PEDAL PUSHING

Mick Lindsay of Jerome pedals on an existing bike path on South Lincoln near the Jerome Recreation District building. Construction is now under way on a new bike path.

Bike path gets rolling

Jerome cyclists will soon see new two-mile stretch

By Theresa Jacoby
Times-News writer

JEROME—Residents will soon be able to take advantage of the first two-mile section of a new bike path in Jerome.

Construction of the first two-mile section of the new pathway began March 15 and the project is expected to be completed around June 1, according to Wendy Davis, director of the Jerome Recreation District, and Brian Smith, the project's consulting engineer.

The two-mile section of the path begins at the corner of East Main and 100 East, runs one mile south to the corner 100 South and 100 East, and then extends one mile west to the corner of 100 South and South Lincoln where it joins an existing part of the path system on Lincoln road.

The bike path, which is a multiphase collaborative effort between the Jerome Recreation District, Jerome Highway District, Jerome School District, Jerome County and the City of Jerome, was envisioned four years ago as a means to provide safety and recreation for pedestrians and bicyclists, said project consultant Michael Pepper.

"This is a true collaborative effort that will really enhance the quality of life for Jerome residents," Pepper said.

He said construction of the first section of the bike path will cost about $300,000 and is funded in part by a $264,600 grant from the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation. Pepper said the project's backers are required to match a percentage of the grant in cash or in donated labor and materials.

The new bike path is being constructed in seven phases and will be 25 miles long, 10 feet wide and handicapped-accessible, according to a brochure on the project. Phases of the project will be implemented as funds and land become available, Pepper said.

County jail inmate dies in custody

By Brian Haynes

TWINS FALLS—An inmate at the Twin Falls County jail died Tuesday after falling from a window in his cell.

The death of David Lee Bromilka, 38, who had been under a doctor's care, was being investigated by the Cassia County Sheriff's Office, Twin Falls County Sheriff Wayne Tinsley said.

"We want to know, for our sake and for the family's sake, what happened," he said.

When jailers found Bromilka unconscious in his cell, they gave him cardiopulmonary resuscitation and took him to St. Luke's Regional Medical Center, where he died later that night, Tinsley said.

The cause of death was a persistent medical condition, but Tinsley said he couldn't say what that condition was because of privacy issues.

"There wasn't any life-threatening problem," he said.

An autopsy by a Boise doctor was scheduled for Thursday.

Bromilka was in jail on a 2957 drug conviction and sentenced to state prison but was kept in either Twin Falls or Cassia County on pending charges, Tinsley said.

Bromilka was scheduled to be moved to the state prison system the day he died, he said.

Glenns Ferry copes with water crisis

By Brian Haynes
Times-News writer

GLENN'S FERRY — Gov. Dirk Kempthorne declared a state of emergency in Glenns Ferry Thursday morning after the city's water supply ran dry.

Residents were told to boil water before using it. The National Guard trucked 1,000 gallons of water, and the Bureau of Land Management brought in tankers to hold drinkable water, Mayor Glenn Thompson said.

"We just got an hour enough water to continue existing demands," he said. "Everyone's upset, and I don't blame them."

Schools shut down Thursday, and two of the city's highest water users, Magic West Inc. and Idaho Circuit Technology, had to scale back operations because of the shortage, he said.

The problem was at its worst Wednesday evening when the city's wells went dry. While the pump in one well was being replaced, the other well that taps a spring began pumping air late Wednesday. Officials were uncertain

Anthony Avellino was fined $1,000 for letting his daughters (clockwise from top: Julie, Leah and Rebecca) climb a tree New York's Central Park. Leah is holding a branch that was broken from the tree after a park ranger told the children to get off the tree.

A pine mess! Rangers fine man for letting kids climb tree

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Children climbing trees? This has got to stop!

That's pretty much the message Anthony Avellino said he got from two park rangers last month. They handed him a $1,000 ticket after his daughters, ages 9 and 11, and their 13-year-old friend were caught climbing a Japanese white pine in Central Park.

"My children have been climbing trees in Central Park for nine years," Avellino said.

"At least give me a warning."

But officials said it was no fine — the tree was damaged. They said they will bring photographs of broken branches to environmental court to prove it.

Avellino, who did not immediately return calls to his home, told the Daily News he would fight the ticket.

It isn't the softest ticket ever given in New York City.

There was the so-called pee-wee case, in which the grandmother of a 4-year-old was given a $500 ticket for letting the boy deposit a "hazardous liquid" on city property. (The lad urinated on a bush.)

Or the 28 winter-sports revelers who were fined $50 for dining around a beach

banfire without Parks Department permission.

The story of the pine fine began on March 21 when Avellino, a New York restaurant manager, took his daughters Leah and Rebecca and their friend Darryn to Central Park to knock a softball around.

The girls got bored and decided to climb tree trunks. They went into a special grove where pine trees get extra care and chose a Japanese white pine, one of only about a dozen in the city.

Parks Department spokesman Edward Skyles said Thursday that the trees are not indigenous to New York and cost several thousand dollars apiece.

Two park rangers ordered the children down. Skyles said the rangers saw at least three branches fall and noticed several others broken and two or three more lying on the ground.

"There are lots of things that you cannot do in parks that are not posted," Skyles said. "If we listed every rule, we'd have more signs than trees."

Yugoslavia claims end to offensive

The Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Yugoslavia urged refugees to return home Thursday, finishing a busy day of work as it leaves the NATO refugee camp in Durica, Macedonia, Thursday.

The offensive against NATO attacks.

As the United States pledged that NATO will press ahead with the bombing campaign against Yugoslavia, a former Yugoslav president arrived in Belgrade to try to win freedom for three captured U.S. soldiers. His task could prove difficult: A hard-line Serbian vice premier ruled out any release as long as the NATO bombardment continued.

On the fifth day of the U.S.-led air assault, hopes for the prisoners' release were mixed with concern over thousands of ethnic Albanian refugees whose fate was unknown a day after Yugoslavia sealed off its borders and stopped their flight out of Kosovo.

The Yugoslav government, which says it is observing "strict neutrality" in Kosovo, said Tuesday that German-led NATO claimed the refugees were voluntarily heading back to their homes in the province.

McDougal jury asks about 'innocent reason'

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Jurors in Susan McDougal's trial asked Thursday whether they can consider her defense that she was raped by Kenneth Starr when she was a minor under a "innocent reason" for refusing to testify before grand juries in 1996 and 1998. She is charged with two counts of criminal contempt for refusing to testify.

The jurors' questions go to the heart of her defense — that she declined to testify because she feared the prosecutor's tactics were charge her with perjury unless she falsely implicated the Clintons in wrongdoing.

In response, U.S. District Judge George Howard Jr. referred the jury back to the instructions he read earlier.

The jury was instructed that Mrs. McDougal would be guilty of criminal contempt if she "willfully" defied the court order and "did not do so under mistake or other innocent reason."

In closing arguments Wednesday, McDougal's lawyer, Mark Geragos, emphasized to the jury that she did have an "innocent reason" for not testifying. He said the prosecutor's tactics were

"something you expect to see in the Third Reich."

In another part of the instructions, Howard told jurors that in deciding the two contempt charges, they may not consider whether she believed Starr wanted her to lie in order to "get" the Clintons.

But the jurors focused on the "innocent reason" phrase in the definition they were given of criminal contempt. She also is charged with one count of obstruction.

Mrs. McDougal entered the courtroom smiling and seemingly relaxed, propping her feet on a chair while waiting for jurors to arrive. Asked whether she was relieved the trial was ending, she answered, "You can't imagine."

Jurors began deliberating at 9:25 a.m. M.D.T.

Mrs. McDougal said her now-deceased former husband, James, was President and Mrs. Clinton's partner in the Whitewater real estate debacle.

To acquit her on the contempt charges, jurors would have to find that Mrs. McDougal had "an innocent reason" for refusing to answer questions. They would have to find that she did not "act corruptly" to impede justice if they are to acquit her on the obstruction charge.

Report: Major ice shelves succumb to global warming

LONDON (AP) — Global warming has speeded the melting of two Antarctic ice shelves, which lost nearly 1,000 square miles of area in the last U.S. and British researchers say.

Researchers at the University of Colorado and the British Antarctic Survey in Cambridge say regional warming has increased the annual melt season by up to three weeks over the past two decades, causing the Larsen B and Wilkins shelves on the Antarctic Peninsula to "melt retreat."

Satellite photos show the Larsen B ice shelf has continued to crumble after an initial small retreat in the spring of 1998, the researchers said Wednesday. Since November, another 660 square miles of shelf area have calved away.

On the other side of the peninsula, the Wilkins ice shelf retreated nearly 420 square miles in early March 1998, said Ted Scambos, a research associate at the University of Colorado at Boulder's National Snow and Ice Data Center.

"The radar images showed a large area of completely shattered ice, indicating an ice from 35 kilometers (21 miles) back from its previous extent," said Scambos.

He said thousands of small icebergs had appeared, suggesting "that the shelves are essentially broken-up in place and then flushed out by storms or currents afterward."

David Vaughan, a researcher with British Antarctic Survey, said ice shelves in the area have been in retreat for 50 years but this ice has only included about 2,700 square miles.

within a few years, much of the Wilkins ice shelf will be gone," he said.

But Vaughan said the melt-down has few implications for the environment. Birds and animals are not known to rely on the ice shelves and there would be no increase in sea level if the ice shelf is floating away.

Since the 1940s, British researchers have reported an increase in mean temperature in the Antarctic of 4.5 degrees Fahrenheit. Summer temperatures now approach, and sometimes exceed 32 degrees Fahrenheit.

The best solution would be a water treatment plant to make Snake River water drinkable, but then scholars say the cost would be difficult for a city the size of Coeur d'Alene, Thompson said.

Disaster Services Director John Cline says the working well is again supplying some water. But he says the city remains under a boil order until that water can again be checked.

Times-News staff writer Brian Hayes can be reached at 733-0931, Ext. 236. The Associated Press contributed to this report.

what caused the spring drip.

The city's two water storage tanks were down to just 10 percent of capacity Thursday morning. The city replenished some of the water, but it still couldn't meet demand, Thompson said.

The city's immediate goal is providing enough water for fire departments such as drinking and flushing toilets, city water manager Burch Anderson said.

Water-use restrictions will continue until the crisis is over, he said.

The water level in the spring has been dropping the past couple of years, but the city was always able to meet demand, Thompson said.

"When you're running right on the border line anyway it doesn't take much to put you in trouble, he said.

Wednesday's sudden drop caught city leaders off guard.

"I kind of expected it, but it was a surprise," Anderson said.

The city got permission Thursday to tap into another spring it hopes will supply the city's short-term water needs, but no one knows how much water the spring will give, Thompson said.

Shaded $7.00 per week, daily only $5.00 per week, Sunday only $3.00 per week. A $15.00 charge will be levied for all 24-hour calls.

as might fall Thursday, several Albanian people, including "Wopslav" Vuposlav, and other non-Albanian citizens in the Belgrade and the remaining Danube River bridge in the city of Novi Sad were as well as other "human shields" against NATO attacks.

Shortly after 10 p.m. air raid sirens sounded in Belgrade.

Spyros Kyprianou, currently the speaker of the Cypriot parliament, said he planned to meet Vuposlav. President Slobodan Milosevic today said that the American might be based during the long Orthodox Easter weekend. He called on NATO to negotiate with a cease-fire over the holiday, something the alliance has refused.

Prime Minister Vuposlav Senelj, leader of the influential Serbian Radical Party, said he supports Thursday that releasing the American hostages.

U.S. State Department spokesman James R. Rubin said only an unconditional ceasefire would be acceptable.

President Clinton insisted that NATO air will win in Kosovo without sending in ground troops, and pressuring the Yugoslavs that the Albanians would be freed. "We would like to see the newsmen released because they never should have been detained in the first place," Clinton said during a news conference with Chinese Premier Zhu Rongji.

Although NATO arranged for the release of the Yugoslav pilot, all military warplanes and missiles struck before dawn Thursday in Belgrade and against government forces in Kosovo.

Albanian Prime Minister Vuposlav said NATO forces would "take every precaution" to make sure they avoid targets where refugees may be used as human shields. "(S)hield" has prevailed in Kosovo since the end of the day the responsibility is Milosevic's, he said.

In a statement Thursday, Milosevic's government claimed that "people" in Kosovo are "being" and said its security forces had "ended the offensive, anti-terrorist activities" against the ethnic Albanian Kosovo Liberation Army, which has been fighting for independence.

The Yugoslav government once again calls on all foreign Kosovo not to leave their country, to live in harmony and cooperation, and in that way resist the bombs that kill regardless of nationality," the statement said.

Nearly a million ethnic Albanians have fled or were driven from Kosovo since the NATO bombing campaign began March 24, unleashing Europe's greatest displacement in half a century.

Neighboring states have described the refugee crisis as a humanitarian catastrophe of terror by Serb troops and police against ethnic Albanians, who made up 90 percent of the Serbian army's prewar population of 2 million people.

NATO allies have dismissed Yugoslav claims of a unilateral ceasefire, saying the bombing campaign will continue until Milosevic allows the return of all refugees, and that Serbia must accept a peace plan for Kosovo.

Premier: China will help clear spy scandal, stands firm on rights record

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chinese Premier Zhu Rongji promised President Clinton on Thursday to cooperate in U.S. investigations of alleged nuclear weapons spying and illegal campaign contributions by Beijing no matter who it may involve.

But he sharply rejected U.S. charges of human rights abuses in China as "unfair" and middle-some.

President Clinton listens to Chinese Premier Zhu Rongji speak during ceremonies on the South Lawn of the White House Thursday.

After a day of talks, both leaders pointedly took note of heightened tensions and suspicions between their nations. Zhu joked that he almost canceled his visit because the political atmosphere in the United States was "anti-China." Clinton acknowledged there is an "anti-China crowd in America."

Yet, at a windup news conference, they claimed important progress on the contentious issue of trade, even though they failed to agree on a market-opening deal that would have cleared the way for China's entry into the World Trade Organization.

Clinton's economic adviser, Gene Sperling, said China made "significant movement and concessions" and the two leaders said they hoped to reach a final agreement by year's end.

For 31 minutes, Clinton and Zhu answered questions, joked and sparred with each other before reporters. It was the second longest news conference of Clinton's presidency — just short of Clinton's record-breaking 34-minute appearance before the camera in December 1997. Much of the time Thursday was taken up by Zhu's long-winded answers and translation.

In what he said was "a very solemn statement," Zhu said he and President Jiang Zemin had no knowledge of suspicions that China stole nuclear warhead designs from U.S. labs in the 1980s. "I don't believe such a story," he said, chiding Americans for asking questions, joking to develop its own technology without U.S. help.

He also mocked allegations that China funded a 200,000 vote to Clinton's re-election campaign in 1996 in hopes of currying favor. With China sitting on $146 billion in foreign currency reserves, he said, "why just $300,000? That would be too foolish."

More on China

In other Chinese news:

- U.S. intelligence report says that China stole nuclear warhead designs from U.S. labs in the 1980s.
- China's foreign minister said that the United States is "not in a hurry" to open its market to Chinese goods.
- China's foreign minister said that the United States is "not in a hurry" to open its market to Chinese goods.
- China's foreign minister said that the United States is "not in a hurry" to open its market to Chinese goods.

Even so, he said China would cooperate with the United States. "As so long as you can provide some clues, and no matter who it may involve, we will investigate into it."

Clinton said he discussed the allegations with Zhu Wednesday and was told privately what Zhu said publicly.

The sharpest exchange came on human rights. The State Department in February said China's human rights record "deteriorated sharply" late last year with a crackdown on political dissent and restrictions on religion and other freedoms.

Zhu denounced a U.S. resolution at a U.N. forum criticizing China's record. "I not only regard that as unfair but also take it as an interference in China's internal affairs," he said.

Customs service checks allegations of bias in searches

WASHINGTON (AP) — Frazed with a growing chorus of racial bias complaints, the U.S. Customs Service created an independent panel Thursday to review the policies and procedures used by inspectors looking for airline passengers who might be smuggling drugs.

Customs Commissioner Raymond W. Kelly pledged that the commission, composed of officials from other government agencies and headed by Smithsonian Institution Inspector Undersecretary Constance Newman, will have "unfettered access" to the agency's records and personnel during its three-month investigation.

If a bias exists, whether perceived or real, it is paramount that we find its cause and eliminate it," Kelly said.

Rep. John Lewis (D-Ga.), who asked last month for a formal investigation into complaints of racial bias by inspectors at Atlanta's Hartsfield International Airport, called the creation of the panel "an important first step."

FAA runs first test of Y2K fix

DENVER (AP) — Saturday night, the Federal Aviation Administration will try the first test of its Year 2000 aircraft computer fixes. Officials hope for a better outcome than the Denver airport's bag-shredding computerized luggage system.

Late Saturday and early Sunday, the agency plans to split the computers controlling air traffic around the airport and spin the clock ahead to Jan. 1, 2000 in half of the system.

The same time change will be made in flight computers aboard an FAA Lear Jet flying over Grand Junction, in western Colorado; Denver, on the eastern side of the Rocky Mountains, and Colorado Springs, located to the south.

David L. Smith
Made first court appearance Thursday

Alleged virus
faces charges

FREEHOLD, N.J. (AP) — The man accused of spreading the so-called "Melissa" computer virus appeared in court for the first time Thursday, answering the judge's questions with a nod of the head or "Yes, sir."

The judge advised David L. Smith, 38, of the charges against him and informed him of his rights. Smith, a former computer programmer, was arrested last week and charged with originating Melissa from his New Jersey apartment.

Authorities say the virus, which clogged e-mail accounts and shut down computer networks worldwide, was named after a missus dancer in Florida.

He is charged with interruptions of public communications, conspiracy and theft of computer services.

He remains free on $100,000 bail. His lawyer spoke with reporters and questioned whether the virus was as destructive as authorities allege.

"Is this more akin to a graffiti artist or an international cyber terrorist?" said Edward F. Bristlen Jr.

Administration calls for fair packing prices

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration will propose legislation requiring meatpackers to reveal the prices they pay in hopes of putting farmers and ranchers "on a level playing field" in the marketplace, Vice President Al Gore said Thursday.

Under the proposal being sent to Congress, the Agriculture Department would require individuals who buy, sell or market live stock, livestock products or meat products to report the prices of their transactions to USDA.

Despite the announcement, Chuck Hasselbrook, a Nebraska member of Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman's National Commission on Small Farms, said the administration could do more. Commission members in February criticized Glickman for not moving to implement some form of price reporting.

Benefits help narrow income gap for elderly

WASHINGTON — Social Security benefits significantly help narrow the income disparities between women and men in old age, according to a study.

The nonprofit research center used 1997 Census data to measure the impact Social Security benefits have on lifting elderly Americans' incomes above the federal poverty level. Elderly individuals were considered to be poor in 1997 if they had income below $7,698 a year, or below $9,712 for elderly couples.

Women get a particularly good deal from Social Security, the study found. Although women pay 38 percent of all Social Security payroll taxes, they get 53 percent of benefits.

Blast at Tampa plant kills two, injures 49

TAMPA, Fla. — A thunderous explosion rocked a power plant Thursday morning, killing two workers and injuring 49 people, three critically.

The blast tore a huge section from a building holding the six coal-fired generators at the Tampa Electric Co. plant on the edge of Tampa Bay, two miles from downtown. The explosion was heard at least 35 miles away.

Homeowners with money worries may qualify for low-interest loans

Local lender loosens its requirements for homeowners who need money now.

Have you been turned down for a loan? Do you need more than $10,000 for any reason? Are you paying more than 10% interest on any other loans or credit cards?

If you are a homeowner and answered "yes" to any of these questions, they can tell you over the phone and without obligation if you qualify. High credit card debt? Less-than-perfect credit? Self-employed? Late house payments? Financial problems? Medical bills? IRS liens? Bankruptcy? It doesn't matter!

If you are a homeowner with sufficient equity, there's an excellent chance you will qualify for a loan—usually within 48 hours.

You can find out over the phone—and free of charge—if you qualify. Stone Castle Home Loans is licensed by the Idaho Department of Finance. 1-800-479-4656, ext. 371

New Jersey governor runs for Senate

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Republican Gov. Christie Whitman Thursday launched her bid for the U.S. Senate, saying she would work for measures "empowering people and getting government out of their lives."

The second-term governor, long seen as a GOP star, ended speculation about her political future. She announced the formation of a fund-raising committee, kicking off an effort to become New Jersey's first elected Republican U.S. senator since the 1970s.

The seat is currently headed by Democrat Sen. Frank Lautenberg, who is retiring after the 2000 election. "A committee has been formed to raise money" for a Senate bid, Whitman said during a Statehouse news conference. She vowed to continue to focus on being governor until next year.

Gun owners vie for chance to shoot Hitler

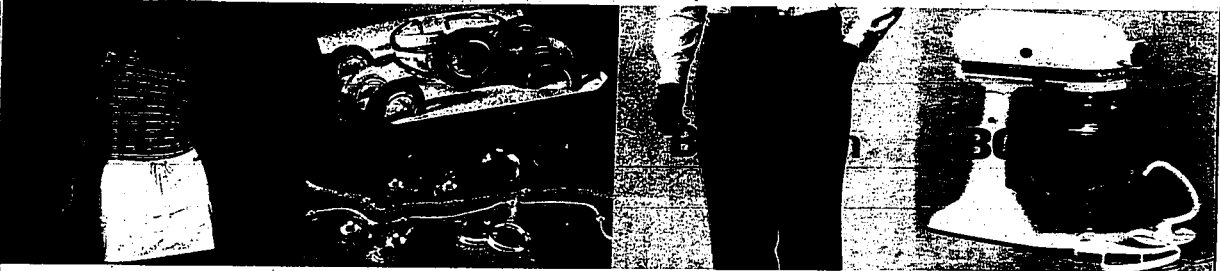

BOSTON (AP) — A state law that bans some shooting enthusiasts from using human images for target practice is being challenged by gun-rights advocates who want to riddle photos of Adolf Hitler with bullets.

"Why wouldn't you want to encourage people to shoot at somebody like that?" said Stephen Halbrook, an attorney for the American Rifle Association. He said the law violated the Second Amendment.

The law, which bans anyone who was wanted to prevent people from practicing shooting human targets, is believed to be the only one of its kind in the nation. It prohibits anyone from using a photograph of a target depicting a human figure, human silhouette or any other human figure. Law enforcement officers are exempted. The law only applies to gun clubs and target ranges with new state licenses that give these permission to own "large capacity" automatic or semiautomatic weapons.

Life isn't always convenient when you're a prison inmate

Idaho's prison population is increasing as the prospect of again ship-prisoners out of state. That may not be to the liking of prisoners or their spouses, but it shouldn't be of much concern to others.

Nobody promised Idaho's prisoners that incarceration would be convenient. In fact, going to prison is supposed to be inconvenient for people who commit serious crimes. That's what imprisonment is all about.

Winding up at an out-of-state prison, far from your loved ones, is one more downside of breaking society's laws. No one is owed a "normal" family life, least of all convicted felons.

As a venerable Times-News columnist was wont to say: "There's a lot of sadness in the world."

The people who deserve sympathy are Idaho's taxpayers, who are footing the bill for prisoners to eat three squares a day and enjoy access to medical attention. That's the price society pays to protect itself from dangerous people.

It's a price Idaho residents have been willing to pay. This is a get-tough state when it comes to sentencing lawbreakers to prison. In this regard, the medical and the court system correctly reflect the will of most state residents.

Sentencing criminals to prison time comes at a price. Idaho's correctional system is about to hang out the "No Vacancy" sign. Estimates are that the state prison system is around 97 percent full. Last month, the state welcomed 100 more inmates than it released - the largest one-month gain in the past three years.

Thus, Idaho may again start exporting prisoners in addition to potatoes. The state has another ace up its sleeve because a brand-new prison is ready and waiting to open.

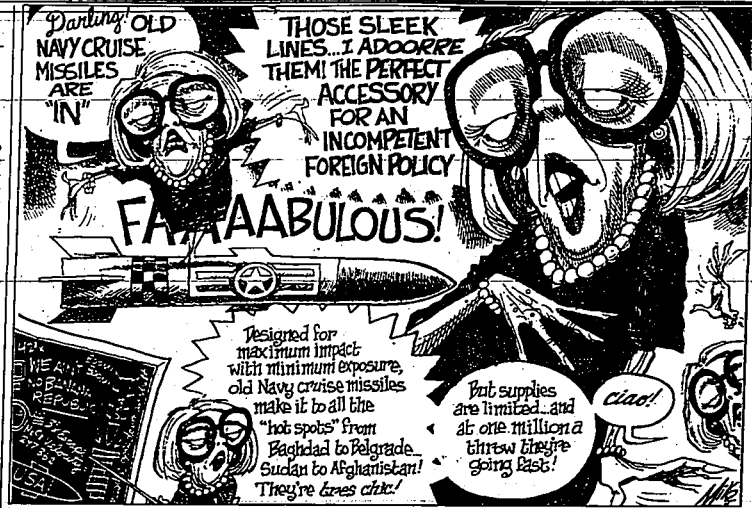

If the cost of housing Idaho prisoners in other states gets too high, Gov. Dirk Kempthorne can always rip the wrapper off a new prison, and lock our lawbreakers up locally.

That's not a bad position to be in. It allows state leaders to cut things close when curving off money for the corrections budget.

No matter how you slice it, sending more people prison means spending more money on prisons. Idaho's schools reaped some of the savings that accrued from the state's original new prison. At some point, it may be necessary for public education to return the favor.

Idahoans care about education, but they also care about crime and punishment. The state's corrections budget has yielded in the recent past, but someday it may need to exercise the right of way.

If the cost of housing Idaho prisoners in other states gets too high, Gov. Dirk Kempthorne can always rip the wrapper off a new prison.

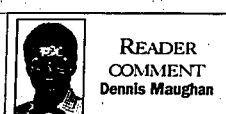

Parks and recreation deserve federal help

Frontier Field, Rock Creek Park, Balanced Rock Park, Cascade Park, etc. Imagine life in Twin Falls County without these great facilities. Parks and recreational facilities help to define us. They provide important economic, social, personal and resource benefits to our citizens and reduce crime by providing positive alternatives and experiences for our children.

Unfortunately, over the past several years, federal dollars from the Land and Water Conservation Fund that helped finance these types of community projects have been diverted. They are not being passed through to the states as originally mandated in the 1965 legislation. For Twin Falls County, this totals more than $681,000 and spans projects from 1966 to 1996.

Fortunately, we now have an opportunity to restore this allocation of Outer Continental Shelf oil and gas revenues to the Land and Water Conservation Fund. The Conservation and Reinvestment Act of 1999, co-sponsored by Reps. Don Young, R-Alaska, and John Dingell, R-Mich., has bipartisan support and would provide permanent funding. Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott has also co-sponsored similar legislation in the Senate.

When the Republican Party took over leadership of both houses of Congress in 1994, it promised that states and local government would be shareholders in administering federal dollars, through block grants, for programs and projects that would have state and local control. This legislation confirms that principle. To say "no" is to say that the federal government should receive the dollars. I strongly urge our congressional delegation to support this effort.

The Land and Water Conservation Act of 1965 was a promise to the citizens of the United States to fund a renewable resource (outdoor recreation) using a non-renewable resource (oil and gas). It should be appropriated to the states without annual review. Our own state Legislature saw the value in restoring this funding when it overwhelmingly passed House Joint Memorial 2. Support for returning state funding also has come from the National Governors' Association, the National Association of Counties and the Idaho Park and Recreation Board.

We can all point with tremendous pride to the past effort of cities and counties in recognizing the value of providing parks and recreational opportunities. Since the inception of the LWCF, Idaho has received and invested more than $32 million in federal dollars, which were matched dollar-for-dollar by private donations of labor and materials, community force accounts and budgeted funds. This incredible effort produced nearly 80 percent of Idaho's local recreational facilities and most of our state parks.

In 1963, an Interim Legislative Study Committee found more than $20 million worth of backlog recreation facility repair and construction needs in Idaho. The projects, for the most part, represent city and county needs. The challenge for all of us is how to meet the future needs of a population that values recreation more all the time. To meet this challenge, we must use available resources in the most efficient manner. Local control will ensure that we get the most bang for our buck. Outdoor recreation and tourism represent a vital part of our state and local economy.

We cannot expect current resources to handle the growth of tomorrow. Restoration and recreation activities put our Fund will go far in ensuring that we meet these needs.

Again, I urge our congressional delegation to take the lead on this legislation. Parks and recreation activities put our finest signature on our communities. We need federal help to restore what has been lost.

Dennis Maughan is a Twin Falls County commissioner.

licenses sure can use a few fish or game to supplement their small fixed incomes. When you are on a fixed income, every little bit helps.

I think our Fish and Game department have made a real laughing stock of themselves lately. The way it is run now, it is all politics. It has lost all respect from the people. The legislators should not even be involved with the running of the Fish and Game. The commissioners should be elected by the license holders and left out of politics altogether. Maybe then the Fish and Game could get back some respect instead of the joke they are today.

State unfair to disabled sportsmen

To disabled fishermen, hunters and voters. I have just heard by word of mouth that my fishing license is no longer valid. On the license, it says it is good until Dec. 31, 1999.

It seems the big shots in Boise, "our legislators," can change the rules whenever they want. They can cancel our license without even a letter of explanation. I am sure they have my address in the computer.

I understand they have money problems, but they can't cancel the licenses when each license expires. The legislators and disabled who have these litimates, politicians much the same

I have observed the past speaker of the Idaho House of Representatives carrying a tennis ball in his hand to squeeze to relieve his tension. I have recently observed a psychiatrist exiting a state prison also carrying a tennis ball.

Now for the question: What is the difference, if any, between our elected state officials and our fellow citizens who populate our prisons?

On the television airwaves, junk outsells quality

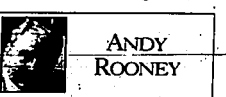

It's disappointing how often junk sells better than quality. It doesn't seem to matter what the products are. Sometimes it's simply because they're cheaper. Other times with other products, it's because they appeal to our baser instincts.

In the grocery store, soft, commercial, presliced bread sells better than the crusty, quality loaves made by the small, independent bakery in town. In bookstores, the cheap, sexy thriller sells more copies than the classy novel.

There is too much junk on television because that's what a lot of people like to watch either because they are too young to know any better or because they have too little education and not much taste. Culturally deprived kids are exposed to a constant barrage of inane violence, sex and stupidity.

The populist governor of Minnesota, former professional wrestler and showman Jesse Ventura, wants to eliminate Minnesota's subsidization of public radio and television in the next three years. Presumably this bright, likable ignoramus would like to bring television down to the level of the radio.

I feel just the opposite. Americans like to complain about the intrusion of government in their lives, but there are things government does for them that we can't do for ourselves. Instead of eliminating or reducing it, I'd like to see the money spent on public television and radio programming quadrupled. I'd like to have a second public television operation to compete with the present one in order to keep The Corporation for Public Broadcasting on its cultural toes.

CBS is buying King World Productions for $2.5 billion because King owns three of the biggest money-making programs - "Jeopardy," "Wheel of Fortune" and "The Price Is Right Show." The yearly budget allowed by Congress to the Corporation for Public Broadcasting is $250 million. At that rate, what CBS is paying to get King World would pay for all of public television for 10 years. Or twice as good for five years. I have no objection to any of the King productions but they are about as culturally uplifting as a Big Mac.

Much commercial television lowers the public taste by feeding its audience entertainment that appeals to its voracious appetite for cultural crudities. There isn't a price you could put on the value to be gained if we could raise the general level of public taste by exposing ourselves to more of the best of everything. And I watch network news broadcast every night and then watch "The NewsHour with Jim Lehrer" on public television. By the simple fact that it has more than twice as much time in which to present the news, "The NewsHour" is better. (I'm having a second drink, too. That may help.) But it delves more deeply into the issues of the day. At the same time, Jim Lehrer is very, very good but he's losing some of his enthusiasm for his work and the show itself needs the kind of shot-in-the-arm that competition from another public television operation would give it.

Republican members of Congress are always trying to reduce the money for public television because they don't think government should be involved. Why not? Our great universities are not in it for the money. Harvard, Stanford, MIT, Yale or Duke don't turn a profit. I'd like to see commercial television take a good swift kick in the tail from at least one more first-class publicly-supported broadcast operation. Even if I had to take a pay cut.

Don't write Clinton off just yet

One of the few blessings of the Kosovo crisis is that it has exposed once again the silliness and self-absorption of Washington's press corps and political elite. They often don't seem to understand what matters about the American presidency and what doesn't.

Less than three weeks ago, Washington was looking ahead to the next presidential race and the next U.S. Senate election in New York. With the impeachment trial over, it was said, President Clinton didn't matter any more.

"Clinton Playing Out Presidency" declared one of the nation's leading newspapers on its front page, departing from its usual good sense. Clinton, asserted the accompanying article, "soon will be one of the nation's youngest ex-presidents."

Some "Playing out his presidency" this particular article appeared at a time when Clinton had nearly two years to go in his second term. Consider for a minute how rare this happened in the comparable periods of other recent two-term presidents.

Ronald Reagan concluded far-reaching agreements with the Soviet Union in this respect at least, the first six years of his presidency were merely the pre-eminence. During Dwight D. Eisenhower's final two years, he confronted the U-2 crisis and ordered the CIA to begin planning for an invasion of Cuba.

Why does so much happen overseas during the final two years of a presidency? "There's the serendipity of what's going on in the world," says Richard Solomon, president of the U.S. Institute of Peace. "And then a president may feel he can't get much from domestic politics."

The newspaper article accurately reflected the mood of Washington during the weeks between the end of Clinton's impeachment trial and the beginning of the air strikes on Yugoslavia.

JIM MANN

The fallacious assumption was that what matters about the American presidency is a blend of politics and royal family. Since Clinton did not face reelection again, and since the Monica Lewinsky soap opera had ended, there was nothing more to cover.

So Washington was already moving on to Vice President Al Gore's campaign for the presidency (politics), People magazine's story about Chelsea Clinton (royal family) and, above all, Hillary Rodham Clinton's interest in becoming the junior senator from New York (both). What his gross logic overlooks is that any president — even a lame duck — is still in charge of U.S. foreign policy. At his command are American warplanes, cruise missiles, aircraft carriers and the other accoutrements of a $250 billion defense budget.

His power is what makes the presidency important. And that's where the focus of critical scrutiny should be, too. Of all the countless articles about Clinton by the White House press corps over the past year, how many have looked at his increasing penchant for craven logic over-zealousness, or questioned his questionable belief in the efficacy of air power?

Hollywood and a cynical public have contributed to the prevailing belief that politics counts above all and that foreign policy isn't really important. In the movie "Wag the Dog," an American president wages war mostly to divert attention from domestic scandal.

Well, there may be disagreements about American policy toward Kosovo, but no one seems to be claiming that the whole crisis is a "Wag the Dog" diversion. Indeed, since Clinton's impeachment trial ended, his foreign policies are being judged — as they should be — on their merits, not their connection to a running soap opera.

The military conflict in Yugoslavia might drag on for months or wider. And even if it doesn't, there may well be another two or three foreign policy crises before Clinton leaves office. North Korea and Iraq loom as potential flash points. Over the past week, Defense Secretary William Cohen took a series of little-noticed actions that underscored the Pentagon's worries about having to wage war in two or more places at the same time.

The Pentagon first ordered one aircraft carrier, the USS Theodore Roosevelt, and its battle group to move into the Adriatic Sea instead of its planned deployment in the Persian Gulf. To make sure America preserved its military presence in the waters near Iraq, the Pentagon then ordered another aircraft carrier, the USS Kitty Hawk, to move from its home base in Japan to the Persian Gulf.

But that action took an American aircraft carrier away from East Asia. Would North Korea be tempted to provoke a crisis now, when America's attention and resources were diverted elsewhere? Cohen quickly ordered a U.S.-based fighter squadron, B-52 warplanes and an aircraft carrier to be ready for deployment in Asia on short notice.

History did not stop with the end of the Cold War. And Clinton did not become irrelevant with the end of his impeachment trial. Whatever you think of Clinton, his presidency is not over. Not by a long shot.

Jim Mann covers foreign policy for the Los Angeles Times.

Malaysia's killer virus has scientists stumped

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia — A tropical virus that has killed dozens of people in Malaysia is the first of its kind and virologists are stumped as to how it spreads, an American health official said Thursday.

Nine scientists from the United States and other experts from Australia, Taiwan and Japan arrived in Malaysia several weeks ago to help the Southeast Asian country determine the nature of the virus believed to be spreading from pigs to humans.

The CDC said Thursday that 239 people are believed to have been sickened in the last six months in Malaysia. At least 111 have died.

"This is a new, previously unrecognized virus found in humans," Tom Skinner, a spokesman for the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta told the Associated Press by telephone. "This virus has never been seen before."

The scientists have been tramping through pig pens and farming communities where the virus first appeared, wearing gloves, gowns and battery-operated respirators while visiting the worst-hit areas.

After 18 years, U.S. asks for talks with Libya

UNITED NATIONS — Eighteen years after breaking diplomatic relations, the United States has asked U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan to arrange face-to-face talks with Libya, U.S. officials said Thursday.

Logistics have to be worked out and no date has been set, but Paul Durbush, the deputy U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, confirmed Thursday that "we're willing to have such a meeting."

The U.S. initiative, first reported in The Boston Globe, marks a significant change in Washington's attitude toward Libya, although Moammar Gadhafi's government still remains a pariah state suspected of terrorist activities and subject to tough U.S. sanctions. Libya's U.S. assets also remain frozen, and Americans are essentially banned from engaging in trade or traveling to Libya.

Maid wins after suing employer for abuse

HONG KONG — An Indonesian maid who says she was slapped around, beaten and treated poorly has won a $385 award from her employer, but critics said the amount did not compensate for her suffering.

A Hong Kong court on Wednesday also ordered Maria Mui, 50, to pay a $64 fine for assaulting her maid, Rukiayah, who arrived in Hong Kong in November.

Mui covered her face from news photographers as she was driven away from court on Wednesday. Advocacy groups on Thursday called Mui's fine a pittance, given the abuse Rukiayah had put up with.

Huge gold nugget might have been taken illegally

SYDNEY, Australia — The June 2 auction in New York of a 56-pound gold nugget found in Australia is in doubt, because it may have been taken out of the country illegally.

The anonymous owner of the nugget had not applied for an export permit to send it to New York, where it is scheduled to be auctioned by Sotheby's, said Sue Leech, a spokeswoman for Australia's Communications, Information, Technology and

Deadline arrives for 'Science Trek'

TWIN FALLS — Today is the deadline to register for "Science Trek," a spring science adventure for kids in grades three — five that will feature David Heil, host of Public Broadcasting's "Newton's Apple."

The event will be at the Herrert Center for Art and Science on the campus of the College of Southern Idaho on Saturday, April 17.

Heil will present "It's a Gas," a scientific demonstration of gases, during an afternoon that will include other science adventures.

Science Trek is co-sponsored by Idaho Public Television, the Herrert Center for Art and Science, the Museum of Natural History in Pocatello. It's patterned after events held at the Pocatello museum.

The participants, children must register today. Cost is $25.

For registration information, call Darcy Thornborrow at 733-9254.

State education chief, to hold TF workshops

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley educators can meet with state schools chief Marilyn Howard and her staff about new laws affecting education and the state education budget.

The workshops will be held from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday at Twin Falls Plaza in a follow-up to the 1999 legislative session.

Lawmakers passed nearly 30 laws this year that affected education, including new requirements for reading instruction in kindergarten through third grades.

Here is the agenda:

- 8 to 8:30 a.m. — Sign-in, continental breakfast.
- 8:30 to 9:45 a.m. — Basics of public school finance.
- 10 to 11 a.m. — Basics of public school finance continued.
- 11 a.m. to noon — Public school appropriation and distribution factor.
- 1:30 to 4 p.m. — Legislative overview, laws passed in the 1999 session, or public school finance interactive sessions.

Postal Service will extend tax day hours

TWIN FALLS — The U.S. Postal Service will extend hours at its Twin Falls offices on tax day.

On April 15, the downtown post office at 253 Second Ave. W. will have window hours from 7:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. and lobby hours from 5 a.m. to midnight.

On April 15 at the Pioneer Station, 1376 Fillmore, window hours will be 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., and lobby hours will be 5 a.m. to midnight.

The last mail collection from boxes and racks on the two buildings will be at midnight on tax day.

For more information, call 1-800-875-8777, or 1-800-ASK-USPS.

State Tax Commission to stay open longer

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho State Tax Commission's Twin Falls office will extend its hours in April to help taxpayers file their taxes on time.

The office, at 1038 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., Suite 10, will be open for telephone and walk-in assistance from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday. Weekday office hours will be extended to 7 p.m. April 12-15.

Taxpayers can call 736-3040 or 1-800-972-7658. Staff will be on hand to answer questions about tax preparation, and visitors can pick up state and federal income tax forms. Walk-ins also can use a direct phone line to the Internal Revenue Service for federal tax questions, a commission news release said.

To check the status of your refund, call 1-888-228-5770. Taxpayers who file with traditional paper forms on April 15 usually will wait six to 10 weeks for their refund, as opposed to a typical wait of seven to 10 days when filing via the Internet, the state tax commission said.

Parents reunite with bone marrow donor

By Thomas Gilbert
Times-News writer

JEROME — Roger Simons, mother of the anniversary of the death of "Lizzy" Wiersma was celebrated in the hospital for a bone marrow transplant.

Lizzy had leukemia for half of her lifetime. The disease was an obstruction for about 2 1/2 years, but miraculously...

On March 2, 1998, Lizzy's father, Gilbert Simons, was selected as a bone marrow donor for the Jerome girl. Gilbert was from Lizzy, who died during the fall of September 1998.

After three months of chemotherapy, the cancer returned. Lizzy's parents, Cindy and Roger Wiersma, at the time...

Clear, sweet, like Wiersma's was for Lizzy. Cindy had to be strong. She had to be strong for Lizzy.

"Our trip was wonderful. We're like family," Cindy Wiersma said.

Wiersma and Gilbert commemorated their meeting at the hospital.

"It was sad because Lizzy would have been here with us if things had worked out," Gilbert said.

Gilbert and Wiersma agree that the relationship between Lizzy and Gilbert is full of memories.

For example, legal reasons keep the complete donor match anonymous for a time. While Lizzy was preparing for the transplant, Gilbert was known at hospital addressed to her "sister."

About half way through the transplant process, Gilbert identified to call her Elizabeth, not knowing that was Lizzy's like family," Cindy Wiersma said.

Laura Babbitt/Report for the Times-News
Lizzy Wiersma, Gilbert, and South Carolina resident donated bone marrow to treat Lizzy.

It was Gilbert's great-grandmother's name, and the name she had picked out for a daughter.

Wiersma said she almost fell out of her chair when she read the letter.

"It was kind of like Lizzy and Lynett had a connection right from the start," she said.

Gilbert feels the connection too.

"I know genetically you have to be similar to be a match," she said. "Being a marrow donor, I feel like she's part of me, and I'm part of her."

Potential effect of INEEL flooding may have been underestimated

By N.S. Nokedvent
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Federal officials may have underestimated the potential effect of future flooding at the Idaho Nuclear Engineering and Environmental Laboratory, an Idaho environmental group says.

A review of U.S. Geological Survey reports shows that high flows from the Big Lost River could inundate existing and proposed nuclear waste disposal sites at INEEL, says a report from the Environmental Defense Institute.

Federal plans to clean up contamination from the former Idaho Chemical Processing Plant, now known as the Idaho Nuclear Heritage and Engineering Center, includes a landfill for radioactive waste disposal.

"The proposal to bury radioactive waste in the Snake River Basin is the primary drinking and irrigation water supply of southern Idaho," the report said. "The fact that this has been recognized by the U.S. Rep. Sten Jensen, who has introduced legislation to prevent radioactive waste from being buried in the Snake River Basin, is a positive step."

The choice to locate it at the Idaho Chemical Processing Plant is a mistake for the same reason that burying contaminated soils and sediments in the high-level waste tanks used to house waste at the Radioactive Waste Management Alliance.

"The choice to locate it at the Idaho Chemical Processing Plant is a mistake for the same reason that burying contaminated soils and sediments in the high-level waste tanks used to house waste at the Radioactive Waste Management Alliance."

Defense Institute. All are vulnerable to flooding, from high flows of the Big Lost River — or a breach in the Official INEEL says they are aware of the USGS reports cited in the institute report, and the information has been considered in cleanup plans.

The Big Lost River runs just north of the Chem. Plant, whose northern half is within the river's 100-year flood plain. And the river is within two miles of and 40 feet higher than the Radioactive Waste Management Center.

ENEEL's 15 years past irradiated the basalt waste site, setting radioactive waste containers adrift. And containing them from the soil around underground tanks used to store highly radioactive liquid already is leaking into "the drinking water aquifer at levels of concern," INEEL officials say.

To prevent future floods, INEEL officials built dikes around the waste area and diversion structures to spread high flows over the desert and away from INEEL facilities.

The institute report cites a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers study that concluded that a serious flood could wash out the containment dikes flooding the northern half of the Chem. Plant.

INEEL officials acknowledge the possibility that the diversion structure could...

Cheese company pleads guilty to ammonia spill

By N.S. Nokedvent
Times-News writer

RICHFIELD — Avonmore West Inc. pleaded guilty Thursday to an ammonia spill that killed more than 64,000 fish in the Little Wood River last year and offered to pay $249,000 in fines and restitution.

The company pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court in Boise to one felony count of violating the federal Clean Water Act.

On Sept. 2, two 55-gallon drums of ammonia-laced water fell off a forklift at Avonmore's Richfield cheese factory. The ammonia was from the plant's cooling system.

Plant workers washed the spilled liquid into a drain that empties into the Little Wood River. The ammonia left a trail of dead fish from Richfield to Shoshone — about 18 miles.

Company President Dave Thomas said the time that the fish kill could have been the result of problems at the city's sewage treatment plant, or from an algae-killing chemical used in nearby canals.

He also conceded that the kill could have been linked to the ammonia spill at the company's Richfield plant.

But the plant did not notify state officials.

News of the spill reached state Division of Environmental Quality and Department of Fish and Game officials the next day, said Mike McMasters, Twin Falls-based prevention and certification supervisor for the Idaho Division of Environmental Quality.

"Avonmore did not provide us notification of the spill," McMasters said at the time. "They should have."

Proper company procedure at the time was to notify a supervisor or the company's environmental manager, Executive Vice President Jeff Williams said Thursday.

"That didn't happen," he said. "The employee did not follow company procedure."

But company officials have learned some lessons from the incident that include better employee training and an environmental policy manual.

"Our goal is to make sure it won't happen again," Williams said.

The Environmental Protection Agency's Central Pollution Control District and the Idaho State Police assisted in investigating the incident.

Avonmore faces a $100,000 fine, $100,000 in restitution for damage to the river and $49,000 to Fish and Game and DEQ.

Richfield plant manager Hugh Royal, 39, also pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor violation of the Clean Water Act. Royal still manages the plant.

Sentencing for both is scheduled for June 28, 1999.

Apparent compromise puts bull trout on threatened list

RENO, Nev. (AP) — The Fish and Wildlife Service handed off an earlier draft of the listing and declared the bull trout threatened in Nevada and Idaho on Thursday. The move allows the Radioactive Waste Management Alliance.

The Fish and Wildlife Service handed off an earlier draft of the listing and declared the bull trout threatened in Nevada and Idaho on Thursday. The move allows the Radioactive Waste Management Alliance.

Environmentalists said the federal listing was threatened under the Endangered Species Act should provide enough protection to save Nevada's last remaining population of bull trout in northeast Nevada.

Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., said it was a good compromise that balances the needs of the ranch and fish populations and the County officials who were rebuilding a washed out road in a neighborhood along the river in northeast Nevada.

Federal officials will work with state regulators in Nevada and Idaho over the next two years to develop a long-term...

FFA broadens young horizons

By Jennifer Sandman
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Students from the Magic Valley's small towns say FFA is their ticket to see the world.

About 1,400 FFA members in the blue corduroy jackets will be at the College of Southern Idaho through Saturday for the association's 68th annual state leadership convention.

FFA introduces them to new people and places. And that means a lot to students growing up in small farming towns where opportunities can be limited.

"Dietrich is mostly cows and plows," said Joel Connor, 14, a high school freshman from Dietrich.

School sports are about the only other activities that take...

Families of slain tourists reward hunter who found charred car

MODESTO, Calif. (AP) — It took a moment for the deer hunter to realize what he had stumbled upon.

In the remote woods of the Sierra foothills, the charred car barely resembled the description he'd seen in the papers and on TV.

A few spots of red paint were his first clues. When he spotted the license plate on the ground and recognized the number, he suddenly remembered the three missing sightseers whose rental car the FBI had been trying to find for weeks.

He scooped up the plate, drove his beat-up jeep home and called police.

On Thursday the families of Carolee Sund, her 15-year-old daughter, Julie, and friend Silvina Pelosio presented Jim Powers with the $50,000 reward they had posted for information on the car's whereabouts.

The retired carpenter's discovery last month was the biggest break for authorities trying to find out what happened to the trio during their trip to Yosemite National Park in mid-February.

The next day, the burnt bodies of Mrs. Sund and Silvina, a 16-year-old Argentine exchange student, were found in the woods.

Julie's body was found a week later near a reservoir outside the park — an hour's drive from the car.

Without Mr. Powers finding the car, I don't know where we'd be in this investigation," said Powers, 56, a Modesto mother, Carolee Carrington.

"She's our hero, by the way," said her husband, Francis Carrington.

A shy and nervous Powers, fidgeting behind the microphones at a news conference in front of a Modesto hotel, said anybody could find the car.

The 40-year-old from Long Barn said he regularly hunts in the woods of Route 108 where he found it. He was out target shooting the day he found the car.

"I found the car out in the woods and it looked like to me the one everyone was looking for," he said under overcast skies.

Powers, dressed in a gray wool sweater and corduroy pants and joined by his girlfriend and two young daughters, said he would give the money to send his children to college.

"It's a hell of a way to get it, but I'll put it to good use," he said.

The families of the victims said the money was well spent for a lead that has now landed the case before a federal grand jury in Fresno.

Witnesses began testifying Wednesday behind closed doors in Fresno district court, including a Modesto woman arrested on drug-possession and child abuse charges last month.

The 36-year-old woman, one of four witnesses who testified at the secret court session on Wednesday, is an acquaintance of a 42-year-old man arrested last week after a shootout with Modesto police.

Both he and his 32-year-old half-brother, arrested on a parole violation last month, are charged with sex assault records who have been questioned extensively by FBI agents in the "Toornap" case.

Babysitter gets prison sentence

POCAJONTO, Wyo. — A district judge blasted the government agencies that could have — but did not — prosecute and then skipped a four-year prison term on the woman who was caring for an 8-month-old child when the infant suffocated accidentally during a pillow on the head.

Sixth District Judge William Woodland said the agencies supervising the families in the household where seven children in all were living failed by leaving any of those adults responsible for a child whom "no one of them should have had care of children."

And there on Wednesday, Woodland sentenced Karlene Newsom, 34, to spend at least five and up to 10 years in prison for her role in the death of Miranda James-Lee August.

Newsom was caring for her own daughter while she was living with Joseph Newsom, 44, and his three children, and together the couple was caring for Miranda and two other children of Carmelita Shaw and Dacia Johns. Shaw and Johns were in jail at the time on drug charges. They have both since been placed on probation.

Neither Newsom nor Newman admitted inflicting the blow that left the baby with a fractured skull, but each was convicted of being responsible for the infant's care while allowing the injury to occur.

Newsom, who has been convicted of a felony before, has been ordered to undergo a psychological evaluation before he is sentenced.

"We've been focusing resources and attention on seat belts, restraints and helmet laws while ignoring the risks children face living with irresponsible adults," Woodland said. "In my opinion, a crime was committed when the baby's own mother left the child in the first place, knowing the conditions and general atmosphere of the home." A Newsom, described by witnesses as "timid as a mouse," told Woodland she did not know who harmed the baby but accepted the fact that she had failed to properly care for her of the other six children in the house.

Public Defender John Souza sought some leniency because of Newsom's back that included being abused by her ex-husband and since she was the one who called authorities when she discovered the baby was not breathing.

But Deputy Bannock County Prosecutor Kay Lyon focused on a household essentially out of control, where children ages 8 months to 15 years were left to fend for themselves.

"The children were allowed to treat the baby like a pet, a puppy, a novelty," Lyon said. "It's imperative that people realize children, infants, depend on adults."

Kempthorne honors Air National Guard unit

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Air National Guard's 124th Logistics Group has been awarded the 1998 Governor's Outstanding Unit Citation.

Gov. Dirk Kempthorne presented the award on Thursday, recognizing the group for receiving the national award for maintenance effectiveness in 1998 and its effective participation in 11 disaster relief and community action projects last year. The unit is composed of 315 personnel, nearly half of them female.

BUHL

Maud R. Avery

Maud Avery, 85, of Buhl, went to be with her loving husband in heaven on Wednesday, April 7, 1999, at Snake River Rehabilitation and Living Center in Buhl.

She was born to William and Anna Miller on Sept. 16, 1913, in Cass County, Nebraska. She married Gene Avery in Riverton, Nebraska on Aug. 24, 1932. Their marriage lasted for 51 years until Gene's death in 1963. They moved to Buhl in 1936 where they farmed and later moved to McCollum where they raised milk cows. She worked in the kitchen at the Buhl Elementary School for 15 years until retiring in 1979. She enjoyed quilting, sewing and embroidery work. Her life was spent caring, doing yard work, sewing and quilting for others. Rarely did a Sunday day pass that she wasn't in her yard working in her flower beds. I am the gentle autumn's rain When you awaken in the morning's hush. I am the soft whispering rustle Of quiet birds in circled flight. I am the star that shines at night. Do not stand at my grave and weep. I am not there. I do not sleep. I am a thousand winds that blow. I am the diamond glints on snow. I am the sunlight on ripened grain. I am the gentle autumn's rain When you awaken in the morning's hush. I am the soft whispering rustle Of quiet birds in circled flight. I am the star that shines at night. IDAHO IN BRIEF

Salmon run may be doomed this year

BLAINE — A muggy spring and summer chinook salmon run is likely to miss a season this year for hatchery-raised fish on the Clearwater and Little Salmon rivers.

"Right now we're not looking at there being an opportunity for a sport fisher even if the numbers go up a little bit," Fish and Game Department fisheries coordinator Sharon Kiefer said.

The chinook returning this spring and summer are from the 1995 run, the poorest on record in history.

That year just 1,728 fish returned. Barely 680 were hatchery raised. The 20-year average is 19,310 fish.

As a result, just 30 percent of the fish needed to meet spawning goals are expected to return to hatcheries at Ahsahka and Kookkia. On the Rapid River near Riggins, only about 42 percent of the fish needed to spawn are expected.

Land managers mull growing bear population

BOISE — Recent increases in grizzly bear births are prompting federal land managers to consider more than how best to protect and enhance bear habitat in the Greater Yellowstone Ecosystem.

Managers of the seven national forests and two national parks that comprise the ecosystem agreed Wednesday to work together on strategies for coping with nuisance bears.

Grizzlies in the lower 48 states have been protected as threatened under the federal Endangered Species Act since 1978. Recent progress in recovery efforts has meant many more cubs are being born in the region these days.

"If those cubs distribute the way we think they're going to distribute, this could be the whole discussion within two years," Caribou Basin National Forest Supervisor Jerry Reese said.

Border Basin National Forest Supervisor Tom Fuchlerz said his increasing concern is that grizzlies will soon start showing up in valleys where the forests and parks.

"And we're not ready to deal with that right now."

Feds choose new director for export center

BOISE — The U.S. Department of Commerce has chosen a new director for its Idaho Export Assistance Center.

James Hillwig will replace Stephen Thompson, who retired in July of last year.

He comes to Idaho from eastern Washington, where he served as the director of the Spokane Export Assistance Center.

The Idaho center serves as the state office for the U.S. and Foreign Commercial Service, an agency of the U.S. Department of Commerce's International Trade Administration.

Compiled from wire reports.

Game commission readies for another tight year

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Fish and Game Commission, facing another year of fiscal parsimony, will reallocate 10 percent of its budget for the coming year from other operations to replace equipment and repair facilities.

"We don't intend to spend it on our most pressing capital outlay needs," Department of Fish and Game Interim Director Jerry Mallet said Thursday after winning approval for the $800,000 plan.

Commissioners also voted to have the department fine-tune a $4 million fee increase proposal as a first step toward returning to the Legislature for financial help next year. The new fee plan will be reviewed next month.

Despite the fact that two of the five commissioners on hand will be off the panel by midyear, they unanimously supported Mallet's request to develop a plan for hiking license and tag rates that likely will be only slightly revised from the one rejected by lawmakers this year.

Mallet acknowledged the seven-member commission might have a different view once Gov. Dirk Kempthorne in the coming weeks replaces outgoing members Richard Meiers of Eagle, Keith Carlson of Lewiston and Roy Brown of Soda Springs, as well as Jeff Siddoway of Terretton, who resigned last month.

But he said it was important for the agency to begin preparing for another attempt to put its financial house in order even as its economic situation worsens.

"If we wait for them to come on and get up to speed and make those decisions, it's going to be too late for us to have much chance for success," said Mallet, who took over after Fish and Game Director Steve Menley was fired by the commission last month.

Meiers, Carlson and Brown joined commission Chairman Nancy Hadley of Sandpoint to vote to oust Menley. The move prompted a disgruntled Siddoway to quit before his term ended and angry legislators to drop a compromise plan for three years of phased-in fee hikes.

POWER OUTAGE

CSI theater essays M*A*S*H-meister's 'Mastergate'

By Cathy Walworth
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Put pretty ordinary people into positions of power.

Stir. Yield. Pompos. posturing politicians. The recipe has been the same since the days of Caesar. "What's a s'prito to do but to highlight the people's plight?"

And so Larry Gelbart has. Gelbart, creator of TV's "M*A*S*H" and the theater's "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" and "City of Angels," has poked a pointed finger into our eye with "Mastergate." The College of Southern Idaho Theater Department will perform it starting Wednesday.

Laine Steel, a CSI theater professor and director of "Mastergate," describes it as political satire (the best kind), written in 1984 just after the Iran-Contra scandal.

"The tone is similar to 'M*A*S*H,' and it is a farce on controversies from the Civil War to the present," Steel said. He knew it would be funny as soon as he heard about the play.

"The setting is a joint commit-

Bluegrass ace Lewis brings her sound to CSI

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Laurie Lewis, twice-named International Bluegrass Music Association Female Vocalist of the Year, is preparing to be inducted into her Berkeley High School Hall of Fame.

In a phone interview last month, she said the ceremony is scheduled for April 23, but she views high school halls of fame with mixed emotion.

"I was so miserable in high school," she said, with a laugh.

She's happy now, working as a band-leader/singer/songwriter/fiddler/guitarist/bassplayer ... all those slashes.

It began when Lewis was growing up in the San Francisco Bay area. She developed a love of music at Berkeley folk festivals and went on to develop her musical talents in what she now terms "bluegrass-based acoustic music." She spends about half of each year touring, but has never been to Twin Falls until now.

When she's home, she likes to "dig around in my garden, it's a mostly upkeep of what happens to decide to grow" and ride her bike. She thinks people could be happier if they would make music a bigger part of their lives, as in singing or playing an instrument around the house, just for fun.

"But we turn on the TV or go to a movie to be entertained," she said.

In Twin Falls, Lewis will share her love of bluegrass by performing songs from her latest album, "Seeing Things," and from Tom Rozum's new album, "Jubilee."

Rozum, who plays mandolin, fiddle, mandola and guitar, performs with Lewis, as does Todd Phillips, who plays mandolin and bass.

Laurie Lewis will perform with Tom Rozum, left, and Todd Phillips Saturday night. Lewis has a new bluegrass album coming out in May. Her other albums will be available at the Twin Falls concert.

Ian McKellen shines in a whale of a tale

By Kenneth Turan
Los Angeles Times

Great performances don't have to appear in great films; they don't raise everything else to their level; they can't even be counted on to make co-stars look good. All they do is astonish, which is what Ian McKellen does in "Gods and Monsters."

Though he's also currently appearing in "Apt Pupil," McKellen, one of England's finest theatrical actors, shows up only sporadically on screen. Wildly remembered for recreating his stage role in the fascist-themed "Richard III," McKellen usually opts for smaller films, and his work always impeccable, reaches a remarkable new plateau here.

Possibly that's because James Whale, the real-life character he plays, shares some biographical elements with the actor. Like McKellen, Whale was from the north of England, worked successfully in the movie business, and by the standards of the time (half a century ago and more), was frank and open about his homosexuality.

'Gods and Monsters'

Q What's in it for Ian McKellen, Brendan Fraser, Lynn Collins, and the rest of the cast?
A McKellen's playing the director of the film, James Whale. Fraser is playing the young man who agrees to pose for him. Collins is playing the young woman who agrees to pose for him. The rest of the cast is playing the young man who agrees to pose for him.

Whale was also the director who brought the world the Boris Karloff-starring "Frankenstein" and, in fact, helped design the monster's unerring look. This film's title is part of an optimistic toast to "a new age of gods and monsters" that comes from that celebrated sequel, 1935's "The Bride of Frankenstein," also directed by Whale. "Gods and Monsters," written and directed by Bill Condon, picks up Whale's life in 1918. He hadn't worked in film for some time, devoting himself instead to painting. Just home from the hospital, he's recovering from a stroke that, to the concern of good friend David Leves (David Dukes), has created a kind of public on his mind, causing memories of the past to swirl as real as the here and now.

Not all of Whale's hallucinations are captured, however. Much of the changes of these hallucinations are captured, however. Much of the changes of these hallucinations are captured, however. Much of the changes of these hallucinations are captured, however.

Expectably dressed and as well-mannered as his meticulous stage work, Whale approaches Boone with some classic spitter-and-foam-mouthed, bopping-the-young-man will agree to pose for him. You have the most unromantic still, your nose is very expressive." Whale says with a supremely astonishing voice that a capable of charming a woman without his necessary charm, including Boone in an unorthodox, but long, white, dramatic expression that is to be "I don't care."

Ian McKellen, left, with Brendan Fraser, puts in a great performance in "Gods and Monsters."

Tickets, which are $10 for adults and $5 for children, are available at Albertson's stores in Twin Falls and Burley, from Riddle's Food and Drug in Jerome and Goodies from Simerly's in Wendell and at Cosmic Jolt in Buhl.

Library marks 90th year

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Public Library will celebrate its 90th birthday in conjunction with National Library Week, which starts Sunday.

A celebration is planned for Wednesday from 6:30 to 9 p.m. A birthday cake-cutting ceremony will occur at 6:30 with the grand opening of the Twin Falls Library Foundation's Book Sale at 7 p.m. Music will be supplied during the evening by the Jim Hain Jazz Combo. Special exhibits are planned, and a "balloons galore" event will be held in the children's services department.

Tours and demonstrations will be available all day. Cookies and punch will be served. A check-out-yourself day is planned for Monday. Help the library qualify for a 3M Company-sponsored drawing to win up to $2,500 to buy library books.

On Tuesday, a pirate puppet show and craft event are planned for 7 p.m. in the children's services department.

Library volunteers will be honored at an appreciation tea on Tuesday, and at 8 p.m. that evening, the film "Sagebrush Empire" will be shown in the adult services department.

On Thursday and April 16, special demonstration of the library's automated catalog and magazine databases will be available. Special tours of the Idaho Room and the technical services area will be offered.

Every day and next week, there will be a drawing for a book. To enter, complete a survey.

JUMP to hold auditions

TWIN FALLS — Auditions for the JUMP Co. production "Annie" will be held Thursday and April 16-17 for children ages 12-18. A special audition will be held at 10 a.m. April 17 for the two parts for 9-11 year olds.

Auditions by invitation only and participants must become a member of JUMP Co. To audition, call Cindy Kotler at 734-3054.

The show will be held at 8 p.m. July 13-17 at the Twin Falls High School Roper Auditorium. Roy Hays is the producer and Lori Chandler is the musical director.

JUMP Co. annual memberships cost $20 for the child-to-audition-for-both the summer show and the variety show. The company's purpose is to involve youth in the performing arts and promote higher education. College scholarships are given to outstanding seniors annually. Hays is the director and Lori Chandler is the musical director.

Beck's latest album sales are a wreck

New York Daily News and Knight Ridder News Service

Lately, the Beck song "Loser" has taken on new meaning: 1995's "voice of the slacker generation," who later became the "voice of post-modern rock," has seen his latest album, "Mutations," wither on the charts.

Since its release in November, it's all but disappeared despite good reviews and strong modern-rock airplay.

Beck's last two albums went the other way on the charts. "Mellow Gold," from 1994, sold a million copies; '96's "Odelay" moved 1.9 million. The momentum from those records should have made his new one sell way more than the 235,168 copies it did in its crucial opening six weeks.

The question is: Does Beck, or his record company, DGC, really care?

So far, they've been sending mixed signals. Several months back, DGC let everyone know that the brooding, acoustic "Mutations" shouldn't be considered the real follow-up to the zippy "Odelay." In fact, Beck didn't even intend DGC to release the record at first, preferring instead to slip it out on his original indie imprint, Bong Load.

Once DGC heard it, however, they wanted very much to put it out. Sources say Beck first said he wouldn't do any press or tour dates to promote "Mutations," the better to position it as an artistic reach rather than as a major commercial bid. Then Beck turned around and did do bly live up to given his hobbled promotion.

But even if "Mutations" sinks without a trace, Beck is no one-hit wonder. He has since established himself as one of those guinea lights of pop music that comes along far too infrequently.

In an age dominated by one-hit wonders and acts that repeat the same sound time after time, Beck is restlessly inventive, as comfortable offering up cutting-edge, fun, pop-friendly hip-hop as blues guitar licks that sound lifted directly from a 78 from the early 1930s.

Although he doesn't resemble him stylistically, Beck has been compared to Prince at his quick-change rock/funk/R&B '80s peak. In both cases, each CD has a distinctive flavor and feel; every song seems to complement the whole, and none seems out of place.

And as with the work of the Purple One in those heady days, each Beck CD has added to our appreciation of him; there's a method to the madness. We don't feel as though he's changing just for the sake of it, but that he's really finding new things to say and new ways to say them.

some press and booked a few live dates. He still hasn't made a video to support the album.

The result may have given Beck and DGC the worst of both worlds. The original hedging on who would release the record sent a big "stay away" signal to all but Beck's most hard-core fans, accusing for its poor opening on Billboard's Top 200, at No. 13. Yet the fact that DGC finally went ahead and put it out anyway left an inevitable impression of the album as a legit follow to "Odelay," a role it couldn't possi-

MTV veejay Carson Daly will go on the air April 17 with finalists in MTV's Wanna Be a VJ Tea Contest.

Five questions for Carson Daly, king of all veejays

NEW YORK (AP) — As the host of MTV's daily music-and-interview show, "Total Request Live," veejay Carson Daly has what many young people consider to be one of the coolest jobs in the world. (For the uninitiated: veejay is a video jockey as deejay is to — well, you get it.)

Daly, 25, is not too much of any one thing. He's funny, but very understated. He's smart, but not intimidating. He's good-looking, but he's not a pretty boy. Sitting in the veejay's chair in MTV's Times Square studios, Carson seems as interested in talking to Marilyn Manson as he is chatting with his viewers.

Remember last year's veejay search? Spiky-haired Jesse Camp, all of 18, beat out 4,000 contestants and made MTV unpredictable and fun to watch. Camp sold MTV. "To be a veejay? Cancel. It's like being president of the United States, and MTV is my White House."

On April 17, finalists in MTV's Wanna Be a VJ Tea Contest will go on the air with Daly for four hours. Viewers will pick the winner. Auditions were held this week in Los Angeles and Chicago and will move on to New York City Monday and Tuesday. Twelve semifinalists will be selected; eight from New York, two from Los Angeles and two from Chicago. MTV will narrow the list to five finalists.

Q. Are you going to miss Jesse Camp?

A. Yes, I'm going to miss his cutting habits especially. Like ketchup on cole slaw. He's just fun to watch, eat. But I'm going to miss him primarily because he got such a great bite here. I mean, he could do anything he wanted, and I lived through him.

Q. Who was your favorite original MTV veejay?

A. I remember Martha Quinn more than anybody, mainly because my sister's name is Quinn. We did a "Where are they now?" veejay thing and I got to meet all of them. They were my constant reminder of whether or not I should become an MTV veejay. I never made a decision like No, I'm not going to become an MTV veejay because veejays do Nazema commercials after and that's it. I was like, "I'll be happy to do anything."

Q. Any advice for the latest veejay search contestants?

A. Keep it real and don't be scared. The first time I ever did anything on tape was my audition. MTV said, "Here's a camera crew. Go out and toss to some videos. And I thought, 'How difficult can that be?' I didn't know what it meant, but I didn't care."

Q. Do you ever watch yourself on television?

A. Never. Never ever. I can't stand it.

Q. For MTV's "Celebrity Deathmatch," who would win if you paired Serena Altschul against Martha Quinn and Kurt Loder against Jesse Camp?

A. Serena would definitely win, and Kurt would win, absolutely.

Sluggers finds home on the Frontier

By Jeff Rosen
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "Dead. Real dead." Nothing but a lot of dry land and snow. As a high school baseball pitcher making his way from the urban sprawl of Tacoma, Wash., to rural Magic Valley in 1995, slugger Adam Manley's first impressions of Idaho were bleak.

In time, however, he found that southern Idaho was not so local. Local radio stations played the rap music he enjoyed, and Twin Falls boasted more of the culture of CSI home.

Focus on

"Now, I love it here," Manley said in the dugout following practice Tuesday. So much so, in fact, that he struck around last summer as team manager before he came to Idaho. "I didn't want to leave."

Golden Eagle slugger Manley has found a home in Magic Valley. He has found a home in Idaho. He has found a home in the Golden Eagle slugger Manley's first impressions of Idaho were bleak.

Adam Manley
Baseball

Idaho lineup

Like many long-ball sluggers, Manley doesn't fancy himself a home run hitter. That might explain why he seems so thrilled each time he belts one out. After rounding the bases, he crosses the plate quickly to melt into an ear-to-ear grin.

"You never try to hit home runs," he said. "I'm just so happy when it happens. It's getting results of all the work I've put in. It's getting it done."

Manley's playing career began with a spot on his junior high school team. Unlike his father's football playing muscle, however, Washington Redskins gear Daxter Manley, baseball was his game from seventh grade on. He played no other sports in high school.

As a gritty freshman outfielder at CSI, he dislocated a shoulder diving back to second base in an early outting against Albion College, but played out the remainder of the season, tallying 10 homers and leading .330.

Today, he is one of several professional drafted players on coach Jim Walker's Golden Eagle roster. Twice selected by the New York Yankees, Manley is among the most likely on the team to enjoy a pro career when his days at Southern Idaho are through.

"I've been helping my swing out," Manley said. "I'm just trying to apply what he's told me: keeping balanced, swinging through the ball, just driving it in."

Walker believes modifying one of the toughest transitions facing college players — jumping to the bigs — exchanging aluminum bats for wood — should be little problem. Manley's beginning to agree.

"I've been swinging the wood in practice," he said. "I started off a little scared, but now I'm realizing it's just a bat."

With that, Manley smiles and pulls the plate out of the future. With the season ending quickly, his No. 1 goal is winning games at Southern Idaho. He wants to savor every minute he has left in a place that has grown on him.

His home is here. His time is now.

"This field, the people I've met...," he says, looking out across the diamond.

Assistant coach (Bomber) Walker (pitching coach) Bobby (Maurice), they've been like father figures to me," he says, and then, "It's going to be tough to leave."

QUESTION AND ANSWER

1. What's your favorite subject in school? I want to go into elementary education. I've always liked math. There are a lot of adults who look at you when you're going wrong.
2. You've been swinging wood in practice? Yes, I can't wait to get it in a game and swing with wood. I want to see the wood.
3. With a .500 mark in conference, has it been a tough year? We put a lot of pressure on ourselves at the beginning of the season and then dealing with pressure is good. It helps me get things done, because you can't want to fail.
4. What's your dream? To become a professional baseball player. I want to see what it's like to be a professional baseball player. I want to see what it's like to be a professional baseball player.

Eagle forecast: More inactivity?

Weather in Salt Lake might cause CSI to sit idle for another weekend

By Jeff Rosen
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Last week, a pair of scheduled doubleheaders at Colorado Northwestern Community College were straggled due to crummy weather—and Southern Idaho accomplished two of the scenic West Athletic Conference baseball ladder with many an inning's worth.

While the Golden Eagles (8-6 in conference, 22-11 overall) sat idle in Colorado last Friday and Saturday, former No. 4 Utah Valley State College lost four times to Dixie, and then No. 5 Snow College dropped three of four to Dixie.

Those teams' combined seven losses paved the way for the Golden Eagles to assume sole possession of fourth place on Monday, their highest standing since mid-March.

Today and Saturday, after 14 days of inactivity and lingering frustration following those cancellations in Rangely, Golden Eagle coach Jim Walker had hoped to continue the upward climb the hard way — on the field at Salt Lake Community College (13-7, 20-12) in a pair of 10 a.m. doubleheaders.

"Not playing really hurt us," Walker said. "It was really frustrating, because we needed to play. You can't go over, shoot, 10 days and not play live."

They may have to wait a little longer.

Snow forecast along the Wasatch Front today and Saturday presented Salt Lake officials to cancel the rest of doubleheaders early Thursday.

Discussion later in the day softened that stance, but as practice ended Thursday, Walker had no answers. His players left the clubhouse not knowing whether they'd play today or not.

"When we have to bug out, it's within an hour," he told them. "If we don't play, it's just did suggest Walker bring his team down to see if they could squeeze in some work. The two coaches were to talk further today at 6 a.m., with a bunch willing to travel on a moment's notice.

"We may play one (today), we may play one on Saturday," Walker said. "He may make the decision to come up, but I don't know. He's bucking it."

four here against No. 2 Eastern Utah. Two more against Utah State today in the season at the Dixie Tournament in St. George, Utah — Salt Lake won 8-1 before the Golden Eagles broke out with a run-riddled 11-1 victory — but the Bruins have only improved since then. Already, Salt Lake has equaled its conference record of a year ago when the Bruins completed SWAC play a dismal 13-17.

Two 6-foot-4 freshman pitchers from West Jordan, Utah, have keyed the turnaround. With a third-best SWAC earned run average of 3.38, right-hander Cheyenne Rushton is one of just two unbeaten pitchers remaining in the conference at 5-0 (the other is Dixie's Seth Johnson at 6-0).

Gooding boys vault to meet title

By Jeff Rosen
Times-News writer

GOODING — It was cold, it was wet and it was windy, but it was a fine day to be a Senator.

Paced by 11 first-place finishes through 36 events Thursday at the Eastern National Bank/Rural Telephone High School Track and Field Meet at the Idaho School for the Deaf and Blind, the hometown Gooding boys' team finished second overall in the girls' events and third among the girls.

Declo took top honors in girls team competition and finished second among the boys, with Raft River finishing second overall in the girls' events and third among the girls.

In an exciting pole-vault showdown, Raft River's Mitch James battled Eagle's Keyle of Gooding to the end. Both vaulters cleared 11 feet with ease, but only Keyle survived after topping 12 feet — a personal best.

His previous high had been an official 10-6, with 11-9 achieved only in practice.

"I've looked real good," said Gooding coach Kent Seifert. "To go 12 (feet) this early in the season is great."

Keyle, a senior wrestler, switched to vaulting this week to deal with the cooler weather, and it seemed to help.

"I just got the new one Tuesday," Keyle said. "It's been hard for me to find the correct pole."

Both Keyle and James buck the norm when it comes to ideal pole-vault physique — neither near six feet tall, but each at slender perhaps enough so to counter shorter stature.

"I feel more compact," Keyle said. "My athleticism and size seem to help. I've been lifting weights, running and getting in shape."

"When you're short like me," he added with a grin, "you can get up and turn around quickly. That's important."

Seifert's daughter Kira was a pleasant surprise for Gooding on the girls' side.

Several weeks ago, she tripped over a dog coming in from an eight-mile run and injured her leg. Thursday, she took second in the 1,600 behind teammate Jenny Nelson, and second again in the 3,200, where the Senators pulled a clean sweep of the top three spots — Nelson in first, Seifert in second and Anderson in third.

All in all, a solid day for coach Seifert's squad.

"Chris Patterson had an excellent day in the two-mile, and Trampas Robinson did well," Seifert said. "With the wind and the cold, I'll bet the temperature dropped 15 degrees at times out here."

The relays were all Declo. The Hornets swept the boys' relay events and all but the 400m relay on the girls' side. Raft River claimed that title, edging Declo by less than half a second.

Aaron's 715: Yes, it has been 25 years

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Let the celebrations begin and the bitterness end.

The Atlanta Braves started a season-long salute Thursday night honoring Hank Aaron on the 25th anniversary of his historic 715th home run that broke Babe Ruth's record.

Commissioner Bud Selig; NL president Len Coleman and Al Downing, who surrendered the historic home, were among the many on hand to honor Aaron during a 45-minute ceremony prior to the Braves' game against the Philadelphia Phillies.

"You know 25 years ago... when I hit that home run to beat the Babe's record, it was truly one of the most remarkable evenings that I have ever had in baseball," Aaron said following a two-minute standing ovation from the big crowd at 50,000-seat Turner Field.

"But tonight tops it all," said Aaron, now 65 and a Braves senior vice president. "This is truly a wonderful day for me."

The tribute has helped Aaron, who finished with 755 home runs, forget his somewhat bitter memories of the chase to beat Ruth.

"As he closed in on the record, Aaron received hundreds of thousands of parcels of mail, many filled with hate because there were people who did not like the idea that a black man from Mobile, Ala., was going to pass Ruth."

Also on Thursday was the unveiling of the Hank Aaron Award, which was announced in February. It will go to the best hitter in each league at the end of the season.

The celebration was the first that will take place during the regular season at major league parks to celebrate Aaron's feat.

Augusta humbles 'human' Duval in opener

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Forget about the rough, which looked more like a Marine's flat-top than the shaggy stuff typical of a U.S. Open.

Those are words on No. 177 No. 7 problem, for Davis Love III, who hit a sand wedge just 8 feet for birdie and a share of the lead with Scott McCarron and Brandel Chamblee in the first round of the Masters.

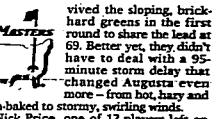

The real change Thursday at Augusta's National was David Duval: He finally looked human.

The hottest player in golf, the annotated favorite for the green jacket, Duval was tied for the lead at 3-under when he headed to the back nine as storm clouds gathered. The wraparound shades came off, and Duval came unglued.

He missed the next six greens. He snapped snatching three par-saving putts. He proved that not even the No. 1 player in the world is immune from the one constant at Augusta that may never change: its brick-hard greens and unpredictable winds.

"If you want to win this event, you better find a way to deal with it," said Duval, who was hanging on at 1-under when play was suspended by darkness.

Love, Chamblee and McCarron sur-vided the sloping, brick-hard green in the first round to share the lead at 69. Better yet, they didn't have to deal with a 95-minute storm delay that changed Augusta even more — from hot, hazy and sun-baked to stormy, swirling winds.

Nick Price, one of 12 players left on the course when play was suspended by darkness, was also at 3-under and will return this morning to play the 18th.

Defending champion Mark O'Meara birdied the 18th for the second straight round: This one got him to 2-under 70, along with Colin Montgomerie, Justin Leonard, defending U.S. Open champion Lee Janzen and former Masters champ Jose Maria Olazabal.

Two-time U.S. Open champion Ernie Els three-putted the 18th for double bogey to fall back to 71, tied with Greg Norman. Tiger Woods survived a triple bogey at No. 8 and finished at 72 to be with a couple of amateurs — Sergio Garcia and Trevor Immelman.

Two of the six greens Duval, missed were par-5. The real killer was No. 13, the easiest hole on the course, where

- Shot of the day: Justin Gonzales' iron to the 10th green that hit twice and rolled into the hole for an 18.
- Drop of the day: Tiger's slow even before a thunderstorm moved in and suspended action with 33 players still on the 18th.
- Disruption of a Masters round: The 1993 led off 65 minutes of rain that washed out the last 17 holes of the 18th hole on the course.

On Hank's big day, Phils outhammer Braves

The Associated Press

ATLANTA (AP) — On the night Hank Aaron was honored, it was only fitting that home runs helped decide the game. Too bad for him, his Atlanta Braves didn't win.

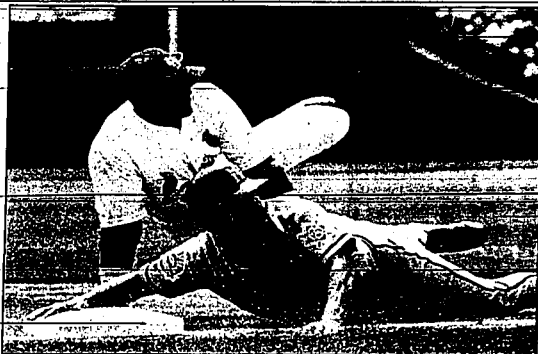

Scott Rolen and Rico Brogna hit solo homers and Fred Byrd shut down his former team on two hits in 7-3 innings as Philadelphia beat the Braves 6-3.

Before the game, Aaron was praised on the 25th anniversary of his 715th home run, breaking Bob Rueth's record. Commissioner Bud Selig, NL president Len Coleman and Al Downing, who surrendered the historic homer at Atlanta, were among those taking part in the 45-minute ceremony.

Aaron, now 65 and a Braves senior vice president, was part of a sellout crowd of 47,225 that watched Brogna and Rolen homer off a rain-soaked Atlanta Braves pitcher in the fifth inning (0-1).

The Braves' lead was extended to 6-3 in the eighth, but Jeff Brantley struck out Andrew Jones to end the inning. Byrd (4-0) was the winner until Brantley got his second save.

Former Atlanta closer Mark Wohlers again struggled in his second appearance of the season. He faced three batters, walking two and throwing a sacrifice bunt over first baseman Ryan Klesko's head.

Milwaukee's Fernando Vina, foreground, is tagged out by St. Louis' Fernando Tatis during first-inning action at Busch Memorial Stadium Thursday afternoon. Vina was caught stealing on the play.

Carl Everett hit a ground-rule double that bounced over the left-field fence, taking away Jeff Bagwell's chance to score from first base.

Beck got Richard Hidalgo on a game-ending groundout.

Sosa, who hit three homers last season off Jose Lima (0-1), was 0-for-3 with a walk.

Expos 5, Mets 1

MONTREAL — Vladimir Guerrero and Shane Andrews each drove in two runs and the Montreal Expos spoiled Orel Hershiser's debut for the New York Mets.

A near-sellout crowd of 43,918 at Olympic Stadium saw Miguel Batista (1-0) win the Expos' home opener.

Batista also had an infield single after starting his career 0-for-41. Ugueth Urbina got his first save.

Hershiser, signed as a free agent on March 25, allowed five runs — four earned — in four innings.

American League

Devil Rays 6, Orioles 3

BALTIMORE — It was more of the same for Tampa Bay and the Baltimore Orioles on Thursday: Dave Martinez had a big game, Cal Ripken took the night off and the Devil Rays won.

Martinez drove in three runs, giving him seven RBIs in two games, as the Devil Rays won their second straight from the Orioles after dropping the season opener.

Ripken, meanwhile, missed a second consecutive game for the first time since 1981. The third baseman, who has been bothered by a stiff back, hopes to be back in the

Orioles' lineup Friday night

Bobby Witt (1-0), making his debut with the Devil Rays, gave up two runs in six innings. Scott Erickson (0-1) allowed five runs and nine hits in seven innings.

Red Sox 4, Royals 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Former Royal Jose Offerman had two doubles, scored one run and drove in another as Boston swept the series.

In the three games against his old team, Offerman had two doubles, scored one run and drove in another as Boston swept the series.

Tim Wakefield (1-0), who was 3-0 against Kansas City last year, went 6 1/3 innings, giving up three hits and one run. Tom Gordon, another former Royal, pitched the ninth for his second save.

Jeff Suppan (0-1), facing his former teams for the first time, gave up two runs and six hits in six innings.

Twins 11, Blue Jays 9

MINNEAPOLIS — Rookie Corey Koskie drove in five runs and Marty Cordova matched a career high with four hits.

Koskie, who played 13 games with the Twins at the end of last season, drove in a run in the second, two in the third and two in the fourth as he went 3-for-4 while hitting ninth.

Mike Trombley (1-0) pitched 1 1/3 innings in relief of starter Eric Milton, who allowed six runs on eight hits in 3-2 1/3 innings. Rick Aguilera pitched the ninth for his first save.

Toronto starter Jose Hamilton (0-1) was even sicker in his AL debut, allowing seven runs and nine hits in 2 1/3 innings.

Former world No. 1 Boris Becker showed he is still a force, defeating South African Wayne Ferreira 6-4 (2-10) in his top match against Italy's Laurence Tieleman in the next round.

Berni Karbacher of Germany will meet No. 7 seed Joakim Bjorkman of Sweden in another quarterfinal.

Karbacher, ranked 117th and conqueror of second-seed Patrick Rafter of Australia in the first round, defeated New Zealand's Brett Steven 6-4, 6-0. Bjorkman reached the quarterfinals, beating Zimbabwe's Wayne Black 6-3, 6-1, 7-5 Thursday in the Gold Flake Open.

The Spaniard, trying to take the top spot from Pete Sampras, will face seventh-seed Rainer Schuttler of Sweden in the quarterfinals. Schuttler beat Germany's Andreas Vinciguerra 6-1, 6-2.

Meanwhile, Sweden's Mikael Tillstrom upset second-seeded Karol Kucera of Slovakia 7-5, 4-6, 6-2. Kucera was coming off a disappointing performance in the first round of the Davis Cup, enabling Slovakia to upset Sweden.

John Van Lottum of the Netherlands also advanced, beating Jonathan Starac of the United States 7-6 (14-12), 6-0, 7-6 (8-6).

Martin won't open quarterfinals

OLIBRAS, Portugal — Todd Martin advanced to the quarterfinals of the Estoril Open with a 7-5, 6-3 victory over Nuno Marques of Portugal on Thursday.

Second-seeded Marcelo Rios of Chile and No. 5 seed Gustavo Kuerten of Brazil, both clay-court specialists, also advanced.

„Rios, battling back after a four-month injury layoff, powered past fourth-seeded Spaniard Pablo Ancochea of Cuba 6-3, 6-2, 6-1, defeating Jiri Novak of the Czech Republic 6-3, 6-4.

Cardinals 9, Brewers 4

ST. LOUIS — Fernando Tatis' three-run, fifth-inning home mark him a two homer lead on teammate Mark McGwire and was his third in as many games at St. Louis.

Jim Abbott (0-1) lasted five innings and allowed six runs and five hits. The pitcher, who has just one hand, was 0-for-2 in the first regular-season at-bats of his career.

McGwire, who homered in the opener, was 0-for-3 with an intentional walk. Kent Mercker (1-0) got the win.

Giants 12, Padres 4

SAN FRANCISCO — Barry Bonds hit a two-run homer and Steve Benson had a three-run shot as San Francisco celebrated the final home opener at its wind-swept ballpark at Candlestick Point.

Steve Evers (1-0), who walked seven batters in five innings, added a three-run double as the Giants scored seven in the fourth.

Rich Aurilia had a solo homer and three RBIs and Brent Mayne had a career-high four hits for the Giants.

Sean Spencer (0-1) allowed eight runs and eight hits in three innings.

Cubs 2, Astros 1

HOUSTON — Sammy Sosa remained homeless for the season and 14-for-10 overall, but Henry Rodriguez drove home a hit and three-run homer and the Chicago Cubs got a lucky bounce to beat the Houston Astros.

Jon Lieber (1-0) won his first start for the Cubs as he allowed three runs in eight innings, striking out four and walking none.

Rod Beck got a save in his first appearance of the season. With two outs in the ninth,

Kournikova knocks off top-seeded Davenport

AMELIA ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — Ninth-seeded Anna Kournikova defeated No. 1 seed Lindsay Davenport 6-4, 6-1 Thursday in the Bausch & Lomb Championships, a victory that intensifies the hot streak that began for the Russian about a month ago.

Combined with her appearance in the final of the Family Circle Cup last week, Kournikova has a chance to move up as many as 11 places in the rankings over a two-week span by winning a title here.

Either way, the world's 16th-ranked player has a big upset to add to her resume.

Her next match will be against No. 6 seed Patty Schnyder, a rematch of Kournikova's victory in the semifinals last week.

Schnyder defeated Ivis Gorrochategui 7-5, 6-2. Elsewhere in the round of 16, No. 3 Amanda Coetzer beat No. 14 Virginia Ruano Pascual 6-1, 7-5 and Roxandra Dragomir defeated No. 8 seed Barbara Schett 6-2, 6-2. Two days after beating Venus Williams, Soledad Yajayevanell fell 6-4, 6-2 to Fabiola Zuluaga of Colombia.

In a late match, defending champion Mary Pierce, the fourth seed, overcame a spotty effort to beat No. 15 Nathalie Dechy 2-6, 6-4, 6-3.

Anna Kournikova pumpees her first sliding match point to defeat top-seeded Lindsay Davenport 6-4, 6-1, during the third round of the Bausch & Lomb Championships Thursday.

6-2, 6-3 victory over Oliver Gross of Germany.

Top-seeded Richard Krajicek of the Netherlands beat defending champion Kenneth Carlsen 7-6 (10-8), 7-6 (7-2); Krajicek, the world's No. 4, will meet Dreckmann in the quarterfinals.

Former world No. 1 Boris Becker showed he is still a force, defeating South African Wayne Ferreira 6-4 (2-10) in his top match against Italy's Laurence Tieleman in the next round.

Berni Karbacher of Germany will meet No. 7 seed Joakim Bjorkman of Sweden in another quarterfinal.

Change upset in second round

HONG KONG — Three-time Wimbledon Champion, the crowd favorite, was upset in the second round of the Salem Open Thursday.

The eight-seeded Chang was beaten 3-6, 7-5, 6-4 by Henrik Linder of Sweden, adding to his dismal performances in 1995.

Jerome kids learn to wrestle

JEROME - Young children of Jerome are seriously concerned about their future and further schooling.

"The whole idea of the club is to have more parent-child events and to get kids prepared for the future, scholarshipwise," said Brad Cook, who started Jerome's freestyle wrestling club March 1.

Children who want to join the club are not required to have any knowledge or experience. There are seven age divisions in the club, divided further by weight classes. The youngest wrestlers have three other coaches besides Cook - Travis McAnally, Jess Argyle and Greg Callen.

All wrestlers participate in tournaments - there are seven of them in the season - and wrestle within their categories. The club has sponsors but most of the support the club gets is from parents.

"I almost always go with them for a practice and follow them to tournaments," said Angela McAnally, whose son Cody is a member of the club. There is a $35 fee to join the club, and tournaments cost between $5 and $10.

Children born in 1993-94 are pre-bantam. Children born in 1991-92 are bantam (nine weights, match time is two 90-second periods). Children born in 1989-90 are midget (13

ment March 12-13, Nathan Cook and Tom Callen placed first, Aaron Ross and Cody McAnally placed second, Derek Ogden placed third, Chance Jasso, Gus Callen and Justin Becker took fourth, Jason Capps placed fifth, and Tension Silver, Riley Argyle and Greyden Anderson took sixth. Other participants included Christopher Cook, Josh Callen and Garrett Lewis.

DENVER - Christopher Cornelison, a student at Twin Falls High School, took fifth place in the Men's 60-kg class at the United States High School National Judo Championships March 27 at the Holiday Inn at Denver International Airport.

More than 175 competitors challenged for medals in 19 divisions, having performed at a high level in their state competitions to qualify for this tournament.

Performances at the tournament will have a bearing on who will be chosen to represent the U.S. at the Junior Pan-American Championships to be held in Miami in August.

TWIN FALLS - The Magic Valley Bassmasters' April tournament will be at Milner Reservoir instead of Anderson Reservoir due to ice and snow.

The tournament will be Saturday at the Riverside Ramp. For more information, call Dave Withers at 543-6863.

Jerome rec registration ends Saturday

JEROME - Registration for the Jerome Recreation District's softball and baseball programs ends Saturday.

Players can register today (8 a.m.-5 p.m.) or Saturday (10 a.m.-1 p.m.) at the office. Fees and waivers must be collected by Saturday, and teams will be drawn Monday, April 19.

Kimberly boosters meet Monday

KIMBERLY - The Kimberly High School Booster Club will have a meeting at 7 p.m. Monday in the annex building.

The agenda will include the athletic budget, rifle and opening board elections. For more information, call George Plew at 423-4267.

YFCA offers junior high programs

TWIN FALLS - The Magic Valley YFCA, across from Herman Park, is offering a recreational basketball and volleyball program for all junior high school students.

The three-week program activities (3:30-5:30 p.m.) begin next week and continue through June 3.

A one-time registration fee of $10 includes all activity sessions. Transportation to and from Robert Stuart Junior High is available at no extra cost.

To register or for more information, call 733-4384.

Vandal women host weekend invitational

MOSCOW - The University of Idaho women's golf team will play host to the second annual Vandal Invitational Sunday and Monday at the UI golf course.

The nine-team field includes Portland, Boise State, Missouri, Montana State, Gonzaga, Lewis Clark State College, Western Montana and Eastern Washington, as well as a solo golfer from Washington State.

The tournament tees off both days at 8 a.m.

UConn guard to return for junior season

HARTFORD, Conn. - Khalid El-Amin is passing up a shot at the NBA draft and said this week he will return for his junior year, hoping to lead Connecticut to another national championship.

The 6-foot-10 point guard helped the Huskies (36-2) to their first national championship with a 27-24 victory over Duke last week. It was the school's first trip to the Final Four in 21 years.

Sneakers select Aussie doubles winner

BOISE - The Idaho Sneakers have selected Mirjana Lucic, the youngest player to win an Australian Open title, and Carmine Vis in this week's 1999 Dunlop World Team Tennis player draft.

Lucic won the Australian Open doubles title with Martina Hingis in 1998 at the age of 15 years, 10 months and 21 days. Vis is playing her fourth season in the league, having helped both the Kansas City Explorers and Sacramento Capitals to the playoffs.

The two women join Bob and Mike Bryan, who were selected in last week's Marquee and Premier Player Draft.

18 up, 18 Ks for Texas ace

ADDISON, Texas. (AP) - Pitching for Greenhill High School, Tony Adler struck out all 18 Episcopal School of Dallas batters he faced in an 8-0 six-inning victory Tuesday. He did it with 75 pitches — 72 fastballs, three curves, and 55 strikes.

Episcopal batters managed just five foul balls off the senior right-hander and none worked a full count.

"I was kidding around with the guys before the game, saying I was going to strike out every body," said Adler, who has signed to play at Rice next year.

"I didn't even have a particularly good fastball. It was just one of those days where something happens. I don't really know how to explain it."

Tell Addison what you're looking for and he'll search to find a match. Then he emails the ad to you. He can reach right here at home, or through the pages of more than 300 newspapers nationally.

Jockey Krone steps out of the saddle

NEW YORK (AP) - Two months ago, while hanging on for dear life in the starting gate at the Fair Grounds as a crazed horse race to throw her, jockey Julie Krone came to this realization: "I can't want to do this anymore."

On Thursday, thoroughbred racing's winningest female rider sat comfortably behind a small table in the press box at Aqueduct and said she's retiring April 13.

There's a constellation of reasons for me to retire," said Krone, who won 3,541 races and more than $80 million in purses over an 18-year career. "I'm on top, I'm 35 years old. I don't want to get hurt anymore, and I've got nothing left to prove."

At 4-foot-10 1/2, 100 pounds, Krone not only became the only female to win a Triple Crown race — she won the 1993 Belmont Stakes aboard Colonial Affair — but was an inspiration for other females to excel in sports previously dominated by men.

"She's been an inspiration for not only me, but for every girl that came along," jockey Diane Nelson said. "I can remember a change happening when you had big outliers, and the nice horses, and people would take a chance on a girl. It wasn't an oddity."

Krone, married since 1995 to Steve Mizdak, said there are no definite plans for the future, adding she has "many options." Among those are working in television — "I'd love to be able to work in TV during Derby week" — dabbling in art and photography and continuing her education toward a psychology degree.

Krone, who rides this weekend in Florida and Maryland, will end her career the following Sunday at Lone Star Park in Texas.

Although her career was plagued by injuries, she appeared to be in top form after finishing third in the Fair Grounds jockey standings with 84 winners. She also surpassed the 3,500-win mark and won five races in a day on two occasions.

But there were too many aches and pains.

"It's like this Olympic runner I read about (who set three world records the summer she decided to quit) — Krone said she goes to sleep at night, and my ankle hurt and my knee hurt and I'd think, 'I just want to get this over with.'"

Krone began her impressive run of success in 1987, five years after winning her first riding title at Atlantic City. She became the first female to win riding titles in major tracks such as Monmouth Park and the Meadowlands in New Jersey. In 1989, she was the nation's third-leading rider with 368 winners.

By 1991, she was a regular on the New York circuit and a year later won a career-best $9.1 million in purses. In '92 and '93, Krone won riding titles at Gulfstream Park.

On Aug. 20, 1993, she became the third jockey to win five races in a day at Saratoga. Angel Cordero Jr. and Ron Turcotte were the others.

But 10 days later, Krone went down in a spill and severely fractured her right ankle, which required two plates and 14 screws to reconstruct. Nine months later, she was riding again.

On Jan. 13, 1995, she was thrown from her horse again, this time at Gulfstream. Krone broke both hands, but never regained her top form until recently.

Top service companies share rare traits

Author identifies common elements

Fort Worth Star-Telegram

It may be the way a customer's purchases were replaced for free after the left her bag in the parking lot and drove away, later returning to find the bag gone.

Or in the way an airline uses china plates and cloth napkins, offers free wine or champagne and bakes cookies right on board the plane — and not just for first class.

Or the way an office furniture manufacturer sales representative sits down with a customer, discusses her needs, fits her budget, lets her make decisions on colors and fabrics and immediately sends the order to the factory via computer and has 200 furniture systems ready within two weeks.

Great service is not random or unusual, says Leonard L. Berry, Texas A&M University marketing professor and author of retailing studies. Great service, rather, is part of the very soul of a company, from its top officers to its dishwashers. It's consistent and impresses customers every day.

Berry discovered, after studying 14 successful service companies, that the basic elements, or drivers, of great service can be found in virtually any industry.

connect to a central driver of excellence he calls 'values-driven leadership.'

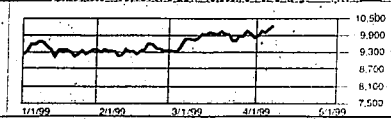

he writes, "and the challenge of sustaining the performers' energy, commitment and knowledge day after day, week after week, month after month, year after year — especially as the organization grows and becomes more complex — is daunting."

Berry identifies nine drivers of sustainable success in service business from his extensive research into such companies as Charles Schwab, Midwest Express, Airlines and The Container Store. Eight of the drivers connect to a central driver of excellence he calls "values-driven leadership."

Other drivers Berry found from his research include: 1. A clear, compelling vision of the future. 2. A strong, consistent culture. 3. A focus on the customer. 4. A commitment to excellence. 5. A focus on the employee. 6. A focus on the community. 7. A focus on the environment. 8. A focus on the future.

The companies he recently reviewed were as diverse as a mattress distributor, a minor-league baseball club and an airline. But the common elements among these successful companies can be imitated by any company, that will prosper from them.

Dow Jones 10,197.70

Dow closes at 10,197

The Dow rose 112.39 to 10,197.70, taking the blue-chip index past the record high of 10,085.31 set Wednesday. It was the Dow's third-record close this week; the index has gained 365 points over the past four sessions.

Two broader market indicators, the Nasdaq composite index and the Standard & Poor's 500 index, also set new closing highs for the third time this week.

The Nasdaq, which is heavily weighted with technology stocks, rose 28.6 to 2,573.39 despite a laddered performance from stalwarts Dell and Intel. The S&P 500 rose 17.09 to 1,345.98.

Two interest rate cuts in Europe — one by the Bank of England and the other by the European Central Bank — helped the stock market cope with worries about upcoming earnings reports.

The rate cuts sent prices higher and yields lower in the U.S. bond market — the yield on the 30-year Treasury bond fell to 5.44 percent from 5.50 late Wednesday. That trend pleased Wall Street because reduced borrowing costs will take less of a toll on corporate profits.

Financial stocks, which are particularly sensitive to changes in interest rates, closed higher, with Citigroup up 1 5/16 to 73 and American Express advancing 1 1/16 to 127 3/4. Both are Dow components.

Lower interest rates in Europe could also prompt more spending in that region, which would help U.S. companies that do business overseas.

Stock traders have traded cautiously in recent days amid worries that some companies' first-quarter earnings would be disappointing.

FOCUS: THE BALKANS CRISIS

Should we bomb Serb TV stations?

Knight-Ridder News Service

BRUSSELS, Belgium — What do you call news so incensed at what a television station is broadcasting that they threaten to bomb it?

In the third week of the NATO air campaign against Yugoslavia, you call them puffed NATO officials, who said Thursday that they will consider RTS, Serbian government television, a military target unless it starts broadcasting six hours a day of Western reporting on the conflict. The officials even offered recommended scheduling times.

"Serbian radio and television is an instrument of propaganda and repression," said David Wilby, a clipping, very correct British air commodore who serves as a NATO military spokesman. "It has filled the airwaves with hate and lies over the years and especially now. It is therefore a legitimate target in this campaign."

NATO Secretary General Javier Solana said that because RTS transmitters are linked to the Serbian defense system, it is "clear to consider it a military target."

France's chief of staff, Gen. Pierre Kélché, indicated that Serb TV is a high priority. "We consider it an extremely dangerous tool which is warping Serbian opinion," Kélché said in Paris. "We are going to blast their transmitters and their relay stations. We are not aiming at journalists."

No sooner had the threats been issued, however, than some NATO officials began backpedaling. "It's just not true," insisted Solana's chief civilian spokesman, Jamie Shea. "Serb TV is not a target."

An official at the headquarters of U.S. Army Gen. Wesley Clark, NATO supreme allied commander, said he couldn't explain the explosive French statement, but that Wilby clearly had jumped the gun. Serb TV, said the official, who asked not to be named, is a "proposed target, not an approved target."

Air Commodore Wilby gave RTS one last chance to avoid laser-guided conscription.

NATO Secretary General Kofi Annan instructed the state network to rebroadcast Western news programs — uncensored and for 24 hours a day. He said each — then NATO will consider Serb TV an "acceptable instrument of public information" and refrain from bombing it.

Despite such forbearance, NATO's displeasure with Belgrade TV has been palpable in recent days. The network's last straw was not immediately clear.

Since the start of the air campaign on March 24, RTS has been broadcasting daily drawings of NATO warplanes — several times a day. So far, NATO has acknowledged only one loss, an F-117 stealth fighter-bomber whose pilot was rescued.

Aid agency requests money only

Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — A call for the U.S. government's 2-day-old 800-USAD-RELIEF number (800-872-4373) is a blunt request for money only.

The top floor of the vast Ronald Reagan building is an unlikely site for a beseeching appeal to the U.S. government's nerve center for coordinating relief to Kosovo refugees.

Some of the ringing phones, computer communications, charts of supply needs and mangled-up maps in a very real war room are the bureaucrats charged with responding to the crisis in the Balkans.

It is the latest move in the Clinton administration's stepped-up campaign to get control of an unexpectedly large refugee problem, anticipated at 100,000 just two weeks ago and already pegged at more than 400,000.

In the hardest line taken yet by government and international agencies to the pouring out of the refugees, U.S. officials only are accepting monetary donations after a series of troubled relief efforts that left workers overwhelmed with inappropriate contributions.

A toppled minaret leans over a destroyed mosque in the Kosovo village of Landovica Sunday after reportedly being hit by a tank shell fired by Serb forces. This photograph was taken by Xhavit Nimani, an ethnic Albanian refugee, while fleeing to Albania on a donkey cart with his family.

DEATH OF A CITY

Refugees recall terror in Pec

ULCINJ, Yugoslavia (AP). — "Is something going to happen here?"

There was deep alarm in Sali Gashi's question. The ethnic Albanian man's Serb neighbors in Kosovo's third-largest city were leaving after "borrowing" his car.

"They may tell you to leave your 'house,'" he quoted the Serbs as saying. "Nothing else will happen."

It was shortly before 4 p.m. on Saturday, March 27. Within minutes, Gashi says, his father, brother and uncle were dead, executed by black-masked gunmen who stormed their home and those of other ethnic Albanians in a spree of unimaginable savagery.

Pec (pronounced PETCH), or Peja (PAY-uh) as the Albanians call it, is a jewel in a poor land.

Backed against the 7,000-foot Frokletje Mountains — mountains of the Damned — its architecture and lifestyle reflect its multi-ethnic heritage as both a historic Ottoman city and home of the Serbian Orthodox Church Patriarchate since medieval times.

But now the city of 100,000 stands virtually empty, according to ethnic Albanian residents who fled — driven out by what they portray as a campaign of killing and looting by Serb forces.

Their accounts are impossible to verify. No foreign journalists have been permitted there since the crackling of the international monitors withdrew from Kosovo on March 20.

But accounts by dozens of Pec refugees interviewed in neighboring Montenegro paint a grim and consistent picture of a reign of terror targeting Albanian civilians.

"Dante's allegory of hell is nothing compared to this," said Selami Taraku, a theater and film director.

The descent into chaos came quickly. Wednesday, March 24, reportedly the day that almost everyone stayed home as fear spread. Serb police and masked paramilitary troops were omnipresent, looking nervous and angry.

Bedri Islami recalls a chilling warning the armed men made repeatedly to passing ethnic Albanians: "If NATO attacks, you'll be dead."

The orange glow of a cruise missile lit up the night sky over Pec at about 8 p.m. — NATO had carried through on its threat to punish Yugoslavia for its offensive against Kosovo's ethnic Albanian majority.

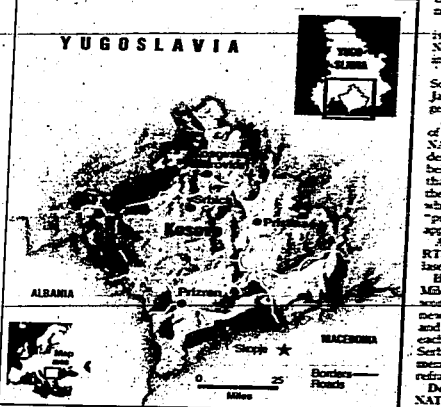

Serb policemen immediately swooped into the ethnic Albanian district of Kapesnica, a maze of winding streets and clay houses long known for its resistance to Serb rule. Then they began shooting, said Bedri Islami, a 32-year-old refugee who asked that his last name not be used.

At 10 p.m., Yugoslav army tanks rumbled to the edge of and mountain foothill overlooking Kapesnica and opened fire, said

An unidentified Kosovar boy comforts his younger brother, who is crying for his father, who did not leave with them after traveling from Pec, Kosovo, Yugoslavia, March 31.

"Dante's allegory of hell is nothing compared to this." — Selami Taraku, theater and film director

"We have orders that no Albanians can remain in Kosovo." — A Serb soldier

Dr. Xhevat Kurhasani, an ethnic Albanian physician. Two women and a boy were killed. The next day, he said, soldiers lobbed a grenade into an empty primary school to break down the door and were in, using it as a base to bombard the district.

Many residents spent the next three nights in their basements while the Serbs smashed shops and looted and burned homes, carting away valuables in trucks. But the worst was still to come.

On Saturday, March 27, soldiers and police arrived in Pec about 11 a.m., and in groups of seven or eight, went to each house, smashing doors in with their boots or guns.

"Out!" Bashkum said the residents were told as they scrambled out of their homes into the streets. Children fled as Serb troops forced them to march out.

When they arrived at a bridge, police dumped the flowers out of a concrete vase and ordered everyone to deposit their jewelry inside. Then, Bashkum said, the Serb police separated some men from the crowd. A Serbian policeman forcibly dragged away 28-year-old Xhialat Bravina — a tall, wealthy businessman who drove a BMW — and drove off with him.

An hour later, Bravina's body was found lying face down in a shallow brook with three bullet wounds to the head, said Bashkum and other residents who said they saw it there.

About the same time, police were driving down Kacanika Street, a half-Serb, half-Albanian street in Dardaniya. A masked Serb employee of the electric company was with them, pointing out the houses that belonged to Albanians, according to Xhavit Aliqaj, a 52-year-old Albanian language teacher.

For updates on this topic... Visit The Times-News Online at <http://www.magicvalley.com> and click on The Wire.

"About 50 men were killed in this way in my district," Aliqaj said, nervously folding and unfolding his hands as he spoke.

At about 4:30 p.m., six masked soldiers searching houses nearby found 45 people hiding in basements. They forced them into the street, took their money and jewelry and shot dead 27-year-old Bashkum Lokaj, according to Rexhep Meha, who later saw the body inside a burning house.

Meha said the rest of the group was marched into a field. After taking more money, the gunmen called out the name of Besnik Lokaj, who told them, "I have no money, and you killed my brother."

"Paramilitary troops stripped him naked in front of the crowd, led him off to the side and executed him, according to Meha, who saw his body moments later.

Gashi and his family, meanwhile, had been founded up with others from Kacanika and other streets, and sent off toward the border with Montenegro. At the edge of town, paramilitary troops separated 100 men and led them into a field.

Gashi escaped notice by standing in the middle of a group of women with a jacket pulled over his head. Shots were heard, and the men's fate is unknown.

The rest of the group walked into the mountains, where the Kosovo Liberation Army fed and cared for them for five days before they left Kosovo.
