Tobacco funds head to Idaho

The Associated Press

BOISE - The state of Virginia's ratification of the landmark national tobacco settlement clears the way for Idaho to get its first multimillion-dollar payment before the end of the year.

Acceptance of the $206 billion, 46-state deal by officials in Richmond means tobacco manufacturers can begin doling out

State will decide later how spend the millions the money for which Idaho has been ready since last December. Because of uncertainty over the payments, Idaho state officials have declined to take any action on how to spend what will total more than $711 million over the next 25 years.

The first payment of approximately $8.7 million will be deposited in the state budget reserve account while spending plans are debated. The next payment of $23.2 million - also earmarked for the reserve account - is due in mid-April, and every April after that the state will be getting between $25 million and $30 million, adjusted for tobacco consumption in the state. Legislative budget writers have made no commitments to any of the various groups seeking a share of that money. Among them is the Coalition for a Healthy Idaho, which wants at least $8.5 million a year for a comprehensive tobacco prevention program. Senate Finance Chairman Atwell Parry and Attorney General Al Lance did say last week that Idaho should reject proposals from investors to essentially give the state hundreds of millions of dollars immediately in exchange for the state repaying the money with interest over an extended period of years.

Artist seeks city's soul

TWIN FALLS - What an artist's rendition of Twin Falls will look like depends on what the people who live here say about the place - and what he hears when he listens to the water.

Ted Clausen, of Cambridge, Mass., spent the week in town scouring through historical archives and interviewing everybody he could find who could offer him their impressions of how history has shaped the valley.

The city of Boston commissioned Clausen to build the Vendome Firefighters Memorial (1997) in memory of nine firefighters who were killed in the line of duty; firefighters thought they had the structure fire licked but the building collapsed on them just as they were about to leave. U.S. remains firm with Taliban

Afghan leaders must turn over suspect or face U.N. sanctions

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The Clinton administration warned Afghanistan the United Nations would impose sanctions this weekend if the ruling Taliban fails to help bring Osama bin Laden to trial on terrorist charges.

Dismissing Taliban's condemnation of a string of rocket attacks on U.S. and other installations in Pakistan's capital Islamabad, administration officials said no group is being ruled out in an investigation that has barely begun.

In New York, the current president of the U.N. Security Council, Ambassador Danilo Turk of Taliban, for a whole range of reasons, is outside even the most reasonable, most elastic definition of acceptable international behavior," national security adviser Sandy Berger said Friday. The Taliban - a militant Islamic group that controls most of Afghanistan - is believed to harbor bin Laden, an extremist Saudi millionaire accused of operating a terrorist network who faces charges of masterminding the bombing of two U.S. embassies in East Africa last year.

The State Department said Friday in a "wide-eyed caution" that Americans traveling abroad should be alert to any action the Taliban may take in response to the sanctions.

A U.S. intelligence official told The Associated Press, meanwhile, that the bombings appear to "have been inspired by the threat of U.N. sanctions."

Sweeping financial bill becomes law

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - President Clinton signed into law Friday a sweeping measure that knocks down Depression-era barriers and lets banks, investment firms and insurance companies sell each other's products and provide one-stop shopping for financial services.

How much fat in that pat?

The Food and Drug Administration is changing the nutrition labels on food to include a little known artery-clogger called trans fat.

Nutrition Facts
 Serving Size (This label is for a container of 200g)
 Amount Per Serving
 Total Fat 15g 30%
 Saturated Fat 10g 20%
 Trans Fat 5g 10%
 Cholesterol 5g 10%
 Sodium 100mg 20%
 Total Carbohydrate 20g 40%
 Dietary Fiber 5g 10%
 Protein 5g 10%

Some fats and oils are damaging to the arteries and heart.

Artery-clogging fats that increase blood cholesterol include:

- Saturated fat: Found in dairy and meat products.
- Trans fat: Formed when vegetable oils are hardened into solids.

Butter has more saturated fat than margarine. But margarine, particularly in stick form, has more trans fat.

Kempthorne said, "It's the system I inherited."

But the system is a flexible one, and the flexibility of security changes with administrations, and even can change during a governor's term.

"I don't want you to walk by and just look up at it," he said. "It's not that you just look at it — art just plopped on the street."

Clausen created a memorial to Boston firefighters killed in the line of duty. It's a black granite arch with inscriptions giving a timeline of the fatal fire and the names of the firefighters who died in it.

"It's an outdoor room that wraps itself around you. It's sort of my biggest box to date. And while you're in there, it tells you a story," he said.

Twin Falls High School sophomores Megan Thom and Crystal Shull were enthralled with the artist's presentation and his plans for Twin Falls.

"I think it's a great idea. I think it's a great way to express what we are," Thom said. "I think his ideas are so original. It will add some glamour and creativity to our city streets."

Every type of person from young to old should be interviewed, Shull suggested including in the sculpture the building of the Perrine Ridge and the community's founders.

Artist

Clausen, who is working on a design plan, will work with a Magic Valley Arts Council advisory board representing various community interests to decide what and where the art will be.

"It's really forced me to look at my own attitudes about Twin Falls," said Donna Yule, executive director of the Magic Valley Arts Council.

That part of the experience Clausen wants to create.

He continues to formulate his ideas, and won't tip his hand until he is ready.

But his impressions of the area so far are varied: a spirit of civic responsibility he hasn't seen any place else; a landscape he describes as dramatic and inspiring; and an opinion, expressed by many people, that it's a conservative place — an opinion that doesn't exactly get at that conservatism means.

Then there is the water, which has many different sounds, depending on whether it's rushing through Rock Creek, moving through the Snake or irrigating farm lands — and yet is generally absent from the landscape.

Clausen invited student participation in the project. He plans a series of temporary art projects made by local residents for display around the community. They could include stranding early photographs of Twin Falls

About the project

"I would never criticize a governor for having heightened security," Evans said.

"It's unfair to say Kempthorne is demanding more protection, but he may be more receptive to the requests of his ISP advisors."

Kempthorne has vetoed some police protection ideas, spokesman Mark Snider said Friday, but for the most part, he listens to the experts.

"They have the intelligence that we don't have," Snider said.

New food labels focus on dangerous trans fat

WASHINGTON (AP) — No one actually thought doughnuts and cookies were health foods. But it will be harder to hide from just how unhealthy they are under new nutrition labels that would list a little-known artery-clogger called trans fat.

The Food and Drug Administration on Friday proposed the change, the first since the government required labels on food products in 1994.

Experts believe that trans fatty acids, the stuff that makes french fries, crackers and lots of other foods taste so good, may be even worse for the heart than saturated fat. But consumers have had no way to know how much of it is in their foods. "It's not going to be able to slip under the radar screen any more," said FDA Commissioner Jane Henney.

The plan would take effect after a 90-day comment period.

Under the proposed label, the listing for saturated fat would include the amount of trans fat added to the amount of saturated fat. That would give people who already check the level of saturated fats a better idea of how much damaging fat is in each serving.

"You don't have to know what trans fat is for the new label to help you," said Margie Wootan, a senior scientist at Center for Science in the Public Interest, which first petitioned the FDA for the new labels in 1994. "You can just keep on using the label as you always did."

The move comes in the wake of research offering damning evidence against trans fat, possibly the worst artery clogger of all. Studies indicate that eating trans fat increases LDL cholesterol, also known as "bad cholesterol," which increases the risk of heart disease. At the same time, it decreases the amount of HDL — the "good cholesterol" that is good for the heart.

Praying Congress' bipartisan support for the legislation to Clinton said it is a victory for both free markets and consumer protection.

Congress passed the law Nov. 5 to open the way for a blossoming of financial "supermarkets" that sell loans, investments and insurance.

Proponents pushed the legislation in Congress for two decades, and Wall Street and the banking and insurance

Proponents say the legislation will save customers $15 billion a year, offering them greater choice and convenience and spurring competition.

GOP legislators take softer view on spending to avoid a shutdown

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Peter Hoekstra of Michigan was one of the Republican budget bit-ter-enders in the winter of 1995-1996, voting against the party leadership's plan to end a long and politically damaging government shutdown.

Four years later, Hoekstra and other House conservatives have gone along quietly with their leaders on a course to spend billions of dollars for federal programs, more than they want and Clinton himself asked for months ago. "They're not nearly where some of us would want them to be," Hoekstra said about the spending bills GOP leaders brought to the floor this year. "But we believe they're as low as we can get" given a slender GOP majority in the House and Clinton's presence in the White House. The count is 222 Republicans, 211 Democrats and an independent who normally votes Democratic.

Even conservatives who have opposed many of this year's spending bills have done so quietly. "We don't have the votes to stop it," says Rep. Steve Chabot of Ohio. "But the ultimate weapon is the shutdown, and we want to avoid that if possible."

With a balanced budget an accomplished fact much earlier than expected, Republicans have jettisoned the spending caps written into law two years ago as part of the agreement to wipe out the federal deficit.

The agreed earlier in the year to spend roughly $14.5 billion more than the caps permit and sought to turn their retreat into a political victory: they would refuse to spend any of the Social Security surplus.

Democrats and the White House contend Republicans have resorted to a series of gimmicks to violate even that promise by $17 billion or so, and some GOP conservatives are worried about the fallout by the GOP high command when year-end negotiations with the White House are concluded. "If that happens, you're going to see conservatives rise up next week and reject the bill, and there will be hell to pay for the leadership," Rep. David McIntosh of Indiana said. But for now, except for a few rebels such as Rep. Tom Coburn of Oklahoma, conservatives are largely acquiescent and list several reasons for the change in tone as well as in strategy. These include a desire to ease the way for Speaker Dennis Hastert, in his first year as leader of his party, and aggressive campaigning by others in the GOP leadership, particularly the whip, Rep. Tom DeLay of Texas.

They also cite the patient temperment of Florida Rep. Bill Young, the appropriations committee chairman, whose predecessor, Rep. Bill Livingston of Louisiana, had a more fiery, confrontational style. And they speak of internal dynamics in the GOP caucus.

For example, McIntosh, a visible conservative critic of the leaders in the past, shifted focus this year with a bid to become Indiana's next governor.

Hastert has sought to stress the Republicans must stay together, and, in an interview this week, said the slimmest of the majority has led Republicans to give him

"the benefit of the doubt from time to time." A steady stream of public announcements by party leaders that they will refuse to schedule legislation that dips into the surplus, coupled with television commercials accusing Democrats of raiding the Social Security surplus, have served to reassure lawmakers, according to several Republicans.

In videotape, Columbine gunman thanks man who supplied a gun

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) - In a videotaped message, one of the Columbine High School gunmen thanked the man who provided a weapon used in the deadly attack.

In a sentencing hearing Friday for Mark Manes, 22, prosecutors read from transcripts of videotapes seized at the home of one of the gunmen. It was unclear whose home the tape was taken from.

In the tape, gunman Eric Harris notes "Oh, I'd like to make a thank you to Mark (Manes) and Phil (Duran). Very cool. You helped us do what we needed to do. Thank you."

Duran is a pizza shop employee who worked with Harris and gunman Dylan Klebold and was accused of introducing the pair to Manes.

The gun supplied by Manes, a TEC-DC9, was used by the Klebold to commit suicide at the end of the April attack, authorities said.

Mark Manes
Sentenced to six years in prison

District Judge Henry Nieto sentenced Manes to six years in prison for supplying the handgun to the killers, and another three years to be served concurrently for possessing a sawed-off shotgun. Before he was sentenced, Manes said he never wants to see guns again. "I can't adequately express my sorrow to the families of the victims... I am truly very sorry," he said.

Kate Batten, Jefferson County lead investigator in the Columbine shootings, said the TEC-DC9 semiautomatic pistol sold by Manes to Klebold was fired 55 times during the attack, killing four people and wounding two.

In all, 13 people were killed in the attack before the gunmen committed suicide.

Two shotguns and a rifle also were used for the rest of the killings, but they were unrelated to Manes.

McEwan said Klebold then used the handgun to kill himself, while Harris committed suicide with a shotgun.

Manes held his head down as nine relatives of victims railed of the carnage and the aftermath.

New information paints frightening picture of EgyptAir flight's descent

Knight Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON - New information from the flight data recorder paints a horrifying last minute for the passengers of EgyptAir 990. The jumbo jet took a steep dive at speeds reaching 745 mph, went from zero gravity to 2.5 times normal gravity, lost power in both engines, then came apart.

The new data tells what happened to the plane just before it crashed early on Halloween, killing 217 people. But it cannot explain why it "happened," National Transportation Safety Board Chairman Jim Hall said Friday, after he released the information.

Hall said the still-to-be recovered cockpit voice recorder might hold the answers.

Hall's description of what different parts of the Boeing 767 were doing was enough to dismay pilots, who tried to imagine struggling for control in the doomed cockpit. "This is loss of control; this is total hell," aviation safety consultant Norman Horton said.

The passengers would have felt extremely disoriented as the plane plunged in the dark of night, experts said. Any passengers not belted in would likely have flown out of their seats and slammed down seconds later when the dive shallowed.

Here's how the descent progressed, according to Hall: The plane was flying normally at 33,000 feet, when autopilot - which operates most airliners during flight - disconnected. Investigators said it is not yet clear whether the crew disengaged the autopilot.

Eight seconds later, the steep dive began as power to both engines was reduced. During this 20-second dive the nose pointed as far down as 40 degrees. Normally noses don't go more than 16 degrees down, said Ed Monhollen, a San Antonio private airplane crash investigator.

Halfway into that dive, the plane reached 655 mph - fast enough to trigger the crew's "master warnings" that require immediate action - and at one point it was plummeting at 716 mph, Hall said.

The steep nose-down position started to lessen and the force of gravity on the plane switched from weightlessness to 2.5 times normal, which is about the maximum some wings can handle depending on how the forces are loaded, Waldoack said.

At that point, the positions of the plane's left and right elevators split - the left side pointing one way and the right side pointing the other, Hall said. The elevators are normally used together to point the plane up or down. The split might signal the start of a breakup, experts say.

A few seconds later, both engines shut down and the plane lost electrical power. Earlier, when the plane was at zero gravity, the engines' oil pressure switched to low - something that can happen in Boeing 767s during weightlessness - Hall said.

"What went on is they lost control of the airplane, simply put," said Bill Dixon, a former TWA chief pilot. "They got into a steep dive... They could not recover it."

The last five seconds of information from the flight data recorder still have not been deciphered, Hall said. And those last seconds won't include a final climb by the plane to 24,000 feet before another dive and final breakup, all shown on radar.

Ameristar announces quarterly net revenues

LAS VEGAS - Ameristar Casinos Inc. (Nasdaq: ASCA) this week announced net revenues of $77.6 million, income from operations of $6.7 million and earnings per share of 1 cent for the three months ended Sept. 30.

These results are improved from the third quarter of 1998, when net revenues were $69.3 million, income from operations was $4.4 million and loss per share was 6 cents, said the company with a Twin Falls office.

For the nine months ended Sept. 30, net revenues were $223.8 million, income from operations was $20.4 million and earnings per share were 5 cents. For the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1998, net revenues were $197.5 million, income from operations before preopening costs - related to the opening of The Reserve Hotel & Casino in Las Vegas - was $11.2 million and loss per share before preopening costs was 15 cents.

"I am particularly pleased with the improved market share positions of our Vicksburg (Miss.), Council Bluffs (Iowa) and Las Vegas facilities," said Ameristar President and CEO Craig H. Neilson. "Construction continues on schedule for the third-level casino addition in Council Bluffs, with the opening planned for Nov. 22."

The company's Jackpot properties, the Cactus Peter Resort Casino and The Horseshu Hotel & Casino, increased net revenues to $15.9 million and $44.3 million for the three and nine months ended Sept. 30, compared with $13.5 million and $42.0 million for the same periods in 1998. Those properties had operating income of $3 million and $8.9 million, respectively, for the three and nine months ended Sept. 30, compared with $3.7 million and $8.2 million for the corresponding periods in 1998, the company said.

Most of the revenue enhancement in Jackpot "is attributable to increased casino revenues due to a higher hold percentage on table games and enhanced slot product," Ameristar said.

Elmer's Restaurants reports spike in second-quarter earnings

PORTLAND, Ore. - Elmer's Restaurants Inc. (Nasdaq: ELM) this week announced its second-quarter earnings for the three months ended Sept. 30.

Elmer's - which has a pancake and steak house in Twin Falls - reported record net income of $237,000, or 15 cents per share, on revenues of $5.6 million. That compares with net income of $51,000, or 7 cents per share, for the same period a year ago. For the six months ended Sept. 30, the company said it earned $431,000, or 27 cents per share, compared with net income of $84,000, or 11 cents per share, for the year-ago period.

The quarterly results compare with net income of $194,000, or 12 cents per share, on revenues of $5.3 million on a pro forma basis for the same period a year ago. Pro forma results represent the combined earnings of Elmer's and its subsidiaries CBW Inc. and Grass Valley Limited, as if all three businesses had been owned by Elmer's for the three months ended Sept. 30, 1998.

"Our strong operational and financial performance demonstrates that our new management team's strategy of revitalizing and growing Elmer's is on target," said a joint statement by Chairman Bruce Davis and Chief Executive Officer William Service.

The company also announced the issuance of a 5 percent stock dividend payable to holders of record on Nov. 30 - the first dividend payable to Elmer's shareholders.

Rite Aid shares rise on report of possible sale

Move could relieve pressure of huge debt

The Times-News
and Bridge News

NEW YORK - Shares of Rite Aid Corp. rose by as much as 10 percent Friday after the third-largest U.S. drug store chain said it is considering selling some of its West Coast stores in an effort to pay down its crushing debt.

But Rite Aid isn't saying whether its Twin Falls store is among those up for sale.

"We're not singling out specific stores" for comment, Sarah Datz, Rite Aid's manager of public relations, has said earlier, declining to confirm whether the Twin Falls store is involved in sales discussions.

When Rite Aid this fall sold off large-format stores in California - part of its 1996 Payless acquisition - it kept the former Payless store at the corner of Twin Falls' Blue Lakes Boulevard and Addison Avenue.

The Twin Falls store is 33,400 square feet, just under the average size of those sold in California. In Western states, Rite Aid - whose expertise is in smaller stores - has 215 additional locations over 25,000 square feet that weren't sold.

Rite Aid shares, which on Wednesday fell to $4.50 - their lowest level in 14 years - climbed to a high of $7.8750 following a report in Friday's Wall Street Journal. In mid-afternoon, Rite Aid shares were trading at $7, up 9.8 percent, or 62.5 cents.

The Wall Street Journal said Friday the Camp Hill, Pa.-based company is considering the sale of all its West Coast stores for $2.5 billion, or $2.5 million per store. Datz would not confirm those numbers but said the company has no intention of selling all 1,000 stores in the region.

Datz also said the company continues to pursue a sale of its PCS Health unit to raise cash and reduce debt but she refused to elaborate on any negotiations taking place. PCS is a pharmacy benefits management provider acquired in January for $1.5 billion.

Rite Aid acquired its West Coast chain three years ago by buying Thrifty PayLess Holdings Inc. for $1.4 billion, plus the assumption of $890 million in debt.

Rite Aid already announced in September that it would sell 38 West Coast stores to Long Drug Stores for $186 million.

Rite Aid shares went into free fall Wednesday after the company warned investors not to rely on profit projections made last month. The company also con-

Sleep research drives success

Seattle company's down business is up

Western business

The Associated Press

SEATTLE - Pacific Coast Feather Co. just wants you to be comfortable.

Are you sleeping well? Do you feel refreshed in the morning? Those are some of the things the nation's second-largest bedding company wants to know.

"We approach this business dramatically different from our competitors," said Roy Clothier, company president.

"Our focus is to treat it as a consumer product business, instead of as a commodity business. In order to be a good consumer products company, you need to understand the consumer."

And how do they do that?

Pacific Coast Feather researchers poll consumers. They consult allergists and orthopedists to develop products that promote healthy sleep. They test materials in a lab for quality, cleanliness and durability.

The company hosts focus groups where consumers are quizzed about how they sleep, where they sleep and what they like to sleep on. Some are given products to take home and try.

"Pacific Coast Feather Co. is a very innovative and dynamic company that truly focuses on the consumer through extensive research," said Faye Musselman, home textiles editor at Home Furnishings News, a trade publication that covers home furnishings.

Pacific Coast Feather won't divulge how much it spends on research. But it knows the average buyer of its pillows, down comforters, featherbeds and mattress pads is a woman aged 25 to 55 who has an income of more than $30,000 and is looking for both quality and luxury.

Attention to such details has paid off.

Averaging a nearly 20 percent annual growth rate for the past 20 years, the privately held, Seattle-based family company with 1,500 employees has become the largest manufacturer of down comforters in the United States and the second-largest bedding company, behind Pillowtop Corp. in Dallas.

"Our business growth is the product of the momentum of all the research we've done and the service we've given over such a long period of time," Clothier said.

Pacific Coast Feather now sells to stores representing 80 percent of United States distribution, including United States Linens, Bed Bath and Beyond and J.C. Penney's. Sales are expected to top $225 million in 1999.

products under its own name.

"Pacific Coast Feather Co. represents quality, reputation and an unparalleled level of expertise in the market," said Harvey Kanter, vice president of Eddie Bauer Home.

Pacific Coast Feather's signature product is down - an estimated 7 million to 8 million pounds of down and feathers are used per year, mostly supplied by China.

The down is cleaned and processed at a factory in Marysville, Wash., then sent to various plants in North America.

The company ships all of its products regionally.

'Monopoly' label sets up new lawsuits

Tobacco war veterans consider suing Microsoft

The Washington Post

The lawyers who attacked Big Tobacco have discovered a new villain: Microsoft.

Less than a week after a federal judge branded the software giant a "brute and monopolist, veterans from the cigarette wars are plotting to sue the company in a wave of private litigation. If the onslaught unfolds as expected, teams of lawyers will turn Microsoft into the next Philip Morris, tangling the company in courts nationwide.

"We're looking at it, we're seriously looking at it," said Stanley Chesley, a prominent class-action tobacco lawyer. "Millions of people bought Windows, and if the company overcharged consumers, it should be held responsible."

Lawyers have been emboldened by a blunt ruling by Thomas Penfield Jackson, the federal judge hearing the government's antitrust suit against Microsoft Corp. Last week, Jackson issued findings of fact concluding that Microsoft ruthlessly exploited its market power to strong-arm corporate customers and competitors alike. Jackson also determined a range of Microsoft tactics stifled innovation, reduced consumer choice and led to higher prices.

Some parts of the legal community see Jackson's words as the combination to a padlocked fortune. Antitrust law grants triple damages to plaintiffs who prevail, so if consumers overpaid for copies of Windows by just $10 apiece, verdicts could easily wind up in the billions of dollars, say specialists.

Typically, private lawyers must spend fortunes marshaling the manpower and research needed to prove a company is a monopolist and bully. With Jackson's ruling in hand, lawyers could effectively piggyback off the government's research and its experts' opinions.

"It makes a hell of a road map," said John Coale, a Washington plaintiffs lawyer who played a leading role in negotiating the $260 billion tobacco settlement in 1998.

One company has already found its way to the courthouse. On Monday, Seastrom Associates, a small advertising firm, filed suit in New York seeking class status for all that state's con-

MONEY

Money personalities might not match

Knight Ridder News Service

It's one thing to look deeply into the eyes of the person you love and pledge eternal fealty whether "for richer and for poorer."

It's quite another to maintain those passionate feelings when you're trying to build a nest egg even as your significant other is shooting the kitty on Las Vegas, fast food and Aerosmith concert tickets.

"From both a personal and business standpoint, I've found a lot of people plan on getting married but haven't really talked about money," says Scott Grifinger, a senior investment adviser with Milwaukee-based Strong Funds.

"Money is a very sensitive issue and when you get egos involved, you're dealing with a very volatile subject," added the 33-year-old who will tie the knot this month.

Everyone has a "financial personality," he said, and when those attitudes clash, both husband and wife may find themselves in the awkward equivalent of a mixed marriage.

For newlyweds facing a united financial future, the universal advice among financial consultants is astonishingly simple: Talk to one another.

"If you make (money) a sticking point or touchy issue, it will become more and more divisive," said Gregory P. Freeman, director of services for Wipfli Ullrich Bertelson's Appleton office, 100 W. Lawrence St.

Married couples should consider dealing with their bottom line in the same manner as a successful company, he suggested.

"A business that allows its employees to know the financial conditions of the company, how it gets there and where it wants to go will find they are more willing to stick to plan, accomplish goals and be more successful." While each couple is ultimately unique, they general fall into one of three broad categories, suggested Robert Mathers, director of financial and tax planning in Clifton Gunderson's Oshkosh office.

Younger, first-time newlyweds: "There's not a lot to think about. They typically come into their relationship without a lot of assets, so the mutual attitude is, 'Everything is ours.'" As a result, the couple needs only to hammer out a budgeting philosophy capable of guiding them through the years as their incomes grow.

Mathers cites Charles Givens' book, "Wealth Without Risk," which suggests couples who don't have the wherewithal to create a budget instead merely set aside a certain amount of income regularly.

"The rest they're gonna blow," Mathers acknowledged with a laugh. "Sure, it's a crap (budgeting), but it's a crap (budgeting)."

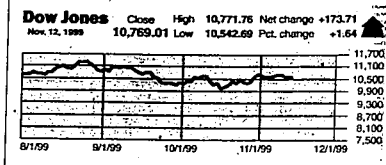

"If there are bad feelings - if he resents her assets; if she thinks he's living off her - it can create a break in the trust: You better work that out before you exchange rings."

Second marriage situations: "You are dealing with not only financial issues, but possibly children and the associated financial issues that come along with them." It's critical to sort down with family lawyers to sort out what's HIS, HERS, OURS as well as THEIRS, which could include obligations to ex-spouses and children," Mathers said.

No matter which category a couple falls into, Grifinger says, they need to have a frank discussion about their past, present and future.

"People need to discuss how they grew up, what kind of family their family was brought up with. They need to discuss what the financial conditions were when they were raised and how it affects what they do today," he said.

Nasdaq turns back up, closes at another record

NEW YORK (AP) - The Nasdaq composite index rose to another record close Friday and the Dow Jones industrial average jumped to its highest level in eight weeks as economic reports eased investor fears about an interest rate increase next week.

Qualcomm led the turnaround on the Nasdaq, which was off 72 points earlier in the day. The Nasdaq, which has risen 10 out of the last 11 sessions, ended the day up 23.86 at 3,221.15. Shares of Qualcomm, a large developer of wireless phone technology, soared 3 1/2 to 378, after J.P. Morgan issued a bullish report saying the company's shares could hit 460 within a year.

"The Dow meanwhile, rose 17.04 to 10,769.32, driven by strong gains in shares of financial companies American Express and J.P. Morgan. For the week, the Dow rose 64.84, and its close Friday left the blue chips at their highest level since Sept. 20, when they closed at 10,823.50.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 14.60 to 1,396.06. The market was encouraged by a government report that worker productivity jumped in the third quarter while growth in labor costs moderated.

Productivity, defined as the amount of output for each hour of work, rose at a 4.2 percent annual rate from July through September. But unit labor costs, another major influence on prices, rose just 0.6 percent, the slowest quarterly increase this year.

The report was interpreted as a sign that inflationary pressures remain in check, and it made investors more optimistic that the Federal Reserve might not raise interest rates when its Open Market Committee meets on Tuesday.

"The productivity number this morning was such an outstanding number, it gave people a nice feeling of confidence," said Edward Collins, a trader at Daiwa Securities America. "Most of the day the financials have been leading the way."

Financial stocks tend to rise when interest rates appear to be stable, because higher rates cut into their lending business. Shares of American Express ended up 8 1/2 at 154.14, while J.P. Morgan's stock rose 6 9/16 to 139.516.

Professor counts up the cost of an MBA program

Knight Ridder News Service

Consider this: A master of business administration degree can yield a $30,000 raise at a cost of $130,000 in lost wages and tuition.

Is it a good deal? Iens Stephan, a University of Cincinnati associate professor of accounting, says it depends on the program's length, the cost of tuition and the amount of the raise.

Dr. Stephan, who is also academic director of Cincinnati's MBA program, has devised a formula that calculates MBA degrees' return. Here are excerpts from a recent interview:

QUESTION: Why and how did you calculate an MBA's return on investment?

ANSWER: If you read the popular press about MBA programs, they will often refer to them as an investment in a person's future. My first thought is, What is the investment? How long does it take to get your money back? The real trick here is to figure out what the investment is. Do you do a one-year or two-year program?

One component is the lost salary and the other is the tuition. How much money do I need to pay that $20,000 tuition? Probably $30,000 because I pay taxes.

Say I have a $35,000-year salary. In a two-year program, tuition is $60,000 and there is $70,000 in lost earnings. The total investment is $130,000. If you get a $30,000-$40,000 raise, it still takes three to four years to get your money back.

Q: Do part-time MBA programs have a good return on investment?

A: It's an excellent way to get the general management skills that it takes to move up the corporate ladder. And you end up not paying tuition because the company usually pays for it, and you end up not losing any earnings while you are doing this. But it does take a long time, probably 20 hours it adds to your life.

Q: In today's executive job market, giving up a salary and emigrating for a year or two can be hard. What is your advice to people deciding between an MBA and keeping a job?

A: If what you want to do is change careers... I would encourage you to quit your job and get yourself into as good a full-time MBA program as you can get into. When you get out, there are going to be lots of good firms knocking on the door. If, however, your objective is to stay in the industry you are in and with the employer you are now with, then that part-time program can be an excellent way to get the skills that you need.

Is the WTO good for Earth and people?

Yes

Jobs, ecology depend upon it

DIANNE SULLIVAN

In 1929, international trade — both imports plus exports — amounted to slightly more than 10 percent of the U.S. economy. It fell well below this level — bottoming out at around 5 percent — during the Great Depression and World War II, and did not recover to the levels seen in 1929 until the end of the 1960s. Since then, trade has grown steadily to today's level of 30 percent of the U.S. economy.

The prime factors contributing to this healthy trend have been the steady reduction in trade barriers around the world since the late 1940s along with the development of a rules-based international trading system — first with the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) and more recently the World Trade Organization.

Manufacturing is equally the most internationally oriented sector of the economy; manufactured products account for 62 percent of all U.S. exports and 72 percent of all U.S. imports.

No one has more at stake in a rules-based system that reduces tariffs and other barriers to trade, and protects against unfair trade practices, than American industry.

Traditionally, American manufacturing has been concerned about making sure that the United States remains a good place to do business. This remains a fundamental concern.

Increasingly, however, American manufacturing has to worry about the world economy being a good place to do business. A world trading system based on predictable and transparent rules — which is what the WTO is about — is one means of achieving this goal.

What does it mean if the world becomes a better place to do business? Case Corporation provides a powerful answer. For example, its plant in East Moline, Ill., sells more than half of its crop-harvesting combines abroad. Where would their 1,200 workers be without trade? To say nothing of the more than 225 suppliers — U.S. companies, large and small — who provide the parts to help build each of the giant machines. These suppliers are located in 30 states and employ 100,000 people.

The WTO faces a great deal of criticism from radical activist groups, most of it unfounded. It is true that arbitration proceedings have been shrouded in unnecessary secrecy, and we in the business community are working to change that. But most other allegations, particularly regarding the environment, are misleading at best.

There is nothing about the WTO that prevents a country from adopting higher environmental standards, provided that country applies the same standards to both domestic and foreign products.

We are almost back to the future today because at the end of the 19th century the world economy was by almost any measure — immigration, capital flows, or trade — just as integrated as it is today.

Worries about protection and isolationism shattered that project. We are only now returning to the level of economic integration seen a century ago. The bitter lessons we have learned recently provide a map of what roads not to follow — economic nationalism, isolationism, and protectionism. As the past 50 years have demonstrated, the better road is mapped out by the World Trade Organization, which has helped create a world trade system based on predictable and trans-

How did something as small and seemingly removed from people's lives as the Third Ministerial Meeting of the World Trade Organization manage to attract this kind of opposition?

It is important to realize that the real argument here is not "free trade vs. protectionism" as it's often framed by proponents of corporate globalization as they look for a new market to enter. The WTO is not a free market, it is not a market of free markets, it is not a market of intellectual property rights — patents, copyrights, and other monopolies created for the benefit of particular shrimp fishing interests challenge the protection of giant sea turtles by our Endangered Species Act, the poor turtles who have died through Earth's oceans for 150 million years — didn't stand a chance.

When it was Venezuelan oil interests versus the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's air quality standards for imported gasoline, the oil interests won. When it was U.S. cattle producers against the European Union's ban on hormone-treated beef, European consumers lost.

The list goes on — and it would go on for longer if the Clinton administration were to have its way in Seattle. One of the top items on their agenda is the much-touted "Global Free Logging Agreement" which would lead to increased unsustainable logging worldwide and threaten a number of initiatives to protect domestic forests as home.

These results are hardly surprising, given the way the deck has been stacked. Decisions are made by tribunals in which the interests of one party tend to prevail. The WTO is not a market of free markets, it is not a market of intellectual property rights — patents, copyrights, and other monopolies created for the benefit of particular companies.

The Clinton administration's offer to establish a "working group" within the WTO to discuss labor rights is too little and too late. This World Trade Organization is never going to make any rules that would infringe on the prerogatives of corporations, for the benefit of labor or the environment. It will self-interest before that happens.

The train of corporate globalization — with "trade first, people last" as its guiding principle — has been steered in the wrong direction for a long time. Before it can turn around, it must be brought to a halt. Last stop: Seattle 1999.

LETTERS

Make up your minds already

Make up your mind, Times-News. You're all over the issue when it comes to milk! In your editorial Sept. 14, you comments clearly contradicted those of your Oct. 26 editorial. Sept. 14, you said, "Risks that science, a moratorium request plays to vague, bogeyman fears about diminishing quality of life for rural residents. It is driven by anecdotal horror stories rather than empirical honest science."

It features country people who say they can't barbecue anymore because of the stink from dairies down the road." And "the seemingly inexcusable pollution of their well water." And "if anyone can prove that allowing more big livestock operations in such areas is a threat to public safety, let them make their case with facts."

Oct. 26, your comments on handling waste from a proposed cheese processing plant (the driving force behind more dairies in the valley) were, "It could pollute and blunder the primary source of drinking water for the city of Twin Falls. It could also foul the air around a major highway junction before it has time to develop properly." And "The proposal from WestFarm Foods is so aggressively bad that it could plunge southern Idaho's dairy industry into complete public disrepute." And "And application of dairy-processing waste is simply not appropriate in a high-traffic area of homes, highways and human activity.

So how do you really feel about the milk industry? Do you support it wholeheartedly or only when it doesn't affect you? What about air and water pollution associated with this industry? When is it real (based on science) and when is only fear? Do you have a classic case of NYNBY (not in my back yard)?

I think you have a case of double standards and a slanted, self-serving political opinion. After all, you supported WestFarm Foods coming into the valley. You've supported industrial-sized dairy operations. But when you think it might stink while you're golfing at the Blue Lakes Country Club, or the city's water supply may be threatened, you suddenly change your mind?

And don't worry about WestFarm Foods throwing the dairy industry into complete public disrepute. They're doing a fine job of that themselves. BECK REDYEN

Let's avoid misunderstandings

I want to thank Lee Woodland and Phyllis Miller who have recently written letters to the editor that have highlighted the difficult issues involving psychiatric illness.

It is an unfortunate fact that many individuals do not receive psychiatric care as early as they could or should. To avoid adding to this problem, I feel it is important to avoid potential misunderstandings or miscommunications.

To begin with, it should be noted that most individuals treated at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center's Canyon View unit are admitted on a voluntary basis. These individuals and their family members generally understand the need for treatment. With early and appropriate interventions, most individuals return to previous levels of feeding and functioning.

A more complex, and at times difficult, issue involves patients apparently in need of psychiatric intervention who do not themselves desire treatment. These individuals may, at times and under certain circumstances, be admitted on an involuntary basis. Most involuntary admissions currently require the involvement of law-enforcement officials. This situation is by no means perfect.

It is a point of concern for many mental health-care providers and I suspect, for many law-enforcement officers, that the legal system often functions as a sort of gatekeeper to involuntary mental health care. Nevertheless, it is important to educate the public that treatment centers like Canyon View are generally not legally allowed to admit adults on an involuntary basis without prior legal intervention. Canyon View staff is available to explain these individuals and to answer, in any way possible, an attorney's questions on this issue. I hope that someone would be willing to answer Canyon View's many other local treatment facilities for assistance with obtaining care for themselves or others.

An idea to settle the spat

To Peter Ribick: I urge you to find the website for the National Technology Program. It can be easily found at the "Twin Falls" website. NTP is a federal research agency. Every two years, it issues the "Report on Competitiveness."

"The report lists companies 'innovative' or 'consistently competitive' in manufacturing. Companies so designated in previous reports can be tracked. The report is that the last word on government action on this subject. Just submit every other federal agency, universities, universities, and members of your industry. The eighth edition, announced in late last year, lists only two innovative companies: Health and Human Services Secretary Ruth Sidel and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala. She is expected to submit the final report to Congress later this year or early next.

Neither platinum nor any other radioactive substance is proposed for listing. But want to alert you to a close call for your profession of pediatrics. Somewhat nominated: Door and Shoe Manufacture and Repair. Fortunately, the various committees voted against formally listing this industry. The final action recommended unanimously "to discontinue on this nomination because of lack of exposure assessment information."

But, there, how long will it be before some zealous terminologist in the working listing? How much additional cancer risk will you expose to workers in the industry every time you recommend new shoes to one of your patients? Will your patients wonder whether particles left behind during shoe manufacture or repair could increase their cancer risk?

Edulis, isn't it? Therefore, I propose listing this industry. I will make no further mention of cancer risk from shoe and door manufacture and repair. However, please quit talking about cancer-concerning platinum particles.

Survivors tell of mass killings

WASHINGTON - Four South Koreans still bearing the scars of old bullet wounds sat down with South Korean officials on Friday and urged belated justice nearly 50 years after they said U.S. troops came to their hamlet and killed hundreds of civilian refugees early in the Korean War.

Senior Pentagon officials reassured the South Koreans that they will vigorously pursue the investigation ordered by President Clinton as "a tribute to the shared sacrifices of the Korean and American people during the Korean War."

"I came here to tell the truth about No Gun Ri," Yang Haesook, 61, whose left eye was blown out at the village, said before the Pentagon meeting. "I want to tell how American soldiers came to our village and took so many children and women and killed almost all of them."

The four survivors of No Gun Ri, a South Korean hamlet and site of the 1950 episode, relayed their accounts to Charles L. Cragin, a deputy undersecretary of defense, Assistant Army Secretary Patrick T. Henry and Army Inspector General Michael Ackerman.

The Pentagon officials "reiterated the U.S. pledge to continue to work closely with the (South Korean) government," and assured the survivors that the Department of Defense will vigorously pursue and publish the facts of what happened at No Gun Ri, said a Pentagon statement.

Thousands missing from new phone directories

DENVER - The fedora-topped man with the magnifying glass in the logo for the new Denver area phone directory will have to look mighty hard to find people with the last name "Allen" and ones that start with "G."

Those names and thousands more are missing from the 1999-2000 edition of U.S. West's white pages for the area because of a computer glitch. A customer tipped off the company after about a quarter of the 1.4 million directories were delivered. Corrected listings will be delivered starting Monday.

Airlines cancel or scale back on New Year's flights

DENVER - Many airlines are canceling or scaling back flights on New Year's Eve due to a shortage of reservations and the possibility of Y2K glitches.

Officials at the Denver airport plan to have just one of the three concourses open that night, partly because it can be powered by a generator in case of a power failure and is connected to the terminal by a walkway. The other concourses are served only by underground trains.

"Part of our contingency plan for a worst-case scenario is a total loss of power, which we don't think is going to happen," airport spokesman Chuck Cannon said Thursday.

United, Delta, American and other carriers said they are cutting back their schedules, primarily because there is no demand.

Elias Eberwein, a spokesman for Denver-based Frontier Airlines, said travelers will already be where they want to be by the evening of Dec. 31.

Court acquits elderly woman who killed baby

SAN FRANCISCO - A 71-year-old woman who drove her car into a stroller and killed a baby boy hours after she failed a driving test has been acquitted of all charges.

Albertinah Mkhize was found innocent of misdemeanor vehicular manslaughter and two counts of reckless driving. Ms. Mkhize, who hit 10-month-old Yusuf Khouja in June, testified that the front brakes on her 1976 Chevrolet Nova had failed before she hit the boy's stroller in an intersection.

Prosecutors claimed the brakes worked.

Undercovers go looking for cabbies who discriminate

NEW YORK - Spurred by a complaint from actor Danny Glover, the city sent out scores of undercover officers and inspectors today in an attempt to root out taxi drivers who refuse to pick up blacks.

The undercover team, posing as passengers, will issue summonses, suspend licenses and in some cases seize the cab.

But Glover, who filed a complaint last week because five cabs failed to stop for him, is not happy with Mayor Rudolph Giuliani's crackdown, saying it only victimizes cabbidivers. "There should be some sort of constructive engagement between cabbidivers and the community, the people they pick up, their clients," Glover said Friday on ABC's "Good Morning America." He said he has met with various taxi groups and is interested in getting the community and drivers together.

Judge denies biological mother custody of child

BUENA VISTA, Va. - A judge rejected a woman's bid Friday for custody of her biological daughter, who was switched at birth with another child. But the judge did grant the woman the right to regularly visit the 4-year-old girl.

The ruling came after a day and a half of testimony on Paula Johnson's quest to gain custody of Rebecca Chitrum. Attorneys for the two couples raising the girl had questioned Johnson's character and her ability to provide a stable home environment.

Gesture to remember students ends bitterly

POST FALLS — A gesture to remember a Post Falls Middle School student who was killed by a drunk driver ended when a transportation supervisor tore white ribbons off school buses, angering the drivers.

A group of the drivers wanted to remember the second anniversary of the death of Nick Scherling, who was killed by a drunk driver on his way home on Nov. 10, 1997. They created a ribbon program to remember the student, and Tuesday tied 45 white ribbons to the backside of an exterior mirror on their buses.

"It was set up to be a real positive thing for everyone," one driver said Wednesday. "But that changed real fast."

The district's transportation supervisor, Rod Mitchell, reportedly showed up at the middle school when the drivers were loading students. Without saying a word, Mitchell reportedly began ripping the ribbons off.

"It was really bad. Nick's bus driver of three years started crying right there on the spot. Several other were crying too," said one bus driver.

Mitchell said the ribbons were obstructing the view of the "walk-over" mirrors and he had to remove them for the safety of students and drivers. "I didn't know if the ribbons were just some sort of driver thing or what," Mitchell said.

Lawmakers, advocates differ on plans for disabled

BOISE — Advocates for the disabled are lobbying lawmakers to drop plans to build a new residential complex at the Idaho State School and Hospital and instead give patients access to other state services.

The Consortium of Idahoans with Disabilities wants the state to significantly downsize the Idaho State School and Hospital and redirect its patients to other services.

The plan to build new residence halls is the wrong solution, Marilyn Sword, the executive director for the Council on Developmental Disabilities, said.

The consortium's proposal calls for the hospital to stop accepting new clients who are severely retarded or who have complex medical needs. Any hospital resident who is not a danger to the community would be moved to a group home.

Consortium members said it costs as much as $518 a day to care for a person at the state hospital while it costs up to $251 to care for patients in private group homes.

But Health and Welfare officials said their figures indicate different costs. Numbers from October indicate it costs $253 a day to treat a person at the state hospital, while private providers cost $193 a day last month.

Sheep grazing in mine area may have died from poison

SODA SPRINGS — Toxicology reports indicate about 60 sheep grazing on a reclaimed phosphate mining site may have died from selenium poisoning.

Selenium is found in phosphate tailings and can be pulled from the soil by plants, which are then eaten by livestock and wildlife. It also can seep into water sources.

The area north of town has a concentration of active and reclaimed phosphate mines. In December 1996, several horses grazing there had to be killed because of suspected selenium poisoning.

The 60 sheep may have died from eating selenium-laced forage or drinking contaminated water near the mouth of Woolly Valley.

"Selenium toxicosis is a possible and reasonable diagnosis" in the deaths of at least three sheep grazing there in September, Washington State University veterinarian Patricia Talcott said.

She tested tissue samples from three dead animals sent to her by Soda Springs veterinarian Wayne Cutler, who was called to the site on Sept. 9 by Agrium Inc. That Forest Service land is leased to Rhodia Inc. of Butte, Mont., which no longer mines there.

Almost Heaven founder Griz ties the knot again
LEWISTON — Patriot movement leader Bo Griz is a newlywed and plans to eventually move back to the Almost Heaven development he established near Kamiah in north-central Idaho.

"Judy and I have spent the last three months in a labor of love together," Griz told his followers in the September issue of his Center for Action newsletter. "Our patriot work has taken us across the length and breadth of our great land," Griz wrote. "We will ultimately end up at the Almost Heaven Covenant Community in Idaho."

Star party planned at the Herrett Center

TWIN FALLS - Some of the best planet viewing of the last few years will take place, weather permitting, in front of the Herrett Center on the CSI campus tonight.

The monthly star party will feature views of both Jupiter and Saturn, which are each making some of their closest swings by the Earth. This month's star party theme is "The Moon Meets Mars" because the moon and the Red Planet lie within five degrees of each other. And it's also possible that some of the early Leonid meteor shower will also be visible.

The Faulkner Planetarium staff will have their large telescopes available for public viewing as well as members of the Magic Valley Astronomical Society.

The event starts at 8:30 in front of the Herrett Center. Participants are encouraged to dress warmly and join the free viewing of the sky.

Dietch extends its preschool hours, service

DIETRICH - Extending preschool hours, buying a new school bus, a junior high athletic policy, and whether to continue involvement in a regional technical high school coalition were among the issues that came before the Dietrich School Board this week.

The district will run a preschool classes two hours longer beginning Monday when preschoolers will be dismissed at 3:05 p.m. with elementary students.

The board authorized the district to seek bids for a new 55-passenger bus for the 2000-2001 school year. Estimated cost is more than $60,000.

The board approved a junior high athletic policy that calls for emphasis in teaching basic skills, team play and sportsmanship. The policy also calls for appropriate participation of all players in all games.

The district is reviewing its participation in the Advanced Regional Technical Education, a regional technical education program for juniors and seniors. The district paid $1,000 for an annual ARTEC membership but says it has not yet seen any direct benefits. Dietrich joined the coalition about a year ago.

Blaine commissioners to gather Monday

HAILEY - Blaine County commissioners will meet at 8:45 a.m. Monday at the courthouse.

The agenda includes an auction for Blaine County surplus property and a public hearing regarding an application by the city of Hailey for a stream alteration permit to construct a pipeline across the Big Wood River. Commissioners will also hear a monthly claims report from County Clerk Marsha Rieman and a report on emergency medical services from Jerry Lewis of the Heim Foundation and Mike Williams of the Abaris Group.

Claim alleges jail neglect

Kimberly woman says her husband isn't getting adequate medical care

By Brian Haynes
Times-News writer

JEROME - A Kimberly woman has filed a tort claim against the Jerome County jail, saying her husband did not get necessary medical attention there.

The claim, which was filed Nov. 4, seeks unspecified monetary damages for what it says was medical mistreatment of Jeff Watson, who is serving jail time for violating his probation.

"I understand Jeff made a mistake, but that doesn't mean he is a mistake," Ronie Watson said. "That doesn't mean he should be treated like an animal."

Jerome County Sheriff Jim Weaver said he could not comment on the claim because it is pending, but he defended his jail's policies and actions when it comes to inmate health. "All the prisoners in the Jerome County jail are treated quickly and expediently when we're notified of a medical problem, including dental health," he said. "I'm very concerned about their well-being at all times."

The county has 90 days to respond to the claim. After that time a lawsuit can be filed in court.

The claim focuses on two incidents that happened after Jeff Watson was jailed in late August. The first was a broken tooth he suffered Oct. 15, a Friday.

Jeff Watson asked the jail for medical attention because the root was exposed, the claim says, but a jailer told him that wouldn't be possible until Monday or Tuesday of the next week.

Six days later, after several requests and an infection, Jeff Watson saw a dentist, the claim says.

Less than a week later, he suffered a 20-minute seizure in his cell. Afterward a jailer gave him six aspirin, the claim says.

Jeff Watson has been taking an anxiety medication that also controls seizures, but he hadn't received his medication in days, the claim says.

In less than two months behind bars, Jeff Watson's health degraded to the point he could barely walk, Ronie Watson said.

"I'm surprised I still have a husband," she said. "I'm afraid for his life... It's such a helpless feeling because there's nothing I can do to help him."

Jeff Watson was convicted of drunken driving in 1998, and he had almost completed his two-year probation when he was caught drinking alcohol by his probation officer. A judge ordered him to serve his jail sentence for the violation.

"He's an intelligent businessman who's made mistakes, and now he's being treated like a piece of trash, and I just can't take it anymore," said Ronie Watson, who is determined to follow through with a lawsuit.

"If I settle, this will continue... and somebody is going to end up dying," she said. "I won't settle."

Lamenting the loss of Drag City

By Ruth Stroud
Times-News writer

BURLEY - There's one less family outing in eastern Idaho.

Every other Saturday morning between March and October, Minidoka farmer Ronald Fassett would irrigate his wheat and sugar beets there skip town with his wife and daughters. Every day they'd head, 90 miles to Pocatello, to an asphalt track, an eighth of a mile long, for eight-second drills.

Ronald's wife Maria loved competing in a sport where strength didn't matter and she could hold her own against her male competitors. She said nothing compared to the rush of victory she felt when her 71 Javelin crossed the finish line and she spied the win light she knew was for her.

And while mom and dad raced, rarely failing to miss a Saturday, their daughters watched all that went on from the grandstands, Maria Fassett said.

But the racetrack, the grandstands, the playground and the picnic tables closed in October, after the lease with FMC was terminated. FMC, the chemical plant that owned the property on which the track was located, was forced to comply with recently enacted Environment Protection Agency regulations, according to Communications and Public Affairs Director Arlen Wittrock.

Wittrock said the EPA required all chemical companies to provide a buffer zone around

Answers in mysterious dog deaths might take a while

The Times-News

BURLEY - Local environmental officials are waiting for autopsy and toxicology reports about what could have killed three pet dogs along the banks of the Snake River last weekend.

Until they know what caused the deaths, officials caution against riverside activities east of Burley.

But it's unlikely any serious work on the river will be done before Monday, since the body of one of the three dogs and sediment samples were not sent to laboratories until Wednesday morning, said Bill Allred of the Division of Environmental Quality office in Twin Falls.

"They know that we want them really bad," he said.

Though Allred and the Cassia

County Emergency Management Coordinator Terry Bingham are urging people to be cautious along the river banks, Allred said there is no indication of any widespread contamination of the river or its banks.

"We have no reason to believe there was a change in the river water. We think it's all related to the sediments," said Allred.

No large scale fish-kills have been discovered, he said, nor any distress-found among other wildlife communities along the river.

The reports came Sunday of three dogs suffering very quick deaths after being in close contact with the river.

One died after nosing around in a hole left by its owner's four-wheeler. After the dog showed signs of distress, it was rushed to a veterinary clinic, where efforts to revive the failed. The incident occurred about four miles east of Burley.

Two more dogs died from similar symptoms about nine miles up the river from the first incident.

Because of the unusual quickness of the deaths and the large amount of territory involved, Bingham asked for assistance from several state agencies, in particular the DEQ and the Idaho Hazardous Materials Response Team.

Allred said he has received several calls from sportsmen questioning the quality of the water and whether fish and waterfowl taken in the area are safe to eat. He said he has no indication that the water or any wildlife has been affected.

TWIN FALLS - Southern Idaho irrigators can relax - for now.

But the issue is far from settled. District Judge Barry Wood Wednesday rejected Nez Perce tribal claims to the majority of the water in the Snake River - claims that could, if granted, affect most water users in southern Idaho.

The decision lifts a cloud over water users in southern Idaho, but the repa-effect will be known once appeals are settled. Deputy Attorney General Clive Strong said.

And the Nez Perce Tribe says it probably will appeal the decision.

"We certainly believe that Judge Wood's decision is in error, and the Nez Perce Tribe probably will appeal it to the Idaho Supreme Court," tribal executive Chairman Samuel N. Penney said in a prepared statement. "We cannot let this ruling go unchallenged."

Peter Monson, a trial attorney with the U.S. Department of Justice in Denver, said his office still was reviewing the case. Any decision to pursue an appeal would be made higher in the department, he said.

The federal government's case on behalf of the Nez Perce was based on other court rulings, including the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals, that treaty rights to take fish inferred a water right, Monson said.

But those rulings all dealt with on-reservation fishing rights, Strong said. The Nez Perce claims were based on fishing rights on land now outside the reservation.

The Nez Perce tribe made 1,113 claims to the majority of the water in the Snake River Basin as part of Snake River Basin Adjudication. The tribe sued in 1855 treaty granting fishing rights implied a federal reserved water right to sustain the fishing rights.

Wood rejected that argument. Wood held that an 1893 agreement legally reduced the Nez Perce reservation to just a fraction of the land that was originally inhabited - and ruled that the tribes were not entitled to water in the Snake.

Wood ruled that fishing rights reserved by the Nez Perce in 1855 and subsequent treaties did not include in-stream rights to water outside the reservation's boundaries in north-central Idaho.

But those fishing rights are affected if there is not enough water in the river for the fish, Penney said. That's like saying,

Idaho students stage anti-smoking sit-in at a packed Perkins restaurant

COEUR 'ALENE (AP) - About 25 Lake City High School students packed a Perkins restaurant's smoking section for a two-hour demonstration designed to discourage smoking. The teens represented the Citizens Against Tobacco youth coalition and Idaho Drug-Free Youth. Wearing matching "It's Just Not Cool, Don't Smoke" T-shirts, the students, out of school for Veterans Day, kept the smoking section filled to promote a smoke-free environment. "People have the right to be in a restaurant and not have to smell smoke from other people," student Liz Meyer said. One man smoking in a corner both left shortly after the teens arrived. Another woman smoked while having breakfast with her family. As soon as she left, non-smoking teens filled the booth. "We're scaring them off," 18-year-old Keith Kline said. Kline was one of several Lake City football players at the sit-in. He said the team has pledged to be drug-free and participates in voluntary drug testing. The Department of Health said about 27 percent of Idaho teens smoke, while nearly 20 percent of Idaho adults smoke. But that percentage is lower than the national average of 23.2 percent, according to a Centers for Disease Control and Prevention report in 1997.

"These kids are trying to help others not start," said Joanna Adams, tobacco prevention coordinator for the Panhandle Health District. "Peer pressure, as strong as it is to get kids to start smoking, can be used to get kids to stop." Adams helped organize the sit-in and got approval from the restaurant's management. But that did not stop some tension. Waitresses tried to keep one booth open for customers who wanted to smoke. But nonsmoking teens eventually filled all the booths. "We're a business," floor supervisor Corinna Hudson said. "We cater to the public. We have a large clientele that smokes."

Governor appoints science, tech advisor, lauds upgrade

BOISE (AP) - Gov. Dirk Kempthorne said he was laying out a program for Idaho's future economic development Friday by appointing a science and technology advisor and recognizing a program for upgrading school computers. Both moves, the governor said, will help ensure Idaho students are prepared for the workplace of the 21st century and that they will not have to leave the state to find those jobs.

Dirk Kempthorne

"Idaho's economic expansion over the past decade has been led by new technology industries," Kempthorne said. "Our challenge is to sustain this momentum and build a vibrant economy that continues to outpace the nation."

As the state's first science and technology advisor, the appointed Billy Shipp, laboratory director and deputy general manager of Bechtel BWXT Idaho, the U.S. Department of Energy contractor at the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory.

Shipp will lead a citizen advisory panel and help develop a state science and technology strategic plan aimed at tapping Idaho's research and business potential. As an unpaid volunteer, he also will advise Kempthorne, the Idaho Department of Commerce, the state Board of Education, the state colleges and universities and other government and private sector organizations on science and technology issues.

Appointment of a science and technology advisor is an exceptionally recognized leader in applied science and technology," Kempthorne said. "Idaho is fortunate to have a man of his talent and expertise willing to volunteer his time and expertise, and offer his insight into how Idaho can take full advantage of the research and technology base that exists in our state."

technology advisor was among the recommendations made to Kempthorne last January in a report from the Governor's Science, Technology and Board of Education. The appointment is the absence of such an adviser as a deficiency making Idaho ineligible for funding by the federal state grants for math and science education programs.

Shipp has a doctorate in radio physics from Purdue and a master's degree in the same discipline from the University of Arkansas.

Shipp is an exceptionally recognized leader in applied science and technology," Kempthorne said. "Idaho is fortunate to have a man of his talent and expertise willing to volunteer his time and expertise, and offer his insight into how Idaho can take full advantage of the research and technology base that exists in our state."

The report submitted to Kempthorne last winter showed that Idaho ranked 47th nationally in research and development spending with $514 million in 1995, the latest year for which data was available. That year Idaho's colleges and universities received only $20 million in federal funds for research and development programs. Only Maine, South Dakota and Wyoming got less.

Of the total research and development spending in Idaho, by far the most was by private industry. A division of one of the companies most responsible for that activity, Boise-based Micron Technology Inc., was recognized by Kempthorne on Friday for a grant program it established with the state Department of Education.

Under the "Education is Crucial" program, Micron's Critical Technology division provides upgrades to improve the performance of computer networks in Idaho classrooms. So far $80,000 worth of memory upgrades have been contributed and installed in 35 of Idaho's 113 school districts.

"Upgrading memory is the best way to increase the performance of the existing hardware, allowing teachers and students to efficiently utilize educational applications and the Internet," Critical Technology's general manager Scott Schoenherly said as he and Micron Chairman Steve Anderson and Micron's Idaho sales manager at Kona's Ross Education School - the latest recipient.

According to the Department of Education, 96 percent of Idaho schools have a program in place to upgrade at least one classroom, compared to the national average of 71 percent. Yet the performance of existing technology hardware is not being maximized due to insufficient memory.

Commissioner pleads no contest to DUI

PLEASANT GROVE, Utah (AP) - For months, Leavitt witheld the results of blood alcohol tests run on Utah County Commissioner David J. Leavitt, who pleaded no contest Friday to charges of driving under the influence.

But as soon as Gardner entered his plea, Utah County Attorney David Leavitt released the files - and said it was their contradictory nature that forced him to accept the plea.

Leavitt agreed to hold Gardner's plea in abeyance, meaning the charge could be dropped provided the commissioner successfully completes a nine-month probation period. During that time, Gardner may not break any other laws, cannot consume alcohol and must continue alcohol counseling unless his therapist recommends he stop. He was also ordered to pay a court fee of $300.

After Gardner signed the agreement, his left hand trembling slightly, Leavitt asked him to waive the privacy rights that kept his blood tests sealed since his arrest March 22.

Police say Gardner was driving drunk on a rural, south Utah County road when he veered into a field. The car and fire officials say sparks from the car started a brush fire, which the commissioner tried to stamp out himself.

The no contest plea means Gardner does not dispute the facts presented by prosecutors, but he does not necessarily admit guilt.

In fact, Gardner has never recalled his story that a hitchhiker he picked up earlier in the day gave him a drink of something that tasted like vodka, but which he initially told police that he had a little vodka with lunch. He also said he spotted the fire as he was driving and tried to put it out, using his car as a firebreak.

Either way, the crucial breath and blood tests all show Gardner's blood alcohol content between .063 and .099 - above the legal limit of .08. A urine test also revealed the presence of tetraol, a prescription drug that can increase impairment when mixed with alcohol.

"I think he was drunk," said Leavitt, who took the case from Utah County prosecutors to avoid conflict of interest. People who are intoxicated say innocuous things.

A breathalyzer test conducted soon after Gardner's arrest showed his level at .066. But breath tests are notoriously inaccurate, so officers wanted to do a more complete blood test.

They headed to Utah Valley Hospital, but a hospital lab once worked at that location but he was taken to Mountain View Hospital. A blood test taken more than an hour after the arrest showed a level of .099.

But alcohol levels would normally decrease, not increase, so police took a third test, which Leavitt said the most accurate. The test came back at .063, but fell outside a two-hour window, in which alcohol tests are considered accurate in court. It would have been admissible as evidence, but might not have carried much weight, Leavitt said.

"Had Mr. Gardner been arrested at the scene for suspicion of DUI, we would have given a breath test, we'd be seeing a very different result," Leavitt said.

Because the results, witness testimony, police reports, and accounts, police reports, and Gardner's own story are so conflicted, Leavitt said, an appeal could have been certain had the case gone to trial and Gardner convicted by Pleasant Grove Judge W. Brent Ballack.

"That would have forced a jury trial, and Leavitt said he feared the contradictory reports would have so clouded public opinion that jury selection would be impossible.

"I believe the public has an absolute right to know the blood test results," he said. "However, in balancing the public's right with the defendant's right to a fair trial, I decided the public would have to wait."

Neither Gardner nor defense attorney Jeff Espin were available to discuss the agreement. But Espin told The Salt Lake Tribune in a copyright notice before Friday's hearing that deals like Gardner's are typical.

Craig endorses Bush's presidential campaign

BOISE (AP) - Idaho's senior U.S. senator, Larry Craig, has endorsed Texas Gov. George W. Bush in the race for the Republican presidential nomination.

Craig, midway through his second term in the Senate after spending 10 years in the House, joined Gov. Dirk Kempthorne and congresswoman Michael Simpson at the Bush camp. Kempthorne is Bush's state chairman.

In a statement, Bush welcomed the support, calling Craig "an outstanding conservative leader who will reinforce the national

Engineer says Superfund status of Coeur d'Alene River justified

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) - The Environmental Protection Agency believes it can support an eventual decision, but Idaho authorities are adamant that Superfund status is not warranted for a 50-mile-long stretch of the Coeur d'Alene River.

It was even without state opposition to creating what would be the largest such site in the country, Superfund designation along the river from Harrison to Mullin is at least a year away.

"Evaluation of existing data shows mine releases qualify for listing," Mary Jane Neuman, EPA environmental engineer, said Wednesday at a multi-agency meeting on the issue.

Neuman said EPA and Idaho Division of Environmental Quality administrators are having weekly discussions on whether and how to proceed together. The next step is asking Gov. Dirk Kempthorne and the Coeur d'Alene Tribe for official positions on expanding Superfund status beyond the existing 21-square-mile Bunker Hill mine and smelter complex in Kellogg.

But the Kempthorne administration's stand already is clear. The state will not support a blanket Superfund listing, said Demon Darakjy, governor's liaison for the Coeur d'Alene Basin.

"Speaking for the governor and the state of Idaho, we unequivocally oppose any expansion or future listing," Darakjy said.

Environmental damage throughout the Coeur d'Alene Basin from a century of Silver Valley mining amounts to well over $1 billion, according to the Coeur d'Alene Tribe's natural resource damages claim.

EPA regional administrator Chuck Clarke in Seattle said a Superfund proposal may be imminent, but not the final listing.

Father, son balk at verdict

By Ruth Streeter Times-News writer

BURLEY - A jury verdict has resolved a four-year legal battle between a father and son.

Neither party is walking away from the verdict satisfied, though, and father and son both say the case really didn't put them against each other.

A jury concluded Friday that James Hamilton of Declo is not responsible for medical expenses for his father, Elaine Hamilton, also of Declo.

Elaine Hamilton was hurt in a 1995 accident after falling on the roof of a duplex that his son owned. The jury determined that James Hamilton was partially negligent, but so was Elaine Hamilton.

Because James Hamilton and Elaine Hamilton were found equally negligent, James Hamilton is not responsible for restoration. Or rather, his insurance company isn't responsible.

In a trial where all references to insurance were barred, based on the belief that jurors would be influenced if such knowledge came to light, an insurance settlement lay at the foundation of the case.

The accident was covered on James Hamilton's homeowner's policy, he said. But there was a question as to James Hamilton's negligence, or whether equipment was maintained to provide in order to receive damages, Elaine Hamilton had to prove his son was negligent.

Father then pays the claim, the company opted to appoint James Hamilton an attorney to defend him in court, a right the company reserves for its policyholders.

For legal purposes, someone had to be held accountable for the accident in order for the policy to pay off, said John Goodell, the attorney appointed by Farmers Home Mutual, the insurance company holding the liability insurance policy.

In other words, before the insurance company would pay, Elaine Hamilton's medical bills would have to prove his son was negligent, by not providing a water-walk environment.

Elaine Hamilton said he did not place blame on the jury for the decision it made, because it was a fair decision based on the facts they were given.

Elaine Hamilton was seeking restoration for more than $10,000 in medical bills, and restoration for future treatment of an injured wrist - an estimated $6,000 to $8,000 for implants, or $18,000 for fusion work.

Drag

their facilities, and the raceway unfortunately occupied that new off-limits area.

"We were devastated when we heard," Fassett said. "We were in a depression for a couple weeks."

An average Saturday night drew 175 cars and 500 spectators, said Ed Jones, Drag City Raceway president and owner. A list of competitors from the Minicassia area showed at least 75 locals have raced at least once on the strip. Butch Schack of Rupert can think of about 20 who raced regularly.

"I know there's a lot of people with a lot of cars sitting around, people who've put a lot of money into them," said Schell, who raced every other weekend with his wife and two sons.

It wasn't uncommon for whole families to race together, with divisions for kids as young as eight. It became the weekly escape from the hassles of life.

"We quit fishing and hunting and did this all summer," Richard Fassett said.

Drag racing to many racers is a tremendously family-oriented sport. Maria Fassett is married into an entire clan of local racers, including brother-in-law, Richard, 1999 Pro Division Champion and a 1995 champ in the Sportsman Division, not to mention Dean, Lyon, Kenny, Gary and Darin.

Ron Holton of Minidoka had been making the trip to Poecello for five years, and had raced with his son and grandchildren. And it's not only the thrill of acceleration and the power of concentration that he talks about. It's the hundreds of people who come together with a similar passion.

"It was just a lot of people who had one thing in common," Holton said.

It was the "bracket racing" that allowed all walks of life onto the racing scene. Bracket racing categorizes contestants by speed, and it secured places on the track for the entire gamut of racers, from proud corvette owners who poured thousands into their cars to kids in their pickups who could barely pay for their gas.

"You could bring your family car out," Jones said.

Jones saved the truck from its last roundup eight years ago when he took the reigns, after it had nearly run its 40-year course of racing. Wanting a family-oriented facility, Jones wanted to ensure the kids were as happy as their racing parents.

"We always felt as if the family was number one," he said.

The playground and the picnic tables weren't the only family-oriented features. The National Hot Rod Association permits family members onto the track, to help work on the cars alongside each other, a privilege some other circuits don't allow, Jones said.

A few years ago, Jones jumped started a Street Legal division, which brought drug-happy teens off the streets and into a safe, controlled environment. Jones mirrored the program on one in Pomona, Calif., where teenagers were busted for drag racing by the police were given complimentary tickets to the track in lieu of traffic tickets, if they promised to show up.

"That's a no-brainer," Jones said. "Ceez, anybody would jump at that."

The Drag City Raceway hopped up to 50 cars in the Street Legal division on Friday nights, Jones said. Friends could race friends and sometimes even the cops picked a challenge. "They'd say, 'I got a car, why don't you try and come out and beat me,'" Jones said. One officer brought 10 people out.

Now the nearest track is in Emmet, northwest of Boise. But in terms of weekend excursions, it's not so near.

"Our racing will really slow down," Maria Fassett said.

Jones said building a new track from scratch is not feasible for him. He upgraded the drag strip considerably after he took it over eight years ago. While never at a loss for racers, the region does not supply the spectator count that would justify the involvement of investors, the expense of land acquisition, and paying 75 cents per square foot for asphalt, Jones said.

"Financially, it's impossible," Jones said.

Rumors whisper that a drag strip may be coming to the Blackfoot area, but it's still just talk, Richard Fassett said. But racers are ever-hopeful.

"I sure wish they'd build one around here," Holton said. "I know there'd be a high demand for it."

Beloved educator could be honored in Malta

By Lorraine Casemer Times-News writer

MALTA - For more than three decades, E.S. Miller was always there for Rafi River High School.

And if plans for renaming the school's library go through, he always will be.

School officials are planning an election within the next two weeks that will name plans as the library after Miller, a longtime principal of Rafi River High School who died recently, said Principal Mary Alice Weiland at a recent Cassia County school board meeting. Faculty, students and parents of the school will be able to vote on the name of the library. No other names for the library are being considered.

"Many students would not have graduated without his encouragement and discipline," said Ralph Williams, a former Rafi River student. "He could reach out to all levels of students; he had a sincere way of caring for students."

Williams is part of a Rafi River alumni group that raised about $2,000 of seed money for the new library. The library was built when the Cassia County school district passed its $22 million bond issue in 1996. The group has been wanting to name the library after Miller for a number of years.

Fonneln Tracy, who graduated from Rafi River in 1944, was Miller's school secretary in her junior and senior years.

"All we decided to do was hear his story and see how we could honor him," Tracy said. "The didn't have to get after the way."

Whether it was the way Miller walked, the look on his face or the way he handled his keys, Tracy said she couldn't quite describe what it was about him that brought students in line.

"He had order," she said. "All he had to do was point his finger at you and you knew what to do."

But part of the reason he was respected by all was because of his respect for others.

"He had no favorites. He treated all alike," Tracy said. "He had the love and respect of every kid even if he had to get after them."

Students didn't avoid him because of his strict discipline.

"He could discipline those students and give their support with a heart to heart talk," he said.

Miller was honored at a Rafi River homecoming a few years ago, Tracy said. A tribune was read honoring Miller's accomplishments in the Malta area.

Miller taught algebra, physics, geometry and chemistry at the school from 1937 to 1962.

"He could really teach math," Tracy said.

Miller was the superintendent

Rafi River High School librarian, Corbie Barrow, before senior, Nicole Larson, Paul Taylor and Austin Udy find study materials in the school's library, which might soon be named after longtime educator E.S. Miller.

of Malta schools from 1947 to 1948 and superintendent of Albion schools from 1949 to 1951. From 1951 to 1970 he was the principal of Rafi River High School and from 1965 to 1970 he was the principal of Malta Elementary School as well.

"For him Miller the titles of teacher, superintendent, and principal were more than a job. He was always the first to school functions and the last to leave, staying to look up after every football or basketball game or other events, Williams said.

"For him school didn't end when the bell rang," Tracy said.

Appeal

"You have a right to breathe, but not to air," he said.

The Nez Perce claims to tribal fishing rights and salmon survival were challenged by southern Idaho irrigators, the state and Idaho Power Co.

Wood's decision, however, did not settle all the Nez Perce claims in the adjudication. And negotiations between the tribe and protesters will continue, Strong said. A gag order prevented him from commenting further on the negotiations.

Wood, who has been handling Snake River water rights adjudication matters since water judge Daniel Harbutt retired late last year, emphasized that his ruling applied only to off-reservation water rights and made no determination about the quantity of any on-reservation rights the Nez Perce may have.

He noted the lack of agreement on the exact reservation boundaries. The official Nez Perce Reservation, which had been halved to 7 million acres by the 1855 treaty, was slashed to less than 100,000 acres by the 1893 agreement, Wood wrote.

The Nez Perce Tribe disagrees with that assertion.

The tribe also disagrees with Wood's ruling that there was no material legal dispute and that the tribe has no off-reservation in-stream water rights.

"The extent of the tribe's water rights cannot be determined without a full review of the disputed facts," said Heidi Gudgoff, an attorney handling the adjudication for the Nez Perce Tribe.

Speaker: Military role will change

BOISE (AP) — Professor Greg Raymond sees cracks beginning to form in conventional military strategy and believes the protection of human rights may play a larger role in determining foreign policy in the next century.

"If the trends continue, leaders will think in terms of moral necessity, rather than crude strategic necessity," the director of the Honors College at Boise State University told the Frank Church Conference on Public Affairs.

The Thursday event featured scholars, authors and students who discussed intervention in the Balkan crisis.

Raymond said military strategy originated in events dating back 300 years. Many modern documents now recognize human rights and democracy as entitlements that must be defended when threatened.

"If this trend continues, he believes the decision to intervene may have widespread acceptance. Be undertaken by more than one country, protect the innocent and remove military forces when the mission is complete."

Earlier, William Stueber told the crowd of more than 400 the recent action in the Balkans was not undertaken for humanitarian reasons. The retired Army officer now works for the United States Institute of Peace, established by Congress.

The war in the former Yugoslavia was mostly about economic matters, he said, and the intervention in Kosovo was not timely. "There was no more predictable crisis in our lifetime," he said. Stueber believes intervention was about saving the credibility of NATO.

Idaho Guard units ready for duties

BOISE (AP) — The U.S. Department of Defense will rotate Idaho National Guard units as part of a NATO stabilization force in Bosnia, Operation Southern Watch in Southwest Asia and humanitarian relief activities in central America. Under a current plan, sections of the Idaho Army National Guard's 116th Cavalry Brigade will have its first ever mobilization and will deploy to Bosnia under the command and control of the Army's 101st Airborne Division. About 400 soldiers will deploy from April 2002 through October 2002.

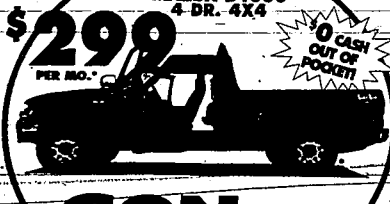

Aircraft and aircraft from an aviation battalion will be in El Salvador from April 14 to May 14, 2000, as part of a humanitarian relief mission. The 16 soldiers will help citizens of El Salvador rebuild schools, hospitals and other infrastructure destroyed by Hurricane Mitch.

And four soldiers will be in Southwest Asia from July 2000 through January 2001 to support the United Nations no fly zone in southern Iraq.

You don't have to tell this pedestrian at Seattle's Pike Place Market Friday that rains have soaked the Pacific Northwest the past few days. Several rivers in western Washington were expected to hit flood stage this weekend and some areas have been evacuated. The system is expected to fade as it moves east, bringing a chance of light showers to northern Idaho the next few days. Southern Idaho should stay dry and unseasonably mild.

Operations may have bilked Idaho growers

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Top quality potatoes may not have earned top prices in New York, possibly costing Idaho growers millions, federal investigators say.

Local industry officials said many growers already are talking legal restitution for their losses — going back 20 years.

FBI agents on Oct. 27 raided the Hunts Point fruit and vegetable market in New York City, the largest such terminal in the country and the main market for eastern Idaho potatoes.

Arrested on 65 counts of bribery and racketeering were one former and seven current U.S. Department of Agriculture inspectors and 13 wholesale produce company owners and employees.

FBI officials allege there was a scheme to bilk growers and shippers out of top-grade prices since 1980. "Operation Forbidden Fruit" discovered evidence federal inspectors were paid an average of $50 per load to help wholesalers pay producers less for their goods than they were worth.

For potatoes, that meant shipments inspected in Idaho and given the top grade — U.S. No. 1 — were inspected again at Hunts Point and downgraded. Buyers could renegotiate contracts or payments decreased, sometimes by tens of thousands of dollars per shipment.

The FBI said some inspectors may have earned as much as $100,000 per year in bribes alone. Idaho shippers suspected they were being cheated for years, said Richard Fletcher, Idaho Potato Growers and Shippers Association board chairman.

"It is sad, by far, all of the produce receivers in the Northeast, not all the wholesalers at Hunts Point, and one has been arrested, guilty yet. There does, however, seem to be evidence that this scam has impacted shippers for quite a few years," he said.

"The wholesalers got Grade A goods at Grade B prices. It's fair to assume they didn't pass the savings on to the consumer," FBI New York Assistant Director Lewis Schirio said.

Idaho Potato Commission director Mel Anderson said at least two of the 13 wholesale company owners arrested had official links with Idaho's industry.

CSI welcomes SWAC playoffs today

By Kevin Hall Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The second season arrives today for the College of Southern Idaho volleyball team, as the Golden Eagles host the Region 18 Northern Division district tournament.

For Southern Idaho, it's also the second hurdle the team must overcome in its quest for a seventh consecutive national title. But head coach Ben Stroud isn't looking past this weekend - for now, it's one match at a time. "You never want to look past anybody," he said. "You've gotta go play, hope nobody gets hurt first then you get to the next one. This time of year, it's just one game at a time, because if you make a mistake, you're done."

To keep Stroud's office wallpapered with championship hardware, Southern Idaho must get by two rival teams bent on vengeance. The thought of a let-down has kept the head coach awake nights.

"We've handled each of the teams (in the North) this year and that's kind of scary in itself," Stroud said. "I didn't know if this team was hungry, but (Tuesday) they came back and looked pretty good."

"Maybe now I can sleep."

Four teams vie in today's single-elimination playoffs beginning at 10 a.m., when No. 2 Ricks meets third-seeded North Idaho College. At 1 p.m., top-seeded CSI plays No. 4 Treasure Valley Community College - who the Golden Eagles defeated 15-7, 15-5 on Nov. 3 to close the scenic West Athletic Conference regular season with a 15-1 record. The winners of each first round match will then meet at 7 p.m. for the right to be one of two Region 18 representatives to attend this season's national championship tournament Nov. 22-24 in Overland Park, Kansas.

The region's other attendee will come from the SWAC's Southern Division tournament, Please see SWAC, Page B8

Class A-2 Girls' Basketball Preview

Picking an order of finish below that, however, is a dicey proposition.

"I think Filer and Buhl will still be tough, especially by tournament time," said Wendell coach Ryan Pope. "But I think the other four teams in the conference will all be better than last year, so it's pretty wide open."

That's good news for not just the Trojans, but also for Kimberly, Gooding and Wood River, all of whom figure to make marked improvements this year.

Each faces rebuilding projects, but all four should easily emerge much more formidable than they were at this time a year ago, when they combined to win just 22 games.

In Gooding, the hunt is on for a reliable inside presence; at Kimberly, the task entails picking up the new offense and defense of first-year coach Darl Wadsworth; in Wendell, the Trojans tackle some inexperience with only four seniors returning from last season; and up in Hailey, generating speed and finding depth off the bench will keep the Wolverines busy.

But even Buhl and Filer have work to do. The Wildcats play their first season this winter under new head coach Kim Krumm, while the Indians, despite the longtime presence of senior conference coach Joe Shepard, need to generate

McDowell stays in Funny Car hunt

POMONA, Calif. - After two full days of qualifying in a pool of 29 Nitro World Finals, Jarome pro Mitch McDowell has managed to dodge disaster and sit No. 13.

McDowell ran a 5.45-second, 276.00 mph standing quarter-mile Friday at the Los Angeles County Fairplex, no more than 10 minutes before a starting-line explosion on a top fuel dragster run by North Carolina's Doug Hubert sent shrapnel flying into the crowd and a number of people to hospitals by helicopter in nearby Los Angeles.

Local race fan Joe Skaug, attending the World Finals in support of McDowell, said McDowell had retired to his trailer a quarter-mile away, but still felt the blast inside. Skaug, though only 50 feet away when the blast occurred, escaped injury being directly behind the explosion, which he believed to have ignited in the car's supercharger.

"Something like that is extremely rare," said Skaug, who added that Hubert appeared "in shock" but not physically harmed afterward. "It was like a planned bomb going off."

McDowell faces two more qualifying rounds before tonight's main event, but still felt the blast inside. Skaug estimated that he must run a time close to 5.20 seconds to stay in the heat for Sunday.

Among other local racers, Jeff Devey of Twin Falls, driving a Chevy-powered roadster in the in the Super Gas category, is entered a money finish. He ran 1:40 mph at 9:31 seconds Friday, and will race again today.

Lewis plans cautious approach in rematch

The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS - Lennox Lewis still gets irritated by critics that he was too cautious when he fought Evander Holyfield to a controversial draw.

He wants the bout out of the judges' hands tonight.

"I mean everybody said I won the fight, but I should have knocked him out," said Lewis, a slight favorite to win the rematch. "That takes the science out of the sport. It's about hitting without being hit."

Despite 27 knockouts on his 34-1 record, the WBC heavyweight champion often is criticized for his caution. That was the charge against Lewis in the fifth round of the first fight in March when many thought he let the WBA-IBF champion off the hook.

"That bothers me," Lewis said, "because you're talking about a man (Holyfield) with two belts, a man who beat Mike Tyson twice, a man who beat me with Riddick Bowe and Michael Moorer. They had him hurt. I'm not going to take any chances."

Lewis was referring to Holyfield's decision over Bowe in the second of their three fights.

Eagles drain 16 three-pointers in win

By Kevin Hall Times-News writer

RENO, Nev. - In a game of firsts, the second half proved the difference.

Led by 16 three-point goals and a stingy second-half defense that allowed only 24 points, the College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team improved to 3-0 with a 105-65 whipping of American River College on Friday at the 14th annual Reno Shootout.

CSI guard Mike Hood paced the Golden Eagles with 20 points, while forward Kendall Minor went 6-for-6 behind the arc for 18 points.

The win puts Southern Idaho into a 5 p.m. championship bracket game today against Cuesta College, who beat College of the Redwoods 80-61 after CSI's game.

Zeck's team had more than 10 fouls at the 9:30 mark facing its first zone defense of the year. But the Golden Eagles displayed their own defense for the final 20 minutes.

"First half, I was very, very frustrated," he said. "It was one of those halves where I knew we were not ready to play. Luckily, we came out in the second half a whole different ball."

"We were playing a very aggressive man-to-man (defense), and getting a lot of hand-check calls. So we went to a zone to take away from the fouling, which it did."

Besides being ARC's first season game, the contest saw an impressive debut of Golden Eagle guard William "Smooth" Parker. The athletic Parker canned his first two field goals, made several steals and assists and finished with 10 points.

Raft River escapes Oakley, advances to title game

By Matt Peterson Times-News writer

MALTA - On paper, it wasn't supposed to be so close.

Playing at home against a 3-6 Oakley team it had already beaten twice this season, top-ranked Raft River looked to have little more than a tune-up on Friday before getting on to bigger and better things - namely, the A-4 11-man state championship game next weekend in Pocatello.

Upset-minded Oakley nearly foiled those plans.

Down 14-0 at the break, the Hornets rallied to score two second-half touchdowns, but failed to make good on a two-point conversion late in the game and fell to the Trojans, 14-13 in Malta.

Raft River (9-1) advances to play Mackee, who shut out Rimrock 50-0 Friday night, for the A-4 11-man state title game next Saturday at Holt Arena.

The game will be the rubber match between the two teams as Mackay handed the Trojans their only defeat of the season 43-21 on Sept. 3. Raft River avenged that loss with a 39-24 win over the Miners on Oct. 8.

Trailing 14-7, Oakley took the ball on its own 18-yard line with 3 minutes, 39 seconds remaining in the game. The Hornets proceeded to march 66 yards for 11 plays before Trevor Cranney hit Bryce Cranney in the back of the end zone for a 16-yard scoring pass. The touchdown, Bryce Cranney's second of the night, pulled the Hornets to within one, at 14-13, with 1:21 left in the game.

Dietrich burns Murtaugh in battle of Devils

Turnovers, steals give Blue Devils opening win

DIETRICH - Playing without key players and suffering from first-game jitters, the Dietrich Blue Devils launched a second-half scoring effort to outlast Murtaugh Red Devils and win their season-opener Friday night.

Local sports
It was a typical first game, said Dietrich coach Gene Shav. "Everything was exciting. Both teams made a lot of mistakes."

Outscoring Murtaugh 23-12 in the second half, the Blue Devils forced turnovers and got steals to break the game open.

Reagan Widmier from Murtaugh and Colleen VanTassel from Dietrich led the scoring with 16 points apiece.

Rashell Astle added 13 points. The Red Devils open the season 0-1, while the Blue Devils (1-0) play host to Raft River tonight.

his field goal unit onto the field to attempt the game-tying kick. Bryson and the Rebels split the uprights, but Raft River was flagged for roughing the kicker - apparently because a Trojan defender ran into the Oakley holder. Instead of taking the tie, the Hornets accepted the penalty and sent their offense back on the field.

"The kids wanted to go for it, so we went for it," Graham said. "We thought we had a better chance of getting into the (title game) that way than with a play-off."

Raft River coach Randy Spaeth credited his defensive line's surge for the stop, perhaps the Trojans' biggest of the season.

"You've got to expect that they'll go behind Burch in that situation and you've got to expect Cranney to be running," Spaeth said.

After spotting the Beavers a 7-0 lead in the game, Southern Idaho point guard Kenny Brunner - who finished with 19 points before fouling out with 1:05 in the game - got the Golden Eagles on the board with a 3-pointer.

Center Matt Siebrandt, who went to high school in Reno, followed up a Brunner layup with a 7-5 game. Then, after an ARC turnover, the athletic Siebrandt tipped in a Minor miss in the tie.

Down 31-29 with 9:50 left in the half, Hood put the Golden Eagles back on top to stay with the 3-point lead, but the Golden Eagles' non-nonsense guard then drained a second 3 on the next possession for the four-point bulge.

It would eventually get to 42-33 before the Beavers made a run of their own, drawing as close as 43-40. But Parker dished to Hood on the dribble-drive, and the Golden Eagles, which trailed by one, nailed his fourth bomb of the half at the buzzer to cap a 7-1 run and seal a 50-41 halftime advantage.

French at the start. Prada still leads the Louis Vuitton Cup regatta, having won 14 of 15 races for 26 points.

Young Australia picked up its second victory of the Cup on Saturday, and its second win over the Swiss, when its new boat beat Fast 2000 by 18 seconds in the clear.

Hansen 55, Camas County 47
FAIRFIELD - Although Camas County sophomore Sarah Vough led all scorers with 16 points, the Musters could not muster enough offense to outlast the Huskies, as they lost their season-opener Friday night.

"Hansen is longer than we are on the bench," said Camas County coach Matt McLain. "Even with their depth, we stuck with them. I was proud of the girls."

Hansen opens the season 1-0. The Musters (0-1) travel to Hagerman tonight.

Declo 51, Wood River 33
DECLO - The defensive efforts of Declo senior post Brandi Hornes led the hometown Hornets to a victory over Wood River in high school girls' basketball.

"Wood River was a good team and they ran the ball and push it up the court," said Declo coach Kim Johnson. "Declo came out and played tough defense. Everyone contributed to the game and played well together."

The Wolverines fall to 0-1. The Hornets (1-0) travel to Malad tonight.

Declo 14, and regaining possession on its own 46 after a failed inside kick by Oakley, Raft River looked to run out the clock, which dropped only 1:16 remaining in the game.

But on the second play, quarterback Nolan Harper pulled away from his center early and fumbled the ball. The Hornets recovered and took over on Raft River 48-yard line with 1:02 left in the game.

"It was going to be another handoff," Spaeth said. "I really don't know what happened on the exchange."

An offside penalty against the Trojans, two Trevor Cranney runs and a short Bryce Cranney reception moved Oakley to the Raft River 24-yard line with 11 seconds left. On the Hornets' last play, Raft-River blanketed the Oakley receivers and stopped a scrambling Trevor Cranney for a short gain as time expired.

The 5-11, 160-pound senior finished the game with an unofficial 212 yards and a touchdown on 7-of-21 passing. He also threw one interception.

Perhaps the biggest performance of the night, however, belonged to Raft River running back Austin Udy. The speedy rusher ran for an unofficial 247 yards on two touchdowns on 39 carries - a healthy 6.3 yards per carry average. Udy also caught one pass for 18 yards. He finished with 205 of Raft River's 278 total yards of offense.

"We wanted to establish Austin and the run," said Spaeth, whose star runner was held to fewer than 70 yards in the last game against Oakley. "And we wanted to let them know it wasn't them that stopped him in Game 2. We shut ourselves down."

Spaeth and the Trojans showed no time sending that message. Taking the opening kickoff, Raft River proceeded to hand the ball off to Udy on 15-of-16, first-quarter offensive plays. By halftime, he had already rushed for 168 yards and two touchdowns, on for 5 yards, the other for 28.

The opposing sideline, senior receiver Jeff Adams, turned in an equally exceptional performance. Catching five passes for 180 yards, Adams was Oakley's air attack Friday. In addition, Raft River defenders were flagged at least three times for pass interference infractions while trying to stay with the athletic Adams.

"We wanted to get the ball to Jeff tonight," Graham said. "No matter how many people they put out there, we wanted to get Jeff open. He had a great game."

In two prior meetings this season, Raft River had won both. The first, a 47-29 win at Oakley Sept. 24, the second, a 19-3 home win on Oct. 3. With the loss, Oakley finished its season with a 3-7 record.

Blackfoot 73, Jerome 57
BLACKFOOT - Tremendous shooting from beyond the arc was too much to handle for the Tigers, as Blackfoot put Jerome away 73-57.

Jumping out to a 42-27 lead at intermission, Blackfoot went on to hit 10 three-pointers over the course of the evening. Jerome recovered in the second half, but never got closer than 14.

"They made some big shots," said Jerome coach Michelle Skyles. "They shocked us in the first half and we could never recover."

Jerome (0-1) hosts Buhr on Tuesday.

Valley 21, Kimberly 40
KIMBERLY - After a huge opening two quarters for Valley, Kimberly couldn't fight back from a 24-13 first-half deficit in losing its season opener.

"We missed a lot of inside shots," said Kimberly assistant coach Rich Bishop. "We had some good looks, just didn't get them in."

"We made a good push toward the end but couldn't get past their defense."

Kimberly (0-1) hosts Shoshone next Thursday.

Idaho Falls 56, Minico 52
MINICO - Idaho Falls took advantage of the inexperienced Spartans, winning 56-52.

"Once we got some experience under our belt, we'll be just fine," said Minico assistant coach Katherine Hamilton. "Overall we played well. We have a young team."

Utah Jazz forward Karl Malone, right, goes up for a shot over Sacramento Kings center Vladas Divac during the first quarter at the Arco Arena in Sacramento Friday.

Kings tune out Jazz

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) - Chris Webber had 20 points and nine rebounds Friday night, leading the Wizards against Sacramento Kings to a 105-92 victory over Utah Jazz in a rematch of last season's first-round playoff meeting.

The Jazz, who won that exciting Series 3-2, couldn't keep up with the younger, faster Sacramento team in their first meeting this season.

The Kings went on a 15-3 run in the third quarter to take control of the game and put it away with a 15-4 spur in the fourth quarter to make it 95-78 with 4:51 remaining.

Karl Malone had 20 points and seven rebounds for the Jazz.

Bucks 107, Suns 92
MILWAUKEE - Glenn Robinson grabbed 12 rebounds and scored 12 of his 27 points in the third quarter for Milwaukee.

Robinson was the difference in a game featuring a matchup of two of the NBA's best backcourts. Milwaukee's Ray Allen and Sam Cassell won their duel with Jason Kidd and Penny Hardaway, with the Bucks' duo combining for 39 points and 19 assists compared to 36 points and seven assists from the Suns' guards.

Celtics 80, Knicks 74
BOSTON - Antoine Walker scored 22 points as Boston, helped by an injury to New York's Marcus Camby, held off a late rally.

Camby, watching from the bench with tendinitis in his left knee after leaving the game midway through the first quarter, saw his teammates cut a 46-33 halftime deficit to 77-74 on a 14-footer by Kurt Thomas with 1:59 remaining.

But that's as close as New York would get.

Paul Pierce had 19 points and Adrian Griffin grabbed 14 rebounds for the Celtics, who never trailed as they ended a two-game losing streak. The Knicks were led by Houston and Larry Johnson with 16 points each.

Hornets 96, Nets 92
CHARLOTTE, N.C. - Eddie Jones hit all 12 of his free throws and scored 24 points as Charlotte improved to 4-0 at home.

The Hornets didn't make a field goal in the last four-plus minutes but hit 10 of 12 foul shots in the final 2:35, including four by Jonny Van Dyke.

Heat 104, Wizards 95
WASHINGTON - Alonzo Mourning scored nine of his 25 points down the stretch as Miami pulled away for its fourth straight win.

Miami blew a 23-point, first-quarter lead then put the game away with a 15-4 fourth-quarter run.

Every starter scored in double figures for the Heat, who are 5-1 for the second time in franchise history.

Tracy Murray led a strong bench performance with 15 points for the Wizards, who have lost five straight after winning their season opener.

76ers 92, Bulls 86
PHILADELPHIA - Allen Iverson scored 35 points and led a 16-0 surge in the second half that sent Philadelphia over winless Chicago.

At 0-5, the Bulls are off to their worst start since they lost their first nine games in 1967-68. Down by 18 points in the fourth quarter, Chicago rallied within four in the final minute behind scoring short.

Iverson shot 9-for-24 from the field and 16-of-23 from the foul line. He scored 14 points in the third quarter, including nine during an 11-0 run that closed the period.

Hersey Hawkins, who played for the 76ers from 1989-1993, had a season-high 30 points.

Trail Blazers 93, Nuggets 78
DENVER - Rasheed Wallace had 19 points and 11 rebounds as the Portland Trail Blazers without a second-half charge for a 93-78 victory on Friday night.

Scottie Pippen added 10 points, eight assists and six rebounds for the Blazers, who continued to display their impressive depth. Detlef Schrempf had 15 points and Steve Smith finished with 16.

Portland scored 35 points, coming off only one of the season Tuesday, threatened to blow the game open after halftime, building a 65-41 lead. Only to see Denver storm back in the third quarter.

Antonio McDyess led Denver with 17 points.

New boat doesn't matter for Young America

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) - Young America had a successful return to the Hauraki Gulf on Saturday, winning its first race in a new boat in the America's Cup challenger sailing series.

The New York Yacht Club's entry, whose first boat was crippled after bending on a wave on Tuesday, was given late permission to race after rules governing the official checking of the boat's measurement were waived for the Young America's USA58, which was structurally reinforced after USA53's dramatic mishap, cruised to a comfortable victory over Defiant.

Despite skipper Ed Baird being careful to steer clear of the America True had a walkover against Abraxasandra, which withdrew after ripping a mainmast.

Nippon, sailing with a new mainmast after snapping its spar on Saturday, effectively set the race after being penalized for gybing too close to Stars and Stripes.

Skipper Peter Gilmour was not happy with the penalty, which required the boat to complete a circle, and said he would be talking to the umpires.

Nippon has been plagued with bad luck this round, losing key races due to gear failures despite appearing significantly quicker than in the first series of races.

Gilmour said spirits were still high in the Japan camp.

U.S. and New Zealand rival opponents and the spectator fleet an eye full of their two new boats, after sailing both through one of the courses. The New Zealanders had been given permission by race officials to cut across the race track as they headed further out to sea to train.

Stanford downs Iowa 72-58

NEW YORK (AP) — Freshman Casey Jacobsen scored 17 points and the Collins twins combined for 35 points and 22 rebounds...

Iowa's Marcelo Gomes, left, blocks a shot by Stanford's Jason Collins in the final game of the Coaches vs. Cancer Classic in New York Friday.

Dean Oliver and Jacobs each had 13 points for Iowa and Rob Griffin had 12.

Rematch

Both fighters appear in good shape for the bout at Thomas & Mack Center. Holyfield said he had stomach cramps before the first fight...

Because of Lewis' height and reach advantages, Holyfield's best chance of winning is to fight inside. Getting inside can be risky.

Asked if the champion from Britain was the hardest puncher he's faced, the 37-year-old Holyfield said, "I don't rate people on punching power because all the guys hit hard."

As for Holyfield's power, the 34-year-old Lewis said, "Evander doesn't knock anybody out with one punch. He knocks you out with 15 punches. I'm not afraid of one punch."

Those 15 punches, however, can come in a roaring stream because when Holyfield senses he has an opponent in trouble he is an excellent finisher.

Lewis has talked in circles about how he plans to fight the rematch, but he was probably on the mark when he said, "I'm not going to try to knock him out in the first, second or third rounds. I'm going to build up to it."

He also said, "But if a chance for an early knockout presents itself, I'll take it."

The last champion to hold all three belts was Bowe, who won them on points from Holyfield on Nov. 13, 1992.

Bowen had relinquished the WBC title earlier than he was, but only the IBF and WBA belts were on the line when Holyfield won a decision in the Fan Man fight on Nov. 6, 1993.

The fight is one of four title bouts on the TVKO pay-per-view show that begins at 7 p.m. MST. The main event is expected to start about 10 p.m.

In the first fight, Eugenia Williams of New Jersey (115-113 for Holyfield) was appointed by the IBF. Stanley Christodoulou of South Africa (116-113 for Lewis) was from the WBA, and Larry O'Connell of Britain (115-115) represented the WBC. Arthur B. Cantel Jr. of New York was the referee.

The other three bouts are for WBA titles. Lightweight champion Stefano Zuffo of Italy will defend against Gilbert Serrano of Venezuela, super lightweight champion Sharmba Mitchell of Takoma Park, Md., will fight in his first fight against cruiserweight champion Fabrice Tiozzo of France who will meet Ken Murphy of Chicago.

Boise's Keene retains world title for IBA cruiserweight

BOISE (AP) — Kenny Keene used a pitching combination of left jabs and right crosses Friday to build a lead in the middle rounds and held off Rob Calloway to retain his International Boxing Association world cruiserweight title.

Keene (47-3-0) will retire as champion after announcing earlier it would be his 52nd and last fight, claiming 26 knockouts. Calloway of St. Joseph, Mo., saw his record fall to 35-2-0, but he still retains the IBA continental title he held going into the fight.

Keene scored a 12-round unanimous decision at the Bank of America Centre. He finished ahead of Calloway on all of the judges' cards, 116-112, 115-113 and 115-113.

The middle rounds proved the difference for the Emmett boxer. He opened a severe cut on the side of Calloway's right eye in the second round with a round of crosses and jabs.

Calloway came back with strong 10th and 11th rounds and the fighters split the last one. Neither boxer was seriously bothered by the cuts.

No snow means no go at Park City

PARK CITY, Utah (AP) — For the first time in 14 years, warm weather forced World Cup ski races to be moved from Utah.

The season-opening event at Park City — men's and women's slalom and giant slalom — was shifted Friday to Colorado. The U.S. Ski Team has proposed running the women's races Nov. 19-21 at Copper Mountain, and approval by the International Skiing Federation could come Sunday or Monday.

Ski officials also hope to hold the men's events between Nov. 23-25 at Beaver Creek. Approval by the FIS is expected by Wednesday.

Men's downhill and super-G races already are planned at Beaver Creek Nov. 27-28, and the slalom and GS would be squeezed in as the schedule permits.

"As the weekend goes on, we'll have more information," said Tom Kelly, spokesman for the U.S. Ski and Snowboard Team.

Copper Mountain is one of the highest ski areas in North America. Like Utah, Colorado has received little snow but resorts at higher elevations can make and retain artificial snow. Copper Mountain's village level of 9,700 feet is almost as high as Park City's peak of 10,000.

Under sunny skies Friday, Park City's slalom and giant slalom runs were partially covered by patches of machine-made snow and the finish area was a muddy bog.

With the daytime temperature climbing into the 60s for several days and no snow anywhere in town, it was clear the races couldn't be held in Park City despite frantic efforts by the resort.

The event has been held in Park City since 1985. With the resort's state-of-the-art snowmaking machines, organizers were confident the races would go on if the temperature fell.

During the past month, crews worked to produce almost 5 feet of artificial snow. But with overnight temperatures rarely reaching ideal conditions in the teens, it was impossible to keep it on the runs.

Vern Greco, president and general manager at Park City Mountain Resort, said the opening World Cup races has developed a "strong reputation around the world for both reliability and quality. So while it's disappointing, it's frankly also a surprise."

Churchill Downs crash leaves two jockeys injured

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Jockeys Shane Sellers and Robby Albarado were injured and one horse was put to death after a wild spill at Churchill Downs on Friday.

Albarado fractured his skull but will not need surgery, the track said. He was admitted to Caritas Medical Center.

Sellers bruised his right arm. He was treated at the medical center and released.

City Edition, ridden by Sellers, broke a right foreleg while leading the maiden race, throwing Sellers to the ground. Sellers then appeared to be killed by oncoming Tawa Run, ridden by Calvin Borrell.

City Edition ran sideless and collapsed early Albarado's mount. Racecourse officials were told and apparently was stepped on by City Edition during the seven-furlong race for 2-year-old colts. Racecourse personnel took the horse without injury. City Edition, owned by Ockenbreit Farms, was put to death on the track.

which takes place today as well as Salt Lake Community College. Besides the host and top-seeded Bruins, No. 2 Great Valley State College, No. 3 Snow College and fourth-seeded Eastern Utah all have a chance for the ticket to Kansas.

Formerly a two-day regional conference tournament, the two-day format emerged when the national tournament was archipelago divided into two geographically distinct districts this past spring. Other alterations to the national tournament were made during the National Junior College Athletic Association's (NJCAA) annual meeting.

The change was made as the sponsoring body reformed the national tournament to include only Division II schools. Instead of 16 teams participating in pool play followed by a single-elimination round, this year's competition will feature a 16-team "false double-elimination" tournament. Once a team loses, it cannot become champion.

But Southern Idaho's attention is planted squarely on today's task.

"I think the regional is actually going to be a lot tougher than everyone thinks it's going to be," said setter Emily Foster. "North Idaho has some good blockers and blocks is always tough and they always want to play, and they always want to beat CSI."

"But I think right now, at this point of the season, everyone is really that wants to win and will come out prepared. Everybody is going to go out and go after everything — but so are the other teams."

One factor that may play into Idaho's tournament is that CSI outside hitter Brooke Jolley still has not recovered from a bad ankle sprain she suffered three weeks ago. Jolley, who missed both the Oct. 28-30 and Nov. 3 TWCC road trips, had been substituting in for setter Holly Foster in the front-row rotation.

Without Jolley's services, Stroud hinted that he may have to depend on one or two of his freshman reserves to fill the vacancy.

"If (Jolley) can play, that's a bonus. But for me, I'm just thinking that we're going to have to go without her," Stroud said. "And I'm trying to decide what I'm going to do — if I'm going to play Kara Hymas in her place or move Stephanie (Martin) into Brooke's place and play Kara Erickson in Stephanie's place."

"It's something I'm going to fiddle around with," Erickson is. "Blocking the ball real well right now and has come a long way. I'm not sure we need her to swing a whole lot for us, but blocking is huge, so we'll see."

Stroud said team practices this week have been intense case studies on how to prepare for the postseason, using drills and fine-tuning to simplify the game.

"We've been very good," he said. "(Monday) was good until we got to team stuff and I just felt we were trying to do too many things and weren't executing very well. So we've tried making things a little simpler. We were jumping well and we've been hitting the ball really hard and smart. I thought we looked as good as we've looked in at least a month — maybe longer."

Seeding for the district playoffs was determined by how each team finished in the regular season, with coin flips last Sunday sorting out the third and fourth seeds between the tied teams in each district.

NJC gained the third seed over TVCC in the North, while Snow edged CEU in the South.

"I don't think it makes any difference. It's Treasure Valley or North Idaho (in the first round)," Stroud said. "They're both pretty much even."

This year's national tournament site was shifted from the David O. McKay Events Center in Orem, Utah — its home for the last two years — to the Bailey Ann Okun Activity Center in Overland Park, Kansas.

Due to many teams across the country jumping from Division I to Division II, the berths for three geographic regions — Florida, Kansas, and the Rocky Mountain area — were divided to award those areas an opportunity to send two teams.

Region 18, which includes Colorado, Idaho, Oregon and Utah, was separated into North and South districts, but based on strength rather than size. Then, for seeding purposes at nationals, the NJCAA designated the South as district "A" and the North as "B."

After the weekend, all 16 schools that survived regional tournaments will be seeded for the national tournament.

Provided CSI escapes at worst, Stroud said he'll know where the Golden Eagles stand come Monday. Known factors that go into seeding the national competition include how a team finished this season, where it was ranked nationally, and how the region as a whole fared last season.

However, the postseason pans out — and if the Golden Eagles' season advances past this weekend — Stroud said his team would compete against whoever the selection committee decides.

"We'll just take them one at a time and prepare for every team that comes along," he said. "And if we play as good as we're capable of playing, we have a great chance of winning this thing again."

the defensive spark plug for the Indians this season - but that should be little trouble. As a sophomore, she averaged five rebounds per game in 1998-99 after making a mid-season jump to varsity. Though she's the only returning starter from last season's state A2 consolation champion, both Lively and Williamson offer added varsity experience. Along with finding a way to replace a half-dozen upperclassmen, Shepard's concerns include fortifying his squad's ability to put points on the board. The Indians need to develop in a hurry so they can score when open.

Couch Sheppard says: "These girls will play hard, tough defense. They seem to get along well together, and hopefully will come together as a team by the middle of the season."

Opener: At Jerome, Tuesday, 6:15 p.m.

Filer Wildcats

Coach: Kim Krumm, 1st year
Assistant: Odette Brant, Lori Barnhart

1998-99 record: 17-8
Key returners: G Mandl Turner (sr., 5-9), WIP Libbie Loughmiller (sr., 5-9)

Others to watch: G Adrienne Palmer (sr., 5-9), P Rachel Tracy (jr., 5-9), Amaris Hughes (sr., 5-6), G Leah Hollingshead (sr., 5-7), G Crystal Koch (jr., 5-5), P Jessie Lassen (jr., 5-10), P Kari Eisenhauer (jr., 5-9), P Tesh Denton (soph., 5-10)

Outlook: An experienced senior, point guard Turner has the speed and skill required to implement Krumm's game plan on offense: an uptempo attack that will allow inside threats Tracy, Lassen, Eisenhauer and Denton time to develop. Loughmiller is versatile enough to play down low while they do. Depth, athleticism and speed are clearly on the Wildcats' side. So are sound work ethic and ability to set and attain goals. Buhl's concerns over youth and inexperience are alive and well in Filer, too, but if the Wildcats' inside game keeps pace with their outside threat, a Top 3 conference finish in Krumm's rookie year is far from out of the question.

Couch Krumm says: "Our inside threats are young and inexperienced. But we look for them to catch on quickly, and become tough to defend."

Opener: Tuesday, at Snake River, 7:30 p.m.

Gooding Senators

Coach: Andrew Moretto, 2nd year
Assistant: Kelly Helsley, Bill Marvoto

1998-99 record: 4-16
Key returners: G/F Joanne Anderson (sr., 5-7), F Hilary Brown (sr., 5-9), G Tamara Thompson (sr., 5-5)

Others to watch: G Suzanne Bingham (sr., 5-4), F Bren Scheer (jr., 5-9), G Jill Miller (sr., 5-10), G Sadie Cheney (jr., 5-6), G Annie Nelson (jr., 5-11), F Jeni Garcia (jr., 5-10)

Outlook: Moretto hopes the lead role of guard/forward Anderson will ignite the Senators. Around her are several other upperclassmen in Brown, Thompson, Bingham and Miller, who should help lead the way. All are looking forward to an improved performance this year, with Moretto's leadership a little more familiar. Concerns, however, include finding a consistent inside identity to go with a wealth of quickness and experience.

Couch Moretto says: "We have lots of quickness and experience up top, but we lack a dominating inside player."
Opener: Tuesday, at Declo, 4:30 p.m.

Kimberly Bulldogs

Coach: Darla Wadsworth, 1st year
Assistant: Rich Bishop, Chris Glenn

1998-99 record: 5-15
Key returners: G Kali Keegan (sr., 5-4), P Jenry Dille (sr., 5-9), Brianna Harshman (sr., 6-0)

Others to watch: G D'Arcy Dangerfield (jr., 5-8), P Elaine Gansell (soph., 5-10), G Courtney Kirchner (sr., 5-6), G Kristina Maier (jr., 5-7), G Zan Mickelson (jr., 5-6), G Carly Schneider (jr., 5-5), P Jenry Vawter (jr., 5-7), G Amanda Feurer (jr., 5-2)

Outlook: The Bulldogs are excited about their opportunity to improve upon last season's mark. Under rookie coach Wadsworth, who has implemented all new offensive and defensive schemes, they look to have a great shot. Dille and Harshman are both experienced and smart on the court, while Keegan has the veteran experience required to run Wildcat's offensive game.

Couch Wadsworth says: "We have good fundamentals and great athleticism."
Opener: Friday night, live at Willow, 7:30-7:40

Wendell Trojans

Coach: Ryan Pope, 2nd year
Assistant: Alicia Larsen, Steve Goodbody

1998-99 record: 3-25
Key returners: P Tracy Brandtson (sr., 5-10), W Lauren Hryczek (soph., 5-9), G Sonya Yonrubek (sr., 5-3)

Others to watch: P Ken Sybesma (sr., 6-0), W Emma Howden (sr., 5-8), W Jennifer Collins (jr., 5-8), G Tiffany Demas (soph., 5-9), G Krista Eberhart (soph., 5-6), W Jamie Lopez (jr., 5-7), G Andrea Butler (jr., 5-6)

Outlook: With a year of Pope's tutelage in their own state games, the Trojans show success than they enjoyed in 1998-99. Brandtson was an all-conference selection last year averaging 10 points and eight rebounds a night, while Brandtson averaged nine points and eight boards. Yonrubek finished the season averaging 5.7 points and two steals per game. Key strengths this season are chemistry and depth - below-the-ordinary depth - in all-conference selections: a number of capable players are eager to help out. Most intriguing might be senior post Sybesma, who is now in the arena and will bring the six-foot frame to the Trojans' floor for the first time this season.

Couch Pope says: "We don't have a lot of experience, with only four players coming back from last year. But these are some girls who will learn quickly."
Opener: Thursday, at Glenn Valley, 4:30 p.m.

Wood River Wildcats

Coach: J.C. Bennett, 10th year
Assistant: Brent Carroll, Lisa Sedory

1998-99 record: 13-23

Key returners: Rebecca Turresal (sr., 5-10), Trudy Fuchs (sr., 5-5), Rebecca Smith (sr., 5-10)

Others to watch: Casey Monmouth (soph., 5-8), Laurel Williams (soph., 5-8), Katie Sanders (sr., 5-7), Jennie Woodall (soph., 5-6), Renee Henshaw (sr., 5-9)

Outlook: Experience will be an asset - in terms of players, but also in Wood River's coaching ranks. Turresal's fifth year as head coach is likely to be his third year coaching overall. Among his troops, it is Turresal who brings the highest remaining starting average to the hardwood this winter, having averaged eight points per game in 1998. She also added an average of 5.5 rebounds per night last year. Beyond that, however, there is work ahead. B. Monmouth sees some, she would be a force as a freshman, and the speed of Williams, who covers the basket ball season coming off a third-place state soccer finish this fall, will lead the team growth.

Couch Woodard says: "Speed and depth are concerns at times."
Opener: Friday, live at Declo, 5:30 p.m.

Russian troops enter Chechnya's second-largest city

GROZNY, Russia — Russian troops backed by tanks and artillery moved to occupy Chechnya's second-largest city Friday, fighting their hold on the breakaway region.

Prime Minister Vladimir Putin said the Russian flag was flying over Gudermes after infantry units began moving in. Tanks and artillery were posted on heights overlooking the eastern Chechnya city to ensure there was no resistance, Russian commanders in Chechnya said.

The loss of Gudermes would be a major setback for the Chechen government, which has been fighting to hold the city for several weeks.

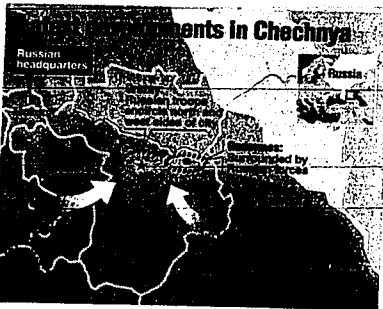

Russian forces continued to bomb and rocket towns across Chechnya, with the capital, Grozny, suffering heavy air and artillery strikes.

Russia's defense minister, meanwhile, accused the United States of plotting to weaken Russia and seize control of the North Caucasus — one of the harshest anti-American statements since the Soviet collapse. "U.S. national interests require that the military conflict in the North Caucasus, fanned from the outside, keeps constantly smoldering," Defense Minister Igor Sergeev said in a speech to top military officials.

Aid agency flight crashes near Pristina, 24 killed

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia — A World Food Program flight from Rome carrying 24 people crashed Friday in Kosovo, the head of the U.N. agency said. A diplomat said the plane shattered into hundreds of pieces when it went down, killing all aboard.

"We just learned that the flight has unfortunately crashed," said Catherine Bertini, the Rome-based agency's executive director, speaking in Rome.

Acid washes into ponds in cyclone-hit Indian state

BHUBANESWAR, India — Scores of people have suffered serious skin burns in eastern India, relief workers said Friday, raising fears that a killer cyclone also unleashed acid from a damaged fertilizer plant into ponds where villagers bathe.

The death toll from the cyclone jumped to 9,392 on Friday after 1,736 more bodies were discovered in Ersama, an official in nearby Jagatsinghpur said. With thousands of people washed out to sea and unclaimed bodies rotting or cremated in mass pyres, the number of victims was still expected to rise.

In the nation's biggest port, relief workers said acid leaking from Paradwip Phosphates Ltd.

Researcher SEBETH MELISNURY was causing burns and rashes. "Our field officers are reporting that people are suffering from terrible skin burns, and it's getting worse," Jagadnanda, a relief worker who uses only one name, said after organizing aid deliveries near the plant.

China sentences four Falun Gong members

BEIJING — Four members of the banned Falun Gong sect were convicted and sentenced Friday to prison terms of up to 12 years, the first of what is expected to be a series of prosecutions against the group the government calls an "evil cult."

U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan said Friday in Tokyo that he was concerned about the government's treatment of Falun Gong members and he would discuss the matter with Chinese leaders when he visits Beijing beginning Sunday.

The defendants were accused of organizing a gathering of 183 Falun Gong members on Aug. 8 in Hailin, two weeks after the government banned the sect and started a propaganda campaign against it.

Strong quake rocks Turkey; hundreds reported injured

ANKARA, Turkey — A strong earthquake rocked western Turkey Friday, collapsing buildings, setting off explosions and injuring hundreds of people, Turkey's private TV television reported.

The 6.5-magnitude quake, the second tremor in Turkey in as many days, was centered on the town of Duzce, some 115 miles east of Istanbul.

In Duzce, so many people were injured that casualties had to be treated in the garden of the hospital, NTV reported.

In nearby Bolu, the quake set off explosions in some buildings, triggering fires, the town's police chief, Ugur Gur, said. He said the road to Istanbul was severed by the quake, and called for urgent medical aid from the capital, Ankara.

The quake, which struck at 6:57 p.m., was followed by at least three aftershocks with magnitudes greater than 5, said Ahmet Mete Isikara, head of Istanbul's Kandilli Observatory.

Buildings in Istanbul and Ankara shook as though they were made of rubber.

On Thursday, a magnitude 5.7 aftershock killed one person and injured 171. That quake was centered in the area of western Turkey that is still recovering from an Aug. 17 earthquake that killed at least 17,000 people.

Today's tremor was in the region hit by the August quake but was not one of the hardest areas.

Raising money and eyebrows

For the past three months, I've had the portrait of the great reformer Martin Luther on my computer screen.

When I rest from writing, Luther's mug pops up on the screen. They call it wallpaper in computer language. He is not smiling and not frowning. He simply peers into the future—the look of a great reformer who senses the future will be hot.

Now that All Saints Day has passed, the Lutherans have celebrated the memory of the 500-year-old Reformation of the church. It is time to get new wallpaper.

It may also be time to get a new church. I hear people talking about their search for an authentic church, one that does not tell lies and never, ever falls victim to that age-old quest for money. Oh, yes, that is still a problem in some churches.

For instance, the local church fathers and mothers may want to build a new worship building, and they need 2 million bucks in the bank before they can proceed. They ask the faithful for donations. They tease and cajole the loyal believers, and the money begins to flow into the coffers.

But then the begging cycle continues, and the money absolutely stops. Flabbergasted religious fathers and mothers gather for a confab. Perhaps, they think, the most wealthy people should line most asked first, before the holy polloi were allowed to take over the fund drive.

Someone volunteers to contact the rich people, and the money raffles begin in earnest. It follows a rich field of grain, worth $100,000 in a good year. A woman says she will give a month of profits from her tire company, about $5,000. Another donates interest from his bank account, about $1,000 a month for a year. Suddenly sweet money comes from all sides, flowing like honey from a beehive.

But then, one woman, a fairly new member of the flock, calls the person and invites him for a cup of coffee and money talk. They chat like old friends until Mrs. Bankroll suggests a change in conversation. She asks what she would have to give to have her late husband's name on the outside of that new building. How much would it take to christen the building the "Harry Bankroll Memorial Chapel?"

The pastor mentions that $1 million could buy a brass plate with just those words engraved in the shiny finish. They shake hands, the fund drive is over and the building project begins.

Everyone is happy until reports begin to circulate that Mr. and Mrs. Bankroll earned their money as proprietors of a notorious beer joint in the state for many years. The church building project. Someone on the church council decides to make some phone calls and sort of confirms that the Bankrolls not only sold beer but may have dealt in drugs, illicit sex and illegal gambling. In people's minds, it takes very little time for suspicions to become the absolute truth.

The real truth, of course, is somewhat modified from the coarse garbage circulating in the rumor mill. The real truth is, Mr. and Mrs. Bankroll owned a quiet little roadside on the edge of town where they sold big steaks and pitchers of beer. Once a week they brought in a dance band and the place rocked for a few hours. But for the rest of the week, it was a rather quiet and dumpy roadhouse.

After they found out Mr. Bankroll had terminal cancer, they sold out to some suspicious strangers who had $5 million dollars and a limp hand. They sold the place for half town, the quiet roadhouse had become a notorious joint with strippers, girls sold under the table and a hot poker game in the back room. Mr. Bankroll died before the truth was known, and Mrs. Bankroll was left with a broken heart.

But no one on the building committee knows the whole truth, and the pastor is so embarrassed he's ready to leave the office. The congregation drives him out on a rail. But I ask, what would an authentic church do with the money? Is it tainted and, therefore, useless? Should it be given back or kept to build the sanctuary? Should the building project be abandoned? What would the ethical path be for the church?

Musical play based on the tale of Ruth

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — "A Song Through the Night" is a musical play based on the tale of Ruth from the Old Testament.

As story goes: Famine scoured the land of Judah during the ruling of Judges. Naomi, with her husband and two sons, left their homeland and traveled to Moab to seek a better life.

Naomi's husband died, and her sons married Moabite women named Ruth and Orpah. Then the sons died. Naomi, heartbroken and homesick, wanted to go home. The three women started for Bethlehem, but Orpah turned back. Ruth stayed with Naomi and settled with her in Bethlehem. Ruth an widowed and poor, gleaned fields after the harvest. Boaz, a wealthy landowner, fell in love with Ruth and married her. A son was born and grew up to become well the next Bible history.

The lyrics and music for "A Song Through the Night" were written by Steven Richards, a Seattle-area composer.

Richards was born in Edmonds, Wash., where he lives with wife and four children. He graduated from Seattle Pacific University with degrees in music and education. He plays in classical symphonies, musical theaters and church orchestras.

The inspiration for "A Song Through the Carol Barnesess with her daughter Sarah rehearse their characters, Naomi and Ruth, Wednesday evening for the musical "A Song Through the Night," which will be presented at the First Presbyterian Church on Nov. 19-21.

Night" came in 1989, when Richards was reading the story of Ruth. But it took Richards 10 years to complete the musical score for the play. During that time, he completed several hundred other musical arrangements.

The local cast for this musical includes Roger Vincent, of Dilettante fame, as Boaz; Carol Barnesess as Naomi and her daughter Sarah Barnesess as Ruth and Becky Brutt as Orpah.

Carson Wong, longtime choral director at the College of Southern Idaho, will direct a 22-voice chorus. Sharon Warner, longtime choral director at Jerome High School, will direct a 14-member symphony orchestra. Mary Mead, longtime music teacher and associate of Dilettantes and JUMP Company, will be the coordinator.

The play's director, Beverly Stirling, has a degree in drama and is a freelance playwright. Barbara Mix, organist at the Twin Falls Presbyterian Church and local piano and organ teacher, will be the solo accompanist.

Although the play will be presented in the Presbyterian Church, the effort to produce it is interdenominational — with Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Methodists, Baptists, Pentecostals, members of the LDS Church and others participating.

The Twin Falls showing will be the premiere staging of the play, as Richards church in Seattle was too small to house a production of this size. Barbara Mix brought the musical score to Mary Mead for consideration, and Mead fell in love with it. Richards helped with the auditions and the coaching, Mead said.

Play tells story of church coming full circle

Jerome Stake youth sing about Palmyra

By Kelly Bryant
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Sixty youth from the Jerome Stake of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will perform an original musical, "From Palmyra to Palmyra: The Saga of a City and a Church," next week.

Church member Bonnie Hamilton, with some help from others, wrote the script. Hamilton's husband, David, composed the music and arranged the score.

Hamilton said the idea for the musical was inspired by the building of the church's 100th temple in Palmyra.

"It is a story about the beginnings of the church and how the church has come full circle," she said.

The musical begins with the church's beginnings, when Joseph Smith received his vision in 1820. The musical follows the church's movement west to New York.

Hamilton said the production is a kaleidoscope of events depicting highlights of church history. She said it is an opportunity to help the youth and the community understand more about the growth of the church and what it means today.

Joe Atkins will portray a young Joseph Smith in Kirklind, Ohio, at a time when the missionary work of the church first began. Matt Stenschel will portray the older Smith, in Nauvoo, Ill., when members of the church celebrated the return of its missionaries.

Hamilton is the musical's director.

Flood of sympathy is uplifting, Texas pastor says

By Rebecca Rodriguez
Magpie Editor News Service

FORT WORTH, Texas - The hallway is draped in e-mail printouts, posters, banners and poetry from all over the world, each expressing a singular thought: You are loved. Peace has returned to this place. Last month, Larry Gene Ashbrook walked down the hall at Wedgwood Baptist Church in Fort Worth, shooting at church members before entering the sanctuary and firing at hundreds of young people gathered for a rally. He left seven dead, each shooting, and a building scarred by blood and bullets. Now the scars have been replaced with sympathy. "Every time I walk into church and I see the new banners and letters hanging on the walls, I'm encouraged," said Wedgwood's pastor, Al Meridith. The families of the victims are equally encouraged. "The only word we can come up with is 'overwhelmed,'" said David Griffin, whose 14-year-old daughter, Cassandra, was killed in the shooting. "We're at a loss as to how to show our gratitude." Griffin said he and his wife, Trilissa, learned last week that a circle of trees was planted in Israel in memory of the slain. And shortly after the shooting, grocery stores donated trays of prepared food and paper goods and the Tandy Corp. donated cellular phones to the victims' families. In the quiet hallways of Wedgwood, one senses the jarring juxtaposition of pain and compassion born of the tragedy. About 15 feet from where Kevin Galey, a 38-year-old church counselor, was wounded hangs a brightly colored mosaic of messages from students at Oakmont Elementary School, a few miles from the church. "I know this won't bring back (those) who died, but I'm sorry," read the words, scrawled on a bright yellow sheet of construction paper. "I hope they go to

Association north of Seattle is posted past where Sydney Browning was killed. And in front of the church, an unknown donor has arranged eight metal crosses bearing the names of the dead, including Ashbrook, who fatally shot himself after he ended his rampage. In addition to the overwhelming number of messages displayed at the church, more than $100,000 has been raised through memorial funds, and proceeds from several planned concerts and benefits are going directly to the victims' families. Near the entrance to the sanctuary, a bold orange poster proclaims, "We've Been There - Linton, Colo." It has been six months since a tragic shooting at Linton High School near Linton snuffed out the lives of 12 students and a teacher. The two student shooters also wounded 22 people and then turned the guns on themselves. And the love keeps pouring in, said

'Rick Kaufman, director of communications for the Jefferson County Public School District, which includes Columbine High. "We still get letters, cards, e-mails, flowers, teddy bears," Kaufman said. "And millions of dollars have been distributed" through individual and corporate funds set up after the shooting to help victims and their families. The compassion has helped the community feel loved, Kaufman said, but there are times when the media revisit the nightmare at Columbine, forcing people to relive a day that changed many lives. Earlier this month, CBS TV aired a grainy clip of video taken by a surveillance camera in the Columbine High cafeteria. It shows a gunman kneeling in a stiff pose and firing across tables and chairs. No bodies are shown and no deaths occurred in the cafeteria. "I can't imagine what it's doing to some of the families," Kaufman said.

Don't block the flow of the Holy Spirit

Recently, a thought double-crossed my mind, "a couple of drinks would be nice!" A few blocks down the road, I saw a man walking with a Bible in his hand. We went and got into a Bible study-prayer meeting. I didn't know anyone there by name, "but thanks be to God, who gives us victory through our Lord Jesus Christ" (1 Corinthians 15:57). During the meeting, a leading sinners was discussed. I asked, "Can He help?" They said, "Yes! While breaking a nut loose, the p-r-p broke in my hand. Inside for a long time was a "jucky" butter knife obstructing the flow of water. Similarly, do we have time to remove things that block the flow of the Holy Spirit through our lives? The drain got repaired decently, in order and in a timely manner. Therefore, my beloved brethren, be steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, knowing that your toil is not in vain in the Lord" (1 Corinthians 15:58). Thank you, Lord, for Glen, Papa Jack, Ruby, Pablo and your body of believers all over the world. Amen!

these days), I submit this letter in response to the "Be Thou Humble" digression printed on Nov. 14. What Mr. Emmes fails to remember is that "America, the Beautiful" was founded by a Christian, a Puritan, a New Englander, and a New Englander, who raised beef to eat not worship, and that the laws constituting to the founding of the "land of spacious skies under many waves" were based on Christian principles, not Modern law, thank God! Mr. Emmes also doesn't realize the reason he has been living such a good life in view of the "purple mountain's majesty above the fruited plain" is because the God of the living whom he rejects has "shed his grace" on this blessed land and "crowned thy good with brotherhood, from sea to shining sea." So if anyone is tired of looking in the rearview and protection that God has afforded this country of choice, I suggest they get off to China, Pakistan, India, Iraq, or wherever and let the rest enjoy the fruits of their labor. Blessings to all who are faithful and see where most of the immigrants are coming from that are flocking into this country. CHRISTOPHER A. JUBIAN, SSJON Twin Falls

Some Catholics aren't laughing at 'Dogma' Mother Mary comes to prime time on NBC

By Jennifer Weiner
Knight Ridder News Service

NEW YORK — Kevin Smith is peddled on the hotel-room floor, chain-smoking Marlboro Lights and looking as if he doesn't know his mind.
"I tried to make a devout flick, 'you know?' he says playing off his new film, which follows the well-known 'Clerks'; the less-than-acclaimed 'Mallrats' and the bawdy, boy-meets-lesbian 'Chasing Amy.' 'I never thought it was controversial. I just thought it was two hours of preachy Jesus (stuff). Christ knew the value of telling a good story to get his points across. This film is not blasphemous. We treat God very devoutly. I believe in God. I don't want to offend Him or not."

Who's for or not? Smith's latest movie, "Dogma," has angered the Almighty is not for mere mortals to know. But the R-rated film — a spry, snappy, overuffed, frequent-funny and often profane two hours that Smith calls a comic fantasia — has mightily angered some Catholics, who have been so worked up since "Priest" in 1995.

"Dogma," starring Matt Damon and Ben Affleck as a pair of ultraviolet fallen angels; Linda Fiorentino as a lapsed Catholic opening toward faith; and Almis Morisette as God, is scheduled to open nationwide this week. However, it has been the subject of controversy for months. The New York City-based Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights fired the opening salvo in the "Dogma" wars in the spring. "Dogma" represents the worst in Hollywood," wrote president William Donohue when an April New York Times op-ed piece. The 350,000-member organization rallied its faithful to write letters to production company Miramax and its owner, Disney, urging them to dump movie titles that saw as nothing less than blasphemous.

This wasn't the first time the league, which has no official connection to the Roman Catholic Church, had tangled with Disney. That history goes back to another Miramax release — the 1991 anti-manifesto "Priest," in which the title character was gay. Donohue got the Knights of Columbus to sell their Disney stock, and called for a boycott of all things Disney. From there parties to children's television. This time around, Disney didn't let things get that far.

Just before the movie's first screening at the Cannes Film Festival, Disney chairman Michael Eisner declared that the film would be "inappropriate" for the label, without giving a reason. Disney's chief marketing officer, Harvey Weinstein came up with their own cash, a rumored $10 million to $12 million) to buy "Dogma" back from Disney to

You've got your armed angels leading a bloody massacre in front of a New Jersey church. You've got your cardinal, played by George Carlin, offering a grinning, thumbs-up Christ figure as a more palatable alternative to the dreary crucifix. There's Chris Rock as a trash-talking black apostle who complains that racism kept him out of the Bible and that the Son of God still retelling of the Virgin birth, charging that it "distorts and insults the spiritual significance of Christ himself."

"The Life of Brian" (1979) — "Moony Python's comedy about a man mistaken for the messiah was assailed by religious groups of every stripe. That didn't stop Swedish marketers from selling Brian as 'The film that is so funny that it was banned in Norway!'"
"The Devils" (1971) — Director Ken Russell's adaptation of an Aldous Huxley novel understandably pushed a few buttons with such unsettling scenes as nuns coveting a "King of Kings" (1965) and "The Greatest Story Ever Told" (1965). Some Catholics were incensed by the filmmakers' decision to show the face of Jesus. Earlier films such as "Ben-Hur" (1959) had circumvented the problem by presenting only close-ups of Christ's hands or the hem of his robe.

This isn't the first time the church has been at odds with a movie

Knight Ridder News Service

The Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights has targeted the new Kevin Smith comedy "Dogma" since late '98, but critics of the movie industry have long lobbed accusations of anti-Catholicism. Among the films that have sparked such outrage:

- "Stigmata" (1999) This conspiracy drama about the Vatican's attempt to hide a secret Gospel features a cardinal who attempts to kill characters played by Patricia Arquette. Although the Catholic League slammed "Stigmata," the movie was No. 1 at the box office the week it opened in September.
- "The Benchwarmers" (1997) The Irish film by Neil Jordan caused a ruckus over its bashing pop singer Sinead O'Connor, who appears in videos to a profoundly troubled boy, was cast as the Virgin Mary.
- "Priest" (1994) "Viciously anti-Catholic" by New York Cardinal John

O'Connor, this independent British film is about a priest, whose homosexual relationship sparks an internal conflict over his love of God. When Stan Jolley Camera 3 screened the Antonia Byrd movie, management declined offers from the film's distributor, Miramax, for security guards.

- "The Pope Must Die!" (1991) Citing difficulties over placing ads in American newspapers, Miramax changed the title of this Robbie Coltrane farce to "The Pope Must Die."
- "The Exorcist" (1973) Adaptation of the Nikos Kazantzakis novel had critics ranging from Patrick Buchanan to Mother Teresa. She was reported as saying through a spokesman that if Catholics intensify their prayers and implore God through the rosary, "Our Blessed Mother (Mary) will see that this film is removed from your land."
- "Hell Movie" (1985) Pope John Paul II condemned the Jean-Luc Godard modern

retelling of the Virgin birth, charging that it "distorts and insults the spiritual significance of Christ himself."

Some of the TV padding is intended to tame Mary, portrayed by Patricia Arquette, into a feminine figure. In the Middle Ages, says Mrs. Shriver. However, she said, "I think she's a role model for young people."
Early in the program, the feminist Mary boldly strides forth to plead with soldiers and save the life of an anti-Roman warlord. It's a juxtaposition of imagination to convey a 20th-century concept of what she might have been like.
More problematic are instances where Albert Ruff's script borrows from the Bible. Ruff says Jesus and plunks it into the life of Mary.
In the Gospel according to Albert, Mary intervenes to stop a grown woman to plead for committing adultery. This, of course, is taken from the passage in John 8:3-11 where Jesus confronts a sordid to save the life of an adulterous woman. "I've a handwritten reminder of the plagiarist Mary herself faced as an accused mother through an act of God."
Another oddity is the scene where Mary tells the young Jesus a bedtime story. Guess what? It's the

NEW YORK — Never underestimated the profit potential in the New Testament, Network TV doesn't. In search of good sweeps ratings, NBC is streaming its made-for-TV movie "Mary: Mother of Jesus" on Sunday night, rather than waiting for seasonal timing at Christmas.

CBS is likewise holding its "Jesus" mini-series, now showing in Morocco and Mexico, for the May sweeps period instead of Easter. ABC, however, plans Eason scheduling for "The Miracle Man," an unconventional retelling of Jesus' life through "claymation," and compromised special effects.

Rarely if ever have all three major networks planned New Testament epics in the same season. No doubt they are responding to the success of angel stories and religious books — and, beyond that, to the vague spiritual search that seems to engage so many Americans.
Net judging from NBC's Mary, commercialism can be a mixed blessing in terms of the substance of the Bible. Filmed in Hungary, the Jesus film features Kennedy Shriver and son Bobby, the real central show largely follows the scriptural story line. But there are curious omissions.

story of the Good Samaritan, one of the most beloved of the parables that Scripture attributes to Jesus (Luke 10:25-37). Obviously Mary's teaching would have shaped the mind and heart of the young son, but why should Mary seal Jesus' best friend?
The tendency to magnify Mary continues when John the Baptist baptizes Jesus (Matthew 3:16). Mary is baptised right afterwards and her example implies Mary Magdalene to repent and follow God. When Jesus is crucified, the grieving Mary seems to take command.

After Jesus is risen from the grave, the parable to give the apostles the message, order, commission of Jesus' "Great Commission" to go into the world with the message.
In the whole sequence, St. Peter is ignored, even though the Bible portrays him as the leading apostle and Catholics hold him to be the first pope.

Speaking of Catholicism, there's one dry reference in the church's distinct teachings on Miriam. Mary's mother Anna (who is named in a later apocryphal book) but not the Bible family milk her daughter she's daughterless. The dogma of the Immaculate Conception, sanctified by Pope Pius IX in 1854, holds that Mary was born without the stain of original sin and lived a sinless life, just like Jesus. Protestants reject the idea.

Methodist Church tries minister for second time over gay marriage

By Kevin O'Hanlon
The Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — As the Rev. Jimmy Creech prepares to receive a second time by the United Methodist Church for performing a gay marriage, many feel the future of the nation's second-largest denomination hangs in the balance.
"It is not about me. It's about institutional bigotry and the church using its institutional power to enforce discrimination and persecution of gay and lesbian people," Creech said. "The real act of defiance is against gay and lesbian people."

A jury of 13 ministers will decide Creech's fate after a two-day trial set to begin Wednesday in Grand Island.
Creech and his supporters say that if the church does not become more open to gays and lesbians, many of its 25 million members could leave, possibly forming a new denomination.
"It's almost inescapable that such a case is going to come," said Rev. Gregory Dell, a Methodist minister in Illinois who is serving a suspension for performing a same-sex ceremony.
Creech first drew the ire of church officials in 1997 when he performed a union ceremony for a lesbian couple in his Omaha congregation.
In a case that drew international attention and pleg the United Methodist into a debate over church doctrine, Creech was tried and acquitted by church jury on charges of disobeying church rules.
Creech was not reappointed to his pulp and is on a voluntary leave of absence from his post in North Carolina, but he still is a member of the Nebraska clergy.
Creech's second trial stems from a union ceremony performed for two gay men in Chapel Hill, N.C., earlier this year.
But there is a difference this time.
At the time of Creech's first trial in Kearney, the church's ban on performing same-sex commitment ceremonies was listed in the denomination's Social Principles, which are printed in the Book of Discipline. There was debate over whether the Social Principles were part of church law, like the Book of Discipline.
The church's Judicial Council, which interprets the Book of Discipline much like the U.S.

Supreme Court interprets the Constitution, has since ruled that the Social Principles carry the weight of law.
Other denominations have also struggled with the issue of homosexual practice. Earlier this year, for example, leaders of the 2.6-million-member Presbyterian Church rejected a measure that would have led to the ordination of non-celibate gays and lesbians.
If convicted, Creech faces a wide range of possible punishments, including dismissal from the United Methodist clergy.

Books outlining alternative spiritual paths move into mainstream stores

By John Dolan
Knight Ridder News Service

As the millennium pulls to a close, a look at pop culture seems to beg the question: Is God trying to tell us something? It's not just church marquee but best-selling lists, films, TV series that proclaim man's nature.
"Movies like 'What Dreams May Come,' the 'angels' phenomenon and nonfiction promote spirituality as vigorously as Billy Graham. Pope John Paul II (who also turned-out-a GD-88-888-BZ's-Bono this year). The current New York Times nonfiction bestseller, "Serenity Now," is a series of "Conversations" "Embraced by the Light" and "The Celestine Prophecy," spent months atop book lists. And they command prime space in the big business superstore, along with contemporary works by Deepak Chopra, Marianne Williamson and Dr. Brian Weiss, and classic texts on Edgar Cayce and others.

White such offerings fill whole aisles now in mainstream shops, just 10 years ago they would have been the province of New Age bookstores.
The now-familiar concepts of spiritually oriented movies, meanwhile, have roots in esoteric movements in the early decades of the century. The accounts of disembodied, floating spirits in the films "The Sixth Sense" or "Ghost" follow principles enunciated by theosophists at the turn of the century. Cayce in the '30s and '40s, and Arthur Ford in the '60s.
The idea of the afterlife as a place where the soul creates its own reality, as exhibited by the Robin Williams character in "What Dreams May Come," is a strange notion to the traditional Christian or Jew. But it is as familiar as elementary school math to whole rafters of New Age writers, teachers and readers.
Reincarnation is a given for these believers. So is it for Buddhists, Hindus, some early Christians and, apparently, most of Hollywood.

"Seat of the Soul," is written by Gary Zukav, a Harvard grad and American Book Award winner in science. His "The Dancing Wu Li Masters" demystified the new physics.

Zukav, a Harvard grad and American Book Award winner in science. His "The Dancing Wu Li Masters" demystified the new physics.

Is this the merging of science and spirituality predicted for decades? In this century's traditional spiritual thinking, physics, diet, alternative medicine all have a place. As do social science and the interplay of nations.
Take the "Star Wars" and "Star Trek" series. With their world federations, "forces" and other allusions, there is a direct intersection with the New Age vision.

CHICAGO (AP) - Bob Hope and Jack Benny played the police. So did Mike West, Jimmy Durante and Sophie Tucker, in an era when vaudeville was the lifeblood of a thriving theater district in downtown Chicago.

Seventy years later, that theater is back as the Cadillac Palace - the latest chapter in the city's push to recreate past glory by restoring once-glamorous show places and building new ones.

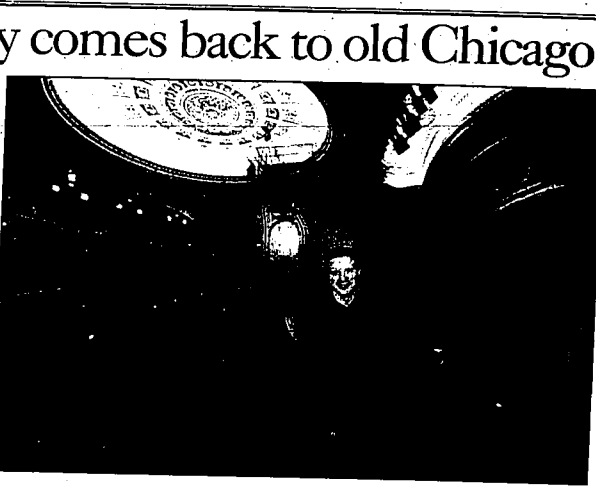

"This is an opportunity to evoke that historical love of the theater that Chicago's always had," said Marj Halperin, executive director of the League of Chicago Theaters. "We would love to see theater be so much of the Chicago experience that you wouldn't come to the city without seeing a show."

The Cadillac Palace reopened Friday with the Elton John-Tim Rice revamp of "Aida."

As the western arm of the district along Randolph Street, the Cadillac is the third downtown theater to reopen after costly renovations in the mid-'80s and the Oriental reopened last year as the Ford Center for the Performing Arts.

The Palace was modeled after the French palaces of Fontainebleau and Versailles. In restoring it, architect Daniel P. Coffey sought to retain the theater's former grand while meeting the demands of Broadway productions.

Seating was slightly reduced

for comfort, to 2,370, and its stage enlarged. Its interior remains decorated with gold leaf and marble.

Built in 1926, the Palace was once part of "one of the liveliest theater districts in the country."

"There was a time when there were dozens of theaters in and around the north Loop," said Becky Carroll, a spokeswoman for the city's Planning Department.

"To play the Palace in Chicago was to play the big time," added Richard Sklenar, head of the Theater Historical Society of America.

But the district was hit hard by the Depression and never recovered. Many of the once-great theaters were demolished.

Chameleons aren't shy about their tongues

A chameleon can stick out its tongue twice its body length, fairly swiftly. You can see it happen. A salamander can stick out its tongue only half its body length, even more swiftly. You probably can't see it happen. Fast vs. far. A tortoise and hare thing. Same old contest.

Q. How do you explain the fact that almost all the people in the Dutch Province of Friesland have very short names?

A. Centuries ago authorities there taxed in proportion to the lengths of payers' names. Long names, heavy tax. Short names, light tax. Almost every syllable trimmed down to single yivable names.
