge difference. Unfortunately, there isn't much to indicate that rethinking American priorities is under way. Decreases in U.S. military spending after the end of the Cold War were minuscule in proportion to the threat reduction implied by the self-destruction of the Soviet Union.

The Reagan administration spent $55 billion researching Star Wars and didn't succeed in developing an effective technology. Now Clinton is proposing to spend an additional $10.5 billion to develop a scaled-down system that, if workable, could intercept the few missiles that so-called rogue nations such as Iran and North Korea might be able to launch against the United States in 10 years.

Such a system will be a waste of money, for any state capable of launching an intercontinental missile certainly could find alternative means, including lobbing a nuclear bomb from a ship a few miles from U.S. shores. Worse, the Chinese will see it as a threat and the Russians as a humiliation. Beijing likely will respond by stepping up its military program.

Deployment of a missile defense system would violate the 1972 U.S.-Soviet Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. The Russians vow to stop reducing their 7,000 nuclear-warhead arsenal if the United States goes through with deployment. The arms race likely to ensue will be highly dangerous – and expensive.

Rather than spend vast sums on ineffective and counterproductive military programs, the administration that takes power at the dawn of the millennium should focus on human needs at home and abroad.

At home, a coalition of cancer survivors and advocates, including Sens. Connie Mack, R-Fla., and Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, is calling for a 15 percent increase in medical-research funds. The president's budget contains a mere 2 percent increase.

Aboard, in the next few decades the AIDS epidemic will extract a human toll of frightening dimensions. Leadership and resources from the United States and other countries can prevent or alleviate vast human suffering in Africa, Asia and Latin America. In the 21st century, security will hinge as much on economic inequality, migration and control of epidemics as on traditional military variables. But politicians of both parties are still fighting the last war.

An unidentified man drives a car carrying a model of an American F-117A stealth fighter in Belgrade Monday as the NATO air campaign against Yugoslavia entered its sixth day. An F-117A plane was shot over Yugoslavia Saturday, but its pilot was rescued without any serious injuries.

Pentagon suspects Iraq is helping Yugoslav military

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yugoslav defense specialists, expecting a war over Kosovo, met last month in Baghdad with Iraqi counterparts in what the Pentagon suspects was a collaboration between two U.S. enemies to prepare Yugoslavia to shoot down American war planes, government officials say.

U.S. intelligence agencies kept track of the Yugoslavs going to the meeting but could not get firsthand information about what went on, the officials said, speaking on condition of anonymity. Nevertheless, Pentagon officials said the meeting's timing and personnel, a similarity in Iraqi and Yugoslav defense tactics since NATO airstrikes began and separate intelligence about possible arms deals between the two countries all suggest Yugoslavia sought information on U.S. fighter jets and combat tactics.

The Baghdad meeting was described to The Associated Press by senior Clinton administration officials. Pentagon officials familiar with intelligence matters and congressional officials briefed on the matter. They spoke on condition of anonymity.

Collaboration between Iraq and Yugoslavia predated the Kosovo crisis. Baghdad purchased some air defense equipment from Yugoslavia last in the Cold War, and there have been occasional contacts between the two countries' military experts.

But February's two-day visit of a four-member Yugoslav air defense team to the Iraqi military headquarters in Baghdad drew the immediate attention of U.S. intelligence. President Clinton and key congressional leaders were quickly notified, the officials said.

Both Yugoslavia and Iraq are under international arms embar-goes, and U.S. officials said they have intelligence indicating Yugoslavia was offering to trade military spare parts in exchange for Iraqi intelligence on U.S. air operations. Yugoslavia may also be seeking parts from Iraq.

"Each country has supplies or parts it would like to get from the other country," a senior Pentagon official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

An official "at a fairly high level" in the Yugoslav military, and accompanying officers "met a couple of days and met with a whole variety of people" in Baghdad, including air defense specialists, the Pentagon official said.

Poll indicates Americans support Kosovo air strikes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans approve of air strikes in Kosovo by a 2:1 margin but remain sharply divided about whether the United States is obligated to end fighting between ethnic groups or should send ground troops to the Serbian province, says a poll released Monday.

The poll by the Pew Research Center for the People & the Press indicated that 49 percent disapproved of plans to send 4,000 U.S. troops as part of a peacekeeping force in Kosovo, while 44 percent approved. When people were asked whether the North Atlantic Treaty Organization has a responsibility to act in Kosovo, 60 percent agreed. The United States is a NATO member.

When NATO is not mentioned, they were about equally divided on whether the United States alone has a responsibility to end ethnic fighting in Kosovo, a province in Serbia, the eastern Yugoslav republic.

U.S. opens talks with N. Korea over missiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and North Korea began talks Monday aimed at curbing that country's missile activities, the State Department said.

"We continue to have serious concerns about North Korea's development, testing and export of missiles and missile technology," State Department James P. Rubin said. "We will use the talks to press these concerns and to seek tight constraints on North Korea's missile activities."

AROUND THE VALLEY

Two charged in black tar heroin bust

TWIN FALLS - Two people were charged Monday with intending to sell more than $14,000 worth of heroin. Authorities arrested Jose Valencia-Herrera, 25, and Yestica Avila-Acosta, 15, Friday after they found 40.7 grams of black tar heroin during a house search two miles north of the airport, according to a Twin Falls County sheriff's office news release.

The search also turned up 29.3 grams of methamphetamine, worth $2,930, and $2,600 in cash, the release said. Members of the sheriff's office, the Idaho Criminal Investigation Bureau, the Idaho State Police and the Immigration and Naturalization Service were notified of the arrests. Valencia-Herrera, Avila-Acosta and a 17-year-old boy were illegal aliens, the release said.

Two arrested with marijuana possession

FILER - Two men were charged Monday with possessing close to half a pound of marijuana. Alberto Flores Jr., 19, and Claudio Garrardo Marin, 18, were arrested during a traffic stop after a police dog indicated drugs were in the car, a Filer police report said. Officer Tim Reeves pulled the two over after noticing a broken taillight, and he noticed the smell of marijuana when he spoke with the men, the report said. When Reeves asked Marin if he had any drugs in the car, Marin said he just wanted to go home. A K-9 unit from Twin Falls police sniffed the car and found 220 grams of marijuana in the glove box, the report said.

Kempthorne names presidents to appointments

BOISE - A Heyburn man has been reappointed to the Idaho State Resources Board. Clarence Paar was one of three men reappointed to the board, along with Jerry Rigby of Rexburg and Robert Gorkum of Bonanza Ferry. D. Richard Wyatt, who runs Wyatt Engineering Inc. in Pocatello, was appointed to the eight-member board. Wyatt replaces Eval Rainey of Sandpoint, whose term expires.

Two other southern Idaho residents were appointed to state boards. J. E. Wilson of Halley was named to the 2002 Winter Games Executive Committee. Jeanine Hendrix-Helsley of Pocatello was named to the Independent Living Council.

Kimberly holds bond issue election session

KIMBERLY - The School Board will hold a special meeting at 7 p.m. tonight to plan a bond issue election. The School Board decided this month to ask voters to approve a $65 million bond issue in a May 18 election. The district would build a new gymnasium and additional high school classroom space with the money. Tonight's meeting will be held in the high school library.

Former deputy pleads innocent to murder

The defendant told Twin Falls police he was babysitting a fussy Hailey Williams when he shook her and tossed her on a bed. She fell off the bed to the floor. Hailey was taken to St. Luke's Regional Medical Center, where she died two days later.

Water search takes shape

Spud company comes up with plan to work year-round

By Virginia S. Hutchins
Times-News writer

GLENS FERRY - A thirsty potato-processing company, Glens Ferry's largest employer, says it has a plan to enable year-round operation.

Magic West Inc. will lease 300 acre-feet of water from a well owner, providing the Idaho Department of Water Resources approves, company Vice President Bill Schow said. He wouldn't name the owner or the price, but Schow said the well in Glens Ferry has been used for agriculture.

"We're just waiting for Water Resources to approve it," Schow said. Magic West applied Monday for state approval to lease from the Idaho Water Supply Bank, through which Water Resources brokers willing buyer, willing seller redistribution of water. The buyer and the seller must draw from the same water source - in this case, the Snake River Plain Aquifer.

The agency will decide on the water-bank application as quickly as possible, spokesman Dirk Larsen said. "We understand their need for water, and we understand the economic effect on Glens Ferry," he said.

Water Resources also agreed to cancel a hearing - set for March 12, then rescheduled for today - on the agency's order for Magic West to stop drawing more water than its allotted share of groundwater from the aquifer.

Water Resources in late February denied a request to reconsider a Jan. 22 cease-and-desist order for Magic West to stop diverting more groundwater than the 58 acre-feet per year its water-right allows. Company officials said 58 acre-feet is only enough to keep the plant running for about 77 days.

"Without more water, Magic West has said it might have to make most of its operations out of town. It also delayed a $1.5 million expansion plan while it considers closing or moving its frozen production line, which uses the most water."

No new hearing date has been set for the cease-and-desist order. If the application filed Monday is approved, it would appear to supply all the water the company needs, making the order moot, Water Resources officials said.

The option of leasing water surfaced when Water Resources Director Karl Dreher came to town in February, Schow said.

Even if the plan gains state approval, Magic West will push ahead with its separate application for a new water-right, he said. Several residents in and near Glens Ferry have filed protests against that application. A formal hearing before Water Resources is set May 6 and 7 in Glens Ferry City Hall.

Market backers welcome carnival idea

By Mark Heinz
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Backers of a proposed summer market in Old Towne Twin Falls wouldn't mind having a carnival there as well.

Market booster Jack Wright told the Twin Falls City Council that a summer carnival - usually set up in Twin Falls City Park - might blend in well with the Old Towne Market.

The council passed a motion supporting the idea. Plans for the market have been brewing since last winter, and boosters hope it can be open for business this summer. Plans now include space for private vehicle sales, regular entertainment events and a food court, Wright said.

In other business, the council approved lane striping and other improvements along Fillmore Street between North College Road and Pole Line Road. The work will begin later this spring and will cost about $2,000, City Engineer Gary Young said. The project will include turning lanes and will restrict on-street parking along much of the half-mile stretch.

The parking restriction drew criticism from Boost Scooters night club owner Pat Allred. The club's parking lot is often full by 10 p.m. on a busy night, forcing patrons to park along the street, he said. Wick Klop, who works in the North College business complex, spoke in favor of the proposal. She said Fillmore is becoming a

GOP celebrates Patriot's Day

Republicans talk politics

By John T. Huddy
Times-News writer

BURLEY - Any Democratic Party supporters at the Patriot's Day Luncheon Monday probably remained in the shadows.

With the exception of former Idaho Gov. John Evans, a well-known Democrat, more than 100 Republican Party supporters gathered at the Burley Best Western Inn Convention Center.

The luncheon, in celebration of Patriot's Day and sponsored by the Cassia and Minidoka County Republican Central Committees, heard comments from state legislators on issues ranging from agriculture to the war in Kosovo.

"It's always important for legislators to keep up with their local constituents," Rep. Jim Kempton, R-Allison, said. "It's really important to be part of the representative process."

"It's always nice to come home to visit with people in the home district," Cameron said. "There needs to be more of these kinds of functions."

The luncheon, lasting a little more than two hours, also was a chance for Republicans and Cassia county officials to mingle with their representatives.

"I've always found it interesting to attend events like this,"

Burley Mayor Doug Manning said. "I like to hear the inside viewpoints on state and federal politics."

Agriculture was a major topic of concern Monday, as was the Mini-Cassia economy.

"The cure to what will help the local economy in the future is if the dollar weakens," Newcomb said. "The dollar is too strong right now. We're losing markets," Simpson echoed Newcomb's thoughts.

"Agriculture is the bedrock of our community," Simpson said. "I'm concerned with the large livestock confinement operations. We have to make sure these operations will meet environmental standards. But it's at a local level for the county to decide the rules of what happens with the operations."

Simpson met with Paul residents before the luncheon and Burley residents after the luncheon, part of his travelling district office program. Simpson will travel to various locations in Eastern Idaho on a monthly basis to meet with the community.

"This is how we can keep connected with the districts we represent," Simpson said. "This is a means for me to get out and meet with the people. To hear their opinions or concerns."

Burley resident Pam Heyward met with Simpson to discuss housing and Social Security issues. "I think more people need to get out and interact with their representatives," she said. "It's an opportunity for people to voice their opinion on what they're concerned about."

Gooding County chosen for courthouse assistance site

The Times-News

GOODING - Starting in July, the Gooding County courthouse will have an office to help a growing number of people who represent themselves in court cases.

Last year in the county, 32 percent of all plaintiffs and 80 percent of all defendants appeared in court without attorneys - including 97 percent of all parties in domestic violence cases, according to the Idaho Supreme Court.

Because of these rising numbers and a proposal put together by Magistrate Judge Kevin Cassidy, the Gooding courthouse will house one of five "courthouse assistance offices," which will be staffed for people who represent themselves, to help them find free or low-cost legal services.

Other offices will be opened in Moscow,

Cascade, Pocatello and Rexburg. "The number of self-represented people involved in court cases is increasing, particularly in family law cases," said Idaho Supreme Court Justice Cathy Silk.

Staff in the offices will also provide instructional videos and computer programs to help people represent themselves. Paid for by a grant from the State Justice Institute, which supports innovative programs, the five offices will be open for a six-month trial period. Chief Justice Linda Copple Trout said she hopes all Idaho counties will eventually offer similar services.

Letter urging dam breaching draws fire from Idaho officials

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The letter from over 200 scientists urging President Clinton to support breaching eastern Washington's lower Snake River dams to save salmon is drawing fire from top officials in the Northwest. Idaho Republican Sen. Larry Craig along with other GOP members of Congress contend it is inappropriate for the state and federal government biologists to take a public position on the most controversial issue in salmon recovery. But they are not pressing for the scientists to be reprimanded.

Idaho Republican Sen. Larry Craig along with other GOP members of Congress contend it is inappropriate for the state and federal government biologists to take a public position on the most controversial issue in salmon recovery. But they are not pressing for the scientists to be reprimanded.

Mike Field, who represents Idaho Gov. Dirk Kempthorne on the Northwest Power Planning Council, said scientists should inform the public but leave decision-making to elected leaders.

"Once a scientist goes beyond advising policy people on good science to taking a stand, that goes beyond what's appropriate," Field said.

The scientists defended their action, saying they serve a useful public role by revealing their beliefs. According to Ted Koch, a signer who works with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Boise, the scientists were careful not to say whether the dams should be breached.

Each year, several hundred Idaho children - from infants to 18 years old - enter foster care due to abuse, neglect, and other serious difficulties within their families. However, the number of foster families available to provide safe, caring homes for these children has not kept up with the need, especially for minority children, older youth and sibling groups. By opening your home and your heart, you can restore hope to a child's future. The demands may be great, but the rewards are extraordinary.

Supreme Court reinstates eastern Idaho lawsuit

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Supreme Court has reinstated a lawsuit from an eastern Idaho hunter injured in September 1995 when a borrowed shotgun discharged after being dropped in the bed of a pickup truck.

The high court, in a 4-1 opinion issued Monday, reversed 7th District Judge Richard St. Clair's decision dismissing Tory Bromley's Bonneville County complaint against gun owner Ronald Garey.

St. Clair rejected Bromley's arguments that Garey should have warned him or Dave Sholder, a hunting companion who actually borrowed the gun, that it was defective.

The judge said even such a caution would not have prevented the accident.

"To expect Garey to foresee and to warn Sholder, an adult, experienced, licensed hunter, not to point a loaded shotgun at his hunting companion and then drop it, is akin to requiring a car owner, who lends his car to a licensed, adult driver, to warn the borrower not to run over pedestrians who happen to be crossing the street," St. Clair wrote.

But the Supreme Court majority disagreed.

"The problem with the district court's conclusion is that it mischaracterizes Garey's duty," Justice Jesse Walters wrote.

"Certainly, Garey had no duty to warn the hunters not to stand in front of the shotgun or not to point it at someone and drop it. But, he did have a duty to disclose any information regarding a dangerous malfunction."

Family brawl results in four arrests

By Damian D. Rodriguez
Times-News writer

HEYBURN — What started as a medical call early Sunday morning turned into a brawl that was stopped with help from five law enforcement agencies and resulted in four arrests.

The melee began at 1:45 a.m., Heyburn Police Chief George Warrell said.

Officials from the Heyburn Police Department, Rupert Police Department, Idaho State Police, Cassia County and Minidoka County Sheriff's offices arrived at the 700 block of Primrose Lane to assist Heyburn Police Officer Jerry Ballance, the first person on the scene.

Warrell said the incident began with a 911 call. "Minidoka received a call for a woman who had fainted," he said. "They called back and said they didn't need the ambulance. A few minutes later, they called 911 saying they needed an officer right now."

When Ballance arrived at the front door, he could hear yelling coming from inside the house. A woman would not let him inside, a Heyburn police report said. Ballance entered anyway and saw several people fighting and a woman lying on the floor. He called for back up.

The people in the house told Ballance to get out because it was a family problem, and they would take care of it, Warrell said.

Jose Chavez Sr., owner of the home, said he wanted everybody to leave.

When Chavez's wife tried to leave, Chavez Sr. forced her back into the house, the report said. The woman was not identified in the report. Ballance told Chavez Sr. that if his wife wanted to leave he could not stop her. Chavez Sr. started to argue and fight with Ballance, who arrested him.

Jose Chavez Jr. tried to stop Ballance's arrest by wrapping his arms around his father. Ballance warned him to stay back, but Chavez Jr. refused.

Sgt. Kirby Harkness, a Cassia County deputy, arrived and helped handcuff Chavez Jr., Warrell said.

"It was a full-blown brawl," Warrell said. "The crowd tried to stop the arrests."

By that time other officers arrived. When Juan Martinez of the Rupert Police Department arrived and saw Julio A. Chavez trying to stop the officers from making an arrest, he arrested him, Warrell said.

Carmen Castillo was arrested for hitting officers on the back while they tried to make other arrests, Warrell said.

Arrested Sunday were:

- Chavez Sr., age unknown, of Heyburn, was charged with battery on an officer and obstructing an officer.
- Chavez Jr., 35, of Heyburn, was charged with disturbing the peace, obstructing an officer and resisting arrest.
- Chavez, 33, of Heyburn, was charged with obstructing an officer and disturbing the peace.

- Castillo, 29, of Burley, was charged with battery on an officer and obstructing an officer.

The four were taken to the Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center in Burley.

"Warrants will be served on the people who were involved in the incident," Warrell said.

CONSTRUCTION IS IN THE AIR

Raft River farmer Travis Cox, on the truck bed, and Albert Bowers of Franklin Building Supply load two-by-fours onto Cox's truck. The warmer weather will probably signal the beginning of many construction projects in the area.

rates last year. The police department had 21 turnovers, the fire department and water department each had six turnovers. Reasons employees cited for leaving included higher wages and promotions, Harris said. City Hall has posted notice for 10 open positions so far this year, she said. The city recruited most of the applicants for those jobs from within the Magic Valley.

Kosovo

Gervalla, who recently came here as international students, still struggle to get in touch with their families, who are in the middle of the war going on in their homeland.

News reports have said Albanians have been fleeing Kosovo by the thousands because of the fighting and bombing, but Sopaj and Gervalla's families have stayed put.

"They don't tell me if they are trying to leave," said Gervalla, 17, who came here in January and attends Minico High School. Gervalla has a grandfather who is too ill to be moved from the house, she said.

Her uncle, who lives in Germany, and her brother and sister, who live elsewhere in the United States, have told her they have heard the family is OK. But Gervalla has not been able to talk to her family in the last few days.

"I'm trying every day to call them," she said.

Gervalla's family lives in Kosovo's capital, Pristina. Her family has told her that houses in the neighborhood — some right down the street — have been destroyed. But she wasn't told whether anyone in the houses were injured or killed.

Gervalla also did not know about her family's food situation. Local food stores have been raided by "bad people," she said, making supplies unavailable. People who try to find food risk being killed.

Sopaj heard from his family Monday morning but could not reach relatives Monday afternoon, he said. His family lives in Pristina, about 50 miles from Pristina. He does not know if his family plans to flee.

"I'm kind of trusting them," said Sopaj, 18, who came here in August 1998 and attends Deolo High School.

Sopaj's family probably has a good supply of food, after preparing for the war and its impacts. However, Sopaj's and Gervalla's family homes have become shelters for other people who have lost their homes.

When he has talked to his family, Sopaj sometimes has chosen not to ask if his friends are OK, he said. Sopaj already has lost one friend about two months ago because of the conflict.

Boy Scout dies

CLEARFIELD, Utah (AP) — A 13-year-old boy died while on a camping trip with his Boy Scout troop in Tooele County during the weekend.

Steven Boyd Webb was hiking near Simmons Springs on Friday and decided to go to the top of a ridge, his 12-year-old brother, Carl, said.

As Steven Webb got closer to the ledge, fellow Scouts saw him lose his footing and fall 30 feet, hitting his head and back on the jagged rocks.

Families gather to remember sightseers killed near Yosemite

MOCCASIN, Calif. (AP) — Jens Sund says whoever killed his wife, daughter and a family friend from Argentina deserves to die.

"I'll personally pull the switch," he told The (Santa Rosa) Press Democrat.

As Sund came out of seclusion Monday at his Eureka home, other relatives gathered on a grassy hill here where searchers discovered the body of 15-year-old Julie Sund.

"I'm dealing with emotions that I've been told to expect, yet when they happen to me they're completely unexpected," Sund said at an afternoon news conference in Eureka. "Reaching for the phone to call my wife is one of them. It's bizarre. It's unusual, yet it's been happening frequently."

Meanwhile, later Monday, Francis and Carole Carrington, Raquel Pelosso and her daughter Paula, 30, along with the FBI agent leading the investigation, James Maddock, and an FBI chaplain, Mark O'Sullivan, walked down a narrow dirt trail about 100 paces to the site where Julie Sund's body was found.

On the steep hillside, they planted tulips, daisies, roses and Easter lilies and left a white teddy bear with a red heart.

"We don't understand very much," said O'Sullivan. "Give us peace. These things better be us confusing."

Afterwards, they emerged to a parking area where about 200 people from the local community were gathered. They had set up a shrine of their own, with flowers and candles. The group sang Amazing Grace and Swing Low, Sweet Chariot, then a prayer was read.

Peggy Rourke, visiting from neighboring Calaveras County, said the prayer was "so she (Julie) knows there's goodness in these hills. It's not all bad."

Francis Carrington thanked the crowd for their support.

Week two of jury selection begins in gay death trial

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — Potential jurors in the trial of a man charged with beating to death Matthew Shepard were warned Monday to expect intense media scrutiny, the possibility of three weeks away from their families and graphic evidence.

"Murder is not a pretty subject," prosecutor Cal Rerucha told a group of potential jurors. "These pictures are very graphic."

Russell Henderson, 21, is charged with first-degree murder, kidnapping and aggravated robbery in last October's death of Shepard, a gay college student.

Defense attorney Wyatt Skaggs also warned jurors to expect disturbing testimony, but he told them they should not be swayed by national opinion in the case. In the aftermath of the killing, some dismissed Laramie as a small-minded backwater.

"We've got to begin by disregarding the guilt thing, that we have to punish somebody to show the nation we're not some dusty old cow town," Skaggs said.

Rerucha and Skaggs said the case should not be decided on the fact that the victim was gay.

"Whether we are black or white, rich or poor, Catholic or Protestant or even atheist, whether we have power or no power, whether we are straight or whether we are gay, we are equal because the Wyoming constitution tells us we are equal," Rerucha said. "If any of you cannot follow that element of the constitution, you cannot sit on this jury."

Rerucha told potential jurors some witnesses have faulty memories.

"Can you keep in mind that if you cast a glare in hell, you're not going to get angels for answers?" Rerucha asked the jurors.

The second round was called in after attorneys went through the first pool of 70, dismissing two-thirds of them in the first three days.

Henderson, in a light blue shirt and checkered tie, remained expressionless throughout the jury selection.

More states put the slam on 'spam'

Virginia may become fourth state to OK ban

Every day, 78-year-old Albert Adler opens his electronic mailbox looking for messages from family and friends. Increasingly, this is what he finds: electronic comings from nude dancers and lascivious Latinos inviting him to visit erotic Web sites or call a 900 sex number.

asking them to drop him from their lists, his messages bounce back undeliverable.

Unsolicted bulk e-mail — known disparagingly as "spam" — has become one of the most irritating facts of life on the Internet. No one knows precisely how much spam is floating around, but some analysts estimate that 10 percent of the 2.2 billion messages transmitted every day are electronic junk.

States in at least a dozen states to introduce legislation that would make unsolicited bulk e-mail illegal. Last month Virginia lawmakers approved a bill making it a crime to send bulk e-mail with a false return address.

Maryland bill similar to Virginia's. Not all Internet users are rejoicing at the legislative action. Free-speech advocates argue that many anti-spam bills are too broad, threatening the free exchange of e-mail that has become the backbone of the Internet.

Will the end come in 2000? Activists fear Y2K bug

By Robert Keilin The Washington Post

Does Y2K spell the end of the world as we know it? Gary North says it does. Of course, he's cried "Wolff!" before. In the past North has predicted that the end will come in the form of nuclear war and the AIDS virus.

Seems balanced enough. But if you peel back a few Web pages, you'll hear committee chairman Sen. Robert F. Bennett, R-Utah, sound a bit like Gary North. Several major industries are way behind the Y2K curve, Bennett warns.

On his Web site, North paints this scary scenario: "At 12 midnight on January 1, 2000 (a Saturday morning), most of the world's mainframe computers will either shut down or begin spewing out bad data. Most of the world's desktop computer will also start spewing out bad data. Dozens of millions — possibly hundreds of millions — of pre-programmed computer chips will begin to shut down the systems they automatically control.

Some survivalists, therefore, are looking out for Number One. They are turning to sites such as Food Storage for Life, brought to your attention by faithful reader Karen Brock-Loss. The online presence of Pioneer Gourmet Food Products, a Utah survivalist company, this site offers a year's worth of pre-prepared food — potato flakes and peach drink mix — in cans and buckets.

Web sites for job-hunters

The Washington Post

Hunting for a job is a lonely activity; part of the appeal of job-hunting sites is the fun bit of online camaraderie/gallows humor you get from other folks at these sites' bulletin board and chat areas.

about this site, though, is its "CollegeConnection" which features advice and links for students and recent graduates and a new "Alumni Network" section that hopes to help recent grads work that valuable angle of the job-hunting game.

Swing your partner

Square dancing: Exercise, fun

By Rachel Denny
Times-News correspondent

JEROME - Meeting people, getting exercise and having fun are reasons why many people have taken up square dance.

And it's fun for any age. Not just the older generations are dancing anymore. Square dancing was declared the American folk dance of Idaho by the Idaho State Legislature and has many followers.

Want to get involved?

For more information contact Linda Helms at 324-7694.

Locally, there are about 150 square dancers in the Magic Valley. Among the members are people who have been dancing since the 1950s and those who just started, said Linda Helms of Jerome, publicity chairperson for Area 4 Square Dance Association of Idaho.

"Anyone can do it," she says. "All you need to know is how to walk and your left foot from your right."

For people who need a bit of aerobic exercise in their lives and can't stand the thought of going to a gym, square dancing is for them.

"Square dancing is one of the best aerobic activities for your heart," a caller and square dancer of 36 years, says Willford Allison of Jerome.

Two hours of dancing essentially equals five miles of walking. That's not a bad deal for people who want to exercise and socialize at the same time.

"With this group, you don't have to have a partner," Helms says. The president of Area 4 Square Dance

People square dance for a variety of reasons. A lot dance for the fellowship that they gain, Gary White said.

Association of Idaho, Gary White got involved after he was divorced. He said it was a great way to meet people.

"It was something to do to get me out of the house," he says.

Both White and his 15-year-old son dance and he believes it does his son good to spend time with older people.

"It possibly bonds the younger people to the older people," White says.

"People are very friendly and relaxed. It's a very inexpensive recreation."

And the veteran dancers are good teachers to the novices.

"They are kind, considerate and helpful to those just learning," Helms said.

Square dancing isn't difficult to learn, she adds. You just have to be a good listener.

"The caller tells you everything to do," White says.

Times-News correspondent Rachel Denny can be reached in Twin Falls at 734-3780.

Young people are always welcome to square dance. Jason White, 15, dances with Kristy Miller, 11, at a recent square dance.

Jackpot juniors rank in the top 10 percent in the Silver State

By Sam Foltman
Times-News correspondent

JACKPOT, Nev. - Two Jackpot High School students shined among the top juniors in the Silver State.

Sabina Simonyan and Jessi Baker ranked academically in the top 10 percent of Nevada's juniors and were awarded the Silver Scholar Award from the University of Nevada Reno Alumni Association.

Each girl will receive a hardcover edition of Merriam Webster's Collegiate Dictionary plus a certificate declaring them a Silver Scholar recipient.

The Alumni Association says it honors juniors because most students don't get recognition until their senior year.

Jessi Baker

Sabina Simonyan

"Our goal is to encourage them to continue to excel in their education," says Terry Reynolds, alumni president.

Simonyan is the daughter of Vagan and Angella Simonyan. She has resided in the United States for three years, two of which have been in Jackpot. She comes from Erevan, Armenia.

"Small but it's really nice," she says of the community. "It's a country of a lot of opportunities."

Her favorite subjects are math and science.

Baker is the daughter of Angle Baker of Las Vegas, Nev., and Danny Baker of Klamath Falls, Ore. She is living with her grandparents, Shirley and Mike Gomes.

Her favorite subject is science and she hopes to study physical therapy at the University of Nevada Reno after graduation. She has received all her schooling in Jackpot and when her mother moved to Las Vegas, she chose to remain in the small town.

"I love it, that's why I stayed," Baker says.

Class recreates historic forts with clay, plastic, hard work

By Jill Peters
and Dalene Hansen
Times-News correspondents

JEROME - If you're studying forts, the best way to learn about them may be building your own, albeit on a smaller scale.

And that's what students did at Canyonside Christian Preschool and Elementary in Jerome.

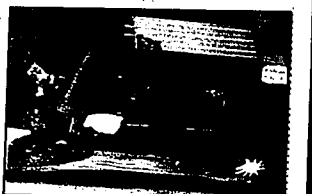

Teacher Josie Gott and her fourth and fifth-grade students have been studying Idaho history, specifically, the forts along the Oregon Trail.

"This is the most in-depth study on Idaho history I've done," Gott says.

She asked each student to choose a fort, whether it was manned by Americans or the British. Selections included Fort Hall, Fort Nez Percé, Fort Astoria, Fort Boise and others.

Students researched their forts by using computers, encyclopedias and their Idaho history books. They made posters showing what they thought might have made people want to come out west to work at the forts in jobs such as mountain man, fur trappers and traders who owned the fort.

"I really enjoyed doing this report."

- Rosie Hernandez, 11

The students then worked together to create a panorama of their forts. Ice cream sticks, twigs, Lincoln logs, Legos and cardboard were the materials used. The panorama featured a background of mountains and a setting sun. A river with clay canoes and little plastic toy sails in front of the forts completed the picture.

Rosie Hernandez did. Her report on Fort Hall, her interactive character was fur trapper Robert Kinghorn.

"I really enjoyed doing this report," 11-year-old Rosie says.

Fourth-grader Will Ledbetter made up an interactive story about William Jones, a fur trapper for Fort Nez Percé.

Fort Astoria and fur trader Jason Vandervelt were the subjects of a report by Matt Shafer, age 10. Matt says he gathered his information from the encyclopedia.

"I enjoyed this report and learned a lot from this activity," he says.

Salvation Army honors Hagarty, raises funds for teen program

TWIN FALLS - The Salvation Army will recognize a longtime volunteer and raise money for a teen recreation program.

The nonprofit organization will have its first annual recognition dinner and silent auction May 1 at the Weston Plaza in Twin Falls. The auction will be at 6:30 p.m. and the dinner will start at 7:30 p.m. The cost is $25 per person.

The honoree of the evening will be Elmer Hagarty, who has been on the Salvation Army Board of Advisors for 28 years. His active leadership is inspiring the Salvation Army for teens age 15 to seniors in high school. The purpose is to provide a safe, neutral place for teens to spend time on structured programs such as basketball and volleyball.

This type of planned activity program has been attempted before including by the Salvation Army.

The organization has learned from past experiences, leaders say. This time, it plans on having a professional top-notch youth director and security in the form of off-duty policemen. Mayor Ed Patterson, local Salvation Army commander, estimated the program will cost approximately $36,000 a year.

The money raised by the auction and dinner will be a start, leaders say. The rest will have to come from monies on hand, public donations, foundation grants, and membership fees. All of the programs involved will have membership fees, and not every one will be able to pay those fees. So, public donations will be critical to provide scholarships so everyone can participate, leaders say.

The Salvation Army says it is determined to provide the programs teens want, so their input is essential. It needs to know if there is a demand for an exercise or ballet class, or some other program. They want this program to be one in which the teens have a personal responsibility for deciding the activities and for developing leadership skills and have fun, leaders say.

Anyone wishing to help start this program by donating funds, time or other resources should call Patterson at 733-8720. Tickets for the recognition dinner and silent auction are available from any Salvation Army board member or at the Salvation Army office at 348 Fourth Ave. N. in Twin Falls.

DEAR ABBY: I have been the principal of an elementary school for four years, and for the most part have been able to keep my cool except during those noisy lunch hours in the cafeteria. Every January, our school takes part in a "Bound for Literacy" promotion to encourage reading...

DEAR ABBY: I would be a deafening racket. Friday, Jan. 29, was the big day. Just before lunch, several PTA mothers armed with a bundle of jump ropes bound me securely, taped my mouth and hoisted me into a chair on a raised platform in the cafeteria. Then the children filed in. Of course, they giggled and waved at me, but my astonishment, the kids in both sessions were so quiet you could hear a spoon drop. I was amazed! One of the older children later told me "We didn't want to take advantage of you while you were all tied up." The following Monday, the noise levels returned to normal in the cafeteria. I have no desire to spend lunch hours bound and gagged - but I have acquired a new tolerance for lunchtime noise, and I have definitely gained added respect for my pupils.

BOUND FOR LITERACY, ABBINGTON, PA. DEAR "BOUND": After the "sacrifice" you made, I'm sure the respect is reciprocated. Not only are your students' strides toward literacy laudable, their exhibition of fair play is admirable. My congratulations to them.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

We do what we can, and then we do a theory to prove our performance the best. — Emerson

"Give West the diamond queen, and I make the game easy," announced South. "Since West opened with a theory, I was too weak to respond, I was a big favorite to win the diamond finesse."

South ruffed West's club king, drew trumps, and cashed his diamond ace. Then he took a diamond finesse, losing to East's queen. East shifted to the heart king to trap South's club king. South's defenders took four red-suit winners for one down.

A better plan is to cash the ace and king of diamonds and draw trumps. If a doubleton queen drops, the game is secure. If not, South concedes a trick to the diamond queen, hoping to win the diamond win. If West does, he has no safe exit, and South would get his 10th winner.

An even better plan works against any distribution. Instead of ruffing the club king, South should discard a low diamond. South wins West's diamond suit with his ace and draws out the king of trumps. After cashing dummy's king of diamonds, he leads the diamond jack, intending to pass it flower on loser. When West's defenders, South ruffs high and leads a trump to dummy to ruff dummy's club nine. He leads another trump to dummy to lead the club king. Instead of ruffing, he discards a heart. West wins his club ace, but must offer a ruff and sluff or lead to South's heart queen. In any way, South makes his game without getting it all on a fickle diamond finesse.

Early marks bode well for Bruins

Not that I plan to tout only Twin Falls High School tracksters this spring, but the most notable performances in the early going have come from Bruins. If this keeps up, Larry Lewis might have some explaining to do in Boise come May 22.

The highlights:
 • Last week, defending state triple jump champion Matt Anderson was within an inch of the school record at 45 feet, 6 inches. "Springs" has the will, Lewis tells me, which we all know is half the battle.

Nate Silverstein continues his dominance in the throws, going 52-plus in the shot and 170-plus in the discus (breaking his own school record). Throws coach Ed Arndt says Silverstein, like Anderson, wants to break the school mark, which is somewhere in the 60-foot range. The record holder? Curtis Eaton.

ON THE RUN Vin Cappello

• Travis Greene has gone sub-40 in the 300 hurdles already, and was time at for the 4x100s. Christie Fair has fired with the 50-second barrier for the ladies, something worth watching.

Website correction

Actually, this isn't a bona fide correction, but more of a clarification. (The site I wrote of last week for the best performers is actually correct, however, is unclear. Many of you have contacted me about the address, which renders an error message. I have no notion other than to guess that the site is under construction.

Meantime, for the schedule of events for the state meets, which is May 21-22 at Bronco Stadium, go to www.ihssa.org, which is actually the state activities association's site.

A tribute

Last month, the Simplot Games were successfully staged in Pocatello. But few know this year's event had a bit of a void. Even though Al Joyner was there, his late wife — Florence Griffith-Joyner — obviously was not. Her death last fall stunned the world.

I consider myself extremely lucky to have met her twice, both times at Simplot. The first time was at a clinic, and the second instance is a story worth telling.

I had just finished the coaches' table with training partner Dave Emerson (Kimberly's head coach). I didn't run very well, but my disappointment was soon tapered when I noticed a crowd gathering around none other than the Joyners. Curious, I did my way over but couldn't get close.

After resting a few minutes in the stands with my wife and daughter, I took a walk — sure babies have a way of making people do things they wouldn't otherwise do.

The Joyners spotted us coming and immediately began to play peek-a-boo with Gabriel's wife. Flo, as autographed Gabriella's warm-up jacket. (Al signed it, too). A photographer from an eastern Idaho newspaper snapped our picture, which appeared the next day on a front page.

A special day. A special moment. A special person. All the speculation after her death about steroid use angered me. Anyone who knows anything about Flo, Jo knows she was perhaps the finest sprinter the world has ever known. She quietly fought a battle with epilepsy, which she ultimately lost. A seizure in her sleep took her from us before she had an impact on millions.

Including my daughter.

The Top 5
 Magic Valley's top track performances should be polished sometime next week. Sports writer Lisa Winther, a TFHS alumna and accomplished sprinter and hurdler, will compile the list. So, coaches, please make sure The Times-News gets results promptly. This will ensure the most accurate listing possible.

Vin Cappello, a teacher and former track coach, is a part-time sports writer for The Times-News.

Connecticut 77, Duke 74

UConn upsets Duke

Heavily favored Devils can't overcome Huskies

The Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Connecticut spoiled the Duke Invitational.

The Huskies beat top-ranked Duke, the team no one thought could be beaten in this NCAA tournament, for their first national championship in their first Final Four appearance.

Monday night's 77-74 thriller ended Duke's 32-game winning streak, kept the Blue Devils from an NCAA record for wins in a season, and prevented them from ending the '90s with a third national championship.

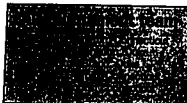

Richard Hamilton led third-ranked Connecticut (34-2) with 27 points, but it was some tremendous team defense and a big shot and free throws by Khalil Amin that won it all.

Trajan Langston led Duke (37-2) with 25 points, but Duke's last two possessions ended with him making turnovers. And so the Blue Devils fell short of what everyone had expected — another title.

These were the only two teams to hold the No. 1 ranking this season and they played a final game worthy of the two best.

"We lost to a great basketball team, we were beaten tonight, we didn't lose," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said.

"We picked it up in the second half and we had some opportunities, but they put the pressure on us and were tough to defend," he said. "We got some good looks and had a chance to win, but they made the play and we didn't make the play in the last minute."

Connecticut was able to keep the game at a pace it liked even though most everyone thought the Huskies should try to slow the tempo. The quick pace made for what seemed like constant lead changes, the last coming with 3:50 to play when Hamilton's free throws gave the Huskies a 70-63 lead.

He hit a 3-pointer 21 seconds later for a five-point lead and suddenly Duke was playing a role it had very little experience at this season — the chaser.

"We're happy as heck, and we truly believed we could beat the No. 1 ranking coach Jim Calhoun said. "I said before the game that we hadn't played our best yet. If you count character, think tonight we did it better."

William Avery's free throws with 54 seconds left got the Blue Devils within 75-74. El-Amin, whose driving basket had given

MVP Hamilton scores, subdues

The Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Last spring, Richard Hamilton thought seriously about leaving Connecticut for the NBA.

He had all the credentials including a couple of Big East championships and the conference's Player of the Year award. So he talked it over with coach Jim Calhoun and together they decided there was one more piece of business for him to complete.

"We won the Big East but never the national championship," he said. "I thought about that, I didn't and my season on a loss. The only thing I could do about it was come back and play."

On Monday night, he made sure to finish with a win, pouring in 27 points as the Huskies beat Duke 77-74 for the national championship he wanted so much.

Hamilton was heroic in the victory. Every time UConn needed a basket, he seemed there for it. He slinked to the basket, he nailed shots from outside and he took the game over in the second half. There was one sequence near the end that showed just how much he means to Calhoun's program.

With the score tied at 68 and 3:50 left to play, he took a shot to the midsection from Duke's

Connecticut fans cheer: 'We are the champions'

The Associated Press

STORRS, Conn. — Students streamed from Connecticut's home court and down Monday night, dancing around a giant university-sponsored banner to celebrate the Huskies' 77-74 victory over favored Duke.

Thousands of students earlier had packed Gampel Pavilion to watch the championship game, blending into a single screen as the final buzzer sounded and loudspeakers blared, "We are the champions."

"My dream has finally come true. This makes up for all the heartache Duke has caused us so many times," said Ellen Trax of Storrs, a recent Connecticut graduate who jumped up and down with joy.

Fireworks exploded as a caravan of hooking cars snaked through the campus.

There were no arrests before midnight, and the only injury was a twisted ankle.

Extra officers were brought in to work with state police. The lessons of last year's off-campus spring weekend, which triggered violence and vandalism, were still fresh in officers' minds.

Along Interstate 95, Department of Transportation traffic signs flashed, "UConn men's basketball, 1999 NCAA Champions."

At Jim Calhoun's "Coach's" sports bar in downtown Hartford, strangers hugged and high-fived.

Downtown Hartford, which had been deserted during the game, filled with honking horns and shouting. More than 100 police officers were standing by. Long before the final score was posted, championship day was playing out on campus as a numbers game.

There were more police, more pizza, more beer and — thanks to the experience of the 1995 women's team championship — more people making plans for celebrations.

These national title games were ones for the ages

The Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Connecticut and Duke, a pair of No. 1 seeds with key losses between them, and the only teams all season to occupy the top spot in The Associated Press poll, provided the chance for a memorable matchup in Monday night's NCAA championship.

"You obviously have the best two teams in the country playing for the national championship," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said before the game. "It can't get any better than that."

Sometimes, though, it can, even when No. 1 and 14 aren't playing each other.

Here, in no particular order, are five championship games that remain etched in the memory of those who saw them.

Texas Western 72, Kentucky 66

The 1968 final, coming at a turbulent time in America, represented a sociological revolution in basketball with Texas Western starting five black players against Adolph Rupp's all-white Kentucky team. Texas Western coach Don Haskins thought it was no big deal.

"I'm not so sure it was the single event that integrated college athletics," he said. "But I know it changed the way basketball was played, period."

N.C. State 54, Houston 52

At the 1983 Final Four, Houston's skywalking team of dunkers was considered a major mismatch against a North Carolina State team coached by scrappy Jim Valvano.

With no shot clock, NC State decided to play a delay. "If we got the opening 'top,'" Valvano said, "we might not shoot until Tuesday." Phi Slama Jama could dunk, but it couldn't shoot free throws. The Cougars were couldn't shoot free throws. The Cougars were pitched a perfect game in the 1985 final, hitting a tournament record 78.6 percent of their

Michigan 80, Seton Hall 79, OT

Cramped or blocked? The tallest player in basketball decided the 1990 championship game. With three seconds left in overtime and Michigan trailing by a point, the Wolverines' Rumeal Robinson drove down the lane and collided with Connecticut's Seton Hall. Florence John Cloughrey blew his whistle called it a block and Robinson dropped in the game-winning free throw.

"The call could have gone either way," said Cloughrey. "I saw him penetrate to the basket. I tried to cut him off. I thought I had the defensive position to pick up the offensive foul. The ref called a block." It was the last time the championship was decided by a single play.

Villanova 66, Georgetown 64

The Hoyas had lost just three games all year and beaten Villanova twice in the Big East Conference. The Wildcats, however, pitched a perfect game in the 1985 final, hitting a tournament record 78.6 percent of their shots against the nation's top defensive team and missing just one shot in the second half to pull off the upset. "It was incredible," said Dwayne McCain, who led the Wildcats with 17 points. "I had no idea we were shooting that good and were taking our time, looking for good shots, close shots and 'barts what we got.'"

UCLA 87, Memphis State 66

John Wooden's UCLA team had won six straight championships and seven out of eight in what would become a remarkable dynasty of 10 titles in 12 years. In 1973, Bill Walton made sure the streak remained intact, hitting a record 21 of 22 field goal attempts to rout Memphis State. Most of the 6-foot-11 Walton's baskets were shot in-jokes because of the NCAA's no-dunk rule. An anti-Lew Alcindore weapon, was still in effect. Occasionally, though, he soared over the hoop and was called for offensive goaltending. "They took four baskets away," he said. "I was really 25-for-26."

SPORTS

Huskies

Commencement the 75-72 lead, missed on a drive with 24 seconds left and Duke had it.

The crowd of 41,340 at Tropicana Field, the court where Duke's season ended a year ago, was roaring as the Blue Devils went for the final shot without calling a timeout.

Langdon, the fifth-year senior who made the Final Four in his last chance, tried to get by Ricky Moore, one of the game's best defenders. (See story, same page) Langdon spun but Moore was there. Langdon took an extra step and was called for traveling with 5.4 seconds to go.

El-Amin made two free throws with 5.2 seconds left to get the lead back to 3, and Langdon's last chance at tying the game ended when he fell near the 3-point line and lost control of the ball.

With time, Connecticut charged the court and had the tie every-one thought Duke would claim.

"We really worked hard as a team," Moore said. "I wanted to come out and prove myself. I wanted to show I have an offensive game as well as a defensive game. I wanted to attack the world."

It was Duke's eighth Final Four under Krzyzewski, who was trying to become the fourth coach to win a third national championship. Calhoun, labeled one of the best coaches never to reach a Final Four, finally did, and left the court with a national title in his 27th season, the last 13 at Connecticut.

Duke finished tied with the 1986 Duke team and UNLV in 1987 with 37 victories. The loss also gives Duke a 2-6 record in national championship games, the titles coming in 1991 and 1992.

This title was the first for the Big East since Villanova pulled off another huge upset in 1985, beating Georgetown.

A jumper by Hamilton gave the Huskies a 65-59 lead with 8:57 left. Elton Brand, the national player of the year who finished with 15 points and 13 rebounds, got Duke right back in it.

Brand blocked a shot by Hamilton then went down and scored on a fast break. He then stole the ball from Edmund Saunders 30 feet from the basket, but missed the free throw when he was fouled.

After a basket by Chris Carravell brought the Blue Devils within 65-63, Brand blocked a 3-point attempt by El-Amin and Langdon made one of two free throws on that possession to make it 65-64.

Hamilton, a first-team All-American who was 10-for-22 from the field and had seven rebounds, finished as the tournament's leading scorer with 145 points in the six games, a 24.1 average.

He was the tournament's Most Outstanding Player. Moore scored all 13 of his points in the first half and El-Amin had 12.

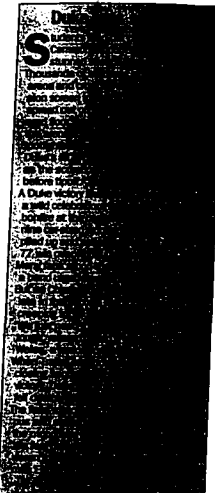

Langdon was 7-for-15 from the field, including 5-for-10 from 3-point range, and Avery had 11 points and five assists.

Duke's only other loss was by one point to Cincinnati in November and only four times did a team come within 10 points of the Blue Devils, who led the nation in scoring (92.3) and margin of victory (25.4).

Krzyzewski, who will have hip replacement surgery next week, is second on the NCAA tournament career victory list with 49.

One of those was in the 1990 regional final when Christian Lottner's buzzer-beater on an inbound play gave the Blue Devils a 79-78 overtime win over Connecticut.

There was no buzzer-beater this time. The Huskies finally got revenge in the last tournament of the decade.

Hamilton

Chris Carravell. Hamilton was dithered cover for a moment, trying to catch his breath. Finally, he stepped to the foul line and nailed the free throws for a lead the Huskies would never again surrender.

Then, just for emphasis, the next time down the floor, he drained a 3-pointer, extending UConn's lead to five points.

For the game, he finished with 10-of-22 from the floor, seven rebounds and three assists.

Hamilton was the heart of the UConn season, averaging 19.7 points and becoming the second highest scorer in school history when he went over the 2,000-point mark in Saturday's semifinal victory against Ohio State. He was an All-American and co-Player of the Year in the Big East Conference, joining Patrick Ewing and Chris Mullin as the only two-time winners of that award.

And when he wasn't around, UConn missed him. The Huskies went their first 20 games this season that when he and Jake Voskuil were hurt and missed in both 1 game against Syracuse, the Huskies lost. It was no coincidence and something Calhoun said the change in thought when he talked about the NBA with Hamilton last spring.

"He's had two major injuries," Calhoun said. "I would never want to have him in a situation where he's sitting there in crutches or in a cast or something and passed on a great deal of money. I'd feel very badly about that."

That said, the coach believes the extra year in college has prepared Hamilton more completely for the pros.

"Clearly, he's more ready this year than he was last year," Calhoun said.

And there's one other thing. Now, the all-time national championship he wanted so badly.

His Airness breaks silence on Hornets deal

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Michael Jordan was not pleased Monday that he's had preliminary talks about a possible Charlotte Hornets deal, but he says his presence will bring back the fans.

He said he'll even breathe new life into the uphill battle to build a new downtown NBA arena.

Lofty expectations for just one man. But this is Michael Jordan, after all.

Jordan wasn't saying very much about his plans, although he did confirm Monday that he has been in touch with Hornets and NBA officials.

In response to reports, I can confirm that I have been contacted by George Shinn and (NBA commissioner) David Stern regarding ownership of the Charlotte Hornets," Jordan said in the statement issued Monday through agent David Falk's office in Washington.

Jordan spoke with Shinn earlier this month about buying a 50-percent share of the NBA franchise, according to officials with the Hornets and the league.

At this stage, however, the discussions are very preliminary and I am unsure whether I would be making an investment on terms that are acceptable to me," Jordan said.

Michael Jordan

Hornets officials were not talking Monday about Jordan's remarks.

Jordan, who grew up in Wilmington and starred at the University of North Carolina, said staying involved in the NBA "would be a fulfilling personal and business challenge."

"In addition, as a North Carolina native, I would welcome the opportunity to be involved in growing the Hornets into an elite NBA team," Jordan said. "It would be premature to comment any further."

Jordan also met with John Fennebresque, chairman of a committee that is trying to develop a new downtown arena, The Charlotte Observer reported.

The Chicago Sun-Times, quoting unidentified sources in an article Sunday, said Jordan and Falk were in the Bahamas, discussing the move from retired player to part-time owner.

If this is something Michael wants to do, I'm all for it because he's earned the right to do whatever he wants to do," Bulls chairman Jerry Reinsdorf told the newspaper over the weekend. "I also believe he would make a good owner. He is good at everything he does."

"Michael is very bright and has very good insight into things that he focuses on. So, I'm sure he would be a plus."

Hornets officials said that no firm dates had been set for the two sides to meet again but that both parties had agreed to stay in touch over the coming weeks.

Shinn was granted an expansion franchise for $32.5 million and was reversed in Charlotte when the Hornets made their debut in 1988. Now, he's gotten the reputation for refusing to play the big money to keep top players — the Hornets lost stars Alton Armstrong and Larry Johnson from a team that once appeared on its way to the top.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Beach stays at Weber as an assistant coach

OGDEN, Utah — Guy Beach has announced he will remain at Weber State as an assistant coach, which means star players Harold Aronson and Eddie Gill, who had threatened to leave if Beach left, will also stay.

New head coach Joe Cravens announced on Monday that Aronson and Gill, who had indicated last week that they would not return next year, will be coming back.

Beach told Weber State's new head basketball coach, Joe Cravens, on Sunday that he would be staying. Beach and Cravens served as assistant coaches last season and both had been in contention for the head coach position.

Curtis hits hole-in-one in Burley

BURLEY — Denny Curtis hit his first career hole-in-one Sunday on the 185-yard fifth hole at Burley Golf Course.

The 5wood shot was the first of the year on the course and was witnessed by Larry Osterhout, Bill Robinson and Bill Parsons.

Olympians grab leads in Nordic races

MCCALL, U.S. — Olympian Marcus Nash and Canadian Olympian Rickie Strachan grabbed the lead after two stages of the six-day, six-stage Idaho International Cross-Country Series that began this past weekend.

Other Sunday winners and stage leaders are Kris Freeman (U.S. Junior National Team), Northern Michigan University's Abigail Larson (junior women), Sun Valley's Bryce Purzian (junior young men) and Anchorage, Alaska's Lorell Gower (junior young women).

The ICS series moves to Bogus Basin for tonight's 4K and 6K freestyle criterion and concludes with classic and freestyle individual races and relays in Sun Valley and at Galen Lodge.

The events feature 150 senior and junior men and women from Sweden, Norway, Italy, Canada and throughout the U.S.

The ICS series coach Rick Kapals conceived the ICS as a means of attracting Europe's elite to compete in Idaho and hopes the three-year ICS series will inspire the world's best Nordic ski teams to train in Idaho for the 2002 Winter Games in Salt Lake City.

Race fans battle poor planning

FOUR HORNETS, Texas (AP) — Many NASCAR fans spent as much as 7 1/2 hours trying to get away from the Texas Motor Speedway on Monday, but it took more than twice the time it took Tony Danz to win the Daytona 500.

After two years of complaints, drivers said the racing surface at the $325 million facility — where water seeped through the asphalt — was improved, but fans in the parking lots on Sunday weekend had mud and knee-deep snow following heavy thunderstorms.

But it was the cluster of cars stalled in some lots that frustrated people even more.

The worst part was: Just plain old waiting. Not going, not knowing what was going on, and not knowing why we weren't moving," said Jimmie Johnson of Evergreen, who said his vehicle was less than a foot of headway in more than 5 1/2 hours. "There were people sitting outside of their vehicles, trying to see what was going on."

Track spokesman Saraona Wilcox said a two-car accident and a broken race car were the biggest problems in the parking lot.

"Once you get an accident, trying to get it flowing again is difficult," he said.

Even at the best of times, the track struggles from only three exits can only two highways.

On the other hand, the short highway is supposed to be finished this year.

Disappointed fans, who had no lunch or drinks available, and the fact that several hours, folks stranded without supplies were offering money for beer, soda and water.

Some people went so far as to build benches in the parking lot.

"They were pouring straight concrete on the ground, they were throwing it," Young said. "It was covered with pieces of newspapers."

One angry fan, who didn't drink this time, pointed out that he thought the NASCAR fans might be cancelled in the parking lot as part of an "experiment."

The Fort Worth Police, who canceled traffic at the track, had no log records of any delays, wrecks or even of the bonfire, which smashed the grandstands.

But it is the track company, said Allan R. Davies of Livingston, was charged with several minutes in the shooting of a fire, Austin Rodriguez said.

Austin, shot in the leg, shoulder, was hospitalized from the track to a local hospital. He was released Monday.

Police said they also were not familiar with an earlier bonfire case canceled traffic at the track, had no log records of any delays, wrecks or even of the bonfire, which smashed the grandstands.

"People were stranded into a small walkway between a chain-link fence and the grandstands until the chain-link fence was cut by the fire from the ground and thousands of people poured through the opening."

Writing of an overwheeled crowd, some fans tried to use the same walkway immediately after the race.

"That walkway was there last year and it was a problem. It was a problem this year," she said, adding that officials will consider thinking the area for the next Wisconsin Cup, facing people fighting over the entrance.

Attendance Sunday was second only to crowds for race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. Many fans didn't usually endure as long a wait as in Texas.

Duval ends arguments about No. 1

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Ten months ago David Duval tried to fend off questions about whether he was the best golfer in the world.

"I don't think it's fair for me to answer that," he said then, at the Memorial tournament. "If I say yes, then I'm arrogant. If I say no, I have no confidence."

Now, Duval doesn't have to say anything at all. He has always preferred to stand on his results, and Sunday was no different in The Players Championship.

His patience tested in the most taxing conditions, Duval never lost his poise. Five times over the course of the final round, he had bogey putts of at least 4 feet — one of them was 15 feet. He made them all.

"Before I teed off, I told myself that the person who wins this tournament is going to make these putts," he said. "If I wanted somebody to make it, I wanted me to do it. So let's just knock them in."

On the scarier hole in golf when the clubhouse is at the line, the island-green 17th at the Sandium Course on the TPC at Sawgrass, Duval didn't flinch. He pulled a wedge from a bag and hit it 6 feet from the hole for a birdie that clinched a two-stroke victory over Scott Gump.

"I just tried to do was grab the clubhouse," he said. Duval said.

It was his third victory this year — no one else has more than one — and 10th in his last 39 starts dating to October 1997. It was worth $300,000, enough to put him over the $8 million mark for a career that began less than five years ago.

More than anything, it took care of the one number that everyone had been talking about since January.

The victory moved Duval to the top world ranking on Monday for the first time, ending Tiger Woods' reign of 41 weeks.

David Duval acknowledges the gallery after winning the TPC Sunday afternoon.

Before the week began, Duval said he didn't care about the world ranking. Not much changed as he sat next to his 10th trophy.

"It's nice to be now ranked No. 1 ... but it is not a number of mine," he said. "I've been playing well for a while. If I had won one out of three golf tournaments and Fred Couples were among those who couldn't get to No. 1, then I didn't know exactly what I need to do. So let's forget about it and just play."

If watching Duval play over the toughest conditions ever on the Sandium Course was not impressive enough, watching other great players collapse around him only emphasized the state of his game.

Duval was a stroke behind Joe Ozaki entering the weekend. Ernie Els, Davis Love III and Nick Price were among those who finished the week under par.

American pasttime? It's a hit in Cuba

Havana may attract more major games

HAVANA (AP) — Baseball people of all sorts were buzzing Monday in the waiting area at Jose Marti International Airport. The No. 1 topic? Trying to set up more games between major league teams and the Cubans.

League presidents, owners, general managers, scouts and union executives all seemed to agree, for once: The Baltimore Orioles' weekend trip to Havana worked so well that more clubs should follow.

"We will start talking soon about doing it again next year," said former infielder Tony Bernard, now at the players' union.

Cuban sports officials also seemed satisfied with the first visit by a major league team in 40 years. They appear willing to make this an annual event and no doubt would love to have the New York Yankees, a popular team among fans on the Communist island.

As the team comes down here and experience it, just to get to see and understand the mystique of Cuba, it was worth it," Montreal GM Jim Beattie said. "Having done it once, the next time you won't have that fear or awe."

Almost all 30 major league teams sent a representative or two to see the Orioles beat a Cuban all-star team 3-2 in 11 innings Sunday. Tampa Bay Devil Rays owner Vince Naimoli hopes the trip helps him understand more about his pitcher Rolando Arrojo, a Cuban defector.

"I'll have a conversation with him," Naimoli said. "I'm a great student of learning by walking around, and I'll talk about the things he saw."

AL president Gene Budig and NL president Len Coleman liked what they saw. So did Toronto Blue Jays scout Bob Engle.

"I think any time you get to see guys who don't have a lot of exposure, it's good," Engle said. "You got to see a lot of pitching. It gives you a good measure."

With several rival scouts sitting near him waiting for a charter flight to Miami, Engle was hesitant to identify the Cubans he liked. But asked whether he thought some of them had big league potential, he firmly said yes.

Jose Contreras pitched eight scoreless innings, allowed only two hits and struck out 10. Third baseman Omar Linares, considered the island's best player at 32, hit a tying single in the eighth inning that made Cuban President Fidel Castro grin from a front-row seat behind the plate.

Several top Cubans did not face Baltimore because they are playing in the current series between the Havana Industriales and Santiago de Cuba for the country's league championship.

Industriales shortstop German Mesa, whose talent kept Key Ordonez on the bench before the future Gold Glove defected and joined the New York Mets, may play when the Cubans visit Baltimore's Camden Yards on May 3. Orioles owner Peter Angelos, who spent several years trying to arrange this series, was most pleased.

"It met and exceeded my expectations," he said. "It was a perfect game, because we won and the Cuban team showed that they are capable of competing with a major league team."

Angelos and most of the major league personnel who made the trip got to meet Castro. Engle and some others even got an autograph from the 73-year-old leader, who wore a suit rather than his usual combat fatigues during Sunday night's reception at the national palace.

"It wasn't like he was just shaking hands and real quickly with everyone," Beattie said. "He spoke to everyone and had something to talk to them about."

With commissioner Bud Selig, Castro remembered his days of pitching while at the University of Havana.

"He talked about his career," Selig said. "But in all honesty he didn't build himself up."

Told that Budig was a former chancellor at Kansas, Castro was ready.

"He told me of his interest in college basketball and was very much aware of the University of Kansas and its basketball tradition," Budig said.

Upon meeting Coleman, Castro talked about NL teams that once trained in Havana, such as the Brooklyn Dodgers and Pittsburgh Pirates. With Blue Jays chairman Sam Pollock, he spoke about their shared interest in quail hunting.

And what did he say to Beattie? "He joked that he thought this was a baseball trip," the 6-foot-5 Beattie said, "and asked what the basketball players were doing here."

Cuban baseball fans celebrate during a playoff match of their team 'Los Industriales' against 'Mela de la Juventud' at the Latinoamerican Stadium in Havana last week. Baseball-crazy Cubans are celebrating a week of playoffs at the stadium and the return of major league baseball to the communist island after a 40-year absence.

Fans delight in team's showing

HAVANA (AP) — Baseball fans here delighted in the result of Cuba's exhibition game with the Baltimore Orioles, saying that even though their beloved team lost, it proved it could play with major leaguers.

They hope for more such games, and ultimately a warming of relations between Washington and Havana. "It was a great show," said Raul Garcia, 40, a mechanic. "Let the other teams come. Let the Yankees come!"

Garcia was one of about 150 people who gathered Monday under the trees in Havana's Central Park, joining a traditional, ongoing sports debate that normally draws a dozen or two people.

Many in this country of 11 million people followed Sunday's game on TV or radio. "Excellent Game, Victory for Baseball," the Communist Party workers' newspaper, Trabajadores, trumpeted in its Monday story about the match.

The goodwill game between the Orioles and selected Cuban players proved "that it is possible to have exchanges to develop a relationship between the two countries," Ricardo Alarcon, president of parliament, told reporters.

"I don't know how many baseball games we have to carry out until we arrive at that point," Alarcon said. "But if it takes many games, I hope we will win more games than we lose."

More than anything, the game proved to Cubans that their players can compete against the highly paid professionals in the majors. For the past 40 years, the Cubans always said their players were just as good, but often they really weren't sure.

The last time a major league team played in Cuba was in March 1959, three months after the triumph of the revolution that brought Fidel Castro to power. The Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Cincinnati Reds in that exhibition match.

Alarcon insisted that in Sunday's game, "both teams won" because they were tied 2-2 at the end of the ninth inning and Cuba only lost 3-2 after the game went into extra innings.

The Orioles, with a projected payroll in excess of $80 million, barely squeezed past a team of amateurs who earn an average of $10 a month. The Cubans outlit the Orioles, 10-6.

The importance of the game to Cuba was demonstrated by the presence of Castro, himself a former player. He watched the match from the first row behind home plate, sitting between commissioner Bud Selig and Orioles owner Peter Angelos, who first broached the idea of the game three years ago.

The game, said Alarcon, "reflected the possibilities that can exist between two countries to have normal fruitful, peaceful interchanges, when based on mutual respect."
