TF Chamber president-elect, key physician to run state hospital

By Theresa Jacoby Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — After spending 20 years of his life in the Magic Valley, Kenneth Delbert is heading to Nampa to oversee the operations of a state-run facility.

Sawtooth Surgical Center and the president-elect for the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce, was approached and hired by the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare to lead the Idaho State School and Hospital in Nampa. The state facility serves people with developmental disabilities who cannot be cared for in community settings, Delbert said. "At capacity, the Idaho State School and Hospital can serve 114 clients, all who qualify for treatment due to their level of mental retardation, according to a press release from the Idaho Department of Welfare. There are three client groups: Dangerous and aggressive, severe and profoundly mentally retarded, and the medically fragile, the release said. Health and Welfare Director Karl Kurtz said Delbert's background in hospital administration qualifies him for the position. "In Ken's case, that includes stints at acute care and psychiatric/chemical dependency hospital

Formal hearing set for late summer

By Brian Hayes Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Huddled around a giant aerial map of northwest Twin Falls Thursday night, area residents examined the blue lines that could mean more traffic, more noise and fewer neighbors. Thursday's meeting with Idaho Transportation Department officials gave residents their first chance to see the proposed path of the U.S. Highway 93 alternate route, which will transform 2400 East and most of Pole Line Road into a four-lane highway that will send traffic around the heart of Twin Falls, alleviating traffic congestion on Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

The informal public meeting was the latest step toward approval of the project to connect the U.S. Highway 30-U.S. 93 junction to Pole Line Road. The next step is a formal public hearing in late summer.

ITD was considering the Pole Line Road route and a cross-country route for the new highway, but the cross-country route was killed recently in the wake of strong opposition by area residents. "I think we've done a great job listening to what the people need and balancing that with what the purpose of the project is," Project Manager Chuck Carmohan said.

The route will follow an existing corridor north along 2400 East and east along Pole Line Road, with a gentle curve where the two roads intersect. The four-lane highway snakes east among several homes, including some historic homes.

ITD is considering moving north the stretch of highway between 2700 East and Grandview Drive to avoid several historic properties.

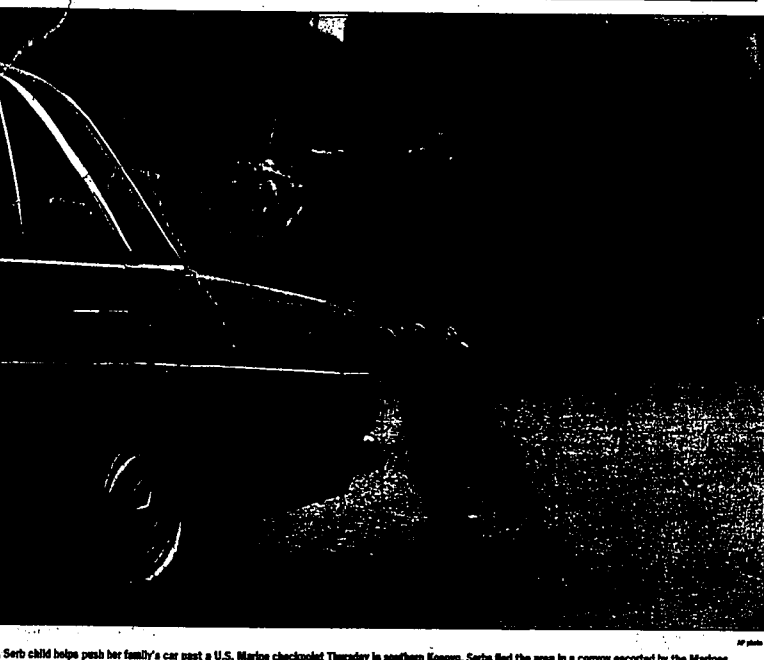

When the route reaches Grandview Drive, the highway widens to six lanes and continues to Blue Lakes Boulevard.

It's a plan that's been years in the making. It's also meant years of nervous waiting for Brian and Benita Olsen, whose home sits in the proposed highway's path.

Less than six months after moving into their home north of Pole Line Road, the Olsens began hearing talk of a new highway. In the four years since they have patiently waited for the verdict on their home.

MILLIONS FOR MILOSEVIC

U.S. offers reward for help with war criminals

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The State Department announced a reward of up to $5 million Thursday for information leading to the arrest and conviction of Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic and other suspected war criminals indicted by an international tribunal.

Milosevic was indicted by the tribunal in the Netherlands for alleged crimes against ethnic Albanians in Kosovo. Other prominent figures wanted for alleged war crimes in the Balkans include Bosnian Serb leaders Radovan Karadzic and Ratko Mladic, who are wanted for their alleged role in the massacre of 5,000 Bosnian Muslims in 1995. Karadzic is also wanted under a separate indictment for crimes that occurred earlier in the Bosnian war. The rewards program was begun 10 years ago, and previously was directed at apprehending terrorists responsible for the killings of Americans. Only about two dozen of 84 Bosnians of various ethnicities have been taken into custody at The Hague since the tribunal was created six years ago. Milosevic and four colleagues were indicted last month, a few days before he agreed to accept NATO's terms for halting its air war over Yugoslavia. "The United States is offering a reward of up to $5 million for information leading to the arrest or conviction in any country of persons indicted for serious violations of international humanitarian law by the International Criminal Tribunal for Yugoslavia or for information leading to their transfer to or conviction by the tribunal," State Department spokesman James Rubin said. He said Secretary of State Madeleine Albright will use her discretion to determine the size of the reward if any indictees are captured. The amount would be linked to the type of information provided and other factors. Yugoslavia's United Nations ambassador, Vlastislav Jovanovic, denounced the reward, telling CNN it proved the U.N. tribunal "is unfortunately a tool of the policy of the United States." It is widely acknowledged that Milosevic, with a highly trained security force protecting him, is beyond the reach of the tribunal. Rubin seemed to acknowledge that when he said that the issue of war criminals is not one that applies "to today or tomorrow." "It is our view that ultimately people indicted for war crimes in the former Yugoslavia will face justice in The Hague," he said. "Their day will come. There is no statute of limitations."

Karadzic has been the tribunal's most wanted suspect. A former Bosnia Serb president, he has not been seen in public since September 1996. He is widely believed to be in the sector of Bosnia controlled by French peacekeepers. Mladic is a former Bosnian Serb military commander who was deposed in December 1996. Since then, he has been seen frequently in Serbia.

Poll suggests concern about morality grows among voters

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Though President Clinton was strongly supported by the American public during the impeachment process, a bipartisan poll released Thursday suggests that concern about the nation's moral leadership is growing. That focus may help Republicans during the 2000 campaign, the poll indicated. Republicans have about a 20 percentage-point edge over

George W. Bush Al Gore Democrats when asked which party best represents the values of faith in God, personal responsibility, ethics and honesty and voting right from wrong, according to their latest Background Poll.

"Over the short range, Republicans were damaged by the impeachment process," said GOP pollster Ed Gees (pronounced go-ee). "Long range, it appears that we have gained a great deal by what congressional members did on impeachment." Gees and Democratic pollster Colinda Lake, who put together the poll with him, agreed that Clinton's impeachment fight and the Monica Lewinsky scandal appear to be having a time-released effect on public attitudes that morality is declining. "Democrats paid a big price," Lake said. "It has diminished our credibility on morality."

Democrats and Republicans were tied at 33 percent apiece when voters were asked which party they would vote for if the election for Congress were held today. Texas Gov. George W. Bush, front-runner for the Republican presidential nomination, had a lead of 52 percent to 37 percent for Vice President Al Gore, the Democratic front-runner. Bush has held a double-digit lead over Gore in various recent polls. The Background Poll surveyed 1,002 registered voters June 6-8, and the error margin is plus or minus 5 percentage points. The dead heat for Congress is significant for Republicans

Idaho: Scattered cloudiness across much of Idaho Thursday afternoon as another storm system edges in from the Pacific Northwest. The state had little precipitation with the exception of some widely scattered light showers in southeastern and far northeastern portions of the state. Drier conditions are expected Friday with less cloud cover. Elsewhere: Showers and thunderstorms darkened the Midwest on Thursday. Most of the East Coast and West were under fair skies.

Low pressure caused rain and storms from Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, south into Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia. Most of the activity was light. A complex of thunderstorms continued to intensify over the southern Plains. Most of the West was fair. The exception was over the Pacific Northwest, where a cold front brought clouds and showers. Hot and dry weather was noted over the Southwest.

The amendment would ban the use of the flag as a symbol of hate or as a symbol of disrespect. The amendment would also prohibit the use of the flag as a symbol of hate or as a symbol of disrespect. ## Critics want Mrs. Clinton to pay for trips

WASHINGTON — Hillary Rodham Clinton's critics Thursday demanded she repay the cost of using military jets for her jaunts to New York while she was mulling a Senate run earlier this year. "Right now, it's just a free lunch for her at the taxpayers' expense," said Stuart Roy, a member of the National Republican Senatorial Committee, which is considering filing a complaint with the Federal Election Commission.

Nurses say teach puberty earlier

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Girls who mature early should be given the option of learning about sexuality and menstruation in the fourth grade, a year before most other girls, a national group of school nurses proposed Thursday. The earlier starting date is necessary in part because many girls are exposed to issues of sexuality at a younger age, said Judy Robinson, executive director of the National Association of School Nurses. "You'd be amazed at what kids are asking these days," she said. "They want to know about (sexual) positions."

New telescope will probe Big Bang

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — A NASA ultraviolet telescope rocketed into orbit Thursday on a three-year quest to learn what the universe was like moments after creation. The Far Ultraviolet Spectroscopic Explorer, better known as FUSE, blasted off aboard an unmanned Delta rocket. An hour later, it reached its destination: a 480-mile-high orbit from which it will peer into the corners of the Milky Way and beyond. Johns Hopkins University developed the telescope for NASA and will now control it.

Chess world awaits Kasparov's reply

WASHINGTON — After clicking countless computer mice and sliding a lowly black pawn forward two spaces, thousands of chess enthusiasts await the response of world champion Garry Kasparov, who challenged the world to a game in cyberspace. The Internet tournament, called "Kasparov vs. the World," allows anyone with a modem to join the "World Team," which votes on moves against the reigning champion. The World Team made the tournament's second move Tuesday, and Kasparov has 24 hours to reply. Kasparov opened the tournament Monday in New York, moving his white king's pawn two spaces forward to E4 on a giant board. Microsoft's Gaming Zone, the Web site acting as host of the tournament, immediately began fielding counter-moves from around the world and registered more than 2 million hits for the day, said spokesman Edson Rangelhoda.

Clapton parts with guitars for charity

NEW YORK — Eric Clapton paraded with 100 stringed beauties Thursday, including a beloved Fender guitar he called "Brownie" that went for a record $497,500 at a charity auction. It was all in the Christ's sake generated $5 million for a Caribbean drug and alcohol clinic the rocker founded in 1997. Clapton used "Brownie," a 1956 sunburst Fender, to record his hit "Layla." He played the guitar extensively in other recording sessions and in concert.

because Democrats have had a big advantage for months on issues like strengthening Medicare, improving the health care system and improving education. "Right now, voters are emphasizing values, and that is clearly diminishing Democratic support," said Lake. "We're even, in part, because voters are thinking more about values than they are about (other) issues." When registered voters were asked which one issue they think is the most important, a quarter chose restoring moral values, followed by about one out of five who thought improving education was the top issue. A slight majority of those polled, 51 percent, said the country is headed in the wrong direction, a view driven mostly by concerns over declining morality. Three out of four say Clinton is doing a good job with the economy, and his overall job approval was 57 percent. Their red-colored home on the aerial maps made the verdict clear. "If they're going to take it, they're going to take it," Benito Olsen said. Others at the meeting came out better than they expected. Stan Dettweiler's subdivision on Pole Line Road will have very limited access to the highway, but overall the plan was easier on him than he expected. He still thought the plan was more than the area will need for a long time to come. "Something needs to be done with Pole Line Road, but this is overkill," he said. Dettweiler was like many people at the meeting who didn't wholeheartedly agree with the project but accepted it anyway, Carmolian said. "We try to get the best bit, but it can be difficult because you're never going to please everybody," he said.

While barely notable in a $1.6 billion general tax budget, the cash surplus will be crucial in covering what appears to be mounting emergency expenses for the cost of health care for the poor, summer wildfires and an escalating prison population.

Chinese embassy target brought warning

WASHINGTON (AP) - A mid-level U.S. intelligence official raised warnings internally that a target that turned out to be the Chinese Embassy might not be the Yugoslav weapons agency that NATO planners intended to bomb, the Pentagon said Thursday.

The CIA employee questioned the target in a phone call to a defense official in Europe on May 7, only to learn that the B-2 bomber heading for the attack was already in the air, Pentagon spokesman Kenneth Bacon said.

The embassy was bombed a short time after the official's phone call, Bacon said.

The official, whom Bacon did not identify by name, was familiar with the Yugoslav Federal Directorate for Supply and Procurement in Belgrade, but not involved in the choosing of targets, Bacon said.

"He reviewed imagery of the building and decided that the building that was targeted did not appear to be at the location of the building he believed to be the headquarters of the Federal Directorate of Supply and Procurement," Bacon said.

The official had no idea the building was an embassy, Bacon said at a briefing for reporters. In fact, the official thought the building was another, less valuable, military target, Bacon said.

The official tried several times to voice his concerns that the target was mislabeled, Bacon said. The official tried to raise the question with others at the CIA who were involved in selecting targets for the Kosovo operation, but could not schedule a meeting. He also called a defense official in Europe on May 4 and did discuss his reservations, Bacon said.

Bacon gave no details of what, if anything, the defense official did with the information, but said the CIA official felt no particular urgency to resolve the question because he did not know the planned bombing was imminent.

But the bombing was, in fact, planned for three days hence. The official left the CIA for two days of training, returning on the seventh to learn that the building was on the list for that night, Bacon said.

"So he called back to Europe in an effort to contact the officer he'd spoken with before and he was unsuccessful," and ended up talking to someone else, Bacon said. "The concern he conveyed was, not that they were going after an inappropriate target, but it wasn't perhaps the best target that they could be going after at the time," Bacon said.

Investigators: American Airlines under fire

DALLAS (AP) - American Airlines officials and federal investigators hope a review of the airline's safety and training programs can shed light on why Americans has had more crashes than any other U.S. air carrier in the last six years.

The Fort Worth-based American has suffered two crashes since 1993 that killed a total of 171 people. Airline officials, along with outside consultants and experts from the Federal Aviation Administration, plan to review safety and training programs.

The FAA said it plans similar evaluations for all airlines.

NATION IN BRIEF

Big GOP tax cut targets capital gains

WASHINGTON - Republicans in Congress are assembling a sweeping tax cut plan likely to include trimming top capital gains tax rates to 10 percent, fixing the "marriage penalty" that affects millions of two-income couples and abolishing inheritance taxes.

The $778 billion, 10-year plan to be unveiled in July is intended to energize the GOP's social conservative and business supporters. It also will force Democrats to decide between tax relief's appeal and President Clinton's priorities of Social Security, Medicare and education spending.

Democratic tax-cutting sentiment is particularly strong in the Senate, where as many as eight of the 45 Democrats are either co-sponsoring major tax relief bills or have expressed a desire to return some of the projected $2.6 trillion budget surplus to taxpayers over the next decade.

Study gives directions for insomnia research

WASHINGTON - Most theories about why millions of elderly suffer insomnia are wrong, according to a new study that says the brain clock regulating sleep ticks as accurately for the old as for the young. Experts say the groundbreaking study could help researchers find new treatments for sleeplessness.

Among its major findings, the study revealed that the brain clock regulating sleep is on a 24-hour schedule, not a 25-hour cycle that researchers long believed.

"We are going to have to rethink all of the explanations we have been giving for insomnia," said Dr. Charles A. Czeisler of Harvard Medical School and Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston. "All of the textbooks indicate that humans have a 25-hour day instead of a 24-hour day. We now know that is wrong."

Czeisler is lead author of the study appearing today in the journal Science.

Andrew A. Monjan, chief of neurobiology at the National Institute of Aging, said the new study changes fundamental assumptions about the causes of sleeplessness among the elderly and will prompt researchers to find new solutions for a sleep disorder that affects more than 10 million elderly Americans.

Wildlife appears to thrive in area contaminated by nuclear waste

NEW ELLENTON, S.C. (AP) — The wide-mouth bass are monsters. The deer are fatter and the alligators longer. And the ponds, wetlands and rich bottomland brim with snakes, turtles, and salamanders — a bounty of biological diversity.

But the Savannah River Site, a 310-square-mile expanse of longleaf pine forest and marshland along the river that divides South Carolina from Georgia, is an ecological paradox.

For four decades one of the government's top-secret nuclear bomb factories where five reactors produced plutonium and tritium for nuclear warheads, it also is an ecological treasure chest full of wildlife and one of the hottest spots for biological research in the country, including long-term studies on the movement of contamination — nuclear and otherwise — through the environment.

In a sign of the sites' ecological importance, the Energy Department Thursday transferred management of a 10,000-acre sliver of the Savannah River site over to management by the South Carolina Natural Resource Department.

"This will further protect a unique habitat that for almost 50 years has been spared from development," Energy Secretary Bill Richardson said, in marking the management transfer.

"It is absolutely a paradox. From the outside, people see it as a nuclear site," says Whit Gibbons, a senior scientist at the Savannah River Ecology Laboratory, whose 35 faculty scientists and dozens of other researchers and students have been closely studying the place for years.

The nuclear complex covers only about 10 percent of the Energy Department's property. The rest is largely pristine wilderness undisturbed by development for a half century — vast expanses of longleaf pine forests, Cypress swamps, Carolina bay wetlands and a creek that boasts the highest number of different aquatic insect species — 650 — of any river in North America.

There are also more than 100 species of reptiles and amphibians, 79 species of freshwater fish, more than 1,500 vascular plants, 7,000 white-tail deer, turtles, several hundred alligators, thousands of migratory birds, bobcats, and a number of endangered or threatened species including the red-cockaded woodpecker, wood stork, smooth purple cone flower and bald eagle.

Big cities dominate welfare reform

Report claims governments are ready to change

Cherot Brunsard of Los Angeles checks an employment bulletin board inside the Los Angeles County Welfare Office Wednesday as she babysits for the day. A report being released today claims big cities, in their push to move people off public aid, may be failing to tell recipients about child care, health insurance and other benefits available to them when they go to work.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Welfare reform's new work-first message has transformed even big city bureaucracies that historically are resistant to change, according to the first report from a large-scale study.

But big cities, in their push to move people off public aid, may be failing to tell recipients about child care, health insurance and other benefits available to them when they go to work, said the report being released today by New York-based Manpower Demonstration Research Corp.

Ultimately, welfare reform is likely to succeed or fail in the nation's big cities, with their concentrations of poverty and dependence.

They also have entrenched bureaucracies that have seen numerous "welfare reforms" come and go.

"It's a little bit like steering a ship — these big cities are hard to turn," said Gordon Berlin, the project's director. "They have in fact begun to turn."

Researchers also found positive attitudes among welfare recipients, who seemed to welcome the new focus on work, saying the changes were fair and overdue.

World Bank approves loan to resettle Chinese on Tibetan land

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite U.S. opposition, the World Bank approved a $40 million loan to China on Thursday to help relocate 58,000 Chinese farmers to a remote area claimed by Tibet.

But in an apparent attempt to placate American and other critics of the project, the bank's 24 member-executive board decided not to do any work or disburse any of the funds until the bank's independent inspection panel reviews it.

The vote was 18-2 with four abstentions, participants said. The votes against it were cast by the U.S. representative, Jan Piercy, and Germany. The United States is the bank's biggest shareholder.

In another sign of strained U.S.-Chinese relations, the Beijing government said U.S. opposition to the loan amounted to interference in its internal affairs.

China, the bank's biggest borrower, had threatened to re-evaluate its relationship with the lending organization if the board failed to approve the project.

But a senior U.S. official insisted that the opposition was based on Clinton administration concerns that World Bank guidelines.

"We voted against this loan because we believe it did not meet the appropriate high standards for a loan of this type with respect to the environment, disclosure and resettlement" issues, said the senior administration official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Report: Nuclear clean up is inadequate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite billions spent so far, current technology is not up to the job of cleaning contaminated soil and water at the Energy Department's nuclear weapons sites, a scientific advisory panel reported Thursday.

"The technology that often is used to remediate contaminated sites is simply ineffective and unable to accomplish the massive job that needs to be done," said C. Herb Ward, chairman of the National Research Council committee that studied the issue.

"That means DOE's cleanup efforts won't meet federal and state regulatory standards unless the agency shifts its focus to both developing and implementing new methods," Ward, a professor of environmental science at Rice University in Houston, said in a statement.

The department did not immediately offer a response to the report.

The department has spent between $65 billion and $7.2 billion per year on environmental management over the past several years, the report said.

The committee noted the Energy Department agency responsible for developing innovative cleanup technologies had its budget cut from $82.1 million in 1994 to $14.7 million last year. The budget rose to $25 million this year but the committee said that it was not enough to pay for a significant number of field tests of new cleanup technologies.

The report urged the agency, known as the Surface Contaminants Focus Area, to concentrate on the most promising new technologies and to work with private companies developing cleanup methods.

At most DOE sites, contaminated soil is excavated and polluted ground water is pumped out, treated and stored, the report said.

Wildlife appears to thrive in area contaminated by nuclear waste

NEW ELLENTON, S.C. (AP) — The wide-mouth bass are monsters. The deer are fatter and the alligators longer. And the ponds, wetlands and rich bottomland brim with snakes, turtles, and salamanders — a bounty of biological diversity.

But the Savannah River Site, a 310-square-mile expanse of longleaf pine forest and marshland along the river that divides South Carolina from Georgia, is an ecological paradise.

For four decades one of the government's top-secret nuclear bomb factories where five reactors produced plutonium and tritium for nuclear warheads, it also is an ecological treasure chest full of wildlife and one of the hottest spots for biological research in the country, including long-term studies on the movement of contamination — nuclear and otherwise — through the environment.

In a sign of the site's ecological importance, the Energy Department Thursday transferred management of a 20,000-acre sliver of the Savannah River site over to management by the South Carolina Natural Resource Department.

"This will further protect a unique habitat that for almost 50 years has been spared from development," Energy Secretary Bill Richardson said, in marking the management transfer.

"It is absolutely a paradise. From the outside, people see it as a nuclear site," says Whit Gibbons, a senior scientist at the Savannah River Ecology Laboratory, whose 35 faculty scientists and dozens of other researchers and students have been closely studying the place for years.

The nuclear complex covers only about 10 percent of the Energy Department's property. The rest is largely pristine wilderness undisturbed by development for a half century — vast expanses of longleaf pine forests, Cypress swamps, Carolina bay wetlands and a creek that boasts the highest number of different aquatic insect species — 650 — of any river in North America.

There are also more than 100 species of reptiles and amphibians, 79 species of freshwater fish, more than 1,500 vascular plants, 7,000 whitetail deer, turkeys, several hundred alligators, thousands of migratory birds, bobcats, and a number of endangered or threatened species including the red-cockaded woodpecker, wood stork, smooth purple cone flower and bald eagle.

Welfare reform is leading to the place where America should be

Nobody said welfare reform would be comfortable journey, but it hasn't been nearly as bumpy as critics once feared. Two years after the process began, only a few families have been bounced off Idaho's welfare rolls.

Meanwhile, many more families have made the transition from idle poor to working poor - and are edging closer to the day when they'll be poor no more. This should be heralded as good news, but in the debate over social entitlement, good news is often mistaken for something bad.

A welfare system that nudges people toward self-sufficiency is vastly superior to one that creates a cycle of dependence.

Enough dispute that welfare reform is tough love from Uncle Sam. Lifetime eligibility in Idaho was shortened to only two years, which has prompted many welfare recipients to join the work force to preserve their eligibility for when they really need it. They are getting in their best interest by getting off welfare rolls and onto payrolls.

That looks like a success to us, but others don't share that vision.

"We agree that people should work, but look what's available in Idaho - minimum wage jobs without insurance," says Kevin Borden, of the Idaho Community Action Network. "Is that the way people should be living in Idaho? No, I don't think that's a working system."

What Borden and others fail to recognize is that no one steps straight from the soup kitchen into the first-class lounge. Instead of measuring the new system against a utopian ideal, it's appropriate to compare it with the system it replaced. In our view, a welfare system that nudges people toward self-sufficiency is vastly superior to one that creates a cycle of dependence.

This is an ideal time for welfare reform. The American economy is strong and unemployment is at record low levels. Employers are eager to hire and workers have their pick of jobs. No one who wants to work stays unemployed for long under these conditions.

Will conditions be so favorable during a recession? No one can say for sure, but it's reasonable to assume that job opportunities will contract during hard times. That's why welfare reform makes sense now, because newcomers have more traction in the work world.

In a related vein, a new report from Columbia University's Center for Children in Poverty shows the strong economy is lifting more of America's youngsters out of poverty. At the same time, the report says there are still plenty of families with at least one working parent that are technically below the poverty line.

That's compelling evidence for people who are quick to label welfare reform as a failure. They correctly note that welfare reform is moving the idle poor into jobs that pay low wages. That's the way the world works. Few people move directly from no job to a great job; most have to climb the ladder, one rung at a time.

We've said it before, but we'll say it again: The best way to raise your standard of living is through education. High-school graduates typically earn more than non-grads, and college graduates typically earn more than people without college degrees. If you can afford to earn a useful degree, do it. The investment will be repaid many times over.

Men aren't the only domestic abusers

Let's be clear. It gives me immense pleasure to say, "I told you so." For years I've written that women initiate domestic violence as often as men - countering the myth that women are beaten every fifth nanosecond or so by knuckle-dragging spouses - and, as a result, have been used for target practice by DV activists.

My purpose wasn't to blame victims or excuse batterers, but merely to invite truth to the discussion: Domestic violence isn't about gender; it's about violence. You can't solve a problem until you correctly define it.

Nevertheless, the myth-making industry has continued to produce what amounts to propaganda - charming out statistics, creating billboards of bruised women, going for the aorta with images of tear-streaked children asking, "Why won't Daddy stop hitting Mommy?"

Most of these activists, no doubt, are wonderful people trying to make the world a better place. But some have been so driven by their political agenda to advance women's causes, even at the cost of truth, that they can't permit a variant view.

Now, Mother Jones - the left-leaning, pro-feminist magazine widely recognized for its journalistic integrity and careful reporting - comes out with this:

"A surprising fact has turned up in the grimy familiar world of domestic violence: Women report using violence in their relationships more often than men."

KATHLEEN PARKER

Women report using violence in their relationships more often than men."

This new information isn't "a crack by some antifeminist cat," wrote reporter Nancy Updike, but is the result of an in-depth study of 860 men and women followed since birth.

The research was conducted by Terrie Moffitt, a University of Wisconsin psychology professor. Her findings, which aren't really "surprising" at all, support data from a 1980 study, which showed that wives hit their husbands at least as often as husbands hit wives. That report was so controversial, by the way, that it prompted death threats against the researchers.

The official line from DV activists back then - as, no doubt, now - is that men more often fail women, thus the findings are irrelevant.

The activists are half right and half wrong. It's true that more women than men are killed in domestic disputes, but it's not true that this fact makes irrelevant any finding that women hit, too.

If women are striking men who then kill them, we might examine that scenario more closely. What Moffitt discovered is that women, contrary to the DV party line, do not strike out only in response to men's violence, but often initiate the violence that leads to their injury or death.

Meanwhile, statistics compiled by the FBI show a significant increase in violence among girls ages 12 to 18. A reasonable question might be whether these violent girls will become violent adults, who may end up in fatal domestic abuse incidents.

For Moffitt's most telling finding was that violent women in violent relationships were more like their partners - likely to be unemployed and less educated - than they were like other women in the study. Which is to say, if we want to discover the root causes of violence and advance the goal of stopping it, we'd do better to study violent women rather than to pretend they don't exist.

Moffitt's study, if it's allowed into the light, may mark a turning point in our dialogue about domestic violence. While we can't ignore that men, owing to size and strength, are more dangerous than women when provoked, we also can't ignore that women may need to change their behavior.

As Updike points out, Moffitt's findings compel us to further research, "not in spite of the fact that so many women are being beaten and killed every year, but because of it."

Having freedom is awfully nice

As we watch from any viewpoint, it is obvious that our fellow men in nations all over the world are struggling for freedom, prosperity and escape of the despair and ravages of war. How blessed we are! This fight has already been won for us.

The system that is tried, challenged and defended every day in our nation allowed less than 6 percent of the human family to build a nation that enjoys the highest standard of living in the history of the world.

The Constitution is what has made this possible. It will take an ever-watchful eye to ensure that this foundation is protected from the erosion of changing laws and policies. Knowing our rights by studying the Constitution is the only way to defend the Constitution's protective shelter.

If it seems an ominous task to become familiar with the Constitution, a good place to start is the Bill of Rights. The Bill of Rights is not a declaration of rights but a list of restrictions on the federal government. If we understand these restrictions, we will be better able to determine whether a proposed change of law is in harmony with America's success formula. Any idea in harmony with the proven concepts of the Constitution will be a good choice.

The people of our area will have an outstanding opportunity to become better informed this weekend. A constitutional seminar, "The Unbinding and Teaching of America," presented by Hartman Rector Jr. and Glen Kimber, will be held Saturday from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. at the Gooding High School multi-use room with lunch and dinner breaks.

For more information, call Shauna Koyle at 934-5215. The cost is $20 pre-registered and $25 at the door.

Take advantage of this opportunity to be instructed by enthusiastic and informed speakers.

Leave us alone and in peace

A prayer to Jon Marvel: Oh Mighty Marvel, we beg of you to please come down from your exalted mountaintop and join with us poor, toiling common folk so we may better understand your divine plan to save the world of fish and game from the scourge of the dreadful cattle ranchers.

In your infinite wisdom, you have pontificated that the ranchers are no longer economically viable and that they should be ever grateful to you for helping to get them out of this wretched business.

But please, Oh Mighty Marvel, explain to us here on earth why the people of our fledgling, democratic experiment chose to offer some protection to cattle and sheep ranchers, wheat and sugar beet farmers, timbermen and fishermen, steel and oil producers, hospitals, lawyers and architects if you do not approve.

We believe that it is vaguely sane to assume that when we no longer wish to continue these programs, we have your blessing to change the policy or perhaps to let the surging global economy change it for us.

But please, Oh Mighty Marvel, for now, leave us in peace. In your name, we thank you, Amen!

Remember Eric Liddell chasing history

Seventy-five years ago, a remarkable man did a remarkable thing. Eric Liddell of Scotland refused to run a heat at the 1924 Olympic Games in Paris because the race was scheduled on a Sunday, which his faith taught him would violate the Sabbath.

As we know from the Academy Award-winning film, "Chariots of Fire," Liddell managed to negotiate an unheard-of switch from the 100-meter race he had been scheduled to run to the 400 meter, for which he had not trained, later in the week. On July 11, 1924, Liddell won that race and was showered with Olympic glory.

Instead of cashing in, Liddell turned his back on fame and fortune and followed in his parents' footsteps, becoming a missionary in China, where his most powerful contributions to God and to his fellow humans were made.

In our day of focus groups and Leadership weakened by uncertainty of belief, Eric Liddell's example continues to stand out. A fanatic might have demanded that organizers not run on Sunday, either, and organized a group to enact legislation to conform society to his point of view. Not Liddell. He just said he wouldn't run. Some newspapers denounced him as a traitor to his country and king. How quickly they changed their tune when he won a gold medal. Had he yielded to temptation and compromised his beliefs, we might never have heard of him again.

The account of the race in the July 12, 1924, Times of London conveys the excitement of that day in Paris: "Liddell had the outside berth - generally considered the worst place ... There was a perfect start, and from the first jump-off the pace looked and was, terrific. Two men of the six fell ... But that made no difference, for there was never more than one man in the race, and it was the pace he set that fairly ran them off their legs. Sweeping round into the straight Liddell led by four or five yards, and increased his lead by a couple of yards more in the run home. No one ever looked like catching him ...

"When the time was given out as 47:35 sec., and it was realized that, for the third time in two days, the world's record had been lowered, the Stadium went insane ...

When Liddell left Edinburgh for China the following year, the number of people wanting to bid him farewell was so large that 1,000 were unable to get in. Twenty years later he was taken prisoner with other missionaries and Westerners and became one of 1,800 crowded into a Japanese camp. His personal space had shrunk to 3 by 6 feet. Before his arrest, Liddell managed to get his wife and two children to safety in Canada. Florence Liddell was pregnant at the time with their third daughter, whom Eric would not live to see. He died of a brain tumor on Feb. 21, 1945.

His biographer Sally Magnusson recalled that most people who knew Liddell observed the consistency of his life. She tried to learn whether he had "clay feet." In her book, "The Flying Scotsman," Magnusson thought she might have discovered something when she "happened on a disillusioning eyewitness account of the behavior of some of the missionaries in the Japanese internment camp where Liddell spent the last months of his life. I read of tempers lost and heavy moralizing of exclusiveness and selfishness. The author scarcely had a good word for anyone, but least of all for the Protestant Christians. Then I turned the page and found this: 'It is rare indeed when anyone has the good fortune to meet a saint, but he comes as close to it as anyone I have ever known.' Of course, he was talking about Eric Liddell."

Magnusson adds that thousands of people live similar lives in obscurity and the world does not know their names. "And the first to remind us of that would be Eric Liddell - who would curl up with embarrassment at the very idea of being the subject" of a book or film.

At the end of "Chariots of Fire," producer David Puttnam put on the screen: "Eric Liddell, missionary, died in occupation of China at the end of World War II. All of Scotland mourned."

Press accounts of the 1980 premiere of the film in Edinburgh told of huge crowds, how fitting. The people of Scotland, who had shared their native son with China, were welcoming him back and affirming the note given to Liddell by his masseur before that 1924 race. It referred to the Biblical passage: Samuel 23:6: "He who honors Me, I will honor." And so He did. And so He still does 75 years later.

Custer's Last Stand stemmed from a bad scouting report

George Armstrong Custer gets a bum rap. And on this 133rd anniversary of his fatal "last stand," it's time to reconsider his life and career.

Once portrayed by film star Errol Flynn as the embodiment of American manhood, the warrior culture — and, thus, the public mind — now views Custer as a brutal man, who got what was coming to him. Both innuendos are false. Custer was a man whose virtue was compounded by his youth and whose tactical judgment was sometimes clouded by a desire to achieve a crushing victory at almost any cost. But he was not a psychopath-killer anymore than he was a paragon.

Custer graduated last in his class at West Point in 1861 — but as historian Robert Wiley notes, he did graduate in an era when drop-out rates were much higher than today.

He went on to a stellar career in the Civil War, achieving major generalship while still in his early 20s. He was lionized by his men and feared by his Confederate foes.

When Cavalry chief Phil Sheridan gave Custer's wife the table on which Robert E. Lee had signed his army's surrender out of respect for Custer's role in bringing about the Confederacy's defeat.

After the end of the Civil War, he reverted to his Regular Army rank of captain and served on patrol duty in Texas. Then only 25 years old, he went from the extraordinary headiness of high command and near-continuous combat to parading horses around the state capitals with soldiers who wanted nothing more, after years of war, than to go home.

From being revered as a tenacious leader he became hated as an efficient marauder.

In 1868, under orders from his superiors, he attacked a winter camp of Cheyennes along the Washita River in what is now Oklahoma. Most of those slain were women and children — although when Custer was informed, by one of his officers, that non-combatants were being killed deliberately, he ordered this stopped.

Attacking villages filled with women, children and the elderly was "immoral" — but it was also fiercely desired to defeat a highly mobile foe.

Custer led an expedition into the Black Hills of what is now South Dakota — undisputed Sioux land in 1874. He brought along a reporter and geologists, who together let the world know there was "gold in the grass roots."

This led to a stampede of miners into the Black Hills and ultimately to a policy jointly devised by President Grant and Generals Sherman and Sheridan to require all non-treaty Sioux to register at reservations.

Outraged that they had been ordered to comply with a treaty they had never signed, thousands of Sioux and Cheyenne gathered in southeastern Montana and decided to stand against the coming forces of the U.S. military.

Traditionally, when attacked, Plains Indians dispersed and fled in an effort to protect non-combatants. When Custer attacked the large encampment along the banks of the Little Big Horn, he anticipated the same result.

This anticipation proved deadly wrong. After dividing his forces into three columns, Custer ordered one of them to attack the south end of the village with the promise that his column would attack from the east.

The south column, led by a panicky Maj. Marcus Reno, was repulsed and badly mauled. Viewing the size of the village for the first time from the bluffs above the river, Custer sent an urgent message to the third column, led by Capt. Fred Benteen, to come up quickly with the ammunition train. Benteen came across Reno's embattled command and stopped there. Custer's men, according to Indian testimony and the evidence of the battlefield, fought with limited discipline. One Indian warrior years later entwined his fingers to show how confused was the fighting. Dismounted, the cavalry quickly lost their horses to the Indians, who swirled around them like a hurricane. The "last stand" lasted no more than one hour as about 2,000 Sioux and Cheyennes killed every man in Custer's immediate command of about 210 men. As senior commander, Custer holds ultimate blame for his defeat. Yet a careful study of the battlefield reveals that he made sound tactical decisions in the disbursement of his men. He did not expect his Indian adversaries to fight with such ferocity or marshaled such high numbers. He hoped for reinforcements that never arrived and was compelled to fight on ground with no natural defensive cover. Nor did he expect his own men to fight so poorly. Archaeological findings show that Custer's men fired amazingly few bullets — a testimony to their fright, their rawness (many were new recruits) and the disorganization of the battle itself. Demoralization and sainthood are extremes history wars us generally to avoid. Custer is no exception. He was a generally capable American soldier executing his government's orders and often cruel Indian policy. For this he deserves no great credit, but neither does he deserve unique condemnation.

Woman faces charge after fatal accident

BURLEY - Vehicular manslaughter charges have been filed in connection with a one-car rollover Monday near Mountain Home that killed Michael Kindig, 43, of Paul.

Laurie Whitte, originally identified by Idaho State Police, as Laurie D. Lawson of Rupert, is being held in bond in the Elmore County jail on the felony charge, said Aaron Bazzoli, Elmore County prosecutor.

Whitte, who had been driving the vehicle, also has been charged with felony injury to a child in connection with injuries sustained by a 17-year-old passenger. Authorities have not released the teen's name.

Whitte also faces charges of felony intent to deliver methamphetamine and misdemeanor possession of drug paraphernalia and failure to purchase a driver's license, Bazzoli said. It is unclear if Rupert actually is Whitte's home town, he said.

Kindig, who had not been wearing a seat belt, was ejected from the vehicle as it rolled.

Vehicle accident injures Cassia sheriff's deputy

RUPERT - A 30-year-old Cassia County sheriff's deputy was injured in an accident around 8 a.m. Thursday morning after colliding with a semi truck in Minidoka County.

Deputy Kirk Barnes, 30, of Hazelton was driving his silver 1999 Ford pickup truck eastbound on 3100 North in Minidoka County. At the intersection of 4900 East, Barnes hit a semi truck driven by Guillermo Chaires-Robles, 39, of Eden. Barnes collided with Robles at an angle, said Jamie Wood, a spokeswoman for the Idaho State Police.

Barnes, who works at the Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center in Burley, was taken to Cassia Regional Medical Center where he was listed in stable condition Thursday evening. Robles was not injured, Wood said.

Wood did not know if there were any citations issued in the accident. No other information was available Thursday evening.

Shoshone fireworks may fizzle for lack of money

SHOSHONE - The Shoshone Chamber of Commerce is planning a Fourth of July fireworks display, but it could be the last one unless community residents are willing to contribute.

Chamber members will solicit donations door-to-door on Saturday. Contributions can also be left at the First Security Bank with Kay Maxwell.

The chamber does not have enough money for another fireworks display without the community's support, President Gary Russell said. Those who would like to donate to the fireworks display can call Russell at 886-2883 or Jane Andreason at 886-2347.

Schools in Twin Falls and Jerome will get the latest in computers

By Theresa Jacoby
Times-News writer

JEROME - Two Magic Valley schools will bring in the new millennium with "Star Trek"-like technology and state-of-the-art computers.

The J.A. and Kathryn Albertson Foundation selected Vera C. O'Leary Junior High School in Twin Falls and Jerome High School as two of 15 Idaho sites that will be equipped with the Teaching with Technology professional development program. The intent of the project is to train teachers to incorporate technology in their lesson plans, said Jerome School District Superintendent Jim Cobble said. Both schools will hold open houses to showcase the new high-tech classrooms and demonstrate their new equipment. The demo will involve showing off the simultaneous broadcast capabilities of the high-tech labs. During one demonstration, the high-tech classrooms at the Jerome and

Twin Falls schools will be linked with other Idaho sites. The purpose of the link between the high-tech classrooms is to enhance technology training courses for teachers and students, a news release said. More than 900 teachers from the 15 schools will receive training over the summer in one-week sessions. The sessions, Cobble said, will be taught by technical proficient teachers - including

Rupert fish fry warms Mini-Cassia area

By Dex Dutton
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT - Rainy weather didn't dampen the spirits of Mini-Cassia residents attending a fish fry in the Rupert Square Thursday night. Weather aside, Organization of Rupert Business sponsors were pleased with the turnout at Thursday's event, which was scheduled to coincide with the annual Idaho Regatta.

Rapers were on hand to talk to people and give them an up-close look at the high-performance speedsters.

Scott Cleveland of Long Beach, Calif., crew chief for California racer Paul Whittington, is veteran of several Regattas in Burley. Cleveland said Mini-Cassia is uniquely qualified in filling its role as Regatta host.

"This is our favorite race of the year," Cleveland said. "We don't get this treatment at any of the other races. It is the one race of the year that we make sure we don't miss."

Burley businessman Lonnie Downs said events such as the fish fry don't just make visitors welcome; they bring area residents together and showcase Mini-Cassia. "It is not about the dollars, it is about the people," Downs said. "It just seems we get together less and less these days. I have seen people here tonight that I haven't seen for a long time."

the communities of Burley and Rupert together economically and socially.

"I don't matter if you call it the Burley Regatta, or the Rupert Regatta, or whatever. We need to get together and go after our goals," he said.

Proceeds from Thursday's event will be used by ORB to promote the Rupert downtown area.

Cassia judge refuses plea change in drug case

By John T. Huddy
Times-News writer

BURLEY - A Salt Lake City man's request for a change of plea in a drug trafficking case, was denied Thursday in Cassia County District Court.

Onar Pulido, 22, was scheduled to be sentenced on drug trafficking charges today, although his sentencing has been delayed. He asked District Judge Monte Carlson for permission to change his plea from guilty to innocent.

Carlson denied Pulido's request. Pulido did not show a fair and plausible reason for changing his plea, the judge said. David Haley, Pulido's attorney, said his client had several reasons for wanting to change his plea, including a desire to take the witness stand to defend himself.

"Mr. Pulido believes in his innocence," Haley said. "He does not feel he has committed a crime. He wants the opportunity to take the witness stand to explain his involvement or lack thereof in this case."

Haley said he supported Pulido's right to a jury trial, but Pulido's motion for a change of plea was against his legal advice. "Mr. Pulido has been very forceful in his discussions with me," he said, adding that Pulido has received other advice from family members, inmates and other attorneys.

Next century plans

Twin Falls folks help plan city's next 100 years

By Brandon Flia
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Planners came to town this week wanting to hear details, and they heard some Thursday night from Twin Falls residents with ideas about the town's future.

Among the ideas on residents' minds: narrower residential streets, to slow down traffic and safer sidewalks.

At Thursday's forum, consultants gathered input about the city as it grows. Topics discussed Thursday included transportation, neighborhood parks, downtown and a diverse economy.

Representatives from Balloffeit & Associates, RNL Design, and KMP Consulting were on hand to discuss the plan. The three firms are drawing up the plan.

"Last time we came we focused on the vision, and now we are focusing more on the details," said Ben Herman, planning director for lead consultant Balloffeit & Associates. "We have been here since Monday meeting with people and discussing the plan."

Consultants leave today and will return in September to complete the plan.

"If the council feels satisfied we should wrap up some time this fall," Herman said. City officials should focus on affordable housing, continued economic growth, and parks and open space, City Manager Tom Courtney said.

Courtney also was pleased with the public's ideas. "We always want to see more input, but the quality has been good," City Manager Tom Courtney said.

One resident who offered input was Mary Imman. "I am pleased with the design for narrower streets in residential areas," Imman said. "When the streets are wider the cars go faster."

A popular discussion point was the idea of making sidewalks safer by creating a landscaped buffer between streets and sidewalks.

A consultant also suggested a way to improve traffic. "Five-point intersections create many problems because they don't offer full turning capability, make people wait a long time at the light, and create congestion," said Jim Leggett, an architect with RNL Design. Leggett suggested roundabouts - circular intersections, popular in Australia and England, that can replace five-point intersections.

Planners say the city is unique, but said the area's challenges are common.

"Twin Falls faces the same challenges many towns face: challenges like attaining good employers and balancing parks and natural spaces against development," Herman said. "Blue Lakes area could be an issue anywhere."

But Twin Falls is unique in one major way. "Twin Falls has a spectacular fall and not many towns have such a fantastic natural resource," Herman said.

Citizens group blasts St. Luke's

Activists seek better care for the poor

BOISE (AP) — A citizens advocacy group wants St. Luke's Regional Medical Center to do much more for poor patients and live up to the spirit — not just the letter — of what it means to be a non-profit hospital.

"We're not questioning the care that St. Luke's gives. We want to make sure that Cadillac care goes to more people in the community who need it," Kevin Borden of the Idaho Community Action Network said Thursday in issuing a report critical of the hospital's charitable care policies.

The report, "Public Health or Private Wealth: Who's Cashing in on St. Luke's Riches?" calls for the well-heeled, fast-growing hospital to provide free medical care for people with incomes up to 200 percent of the federal poverty level and to commit 5 percent of its gross revenue to charity care.

St. Luke's officials said they would review the report, but disagreed with its conclusions.

Bill Bodnar, the hospital's vice president of corporate development, said the Community Action Network "has selectively chosen information and figures that support their own political and civic agenda. Their document fails to tell a complete story."

Last winter, Bodnar told a legislative committee last winter that the amount of care St. Luke's provides without reimbursement "alone exceeds by multiples the property tax we would otherwise be paying."

He also said St. Luke's deserves its property tax-exempt status as a charitable operation because it provides medical services to outlying areas and enormous educational benefits to the community.

The Community Action Network, however, said the hospital provides only $1.5 million a year in free care despite tens of millions of dollars a year in net revenues and payment of rapidly rising six-figure salaries to top executives. It also said St. Luke's spends much of its wealth on new technology, replacement of aging equipment, remodeling, expanding and modernizing, and other projects.

"The hospital spent as much on new design, redecorating and new interiors as it did on free care for low-income families between 1993 and 1998, about $3.3 million," the report said.

"St. Luke's charitable mission is sick and needs to get better. They simply look for any way they can to get away from us, and we're underinsured families," it said.

Community Action Network member Diane Phillips said in a statement prepared for a news conference outside the hospital.

St. Luke's moral code in its treatment of many families is completely lacking," added Sharon Van Slyke of Church Women United.

Hospital officials have acknowledged that patients who can pay their bills are charged about 10 percent more to subsidize any so-called charity work. And St. Luke's and other Idaho hospitals — public, non-profit and for-profit — collected more than $3.5 million in state tax money and tens of thousands of dollars more in county property tax money for treating patients unable to pay. The amount from July 1997 through June 1998.

The St. Luke's view was endorsed by the Legislature last winter when it approved a bill exempting hospitals from property taxes as long as they remain charitable organizations under Internal Revenue Service rules.

Officials for Idaho's 12 non-profit hospitals said they were only seeking clarification of a century-old state policy in the wake of an unprecedented attempt by Ada County to make St. Luke's pay $2 million in property taxes for 1996.

Wendell Quick Response Unit gains another life

By Gina Mulder
Times-News correspondent

—WENDELL — After being shut down for two weeks, the Wendell Quick Response Unit is back in business.

City Council members Wednesday decided to let the city and rural fire departments add to the struggling volunteer emergency program. The QRU was disbanded earlier this month because there was not enough money to pay the estimated $220 for vehicle, personal and professional liability insurance or enough volunteers to effectively run the operation.

Wendell Fire Chief "Red" Orr said by placing the program under the fire departments' jurisdiction, the QRU's insurance would cost less and would bring more structure to the program, and once the two fire departments managed the program, the QRU would become a public entity, qualifying for grants that could help fund the service.

"I don't see any other way to get this thing up and running," Orr said.

How the shift will affect the both fire departments' budgets is yet to be determined, Orr said. Orr said the QRU would continue to depend heavily upon donations, with the balance to be split equally between the city and rural fire budgets. Funding will be a point of discussion during the fire departments' upcoming fiscal year 2000 budget meetings.

Also Wednesday, Harold Simerly, owner of Simerly's, a grocery store, garden center and sporting goods outlet, asked council members to consider vacating the alley between East B and C streets. The Simerly's complex encompasses nearly the entire block between East C and C streets to the north and south and Idaho and Shoshone streets to the east and west, with the alley cutting through the middle of the garden center and parking lot.

Simerly has a special use permit for the east 135 feet of the alley because a portion of the store sits on the alley. The remainder of the alley is open. Simerly said by vacating the alley, it would make it easier to control traffic flows through and around the stores. It would also free up the city from any liability. Council President Fred McClain said the council would need time to look over the situation and check on any buried utility lines. He added if the council did decide to move forward, the request would have to go through the public hearing process.

Times-News correspondent Gina Mulder can be reached in Wendell at 536-6649.

Defendant says he didn't know victim was gay

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Aaron McKinney, the second man accused of killing gay college student Matthew Shepard, said he does not hate gay people and had no idea Shepard was gay.

The telephone interview with KGAB radio Wednesday night was McKinney's first public comments since he was arrested and charged with Shepard's killing last October.

"I don't hate anybody because of their race, or sexual preference or religion or anything like that," McKinney said. "I don't discriminate against anybody."

Police have said robbery was the main motive in Shepard's death, but Shepard might have been targeted in part because he was gay.

Shepard's death raised a national outcry against gay bashing. Both gay and anti-gay outlets, asked Shepard's case to advance their agendas.

McKinney faces a first-degree murder charge and the possibility of a death sentence if convicted. His trial is set for Oct. 11 in Laramie.

"I think maybe people should ask my side of the story before they went blowing it up, saying it was a hate crime, and I targeted him because he was gay and all that nonsense," he said.

McKinney said he "had something to do with" the crime but he refused to be specific.

McKinney, who had previous run-ins with the law, said "I didn't target anyone because they were gay. I had no idea Matthew Shepard was gay."

He said he has a good friend who is gay.

McKinney also said he has "a lot of remorseful feelings over this whole matter" and fears the death penalty, which he considers too harsh of a sentence.

FBI concludes review of shooting

BOISE (AP) — The FBI has concluded Officer Chris Rogers' pursuit for his life when he fatally shot a motorist, Police Chief Larry Paulson said.

The agency notified Paulson Thursday it had finished its investigation into the Aug. 31, 1997 death of 21-year-old James Justin Atkinson.

Rogers and another officer were patrolling downtown when they saw a vehicle being driven recklessly. They ran to the car and ordered Atkinson to pull over and turn off the engine.

Atkinson refused and as he was driving away, Rogers reached inside the car to turn off the ignition. Atkinson sped off, dragging the policeman along the pavement. Roger told him to stop and ultimately fired one shot at Atkinson, striking him in the head.

Paulson said the FBI decided the evidence was consistent with Rogers' account of the incident and the shooting resulted from his fear for his life.

Department also concluded there was no evidence Atkinson's civil rights were violated.

The Idaho attorney general's office has not completed its review, but Paulson said he anticipates his findings soon.

Rodney Benson Page, Atkinson's friend who was in the passenger seat, was found guilty in May 1998 of aggravated assault. Ada County prosecutors claimed Page urged Atkinson to speed up and try to knock Rogers off the car by sidestepping a stop sign.

Prosecutors said Page yelled, "Go, go, go, go, go," and "Scrape him off, scrape him off." He was sentenced to between five and 14.5 years in prison.

Officials determined the device was not an explosive.

Conservation groups sue over salmon program they say is slow, ineffective

SEATTLE (AP) — Nearly three years is too long to wait for regulations to protect threatened Pacific Northwest steelhead runs, environmentalists said in a lawsuit filed Thursday.

The suit filed by four groups in U.S. District Court asks that the National Marine Fisheries Service be ordered to impose regulations immediately in the drainage areas of the lower Columbia River and the Snake River, a Columbia tributary.

The agency has been promising protective rules under the Endangered Species Act since Aug. 9, 1996, when steelhead were proposed for listing as threatened in those two and three other regions.

The Snake River listing followed Aug. 18, 1997, and the lower Columbia listing on March 19, 1998, both times with promises that the agency would issue rules "shortly," the lawsuit said.

"Every month that goes by without these regulations in place and enforced means that more essential steelhead habitat is destroyed as more wetlands become parking lots, more spawning grounds clog with sediment and more fish are stranded when overused streams run dry," said Mitch Friedman of Northwest Ecosystem Alliance in Bellingham.

The other three groups are the Clark County Natural Resources Council in Vancouver, Wash., Northwest Environmental Defense Center of Oregon and Washington

Environmental Council. Named as defendants are the agency and Commerce Secretary William M. Daley.

Brian Gorman, a NMFS spokesman, said officials had not seen the lawsuit but added that the reason for the delay was to avoid a crazy-quilt pattern of confusing and potentially conflicting state, federal and local restrictions.

"We agree with plaintiffs that the fish need protection," he said. "That's why we listed them as threatened in the first place."

A similar lawsuit covering steelhead runs in northern California was filed a day earlier by nine groups in San Francisco.

On the Snake, where fish are counted as they pass four dams in Washington state, the steelhead tally for 1998 was about 1,500, compared with a 10-year average of 2,500, agency figures show.

No comparable figures are available for the lower Columbia or its major tributaries, which lack sites for similar counts. In the Washington tributaries of the lower Columbia, "only two of the 21 wild winter- and summer-run steelhead populations are considered healthy," the lawsuit said.

A species listed as endangered under the law, or "in danger of extinction throughout all or a significant portion of its range," is automatically protected from loss of habitat on state, federal and private land.

Those listed as threatened,

"likely to become an endangered species within the foreseeable future," are entitled to regulatory protection to be determined by the secretary of commerce.

Without such rules, protection extends only to federal lands, where other government agencies must consult with NMFS to avoid damage to steelhead.

The lawsuit apparently is the first court test of whether the agency is required to issue protective rules for threatened species and, if so, within what time frame, said John Karpinski, a lawyer for the Clark County group.

"We haven't found any case law on this," Karpinski said. "We don't consider them to have any discretion to say, 'We are going not going to pass any regulations at all.'"

The agency may be waiting to develop an omnibus set of federal, state and local governing steelhead and four salmon species that also have been proposed for listing under the act, "but these (steelhead) rules are going to substantially protect the other fish," he said.

The longer the wait, the more the runs dwindle and the more stringent the rules may need to be, Karpinski said.

The lawsuit covers rivers emptying into the Columbia below Bonneville Dam, about 30 miles east of Portland, Ore., and into the Snake from the Tri-Cities to Hell's Canyon Dam, about 85 miles south of Lewiston, Idaho.

BURLEY — A Utah dance group will offer a chance for local residents to witness a smorgasbord of folk dances tonight.

The Brigham Young University International Folk Dance Ensemble, a group of 36 student dancers, is renowned for its authentic costumes and high-energy performances.

The Oregon Trail Botanical Garden Foundation, a non-profit group in the Magic Valley, invited the troupe to perform in Burley to raise money for a local beautification project.

"This is our first fund-raiser," said Preston Wilkinson, vice president and projects director for the foundation. "We plan to beautify the Magic Valley with botanical gardens."

Proceeds from tonight's show will be donated to the caboose garden project on the east side of the Burley airport. The foundation plans to put in fountains, walking paths, various

Overdose case mounts against Utah doctor

FARMINGTON, Utah (AP) — Authorities have exhumed a skeleton in the investigation of a doctor who allegedly gave his patients too much morphine.

The body of Mary Crane, who died when she was 71, was taken from the Valley View Memorial Cemetery in West Valley City Thursday morning to a state medical examiner's office, where a forensic autopsy was to be performed.

Dr. Robert Weitzel, who continues to practice with the Neurophysiology Institute of the University of Utah, faces numerous allegations of medical and professional misconduct. No criminal charges have been filed against Weitzel, but the Utah Department of Commerce has filed formal charges to revoke his medical license.

Crane was the second of Weitzel's former patients to be exhumed in order to determine the cause of death.

The body of Judith Larsen, who was 93 when she died, was removed and replaced at the Brigham City Cemetery Tuesday. The Davis County Attorney will delay exhuming a third body, which is in the Mount Olivet Cemetery in Salt Lake City, until preliminary test results come back from the first two autopsies.

Weitzel had cared for the three patients at Davis Hospital and the hospital's geriatric psychiatric unit between December 1995 and January 1996.

Investigators hope to determine the amount of morphine in the woman's liver and brain tissues to find out if they were prescribed excessive amount of narcotics and, if so, whether the overmedication caused their premature deaths.

In all three deaths, doctors who previously treated the women told prosecutors their patients did not have life-threatening conditions when they were admitted to the unit.

Preliminary test results should be given to investigators early next week, but state medical examiners won't have final results for another two weeks.

Weitzel's attorney denies his client did anything wrong.

"The patients were unable to articulate complaints of pain, although each patient obviously was experiencing pain as a result of their serious deteriorating condition," Weitzel's attorney, Peter Stubbart, said.

Weitzel prescribed standard amounts of morphine for the conditions of his patients, Stubbart said.

Plea

Pulido was arrested in a July 22, 1998, drug raid in Burley on charges of trafficking 58.6 grams of cocaine, 27.4 grams of methamphetamine and delivering 448.4 grams of cocaine, Pulido was arrested along with several others. Pulido has been held at the Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center since his arrest. Pulido initially pleaded innocent, but then he changed his plea to guilty in March, court records say.

While his motion for a change of plea was denied, Pulido was granted a request for a delay in his sentencing. Through a court interpreter, Pulido said he wanted time to prepare a statement. He will be sentenced at 10:15 a.m. on July 1.

In other court news, a 51-year-old Oakley man charged with vehicular manslaughter changed his plea from innocent to guilty.

Carl Evan Smith Sr. changed his plea after reaching an agreement with the state. The state, represented by Howard Smyser, said Smith's initial charges of aggravated drunken driving would be dismissed if he pleaded guilty to charges of vehicular manslaughter.

Smith agreed, changing his plea to guilty. Smith is now charged with vehicular manslaughter, a charge that could carry up to seven years in prison and at least $10,000 in fines.

Smith was charged in connection with the April 13, 1998, car wreck that killed his 2-year-old cousin Mark Craker. Smith was driving a pickup truck when he lost control and rolled it over an embankment near the Oakley Reservoir, court records and accident reports said.

According to a Cassia County sheriff's department accident report, Smith said he had consumed three or four beers before the accident. His blood alcohol content was at .16 percent after the accident, the sheriff's report says.

Smith said his decision to change his plea came with a decision to face up to the wreck.

"I need to get this over with," Smith said. "I have to live with the death of Mark the rest of my life."

Carlson scheduled Smith's sentencing for 1:30 p.m. Aug. 13, which happens to be a Friday. When asked by Carlson if the sentencing date scared him,

Smith responded, "The whole thing scares me."

OK CORRAL REVISITED

Mock trial acquits Wyatt Earp, 'Doc' Holliday for role in killings

PHOENIX (AP) — Wyatt Earp and "Doc" Holliday were justified in gunning down three men near the OK Corral 118 years ago, an audience of lawyers decided Thursday after a mock trial that blended Hollywood, history and high technology.

"We were vindicated," declared Wyatt Earp, the great-grand-nephew of the legendary lawman who played his namesake at the trial.

Designed to show off advances in trial technology, Thursday's presentation at the State Bar of Arizona convention used witnesses in 19th Century garb — including one whose fake mustache nearly fell off — to offer testimony taken from contemporary accounts of the gun battle.

Since Earp and Holliday were formally cleared of murder charges back in 1881, the case was styled as a civil lawsuit by Kathleen McLauray, the mother of two brothers killed in the fray.

The 30-second shootout in Tombstone, Arizona Territory, has been acted and replayed on film, video, computer disc and print, mostly as a good-and-evil tale with Earp in the hero's role. Lawyers for Mrs. McLauray tried to make a case that good-guy images, portraying Earp as a violent and politically ambitious man willing to murder anyone who got in his way.

What both sides agreed on was the afternoon of Oct. 26, 1881, nine men shot it out in a vacant lot next to Fly's boarding house, behind the OK Corral. On one side were John "Doc" Holliday, town marshal, Virgil Earp and his brothers, Wyatt and Morgan. On the other were brothers Ike and Billy Clanton, Tom and Wyatt Earp, the great-grand nephew of the famous lawman, shows a shotgun that John 'Doc' Holliday used during the gunfight at the OK Corral in 1881, during a mock trial of the famous shootout Thursday in Phoenix.

Frank McLauray, and Billy Claiborne.

The shooting left both McLaurays and Billy Clanton dead. Virgil and Morgan Earp were wounded; Holliday got a scratch.

Lawyers for Mrs. McLauray said Holliday and the Earps were the aggressors, pistol-wielding Ike Clanton and Tom McLauray before the gunfight and firing the first shots.

Holliday, a drunken gambler with a nasty reputation, and Earp were enraged that the McLaurays and Clantons were saying that Holliday had killed a man in a stagecoach holdup.

Wyatt Earp, a Republican, also had political and personal motives: He had been passed over as Cochise County sheriff in favor of John Behan, a Democrat and friend of the Clantons. At the time of the shootout, Behan's former fiancée had moved in with Wyatt Earp, who was married to another woman.

The Clantons' and McLaurays' talk of wanting to fight the Earps and Holliday was not enough to justify the Earps gunning for them, said Deborah Fine, one of Mrs. McLauray's lawyers.

"Fighting words are not enough to kill a man for, but Doc Holliday and Wyatt Earp think it is," Fine said. "These men sitting here cannot make the law, they cannot make up the law as they go along."

Earp and Holliday were deputized by Virgil Earp and therefore were acting as police officers when they confronted the cowboys and told them to turn over their weapons, defense lawyers said. Earp testified the McLaurays and Clantons had a reputation throughout the West as "cattle rustlers, stage robbers and even, on occasion, murderers."

Earp said he fired one of the first two shots in self defense after Billy Clanton and Frank McLauray drew their guns on him. The hundreds of lawyers in the audience at the Phoenix resort, voting with electronic keypads at their seats, agreed with Earp, voting 2-1 to reject Mrs. McLauray's claim for damages.

"Cases are often decided on how likeable witnesses are, and Wyatt Earp was an extremely likeable person," Fine said after the verdict.

The high-tech demonstrations at the trial included a clip from the Kevin Costner movie "Wyatt Earp" played on large screens from a digital video disc, video clips of witnesses' previous testimony and both video and computerized reenactments of the shootout.

That odd blend of past and present led to some lighter moments.

Asked to recall his previous testimony, Bob Boze Bell, playing Sheriff Behan, said, "You're going to have to remind me what I said, it's been 118 years."

The trip was only one of several from Bell, a local performer in historical plays.

Probe of fires turns to separatist groups

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — An investigation into arson attacks at three area synagogues has turned toward two of the most active white separatist groups in the region, published reports said Thursday.

Federal and local investigators are looking at followers of the National Alliance and the World Church of the Creator and whether their anti-Semitic messages may have spurred the arson attacks against three of Sacramento's synagogues last Friday, The Sacramento Bee reported.

Investigators stressed that they are looking at all possible suspects in the case and that some individuals were questioned simply because of their links to the groups.

"We're interviewing everybody and we're not just stopping at these groups," said Sacramento County Sheriff Lou Blanes. "We're checking into every lead that we get, we're checking out old cases that have hate as the element of the case."

FBI spokesman Nick Rossi said more than 100 agents and officers from several agencies are analyzing evidence from the scenes.

"Rumors concerning specific groups or individuals are only speculative and we will have no comments concerning such rumors," Rossi said.

The evidence included a Kinko's copy shop bag that may have carried anti-Semitic literature found at two of the synagogues.

Officials said that so far there is no evidence of any wide-ranging conspiracy in the attacks, which caused more than $1 million in damage.

Both groups being investigated are local branches of two of the largest white-separatist organizations in the country.

"We have a number of people in the Sacramento area, but they don't get involved in the burning of synagogues," William Pierce, leader of the National Alliance, said from his headquarters in Hillsboro, W.Va.

Matt Hale, head of the World Church of the Creator, based in East Peoria, Ill., also denied involvement by his group.

The Jewish War Veterans of the United States of America offered a $5,000 reward for information leading to the conviction of those responsible. Gov. Gray Davis offered a $25,000 reward earlier this week.

The arson attacks are "un-American," said Burt Herman, a California national executive committee member for the veterans' group, which has a fund to fight hate crimes.

"I'm really am upset with the whole thing because it seems to be prevalent throughout the whole country, whether it's black churches or Jewish synagogues, and we just have to put a stop to all this hate nonsense that's going on," Herman said.

Some sheriffs question plan to move prisoners out of Idaho

POCATELLO (AP) — Some Idaho sheriffs are unhappy with the state Board of Correction's decision to ship more inmates out of state.

Bannock County Sheriff Lorin Nielsen said the board promised to contract for a certain number of beds every year in county jails, but the inmates never showed up.

"We've got a good facility and a great staff," Nielsen said. "I wish our own state would take care of us like they take care of Texas and Minnesota."

Hundreds of Idaho inmates were sent to those states and Louisiana when Idaho's state prisons hit capacity and there was no more accessible space in county jails. Most have since been returned to Idaho although 200 remain in New Mexico, where another 100 are being shipped in the next few weeks.

But the state plans to not only bring those inmates back but to also essentially clean out the county jails within a year when it opens the new privately run 1,250-bed prison south of Boise.

The counties may not be getting as much state money as they wanted right now, but Gov. Dirk Kempthorne has warned them to be prepared when the millions of dollars they are getting from the state dry up next year.

For years, the real bone of contention between the state and counties has been the price for jail beds. State law specifically sets it at $35 a day per inmate, but a number of counties have pressed for an increase. A bill to hike the rate was quickly buried by state lawmakers last winter. State officials have said several counties have flatly refused to provide any more jail cells at the existing rate.

The dispute, however, has left some counties with no choice but to try filling their jails with federal and out-of-state prisoners.

Jails like the one in Bannock County were designed with extra beds to help generate revenue for the jail. When the beds are not filled, the jail loses income.

"We have 253 beds in Bannock County, and our prisoners take up about 170 to 180," Nielsen said. "That leaves at least 50 to 60 to generate revenue."

All officials agreed to hold Oregon inmates because Oregon agreed to sign a contract. The rate it was paying was $43 a day.

The state recently contacted Bingham County Sheriff Dale Holm about available beds. But when a state inspector visited the jail, he insisted that money be spent on a number of repairs before a contract was signed.

"We've had a top rating ever since they've been inspecting it," Holm said. "I think they found fault with the jail to give them an excuse not to contract with us."

Correction Director James Spalding has backed up Holm's position. Management the past several years on the assumption that just over 200 state inmates would be housed in county jails. More than 300 are in county jails this month.

Biologists try to save Nevada's wildlife

Rapid growth hurts some species and habitats, they say

RENO, Nev. (AP) — The empty country along Nevada's open highways seems as devoid of life as Mars. Mile after mile, little more can be seen than parched, silvery-gray sagebrush, plains and stark mountains dotted with squat piñon pines and junipers.

But hidden in that vast ocean of sage are countless isolated pockets of habitat that sustain tens of thousands of animal and plant species.

They range from barren desert floors with brilliant orange-colored globemallow to wind-swept ridges with 4,000-year-old bristlecone pines from desert springs with snails the size of a grain of sand to rugged canyons with native bands of bighorn sheep.

Contrary to its image as a desolate wasteland, Nevada is one of the most biodiverse states in the country, with plants, insects, fish, amphibians and at least one mammal — a chipmunk — found nowhere else.

But the state's diverse plant and wildlife is threatened by rapid growth. Dozens of species have been added to the state's latest list of sensitive plants and animals: the mountain spring frog, the Sierra alligator lizard, the sharp-tailed sparrow, 49 snail species and more than 50 butterfly species were added this month. The list now has 498 species on it, 23 of them on the federal endangered list and 15 are threatened.

"Any state that's pushing 500

Glenn Clemmer of the Nevada Natural Heritage Program spends some time Monday looking over the flowers of a steamboat buckwheat plant.

species on the sensitive list should take potential threats to its biodiversity pretty seriously," said Peter Brussard, a University of Nevada, Reno biology professor.

Wildlife Division, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management.

The groups collect and hand out information on the status of species to help guide developers, miners, consultants and government planners in land use decisions. To alert them to potential problems, they also identify hot spots inhabited by sensitive or potentially vulnerable species.

Nevada has led the nation in growth over the last decade, and its population of 1.9 million is expected to double by 2018.

Brussard said growth hasn't accounted for many of the listings so far, but will take a toll in the future.

"Growth leads to habitat destruction, habitat fragmentation and demands on water," he said. "We're already seeing problems with some species in Las Vegas and more growth-caused impacts are likely in the future."

The Nevada Natural Heritage Program covers 48 "high priority" or conservation sites that include such high-growth areas as the Las Vegas Valley and Carson Flats in the Reno-Carson City area.

"Our common goal is to get people to be proactive and take steps to prevent a species from being listed as endangered," Brussard said.

Conservation of species are found only in Nevada, including the playful Palmer's chipmunk of the Spring Mountains near Las Vegas, the prehistoric-looking cutlip sucker fish of the Snake Lake near Reno and the showy, purple Gemes vetchling flower of the Independence Range near Elko.

Sheep industry is awaiting decision on import sanctions

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — American sheep producers are impatiently waiting for President Clinton to decide whether to sanction foreign producers exporting their meat to the United States.

"We're getting a lot of calls from producers telling us that they are not making important business decisions that need to be made because they're waiting to find out what Clinton says," said Cathy Cummins, communications director for the American Sheep Industry Association.

Domestic sheep officials have long claimed that Australian and New Zealand importers dump lamb on the U.S. market at undercutting prices, undercutting domestic producers.

ducers to break even, but is expected to drop if no importations are placed on imports, Cummins said.

"It's not good. The longer they wait the worse it looks for us," Hammer sheepman Robert Ball said.

Clinton's announcement will end months of bickering between U.S. sheep industry officials and importers.

Domestic sheep officials have long claimed that Australian and New Zealand importers dump lamb on the U.S. market at undercutting prices, undercutting domestic producers.

Official accused of domestic battery

POCATELLO (AP) — City Councilman Dale Wilkinson will appear in court Wednesday for alleged battery of his wife.

Wilkinson, 39, was arrested Sunday evening by Bannock County sheriff's deputies after a disturbance at a relative's home. He later was released on $5,000 bond.

Chief Deputy Mike Sanders said the fight was "mainly verbal," but there was some "hands-on" contact.

Harrison, a 5-foot, 10-inch former Idaho State University basketball player, is charged with enhanced domestic battery because children were present during the altercation with his wife.

If convicted, the owner of Pier 49 San Francisco Sourdough Pizza could face a $1,000 fine and up to six months in jail.

Salmon return to Washington streams

LEAVENWORTH, Wash. (AP) — Salmon No. 45 has avoided fishermen's nets, escaped hungry sea lions and successfully navigated his way through hydroelectric dams in his five years.

But the 3-foot-long Chinook's most important test is coming near the end of his life and could have implications for the survival of generations of salmon.

The fish was one of 10 adult salmon released this week in Ice Lake Creek above the impassable barriers of the Leavenworth National Fish Hatchery, the first salmon to ply the pristine upper reaches of the creek in nearly 60 years.

Outfitted with satellite devices that track them, the fish should provide researchers with valuable information on how far they swim and where they lay their eggs above the hatchery.

The fish will die at the end of summer as all salmon do after they spawn.

The data will then be used by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in deciding whether to remove barriers and allowing fish to use the relatively undisturbed spawning habitat above the 1940s-era hatchery which help restore dwindling runs of wild salmon in the Columbia River and its tributaries.

As part of the same study, 20 steelhead were released above the hatchery in April, and 20 bull trout will be released in August.

Wild chinook salmon are a freshwater species and increasing fish habitat. Environmentalists and federal agencies see the hatchery project as a regional model for restoring streams and increasing fish habitat.

Salmon No. 45 — the number assigned to his tracking device — and the other nine fish were raised at the hatchery and released into the wild about five years ago. They migrated down the Columbia River to the Pacific Ocean, where they stayed until migrating back to Ice Lake Creek this month.

While data is collected by satellites, Malenna Cappellini, a biologist for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and other biologists will go out three times a week to track each fish.

SMOKE ONLY IN DESIGNATED AREAS

Members of the Coeur d'Alene Police Special Intervention Response Team work through a smoke screen during crowd control and tactical training Wednesday at the Kootenai County Fairgrounds. The squad was called to action June 18 to quell a disturbance after a classic car rally.

Enjoying your trip should be top priority

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been discussing buying a recreational vehicle that we could take to New Hampshire or California. However, I have some reservations about traveling with him, as he gets too intense when he gets behind the wheel of a car.

Past experiences have made car travel sheer hell, because he fills up the gas tank and refuses to stop for anything until the tank indicator reads empty. It doesn't matter whether the dog or I have to go to the bathroom, or need to get out and stretch our legs, or if we need to eat or are thirsty. As if that doesn't make us miserable enough, he insists on doing all the driving at 10 to 20 miles above the speed limit. All the scenery is a blur!

I have discussed these issues with him and he assures me that he will change, but I have been with him almost 20 years, and I don't see it happening in the near future. I am concerned that we'll end up killing each other.

Should I say yes?

DEAR TRAVEL TERROR: Heck! Not your husband has proven that once he gets behind the wheel he's disrespectful of the law, insensitive to your needs, and so focused on getting to the destination that you cannot enjoy the trip.

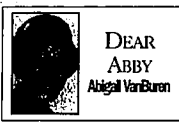

Do your bladder a favor. Take a bus, take a train, but do not agree to accompany him on the highway.

DEAR ABBY: This may seem trivial to you, but the more I encounter this the more it annoys me. It seems that almost every form to be filled out — organization, business, government agency, etc. — asks for first name, middle initial and last name.

Abby, there are thousands of us (maybe hundreds of thousands) who don't go by our first names. We use our middle names.

When I try filling out forms using just the first initial and writing in my middle name, they invariably reverse it in subsequent correspondence.

Have these people never heard of T. Boone Pickens, H. Ross Perot and J. Paul Getty? It would be so simple to just put in the spaces and ask for first name OR initial, middle name OR initial and last name. Am I being petty? Sign me...

DEAR ABBY

—J. QUENTIN PUBLIC,
NOT JOHN Q. PUBLIC

DEAR MR. PUBLIC: You are not being petty, and I empathize with your frustration. You are a square peg who doesn't quite fit into a round hole.

Console yourself that at least you are in good company, because it's unlikely that the forms will be changed — even for H. Ross Perot, T. Boone Pickens or J. Quentin Public. (J. Paul Getty is beyond those worldly concerns.)

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the letter from the brother-in-law of a restaurant owner concerning "unattended children." I couldn't resist sending a copy of a sign that was on the wall of a restaurant near Interstate 90 near Bozeman, Mont.

"Children unattended will be towed away at owner's expense!"

Abby, feel free to share it with your readers.

Report: Green-space looks nice, pays bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — An environmental group says that curbing sprawl pays.

The Trust for Public Land has issued a report showing how cities have pumped their economies by tens of millions of dollars by acquiring open land, redeveloping industrial space, and building parks and trails.

"The evidence is mounting up that these kinds of investments are not expenses, but they are also good for the bottom line," said Will Rogers, president of the group.

Homes bordering the 12-mile Burke-Gilman trail in Seattle sold for 6 percent more than other houses of comparable size, the report says.

Land next to green space in Salem, Ore., is worth $1,200 an acre more than land only 1,000 feet away.

River rafting and kayaking generates $50 million for the Colorado economy each year, according to the report. And Atlanta's tree cover has a value of $15 million for improving air quality, the trust said.

The Oregon experience over the last quarter of a century validates what's in this report," Democratic Rep. Earl Blumenauer of Oregon said.

He said Portland's focus on adding parks and improving transportation has fueled the growth of the high-technology industry in the city.

The group's report follows a trend among environmental groups. They are pushing the argument that curbing sprawl is not just good for air quality and saving plant and animal life — it is good for your pocketbook.

"The argument flies in the face of past beliefs of many community leaders, who contended that fast growth was the surest way to economic prosperity."

The report, "The Economic Benefits of Parks and Open Space," says that in San Francisco, Golden Gate Park increased nearby property values from $500 million to $1 billion, generating up to another $10 million in property taxes.

In Hebron, Conn., farms required 43 cents in municipal services for every dollar they generated in taxes, compared with residential properties that required $1.06 in services.

The report also cites examples of how preserving space has improved cities, such as how a parking garage in downtown Boston was converted into an underground garage covered by a park.

In Chattanooga, Tenn., leaders lured people back to the city by cleaning the air, acquiring open space and constructing parks and trails, the report said.

Roy Bernardi, mayor of Syracuse, N.Y., said there is no room left to outwardly expand in his region.

BYU dancers come to Burley

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

BURLEY — It's hot THE Riverdance, but it will do until the real thing comes to Burley.

The Oregon Trail Bonnical Garden Foundation will present a performance by the Brigham Young University International Folk Dance Ensemble tonight.

The troupe will dance a hardshoe exhibition of riverdance in the style of Johanna Edlinger's Broadway show. Edlinger has choreographed this part of the folk dance program.

"Very few, if any, attain the high degree of excellence this superb group does," said Robert Raddock, festival coordinator at Disneyland, where the folk dance ensemble has performed "The show was one of the most professional I have seen."

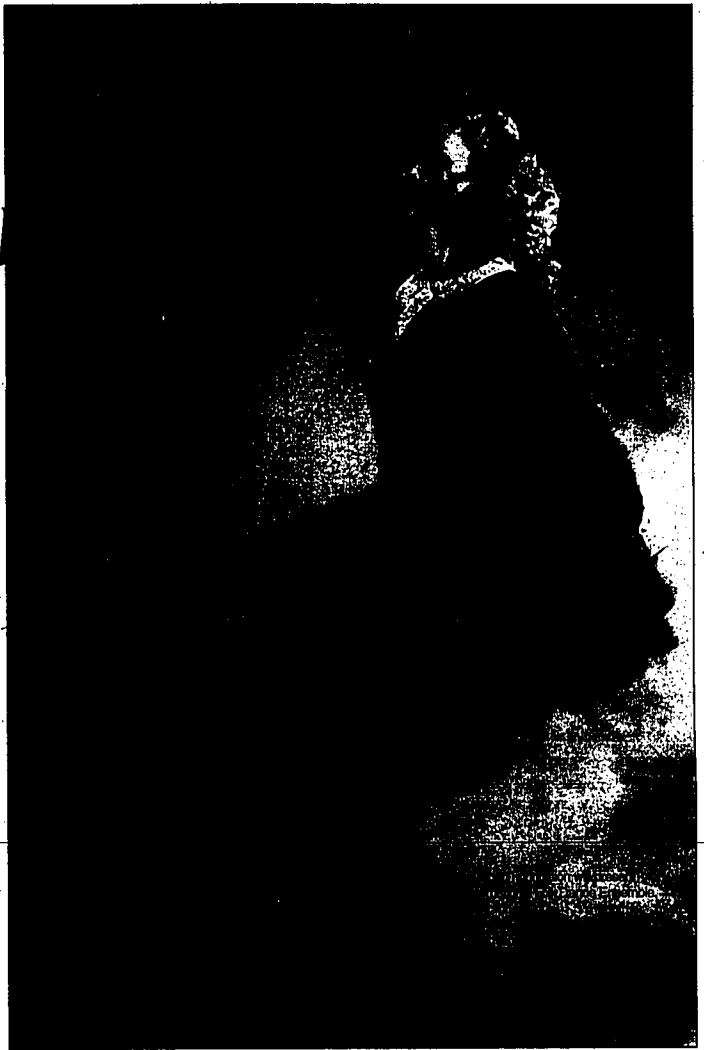

The Oregon Trail Botanical Garden Foundation, which planned this event as a fundraiser, was organized to plan a small garden around Burley's "Little Caboose" monument.

"The committee soon realized that they will not make much money as the costs for this event are very high," foundation president Dennis Whipple said in a news release. "Estimated costs are $5,000 to BYU, $500 to advertising, $1,000 for rent and the costs of supporting snuff, and $500 for printing and miscellaneous. However, they reasoned that this folk dancing event will serve as a springboard for the committee to get organized and channel support for the Little Caboose Botanical Garden."

The Folk Dance Ensemble, made of BYU dance students, has performed in England, France, Germany, Spain, Austria, Switzerland, Russia, China and throughout the United States and Canada.

It presents a display of many cultural traditions in an authentic array of colorful costumes and choreography.

Johanna Edlinger of Brigham Young University's Folk Dance Ensemble leaps triumphantly in 'Cry of the Celts.' This unique Irish dance demands exceptional strength and agility, trademarks of the internationally acclaimed ensemble.

Wendell celebrates annual Dairy Days

By Rachel Denny
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Although many people may not think dairies breed progress, organizers of the 10th annual Magic Valley Dairy Days would beg to differ.

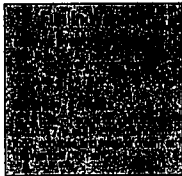

The two-day event, which started out as one day and was called Wendell Dairy Days, celebrates the dairy industry in the Magic Valley, organizer Paula Simerly said.

"The revenue and things they bring to our towns is responsible for our growth," she said. "We need to recognize the dairy industry."

"There's a debate whether dairies are good or bad, but economically it's been good," she said. "Although the event started out small, it has filled to capacity over the years. This year every booth is occupied, Simerly said."

"I think it's become a big event," she said. "This year all of the places we have to put somebody has been filled. People are coming from farther afield. Our 'town people are coming.'"

In addition to local entertainment and the parade, in which the Wendell Mop Brigade will perform, there are a few new items on the agenda this year.

This is the first year organizers have used Friday in connection with the event.

"There was the opportunity to capitalize on Friday night and get more people in town," Simerly said.

Friday night restaurants from all over the Magic Valley will be featured. There will be at least one restaurant from each surrounding town.

"The idea is to get people at the park on Friday night," Simerly said. "It's a good opportunity, people don't always get to a wide variety of foods that maybe people in this area don't go out of their way to try."

Times-News correspondent Rachel Denny can be reached in Twin Falls at 734-3780

FLIX — The iconoclastic journey of an icon

By Linda Deutsch
The Associated Press

The search for perfection is a recurring theme in "The Red Violin," and it is not extravagant to say that this remarkable movie comes close to achieving that goal.

It is a film that touches all of the senses — eyes, ears, mind and heart — with the blending of evocative storytelling and symphonic music that is a rare treat in this summer of the big-budget blitzkrieg of special effects.

"The Red Violin" is clearly a labor of love and a passion for all involved in making this film for an astonishingly low $9 million. The Canadian-Italian co-production takes viewers on a journey across five countries and three centuries as it tells the imagined story of a very special violin as it transforms the lives of its owners.

At times, "The Red Violin" feels like five movies in five languages. But the clever plotting of the story and the mystery that is solved only in the final frames bring all of them together in a satisfying and surprising climax. Subtides for all but the English-language sections keep the authenticity of each locale.

The only "stars" likely to be recognized by American audiences are Samuel L. Jackson as a violin expert who becomes enamored of the legendary instrument and Greta Scacchi as the romance writer and muse to an unconventional violinist (Jason Flemyng) in 19th-century Italy where a noted violin maker, Nicolo Bussotti (Carlo Cecchi), creates his masterpiece, a perfect violin intended as a gift for his unborn son. But the future of the baby and of Bussotti's beautiful wife (Irene Graniolo) are shadowed by tragedy predicted by a fortuneteller (Anita Laurenti) whose readings of tarot cards are a unifying thread of the movie.

Eventually, the violin falls into the hands of Gypsies who take it to England where it inspires the virile virtuoso Frederick Pope (Flemyng). It then makes its way to Shanghai and becomes a political hot potato in China's cultural revolution.

The violin's ultimate arrival at a prestigious auction house in present-day Montreal is telegraphed throughout the film as we see a high-stakes auction in repeated flashbacks. In yet another subplot, Jackson, in a virtuoso performance of his own, is the violin expert brought in to authenticate the Red Violin.

Keb Mo opens blues series

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - The Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities will present an all-star lineup for the 1999 Twilight Blues Series, which starts Thursday.

The series features some of the best blues artists performing today, and will take place in the natural amphitheaters of the Trail Creek Cobin grounds and the River Run Lodge at the Sun Valley Resort.

Artists on the series include Keb Mo performing with his band, Koko Taylor and Her Blues Machine and Taj Mahal and the Phantom Blues Band.

Guitarist Keb Mo will appear for a command performance on Thursday after last year's sold-out show at Trail Creek. Winner of two Grammy Awards, including this year's award for best contemporary blues album, Keb Mo is rapidly becoming known as one of the hottest blues artists of his generation.

His Delta blues songwriting is a distinctive blend of acoustic-leaning blues and melodic pop-folk that ranges from 12-bar blues to folk R&B-style storytelling.

On July 11 at Trail Creek, the legendary Koko Taylor will belt out the blues over the course of a 30-year career. Taylor has received nearly every award available - including 14 W.C. Handy Awards.

Taylor has gotten Grammy nominations for six of her last seven records and won a Grammy in 1984. Her energetic, gritty and powerful singing style, combined with her tough-as-nails band, define the soul of the blues.

The finale will be at River Run on July 28, featuring the legendary Taj Mahal. For more than 30 years, Taj Mahal has delighted fans with his effortless and eclectic blending of music styles. He is a master of finger-picking country blues, bluegrass banjo, slide guitar, Southern blues, soul R&B, reggae and Hawaiian music.

Adam Sandler tries parenting in 'Big Daddy'

Los Angeles Times

Movies playing in south-central Idaho this weekend. Opinions are by Los Angeles Times, Knight Ridder Newspapers and Washington Post reviewers. Ratings by the Motion Picture Association of America are (G) for general audiences; (PG) parental guidance urged because of material possibly unsuitable for children; (PG-13) parents are strongly cautioned; (R) restricted, younger than 17 admitted only with parent or adult guardian; (NC-17) no one younger than 17 admitted.

Century of Columbia Pictures
Adam Sandler stars in 'Big Daddy.'

◆ "Austin Powers: The Spy Who Shagged Me" - The droll's most incept superhero and his equally dodgy nemesis Dr. Evil (both played by Mike Myers) star in the raucous, off-color cornucopia of spoof humor that takes gleeful and mostly on-target potshots at a wide range of pop-culture targets. (PG-13 for sexual innuendo and crude humor.)

◆ "Plig in the City" - Inventive, funny and often disturbing, the "Babe" sequel has a more macabre, Wonka-ish tone than the first movie, and it takes us into troubling territory: homelessness, death, starvation, death, catastrophic bodily injury, coping with disabilities and leprosy.

◆ "Big Daddy" - Irresponsible day school grad Adam Sandler takes an unconventional approach to child-rearing when he assumes custody of a 5-year-old delinquent. (PG-13 for language and some crude humor.)

◆ "Black Mask" - Echoes of "Batman" and "The Green Hornet" infuse this wall-to-wall action movie in which Jet Li, the Chinese martial-arts star, plays a misdeed-mannered liberator with a secret identity. The film has spectacular stunts, just don't expect this Hong Kong import to make any sense. (R for strong violence including martial arts combat, some sexual content and language.)

◆ "Entrapment" - An indifferent script and the 40-year age difference between stars Kevin Connery and Catherine Zeta-Jones hamper this derivative romantic caper set in the world of daring cut burglars and their nemesis. (PG-13 for some language, sensuality, violence and drug content.)

◆ "The General's Daughter" - John Travolta and Madeleine Stowe star as a pair of investigators looking into the murder of the daughter of one of the Army's most popular generals. The far-fetched story line is salvagable, but needs help from the direction and the acting which is not forthcoming. (R for graphic images relating to sexual violence, nudity and language.)

◆ "Mindline" - A lame psycho-thriller in which an ambitious psychiatrist (Cuba Gooding Jr.) tries to get inside the head of a lethal primatologist (Anthony Hopkins) with a secret. Mostly this film is a greatest-hits collection of plot devices and emotional cues from other, not to mention better, movies. (R, for some intense violent behavior.)

◆ "Love Letter" - This slight romantic comedy starring Kate Capshaw, has all the write stuff, but it hardly pushes the edge of the scripted envelope. Though the foryetsomething heroine has an affair with a 20-year-old subordinate, there's nothing steamy, much less risky, about this middle-aged love. With-Tom Selleck. Rated PG-13.

◆ "The Matrix" - A wild cinematic futuristic thriller that stars Keanu Reeves and Laurence Fishburne as butlers against a computer-controlled world that treats people like Eveready batteries. The writing and directing Wachowski brothers combine rare visual feast with traditional sci-fi premises in a way that always dazzles the eye. (R for sci-fi violence and brief language.)

◆ "The Mummy" - Energetically written and directed by Stephen Sommers, this silly and cartoonish remake of the 1932 horror classic, is crammed with such familiar genre elements as secret brotherhoods and savage hoards on horseback, ancient booby traps. Brendan Fraser, Rachel Weisz and Arnold Vosloo combine violence and some partial nudity.

◆ "Never Been Kissed" - Teen movies are suddenly popping up in new piles, and this movie is like one of those big fat red ones that blooms on your nose right before a big date. Drew

Big box office
This week's top-grossing films, according to Exhibitor Relations:

- 1. "Tarzan," Disney
- 2. "Austin Powers: The Spy Who Shagged Me," Magic Lantern
- 3. "The General's Daughter," Paramount
- 4. "Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace," 20th Century Fox
- 5. "Notting Hill," Universal

Hawn play Everybody in this remake of the 1970 comedy that starred Jack Lemmon and Faye Dunaway. The movie deals with the couple's mishaps when they arrive in New York, and anyone who's dealt with the pressures of travel can relate.

◆ "The Prince of Egypt" (PG) - Parents should be prepared to answer questions regarding this animated retelling of the life of Moses. The actions of the sometimes wrathful God will have to be explained, and some younger viewers may be frightened by the mention of violence to first-borns.

◆ "The Red Violin" - This ambitious and complex film spans three centuries and five continents as it tracks the "life" of a violin from its creation in 17th century Italy to its fate at an auction in modern-day Montreal. Samuel L. Jackson plays a pivotal role, but the violin is the main character of this lushly orchestrated and moving film. (Unrated: Fleeting sex scene and some nudity.)

◆ "Star Wars: Episode I The Phantom Menace" - While this prequel to the original "Star Wars" trilogy is certainly serviceable, it's noticeably lacking in warmth and humor. "Episode I" stars Liam Neeson and Ewan McGregor as the Jedi Knights Qui-Gon Jinn and Obi-Wan Kenobi, Natalie Portman as Queen Amidala of Naboo and Jake Lloyd as the young Anakin Skywalker. (PG for sci-fi action/violence.)

◆ "Notting Hill" - This film, a collateral descendant of "Four Weddings and a Funeral," is a smartly cast and consistently amusing romantic comedy about an unlikely romance between a Hollywood's biggest star" (Julia Roberts) and a shambling British bookstore owner (Hugh Grant). The key to this film's considerable charm is the script by Richard Curtis and the able direction of Roger Michell. (PG-13 for sexual content and brief strong language.)

◆ "The Out-of-Towners" (PG-13) - Steve Martin and Goldie

◆ "Tarzan" - This new animated version of the Edgar Rice Burroughs classic about a man who lived with the great apes, benefits from adroit vocal casting (including Tony Goldwyn, Minnie Driver, Glenn Close and Rosie O'Donnell), an unexpected Phil Collins soundtrack and some marvelous technical breakthroughs, all of which combine to underscore why this story has captivated so many people for so long. (G.)

◆ "10 Things I Hate About You" - For a supposed teen comedy, supporting adult characters get most of the laughs in this tolerable modern adaptation of William Shakespeare's battle-of-the-sexes classic, "The Taming of the Shrew." Rated PG-13.

◆ "Thirteenth Floor" - A futuristic-looking time-travel mystery, mawkishly plotted and not nearly as original as it means to be. Craig Bierko and Gretchen Mol are cut-oreas leads, but Armin Mueller-Stahl, Vincent D'Onofrio and Dennis Haysbert lend strong presence in supporting roles. (R for violence and language.)

Sawtooth Rangers present at Sawtooths in Ketchikan, Hailey, Coeur d'Alene, Lewiston, Boise, Camby in Hailey, and the rodeo grounds to be held on-site.

◆ "William Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream" - This starry version of Shakespeare's lighthearted comedy is overly slapstick, and in trying too hard to be funny it ends up being almost no fun at all. Modern farceur Kevin Kline is a standout as Nick Bottom. (PG-13 for sensuality and nudity.)

'Patch Adams' reaches video shelves

Combined wire services

New videos in Twin Falls-area video stores this week:

• "Patch Adams" (PG-13) — That advertising photo of a dejected Robin Williams in a red clown nose tells you everything you need to know about "Patch Adams."

It implies poignancy laced with humor, the quintessential Williams formula.

This is one of those based-on-real-events films that seem too fantastic to be true. Hunter "Patch" Adams is a depressive inspired by a mental-institution stay to become a doctor, and use his brilliant mind and buffoonish bedside manner to heal others.

A cynic might walk into this movie with an aversion of sentimentality. But director (and former stand-up comedian) Tom Shadyan's "Patch Adams" is so schmalzy, although the film certainly falls into the heartwarming drama category.

Unable to shake the blues, Adams (Williams) sends himself to a psych ward. But after an imaginary squirrel battle with his paranoid roommate, and a therapy-group fringe test involving a catatonim, he realizes his destiny.

He enrolls in a Virginia medical school, where he quickly rises to the top of the class. But there's a hitch with the college dean, Walcott (Bob Gunton), who believes doctors are superior to patients, and is incensed at Adams' efforts to "get down on their knees." Others could do without this talented clownboy, including his studious roommate Mitch (Philip Seymour Hoffman), and Carol (Monica Potter), the ice princess upon whom he has a crush. His one true friend is Truman (Daniel London), a warmhearted fellow geek.

Adams — nor Williams for that matter — can't help himself. He enrolls in the child psychiatry ward at the university hospital, where he entertains the kids with a springe clown nose and beanpou shoes. He even gets through to the bitter end of his career by singing to him and trading death-rattle euphemisms. These antic Williams moments are scattered throughout the narrative, providing comic relief to the actor seems to need.

• "A Simple Plan" — There's a precise moment in "A Simple Plan" when a good man turns sour. He's in a field, staring at a gym bag filled with $4 million, its owner dead in a plane crash. In an instant, contentment gives way to murderous greed.

Sam Raimi, director of "The Evil Dead" films and "Darkman," has the credentials to dig into moral ambiguity and does it delicately. The movie reminded me of "Fargo," with its bleak winter landscape and bumbling attempts at crime that spiral deeper into chaos.

Raimi uses nature to punctuate his cinematic mood swing. A fox wreaks havoc in a henhouse; vultures circle in a barren sky. The movie is based on Berkeley author Scott B. Smith's 1993 novel and subsequent screenplay. The cast clicks sharply, led by Bill Paxton as Hank Mitchell, a man at peace with his feed-store job and very-pregnant wife (Brigitte Fonda). "I was a happy man," he says in voice-over at the film's start. His ethical slide is so self-righteous about his work ethic and community standing.

Billy Bob Thornton's character is more complicated. He is Hank's mentally simple brother, Jacob, gullible yet ultimately more than the actor's barely recognizable behind thick glasses and makeup that makes his face appear fleshy and sad, his stringy hair offset by a knit cap. It's a fascinating performance — more like a complete transformation — that borrows from his "Sliding Blade" persona.

Fonda's Sarah Mitchell is a happy homemaker, putting in the kitchen when she's not at her library job. Yet she emerges as the most diabolical, with finely honed survival instincts and a strategic mind. It is Fonda's best performance in awhile.

The fourth ensemble member is Brent Briscoe as Lou, Jacob's best friend, an alcoholic loser who's the weakest link in this ill-fated party.

All are neighbors in a Midwestern town, struggling to make a living against the bleak backdrop of midwinter. Driving down the highway one day, Hank, Jacob and Lou stumble upon the buried wreckage of a small plane, the pilot decomposing in the cockpit, and a bag crammed with an obviously illicit $4 million in the rear.

Nona calls it the American Dream in a gym bag, to which Hank responds: "You work for the American Dream."

But you can see their mental gears gnashing, and this trio forms an uneasy alliance. They agree to sit on the money for a few months, and if no one surfaces to claim it, split it up and leave town. Nona is prepared for the pressure and intrigue ahead.

• "Hurlyburly" (R) — Hollywood has had plenty of screen couples, so it's only fair that Sean Penn has become a shout king.

Penn is a guy who knows how to screech at the top of his lungs. When he yells in "Hurlyburly," he throws his whole body into it. His voice goes up at least an octave. His face scrunches into tiny crinkles, just like a baby who's ready to roar.

Of course, there's plenty of loud talking, to go around in David Rabe's adaptation of his provocative 1984 play, which depicts the sordid underbelly of Hollywood with woman-hating diatribes and orgies of cynicism and cocaine.

In between the spewing and snorting, Rabe attempts to make comic points with a string of flashy speeches. The meaning of life is debated by the characters with clueless vulgarity. But the real point of the movie is spending time in the company of strung-out men.

The place is the Hollywood hills, and the time is "a little while ago" as Eddie (Sean Penn), Mickey (Kevin Spacey), Phil (Ed Harris) and Artie (Garry Shandling) hang out in Eddie's hilltop home. Their favorite pastime is engaging in druggy talking jags, which are interspersed with failed encounters with a series of disposable women.

They're brought to used-and-abused life by Meg Ryan, Robin Wright Penn and Anna Paquin, the little girl from "The Piano." She's now old enough to play a teen bimbo who's dropped on Eddie's doorstep as a "cute package." Speaking of "The Piano," the four-letter words that come out of Paquin's mouth would be enough to strike a mother mute.

In his Mullholland Drive hideaway, Eddie is on a self-destructive meltdown that culminates in a serious hissy fit. Infatuated with Wright.

Penn's beautiful Darlene and jealous of Mickey's attentions toward her, he uses sex and drugs to trick himself into believing he has no lack of company in his desperation. These male movers and shakers and their female pawns seem equally at a loss when it comes to dealing with others in an honest way. Spouting Rabe's rapid-fire dialogue, they devote their time to the kind of semantic bickering that filled President Clinton's grand jury testimony. At one point, Eddie receives a farewell letter and runs for a dictionary to look for the hidden meaning of the innocuous phrases.

As a coke-snorting, cable-flipping show-biz player who eats maldy pink snowball cakes for breakfast and contemplates his own depravity nightly, Penn has the movie's slowest role. "My voice is raised in emphasis," Eddie sneers when he's accused of yelling. "Perfectly legitimate use of volume."

• "Lawbreaker" (R) — This movie wants so hard to be bad it forgets to be good.

A mordant, black-teen comedy, it follows three super-cool California teen-age girls as they make their way through the social faux pas of their lives. They kill a friend.

Omgod and, like, what are we going to do, you know, it's like, one second she's here and the next second she's got this, you know, lawbreaker stuck in her throat like she's swallowed a globe and her eyes are all, like, eight-ball, and omgods!

They decide to disguise the homicide (it sprang out of an ill-advised practical joke) as a murder-rape but as they fiddle with the evidence, they are spotted by Reagan High School's coolest being. It would seem that Fern Mayo (Judy Evans Greer) is female, but at first, confirmation is somewhat difficult. Once her gender is firmly established, the three rhymes-with-riches (Rose McGowan, Rebecca Gayheart and Julie Benz) make her an offer in exchange for her silence, they will fulfill her dreams.

They will make her cool. Who could resist?

But in the time-honored tradition of monster movies (which this is their own creation turns on them. It's alive! It must be destroyed!

The premise is a promise that's never kept. The longer the film goes on, the more it gets and it never achieves the desired cynical hilarity of its first 20 or so minutes. It breaks down in too much side-changing as the various alliances form and reform.

Early review of Kubrick film angers studio, director's family

LONDON (AP) — Before this week, hardly anyone knew much more about Stanley Kubrick's mysterious last film, "Eyes Wide Shut," than the fact that Tom Cruise and Nicole Kidman got really naked in it.

Sure, rumors abounded about the film, completed just before the legendary filmmaker's death. But Warner Bros. has not yet screened it for critics and Kubrick's rigorous insistence on secrecy meant few people knew what they were talking about.

Enter London film critic Alexander Walker, a Kubrick biographer who, as a family friend, was allowed to view the movie early.

Walker then published a review, including an in-depth plot summary, in Tuesday's Evening Standard newspaper. And now, thanks to the Internet, "Eyes Wide Shut" has segued from the best-kept to the worst-kept secret in Hollywood.

The Evening Standard's Web site saw such a huge surge in traffic Wednesday that the paper said some high-tech rejiggering had to be done to make sure the glut of people trying to read the review didn't lock up the site.

Predictably, the people at Warner Bros. are upset by Walker's actions — as is Kubrick's family, according to a studio spokesman.

"He was a family friend, they showed it to him and he betrayed their trust," spokeswoman Nancy Kirkpatrick said. "The family is very hurt and angry. It certainly wasn't the plan, and we are not happy."

Kirkpatrick said the film was not to be screened for critics until July 10, six days before its opening in the United States.

Walker was out of the country and could not be reached for comment, but he defended the timing of his review in Thursday's Evening Standard.

ARTS AND ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

The Three-News

Writers to hold workshop

TWIN FALLS - Four professional writers and educators from Pocatello are coming to the Magic Valley Saturday to present a free four-part writer's workshop during the day with an evening reading of their works.

Each participant has a long list of published credits and will share their insights and ideas with writers who are aspiring. Susan Swetnam will talk about writing for magazines from 10-11 a.m., Ford Swetnam will discuss fiction and non-fiction from 11 a.m. until noon, Margaret Aho will talk about poetry from 1 to 2 p.m. and Steve Puglisi will discuss the same subject from 1 to 3 p.m.

The session will be held at 213 S. Fifth St., between the Old Towne Art Gallery and Silvercreek Restaurant.

All four writers will present a reading, starting at 7 p.m.

The evening reading will be catered with libations and goodies for purchase by the Uptown Bistro.

For more information, call Donna at the Magic Valley Arts Council at 734-2787.

Hazelton celebrates early

HAZELTON - As is tradition, the Hazelton community will celebrate Independence Day a little early.

Fireworks, courtesy of the First Segregation Fire District, will be touched off in City Park Saturday night, sometime between 9:30 and 10 p.m.

Games, food, fun and a parade will precede the pyrotechnics. The picnic is invited.

'Males Order Brides'

WENDELL - The Snake River Community Players are performing a play that will make its audience think twice before saying "I do" at least until they know who to.

"Males Order Brides" will be presented at 7:30 p.m. on Saturday at the Wendell High School Auditorium in conjunction with Wendell Dairy Days. The cost is $5 for adults and $4 for students and senior citizens. Director Lucille Campbell said this humorous melodrama is about four brides-to-be who supposedly buy a little early to the Colorado territory to marry a quartet of love-starved citizens, who are a lumberjack, a saloon owner, a grizzled prospector and a banker.

"Only their brides were real," Campbell said. The melodramatic and shiny lawyer, Big Harry Deal, has hired an actress to impersonate the four fiancées.

The villain's scheme, she said, is to lure the bridegrooms into a mine shaft and blow them up, leaving the villainess a wealthy widow.

Actors in the play are Travis Weaver, Martin Shirley, Wade Weaver, Tad Bishop, Kyle Irwin, Liz Jope, Havilah Bishop, Bev Christoffersen, Jan Kroege, Bonnie Jones and Bernadette Chandler.

The Safest Wildfire

...Is One That Never Starts!

So, What Are YOU Doing For Idaho Wildfire Prevention Week?

GOING CAMPING?

Please be careful with barbecues and campfires. Never leave any fire unattended and be sure it is out cold before you leave.

VISITING YOUR FORESTS OR RANGELANDS?

Please drive only on roads and park only in cleared areas. Your vehicle's sizzling hot exhaust system and dry grass is a dangerous mix. It can easily start a wildfire.

STAYING HOME?

If you live near a wildland area, take a little time to make your home and property resistant to wildfire. Clear weeds around your house to create a defensible space! Store firewood and other flammables away from structures. Learn more at www.firewise.org

CINDERELLA STORY

Dave Matthews leads his band at a live performance.

Dave Matthews mushrooms

Knight Ridder News Service

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — The most unlikely rock star in America is sitting in Miller's, a wood-paneled pub on this college town's pedestrian mall, where not so long ago he poured drinks for a living.

"It's lunch, and already he has lost his willpower. When I woke up this morning, I told myself I wasn't going to smoke or have anything alcoholic," he says, dragging on a Camel Light, a beer nearby. He is trying to describe what happens when he and the other four members of his band, the Dave Matthews Band, hit their stride on stage.

"A good night is everything feeling on top, way up energetic," he says, his arms flying. "And no matter what's going on, I usually find myself standing next to the drum kit, watching Carter (Carter Beauford) in a state of almost total awe. He is amazing. I'm doing the whole pinching-yourself thing, wondering, 'How did I get here?'"

How did Dave Matthews get here? Operating independent of the music industry's hype engines, his band, formed in 1991, has quietly become rock's Cinderella story of the decade. It has marched from obscurity to ubiquity to become a staple of modern-rock radio, the band critics love to hate, the rare act whose appeal is equally strong among women and men.

After years on the road, hauling from theaters to small arenas to major amphitheaters, the band has now mushroomed into a stadium draw.

When he stops to think about this, the 32-year-old singer and guitarist is overwhelmed: "Let's face it, I'm not your typical rock singer. We don't have a guitar hero. And the musicians come from all over the place stylistically. ... The weird thing is that we're not playing watered-down music. ... Sometimes I'm puzzled by it all."

The South Africa-born, Virginia-based Matthews isn't being disingenuous. He's the polar opposite of the self-obsessed rock star, the kind of sleepy-eyed guy you encounter at the hardware store on Saturday morning.

He talks about his band as if he's grateful simply to be a member ("I have tapes of us from seven years ago; everybody's great and I sound terrible"). He has been with the same woman since he was an unknown. He drives a Subaru Outback, and just took in a huskie he calls Little Man. He's not entirely comfortable with the sound of his voice, which can glide over the band's placid atmospheres or roar with derangement: "I still have a bit of that thing when you first record yourself on tape. ... You hear it and go, 'I sound like that?

That sucks.'" He lives by a river in a simple 200-year-old converted wheat mill that he describes as "the place I want to die."

Matthews hasn't seen much of home lately, however, and as he attempts to explain his band's popularity, he comes back to the road as the key. "A lot of our success has happened outside of the normal industry channels. I think there's a reluctance to really do the road on the part of some bands. They think you can get that large audience from television. ... We like that contact, if for no other reason than it takes everybody back to the time when rock 'n' roll had a little bit of renegade spirit."

The music industry, once indifferent to this homegrown phenom, has taken notice. "Lots of acts will disappear (between albums)," says Scott Gelman, vice president of Chicago's Jam Productions, which is presenting four sold-out Matthews shows this summer. "Not these guys. They're putting the time in, even though they toured for the last record (1998's "Before These Crowded Streets," which has sold more than two million copies) last year. And when Dave doesn't tour with the band, he's doing the colleges with Tim Reynolds. Last year, when I was asked about Dave, I said we were seeing a superstar in the making. He's not in the making anymore. It's undeniable."

Concert ticket prices rock fans' bank accounts

Knight Ridder News Service

You say you were outraged when, huck in the early '90s, Whitney Houston made the $50 concert ticket standard practice? Well, how does $125 sound? That's what top tickets to Houston's tour will cost this summer, up more than 100 percent in less than a decade.

"Welcome to the age of triple digit prices for rock and pop concerts — $100 and more to a handful of shows nationwide this summer — a price once reserved for only the most special events (the return of The Eagles, Steinsand), now becoming the norm."

"Across the board we're seeing the highest ticket prices the industry has ever seen," says Ray Waddell, who tracks the touring scene for Amusement Business magazine.

In addition to Houston's tour, tickets to a double bill starring Bob Dylan and Paul Simon are also at $125 in several cities. A long-awaited reunion of Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young is expected to surpass $100. Barry Manilow is getting $95 a ticket for a Sept. 9 show in Los Angeles. Eric Clapton and Sheryl Crow will play New York's Madison Square Garden June 30, at $102 per ticket (albeit a benefit).

Cher's first tour in nearly nine years features top tickets at $125 in New York and outside Boston; in most other cities her top price is $75.

Bruce Springsteen's reunion tour with the E Street Band had a top price of $67.50 for the 15 shows he just sold in New Jersey — far less than what he's worth, say analysts.

IN BRIEF

Lewis-Clark Twins shut out Minico

BOISE — Minico’s American Legion team dropped a close 3-0 decision to Lewiston’s Lewis-Clark Twins Thursday at the Boise Gems Woodbat Tournament.

The loss dropped the Spartans to 0-2 in the five-game tourney, 13-11 on the season.

Minico head coach Russ Wright said the Spartans were stemmed from a lack of clutch hitting.

“We just didn’t get any big hits when we needed them,” Wright said. “(Lewis-Clark) just had one inning when they had the bases loaded and got the two runs in.”

“We left four runners at second base,” Wright added. “That was basically the difference.”

Minico’s Jason Crossland provided half the team’s offense going 2-for-2 on the plate.

The Spartans play a doubleheader today against Montana’s Laurel Dodgers at 1 p.m. and the host Gems at 4 p.m.

CSI v’ball coach Stroud featured in magazine

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho volleyball coach Ben Stroud is featured in the June/July issue of the American Volleyball Coaches Association magazine.

On the cover, Stroud is surrounded with his many championship trophies and awards the 14-year coach has achieved during his career. Among active junior college volleyball coaches, Stroud stands fifth in overall winning percentage and third in total wins.

Buhl keeps streak intact

Indians join Twin Falls and Jerome as first-day unbeaten

By Jeff Ross
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The only thing that will derail the Indians this summer is the Indians.

Riding a 20-game win streak which began after the school’s team lost to Kuna in the state championship, other teams aren’t posing much of a threat to the Buhl American Legion Team.

“I think it may be a record,” coach Gary Krumm, in his fourth year as Buhl’s coach, said Thursday. “It’s got to be.”

Buhl made quick work of its first two opponents on opening day of the Twin Falls Donnelley Sports Invitational Class A Baseball Tournament, carving up Bear Lake 11-2 before routing the Boise Capitals 15-5.

“We were ready to play this morning,” Krumm said.

Third baseman T. J. Cline, a junior-0-be who homered in the Indians’ second game, agreed that his team is on a roll.

“Yeah, we are,” Cline said. “We’ve got good hitting and we’ve got good pitching.”

Twin Falls and Jerome also emerged unscathed from Day 1 of the three-day, 11-team tourney. The Tigers stifled Caldwell 10-0 in five innings, while the Cowboys edged Idaho Falls 5-4 in extra innings.

Kimberly, run-riddled twice by Buhl early in the week, assumed the dealing end of a 10-run win in its first appearance Thursday, pummeling Upper Valley 17-7, and nearly erased an eight-run deficit before losing 9-7 to Idaho Falls.

Action continues this morning at 8:15 a.m. at Harmon Park and the Twin Falls High School fields.

Buhl 11, Bear Lake 2

Aric Reynolds pitched six innings of one-hit shutout ball, Buhl unscathed a parade of hits and the Indians were scripted to win.

Reynolds struck out seven and walked one. Buhl earned the seventh inning ahead 11-0, and Bear Lake scored its only run after relief pitcher Seth Matthews, who allowed two hits.

Bear Lake starter Casey Parks took the loss.

“It’s always nice to beat them,” Krumm said. “They’re a good club, but we hit throughout the order — just we scrip it up.”

Reynolds struck out seven and walked one. Buhl earned the seventh inning ahead 11-0, and Bear Lake scored its only run after relief pitcher Seth Matthews, who allowed two hits.

After a water leak from a sprinkler system drenched Tiger pitcher Jon Robert’s face, the team over the minimum, Blake Thompson and Tomas Hernandez each homered.

USA blows out Nigeria 7-1

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Now this is how to win fans. And World Cups.

The United States emphatically displayed why it is one of the world’s best women’s soccer teams with a 7-1 rout of Nigeria on Thursday before 65,080, the second straight sellout for the American squad in the Women’s World Cup. The fans at Soldier Field were treated to an astounding offensive display.

The victory, following the Americans’ 3-0 defeat of Denmark in the opener, virtually secured a spot in the quarterfinals and a berth in the 2000 Olympics.

would not be intimidated by the highly ranked American squad, actually scored first, in the second minute. Big mistake.

The Americans responded with two goals in 53 seconds, both involving their biggest star, Mia Hamm.

Before the first half was over, the United States added four more for a 6-1 edge, equalling the six goals the Americans scored in one half of an exhibition against Japan on April 29. It also tied a Women’s World Cup record.

Hamm started the party with a free kick from near the left sideline that ricocheted in, apparently off Michelle Akers’ right foot as she was falling. That made it 1-1 in the 19th minute.

It was Hamm’s turn to hit the net less than a minute later as she was imperially left alone on right wing. Her rocket of a shot sailed over the right hand of goalkeeper Ann Chiejele.

‘Boom Boom’ Becker stages upset

The Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Two years after Boris Becker whispered in Pete Sampras’ ear that he was done with Wimbledon, the old fan roared once more on Centre Court.

Becker’s red nose and beard glistened, his brawny legs churned with a nearly forgotten quickness, and his narrowed eyes betrayed a voracity that belied any thoughts that he had renounced merely for a taste of nostalgia.

The 31-year-old, three-time champion calls this his “last hurrah,” and on Thursday he showed every sign of making it a serious run for the title — 14 years after he won it the first time.

Unbowed and far from weary two days after a five-setter against a lowly British wild card, Becker skewered 15th-seeded Nicolas Pietrangeli with 17 aces in a 6-4, 6-2, 6-4 feast that put him through to the third round.

It was the highlight of a week, sunny day that drew 40,312 fans to the expanded grounds of Wimbledon, the largest crowd in the tournament’s 113-year history.

Bad blood has been bubbling between Becker and the 21-year-old Kiefer for the past couple of years. It came to a full boil last month when Kiefer pulled out of the World Team Cup and alleged Becker had faked an injury.

“Kiefer’s horizon is not going to be any further than his shoes,” Becker said at the time. He then wrote a newspaper column saying the chemistry of the team was poisoned and, in a veiled reference to Kiefer, that younger players were surrounded by their parents and agents.

“Boris the Great,” read one sign in the crowd, and that’s how he looked in his first appearance on Centre Court since he went into semi-retirement after losing to Sampras in the quarterfinals two years ago. He hadn’t played a major tournament until now, and he insists, “I’m just a shadow of myself.” But the fans showed they hadn’t lost any affection for him, chanting, as in days gone by, “Boris, Boris,” and giving him standing ovations.

Andre Agassi, seeded No. 4, beat Argentina’s No. 73-ranked Guillermo Canas 6-3, 6-4, 6-3. Agassi is trying to become the first man since Bjorn Borg in 1980 to win the French Open and Wimbledon back-to-back.

No. 2 Patrick Rafter also advanced to the third round.

Coach still believes in Knicks

Feisty NY will try to buck history again

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — A three-story tall tapestry hangs at the entrance of Madison Square Garden in New York City.

Inside the arena, the big question Thursday was whether the New York Knicks still do.

Trailing the San Antonio Spurs 3-1 in the best-of-five NBA Finals, a deficit that no team has overcome in the championship round, the Knicks have to decide whether they really think they have a shot at beating the Spurs.

Game 5 is tonight.

“I still think we can win the series,” said coach Jeff Van Gundy, who has always remained a true believer. “I told them they’re only bound by what they think they can accomplish. If they believe that since no team has ever done this then it can’t be done, then that will be reflected in our play tomorrow.”

“But as I told them, no eighth seed has ever made it here, either, so history doesn’t have to hamper us. All we have to do is win one home game. Then we can go down there and get one road game.”

Indeed, things don’t look promising for a New York team that continues to fight injuries and coach Jeff Van Gundy’s ill will back at the worst ball at the worst time — the end of the fourth quarter.

The Knicks couldn’t mount a final comeback in Games 1 and 2 in San Antonio, nor could they do so in Game 4, when the Spurs closed so strongly that the crowd started streaming toward the exits with a minute left on the clock.

and error-free Jerome topped the Cats in five innings.

"He's probably one of our strongest pitchers," said Jerome coach Jeremiah Johnston. "He usually settles in, goes through the lineup and just figures out how to pitch to them. We told him to throw a lot of curveballs, and that worked well for him."

Caldwell added Jerome's cause by committing four errors.

Buhl 15, Boise 5

T.J. Cline went 2-for-4 with a home run, and the Indians completed their first-day sweep at the turnkey with an exclamation point, swamping the struggling Capitals in a shortened matinee at Twin Falls High School.

Brad Ross and Eric Reynolds also finished 2-for-4, while catcher Cory Hamilton reached base all four times in the game. The plate tumbled three times and was hit by a pitch.

Cline's home run came in the fifth inning, and came as a bit of a surprise to Cline.

"It didn't feel the greatest, but somehow it got out," he said. "I was already to second on my way to third before it realized."

Twin Falls 5, Idaho Falls 4

The Cowboys jumped to an early 3-0 lead, then protected their advantage at 4-1, but nearly lost to the Rangers in extra innings.

Idaho Falls chipped away at Twin Falls' lead with one run in the third and two more in the fourth, which coupled with the Cowboy's scoreless stretch in the third through seventh sent the contest to extra innings tied at 4.

The Cowboys rode away with the game on a two-out rally in the ninth. Leadoff man Carl Blackwood walked and Joel Osborne doubled to center to place runners at second and third, and Ben Mueller drove Blackwood home with a well-timed bunt.

Osborne was gunned down at the plate, but reliever Kegan Seivers retired the side in order for the win.

"Base running killed us today," said Twin Falls assistant coach Ryan Jung, who filled in for head coach Bud Wickhamer Thursday.

"Some of that was my fault, we didn't play our best, but we got the job done."

At the plate, Mueller finished 3-for-5, while Osborne went 4-for-5 with a pair of doubles.

On the mound, the Cowboy tandem of starter Seth Merritt and Seivers worked the day through the mid-inning dry spell by holding Idaho Falls scoreless through five innings.

Kimberly 17, Upper Valley 7

At Twin Falls High School, Kimberly trailed the eastern Idaho Upper Valley team only once following the top of the first inning.

After that, it was all Bulldogs. Kimberly rocked a succession of three Mustang hurriers for 15 hits, with Jordan Williams scoring the 10th run on a failed pickoff attempt at third base.

Myli Humphries pitched the complete game, striking out five and stroking a pair of early hits to finish 2-for-5 at the plate. A pair of Matt Woodmansee and Smith went 3-for-4 and 3-for-6 respectively.

"After getting nailed by Buhl (Tuesday), I thought it was a great comeback," said Kimberly coach Terry Bohan. "It was kind of a nice, old thing to be able to do that."

The Bulldogs' biggest rally came in the sixth and final inning. Woodmansee tripled in two runs to make it 14-7, Williams reached on an error and another run scored, Humphries sacrificed a run home, and Williams roared across the plate on Upper Valley catcher James Hammar's errant throw.

"It was fun to watch them hit the ball," Bohan said. "That's why we're out here."

Idaho Falls 9, Kimberly 7

Chase Archibald confounded Kimberly for five-plus innings, allowing just three hits and striking out four, but the Bulldogs bit him in the sixth.

Jordan Williams walked to lead the bases, Archibald walked Humphries home and sidemaner Zee Larz took the game to the sixth. Lords, however, proved less effective than Archibald. Nate Hefflinger - whom teammates call Terminator - welcomed him with a three-run triple that narrowed a 9-2 gap to 8-5.

Jake Williams drove Hefflinger home with a knee hit to make it 8-6, but Jay Richman grounded into a double play to end the inning.

"We made some mistakes on the hill and in the field," Bohan said. "But that's something about our team. We're able to come back. We've never out of it when we play most teams."

Switching venues, Kimberly appeared in an early 8:15 a.m. game today, squaring off against Bear Lake at Harmon Park, then plays Brigham City at 12:45 p.m.

Fremont, Utah 9, Boise 2

At Harmon Park, Fremont, from Plain City, Utah, a farming community located west of Ogden, made short work of the Capitals in the Wolver first game Thursday.

Fremont scored seven runs in the first inning on four hits and added two more in the fourth and fifth.

The Capitals, coming off a loss to Buhl in the previous game at Twin Falls High School, scored all their runs in the fourth.

Brigham City 11, Caldwell 4

Brigham City's Adam Jeppin pitched seven strong innings, allowing two hits and three walks while striking out six.

Jeppin's teammate, shortstop Kevin Kirby, was 3-for-5 with 3 RBI and was one home run away from hitting for the cycle.

South Fremont 3, Upper Valley 2

Upper Valley's Matt Phillips pitched six strong innings, allowing two hits and three walks while striking out six.

Brigham City, Utah 22, Bear Lake 1

Two Weber State players face rape charge

OGDEN, Utah - Two former starters from Weber State University's Big Sky championship basketball team have been arrested and booked into the Weber County Jail under suspicion of rape.

Damian Baskerville, 21, and Noel Jackson, 23, appeared before 2nd District Judge Michael Glesman on Thursday. He continued the arraignment until Friday to give prosecutors time to finalize their charging documents.

They were being held Thursday on $20,000 bail.

Police allege that Baskerville and Jackson were at a private club April 11 when they encountered a 23-year-old Roy woman whom they had both previously dated. At the end of the evening, she drove the duo to one of the men's apartment where, according to Detective Danielle Croyle, Jackson held her down while Baskerville raped her.

The woman reported the alleged rape five days later. Police said they decided to arrest the two men after further interviews Wednesday.

Weber State star withdraws from NBA draft

NEW YORK - Weber State's Harold "The Show" Arceneaux and Kentucky's Jannal Magloire were among 12 players who have withdrawn from the list of those seeking early entry to next week's NBA draft.

Arceneaux, who led his team to a first-round upset of North Carolina in the NCAA tournament, will return to Weber State for his senior year.

Magloire, a 6-foot-10 center, was considering entering the draft, depending on how high he would be picked. He kept open his option of returning to Kentucky for his senior season by not signing with an agent and registering for summer school.

Ruth voted greatest player of century

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. - Babe Ruth was voted the greatest player of the 20th century in balloting conducted by the Society for American Baseball Research, topping Lou Gehrig.

Ruth and Gehrig were picked on 851 of 865 ballots, with Ruth edging Gehrig for the top spot based on elite points, a separate vote in which SABR members picked the top five players.

Ted Williams (858) was third followed by Hank Aaron (also 858), Stan Musial (857), Joe DiMaggio (855), Ty Cobb (854), Willie Mays (852), Rogers Hornsby (851), Honus Wagner (850) and Walter Johnson (850).

Spokane becomes street hoops circus

SPokane, Wash. - This weekend, Spokane becomes the field of dreams for street basketball players.

The 10th annual Hoopfest - billed by organizers as the largest 3-on-3 basketball tournament in the nation - begins Saturday on 330 corners scattered throughout the city.

"When we first started hosting the tournament 10 years ago, we just wanted to be able to compete with the Seattle tournament by getting about 400 people," said Rick Steltenpohl, Hoopfest's executive director.

Hoopfest participation is five times greater than it was in 1990. This year, some 20,000 players from across the nation are expected to take part on more than 5,000 courts.

Hoop stars looking for a top-9 3-on-3 tournament might figure basketball hot spots such as Los Angeles or New York are the places to be. But this Eastern Washington city of 188,300 might be a better choice.

Jones leads LPGA field with 64

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) - Rosie Jones and Laura Davies each thought about becoming the first woman to shoot 59. Thanks to a last-minute swing tip and a hot putter, Jones can at least be satisfied with the lead after the first round of the LPGA Championship.

Jones took only 23 putts Thursday and finished with a 7-under-par 64 for her best start in a major championship and a one-stroke lead over Davies.

The 64 is the lowest round ever recorded at DuPont Country Club during the LPGA Championship. Brandie Burton had a 63 in 1992 when the McDonald's Championship was just a regular stop on the LPGA Tour.

Liselotte Neumann and Alison Nicholas were among those at 67. Juli Inkster, still walking on air from her victory in the U.S. Open three weeks ago, made four birdies over the last six holes for a 68, a good start to make a run at the major championship she has yet to win.

Also at 68 was Se Ri Pak, the defending champion coming off her first victory of the year. Pak had a couple of three-putt bogeys in an otherwise solid, steady round.

Ames leads Buick Classic despite six-month layoff

HARRISON, N.Y. - Stephen Ames, still rusty after missing nearly six months on the PGA Tour because of visa problems, shot a 6-under-par 65 Thursday for a one-stroke lead after the first round of the Buick Classic.

Ames needed only 24 putts in a seven-birdie, one-bogey round at the Westchester Country Club. He led Frank Nobilo by one stroke and Jim Carter by two.

Ames was 83rd in earnings last season and had seven top 25 finishes. But his visa to enter the United States expired last year and he had not played in a tournament of any kind since last November's Australian Open.

Rosie Jones hits out of a sand trap on the fourth hole during the first round of the LPGA Championship Thursday at the DuPont Country Club in Wilmington, Del. Jones parred the hole.

Nelson's near double-eagle helps him tie Aussie for lead

DEARBORN, Mich. - An eagle that was almost a double eagle helped Larry Nelson tie Australian Graham Marsh for the first-round lead Thursday in the Senior Players Championship.

Both opened at 6-under-par 66 over the TPC of Michigan, one stroke better than Hale Irwin.

Nelson, 51, seeking his second victory this season on the senior circuit, was 238 yards out when he hit a 5-wood from the fairway of No. 13, a 506-yard, par-5. The ball landed on the front of the green, then curled around the upper shelf, making a U-turn toward the cup.

"I heard the people clapping, so I knew it was pretty close," Nelson said.

Eight share lead at PGA Club Professional after first round

HAVEN, Wis. - Jeff Freeman of Palm Desert, Calif., birdied the last four holes to shoot a 2-under-par 70 Thursday and tie for the lead with a record seven other golfers in the first round of the 32nd PGA Club Professional Championship.

It was the largest number of golfers tied for the lead after any round of the tournament.

Tied with Freeman were Frank Bense of Mamaroneck, N.Y.; Bob Ford, Oakmont, Pa.; Brett Upper, Phoenix; Rick Schuler, Leesburg, Va.; Greg Jones, Colorado Springs, Colo.; Shawn Kelly, Sacramento,

Favorites take a beating at New Mexico tournament

SANTA ANA PUEBLO, N.M. - Favorites took a beating Thursday in the first day of match play at the U.S. Women's Amateur Public Links Championship.

Defending champion Amy Spoorer Johnston, medalist Jenna Daniels and two-time former winner Jo Jo Robertson all lost.

Sixty-four players from a field of 144 advanced to match play from 36 holes of qualifying. Two rounds were played Thursday and two more will be played today to trim the field to four for Saturday's semifinals.

National League

DENVER (AP) - Sammy Sosa increased his NL-leading home run total to 26 with a pair of two-run shots Thursday as the Chicago Cubs beat the Colorado Rockies 12-10.

Colorado's Larry Walker failed to homer for the first time in six games, but he went 3-for-5 with two hits. Bobby Jones (2-6) gave up eight runs - six earned - and nine hits in 5.2 innings.

Teams have reached double digits in runs at Coors Field 23 times this season, including seven games in which both teams did it.

Phillies 7, Pirates 5

PHILADELPHIA - Curt Schilling (10-4) struck out nine in seven innings, allowing three runs and seven hits. He moved past Grover Cleveland Alexander into fourth place on the Phillies' career strikeout list at 1,410.

who overcame a 3-2 deficit with a five-run sixth that included six straight hits.

Jose Silva (2-5), winless in his last five starts, allowed seven runs - six earned - and seven hits in five-plus innings. He matched his career high with eight strikeouts.

Reds 3, Astros 0

HOUSTON - Ron Villone didn't allow a hit until Tony Eusebio singled with one out in the seventh inning - Houston's only hit of the game.

Villone (2-2) retired just one batter last Saturday against Milwaukee, allowing six earned runs and three hits. This time, he came within eight outs of a no-hitter and wound up pitching seven innings. Danny Graves finished for his 10th save in 13 chances.

Villone walked five, including four in the first four innings, and struck out six. Houston didn't get a runner past second until the seventh inning, when Hidalgo walked and took third on the single to left. Tim Lincecum then grounded into an inning-ending double play.

Rookie, relievers shut out Indians

American League

TORONTO (AP) - Rookie Roy Halladay and two relievers combined to shut out the Cleveland Indians for the first time since last Sept. 24, leading the Toronto Blue Jays to a 3-0 victory Thursday night.

Cleveland, which is averaging a major league-high 6.7 runs, was held under four runs for the second time in three nights by the Blue Jays - the only two times in 15 games since June 8 the Indians failed to score at least four.

Carlos Delgado broke out of a 1-for-29 slump with two hits, including a homer off Dave Burba (7-3), as Toronto won for the eighth time in 10 games.

BRIEFLY IN MONEY

Idaho Power proposes another utility rate cut

BOISE - Idaho's largest electric utility has proposed another multi-million-dollar rate reduction to reflect improved financial returns last year.

IDAHO POWER Co. has asked state regulators to approve the one-time, $3.2 million, across-the-board rate cut that would translate into a one-month savings of $4.50 for the average residential customer.

The reduction will show up on bills for the 30-day period after approval by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission.

Under an agreement with regulators, the utility shares with customers any financial return on equity that exceeds 11.75 percent a year. Last year's return was 12.2 percent.

In mid-May, Idaho Power implemented an average 9.2 percent rate reduction that lowered the average residential customer's bill by $3.74 a month. That reduction was the result of good water supplies that will reduce the company's reliance on more-expensive coal-fired generation in favor of cheap hydropower.

Washington Federal Increases cash dividend

SEATTLE - The board of Washington Federal Inc., parent company of Washington Federal Savings, this week announced an increase in the company's quarterly cash dividend to 23 cents per share from 22 cents.

The dividend will be payable July 30 to common stockholders of record July 9. This is Washington Federal's 66th consecutive quarterly cash dividend, the company said.

"This is the 33rd time the cash dividend has been increased since Washington Federal became a public stock company on Nov. 17, 1982," said Guy C. Pinkerton, chief executive officer of Washington Federal Inc. (Nasdaq: WFSI), in a statement.

Washington Federal Savings, with 107 offices in Washington, Idaho, Oregon, Utah and Arizona - including ones in Jerome and Twin Falls - said it had $5.8 billion in assets and $3.3 billion in deposits as of March 31.

Albertson's completes American Stores merger

BOISE - Albertson's Inc. announced Thursday it has completed the merger of American Stores Co. American Stores was merged with a wholly owned subsidiary of Albertson's effective Wednesday.

Under terms of the agreement, stockholders of American Stores will receive 0.63 share of Albertson's common stock for each common share of American Stores they own. The transaction is to be accounted for as a pooling of interests, Albertson's said.

Boise-based Albertson's (NYSE: ABS) is the second largest retail food and drug operator in the United States and now operates more than 2,400 retail stores - including two in Twin Falls and one in Burley - in 38 states across the United States.

Magic West asks for more time

By Virginia S. Hutchins
Times-News writer

GLENN'S FERRY - Glenn's Ferry's biggest employer has asked for extra time to prepare its case for a new right for enough water to run its thirsty potato-processing plant year-round.

Magic West plans to submit information requested by the Department of Water Resources by July 21 to give Charles E. Brockway - a hydrologist hired as a consultant by Magic West - more time to prepare, attorney Norman M. Semanko wrote in a letter to the department this week.

Glenn's Ferry company needs extension to prove that an increase in water rights won't drain aquifer

Much of the town has an interest in the outcome.

The company in May promised several residents - who had filed protests against Magic West's application - it would make sure they have water to drink as long as the plant is pumping water, too. The protesters said they feared the processor would worsen the area's declining groundwater levels, but they withdrew their protests in exchange for promises of mitigation of water-delivery problems.

Local government and business leaders had intervened, encouraging the parties to reach settlements to prevent Magic West from having to take jobs out of town or reduce operations. Though all the protests are withdrawn and there won't be a public hearing, Water Resources for its own review still needs answers to the same questions they raised, department spokesman Dick Larsen said.

Aquifer data exhibit declines in water levels.

"These declines raise concerns about the sufficiency of the water supply from which Magic West proposes to divert water. The declines also raise concerns about injury to other water users," Gary Spackman, regional manager for Water Resources' Western region, wrote in a May 21 letter to Semanko requesting information about aquifer levels and the proposed right's effect on other users.

The applicant has to prove they're not injuring anyone by taking that water," Larsen said.

Magic West has said it applied for rights to pump 300 gallons per minute from the aquifer year-round. That hot water is in addition to the 80 gallons per minute of cold water the plant uses from city supplies.

Chamber needs new president

By Virginia S. Hutchins
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce will be looking for a new leader.

When Kenneth Deibert starts work at a state job in Nampa July 13, the chamber will lose its president-elect, who has been active in his two years on the chamber's board.

Deibert worked diligently on membership issues - such as recruiting new members, analyzing members' needs and wants and finding whether the chamber meets those needs, Executive Vice President Kent Just said.

"We're really sorry to see them go," Just said.

As Deibert's wife is an elementary-school teacher, their departure leaves two holes in the community.

"But this is an excellent

Microsoft trial testimony ends

WASHINGTON (AP) - Testimony wound to an end Thursday after 76 days in the landmark Microsoft antitrust trial, a courtroom drama that offered a unique look at the nation's booming high-tech industry and the software giant that dominates it.

The trial's final witness, economist Richard Schmalensee of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, argued forcefully that the $14 billion Microsoft Corp. isn't the entrenched monopolist that illegally wields extraordinary influence, as portrayed by the government.

Schmalensee described a raft of competitors on Microsoft's horizon - the $10 billion alliance between rivals America Online Inc. and Netscape Communications Corp., handheld computers and a new generation of software running across high-speed Internet connections.

But in what became routine during the trial, the company's witness was dazed, longed again Thursday in a piercing cross-examination by David Boies, the Justice Department lawyer whose tough questioning has sometimes appeared to inflame upon Microsoft the courtroom equivalent of a computer system meltdown.

Boies produced handwritten notes from Microsoft's files quoting billionaire Chairman Bill Gates - "BILLG" - in December about the prospective threat from the new AOL-Netscape alliance, announced just weeks earlier along with an important agreement with Sun Microsystems Inc. "AOL doesn't have it in their genes to attack us in the platform space," said Gates, his comments outside the courtroom once again seemingly undermining what his lawyers were telling the judge in court. "If you want to lose sleep tonight, worry about Sun."

Schmalensee said he assessed the AOL threat from secret documents produced by America Online. Those papers indicate AOL considered ending distribution of Microsoft's Internet browser software and planned to become a "de facto environment" where most consumers will spend all their computer time.

"This is a judgment from someone who hasn't seen those documents," Schmalensee said, dismissing Gates' assessment.

Although Thursday was the last day of testimony, U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson may not issue a final verdict until early next year. The case could wind through appeals courts for years.

Since the trial started, the sides have met at least twice in unsuccessful attempts to negotiate a settlement. Future talks are anticipated this summer.

Stocks tumble again

NEW YORK (AP) - Stocks tumbled again under the burden of higher interest rates, but investors on Thursday found an added impetus for a sell-off - scattered warnings of weakness in second-quarter earnings.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 132.03 points to close at 10,634.83, the fourth straight decline for the blue chip index. The Dow has now lost 320 points since Monday, nearly wiping out a 365-point gain from last week's start.

Broader stock indicators also deteriorated. The Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 17.28 to 1,315.78, and the Nasdaq composite index lost 44.13 to close at 2,555.59. Most analysts expect companies to report generally robust earnings after the second quarter ends next week. But amid concerns about the Federal Reserve's plans to raise interest rates to slow economic growth, some say the market has grown too fragile to withstand much bad news.

Semiconductor maker Advanced Micro Devices provided a solid dose late Wednesday when it said it expects a second-quarter loss for the company and has anticipated. AMD said micro-processor prices have collapsed and the company has lost market share to industry leader Intel.

Thursday, the company's stock fell 1.125 to close at 17.07.

Boise chip maker reports loss rather than profit for third quarter

BOISE (AP) - Continued erosion of the international computer or memory chip market has left Micron Technology Inc. with $27.8 million in red ink for the third quarter.

The Boise-based company late Wednesday reported the loss of 10 cents per share of common stock on sales of $854 million against the backdrop of Wall Street expectations that the company would earn 21 cents a share profit for the three months ending June 3.

That contrasted with a net profit of $22 million, or eight cents a share, for the second quarter, the first profit since recorded in a year. For the third quarter of last year, Micron reported a $109 million loss, or 51 cents a share, on sales of $613 million.

The company's gross margin fell as the result of a 27 percent decline in prices on the 64-negabit SDRAM chip, corporate officials said in a written statement.

"At the end of the quarter, the average selling price for the average selling price of the chip, it isn't called a sherry chip for nothing," said Sherry Garber, an analyst with Semico Research Corp. in Scottsdale, Ariz.

The average selling price has been falling all spring, plummeting from $9.50 in late March to about $4.50 in June, she said.

"The market is shifting toward a $1,000 or sub-$1,000 personal computer which does not rely as much on that memory capacity," Garber said.

Robertson Stephenson in San Francisco said he expected some loss for the quarter. "DRAM chips always get cheaper," Niles said, "but this time they got cheaper by 27 percent."

Micron has lobbied Congress to prevent the International Monetary Fund from handing over tax dollars to its competitors in South Korea, accusing them of dumping below-cost chips on the slumping market.

Since the quarter ended,

Micron, Idaho's largest private employer, dropped work on a radio frequency identification product so it could focus solely on semiconductor chip efforts. Corporate officials said that will result in operations halting this summer at Micron Communications Inc.

Micron holds a majority interest in that company and will experience a pre-tax charge of up to $12 million.

Orders for aircraft, autos lead manufacturing jump

WASHINGTON (AP)—Orders for big-ticket manufactured goods led by gains in aircraft and autos—climbed 1.4 percent in May, a sign that the nation's battered manufacturing sector could be headed for a recovery...

The Commerce Department said Thursday that orders for durable goods—items expected to last at least three years—increased $2.6 billion last month to a seasonally adjusted $197.6 billion.

Orders for transportation equipment rose a strong 9.5 percent in May, following a 12.6 percent decline in April. The transportation sector is often viewed as a bellwether for the economy because it includes such big-ticket purchases as airplanes.

Chamber

Continued from D5 opportunity for Ken, so we're wishing them the very best," Just said.

Deibert said he feels bad that the chamber got to elect someone to fill the position. The chamber will select a new incoming president—to serve in the top role next year—at its July 20 meeting. Ken's son chosen can be anyone on the chamber board, Just said.

There are two vice presidents, he said, and "they certainly will be on the list of folks that the board will consider, if they want to be considered."

Chamber vice presidents are attorney Beth Smith and Mary Lou Funatopoulos, manager of

First American Title. Both women were out of town Thursday, their offices said. Deibert's representative will write Ken Gales to let "He was very committed and had great comments as far as thinking problems and solutions through," said Hamilton Manufacturing and Distributing owner Tamara Harney, who was the chamber's president last year. # India's troops won't cross border, leader says

DRAS, India - Indian troops are finding it difficult to force Islamic fighters off mountain top strongholds in Kashmir but there are no plans for an army assault into Pakistan, India's prime minister said Thursday.

His comments in New Delhi appeared to be a tempering of a statement Wednesday by India's army chief that the government was reviewing its declared policy of not crossing the cease-fire line from the neighbors' last war in 1972.

Several Indian politicians have begun to talk openly about the possibility of a full-fledged war with Pakistan, which the government accuses of sending soldiers to help Islamic secessionists fighting in Indian Kashmir. Pakistan denies having troops there.

Pakistan and India, both of which conducted nuclear weapons tests a year ago, have claimed all of Kashmir since they became independent from Britain in 1947 and have fought two wars over the divided region.

World in brief

Rebel's lawyers rest their case

IMRALI ISLAND, Turkey - Defense lawyers for Abdullah Ocalan wrapped up their final arguments Thursday, warning a Turkish court that new rebels will take up the struggle if the Kurdish guerrilla leader is hanged.

After the lawyers spoke, Judge Turgut Okyay ordered a recess until Tuesday, when the panel of three judges will announce its verdict. The Anadolu news agency reported. If Ocalan is convicted of treason and separatism, a death sentence is automatic.

It is widely believed that the court will sentence Ocalan to death for leading a 15-year guerrilla war for a Kurdish homeland in southeastern Turkey. The conflict has claimed about 37,000 lives.

French school bus hits tree

PARIS - One person was killed and 21 injured when a bus carrying American and French schoolchildren struck a tree Thursday morning while on a field trip to Paris. Seven Americans aged 10-11 from the Grand Rapids, Mich., area were among the injured.

The driver, who was killed instantly, lost control of the bus in Orconte, about 115 miles east of Paris.

Twenty-one children suffered facial and leg injuries but none were considered life-threatening, police and doctors said.

Kids graduate underwater

TAIPEI, Taiwan - Graduating sixth grader Chen Kai-ling pulled on her mask and strapped on her oxygen tank, then she dived 26 feet under the Pacific Ocean on Thursday to claim her diploma.

Chen and 10 classmates, the entire graduating class of Homei Elementary school, took part in Taiwan's first underwater graduation ceremony, showing off the results of three months of diving training.

And while the activity was all good fun for the kids, parents and teachers saw it as a way to encourage the children to stay in their seaside community after completing their education. They hope commercial diving could become a future economic driver for the tiny town of Lungtung, about 20 miles east of the capital, Taipei.

Rwanda to reopen gorilla park

KIGALI, Rwanda - The sanctuary for mountain gorillas in the rolling foothills of northwestern Rwanda will reopen for visitors July 15, two years after Hutu rebel attacks forced the government to close it, the National Tourism Office said Thursday.

The Volcano National Park that straddles Rwanda's mist-shrouded border with Congo and Uganda, is home to an estimated 300 rare mountain gorillas.

Jeon Bizimana, a spokesman for the government park and tourism agency, said no gorillas were killed during the two years of clashes between the army and rebels. The Hutu militants attacked from bases in neighboring Congo, where they fled after the 1994 genocide of more than 500,000 people in Rwanda.

Calm before the storm

All four NASCAR classes renew rivalries

By Kevin Hall
Times-News writer

occurred during last weekend's racing in the Modifieds, Pony stocks and Street stocks with the respective points leaderboards of each undergoing some changes.

Truck leader Bruce Quale finally created some breathing space for himself over Steve Jones when Quale ran the fastest in qualifying, placed third in the Modified heat race and ran away with division's main event - capturing a 71-point evening and bolstering his lead, which had stood at four points, to a whopping 19 margin.

Jones had trouble in the main event as he got tangled up out of Turn 4 with Dana Pruett and Harold Warluft in a nasty little spinout. Jones' car was mangled, but he was able to return for a few consolation laps - finishing the race in seventh place.

Behind Jones stands Twin Falls driver John Newhouse in third with Rick Corbridge and Brett Thompson rounding out the top five.

In Street stock competition, Kimberly's Norman Hatke kept his '79 black Camaro atop the leaderboard over a hard-charging Thomas Powell of Gooding. A

TWIN FALLS - Just call it a normal racing Saturday.

All four Magic Valley Speedway NASCAR Winston Series classes renew their rivalries at the track with the Mountain Dew Modifieds, Budweiser Street stocks, NAPA Auto Parts Pony stocks and Dairy Queen Thunder stocks all in action.

The racing bridges two weekends of mayhem.

Last Saturday, the Intermountain Super stocks whipped up a frenzy both on the 1/3-mile oval and in the pits. The race produced nine yellow flags while apparent brawling between crews and fans resulted in 30-day suspensions for three of the class' racing teams.

July 3, the Speedway hosts an "Eve of Destruction" party to commemorate the 4th of July holiday. It should be a night of carnage with a demolition derby, outdoor races, trailer races and a turbine-powered jet car taking center stage. Expect plenty of surprises as well.

McClure looks to expand his team

By Monte Dutton
NASCAR This Week

LONG POND, Pa. - Bobby Hamilton and Larry McClure have reluctantly accepted the fact that having a multi-car team has become virtually a precondition for Winston Cup success.

The trick is getting a sponsor to facilitate expansion.

Car owner McClure hopes to have a second Chevrolet up and running by mid-July, but until then, Hamilton and McClure's No. 4 Chevrolet face an uphill struggle.

"If we had two teams, the R&D (research and development) thing would get done twice as quick," said the plain-spoken Hamilton.

"It will be beneficial to us."

"It's as simple as this: If I go out and run one lap at Daytona, (multi-car) Jack Roush has gone out and run five laps. Rick Hendrick has run three. Robert Yates and several others have run two. You have all that data coming off a test, and all we have is one lap. That multiplies through a 500-lap race. I don't think it's fair, but we control our own destiny. If (having one car) is what we chose. They (expanded) and they made it work. What's happened is technology's prevailed a little bit."

Your Turn

Letters From Our Readers

Dear NASCAR This Week,
You reported that "Terry Labonte won the closest race in (Busch) series history, edging (Joe) Nemechek by an estimated .235 inches (.002 of a second)." I question the .235 inches.

Arlan DeKock Rolla, Mo.

Your enclosed mathematical estimate (figuring the margin as 6.688 inches) appears correct to us. The figure cited was disseminated, apparently wrongly, by press-box officials.

Dear NASCAR This Week,
As a teen-ager, I am able to get a scholarship in any sport I choose to do well in. Except NASCAR. Can you tell us if there are any racing schools that enable someone to enter the various NASCAR racing leagues? Is there a given set of rules governing potential race drivers?

There are a few million of us who can drive just as well as the current racers.

Mike Clark
Athens, Tenn.

Racing schools exist, but none that guarantee a person a ride in any series. We sympathize with your plight but do not believe there are millions of people out there "who can drive just as well as the current racers." If you, or anyone else, really can drive that well, an influential person will notice.

Kosovo's kids get urgent explosive lesson

Los Angeles Times

STANKOVAC, Macedonia — As a teacher at one of the ethnic Albanian refugee camps here, Selim Sherif has struggled to ply his trade in the face of stifling heat, emotional outbursts by traumatized children and a dearth of school supplies.

But those challenges seemed small compared to the lesson Sherif found himself conveying to students Wednesday to quit acting like children.

"Don't be curious about things you've never seen before," he warned. "Don't wander around the countryside. And play only where your parents say you can."

workers say. Mines and unexploded bombs have killed or injured dozens of people already, and experts predict it could take three to five years to clear away the danger. Children in particular are at risk of stumbling into harm's way due to their curious nature and because some bomb parts resemble toys.

"You can't imagine how difficult this is or how sorry this makes me feel," said Sherif, 45, who is from the southern Kosovo town of Cijilane.

"Instead of teaching pupils about things that will be of importance to their lives, I'm in a situation that I have to teach them about land mines and weapons."

The tragedy was not lost on about three dozen children sitting behind neat rows of desks Wednesday at the Stankovac refugee camp. They listened intently as Sherif explained that once they return to Kosovo, playing with toys or wandering through fields could put them at risk of injury or death.

The session appeared to catch the attention of many of the third- and fourth-graders who filled Sherif's classroom. But whether the message sinks in remains to be seen.

Student Mirinda Ahmeti, 11, stood and recited some of the warnings that Sherif had given her.

"We're walking a fine line between scaring them and impressing upon them (that) they have to change the way they live."

— Tehnaz J. Dastoor, UNICEF member

But moments later, she acknowledged that she didn't know whether she would remember the potentially life-saving tips in her excitement to be back in Kosovo.

Added Lavdrim Shabani, 10, who was weeping after the lesson: "I feel so sad that there are all these things I can't do because of the Serbs."

"It's very difficult to teach these kids," Sherif said. "They're so young but they've seen everything and heard everything."

Relief workers acknowledge that teaching refugee children about the hidden dangers awaiting them in Kosovo is proving to be tricky.

"We're walking a fine line between scaring them and impressing upon them (that) they have to change the way they live," said Tehnaz J. Dastoor of UNICEF, which has launched a campaign to teach ethnic Albanians about the dangers of land mines. "They need to understand that the Kosovo they'll be returning to is a much different place than the one they left behind."

Dastoor and her colleagues at UNICEF have spent the better part of this week training dozens of Albanian teachers such as Sherif about ways to avoid explosives so they can pass that knowledge on to students. The hope is that the teachers will continue the lessons once they return to Kosovo.

The unusual lesson is destined to become an integral part of the Kosovo school curriculum in coming years due to the tens of thousands of land mines, booby traps and unexploded bombs believed to be littering the war-scarred province.

The explosives have recalled Yugoslav soldiers, sniper fire and shortages of food and housing as the greatest threat facing Kosovo's ethnic Albanians, relief

U.S. Marines on an armored vehicle watch a burning Serb-owned house after its occupants fled the southern Kosovo town of Zegra Thursday. Serb civilians, fearing reprisals from ethnic Albanians, fled the town on Thursday in a convoy escorted by the Marines. The town was the scene of gunfire from Serb gunmen opening fire on a nearby Marine checkpoint. The Marines returned fire, killing one and wounding two. No Marines were hurt.

Serbs still skeptical of atrocity reports

The Washington Post

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Determined to circumvent the information blockade over what was happening to ethnic Albanians in Kosovo, Serbian human rights activist Nataša Kandic decided to mount her own one-woman investigation.

Last month, she traveled to the town of Peja in western Kosovo, scene of some of the cruelest atrocities, and found evidence of a mass grave containing the bodies of 44 ethnic Albanians.

When she returned to Belgrade, and tried to describe what she had seen, few people were interested. Her neighbors and friends preferred to talk about the disruption caused by NATO bomb attacks to the water and electricity supplies of Belgrade. Newspapers and news magazines normally critical of Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic refused to publish her eyewitness report from Kosovo, a province of Serbia, the dominant republic of Yugoslavia.

"When I tried to talk about what I had seen and experienced, people would get impatient and change the subject," said Kandic, who heads the privately subsidized Humanitarian Law Fund in Belgrade.

"It's as if people here simply don't want to know the truth about what happened in Kosovo. Even the intellectuals are under the influence of official propaganda."

Over the last two weeks, as foreign reporters have finally gained access to the killing fields of Kosovo, television viewers and newspaper readers all over the world have been flooded with harrowing accounts of the violence committed by Yugoslav and Serbian forces on the Albanian population.

But here in Serbia, there has been little public discussion about the atrocities, and no substantive reporting on the subject by the heavily censored news media.

An opinion poll published last week in the Belgrade news magazine Nis reported that 64 percent of Serbs do not believe reports in Western news media of atrocities committed against ethnic Albanians by Yugoslav and Serbian forces in Kosovo. Just over 14 percent of the population believes that atrocities were committed, while 15 percent think that the allegations may be partially true.

Those Serbs who are inclined to believe many of the accusations leveled against Serbian forces in Kosovo tend to look for explanatory factors, such as the argument that they things happen in war and all sides are guilty. They find it difficult to draw a moral distinction between a Serbian paramilitary machine gunning a column of Albanian refugees as during an offensive against the Kosovo Liberation Army (KLA) and NATO dropping bombs on Serbian civilians in an effort to destroy Milosevic's war-making capacity.

"If these things really happened in Kosovo, then our leaders are criminals," said Viden Videnovic, 17, a student in the southern Serbian city of Nis.

"But Milosevic is not the only one who is guilty. Clinton also deserves to be put on trial."

Nis was the scene of cluster-bomb attacks by NATO warplanes on May 7 and May 12 that killed 15 people in the center of the city, including a 27-year-old woman named Ljiljana Spasic who was in her seventh month of pregnancy. Composed of hundreds of tiny bomblets that drop to the ground in miniature parachutes, cluster bombs are designed to kill as many people as possible and are usually used against enemy troop concentrations.

Ex-prisoner tells of arrest, torture by Serbian soldiers

Los Angeles Times

PRIZREN, Yugoslavia — Although Sphiu's close-cropped hair, hollow cheeks and haunted eyes mark him.

He is a former prisoner, kept for two months and three days in jail here with hundreds of other ethnic Albanians who say they were starved and tortured during the worst of the campaign to "ethnically cleanse" Kosovo.

Sphiu, who was rescued last week by German troops taking part in NATO-led peacekeeping operations, was among the thousands of ethnic Albanians — most of them young men — who were arrested on suspicion of being Kosovo Liberation Army members or supporters.

Once arrested, the prisoners were in for brutal treatment. People living near the Prizren Commune Prison, not far from the center of this historic city in southern Kosovo — a province of Serbia, the dominant Yugoslav republic — said they were kept awake at night by the agonizing screams of inmates who were being beaten.

arrested me from my home and accused me of terrorism," said Sphiu, recounting his experience. "I was beaten three times a day. For me it was a piece of bread, marmalade and tea."

The 43-year-old amateur ham radio operator, who until late May had been trusted enough to be the only ethnic Albanian working in Prizren's office of civil defense, was thrown into a room about 60 square feet in size with 30 other men. Their only toilet was a bucket emptied once a day. Many of the prisoners became sick. Prisoners who were beaten were sometimes unconscious for days, Sphiu said.

The beatings took place in a corridor, Sphiu said. He would be forced onto the floor on his stomach. Guards would lift up the soles of his feet to beat them with sticks, and punch and kick the area of his kidneys.

There was always blood on the floor, he said. "They forced us to sing Serbian songs. Or they would make a cross with blood on your forehead and draw the four Cs in Serbian nationalist symbol being beaten. Only Unity Can Save the Serbs."

THE LAST ENCLAVE

Serbs flee as Kosovo Albanians return home

Los Angeles Times

KOSOVO POLJE, Yugoslavia — The women and children are gone now on Lovcenska Street, and 69-year-old Pero Samardzic hasn't slept in five nights.

As armed ethnic Albanian gangs move from block to block, looting from and evicting the Kosovo Serbs who once dominated this town, he has stayed up each night with a hunting rifle, ax and knife. He is determined to protect the house his father built more than half a century ago — and to safeguard a semblance of multiethnicity in what is fast becoming an Albanian land.

Then, on Wednesday, he ran out of coffee.

"I don't dare leave or they will come and burn my house down. I only came out to buy this," Samardzic said, pointing to a coffee bag, as he drank a quick vodka in the only open restaurant in town. "The night is long when you're fear."

This was the scene Wednesday from inside the last sizable Serbian enclave left in Kosovo — and perhaps the ethnic group's last line of defense in the province. For the Serbs, this town located four miles west of the provincial capital, Pristina, has become Fort Apache.

Even before the war that pushed nearly 1 million ethnic Albanians from the province, Kosovo Polje was a Serbian stronghold. There hasn't been a formal census in Kosovo in two decades.

But the Yugoslav government estimated before the war that more than 55 percent of the town's about 50,000 residents were Serbs, their largest concentration in the province where the ethnic group made up less than 10 percent of the population.

But the town's significance goes beyond its numbers.

It was here, on April 24, 1987, that Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic delivered a historic speech that threw down the gauntlet for local Serbs.

The speech began a process that emboldened Serbian nationalism in Kosovo and led to limitations on the province's autonomy in 1989, and eventually war with NATO.

Since the Yugoslav military and police forces began their withdrawal from the province earlier this month, Serbian leaders in Pristina said Wednesday, as many as half of the estimated 200,000 Kosovo Serbs have left, though other estimates put the number at 50,000. And they continue to head north to Serbia.

The NATO-led peacekeeping force, committed to protecting both ethnic communities, has appealed to the Serbs to stay. The peacekeepers' commander, British Lt. Gen. Mike Jackson, came to Kosovo Polje last week to deliver the message in person. But in the days since the last Yugoslav troop left Kosovo Polje and the nearby provincial capital, Serbs say violence against them has soared.

"Hundreds of Serbian apartments are today being broken into, dozens of Serbs are being kidnapped and Serbs are being killed," said Momcil Trajkovic, leader in Kosovo of the Serbian Resistance Movement, which is opposed to Milosevic's rule.

"I'm afraid if measures are not taken immediately to protect the Serbs," Trajkovic, "the international community will be alone with the Albanian community."

And that would be especially ironic here, where Milosevic shouted from the balcony of Kosovo Polje's House of Culture 12 years ago: "You should stay here. This is your land. These are your houses, your meadows and gardens. Your memories. You shouldn't abandon your land just because it's difficult to live."

His most historic declaration that day, a single line that helped bring him to power in Yugoslavia: "No one should dare beat you."

And it was in the restaurant beneath that same balcony at the House of Culture on Wednesday that Samardzic said, "Of course I'm staying."

His wife, son and daughter did not. Nor did any of the women and children on Lovcenska Street, most of them now with family or friends elsewhere in Serbia.

He acknowledged the irony in the Yugoslav president's recent appeal to stay in a town where many already have fled. But, he said, "Milosevic can't protect us now because the U.N. took charge. So now the U.N. should protect us."

But on Wednesday, it appeared that the peacekeeping force was not protecting Kosovo Polje. During a three-hour period, the peacekeepers' only presence was a lone British armored personnel carrier parked on the main street for fewer than 30 minutes.

Samardzic looked around his house and said, "This is our lives, for two generations. To leave all this and go to Serbia to live as a refugee would be insanity."

"The only way they will get me out is to kill me."

RANDY HANSEN SPECIAL LAST CHANCE OFFER!

At Randy Hansen Chevrolet, we like to keep our inventory fresh. The following vehicles are no different than any other found at our dealership, with one exception: we've had them too long. Before being wholesaled at the auction, we are offering them to the public at greatly reduced prices! It's a win-win for you and us. You get a great buy and we save transportation and auction fees. This offer begins Thursday, June 18th and continues through Saturday, June 26th. All prices will be clearly marked, and many will be thousands below our actual cost. After June 26th, these vehicles will be sent to dealer-only auctions.

Are you tired of moving wheel lines? Does the wind make you spend time gathering them up out of night's field? If so contact us on how to have your own Solar Linear or Mini-Prox system. You will find these systems that the wind won't have the effect you are used to. There are different types of Mini-Prox. The Titan Solar Linear Engages up to 80 acres. All power to run the Linear is supplied by the SUN. This is possible through photovoltaic solar panels and deep cycle storage batteries. The length of the Linear is dependent on several factors such as acreage, irrigated, climatic conditions, soil conditions, available water and pressure. We would be glad to design a system to meet your specific needs to show you how to cut down labor cost with a Mini-Prox.
