Fee enforcement sparks debate

Feds have declined to pursue 15 out-of-state violators - and that's unfair to Idahoans, senator says

By N.S. Nokkentved Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Most of the people who have been cited by the U.S. Forest Service for failing to buy a parking pass for certain parts of the Sawtooth National Forest either bought a pass or paid the fine. But 15 people who live outside of Idaho were cited, and the U.S. Department of Justice decided not to prosecute them over what officials say is essentially a $50 parking ticket.

Larry Craig, R-Idaho, will take that

That takes the teeth out of the pass, and is unfair to Idahoans, said Mike Tracy, a spokesman for U.S. Sen. Larry Craig. And that is one more problem with the pilot recreation fee demonstration project. Craig, R-Idaho, will take that and other problems into account when he makes his decision on whether to continue the program, Tracy said. The issue arose when the federal government declined to press a case against an Oregon woman who has steadfastly refused to pay the $5 fee to park her car while she hiked in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area. Assistant U.S. Attorney Terry Derden said there was doubt the government could collect the $50 fine the Forest Service assessed against Majorie Hoye of Bend, Ore., after she refused to buy the pass. "Considering the limited number of resources in the federal courts," Derden said Wednesday, "we look at the likelihood of success. That's what they pay us to do." The Sawtooth National Forest adopted the trailhead parking fee - $5 for up to three days or $15 for a year - in May to replace an earlier version of the demonstration fee program. The program is in force at 38 trailheads in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area and the Ketchum Ranger District. Congress enacted the three-year pilot fee program in 1997 and later extended it two more years. Craig has supported the program, but he has also expressed concerns about problems with the program. Hoye was driving from Jackson, Wyo., back home to Bend on Sept. 6 when she stopped at the Iron Creek trailhead in the SNRA to take a walk. She Please see FEE, Page A2

CUBAN PROTEST

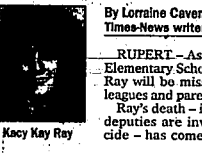

A protester screams at police as they move a crowd from an intersection Thursday in Miami.

'Let him stay'

Demonstrators snarl Miami traffic over decision to send Cuban boy back

The Associated Press MIAMI - Hundreds of Cuban-Americans chanting "Liberty-Liberty!" blocked intersections and cut off access to the Port of Miami on Thursday to protest the U.S. government's decision to return 6-year-old Elian Gonzalez to his father in Cuba. Police arrested about 100 people, including two prominent Cuban exile leaders, for refusing to disperse. Roaming groups of protesters disrupted traffic on major streets during evening rush hour, angering drivers trying to escape the gridlock. A motorist plowed through a group of protesters blocking an intersection near Miami International Airport, knocking a man and a woman to the ground. Their conditions were not immediately known. One police officer working crowd control suffered broken bones when he was hit by a motorist trying to get home. The situation was expected to continue today. Brothers to the Rescue, a Miami-based exile group that searches the waters off Florida for Cubans trying to make it to the United States, called for supporters to drive 15 mph today throughout Miami-Dade County. In Washington, Attorney General Janet Reno essentially ruled out any chance she will reverse Wednesday's decision by the Immigration and Naturalization Service to send the boy back to the communist island. Gov. Jeb Bush wrote to President Clinton on Thursday seeking a reversal of the INS decision. "Fidel Castro has made Elian a poster child for his communist dictatorship, and has turned what should be a determination as to the child's best interest into a way to advance his own political tyranny," Bush wrote. For the past six weeks, Elian has been the subject of protests in Florida and Cuba - and in the middle of an international debate over where he belongs. Fidel Castro kept up the pressure with another government-orchestrated demonstration Thursday in Havana. "We still are really having a difficult time raising the amount of money this community needs," she said. United Way of Magic Valley said out to raise $400,000 this year, up substantially from last year's $322,000 in contributions. The organization so far has raised $312,000, Executive Director Diane Boyd said. That puts donations ahead of the $285,000 received by the same time a year ago. The final figure will be at the end of the month, and distributions will be made in February to organizations supported by United Way, she said. The campaign has gone well in what Brenda Grupe, president of United Way of Magic Valley, describes as a generous community. But she said the organization is disappointed that the campaign probably won't meet its goal. "We still are really having a difficult time raising the amount of money this community needs," she said. United Way of Magic Valley said out to raise $400,000 and ideally about $1 million for the population it serves, Grupe said. Some of the challenges she described include establishing public trust after the organization received bad publicity many years ago over extravagant spending by a former national director, increasing awareness about the support it provides locally, and dispelling the impression that United Way serves only Twin Falls County. The organization serves eight area counties and donations are passed along to community agencies serving children, domestic violence victims and the elderly, said Jim Pozzo, fund-raising director. Teachers remember colleague as caring educator

Kacy Kay Ray

By Lorraine Cavenor Times-News writer RUPERT - As a teacher at Memorial Elementary School in Rupert, Kacy Kay Ray will be missed - by students, colleagues and parents alike. Ray's death - in a case Cassia County deputies are investigating as a homicide - has come as a shock to people who admired her work in the classroom. "What a horrible tragedy," said Brent Perry, who was principal at Memorial School last year. "I know this will be hard for students, parents and staff and everyone in the community." Ray's body was discovered southeast of Burley Saturday. Ray had suffered multiple stab wounds. While deputies look for clues, students, staff and parents look for answers. Survey: Stones' 'Satisfaction' the greatest rock song ever

The Associated Press NEW YORK - Every air guitarist knows the riff - da, da, da-da-da-da-da - and anyone who has ever been a teen-ager can relate to the lyrics. The Rolling Stones' "(I Can't Get No) Satisfaction" topped the list of the 100 greatest rock songs in a VH1 poll of 700 people in the music industry. The 1965 song about rock's favorite subject - sex - has one of the most recognizable guitar riffs in music. Keith Richards said it came to him one night while he

ACROSS THE NATION

Idaho: A high pressure ridge brought a cold, sunny day over much of Idaho Thursday. Idaho Falls and Rexburg reported snow with a weak chance that moved through the area. Elsewhere High pressure brought generally clear conditions to the West on Thursday, while snow and gusty winds blew across the upper Midwest. The snow showers spread from the Dakotas to Wisconsin and northern Michigan. Wind gusts were clocked at more than 30 mph in the Great Lakes region.

A weak cold front associated with this system stretched south into the Plains where most locations reported clear and dry conditions. High pressure also dominated the Rockies, bringing clear but windy conditions to most of the West. In Southern California, wind gusts reached 41 mph. A system moving into the Northwest created cloudy skies from Washington to northern California, with isolated showers in far western Washington.

Idaho labor pool hikes wages in most places

BOISE (AP) - A new state Labor Department analysis indicates Idaho's labor pool is tightening, pushing wages higher, but the benefits of the improving job picture as population growth slows are apparently not being evenly spread across the state. "All regional economies will grow," department analyst James Adams said, "although the persistent, sometimes large differences in area unemployment rates will remain." Adams said continued problems in the natural resource sector, especially timber and mining, have had "intense, adverse impacts on many local areas of the state. These communities are trying to diversify their economies, but it's a very hard struggle and will continue to be a struggle." Analysis sees no immediate end to the double-digit unemployment rates that have been plaguing Adams, Beneath, Clearwater and Shoshone counties. And of the five Panhandle counties, urbanized Kootenai County is expected to have the lowest job-growth rate through 2001, and that will be 7.8 percent this year. Five other rural counties will struggle with unemployment at 7 percent or higher for the next two years. "There is a very mixed picture around the state," Adams said. "In some cases, a high unemployment rate must be expected if seasonal industries dominate the county's economy." But the job picture was bright in the state's bigger cities. All are projected to have unemployment rates below the state average and most below 4 percent.

returned three hours later to find a ticket on her windshield for not buying the user permit. She ignored the ticket, the notice of a $50 fine that came three weeks later, and a mid-November summons to appear in federal court in Boise on the matter. Since the program was changed in May, the Sawtooth National Forest issued 1,529 tickets. Of them, 1,301 paid either in person or mailed in the fee. Another 88 paid after a warning letter was sent or in a few cases the license numbers were written incorrectly and no information was available. Sawtooth forest spokesman Ed Waldpapel said. The Forest Service sent out 140 notices of violations. Of those, 80 were dismissed when proof of purchase was provided; 15 were dismissed by the U.S. Department of Justice because they were out-of-state residents; 30 people paid the $50 fine; a couple of people negotiated a lower fine; one person pleaded guilty and paid three times the permit fee plus court costs, a total of $25; and the rest of the notices are pending or were undeliverable, Waldpapel said. Sawtooth forest officials are working with the U.S. attorney's office to resolve the problem, and they have made no decision to not to prosecute out-of-state violators, he said. "We can't afford to have a program that's enforced only for people in Idaho," Waldpapel said.

Teachers said Ray shared her ideas with them, and was always prepared. Colleagues enjoyed shopping or hanging out with the first-grade teacher after a long day at work.

Parents also liked Ray. "My daughter was real attached to her," said Trudy Throckmorton, a parent of one of Ray's students. "She was an excellent teacher."

The thing she noticed most was the positive influence Ray had on her daughter's life. "I don't know if it was the way she taught the kids, but she was really good with them," she said.

Both Trudy Throckmorton and her husband Lane Throckmorton were impressed with how well their daughter reads. "I'm sure she had plenty of effect on her," Lane Throckmorton said. "She contributed to my daughter's wanting to read."

The Throckmortons gave Ray a lot of credit for their daughter's eagerness to do well in school. "We never had any trouble with our daughter not wanting to go to school," Trudy Throckmorton said. "She was so excited to see her teacher all the time."

Ray's death shocked the Throckmortons. "It's so scary. It could be anybody. I hope they find who did it," Trudy Throckmorton said. "It's been a bad day."

"She had been working hard with her parents to help make their family business in Buhl a success," Perry said. "But she had a learning and getting started with her first group of students," he said. "She had many qualities that I admired and respected."

For those who admired and respected her, Ray's death has had a lasting impact. "The big question is why?" Lane Throckmorton said.

Their daughter's death is one of the most difficult things the Rays have ever faced, Judith Ray said. "But we know she's in a safe place now," she said.

Computer glitches ground planes again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Computer problems grounded airplanes Thursday for a second time this week, frustrating passengers trying to fly in and out of nearly a dozen cities across the eastern third of the nation, the Federal Aviation Administration said.

Hundreds of flights were delayed when a computer at an FAA air traffic control center in Leesburg, Va., experienced problems transferring data about 6:45 a.m. EST. The computer processes information from radar systems, air traffic control centers around the East Coast and flight plans filed by airlines and individual pilots.

"Obviously people were inconvenienced, but they were not in danger," said William Shumann, a spokesman at FAA's headquarters in Washington. "The backup system is safe, but it's a much slower system with less capacity and so we have to hold airplanes on the ground."

Normal operations resumed at 9:49 a.m., but the delays left passengers sitting — up to two hours or more — aboard planes lined up on runways or waiting at gates for flights postponed or canceled.

Pease said the delay underscores the need for Congress to give the FAA money to further modernize the air traffic control system, which is currently undergoing a $12 billion system upgrade. "There is clearly a need to upgrade equipment at the FAA and we've known about it for years."

David Fuscus, a spokesman for the Air Transport Association of America, the airlines' trade group, used the outage to call for steady funding from Congress.

"The problem is the system can't handle the traffic," he said. "The system needs to meet the demand of the American people."

However, this problem occurred with a new computer.

He said the problem has not yet been identified, but it does not appear to be related to Y2K.

Mothers leaving welfare lack basic health insurance

WASHINGTON (AP) — A study of mothers leaving welfare found that one-third of those who took jobs weren't covered by health insurance. The number lacking health insurance was even higher among women who left welfare but didn't work, even though many of them should be eligible for Medicaid. Nearly half of these unemployed women didn't have insurance a year or more after leaving welfare, according to the study to be published Monday in the journal Health Affairs.

Children previously receiving welfare fared better when it comes to keeping coverage under Medicaid, the study showed. About 70 percent of kids had health insurance a year or more after they stopped receiving welfare. Forty-seven percent were covered by Medicaid and 29 percent were covered by private insurance. Families that leave welfare can still keep Medicaid if they meet certain income or medical needs. The study says that many lose their Medicaid coverage because eligibility rules are more complex, and some caseworkers and welfare recipients don't understand them. Auditors at the Health Care Financing Administration found that some states are illegally denying benefits to poor families dropped from the welfare rolls.

People were losing Medicaid coverage because they were not told they were eligible, were automatically dropped from computerized Medicaid files when they got off welfare, or were harassed by caseworkers when they applied for coverage, auditors said. Judy Waxman, director of government affairs at the group, said families who lose insurance are at risk of returning to welfare because parents with sick children will have to stay home.

Abortion rate drops to 20-year low

ATLANTA (AP) — The number of abortions in the United States fell in 1997 to the lowest level in two decades, despite new drugs that make it easier to terminate a pregnancy.

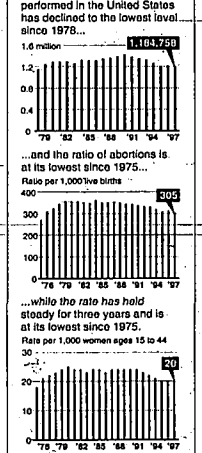

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported Thursday that 20 of every 1,000 women of reproductive age (15 to 44) had abortions in 1997 — the same rate as the previous two years and the lowest since 1975.

The number of abortions for every 1,000 live births dropped from 314 in 1996 to 305 in 1997 — also a 25-year low, the CDC said.

The preliminary estimate of 1,184,758 legal abortions in 1997 was 3 percent less than the 1,224,585 abortions in 1996 and was the lowest number performed since 1978.

The CDC cited several factors for the decline, including reduced access to abortion, increased willingness to use contraception and possibly different attitudes about the moral implications of abortion.

Lawmakers lambast judge for courtroom comments

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Maryland lawmakers and children's advocates joined this week in criticizing a Montgomery County judge who said an 11-year-old girl was partly to blame for a 23-year-old man sexually molesting her because the girl invited him into her bedroom and "it takes two to tango."

Del. Cheryl C. Kagan, D-Montgomery, called Circuit Court Judge Durke G. Thompson's comments "an outrage" and said the state legislature's Women's Caucus plans to look into his handling of the case.

Linda Spears, director of child protection for the Child Welfare League of America, said Thompson should apologize for his remarks. "It ought to be fairly common sense that an 11-year-old holds no responsibility when an adult is mistreating them," Spears said. "It's ludicrous to me that this child would be culpable in any way," she said.

Thompson, a Circuit Court judge for six years, made the comments during a sentencing hearing on Tuesday at which he ordered Vladimir Chacon-Bonilla, of Alexandria, Va., to serve 18 months in the county jail for a second-degree sex offense. The judge suspended the rest of a five-year state prison sentence and ordered Chacon-Bonilla to serve three years of probation and get alcohol abuse treatment.

Thompson has said that he cannot comment on his remarks because the rules of judicial ethics prevent him from publicly discussing a case while it is under consideration.

Y2K passed by A-OK, says FBI

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite fears of terrorism over the New Year's weekend, the number of investigations the FBI opened into computer crimes and physical threats or violence was not unusual for any seven-day period, a senior FBI official said Thursday.

The FBI opened six investigations of computer crimes and 12 investigations into physical threats or violence nationwide from Dec. 29 through Jan. 5, said Mike Vatis, head of the FBI's National Infrastructure Protection Center. "The level was not beyond the norm you would usually see in that number of days," Vatis said. "On neither side — cybercrime or physical threats — did we think the weekend activity was particularly unusual."

Singer Bono asks France to nix debts

PARIS (AP) — Ballad writer Bono has turned his pen to editorials.

Opining in Thursday's edition of the French daily Le Monde, the lead singer of the Irish rock group U2 urged France to forgive billions of dollars owed by Third World.

"The moment has come for France to cancel its debt. It can completely erase $11.5 billion of debt owed by the world's poorest countries," Bono wrote.

Bono has also urged the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund and other individual countries to write off poor country debt, adding his voice to those of Pope John Paul II and the Dalai Lama.

Debt relief will change the lives of a billion people, the poorest of the poor, who live on less than a dollar a day," he wrote.

The Center for International Development at Harvard University says 700 million poverty-stricken people live in countries so burdened with foreign debt they cannot address citizens' health and social needs.

Clinton rejoins slow-moving Mideast negotiations

SHEPHERDSTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — President Clinton plucked back into slow-moving Mideast peace talks Thursday, meeting with Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak after face-to-face negotiations between Israelis and Syrians ground to a halt.

The U.S. aim is a treaty that would exchange the Golan Heights, a strategic border territory Israel has held for more than three decades, for diplomatic and economic relations with Syria.

Syria began Wednesday to outline its offer in a mixed committee under the supervision of Assistant Secretary of State Martin Indyk. A committee on new border security measures met all day, as well.

But there were no face-to-face negotiations over Syria's key demand: a specific timetable for Israel to relinquish the Golan Heights, which Syria lost in the 1967 Mideast war.

State Department spokesman James P. Rubin said the talks, in their fourth day, were still "chugging along." But he said the American hosts were dissatisfied with the pace and would like to see it accelerated.

Clinton's intervention Thursday was the third of the week. On top after he saw Barak for a little more than an hour was a session with Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa. On his arrival, Clinton conferred with Secretary of State Madeleine Albright on her own 90-minute meeting with al-Sharaa.

The president waved to bystanders as he alighted from his helicopter and made no statement. Marking the end of Ramadan, Islam's holiest month, the White House issued a presidential message with a prayer for peace.

In Washington, Clinton's assistant for national security, Sandy Berger, told reporters to "not underestimate the degree of difficulty" in the negotiations being held here, the oldest town in West Virginia.

"These are very difficult issues that divide the parties," Berger said. "They've been at war three times since the 1940s. There are very strong views on both sides."

President Clinton and the first lady walk back to their home in Chappaque, N.Y., Thursday, Jan. 6, 2000, after stopping to talk briefly with media. The president later flew to Washington, D.C. to rejoin the Middle East peace talks.

In contrast to discontent within the Syrian delegation, Barak and his delegation appeared pleased that the negotiations were focused on peace terms and security measures, such as installing an early-warning system at the border and clearing it of troops.

Rubin said that Albright, meanwhile, had directed her assistants to prepare a "working document" detailing negotiations held in 1996 as well as talks last month in Washington and here this week.

"That will enable us at the appropriate time to move forward," he said.

Asked if Israel could be secure without retaining the Golan Heights, which overlooks its northern eastern towns that were targets of cross-border attacks before 1967, Rubin said, "Israel is going to have to make that decision."

"We believe that Israel has legitimate security needs and we believe those needs can be met," he added.

Clinton has assured Israel and Syria he was willing to play a helpful and consistent role in trying to iron out their differences. The private group — named for the late Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, who made peace with Israel in 1979 — said in a statement that Syria's hard-line position strengthens the Israeli hard-liners and raises questions about Syria's resolve to seek peace.

Famed hacker 'Mudge' of the L0pht
Hackers go from pirates to privateers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Who ya gonna call? Hackers? Some of the Internet's most adept online snoops are hoping big business soon will be chanting their "Ghobusters"-like refrain: These hackers are forming a new company to advise the world's largest banks and hospitals how to keep their data safe from intruders.

Members of the Boston-based L0pht Heavy Industries, who once boasted to the Senate that any one of them could cripple the Internet in the United States within 30 minutes, today were announcing the creation of their consulting company, AtStake. They say they have more than $10 million in funding from venture capitalists.

The new vice president of research and development — widely considered among the world's leading hackers — will continue to use only his online handle, "Mudge," to identify himself.

L0pht (pronounced "loft"), whose eight members sold software to crack the passwords of Microsoft Windows NT computers and to detect other hackers secretly monitoring a network, will disband as an organization. All its members — with such colorful monikers as "Space Rogue," "Dildog," "Weld Pond" and "Brian Oblivion" — will join the new company, based in Cambridge, Mass.

Wearing business suits, the group described as a "hacker think tank" testified about lax computer security before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee in May 1998. They said any of them could easily bring down the Internet in North America, although other experts dismissed the claims as exaggerated.

The new executives suggested they weren't concerned that the nation's largest banks, brokerages and health-care companies might be reluctant to hire hackers to secure their own sensitive information. "Mudge" called it "not a hurdle as much as a springboard," saying prominent companies and government agencies had informally sought L0pht's advice in the past.

Rough landing may have wrecked Mars lander — or not, scientists say

PASADENA, Calif. — The vanished Mars Polar Lander could have tumbled down a canyon on the Red Planet, but investigators so far have uncovered no evidence supporting a single explanation for the disaster, NASA said Thursday.

The $165 million lander was supposed to touch down Dec. 3 for a 90-day mission to analyze the planet's atmosphere and search for frozen water beneath the south pole. It has not been heard from since it started its descent after an 11-month cruise, and NASA has not offered a reason for the disappearance.

Members of the Lockheed Martin team who operated the craft believe it landed on the edge of a canyon nearly a mile deep and 6 miles wide, The Denver Post reported Thursday, citing an unidentified Lockheed source who was on the mission team.

Nobody has ruled out the possibility of a rough landing — or any other scenario, such as a failure of the descent system or an explosion before entry, said Richard Zurek, the lander's project scientist at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory. "There are hazards in the area where we expected the lander to go down," he said.

"But it's by no means conclusive that the cause of us not being able to communicate with the lander."

Florida Senate unanimously backs use of lethal injection

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — The Florida Senate gave unanimous approval Thursday to a bill allowing death row inmates to choose to die by lethal injection.

Florida lawmakers hope to make moot a question the U.S. Supreme Court has agreed to consider: whether death in the electric chair is cruel and unusual punishment.

The House was considering a similar bill, and both chambers have until this afternoon to work out any differences.

Flames had erupted during two electrocutions in the last decade, and the last condemned man, Allen Lee "Tiny" Davis, suffered a nosebleed during his execution.

In many cases, the study claimed, program themes were not covered and gun proponents were not given air time.

CNN spokesman David Bitler defended its reporting, saying, "We do not advocate for or against any particular position and we stand behind the balance and fairness that goes into all our reporting."

Census seeks a half-million workers for Y2K head count

WASHINGTON — Uncle Sam wants you!

The Census Bureau launched an effort Thursday to hire a half-million part-time workers to conduct the national head count.

"Our goal is to have a pool of local people who are familiar with their communities and committed to a successful count in their own neighborhoods," Census Director Kenneth Prewitt said at a briefing.

In many areas the agency is seeking bilingual workers. Pay varies from $8.25 to $18.50 per hour. Prewitt urged anyone interested in a Census job to call the agency's toll-free number, 1-888-325-7733.

Conservatives accuse media of gun control bias

WASHINGTON — The television networks are so badly slanting the gun control debate they have become the "communications" division of the anti-gun lobby, says the head of a conservative media watchdog group that studied the issue.

The Media Research Center, chaired by Brent Bozell, released a study Wednesday on two years of television news stories on gun control.

The study analyzed the morning shows and evening newscasts between July 1, 1997 and June 30, 1999 on ABC, CBS, CNN and NBC.

Judge approves $40 million Austrian bank settlement

NEW YORK — A federal judge approved a $40 million settlement Thursday between an estimated 1,000 Holocaust victims or their heirs and two Austrian banks accused of confiscating their assets.

U.S. District Judge Shirley Wohl Kram said that the settlement is fair and adequate and that the alternative is years of litigation so drawn-out that many of the victims would be dead before they saw any payout.

It will at least several months before any payments go out. The two sides have to wait to see whether the judge's approval is challenged on appeal, and they also have to evaluate each of the victims' claims.

Lawyers estimate there are about 1,000 valid claims from victims or their heirs.

The corporate predecessors of the two banks, Bank Austria and Creditanstalt, were accused of confiscating Holocaust victims' assets and refusing to turn them over to those who survived the war.

Mom lands in jail for attack on her daughter's teacher

NEW YORK — A woman who assaulted her daughter's sixth-grade teacher for giving the girl bad grades has been sentenced to two months in jail.

Brenda Smith, 45, could have faced up to a year in jail and a $1,000 fine for the attack on Jamina Clay, 22, last June.

Smith was convicted of third-degree assault in November.

Flu strain is back, hitting hard

Many Americans have caught influenza this season even though they had received the current flu vaccine shot.

Y2K bug hits hard; data is fine, but people go down

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — How bad is the flu bug right now on the East Coast? Take a look at the emergency room at Temple University Hospital. Flu-stricken patients on gurneys are lined up in the halls, waiting for rooms. Others wait, then wait some more, before they get to be seen by a doctor.

"The flu shot apparently is not doing its job, and from all reports, it could be one of the worst seasons we've seen in years," said Dr. Robert McNamara, chief of emergency medicine at the hospital.

The flu, which struck the West hard last month, has arrived like a storm in the East, filling hospital waiting rooms and doctors' offices with shivering, feverish, aching patients.

"We're having difficulty getting inpatient beds. We have been in a critical status for the last 11 days," McNamara said.

GOP debate reveals some distinctions

Knight Ridder News Service

DURHAM, N.H. — Reprising a line that got his father in deep political trouble, Texas Gov. George W. Bush pledged Thursday night to enact "tax cuts, so help me God," in a spirited and sometimes testy encounter with his Republican rivals.

"Kicking off a new, much more intense phase in the presidential campaign, the six GOP hopefuls were markedly more aggressive than in their previous debates. With New Hampshire's first-in-the-nation primary less than a month away, the candidates did not mince words in trying to stand out from the pack.

Sen. John McCain of Arizona, who leads in some New Hampshire polls, said Bush's record-breaking campaign fundraising blinds him to the need for campaign finance reform.

"You've raised $74 million and I don't think you have an idea of how important campaign finance reform is to restore the confidence of young Americans in their government," McCain told Bush.

Bush countered sharply: "What you don't need to do is tell me what I have an idea about or not." Bush criticized McCain's proposal to ban unregulated "soft money" contributions because, he said, it would help Democrats through their ties to labor unions. "I trust your integrity. I trust your judgment. I don't trust the plan that you're outlining. It is bad for Republicans and it is bad for the conservative cause," he told McCain.

But it was taxes, an issue that candidates believe is an article of faith with New Hampshire Republicans, that elicited some of the more spirited exchanges and prompted Bush's pledge.

When pressed about his commitment to tax cuts, Bush offered a variation of his father's line: "Read my lips, no new taxes." Former President Bush's failure to live up to the promise helped doom his 1992 re-election bid.

"This is not only no new taxes," the younger Bush said, "this is tax cuts, so help me God."

Bush's proposal to cut taxes by $483 billion over five years did not satisfy his rivals. McCain has criticized it for being too large and favoring the wealthy. And publisher Steve Forbes, who advocates a single flat tax rate, dismissed Bush's plan as "Clinton-Gore lite."

While Bush and McCain sparred over details of their proposals, the four other candidates repeatedly cast themselves as the true conservatives in the race.

"I have a Reaganesque message," Forbes declared. "I am the one Republican who is talking like Reagan on the tax issue."

Candidate and radio commentator Alan Keyes challenged Bush and McCain for supporting the Pentagon's "don't ask, don't tell" policy for homosexuals in the military. "I keep asking myself where all the conservatives have gone."

And conservative activist Gary Bauer bluntly challenged Bush's conservative credentials, saying: "I am getting more and more worried about whether you are serious about defending conservative values."

No-tax pledge could return to bite front-runner

By Walter R. Means
The Associated Press

DURHAM, N.H. — George W. Bush went his father one better and swore an oath to cut taxes "so help me God" — a vow that could haunt him should he follow his father into the White House.

"A no-tax helped President Bush get there, but he broke it and lost the next election. And keeping a vow to cut taxes would be even more difficult; presidents can't do that without Congress.

The 1988 campaign promise of the elder Bush was that he would veto a tax increase should the Democratic Congress try to impose one. "Read my lips: No new taxes," he pledged to tell them.

Gov. Bush's version of the family political pledge, delivered Thursday night:

"This is not only no new taxes, this is tax cuts, so help me God."

Bush made his vow in debate with his five rivals for the Republican presidential nomination. He was promoting his $483-billion, five-year tax cut proposal, "the governor of a state that I took the same message to our people," Bush said. "I've worked with Democrats and Republicans alike to cut the taxes ... in Texas, twice."

But he couldn't get all he proposed in Texas. And his debate rivals said Bush also proposed increasing sales and other taxes as part of a package with property tax reductions.

And no president can guarantee a tax cut. Congress decides that.

So the Bush line could echo past—the campaign for the Republican presidential nomination. "If anybody knows the risk of making that pledge, Governor Bush does," said Steve Duprey, the New Hampshire Republican chairman.

He watched the no-tax pledge boost Bush Sr.'s campaign in 1988. But as president, Bush reneged. In 1990, he said there would have to be "tax revenue increases" as part of a deal with Congress to reduce the federal budget deficit.

Conservatives never let him forget it. During his losing campaign for reelection, the elder Bush said breaking the tax commitment was his worst mistake.

Buchanan vows struggle against world government

DURHAM, N.H. (AP) — Pat Buchanan, seeking support for his fledgling Reform Party presidential bid, promised Thursday to lead a "millennial struggle" against an emerging world government "where all nations yield up their sovereignty and fade away."

In a speech to the Boston World Affairs Council, the former Republican said, "Loyalty to the New World Order is disloyalty to the Republic. In nation after nation, the struggle between patriotism and globalism is under way."

"If ever sovereignty becomes obsolete, we may expect America's involvement in endless wars until, one day, we pay the horrific price in some apocalyptic terror on our own soil," he said.

Buchanan, in his third run for the presidency, said the Clinton administration is allowing the United Nations to intrude on America's sovereignty. At the same time, he said, the United States is guilty of "trampling on the sovereignty" of other nations by injecting troops in internal conflicts, such as Kosovo.

Buchanan left the GOP last year to seek the Reform Party nomination after his initial 2000 presidential bid as a Republican stalled. He blamed the Republican establishment for his failure, saying party leaders were lining up behind the front-runner, Texas Gov. George W. Bush.

New York tycoon Donald Trump also is seeking the Reform nomination.

Buchanan named politicians, journalists and Clinton administration officials who appear to embrace globalism over nationalism — proponents of the so-called "New World Order," a phrase Buchanan attributed to Bush's father, former President George Bush. — Buchanan's — examples included President Clinton calling himself a "citizen of the world," and Vice President Al Gore — Democratic presidential candidate — agreeing to a global environmental pact.

Ethics question rocks McCain's campaign

Knight Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — Sen. John McCain's upset campaign for the Republican presidential nomination is being rocked by a budding scandal that threatens to stain his image as a white-knight crusader bent on cleansing politics of corruption by big money.

An ethics uproar with echoes of the Keating Five scandal, which tarred McCain in 1990-91, is the last thing the Arizona Republican needs right now, with his campaign facing a make-or-break test in New Hampshire's primary less than four weeks away. McCain has been leading GOP front-runner George W. Bush in recent New Hampshire polls, and is counting on a victory there to propel him to the nomination.

Yet suddenly his image as Mr. Integrity is getting singed. The Boston Globe broke a story Wednesday detailing McCain's actions on behalf of a big donor to his campaign.

ABC-TV's "Nightline" grilled McCain on the matter that night as if it were a full-blown scandal. The next day The New York Times explored the story anew on its front page, and the Washington Post gave it lengthy attention. Suddenly McCain's alleged scandal was not only the biggest story in the hothouse of national political gossip; it was the talk of New Hampshire. The topic dominated early in Thursday night's debate of GOP presidential candidates there.

"The little whiff of hypocrisy is going to be problematic," said Andrew Smith, a University of New Hampshire expert on public opinion. "His image now is he's the clean guy. He's not tainted by money. Now people are going to say, 'You say that, but are you really any different?'"

The essence of the ethics imbroglio is this: McCain learned heavily last month on the Federal Communications Commission — which he oversees as chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee — on behalf of one of his key financial backers, Lowell Paxson, head of Paxson Communications, which was seeking an FCC ruling. In letters he wrote Nov. 17 and Dec. 10, McCain pressured the FCC to rule on Paxson's case after two years of FCC indecision. The Senate chairman noted in the letter that he was not asking the agency necessarily to rule in Paxson's favor, just to resolve his case.

Nevertheless, FCC Chairman William E. Kennard objected, saying McCain's pressure on him was "highly unusual."

Bush backs federal funding for some arts

Today's question by The Associated Press to the major presidential candidates: Do you support federal subsidies for the arts?

On the Issues: The arts

for the arts, but give states a greater say in how the funds are spent. I don't believe we should spend public money to support obscene material or denigrate

Steve Forbes: "I oppose federal subsidies for the arts. Taxpayers should not be forced to subsidize offensive and/or obscene artwork. As President, I will privatize the National Endowment for the Arts."

Orrin Hatch: "Yes, under certain circumstances and conditions."

Alan Keyes: "No." John McCain: "No. I have opposed federal funding for the National Endowment for the Arts because I believe it is not proper to use tax dollars for what many Americans feel are the obscene and inappropriate projects this organization has supported. I support providing federal block grants to the states for arts education and artistic endeavors pursued by state and local authorities, while assuring that federal tax dollars are not spent on obscene or offensive material."

Democrats

Bill Bradley: "Yes. The arts have enriched the lives of Americans, as well as our economy. The National Endowment for the Arts has been an important catalyst for that effort."

Al Gore: "I strongly believe in encouraging and supporting the arts and would continue the current policy of support. The arts are an important part of our life and our history and should be supported."

Reform

Pat Buchanan: "No. The National Endowment for the Arts has subsidized projects that are blasphemous, degraded and obscene. Let the Mapplethorpes and Serranos insult God and man on their own dime."

Republicans

Gary Bauer: "No." George W. Bush: "I believe we should continue federal funding

Sawtooth user fees now apply to Idaho folks only

So Uncle Sam has decided not to prosecute an Oregon woman who refused to pay a fee before setting foot in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area.

We applaud Majorie Hoye, of Bend, for acting on principle and refusing to knuckle under. We're glad the feds dropped the case. But we don't like their reasoning.

Because Hoye is from out of state, it would be too expensive to prosecute her over a $50 fine, say Sawtooth National Forest officials. That's nice for her, but what does it mean for us locals? Are we to be prosecuted simply because we're easy to find, while non-residents skip free?

For this we pay taxes? It's time for Smokey Bear to warn to some basic truths about the Recreation Fee Demonstration Project in the Sawtooth National Forest:

American taxpayers build the right to use national forest lands every April 15. Charging a separate fee is double taxation.

Leaning on the locals while declining to prosecute out-of-staters is contemptuous of Idaho residents. Just because we live here doesn't mean we're potato-digging peasants.

The recreation fee is nothing more than a scheme to make money off of low-impact hikers, anglers and picnickers.

It's worth noting that the Sawtooth Forest is panhandling on public lands while its employees earn handsome salaries by local standards. How would you like a forest supervisor's job that pays nearly $80,000? Or a public relations job that pays $60,000? Or $58,000 to be a wildlife biologist? Or $45,000 to be a forestry technician?

Last year, the average salary for the Sawtooth's permanent employees - including part-timers - was $36,700 per year. Keep that in mind next time you buy a recreation pass to help the cash-strapped Sawtooth National Forest.

Most folks don't mind paying a fee when they use something that was expensive to build.

Camping at a developed campsite and launching a boat at a boat ramp are activities for which most people will willingly pay.

But c'mon, is walking down a trail or picnicking along a lake really in the same league?

The majority of laws are enforced by moral suasion, not law enforcement officers. Most folks don't rob gas stations, or run red lights because: 1) It's part of living in a civil society; and 2) It gets expensive when you get caught.

We normally wouldn't advocate breaking the law, but the recreation fee program in the Sawtooth Forest is so egregiously bad that it deserves to be met with civil disobedience.

Don't buy a pass. Don't pay anything to settle a citation. If you don't get cited, great. But if you do, give us a call. We'd like to hear your story, and we'd love to tell it to others. If prosecuting someone from Oregon would have been hard for Uncle Sam, just wait until someone from Gooding or Burley goes on trial.

We doubt that anyone will ever go on trial. The public image of Sawtooth Forest officials, as well as federal prosecutors, can't afford another black eye.

Idaho's congressional delegation should put an end to this demonstration fee program.

It's time for a parental consent law in Idaho

Monday will mark the return of Idaho's Legislature to Boise. Idaho's leaders will consider many important issues in the coming session - water rights, education and environmental protection. But perhaps no issue will be more difficult, controversial or important than the parental consent law. I urge our legislators to support this important proposal.

As a husband and father of four daughters, I believe that preserving and supporting Idaho families is a policy area in which all Idahoans should come together. It transcends partisan politics and crosses geographical boundaries. This is an era of great strain and rapid change for Idaho's families. Parental consent will be an important step in encouraging teens to turn to their families for love and guidance when making a critical, life-changing decision. And because the decision to have an abortion is one with lifelong effects, it is imperative that Idaho public policy ensures a teen-age mother is given the very best counsel. That kind of advice almost certainly comes from her mother or father - people with the longest and most intimate understanding of the girl's values, upbringing and psychological strength. A mother and father are usually a girl's best advisors and counselors as she struggles with the tremendous weight of her decision. Fear and shame possibly drive many to hide their problem from parents. Often an unwanted pregnancy is that teen's first real-life crisis and such problems place stress upon the bonds that hold a family together. Parents should be allowed to assist their daughters, to provide support and advice. To be the helping hand that she may not have realized was there. We are all aware of situations and conditions where a parent's involvement may not be possible or beneficial. Any parental consent law should take this into consideration and provide for the means to approach the courts for confidential assistance, counseling and, if necessary, consent to have an abortion. The positive effect of parents in such cases can be seen in the many states with strong parental consent laws. Within a short time after enactment, teen-age abortion rates decline dramatically. That is a great social gain for all of us. Too often, a stranger may be relied upon because both parties know they will not have to deal with each other again. Many of our teen-age girls leave abortion clinics carrying the pain and anguish of their decision, more alone than ever. What is worse, most of these girls live for years with the secret; live without the reassurance and healing that only a parent's love can provide. It is not right for Idaho to do so little on behalf of these children in their time of need. It is time that Idaho joins the many other states which provide protection for teen-age girls through a parental consent law. J.D. Williams is the Idaho State controller.

Regulating the Ferrari set on a Ford salary is nearly impossible

Describing the ability of securities regulators to keep pace with the turbocharged industry they regulate, a reporter once said that the regulators drive Fords while Wall Street drives Ferraris.

As a Securities and Exchange Commission lawyer who has actually been inside the agency's garage, I know this is more than a metaphor. While just about every American has been tempted by the bull market mania of the '90s, few jobs press your nose to the glass - and hold it there - quite as forcefully as that of overseeing securities markets worth trillions of dollars. To oversee something, you must pay attention to it. As I work at the agency's desk, the immense wealth of the stock market is, quite literally, in my face, and as inescapable as the market alerts that flash across my computer screen.

In my twenties, which coincided with the go-go '80s, my friends and I shared a healthy disdain for unchecked yuppie greed. But today, like just about everyone else, I have become fairly obsessed with the stock market. Indeed, this obsession may turn out to be the real Y2K bug. Though I started investing in mutual funds in the 1980s, and still do, I have graduated to the excitement of picking my own stocks. While I used to take a casual interest in the statements my mutual funds sent me once a quarter, a day away from the market now leaves me feeling strangely out of sorts. Instead of my old breakfast fare of international news, with assorted other topics tossed in, I now head straight for the S&P futures on CNBC.

I believe this way, and I am decidedly not a day trader. In fact, SEC rules require me to hold stock I buy for six months. In addition, I spend my days regulating mutual funds, which, of course, are also not the Ferraris of investment vehicles. But working at the SEC has a way of forcing you to think about markets - securities markets, housing markets, labor markets. Every day, my colleagues and I speak with securities lawyers in the private sector who are earning two to three times our salaries (not counting bonuses and stock options); attorneys for Merrill Lynch, Goldman Sachs, Fidelity and other Wall Street heavyweights. It hasn't been particularly difficult to make money in this bull market, and some of the entrepreneurs who are also calling us for legal guidance are, put it gently, longer on enthusiasm than they are on understanding.

As a government employee speaking with these high-fliers, I frequently feel like an investor stuck holding low-interest savings bonds while equities soar all around him. This feeling doesn't help the SEC retain staff. At least during bull markets, we have an unending stream of good-bye parties, as co-workers tire of the (comparatively) low salaries and windowless offices that come with public service. Lured by what one colleague has called the "dark side," SEC staffers are trading in their Fords for something flashier.

Of course, there are different shades of dark. But, to me, being a regulator rather than a private lawyer means that you normally don't have to adopt a client's position in advance and then figure out how to sell it. Instead, you have the luxury of deciding what you think is right and going from there.

The pressure to "go private" is amplified by two different sources. First, there is Congress' lack of support for the SEC, as evidenced by an annual budget that hasn't come close to keeping pace with the astounding growth in the markets the agency oversees. Second, there is pressure from the securities industry. Fortunately, the SEC staff is well regarded by industry insiders, many of whom have Commission experience themselves. Nevertheless, there is a lingering suspicion of those who stay on at the agency. One departing colleague joked that he had almost reached his "expiration date." It's as if those of us who stay too long - and I'm talking years, not decades - risk being labeled as spoiled milk.

Which is a shame. Despite its bureaucratic challenges as a workplace, the government provides opportunities not easily found elsewhere: the chance to work on novel and important issues, the opportunity to collaborate with an unusually nice group of colleagues (especially rare for lawyers) and, not least, the chance to feel good about what you do for a living.

Because of my peculiar status in the financial world - a participant who doesn't really participate in its wealth - I doubt I can remain forever happy driving a Ford. When I do eventually decide to trade it in, though, I hope I can forgo the Ferrari and content myself with something less sleek.

Martin Kimel is an attorney with the Securities and Exchange Commission. He wrote this commentary for The Washington Post.

LETTER

Cows raise the big stink
I've been reading in the paper that promoters are trying to get the Legislature to make better rules regulating chicken and hog factories. What about the livestock industry? Large dairies and feedlots are ruining lives in Magic Valley. I've lived in the same place for 30 years, and I have never smelt a chicken farm. It has been several years since I smelt the hog smell. It is just the cow stink that permeates the air. Why can't we get good laws to regulate the dairy industry? Is the dairy industry so strong with so much money that the legislators are afraid to discipline them? Come on - people are important too! MERLE STODDARD Twin Falls

Cops can, should do better

You cops should clean your act up. Especially in Mini-Cassia and the small town known as Filer. In Mini-Cassia, you can speed 60 mph in a 35 mph zone. You police should stop eating doughnuts and stop your computer games while saying, "We'll get 'em next time, Bob." Get your butts in gear and work for your doughnuts. Start by getting in your cars.

I feel sorry for John Bell. Police and people every where in the U.S. of A. represent a country. A country of "justice and freedom."

The police in Filer chase you down for going a millionth over the speed limit. They are targeting young people. The police are communists. I am only a freshman in Filer High School. I've never "scored," drank or done anything harmful to me. The only shots I've been given are given by a nurse. Same with the drugs I take. I respect people for what their attitudes, not racial. And you say youth don't do anything but smoke and party. I'm a Christian. I'm a Mennonite. We're not supposed to act against the law, but when that happens, I get mad. I'm not even near losing my temper. Like Bruce Bonner said, "Please don't make me angry. You wouldn't like me when I'm angry."

This isn't the 19th century. Stop working about Y2K.

Good manners are worth it
People do notice.
We recently had the pleasure of visiting with six students at the Wendell vs. Shoshone basketball game on Dec. 15. These students were scouting the game for the Wood River School. They were courteous, polite and represented your school well. These students are a great asset to your school and community.

Group pushes for local control

By Jennifer Sandmann
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Local control and cost should be Idahoans' arguments against the push for exiting standards, one man involved in a grass roots effort to oppose the high school testing program said Thursday.

A small, local conservative group - the Jerome Committee of Correspondence,

State-sanctioned exit standards, high stakes testing are on grass-root organization's list of targets which champions limited government involvement in daily life - hosted a forum that drew about 40 people.

"As far as the Legislature is concerned, I think you'll be more effective if you concentrate on two points," said speaker

Robble Robinson of Boise, after broaching the hot-button issue of evolution. Opponents have criticized standards because it offers only evolution as an explanation for the origin of human life. Robinson, 81, who describes himself as a retired educator, recommended opponents stick with the issues of local control and cost. He is among a watchdog network calling itself the Idaho Committee for Integrity and Excellence in Education, opposed to exiting standards.

Supporters say exiting standards are part of a national watchdog network calling itself the Idaho Committee for Integrity and Excellence in Education, opposed to exiting standards. Ice on road leads to rollover wreck

TWIN FALLS - An ice spot was blamed for a one-vehicle rollover Thursday afternoon on Pole Line Road east of Twin Falls.

Buhl resident Crystal Toppert, 49, hit an icy spot at the bottom of the dip where Pole Line Road meets Rock Creek Canyon, said Nancy Howell of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office.

After losing control, Toppert's 1987 Ford pickup truck rolled and landed on its top, Howell said.

Toppert was taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, where she was treated and released.

Investigation into death of baby hampered

BURLEY - The investigation of the death of a 1-month-old baby has been significantly hindered by the reluctance of witnesses to talk to investigators, according to officials.

No charges have been filed in connection with the death of Quinton Van Holland as prosecutors have not yet been able to build a case against a suspect, said Howard Smyser, a Cassia County deputy prosecutor. Witnesses have been reluctant to talk about the case, Smyser said.

On Dec. 6, Quinton was taken to Cassia Regional Medical Center by his mother, Cara Crystal Van Holland, but the baby was dead. He had suffered a fractured skull immediately prior to his death and a broken leg 10 to 14 days prior to his death that had not been treated, according to Cassia County Coroner Paul Young.

The results of the autopsy did not indicate whether the injuries that Quinton suffered were intentional or accidental. Officials have said that question may need to be answered through the process of criminal prosecution.

The investigation was also hampered by an automobile accident involving three people crucial to the investigation, officials have said.

Anybody with information on the death of Quinton may call the Cassia County Sheriff's Office at 878-2251.

Juvenile sex offender treatment center planned

MOUNTAIN HOME - A 64-bed residential treatment center for juvenile sex offenders is being planned in southwestern Idaho.

The Brown Schools Inc. plans to open the secured facility in Mountain Home in six to nine months.

The Brown Schools currently treats 39 Idaho juvenile sex offenders in facilities in Colorado and Texas and 32 at a temporary facility in Gooding, Project Manager Tim Marshall said.

"The need Idaho has is pretty critical now," said Marshall said since The Brown Schools received the state contract in 1998, the 32-bed Gooding facility has been full. Because of demand, the company is considering maintaining the Gooding facility to house developmentally delayed juvenile sexual offenders.

The new facility will be at the Mountain View Industrial Park subdivision off U.S. Highway 20. It will include space for education, recreation and other activities, the company said.

Mountain Home was selected because city officials have been receptive to the center, which will bring an estimated 80 full-time jobs and have a $3.6 million annual operating budget.

Special meeting about Highway 75 set today

KETCHUM - The City Council will hold a special meeting today with representatives from the Idaho Transportation Department to discuss improvements to Idaho Highway 75.

The meeting will begin at noon at City Hall. Council members and highway representatives are scheduled to discuss National Environmental Policy Act requirements for the improvement of Highway 75 from Alturas Lake to Timber Way.

The meeting is open to the public.

Putting on some more pressure

Better water flow, other benefits might come from upgrades

By John T. Huddy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Residents on the east side of Twin Falls should see an increase in their water pressure, much that the city has completed a new-and-improved water well and reservoir project.

"We've talked to a number of people and they said they're seeing excellent results," said Bill Block, regional director with J-U-B Engineers. "They'll see more of a difference in the summer when the demand for water goes up."

Eastside residents have long had problems with their water pressure.

The improvements will provide more water pressure, and add to the city's water supply, Block said.

"One of the big places people will see the difference is in their appliances," Block said. "Clothes washers won't take so long to fill. Sprinkler systems will not take as long to work. They'll have more flow through garden hoses. Even at the sink your glass will fill up faster."

Construction of the wells and reservoirs began last year.

The project's completion, scheduled for November 1999, was held up while engineers worked on chlorination equipment. That equipment came in December and the projects were just recently completed.

The completion of the city water wells and reservoirs are only part of the city's scheduled water system improvements.

Engineers are also working on replacing more than 2,000 square feet of pipeline that connects the city's main spring-fed water source near the Canyon Springs Golf Course to the city's water plant.

Crews have been working in the canyon since mid-December to replace the deteriorated pipeline.

The work should be done by April 14.

Instead of replacing the existing 36-inch pipeline with another 36-inch pipe, two 30-inch pipes running side by side will be used instead, Block said.

Putting in two pipes instead of one protects the city in case one pipeline fails.

"It's such an important source of water down there. About 80 to 85 percent of the water per year in Twin Falls is taken from the Blue Lakes source," Block said.

The Blue Lakes pipeline has been temporarily shut off while engineers replace it.

A bypass line has been set up to help pump water from the

At a glance

Here's a look at the city's water system improvement project:

- Three new wells - One on the east side of town are 400 feet deep, pumping more than 2 million gallons of water per day; the third on the west side of town is 400 feet deep, pumping 8 million gallons per day.
- One new reservoir - One on the east side of town and one on the west side of town, with a total capacity of 1 million gallons.
- One new pipeline - One on the east side of town, with a total capacity of 1 million gallons.

Blue Lakes Spring.

Water flow through the bypass line should begin next week, Block said.

Residents will not see any difference in their water pressure or supply because of the Blue Lakes pipeline shutdown. But they will see a difference, if they haven't already, in their water rates.

The city increased its water rates by 5 percent to help pay off the state loan used for the projects.

Sewer rates also have gone up to help pay for the planned expansion of the city's wastewater treatment facility, Twin Falls City Manager Tom Courtney said.

Courtney said expansion of the city's wastewater treatment plan is set to begin after project bids are taken on Jan. 14.

"We're virtually at the point of construction," he said.

The city will pay for the plant's expansion with an $8 million state revolving loan.

That project is separate from the city's water system improvement projects.

The city's water treatment plant is located in the canyon near the city's pipeline replacement project.

Expansion includes:
• A new blower system.
• Several piping changes.
• An addition to the plant's laboratory.

The plant's expansion should take 15 or 16 months to complete, Courtney said.

Cassia planners mull signs, towers, more

By Ruth Streetar
Times-News writer

BURLEY - Before cellular phone towers crop up in large numbers, before neon signs cluster the city's highways and before Albion Valley is host to more livestock operations than it can handle, the county is looking to regulate them.

The Cassia County Planning and Zoning Commission Thursday discussed ordinances regulating telecommunications towers and billboards and zoning multiple-use land of the Albion Valley.

In a world of ever-expanding wireless communication, the county might want to consider tower site regulations, county attorney Stephen Bywater told the commission Thursday.

"We've got a lot of county and a lot of open area, but eventually (towers) could become an eyesore," Bywater said.

While regulations mainly fall under federal purview, the county can create an ordinance that protects residential areas from towers' adverse impacts, encourages development in non-residential areas, encourages the joint use of towers, encourages "camouflage" tactics, considers public health and safety and avoids damage to adjacent property, Bywater said.

The county could also require a closure plan, if towers are abandoned.

Density could be regulated, as well as the total number of towers in the county.

A draft ordinance will also include similar regulations on fiber optics and cables.

Saving increased visitors to the City of Rocks National Reserve could bring more commercial services to Idaho Highway 77, Bywater suggested the commission consider an ordinance to regulate signs on public and private property.

An ordinance could be county-wide, or limited to a certain area, such as Highway 77, the scenic byway leading to City of Rocks.

An ordinance must be "content neutral," Bywater said, but can restrict size, lighting and location, and the density of signs within an area.

Planning commissioner Dale Pierce said a sign ordinance could be just one more regulation to pile on the heap, and Bywater sympathized. But he also said he'd "hate to see a nice, pristine area turn into a string of cheap billboards."

With Albion Valley's multiple-use land open to any developer keen on bringing in industry without need for a conditional-use permit, some residents have spurred the county to consider

Silak has no rivals yet in court race

By Michael Journeé
Times-News writer

BOISE - Despite forming a committee to oversee her reelection effort, Idaho Supreme Court Justice Cathy Silak has no challengers for her seat in the 2000 election as yet.

First elected to her position in 1994, Silak's race that year with former Attorney General Wayne K. Howell was the first contested Supreme Court justice race in 24 years. In 1993, Silak was appointed by then-Gov. Cecil Andrus to fill the uncompleted term of former Chief Justice Robert Baker.

But the chairman of her campaign committee said the committee is not an indication that she expects a challenge this time around.

"It's just a routine matter," said Craig Meadows, head of the committee. "She's getting ready in case there is a challenge. It's a little late to set up a committee after a challenge is announced."

Meadows also served as Silak's campaign committee chairman in 1994.

Meadows and Idaho Republican Party Executive Director Cheryl Miller both say they have heard of no pending challenges to Silak.

Supreme Court elections are usually decided in a non-partisan ballot during the party primaries, more than two candidates vie for the seat, and no one gets a majority. In that case, the top two primary vote recipients face off in the general election in November.

That occurred in 1998, when Kidwell defeated Mike Wetherell in a November runoff in a race for a vacant court seat.

Hailey residents gripe about airport noise

By Karen Bossack
Times-News correspondent

BELLEVUE - On just about any Sunday, the noise from corporate jets taking off at the Hailey airport is so loud that Bellevue resident Larry Plott and his wife can hear the TV or talk on the phone.

But Congress could give Bellevue residents some relief from airport noise, residents learned at a meeting this week.

Friedman Memorial Airport at Hailey is the second busiest airport in the state after Boise, even though Hailey is much smaller than Idaho Falls, Twin Falls, Focoteille and Coeur d'Alene.

Between 75,000 and 80,000 flights come in and out of the tiny airport each year, with jet-setters headed to ski, golf or attend conferences in Sun Valley. The noise problem isn't caused by commercial jets, nor by props. It's caused by Stage 2 jet aircraft under 75,000 pounds.

These aircraft, most of them corporate jets, make up about 13,000 of the flights, averaging about 35 takeoffs a day.

The problem is compounded by topography, with mountains on both sides and the cities of Hailey and Bellevue on either

MOUNTAIN HOME

Jesus Bilbao, 64, of Mountain Home, died Monday, December 20, 1999, at a Boise hospital. No local funeral services will be held in Spain.

Jesus was born June 13, 1935, in Murielboro, Spain; the son of Lequecio and Maria Bilbao. He and his two brothers began working for Bep. Onueda of Shoshone. After many years in this country Jesus' brothers were back home to their Basque country. It was found at the Mountain Home Clinic and Hospital that Jesus had the dreaded cancer, and the pain in his left arm and left leg were the cruel cancer coming to his body. Dr. John Gamboa at his cancer center in Boise, with his modern equipment and personal touch, was able to attend to his brothers' cells. He tried with total effort and experience, but the cancer had too much of an advantage. Dr. Gamboa gave an all-out effort. Jesus died with no pain, comfortable in his sleep. He is with his mother and father, a spirit to help others. Jesus wanted to be the night herder at lambing time, soon to begin at Ancholegui's ranch. He had the experience.

Jesus is survived by his twin brother Antonio, and his wife Maribel; numerous family members, all living in Spain; a nephew in Hammett, friend, Domingo M. Aguirre, and many other friends. Shoshone Idaho. God bless Jesus.

From Jesus' loving family, the decision was made for his body to be cremated and sent to the Basque country to his brothers and sisters and their families. That union of loving people with Jesus Bilbao will be like our Christmas just past, a gift of love especially from his twin brother Antonio and wife Maribel. Cremation under the direction of Summers Funeral Homes, McMurry Chapel.

High court vacates judgment in check scheme fraud case

BOISE (AP) - The Idaho Supreme Court has ordered a closer look at a former Rexburg couple's claim against a man who convinced them to invest in what turned out to be a fraudulent check-kiting scheme led by a former congressman.

The high court, in a unanimous ruling issued Thursday, reversed 7th District Judge James Herndon's summary judgment against Ann Meyers' claim that Jack Lott was liable for money she and her late husband lost in the deal to George Hansen, a former seven-term Idaho congressman who wound up bankrupt and served prison time.

Herndon concluded there was no proof that Lott acted as a middleman for Hansen's scheme. Under the Federal Securities Act, that Idaho courts use to interpret the related state law, a middleman is someone whose role in securities sales is motivated by financial gain.

The district judge found no reason to believe Lott benefited from helping to convince James and Ann Meyers to loan Hansen $558,000 in 1990 as part of a money-making scheme that turned into a multimillion-dollar scam.

But the Supreme Court disagreed with Herndon's conclusion. The justices cited the fact that Lott sometimes received unexplained interest payments at rates more than double what he had been promised, a check with a notation that could be interpreted as indicating the money was a finder's fee and the fact that another man had received finder's fees for bringing investors into the Hansen Loan Program.

"These pieces of evidence are not dispositive, but a reasonable inference can be drawn that the excessive interest payments were disguised compensation to Lott for finding investors," Justice Gerald Schroeder wrote.

Hansen and partner John Scoresby promised to pay 10 percent per month interest on loans from more than 180 people. Investors and creditors eventually lost $16 million.

The Meyers argued that Lott's endorsement was the determining factor in their decision to get involved in the Hansen Loan Program, which was touted as having the support of former Presidents Bush and Reagan. The couple first heard about the program in the spring of 1989 when Lott discussed it on the golf course with friends.

Hansen in 1984 became the first congressman ever convicted under the Ethics in Government Act for filing false financial disclosure statements. He served two six-month stints in federal prison in 1980 and 1987.

Then in 1993 the former 2nd District congressman was convicted on 45 counts of bank fraud for the check-kiting scheme. He was sentenced to four years in federal prison but was released a year early after the U.S. Supreme Court in 1995 vacated his 1984 conviction, ruling that the Ethics in Government Act applied only to the executive branch, not members of Congress.

But Robinson questioned whether the state really knew how much the plan would cost and noted the many requirements that would come with it - such as mandated intervention programs for students who fall behind in school.

Idahoans who plan to fight existing standards have a battle on their hands. It's supported by the state education establishment and business people, including the powerful lobby the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry. But grass roots opposition appears to be in full swing. Thursday's meeting featured a mountain of literature and several cassettes denouncing the plan.

Former state representative Bob Forrey, who also worked in former Idaho Superintendent of Public Instruction Anne C. Fox's administration, told Thursday's audience he doesn't think private or home schooling families could be forced to participate in existing standards. Forrey has been an advocate for freedom of choice in schooling.

"I don't think the pressure is going to be real hot on us on this issue," he said.

Agency recommends dumping incinerator

IDAHO FALLS (AP) - The U.S. Department of Energy's Office of Inspector General has recommended shutting down a low-level radioactive waste incinerator at the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory to save money.

An audit by the internal watchdog office found the Waste Experimental Reduction Facility had not been processing as much material as it could, creating inefficiencies and costing taxpayers too much.

It called the expense to run the incinerator excessive and said the job could be done for a fraction of the price at a new commercial facility expected to open later this year.

Those fighting a new nuclear waste incinerator proposed at INEEL, which would burn nuclear weapons refuse, said the audits show Energy Department projects do not operate as smoothly as promised.

A group of citizens and environmental groups has sued the Energy Department to stop the $1.2 billion Advanced Mixed Waste Treatment Project, which would burn radioactive material tainted with other hazardous substances to remove much of that additional material. Critics fear accidents or other incidents that could poison residents and vast tracts of land.

"The thing that keeps on haunting me is that you hear these lavish predictions about how well these things are going to work... Then you go back and read their track record, and you discover some pretty startling lapses," said David Nevin, a Boise attorney representing those challenging the new incinerator.

The existing reduction facility incinerator, built in 1985, burns clothing, paper, plastic and debris contaminated with chemicals and low-level radioactivity.

It was shut down for four years to correct equipment and training problems but was restarted in 1995.

The recommendation to close the facility, which employs 64 people and had an operating budget of $8.5 million last year, was based on cost, not safety or technical problems, officials said.

zoning the area with the valley's future in mind.

County administrator Tim Hurst suggested zoning an area surrounding the city of Albion and its impact area residential-agricultural, considering the trend of second-home construction in "easily accessible" areas still removed from a person's workplace.

But just where the zoning lines will be drawn might be a difficult decision. Commercial developers who want to expand, and developers with new enterprises in mind, might let their interests guide their input. Conditional-use permits would be needed for new or expanding commerce if the area was zoned residential-agricultural.

The commission will hold a public hearing in Albion within the next few months to get input from area residents.

Noise

end of the airport.

Most pilots try to be good neighbors but that doesn't alleviate the fact that they're operating exceptionally loud machines, said Rick Baird, the airport's manager.

Resident Ralph Girton asked what was wrong with giving local authorities the right to control noise as long as it didn't impact safety. And he had a more pointed observation for an Idaho congressman and a Capitol Hill staffer at the meeting.

"We have to live with it and you guys are going to take four to five years to look at it," he said.

A General Accounting Office report, scheduled to be finished this spring, could prompt Congress to allow communities such as Hailoy and Bellevue to impose restrictions on aircraft, said Dave Schaffer, senior counsel for the House's Aviation Subcommittee.

But regulations on aircraft spark intense controversy and are not solved easily, he told a group of more than 30 residents gathered for this week's hearing. Burbank, Calif., lost its bid to impose restrictions on aircraft after a big fight in Congress. Efforts to restrict aircraft in Chicago failed no better.

Schaffer, who attended the meeting with Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Idaho, said he was surprised by the complaint. Usually complaints involving rural communities involve lack of aircraft usage.

"I was surprised when I was told the problem was noise," he said.

According to the Los Angeles Times, 655 airports are being threatened with closure due to noise problems.

Before 1990 communities were able to restrict aircraft access to their airport as they liked. But that came to an end in 1990 when Congress passed the Airport Noise and Capacity Act, which prohibited airports from restricting aircraft access. The act meant aircraft pilots were subject to the same rules at all airports.

At the same time, Congress initiated a program phasing out usage of Stage 2 aircraft over 75,000 pounds. But the program didn't address Stage 2 aircraft under 75,000 pounds.

"It was not an issue 10 years ago so they did the non-controversial thing and did nothing. It's only been in the last 1 1/2 years that people have been complaining about them," Schaffer said.

Hush kits are made for larger aircraft. But they're controversial, as well. And aircraft using hush mufflers are typically not as quiet as new Stage 3 aircraft. Baird said he's not sure how the community would regulate aircraft.

"We might just have them fly between 10 and 2 rather than restrict aircraft altogether," Platt said he felt good about the meeting.

"The more we hit the subject, the more keep reminding them there is a problem, the more we will make headway," he said. "We're not here to close the airport. We just have problem with a particular plane and we want to see if we can't regulate it."

Couple might avoid jail time in child neglect case

On Wednesday, Hall waived his preliminary hearing on charges of felony injury to children. Dannielle L. Hall waived her preliminary hearing on Dec. 17.

Kontena County prosecutors said they made an offer to the Halls that if the couple would plead guilty, they would not be object to a judge withholding judgment or not handing them jail time.

LAS VEGAS - Mitchell M. Masfield of Tooele, Utah, scaled two security barriers and jumped to his death from the observation deck of the 1,149-foot Stratosphere Tower hotel-casino late Wednesday, police said. The Vegas Metropolitan Police Lt. Wayne Petersen said the 24-year-old man had to overcome several obstacles to jump off the observation deck at the 1,100-foot level of the space-needle-shaped tower midway between the Las Vegas Strip and downtown. "You have to go over two fences to get off of that," Petersen said of the public observation area near the top of the tower. "So you really have to be fairly determined to jump off of it."

Senate leader wants to soften term limits

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - Some state lawmakers are already looking ahead to 2006, worried that they will be forced from office that year by the state's 12-year term limit law.

Most Utah lawmakers dislike the current legislative term limit statute, and the House voted to repeal it in 1998 and 1999 although the Senate refused to act on either repeal.

If the law isn't changed or repealed, 37 House members and 13 senators would end their tenure in 2006, assuming they are still in office at that time.

Senate President Lane Beattie is proposing that long-term legislators be forced from office only if there isn't enough natural turnover through death, resignation, retirement or defeat.

Beattie says he's working on the bill for the 2000 Legislature, which convenes in two weeks. He calls it one of his highest personal priorities.

But Bart Grant of Utah Term Limits says if lawmakers attempt to repeal or drastically change the current 12-year term limit law, he'll move forward with a citizen initiative petition.

After the House voted in 1999 to repeal the current term limit law - passed in the 1994 Legislature - Grant filed a citizen initiative petition with Lt. Gov. Olene Walker.

The initiative doesn't have to be refiled, Grant says he has until June to gather the 60,000-plus signatures of registered voters to get the measure on the 2000 ballot.

It wouldn't be a 12-year term limit but an eight-year limit law, he said. "We'd have plenty of support," Grant said.

Senators didn't act on the repeal last year.

"I didn't run (the repeal bill) because there weren't enough votes to pass it," Beattie said Monday. "The petition had nothing to do (with his decision). I don't even remember there was a petition."

House Speaker Marty Stephens says it is his intent not to send the Senate another repeal bill in the 2000 Legislature. House Majority Whip Dave Ure, R-Kamas, sponsor of the 1999 repeal, agrees.

"We passed it, we took all the heat for passing it, and for two years the Senate wouldn't act. So we won't be doing anything on term limits in this session," he said.

UVSC faculty senate leader faces criticism

OREM, Utah (AP) - Ron Hammond, Faculty Senate president-elect at Utah Valley State College, is under fire for questioning the ethics curriculum and faculty.

The Faculty Senate is to vote Tuesday on a requested impeachment of Hammond, an associate professor in behavioral science.

The battle began when UVSC Trustees agreed to changes in the school's mission statement to include references to ethics.

Hammond complained at the next Faculty Senate meeting that that body had been overlooked in that mission statement process.

UVSC President Kerry Romesburg, who was not present at that Senate meeting, said those changes were not finalized and will go for full review.

But Hammond's complaints sparked an emotional argument among professors about the program itself.

"Some people told me that night, 'You've talked about this program, you better watch your back,'" he said.

Hammond then asked 200 of his sociology students about the Ethics and Values course, which is required for all students except those receiving associates of applied science degrees.

Among the questions was whether students experienced anti-Mormon or anti-conservative bias from any instructors.

Two said they had.

Hammond said the discussion served to quiet his concerns about the curriculum.

Jeanille Gooch, a professor from the Philosophy and Humanities Department, sent Hammond an e-mail requesting his findings.

Hammond said his department chair recommended he send his findings to Gooch and to members of the Senate. Instead, he sent them to every member of the UVSC faculty.

At the next Senate meeting, Humanities and Philosophy Chair Sharon Staples read a letter signed by 10 members of her department, including Gooch, requesting a committee investigate "the lack of collegiality and professionalism of this type of activity."

Since then, the sparring has intensified.

Religious leaders ask LDS church to nix gay union ban

SACRAMENTO (AP) - A proposed ban on gay marriages would foster a "climate of hate and should not have the support of the Mormon Church, religious leaders said in a letter to the church.

The letter, signed by 77 pastors and rabbis, seeks a meeting with Mormon elders to discuss the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints' support for the same-sex marriage ban California voters will consider in March.

The measure "will distract religious communities from the real challenges families face," says the letter, released Wednesday.

"Second, it will foster a climate of hate towards gay and lesbian persons."

"We ask you to reflect on the period of time in this nation's history when the Mormon Church was itself a target of hate to understand the basis of our concerns," the letter states.

Proposition 22, sponsored by state Sen. Pete Knight, R-Palmdale, would bar California from recognizing same-sex marriages, including those performed in other states.

In June, the Mormon Church sent letters to 740,000 members asking them to support Proposition 22.

Coalition members said Wednesday they haven't heard from Mormon Church officials.

"In the meantime, we'll be continuing to speak out so that as many people as possible get the message," said the Very Rev. Don Brown, Dean of Trinity Episcopal Cathedral in Sacramento.

High Standards

Twin Falls singing group goes for gold Saturday on TV

By Cathy Walworth
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — You'd have thought it was the Beatles on the television last week, the way the audience was screaming. But Ed Sullivan was nowhere in sight.

Nope, it was just the PAX TV network's "Destination Stardom," which airs locally on Channel 55. And on that stage, doo-wopping and hip-hopping their hearts out and driving the audience wild was Twin Falls' own group, The Standards.

Five brothers: Jordan, Morgan, Nicholas, Nathan and Quinn. Four-time winners on the show so far.

Catch the show

"Destination Stardom" airs on HD-D-TV, Channel 55 in the Magic Valley, at 7 p.m. on Saturday. It will be repeated at 5 p.m. on Sunday. You can visit The Standards' own Web site at <http://www.thestandards.com>.

"What you will see Saturday will be their fifth show," explained their father, Spencer Williams, a Twin Falls chiropractor. "With their win last week, they accumulated enough points to go to the finals as the leading Family group."

"Destination Stardom" is a TV show run by the same people who produced "Star Search."

Amateur performers from around the country perform before a live audience as well as national television viewers, hoping for that "big break." Artists compete in categories, while 100 audience members vote on them. Each vote equals one point. Each win on the climb up the semi-finalist ladder is worth $2,000. The Standards have four wins under their belts at this point.

If they win Saturday's competition, it's worth $25,000.

"We had to spend two weeks in Hawaii to do the show," Spencer Williams explained. The show pays all expenses while filming, pays the performers a $35 per diem and feeds them supper on the set. "So they thought every day was Christmas," their dad said.

After the show runs this weekend, you'll get a chance to see The Standards perform in the Magic Valley on Jan. 15. The Buhl Arts Council is sponsoring a concert that night at 8 p.m. at the Eighth Street Center. The $10 tickets will be available at the door.

It's been a long haul for the boys since that first gig.

"They tried the engine on the van on the way to a wedding and were an hour late," the elderly Williams said. But they sang their way through birthday parties, company Christmas parties and showed up whenever they were invited. Since then, things have picked up a little.

"We were in Nashville in November. Opened six concerts for Lone Star in Montana and Boise, and as a result Lone Star invited the boys to their platinum party. They scheduled an audition with RCA while they were there," Williams said.

The boys also auditioned for the William Morris Agency while they were back east, but haven't heard yet. Right now, they're touring the north west and hoping for that big break.

Funny world: Comedies dominate Foreign Film Festival

The Times-News

Comedies from Australia, France and Scotland highlight Foreign Film Festival 2000, sponsored by the Magic Valley Arts Council and Interstate Amusement.

• "Buena Vista Social Club," Wednesday, 7:30 p.m., and again Sunday, Jan. 16, 1 p.m. at The Orpheum.

Twin Falls

Director: Wim Wenders. Cast: Luis Buzaga, Joachim Coeder, Ry Cooder, Julio Alberto Fernandez, Ibrahim Ferrer. Spanish with English subtitles. Running time: 1 hour, 41 minutes. Rated G.

What is it about a collection of rickety, crooning, bongo-tapping Cuban old-timers that makes "Buena Vista Social Club" such a delicate triumph?

Why is it that, 101 minutes after knowing nothing about these singers, guitarists, percussionists, divas and pianists, you feel as if you've just parried with family? Why are their final concerts in Amsterdam and New York's Carnegie Hall last year so touching?

On the immediate level, it's about the music. A subtly etched, rhythmic style known as son, it's sensational. German film director Wim Wenders chronicles his friend Ry Cooder's musical pilgrimage to Cuba, where the

If you go

Tickets to Foreign Film Festival 2000 are $7.50 for adults, $6 for senior citizens and $6 for children. Series passes for all five films are $32.

eclectic American guitarist went in search of a lost generation of legendary musicians to make a comeback album.

Some had passed on, but many were "very much alive." Cooder — long aware of the Cuban musical tradition — rounded them up, ushered them into recording studios, cut an album called "Buena Vista Social Club" and dispatched them on the aforementioned world tour. The album sold more than a million copies worldwide.

We meet the musicians, who, like fine wines, have aged beautifully. There's a 90-year-old Company Segundo, a guitar player and clarinetist who grew up in the mountains of Cuba. He worked the tobacco fields or cut hair by day, then played music in the local bars by night. One of the last of his generation, he has become the grandfather of the son music that infuses the movie.

There's also Ibrahim Ferrer, a.k.a. "The New King Cole of Cuba," whose soft, 70-year-old voice will slay anyone with an appreciation of fine music. He does a duet with 60-something diva Omara Portuondo (herself known as "the Queen of Cuba) that will bring thumps to your chest.

Sexiness and musical harmony never enjoyed vintage like this. The musicians are too numerous to list here. But they include 80-year-old Ruben Gonzalez, an outstanding pianist with a silky touch who abandoned medical studies in the 1940s to become a full-time musician in Havana, and 66-year-old trumpeter Manuel "Guajiro" Mirabel Vazquez, who has played with the greats since the 1950s.

All have stories to tell; all live profoundly inside their music. And anecdote by anecdote, vicarious encounter by encounter, you can feel the pulsations beating in old chests.

The film, essentially a videography, which was shot on Sony DigiBeta and Steadicam, belongs as much to Wenders as Cooder. The symbiosis between them — one seeking the heart of the music, the other getting to the heart of the heart of music — is stunning. (Desson Howe, Washington Post)

• "The Castle," Jan. 19 at 7:30 p.m. and Jan. 23 at 1 p.m., The Orpheum, Twin Falls.

Director: Rob Sitch. Cast: Michael Caton, Anne Tenney, Stephen Curry, Anthony Simcoe, Sophie Lee. English. Running time: 1 hour, 22 minutes. Rated R.

Despite half-baked nods to Monty Python, Rowan Atkinson, the lower-class half of "Keeping Up Appearances" — and its oh-so-cutesy use of narration — Jay Ward's "Fractured Fairy Tales" "The Castle" has the ultra-slow pace, ultra-thick characters and ultra-slim plot of a PBS sitcom pilot. Hardly worth a night at the movies.

And yet . . . If a man like Daryl Kerrigan of Coolaroo, Australia, is thankful to the point of tears that he has a pool room for his trophies, who are we to point out that his trophies are junk, his pool table dits and his house is a novel hard by the runway of Melbourne's airport with a toxic waste-filled backyard and an unfinished addition that even duct tape couldn't heal?

If a man like Daryl Kerrigan is happy with his lot in life, who are we to suggest that he take the money and run when the mega-conglomerate airport company condemns his house and tells him to move?

Yes, it's a little guy versus big guy movie. You know the story. You know the outcome. You know you have to root for the little guy.

The Kerrigans, on the other hand, don't know much. Mum's a home-decorating maniac who can't leave a surface unfringed or unfurled, badly. Son Wayne is in jail for theft. Son Steve fills the house with items bought through the newspaper — overhead projector, anyone? Son Dale serves as the narrator and keeper of the family's umbrella smile, though Kerrigan is usually immaculately repeated as dialogue. Daughter Tracey, a certified hairdresser who marries a kick-boxer, is the only Kerrigan who has actually made use of the airport.

As Daryl, Aussie sitcom vet Michael Caton presides over his Love Boat ship of fools with such genuineness, such certainty that his is a world without end, you have no option but to say amen. His cup overflows with praise for the smallest accomplishment, finding pleasure in meatloaf, pride in an overhead power line and giving encouragement to the hapless lawyer who defended his son into prison to take his case to the highest court on the continent.

Like a solemnly presented, "Home Sweet Home" sampler sewn for Father's Day in second-grade art class, "The Castle" is charming and, yes, uplifting. A man's house is a commodity easily bought and sold; his home is something to which no one else can set a price. (Bob Heister, Los Angeles Times)

• "The Dinner Game," Jan. 26, 7:30 p.m., and Jan. 30, 1 p.m., The Orpheum, Twin Falls.

Director: Francis Veber. Cast: Thierry Lhermitte, Jacques Villeret. French with English subtitles. Running time: 1 hour, 22 minutes. Please see FESTIVAL, Page C8

Show features Western art

TWIN FALLS — Three artists, Three styles, Three different views of the American West in one new art show in the Jean B. King Gallery at the Herrett Center for Arts and Science on the College of Southern Idaho campus.

The show, called "Last Glow," features the works of Tom Howard of Kearns, Utah, Pamela Swenson of King Hill and Wojciech Wozniak of Salt Lake City. It's on display through Jan. 22.

The title of the show applies particularly well to Swenson's works. Several of her watercolor paintings of Western scenes highlight sky colors at sunset. She also captures the essence of Idaho high desert terrain with its rocky outcroppings overshadowing grass and sage covered hills.

The setting for Howard's paintings is unmistakably Northern Utah, especially the area around Tremonton and Snowflake. Residents of that area, and Interstate travelers who've memorized the bordering landscape, will recognize the shapes of the hills in the background, the fields of golden grain in the foreground, and even the birth of summer storms in some of his pictures.

Blair Witch to haunt again theaters with sequel

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The witch is back, or will be this fall. Producers are scouting locations for a sequel to the low-budget blockbuster "Blair Witch Project" to be released in October. A prequel telling the witch's early history will follow in summer 2001.

Artisan Entertainment, which bought "Blair Witch" and the sequel rights for a modest $1 million at last year's Sundance film festival, hopes to rekindle the magic that made the first film a $140 million smash.

"I think it was the best million dollars anybody ever spent, even when you see all the numbers in the 'dot com' world," Amir Malin, Artisan president, said Thursday.

"I don't think you've ever seen a movie return, as opposed to paper returns, like 'Blair Witch.'"

The original "Blair Witch" was one of the most profitable movies ever. Directors Daniel Myrick and Eduardo Sanchez and their camera crew Haxan Films shot the film for about $60,000, with no artisan kicking in about $260,000 more in post-production costs, Malin said.

The sequel and prequel each will have budgets of about $7 million to $10 million, still small by Hollywood standards.

Actor Joshua Leonard shoots the harrowing five-day journey through the Black Hills forest in "The Blair Witch Project." Artisan Entertainment and Haxan Films plan a sequel to the film, which became one of Hollywood's most profitable, costing less than $100,000 and grossing more than $140 million.

"Blair Witch 2" is scheduled to begin shooting in early February and will be directed by documentary filmmaker Joe Berlinger, whose movies include the acclaimed "Brother's Keeper," about a simple-minded rural man accused of killing his brother. Much of the sequel will likely be shot in the Maryland woods where the original movie took place, Malin said.

Despite Berlinger's background, "Blair Witch 2" will not necessarily follow the documentary pattern of the first movie, Malin said. The first movie was told through footage supposedly shot by three fictional filmmakers who disappeared in the woods while making a documentary about a legendary witch.

The film's inventive marketing on the Internet had some moviegoers convinced the story of the witch and the vanished filmmakers was real.

Artisan is keeping the plots and other details about the following films under wraps, including whether the three characters from the original, played by Heather Donahue, Joshua Leonard and Michael Williams, will return.

Myrick, Sanchez and their partners with Haxan will be executive producers on "Blair Witch 2" but are not directing the movie because they are working on another film, Malin said.

Haxan's partner, Jeremy Walker, said the filmmakers were unavailable for comment.

Malin said the Haxan team will return to write and direct "Blair Witch 3," which will span episodes in the witch's history from the 18th century through the 1990s, leading up to the disappearance of the three filmmakers.

"We're just hoping we find these three kids," Malin said. "Police have yet to find the bodies."

in a recent interview, and with each call, Carter talks loudly into the receiver about a hectic schedule of interviews, film screenings and an upcoming appearance at the United Nations.

No one is more surprised about all the hoopla than the still muscular 62-year-old.

"I am absolutely flabbergasted that my life has been so full, you know, of all sorts of things," Carter says in his deliberate, strongly inflected style. "And yet this is not the ending. This is just the beginning... Man, my life is miraculous. My life is wonderful. I am healthy. I am awake. What more could one want? I am perfect."

Those who know him say such language reflects Carter's intensity more so than any total fulfillment.

"The Hurricane" to us is energy and power," says Chilton, co-author of "Lazarus and The Hurricane."

Hurricane Carter still fights in film, books, life

TORONTO (AP) — Rubin "Hurricane" Carter deals with life like he does in the 1960s: fists up, coming at you, "no dancing, no shuffling, no living."

That stormy style inspired the nickname synonymous with the man. And his swarming, straightforward approach has been the lone constant in six decades of contrasts so striking that his survival seems remarkable, his triumph impossible.

A juvenile delinquent turned prizefighter who beat a world champion, Carter was wrongfully convicted of three murders in 1966 and spent 19 years in prison. Drawing on a burning intensity fueled by anger, he overcame poor odds and a racist and racist criminal justice system to clear his name and gain his freedom in 1985.

Bob Dylan wrote a ballad about "The Hurricane," and Max Baucus introduced his case. And now Norman Jewison

"In the Heat of the Night," "Moonstruck," "The Thomas Crown Affair" has told Carter's shattering story in a new movie, "The Hurricane," starring Denzel Washington as the boxer.

The movie, though, has produced a heated debate over liberties the filmmakers took with facts. Among the issues is the film's suggestion that members of a Canadian commune were solely responsible for overturning Carter's conviction by discovering so-called suppressed evidence, which downplays the role of Carter's lawyers.

The movie also has been criticized for creating a fictitious Jewlike corrupt and racist cop who denies Carter's innocence and arrest and conviction. In reality, Carter was the victim of a widespread racist campaign that reached throughout the criminal justice system of Patterson, N.J. And the film ignores Carter's defendant, John Artis as well as Carter's conviction for three muggings.

"The lawyers don't get the credit due," says Sam Houston, one of the Canadians who helped with Carter's case. "Rubin would not be free if not for the work of the lawyers."

Leon Friedman, a Hofstra University professor retained by Carter's defense team, said he understood that the film "emphasizes a different part of the story."

"I can sit around in a room and write and look things up and books," Friedman says. "It's hard to make that dramatic."

At the same time, a new biography has hit bookstores and a 1991 account of his two-decade legal odyssey has been republished to coincide with the film's release.

The telephone at the Victorian house in Toronto where Carter lives and runs his Association in Defeat due to "Wrongly Convicted" rang constantly during

Album sales decline in country music industry

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Despite a booming year for the record industry, sales of country music declined 4.5 percent in 1999.

Country music, while still the most popular radio format, sold 69.3 million albums last year, according to SoundScan, a Hartsdale, N.Y., company that tracks music sales. It released the figures Wednesday.

The most successful country album was Shania Twain's "Come Over," which sold 5.6 million.

Industry officials said country is no longer the fad of the moment, as it was in the 1980s when Garth Brooks became a superstar.

Also, they said consolidation of the radio industry has led to tighter playlists as conglomerates put pressure on stations to be more profitable. That makes it harder to develop new stars and cultivate record buyers.

Another reason given for the drop is that many traditional country music fans have become bored by the influence of pop on country.

"What we're doing is we're giving away the music to other formats and we're frustrating the fans of our own format," said Evelyn Shriver, president of the country division of Asylum Records.

The record industry overall lost $6.8 billion in 1999, up 61 percent. But among country performers, only Ms. Twain and the Dixie Chicks (with 3.5 million sales of "Wide Open Spaces") made the year's list of top 10 sellers.

The country industry is reliant on a select group of superstars, Brooks, the Dixie Chicks and Faith Hill each have two of the 10 best-selling country albums of the year. And nine of the top 10 were released in 1998.

"Trying to add some artists to that mix and create diversity is a priority for us this year," said Ed Benson of the Country Music Association, a trade organization that promotes country music.

Brooks, 37, the biggest-selling artist in country music history, has indicated he may retire at the end of 2000 to spend more time with his three young daughters. That could be a big blow to the Nashville.

The answer, industry leaders agreed, is developing new stars.

Nashville has survived such trends before. The industry rebounded from a decline in the mid-1980s to reach unprecedented heights. Even now, far more country albums are being sold than a decade ago.

Paul Thomas Anderson jumbles nine stories in 'Magnolia'

Los Angeles Times

Movies playing in south-central Idaho this weekend. Opinions are by Los Angeles Times reviewers. Ratings by the Motion Picture Association of America are: (G) for general audiences; (PG) parental guidance urged because of material possibly unsuitable for children; (PG-13) parents are strongly cautioned to give guidance for attendance of children younger than 13; (R) restricted, younger than 17 admitted only with parent or adult guardian; (NC-17) no one younger than 17 admitted.

• "Anna and the King" - The love that dared not speak its name between an English school teacher (Jodie Foster) and the King of Siam (Chow Yun-Fat) is done without songs this time around. The handsomely mounted recreation of 1862 Bangkok is more involving than a story that attempts to be a film for everybody but ends up as something for nobody in particular. (2.28, PG-13 for some intense violent sequences.)

• "Any Given Sunday" - An energetic and diverting Oliver Stone-directed soap opera about professional football that makes a few head-fakes in the direction of an iconoclastic version of the sport but at the end of the day comes out squarely for, hold onto your hats, teamwork and unselfish behavior. Dennis Quaid, Jamie Foxx, Al Pacino and Cameron Diaz stand out. R for strong language and some nudity/sexuality.)

• "Being John Malkovich" - A clever and outrageous piece of whimsical fantasy about how the director of a passage of time of the actor's brain changes the lives of a puppeteer (John Cusack), his wife (Cameron Diaz) and a sexy coworker (Catherine Keener). Directed by Spike Jonze. (1.52, R for language and sexuality.)

• "Bicentennial Man" - Robin Williams and Chris Columbus - who directed Williams in "Mrs. Doubtfire" - do a masterful job of imagining what a gradual transformation into a man. But despite Williams' touching performance, this romantic sci-fi fable offers such a glossy nougat of Cameron Diaz and R. Williams' character Andrew as the ultimate inflatable boy toy in a shiny, materialistic fantasy world. With Sam Neill, Oliver Platt and the excellent Gimbal David. (2.13, PG-13 for language and some sexual content.)

• "The Cider House Rules" - Lasse Hallstrom's superb film of the acclaimed John Irving novel stars Tobey Maguire as an orphan who has stayed on at a vast old-New England orphanage to become the assistant of its director, a dedicated and idiosyncratic physician (Michael Caine) but longs to discover the outside world for himself. This rich, absorbing contemplation of life's eternal interplay of choice and fate is superior in all aspects, starting with dazzling cinematography whose co-stars are Charlize Theron, Delroy Lindo, Paul Rudd and Erykah Badu. (2.04, PG-13 for mature thematic elements, sexuality, nudity, substance abuse and some violence.)

Remember a long-haired Tom Cruise from 1994's 'Interview With a Vampire'? He's back with a similar look in 'Magnolia'.

• "Deuce Bigelow: Male Gigolo" - Rob Schneider is the latest "Saturday Night Live" veteran to get a "doofus feature" of his very own. He plays a softhearted, soft-headed fish-tank cleaner forced to become what some would call a "professional escort" and others, well, anyway, the movie is about what you'd expect. With Eddie Griffin and William Forsythe. (1.25, R for sexual content, language and crude humor.)

• "Dogma" - It doesn't take long for Kevin Smith's irreverent comedy about a lapsed Catholic (Linda Fiorentino) to become irrelevant. Matt Damon and Ben Affleck are fallen angels on a mission to prove God (Alanis Morissette) fallible, thereby hastening the Apocalypse. With Chris Rock and Salma Hayek. R (profanity, irreverence, violence.)

• "Galaxy Quest" - A nifty spoof of Star Trekkers and their rabid fans cleverly imagines some-actual-alien whisking off the stars of a long-defunct TV space adventure series to save their planet from a dreaded monster - not comprehending that these people are actors and their shows pure make-believe. Now Tim Allen, Sigourney Weaver and Alan Rickman must become heroes for real. The result is a lively-and-amusing-comedy action-adventure of wide appeal. Directed by Harold Ramis. (1.46, PG for some action violence, mild language and sensuality.)

• "The Green Mile" - Though its Stephen King story is a good one, this Frank Darabont written and directed version is hampered by excessive length, the suffocating deliberateness of its pace, and some truly stomach-turning moments. Even Tom Hanks' usual compelling performance as the head guard on Death Row in a 1935 Louisiana prison can't overcome that. (3.08, R for violence, language and some sex-related material.)

• "Magnolia" - The new film by Paul Thomas Anderson ("Boogie Nights") is drunk and disorderly on the pure joy of making movies. A frantic, flawed, fascinating look at 24 hours in the life of nine characters in today's San Fernando Valley, is the kind of intriguing jumble only a truly gifted filmmaker can make. And look for Tom Cruise in a picture-stealing role as a male supremacist with a vengeance. The rest of the ensemble includes: Jason Roberts, Philip Baker Hall, Philip Seymour Hoffman, William H. Macy, Julianne Moore and John C. Reilly. (3.08, R for strong language, drug use, sexuality and some violence.)

• "Man on the Moon" - Jim Carrey does a brilliant, almost terrifying job impersonating edgy comic Andy Kaufman, but even director Milos Forman can't make this film's hostile, manipulative subject into someone we care about. Danny DeVito, Paul Giamatti and Courtney Love-co-star. (1.58, R for language and brief sexuality/nudity.)

• "The Straight Story" - Eerie thriller about an 8-year-old (phenomenal Haley Joel Osment) tormented by ghosts and schoolmates. Bruce Willis is the psychologist exploring the mystery in this affecting film written and directed by M. Night Shyamalan. PG-13 (discreet violence, horror, too intense for those under 12)

• "Sleepy Hollow" - An exquisitely mounted retelling of the Washington Irving short story

(with Johnny Depp as Ichabod Crane and Christina Ricci as Katrina Van Tassel) created to the exact specifications of the bizarre-meister Tim Burton. How pleased others will be depends on their tolerance for the ghoulish and the grotesque. Miranda Richardson, Michael Gambon and Casper Van Dien star. (1.40, R for graphic horror violence and gore, and for a scene of sexuality.)

• "The Straight Story" - David Lynch's homespun, heart-warming true-life tale of a cranky old geezer (Richard Farnsworth, perfectly cast and perfectly delivered) who drives a riding lawn mower hundreds of miles to revisit his ailing, estranged brother. The film is a beautiful, appropriately topline little gem about growing old and daring to take risks and follow your heart. That sounds corny, and it is, but in the best ways. G (mild cussing, war stories, runaway riding mower)

• "Stuart Little" - The shy and pleasurable mouse of E. White's famous children's book has been turned into a rodent whose ready line of patter would make him at home on the Tonight Show. The computer animation is excellent, but though the film won't harm tiny viewers, there's nothing very involving about it either. Stuart is voiced by Michael J. Fox. (1.32, PG for brief language.)

• "The Talented Mr. Ripley" - This Anthony Minghella-directed version of the Patricia Highsmith novel about an amoral wannabe (Matt Damon) who worms his way into the good graces of clueless American expatriates (Jude Law and Gwyneth Paltrow) in 1950s Europe is unexpectedly lacking in emotional impact. It's a wonderfully accomplished work that is unconvincing at its core. (2.2, R for violence, language and brief nudity.)

• "Toy Story 2" - Behind an inevitable title is a pleasingly clever and fendishly inventive sequel to the original "Toy Story," a lively and good

Oscar contenders, long movies abound right now

New York Daily News

Here's a tip for filmgoers: Superize those popcorn tubs and make sure you visit the bathroom-before-the-movie begins.

That's because more than a dozen current and upcoming releases have running times over two hours - some are more than three - which can turn a trip to the multiplex into a butt-numbing marathon for audiences used to shorter films.

The reason movies seem longer now that days are getting shorter is easily explained, says box-office expert Paul Dergarabedian - "It's the season for quality movies that traditionally run longer than your average mindless summer fare."

"Films are typically longer this time of year because a lot of them are Oscar contenders with critical appeal," says Dergarabedian, president of box office-tracking firm Exhibitor Relations. "And the longer a film is tends to make it seem like more of an epic."

Tom Hanks plays opposite David Morse in 'The Green Mile,' a three-hour epic film.

Two movies already generating Oscar buzz also happen to be the season's lengthiest. "The Green Mile," a prison drama starring Tom Hanks as a Death Row guard, is 3 hours and 9 minutes long. Right behind is "Magnolia," a Southern California-set ensemble piece from "Boogie Nights" director Paul Thomas Anderson that checks in at 3 hours, 8 minutes.

Moviefogers are also in for a lo-o-o-ng haul this month with several films around 2-1/2 hours, including the upcoming "Any Given Sunday" (2 hours, 26 minutes), "The Hurricane" (also 2:26) and "The Talented Mr. Ripley" (2:19).

Longer running time, however, doesn't necessarily determine a bigger box office. A recent Exhibitor Relations survey of 40 films, released between 1983 and 1998 and at least 2 hours and 20 minutes long, found that these movies averaged a mediocre domestic gross of $60 million - and that's with "Titanic's" $600 million take skewing the results.

A longer-than-usual film usually means less screenings per day, which cuts into the box-office take. On the other hand, says Dergarabedian, "A great movie gets people into theaters for a high per-seat average, and that's a positive thing."

The three hours-plus of "The Green Mile" hasn't scared people away from theaters so far. It grossed $18 million its opening weekend, a close second to "Toy Story 2's" $18.2 million.

So, sometimes size - or in this case, length - does matter, says Dergarabedian. "That any film can sustain itself for three hours says a lot about the film making," he says. "It's hard enough to make a good hour-and-a-half movie."

"Besides, a good movie can never really be too long, but a bad movie is always too long."

'Thomas Crown Affair' reaches local video stores this week

Knight Ridder News Service

New videos in Twin Falls-area stores this week:

"The Thomas Crown Affair" — John McTiernan's remake of "The Thomas Crown Affair" is a film for grown-ups — a sexy, gunplay-free fantasy that doesn't insult our intelligence — even when it's patently silly. Nice trick, that.

In its overall conception this new "Thomas Crown" follows the basic outline of the Steve McQueen/Faye Dunaway original. Multimillionaire business magnate Thomas Crown (played now by Pierce Brosnan, the current James Bond) likes to stage high-stakes burglaries as a hobby. Evidently he needs the thrills; he doesn't need the money. After one such caper he's targeted by insurance company investigator Catherine Banning (Rene Russo), who is every bit his equal in the style, smarts and determination departments.

Obviously they're made for each other. Whether this effort will appeal to any given moviegoer may depend on the esteem in which the original "Thomas Crown" is held. Worshipers of the earlier movie probably should steer clear. Those unfamiliar with or largely unimpressed by the 1968 version (plenty of star power offset by cheesy split-screen effects once considered trendy) should have a fine old time.

Speaking of star power — both leads are at their charismatic best here, engaging in a witty game of cat and mouse. Even as their intellects square off for a climactic battle, their glands are shifting into overdrive.

Brosnan is one of those actors who apparently was born to wear tailored clothes, sip fine wines and appreciate the high life, all the while exuding an aura of danger and daring (all quintessential elements, of course, of the Bond persona). He adds just the right touch of arrogance to his Thomas Crown. You're eager to see what he'll do next, but he's just cockily seeing him shot down.

The real revelation here is Russo, who for the most part has found herself relegated to the love interest in action flicks but has shown in efforts like "Get Shorty" that she can, indeed, act. Curiously though, she hasn't generated much buzz on the screen. It's almost as if the former model has been afraid to let her looks and sex appeal take the upper hand.

But in "The Thomas Crown Affair" the wraps are off, figuratively and literally. The tension between Russo's and Brosnan's characters is ratcheted up to the breaking point.

What's great about this performance is that Russo's Catherine is both seductress and seducer: After a night of passion in Crown's art-happy Upper East Side home, including a sexual encounter on a marble staircase that would break anyone else's backs, Catherine looks up from the bed at her new lover and with a hint of a smile tells him that she "won't back off, you know. Not for a minute."

Pierce Brosnan is closer to James Bond than Steve McQueen in the remake of 'The Thomas Crown Affair.'

Sex or no sex, she's going to nail this guy. Acting suds are also due Denis Leary, affecting as a worldly-weary police detective who quietly nurses his own jones for Catherine, knowing he could never compete with a powerbroker like Crown.

The screenplay by Leslie Dixon and Kurt Wimmer alternates nifty character-based confrontations with sensuous millionaire re-creations like glider flights and vacations at remote Caribbean retreats. Meanwhile it sets up a dilemma — how could Catherine end up with a guy we know is a crook? — and then finds some sly ways of reconciling the situation.

But director McTiernan — best known for hard-core action flicks like "Die Hard" and "Predator" — exhibits a quiet sophistication that's just what the material requires.

Faye Dunaway plays Crown's shrink in a bit of novelty casting the film could have done without. On the plus side, the movie recycles the Oscar-winning song "The Windmills of Your Mind" from the original film, recasting it inf some highly effective jazz arrangements.

"Better Than Chocolate" — A budding love affair between free spirit Kim (Christina Cox) and bookstore assistant Maggie (Karyn Dwyer) is put on hold when Maggie's neurotic mother (Wendy Crewson) and brother (Kevin Mundy) come to stay in her warehouse loft. The aspiring lovebirds have to pretend to be "just friends" while Mother (who doesn't know about her daughter's sexual proclivities) reverts to controlling Maggie all over again. As a movie about lesbian lifestyles, this is a pleasurable and positive experience for its core audience. But the cheerleading agenda can't completely disguise a mildly effective sex farce. Contains sex scenes, obscenity and some violence.

"No Tomorrow" — Master P, Gary Busey, Pam Grier, Jeff Fahey, Gary Daniels, Rap Impresario Master P also directed this action tale about a notorious criminal who joins forces with a shipping company employee to execute a multimillion-dollar arms transaction. DVD available.

"Goldrush: A Real Alaskan Adventure" — Alyssa Milano is a pioneering gold miner and Bruce Campbell is the slick leader of a mining expedition in this turn-of-the-century story from Disney.

"Zack & Reba" — Debbie Reynolds plays matchmaker between a widower (Sean Patrick Flanery) and a traumatized would-be bride (Brittany Murphy) in this black comedy. Kathy Najimy, Michael Jeter and Martin Mull are also in the cast.

"Vampire Vignettes" — Six "millennium-ready" stories about contemporary vampirism, directed by Paul Kopp and released by Sub Rosa Studios.

"Storm Catcher" — Dolph Lundgren and director Anthony Hickox collaborated on this R-rated action film about an Air Force pilot convicted of treason for the theft of a military aircraft. The DVD includes a commentary by Hickox.

"Safety Patrol" — Bug Hall plays an 11-year-old safety fanatic and Leslie Nielsen is the school's bumbling head of security in this comedy from Disney.

"Running Red" — R-rated action film starring Jeff Speakman as an ex-Soviet who thinks he's established a new life with his family in the United States. Then a former superior turns up with unpleasant news.

"From Dusk Till Dawn 3: The Hangman's Daughter" — Another sequel to Quentin Tarantino's 1996 vampire movie, starring Michael Parks as the writer Ambrose Bierce (previously played by Gregory Peck in "Old Gringo"), whose 1914 disappearance in Mexico is explained.

"The Substitute 3: Winner Takes All" — Treat Williams plays an undercover teacher, this time investigating drugs and blackmail on a college football team, in the latest sequel to the 1996 Tom Berenger movie.

Publicist denies 'cat fight'

Knight Ridder News Service

Madonna's spokeswoman has put the lie to a report that her client and Catherine Zeta-Jones snubbed Jennifer Lopez at a New Year's Eve dinner party for 75 in Donatella Versace's Miami Beach mansion.

The story goes that when Lopez and her manager arrived an hour late, Madonna announced "Dinner's over now," and led a munchers' parade from the table. The reason was supposed to be Lopez's diss of Madonna's and Falton's show biz gifts in a Movie-line mag Interview two years ago.

Madonna publicist Liz Rosenberg called the tale "highly fabricated," adding: "There was no cat fight at the Versace mansion; Madonna has absolutely nothing against Jennifer. They were both at the party but there was no negative exchange between them, not at all." Meanwhile, Puff Daddy's protegee Shyne Barrow, 19, has been indicted in that Manhattan nightclub shooting last week involving Daddy and Lopez.

Douglas to marry Zeta-Jones

NEW YORK (AP) — Apparently, the attraction wasn't fatal.

Michael Douglas and Catherine Zeta-Jones are getting married. Douglas, 55, proposed to the 30-year-old Welsh actress on New Year's Eve at his home in Aspen, Colo.

"While no date has been set, they plan to wed later this year. He's now given her a ring," said Allen Barry, Douglas' publicist. Added Todd Adair, who represents Ms. Zeta-Jones: "She's ecstatic, thrilled and very, very happy."

The couple at the Deauville Film Festival in France in August 1998 and have been dating since last March.

In December, the actress, who has starred in "The Man of Zorro," "The Haunting" and "Entrapment," said she was in no hurry to marry the star of "Fatal Attraction" and "Basic Instinct." Douglas separated from his wife of 22 years, Diandra, in 1997.

DVD gains foothold in market

The Orange County Register

What an incredible year 1999 has been for DVD.

Video-industry insiders estimate that there are now some 4 million players in homes in the United States. And some are predicting that by the end of 2000 that number will increase to 10 million.

There appears to be an insatiable appetite for movies on DVD. According to VideoScan, a firm that tracks disc sales, about 6.9 million discs were sold in 1998.

Figures for 1999 aren't in, but during the week of Dec. 6-12, VideoScan reports that 955,000 discs were sold, a record for one week. Year-to-date figures through Dec. 12 were 18.3 million discs sold, and I won't be surprised if the total for the year winds up around 20 million discs sold.

What this means for you is that more and more titles will become available. Right now there are about 5,000 titles on disc. That figure should more than double in the next couple of years.

FAMILY LIFE

Man who helped Marines was more than elderly gentleman

"Out of difficulties grow miracles."
—Jean De La Bruyere

By Roger Glivens

Sometimes the greatest gifts come out of nowhere. In this story by Roger Glivens, four Marines returning home for the holidays get a little help from a gray-haired stranger.

It was Dec. 4, 1945 — just three years to the day since I was sworn into the Marine Corps. This was the day I had been dreaming after nearly two years overseas. It seemed that our lumbering, giant troop-transport was barely moving as it plowed slowly through the Pacific toward the California coast. I could not believe that I was finally going home. More than 1,000 battle-weary and maimed Marines lined the railings of the giant ship — waiting to catch a glimpse of the land that many of them had not seen in three or four years. The anticipation and anxiety of seeing our loved ones again was unimaginable. My thoughts drifted back to those glorious months my wife, Eva, and I had shared before we said goodbye at the railroad station in Boston. We had been married just eight months earlier, and we knew it would only be a matter of weeks or months before I would be sent to the South Pacific — not knowing whether I would ever return. However, we never discussed that we considered every day we were together a blessing from God and enjoyed each day to the fullest. We took evening strolls along the Charles River and lay on the grassy banks, watching the water gently flow past us on its way to the Atlantic. We took walks through the Boston Commons, and, on weekends, we held hands as we strolled barefoot along the sandy beaches of Old Cape Cod. When the leaves turned from green to red and gold, after the first frost in the autumn of 1943, a 72-hour pass was like a little piece of heaven. We romped and played, like a couple of kids, in the newly fallen leaves of the maples and aspens in the beautiful White Mountains of New Hampshire.

It was the memories of those eight months and "a little piece of heaven" that enabled us to endure the next two years of hell. As the troop-laden train had pulled away from the station in Boston on its way to San Diego, I pressed my face tightly against the window to catch a final glimpse of the beautiful lady who I would see only in my dreams for the next two years. Her farewell smile and "so long, Marine," was to be the greatest example of bravery and courage that I would ever witness. Her roommate, whose husband left with me, later informed me that my wife cried herself to sleep that night — and many nights later, each time the news reported the heavy casualties suffered by the Marines as we landed and took back the Pacific Islands, one by one, on our way to Japan.

Then we saw it — the shores of the greatest country on earth. As the Southern California coast loomed larger, no effort was made to contain the happiness and joy expressed by the 1,000-plus celebrating Marines. My first act after disembarking was to phone Eva. The phones, on both ends of the line, were undoubtedly drenched in tears of joy before we finished talking two years later.

After my quarantine, I was handed a 30-day furlough/transfer, with orders to report to a Marine Corps base in Bainbridge, Md., the following Jan. 18. I immediately went to the railroad station to purchase a ticket to Syracuse, N.Y., where Eva was living with her sister. I was told there would not be a seat available until after Christmas — the same story at the airport and the Greyhound bus station. I hitchhiked to Los Angeles and was told the same thing at the train station, airport and bus station there.

Easily locating three other veterans whose homes were in the Northeast and who were having the same problem as I was, we decided to take a taxi to Chicago.

With the four of us alternating driving (the taxi driver did not drive), we arrived in Chicago about noon on Dec. 21. Not realizing that there were two railroad stations in Chicago, I exited from the taxi at the LaSalle Station. Upon entering the station, I was informed that trains for Syracuse left from Central Station.

After leaving the station and going to the curb to hail a cab, a large, black limousine pulled up in front of me, and a neatly dressed, elderly, gray-haired gentleman opened the door, and politely said, "Please get in." When I hesitated, he asked me where I was going. When I told him Central Station, he said, "That's where I'm going," and he instructed his chauffeur to take us there.

When we arrived at Central Station in Chicago, the gray-haired gentleman accompanied me into the station. He said that perhaps he could help me, and he instructed me to wait at an empty gate next to a huge crowd that was waiting to board the train I was hoping to take to Syracuse.

A few minutes later, the gatekeeper opened that gate and motioned me to board the train, ahead of the crowd that was waiting at the next gate. When I told him I had no ticket and was waiting for the gentleman, he informed me that my fare was "taken care of."

I looked in vain for him, but he had disappeared. It was then I realized that he was more than an elderly, gray-haired gentleman.

Stranger danger still threatens children

The Orlando Sentinel

A recent spate of sexual attacks on children shopping with parents in stores in the Orlando area has chipped away at one of the rock-solid assumptions held by most shoppers.

Although people are on guard to the evil that may lurk in the parking lot, most shoppers presume that once they step inside a store they're safe.

However, these incidents have thrown a harsh light on a stark truth: There is only so much that stores can do to ensure your safety.

"You ought to be able to go in the store and do your shopping while your 11-year-old child can go look in the toy department," says Seminole County, Fla., Chief Deputy Steve Harriet. "But it's not realistic to say that each store is responsible to supervise every child that goes in."

The reality is that parents ultimately are responsible for protecting their children. In the home, children need to be educated about their parents' expectations concerning shopping excursions and about stranger danger — without scaring the bejabbers out of them. In stores, small children need to be watched.

Sexual attacks aren't the only things to fear. Most abductions by strangers happen in public places. The National Center for Missing and Exploited Children estimates that strangers abduct approximately 4,500 children each year. Estimates place the number of attempted abductions at about 125,000 each year.

"Streets, parking lots, malls — anything outside the confines of the baby-proofed home represents potential danger," writes Ric Bents in his book Street Smarts for Kids: What Parents Must Know to Keep Their Children Safe (Fawcett Books $10.95). "Your child should develop a sense of danger but not an attitude of fear."

Here are some strategies for helping your child to do that: —Talk to your child about strangers. Respect your elders. It is a phrase that most parents hammer into their children's heads and a phrase that strangers use to their advantage, says Carol Sorret Cope in her book, Stranger Danger: How to Keep Your Child Safe (Andrews and McMeel, $7.95). "Whatever your child's age, reinforcing the adage 'don't talk to strangers' is a good place to start. So is teaching your children not to accept candy or other goodies and never going anywhere with someone they do not know without Mom or Dad's permission.

Parents should role-play with their children, testing them with "what if?" questions, says Leisa Bishop, director of neighborhood services for Beta Parenting Center in Orlando, Fla. "You have to prepare children. These people are pretty slick, and they know the things that get kids away from their parents, whether it's 'Can you help me find my puppy dog?' or 'Can you help me pick out a toy?'" she says.

WEEKEND Festival

utes. Rated PG-13.

Pierre Brochant (the slickly handsome Thierry Lhermitte) is a prosperous publisher who lives the good life in Paris. You can tell he's cool: His clothes fit, and many of them are black.

He and some other extremely accomplished men have a nasty little game they play on the lesser of the breed: They like to sponsor a dinner party to which each brings a male guest.

What the guests don't know is that they have been chosen on the basis of their lameness, their pathos, their delusions, the totality of their nerdiness. They are the human comedy writ large, with a scrotum and sweat glands and bad clothes.

On this day, Pierre chooses especially well. He picks Francis Pignon (Jacques Villeret), who is piglike, small, hangdog, deluded, lonely and, best of all, has possibly the dumbest hobby in Western Europe: He makes matchstick models. How delicious! How droll! How amusing!

How inferior!
Writer-director Francis Veber has worked this line before — the contrast between, and the uti-mate commonality of, the strong, dynamic man and the weak, repressed man — possibly most effectively in "Les Comperes" with Gerard Depardieu and Pierre Richard, which was remade famously by Americans as "Father's Day" with Billy Crystal and Robin Williams. But if it's familiar, it's still effective, particularly with farce mechanic Weber orchestrating the escalating chaos.

And the movie is blessedly short. At 82 minutes, Weber doesn't let anything run on; he keeps people moving in and out of doors like bouncing balls, the plot flying along, the ironic epiphanies mounting up.

It's a small jewel of precision. (Stephen Hunter, Washington Post)

• "My Life So Far," Feb. 2, 7:30 p.m., and Feb. 6, 1 p.m., The Orpheum, Twin Falls.

Director: Hugh Hudson. Cast: Colin Firth, Robert Norman, Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio.

English. Running time: 1 hour, 33 minutes. Rated PG-13.

If you wanted to oversimplify things a bit, you could file cinematic imports from the British Isles into two categories: working-class stories told in accents so impenetrable that you wish for subtitles, and winsome but unchallenging tales that are as accessible as their perfect diction.

"My Life So Far," a well-acted, Scottish-set little movie that's ultimately as ordinary as its title, falls into the latter category. The life in question belongs to a young lad named Fraser, whose restlessness is quickly defined in a literal way, as the 3-year-old tyke opts to crawl around the roof of his family's palatial home rather than be put down for a nap.

The actors save the film from total mediocrity. Firth is especially good as the father, whose seeming innocuousness hides a dark, flawed soul, and Robert Norman is relatively unaffected as the young Fraser, a role that could easily have been cloying. McDowell's watchable hamminess keeps the movie from sinking into its own gentility, but Harris and Mastrantonio are all but lost in their stereotypical roles. Mastrantonio's role is particularly thankless after her revelatory work in John Sayles' "Limbo." "Life" will probably please more people, but it trends in places where many movies have gone before. (Robert Philpott, Fort Worth Star-Telegram)

• "My Son the Fanatic," Feb. 9, 7:30 p.m., and Feb. 13, 1 p.m., The Orpheum, Twin Falls.

Director: Udayan Prasad. Cast: Om Puri, Rachel Griffiths, Sushan Sengupta, Akbar Kurja, Desai, Harish Patel.

English. Running time: 1 hour, 22 minutes. Rated R.

"My Son the Fanatic" opens with what should be a high point in the life of Parvez (Om Puri), born in Pakistan, but for the last 25 years a cabdriver in the northern English city of Bradford.

Parvez and his wife are having tea with their presumptive future in-laws, the Fingerhuts, celebrating the engagement of their son Farid (Akbar Kurja) to the daughter of one the town's top officials. "This boy of ours, I can assure you he's all-around type going whole hog." Parvez says in his charmingly mangled immigrant's English, so delighted he doesn't notice the cross-cultural discomfort everyone else in the room is feeling.

Best known for "My Beautiful Laundrette," writer Hanif Kureishi calls his latest work "a romantic film with ideological edges," and what makes it exceptional is how much subtlety and compassion Kureishi and director Udayan Prasad bring to both halves of that equation.

Effortlessly well-written, with nuanced characters that easily come to life on the screen, "My Son the Fanatic" does justice to the unlikely love story it uncovers as well as the troubling underlying reality of adapting to a new country and a new culture. Intelligent, poignant and witty, it involves us in real issues without stunting on their complexity and without forgetting to be caring toward people caught in the undertow of forces they cannot begin to control.

Even without this impending marriage, Parvez initially feels content. He still loves his wife, Minoo (Gopi Desai), though over the years their relationship has grown distant and pro forma. He doesn't even envy the success his best friend, Fizey (Harish Patel), has had in the restaurant business. Then, like an emotional pincer attack, three factors combine to bring his life to a crisis.

Most devastating is the change in Parvez's only child. Once a boy who loved clothes and considered modeling, Farid is now intent on getting rid of all his worldly possessions, including his music and even his cherished guitar. "You always said there were more important things than 'Stairway to Heaven,'" he tells his baffled father, "and you were so right."

While "My Son the Fanatic" is too subtle and thoughtful to offer simple solutions — Parvez's declaration that "there are many ways of being a good man" may be as close as it gets to a summing up — Kureishi and Prasad have given this story a nuanced, bittersweet ending that has more staying power than a more conventional finale would. For if the answers to these pervasive problems were simpler, if the tangled emotions these peoples' lives call forth were easier to sort out, "My Son the Fanatic" wouldn't be half the memorable film it turns out to be. Women down Chukars

Golden Eagles improve to 9-8 with SWAC win

By Kevin Hall
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Clutch free throw shooting down the stretch sealed Treasure Valley Community College's fate as the College of Southern Idaho women's basketball team defeated the Lady Chukars 82-71 Thursday night.

The win is the second in a row for the Golden Eagles, who improve to 9-8 in the Scenic West Athletic Conference, 9-8 overall. TVCC falls a game back in the SWAC at 1-4, 7-8 overall.

Jinga Gosschalk led all scorers with 17 points, and four Golden Eagles in double figures. Point guard Amanda McGrath rained in 16 while Sara Cellan added 15. Shari Moulton led the Lady Chukars with 16 points.

When it mattered most, CSI hit its shots from the stripe, connecting on 14 of 22 tries from the line in the final 8:15 to win going away.

“That was key, because they had to foul at the end,” said CSI head coach Joel Bate. “I just thought we were able to rotate in a lot of people, and everyone just contributed.”

TVCC never held the lead, though the orange-clad Chukars had a chance to tie down one at 59-58 with Heather Epeldi on the line. But Epeldi missed off the left lip and Kim Wegner went high to haul down.

At the other end, Wegner, who had 12 points in the game, was hacked on a turnaround and the 6-foot-1 post hit the first of two free throws. Her second bounced long off the iron but a fleet-footed Joanne Whittaker tracked down the ball and after a scramble in the half court, Whittaker was fouled driving the lane.

Braver shed cannot be shots, CSI had some breathing room at 62-58.

The College of Southern Idaho's Joanne Whittaker shoots the ball over Treasure Valley Community College's Joy Webber Thursday night. CSI's coach Joel Bate said Whittaker's speed creates problems for the Chukars.

“That was also big,” said Bate. “Joanne's speed creates problems.”

An Epeldi follow on a long

TVCC miss cut the lead back to a bucket with just under eight minutes to play. Cellan coaxed another foul on a drive to the hole, TVCC's tenth to put CSI into the double bonus the rest of the way, then hit the shots for the four-point bulge.

From there, CSI pushed the lead to nine at 69-60 with 4:10 left, and with TVCC unable to connect from long distance — going only 1-of-14 in the second half — the Lady Chukars were reduced to fouling.

TVCC also lost three players down the stretch, two to injuries to Christy Smith and Leisha Bonine and starting point guard Joy Webber to fouls.

But Treasure Valley held tough, ending a 3-50 scoring drought with two free throws from Moulton at the 4:05 mark to pull within seven at 69-62. They would get as close as five at 72-67 with 3:15 left before the Golden Eagles finally were able to put the game away.

“We're getting more comfortable with personnel and rotation,” said Bate, who is traveling to Salt Lake City today to scout both Ricks and North Idaho.

“They're a great team with guards who can break you down,” he added. “This is a nice win coming back from Arizona. I thought we'd be tired, but they played well.”

CSI opened strong, with McGrath nailing an opening-minute three-pointer from atop the arc. After Moulton intercepted a CSI pass and went coast-to-coast for the lay-up, CSI responded with a pair of free throws and a Cellan three-pointer for an 8-2 lead.

The Golden Eagles continued their hot shooting (making 6 of 14 three-pointers in the period) when Gosschalk hit an open-look bomb for the 11-2 lead. TVCC coach Brent Harrison called for a timeout to stop the bleeding and Webber responded with a three-point shot of her own for TVCC's first basket in more than four minutes.

CSI grabbed a 15-point lead at 21-6 when a Wegner 10-foot

Olpin's return brings out crowds

By Kevin Hall
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It has to be pretty cool.

You're playing on the opposing team, yet you have a cheering section all your own.

Twin Falls native Misty Olpin had that going for her inside the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium Thursday night when the Treasure Valley Community College-Lady Chukars came to visit.

“The high school team is going to be here,” Olpin said before taking the floor for pregame warmups. “My friends, family and (former) coach will all be here too.” she said. “It's going to be fun. (CSI) Coach (Joel) Bate will think it's weird because I'll have my own little crowd.”

Whether they'll actually have any thing to root for will be another thing altogether, Olpin said.

A reserve shooting guard, she has taken only 23 shots all season, mainly in mop-up duty.

“I don't play much,” she said. “But I like it. I may play a couple of minutes tonight, hopefully.”

Coming out of Twin-Falls High School, Olpin, 18, led the team in rebounding and was second in scoring her senior year despite missing the first six games of the season due to injury.

She considered going to a small, four-year college in Iowa, but changed her mind when first-year Treasure Valley coach Brent Harrison sold her on the program and gave her a scholarship.

“It's pretty cool,” she said. “I'm having fun here. Classes are a little bit easier than most junior colleges, I think. It's a smaller school, so you get more

Is Atlanta pitcher off his rocker?

Baseball insists on psychological test

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — John Rocker was ordered by baseball to undergo psychological tests before deciding whether to punish the outspoken reliever for remarks he made disparaging gays, minorities and immigrants.

Commissioner Bud Selig said Thursday he will await the evaluation of the Atlanta Braves star before deciding on any disciplinary action.

“Mr. Rocker's recent remarks made to a national magazine reporter were of a nature that completely inexcusable,” Selig said in a statement. “I am profoundly concerned about the nature of those comments as well as by the train other aspects of his behavior.”

Selig said he will take “whatever additional action that I consider to be necessary” after Rocker's evaluation.

Rocker's agent Stan Kasten said at a news conference that he thought punishment was warranted.

Atlanta reliever John Rocker celebrates at the end of a 1-0 win over the New York Mets in Game 3 of the NL Championship Series Oct. 15.

ed, but said the commissioner's office will decide, not the team.

“It's important that John gets right with the organization, his teammates and the community,” Kasten said. “But we at least need to give the man an opportunity to demonstrate his heartfelt remorse and correct the problem.”

He said if the comments had been published during the season, Rocker likely would have been suspended indefinitely.

Kasten said the evaluation should begin within days. He said releasing Rocker remains an option but is unlikely.

“He did have a history of good relationships with players of different races and different ethnic backgrounds,” Kasten said. “What we have here is a player who has expressed remorse. Under those circumstances, I am not going to abandon a player or an employee or a friend.”

Kasten said baseball officials and the players' association decided the evaluations were appropriate. The two organizations jointly will pick psychologists to evaluate Rocker.

Rocker's agent, Randy Hendricks, said neither he nor Rocker would comment.

In his comments to Sports Illustrated last month, Rocker said he would never play for a New York team because he didn't want to ride a train “next to some queer with AIDS.” He also bashed immigrants, saying, “I'm not a very big fan of foreigners ... How the hell did they get in this country?”

Road to Super Bowl looks daunting for Dolphins

The Associated Press

DAVIE, Fla. — To reach the Super Bowl, the Miami Dolphins must do something they haven't done in 26 years — win on the road in the postseason. And they must do it three times, beginning Sunday at Seattle.

The Dolphins seek their first road postseason victory since winning the Super Bowl at Houston in December 1972 against Pittsburgh in the AFC championship game.

1974. Their most recent playoff win on an opponent's field came in December 1972 against Pittsburgh in the AFC championship game.

What does such a lengthy drought mean?

“Nothing,” defensive end Trace Armstrong said. “In 1972, a lot of our guys weren't even born.”

Still, the pattern is tough to ignore, especially since the Dolphins will be on the road the rest of the season. If they win

CSI men storm past TVCC

Win is really straight for Zeck's squad

By Kevin Hall
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Two teams showed up to play Thursday night, one crisp and refreshed from the almost three-week holiday break; the other, still in a holi-daze.

The College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team, returning to form, were looking as sharp as ever after 19 days away from competition, ran visiting Treasure Valley Community College out of the CSI gymnasium with an 89-68 rout.

The victory, CSI's fifth in a row, pulls the Golden Eagles out of a tie with TVCC in the Scenic West Athletic Conference and into sixth place all alone at 2-3. Overall, Southern Idaho improves to 14-3, while TVCC drops to 1-4 in the SWAC, 13-4 on the season.

“I was especially pleased with the first half tonight,” said CSI head coach Derek Zeck. “We let up in the second half but in the first half we had them 40 percent shooting, four offensive rebounds and we shot 55 percent from the field and had a lot of people passing the ball.”

Western Michigan-bound Steve Reynolds led all scorers with 17 points while Cardell Butler led CSI with 15.

“Reynolds is tough,” Zeck said. “The game was decided in two first-half outbursts by the Golden Eagles. The first, a 14-3, three-minute explosion, saw Southern Idaho make a one-point lead at a 23-11 bulge with just more than 11 minutes on the clock.”

The game saw the Chukars close the gap to 10 at 34-24 before the high-flying hosts used a 16-7 barrage to end the half up 50-31.

“They just really came out hard on us,” said TVCC coach Jason Fieca. “We closed it to 10 and had a little momentum going, and then they just, boom, within a minute's span, it was back to 20.”

The Golden Eagles, clad in their all-white uniforms and fat on 56-percent shooting in the first half, continued their offensive onslaught with five points from forward Larz Stewart to open up a 55-33 lead in the final 20 minutes.

CSI shooboaded in a big way off its fast break. William Parker pickpocketed Danny Bordick and raced all alone to the other end to finish with a two-handed dunk. After a Kendall Minor three-point bomb put CSI ahead 65-43 the teams exchanged several baskets before Butler took a pass all

Shoshone wins Messick vs. Messick II

The Times-News
SHOSHONE - This time, the student learned the lesson - i.e., this time, Gooding fell to Shoshone...

"We're even-seven now," said Larry Messick, now in his 26th year at the helm in Shoshone. "He never said too much after the first one because he knew the second one was coming."

And early on, it appeared as if first-year coach Joe Messick's charges would make it two in a row over the Indians. They led after each of the first three quarters, sometimes by as many as five points.

Senior point guard Matt Taber went to work and nailed a trio of three-pointers in the first 90 seconds, eventually scoring 10 of his game-high 15 points in the final stanza to lead Shoshone.

Messick said the Senators "were playing pretty good defense and not giving us very good looks at the basket" until Taber broke free.

Cory Rodriguez led Gooding (1-8) with 16 points and Jackson Uhrig added 10 for Shoshone (5-4). The Indians travel to Kimberly Saturday, while the Senators host Wood River Saturday.

Twin Falls 66, Canyon 62 (OT)
POCATELLO - Zack Gregersen hit four crucial free throws in the final minute of overtime to help the Bruins to a Class A-I, Region III win over the Diamondbacks.

Twin Falls led for most of the half but saw momentum switch to the hosts in the third quarter as Canyon built a four-point lead. Lee Castillo hit a pair of foul shots and Brandon Nielsen added a field goal to send the game to overtime. Nielsen led the Bruins with 16 points and Castillo and Canyon added 11 apiece.

The victory helped Twin Falls improve to 4-1 in regional play and 6-2 overall, while the Diamondbacks fell to 2-7 and 1-4.

Basketball standings - D3

Diamondbacks fell to 2-7 and 1-4. The Bruins travel to Burley Saturday.

Madison 78, Burley 68
REXBURG - Down by just five points at halftime, Burley found itself in a ballgame Thursday night.

But Madison outscored Burley 25-12 in the third quarter to snag the non-conference win. Burley Coach Al Pearson said Madison's aggressive defense led to a number of steals and lay-ups, which proved to be Burley's undoing.

Eric Hoskins' 27 points led Burley, while Madison was led by Tom Kunz and Kyle Stevens, who had 24 apiece.

Burley (3-6 overall, 2-2 in regional play) hosts Twin Falls Saturday.

Highland 52, Minico 39
POCATELLO - The Rams controlled the tempo of the game to prevent the Spartans from getting any closer than a six-point spread in the last three quarters.

Highland's Dan Frasure and Minico's John Fennell led their teams with 14 points each.

Minico (2-7) hosts Jerome on Saturday.

Wendell 59, Valley 51
WENDELL - Wendell's success at the free throw line gave the Trojans the edge they needed to stay ahead in the fourth.

Wendell's Nelson King had the game's high score with 21 points while teammate Brett Lancaster chipped in 18 for the Trojans.

Junior Rob Black led the Vikings with 17 points.

Wendell (4-4) hosts Filer tonight.

Valley 18 (13-11-15)
Wendell 18 (14-17-17)
VICTORY (10) - Harrison 18, Sloan 8, Black 17, Malone 4, Wood 2, ...

Pocatello 69, Jerome 56
JEROME - Timely rebounding and dominance in transition put Jerome up 18-12 after one quarter, but Indians big man Brandon Mennear scored 10 of his game-high 25 points in the second period to put Pocatello ahead for good.

Jerome made a comeback late with three of its starters out due to foul trouble, but Pocatello held on for the Region III win. Brad Pettengill scored 13 for the Tigers, Brad Stokes added 12 and Todd Capps and Brett Cook each chipped in 10.

Pocatello (3-6 overall, 1-3 in Region III) is at Minico Saturday.

TWIN FALLS - Although both teams relied heavily on their inside games, Twin Falls Christian Academy had Luke Walker, who led all scorers with 25 points, as the Warriors beat the Conquerors Thursday night.

TFCFA (6-2) plays at Hansen Monday.

Girls' basketball
Richfield 35, Clark County 30
DuBOIS - Jennifer Brauburger and Shannon Meyer each grabbed seven rebounds as the Richfield Tigers beat Clark County Thursday night.

Richfield shot just 11-for-47 from the field, but the Tigers' defense kept them in the game. Richfield also hit free throws down the stretch, with eight of the Tigers' 10 fourth-quarter points coming from the line.

Richfield (5-10) travels to Carey tonight.

Filer 36, Buhl 33
along underneath and suffed it with emphasis for the 70-55 contest.

Butler soon hammered home his second dunk after a loose ball in the TVCC backcourt saw a hustling Kenny Brunner swat the ball free into the halfcourt, where a sprinting Butler handed it and promptly jammed it in for the 72-55 lead.

From there, it was just a matter of ball control and continued aggressive defense by the Golden Eagles, who forced 17 TVCC turnovers while keeping their hot touch from the field. TVCC could only muster 47 percent from the field and was outbounded by the Golden Eagles 37-28.

In all, it was a very dominating performance by CSI to begin the second and crucial half of the SWAC season.

"The schedule is set up perfectly for us," Zeck said. "We start off at home (Thursday) to get our confidence back, then we go on the road against (Eastern Utah and, Colorado

BUHL - The Filer Wildcats defeated the Buhl Indians in a three-point game Thursday night. Each team had the lead several times, but Buhl's problems at the free throw line late in the fourth held the Indians back.

Filer's Libbie Loughmiller led the Wildcats with 12 points while Buhl's Bright Murphy chipped in 14 for the Indians.

Buhl (1-4 conference, 1-3 overall) travels to Wendell on Saturday.

Glenns Ferry 64, Valley 62
GLENN'S FERRY - Leading by 10 points at the half, Pilots fought off a second-half Viking rally and held on for the win.

Eva Farris led the Glenns Ferry offense with 16 points, while Valley's Kyle Beem led all scorers with 17.

The Pilots (5-11 overall, 1-0 conference) travel to Declo Saturday.

Murtaugh 63, Raft River 42
MURTAUGH - The Red Devils successfully shut down Raft River's Trisha Hitt, holding her to only six points to record the win.

For Murtaugh, Raegan Widmer and Kimberly Kidd led the scoring with 14 points each, followed by Ashley Ward with 13.

The Red Devils (7-6 overall, 4-1 conference) travel to Oakley Tuesday.

Hagerman 51, Oakley 46
HAGERMAN - Forced to foul down the stretch, Oakley sent Hagerman's Mindy Henslee to the line and the Lady Pirate responded to finish with a game-high 21 points.

The Pirates' Serena Roundy led the Hornets with 18, but was stymied in the second half by Hagerman sophomore Teresa Owsley, who finished with 11.

The Pirates improved to 5-11 overall, 3-4 in conference, with the win and host Glenns Ferry Tuesday. Oakley fell to 2-9 and 0-4 with the loss.

KIMBERLY - The Wolverines needed overtime to improve their SEC record to 4-2 while Kimberly dropped to 3-2.

Lady Bulldog Brianna Archman led all scorers with 13 points, while 6-foot-1 freshman Casey Monteith paced Wood River (9-5) with 11.

There were 42 fouls called in the game, and neither team could capitalize from the free throw line, the Wolverines going 8-for-24 and Kimberly 13-for-30.

Kimberly (7-7) hosts Gooding tonight.

Idaho's 2000 football schedule will be tough

The Times-News
MOSCOW - Playing the season opener at the University of Washington Sept. 2 in Seattle's raucous Husky Stadium will set the tone for a season full of firsts for the Idaho Vandals.

And in the school's inaugural campaign as a football-only member of the Div. I-A Sun Belt Conference - also the first season under new head coach Tom Cable, who replaces new Nevada hire Chris Tormey - Idaho's schedule doesn't sound much easier than that.

The Vandals open at home the next weekend (Sept. 9) against Montana, then hit the road to play Oregon on Sept. 16 and Washington State on Sept. 23. Playing Montana State at home Sept. 30 - Oct. 7 weekend - closes out September.

In October, Idaho travels to West Virginia (Oct. 7), plays Arkansas State on Homecoming (Oct. 14) and goes to Utah State (Oct. 21), before finishing the regular season with a trio of Big West contests: at North Texas Nov. 4; at home vs. New Mexico State Nov. 11; and at Boise State Nov. 18.

The assist was the 900th of Murphy's career and he got another on Tomas Holmstrom's third-period goal to move into a tie with Bryan Trotter.

Parnevik conquers the wind to lead Mercedes

KAPALUA, Hawaii (AP) — In a windy, wacky start to the new season, Jesper Parnevik made a bogey and two double bogeys on the back nine Thursday, caught grief for his bright red pants and still managed to lead after the first round of the Mercedes Championship.

There was also a degree of normalcy. Tiger Woods played as though last year never existed, and he was never even more fearsome than the vicious trade winds raging off the north coast of Maui.

It didn't take long for him to make his presence felt at Kapalua.

"He has to screw up pretty bad not to be up on the leaderboard," Parnevik said. "He doesn't have to do everything right to win. And when he does everything right, he wins anyway."

Everything went right — and then everything went wrong — for Parnevik. On a day in which the average score was 75.03 because of 40 mph gusts and severe rain, Parnevik birdied six of the first 11 holes to open a four-shot lead.

"And then the fun began," he said.

He missed the 12th green and three-putted for double bogey, then missed the green and dumped a chip shot into the bunker for another double bogey on the 13th. Parnevik birdied the next two holes to right the ship, just in time to catch a wedge on No. 17 that led to a bogey.

Golf

After nearly holding a 100-foot shot with his putter from off the 18th green, Parnevik tapped in for a birdie that capped a roller coaster round and gave him a 4-under 69 on the Plantation Course at Kapalua, one stroke ahead of Duffy Waldorf.

Woods, trying to become the first player since Ben Hogan in 1953 to win five straight tournaments, had a 2-under 71, tied with Ernie Els. Defending champion David Duval birdied the last two holes and was another stroke back.

Woods capped the 1999 season by winning the last four events while finishing at second place 13 out of his last 14 tournaments.

An official on the 18th green announced Parnevik as wearing "the worst color combination for the most eccentric dresser in golf. But that only prompted a shout from the gallery."

"You knock it in the hole, we don't care what color pants you wear," someone shouted.

Wolfpack rocks Maryland with late win

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Justin Gainey's jumper from the right of the foul line with 1.3 seconds left gave North Carolina State a 68-66 victory over No. 12 Maryland on Thursday night.

N.C. State (10-1, 1-0) had lost to Maryland five straight times at home and nine of the last 11 meetings overall. The Wolfpack last beat Maryland in the semifinals of the 1997 Atlantic Coast Conference tournament.

The Terrapins (11-3, 0-1) tied the game 66-66 on Danny Miller's basket with 18 seconds to go. When N.C. State got the ball back, Gainey, who scored all of his 14 points in the second half, nearly ran out the clock and hit the 15-foot jumper for the win.

Terence Morris' long 3-point attempt for Maryland missed at the buzzer.

Morris led Maryland with 20 points and 12 rebounds.

No. 14 N. Carolina 65, Clemson 45
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. - Joseph Forte scored 15 points and the Tar Heels remained undefeated at home against Clemson.

Forte provided the offensive spark the Tar Heels (10-4, 1-0 ACC) needed after a sluggish first half in a 66-60 win against the Tigers in Chapel Hill.

The Tigers (6-7, 0-1) went 10 minutes without a point during a 16-0 run started by Forte's five points.

Will Solomon, the ACC scoring leader who had at least 22 points in six of Clemson's last seven games, was held to 13 points on 5-for-19 shooting.

He has averaged 16.6 points and 6.9 rebounds per game for the entire season.

Irish prove they aren't one-hit wonders

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) - Matt Doherty didn't want Notre Dame to be a one-hit wonder after the Irish upset Ohio State in the opening round of the NIT.

Mission accomplished. With their 75-70 defeat of No. 2 Connecticut Wednesday night, the Irish have wins over two top five teams in a season for the first time in 19 years - and regained some of the respect the program lost during a run of mediocrity.

"Ohio State was big, and it was important to wake up the echoes," Doherty said Thursday after the team returned from Connecticut. "But deep down, some people thought we caught Ohio State down and it was a fluke thing. This wasn't a fluke thing."

Notre Dame (10-5) beat the then No. 4 Buckeyes in a last-second shot by David Graves, that seemed to shock them as much as it did Ohio State. As a stunned Buckeyes crowd stood in silence, the Irish tackled Graves on the court in a wild celebration.

"This time, there was no chest bumping or fist pumping. The Irish led almost the entire game, confounding Connecticut with their 2-3 zone. After the final buzzer, they acted like they'd been there before, shook hands with the Huskies and casually jogged into the locker room - and then celebrated."

There is no question it wasn't a fluke. UConn coach Jim Calhoun said, "They outplayed us ... and we didn't respond well to missing shots, and we didn't play defense anywhere near what we're capable of."

Doherty has the Irish playing nothing like a program that has had only three winning records

Notre Dame's Troy Murphy (3) and Jimmy Dillon hug as head coach Matt Doherty approaches after beating Ohio State 59-57 in the first round of the NIT in Columbus, Ohio. Doherty has led the Irish to two wins over Top 5 teams in the same season for the first time in 29 years.

in the past nine seasons. In addition to the wins over Ohio State and Connecticut, the Irish played tough against No. 5 Arizona and No. 12 Maryland in the NIT final. They also took 10th-ranked Indiana into overtime before being outscored 19-2 in the extra period.

It's all part of Doherty's plan to reconnect the Irish to their once proud past. He put shamrocks on the uniforms, brought in former Notre Dame stars to talk with players and kept reminding his team of the Miracle Mets, telling them "you got to believe."

"He's instilled a lot of confidence in us, confidence that we can go out and compete with these teams that hasn't been there in recent years," said leading scorer Troy Murphy, who had 33 points and 16 rebounds against the Huskies. "We know his credentials. He's played on a national championship team. He's coached in the Final Four. We know that he knows what he's doing and we believe in him."

A member of North Carolina's 1982 national championship team and a former assistant under Roy Williams at Kansas, Doherty's credit is won him instant credibility with his players.

He also brought a passion to Notre Dame that the program hasn't seen in years. He cried at the news conference announcing his hiring. He pumped his fist at the Ohio State crowd as the team sprinted into the locker room with a halftime lead. He got hit with a technical foul against the Huskies for complaining to referees as he walked down the tunnel to the locker room - after the first half.

Most importantly, he's gotten the Irish to believe.

"We're competing against those teams and winning against those teams. Last year, we just had the mentality of trying to compete and trying not to get embarrassed. This year, we're going in there trying to win."

HERE THEY COME AGAIN

It's Connecticut vs. Tennessee

The Associated Press
When Tennessee and Connecticut first met in women's basketball in 1995, it was a nice made-for-TV game between an established power and one on the rise.

That was what Tennessee coach Pat Summitt thought, anyway. But as she walked off the floor in Storrs, Conn., that day after No. 2 UConn's 75-66 victory, over her top-ranked team, Summitt realized it had become much more.

"A rivalry had been born. As much as it hurt to go there and lose that basketball game, I thought, 'Wow, this is a great matchup,'" Summitt said. "It hasn't ended, that's for sure."

The two have met every season since and twice in NCAA play, Connecticut winning in the 1995 championship game. Tennessee, spoiling No. 1-ranked UConn's perfect season in the 1997 regional finals.

Now they're ready for an encore. No. 1 Connecticut plays No. 2 Tennessee on Saturday before what should be a sellout crowd of 24,000-plus at Tennessee's Thompson-Boling Arena - the 29th meeting between the two teams in The Associated Press poll.

CBS will televise the game, which will break a 4-4 tie in the series.

Because it's Tennessee and Connecticut, it takes on an otherworldly level of importance, Auriemma said.

This season, the two are meeting on a home-and-home basis, unusual for nonconference rivals. They'll meet again Feb. 2 in Storrs, a game that will be televised by ESPN. "People who are just mildly interested in women's basketball are going to tune in this game," Auriemma said. "If they only watch one women's game this entire year, this is the one they're going to watch. That's what's fun about it."

"That's what this nerve-wracking about it, too. If you're not careful, the whole world is going to judge each team on what they do on this day."

What both teams do is push the ball up the floor and score a lot of points while playing tough defense.

Connecticut (11-0) averages 90.3 points and is winning by an average of 29. Tennessee bounced back from a loss to Louisiana Tech in its opener to win 10 straight heading into Thursday night's game at LSU. The Lady Vols have outstanding balance with juniors Tamika Catchings, Semeka Randall and Kristen Clement, sophomore Michelle Snow and freshman Kara Lawson, who has provided a huge lift with her outside shooting.

"They have really done a great job of trying to replace Chamblue with numbers instead of just one player," Auriemma said.

Fireworks highlight World Cup soccer

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP)

Two years later, David Beckham is still getting through out of big games.

Beckham was ejected for violent play in the 42nd minute Thursday as European champion Manchester United was surprisingly tied 1-1 by Mexico's Necaxa in the first FIFA-World Club Championship.

Beckham, tossed during England's second-round loss to Argentina in the 1998 World Cup, was expelled by Argentine referee Horacio Elizondo after the English forward missed the ball and kicked Jose Millan.

FIFA said Beckham will miss Manchester United's game against Vasco da Gama on Saturday and that the disciplinary committee will meet to decide if the suspension should be extended.

"The reaction of the Mexican players got him sent off," Manchester United coach Alex Ferguson said. "The referee reacted to the Mexican players and that's disappointing. It was a 50-50 ball and they both had their feet in the air."

Beckham, who is married to the singer Posh Spice, whose real name is Victoria Adams, was ejected during the World Cup for a kick at Argentina's Diego Simeone. That came just after halftime and England was forced to play with 10 men for 75 minutes, losing on penalty kicks following a 2-2 tie.

This time, Manchester United trailed 1-0 at the time of his ejection.

Christian Montecinos put the Mexican team ahead in the 14th minute with a free kick over a defensive wall.

Alex Aguinaga could have made it 2-0 in the 58th minute but he made a weak penalty kick that goalkeeper Mark Bosnich easily saved.

Dwight Yorke had a chance to tie the score in the 80th minute, when Manchester United was awarded a penalty kick but goalkeeper Hugo Pineta knocked it away with a brilliant save.

Yorke then tied the score in the 82nd minute, beating Pineta off a cross from Ole Gunnar Solskjaer.

In the second game of the Group B doubleheader, Brazil's Vasco da Gama beat Australia's South Melbourne 2-0 on goals by Felipe in the 52nd minute and Edmundo in the 85th.

In Group A play Friday in Sao Paulo, Spain's Real Madrid faces Brazil's Corinthians, and Saudi Arabia's Al-Nassr plays Morocco's Raja.

Alexandra Stevenson of San Diego, Calif., plays a shot during her match against South Africa's Amanda Coetzer at the Hopman Cup in Perth, Australia, Thursday. Coetzer won 6-3, 6-1.

Defending champ squeaks by Federer

ADELAIDE, Australia (AP) — Thomas Enqvist of Sweden outlasted Switzerland's Roger Federer 7-6 (7-5), 6-4 Thursday to earn a quarterfinal berth at the AAPT hardcourt tennis championships.

The tournament's top seed, who rose 18 places to end last year as the world's No. 4 player, beat Lleyton Hewitt to claim the title from the Adelaide teenager last year, and the two could face off again.

Hewitt, who on the day of his match backed down from his comment that Australian sports fans were stupid, meets countryman Jason Stoltenberg in a quarterfinal today.

Despite his confidence, Enqvist said challenging for the world's top spot this year is not in his game plan. Instead, he wants to win a Grand Slam event.

Federer's seven aces were not enough to fluster the Swede, who will meet Frenchman Sebastien Grosjean in a quarterfinal Friday. Grosjean eliminated American Jan-Michael Gambill 3-6, 7-6 (7-4), 6-2.

The pair have met only once before, when Enqvist defeated Grosjean in three sets at the Paris indoor tournament last year.

Martinez overcomes poor serves to win

GOLD COAST, Australia — Former Wimbledon champion Conchita Martinez overcame poor serving Thursday to secure a semifinal berth at the Australian women's hardcourt tennis championships.

The third-seeded Spaniard, who struggled with her ball toss throughout her quarterfinal win over eighth-seeded Sabine Appelmans of Belgium, joined Croatian Silvija Talaja in the last four at the event at the Royal Pines Resort.

Appelmans made a string of unforced errors late in the match before losing 7-6 (7-3), 4-6, 6-4.

Arantxa Sanchez Vicario of Spain, the fourth seed, joined Martinez in the semifinals when she beat fifth-seeded Patty Schnyder of Switzerland 2-6, 7-6 (7-2), 6-3.

South Africa makes it to Hopman Cup final

PERTH, Australia — South Africa reached the final of the Hopman Cup tournament Thursday, despite a 2-1 loss to the United States.

Thailand kept its hopes alive of advancing from the qualifying to Saturday's final by defeating Slovakia 3-0.

In another match, Sweden beat Belgium 2-1.

James Blake, the U.S. collegiate champion who is ranked 219th in the world, upset Wayne Ferreira 6-4, 6-4. Blake was sharp, hitting winners from all angles, while Ferreira paid for a succession of careless errors.

Blake's victory came after Amanda Coetzer beat Alexandra Stevenson 6-3, 6-1. The United States then won the doubles 6-7 (5-7), 6-3, 6-2.

Schuttler, top-seeded Kiefer reach Qatar quarters

DOHA, Qatar — Defending champion Rainer Schuttler of Germany and top-seed Nicolas Kiefer moved into the quarterfinals of the Qatar Open Thursday.

Others who advanced were Sjeng Schalken of the Netherlands, big serving Belarussian Max Mirnyi, Fabrice Santoro of France, George Bastl of Switzerland, Mikael Tillstrom of Sweden and Younes el-Aynaoui of Morocco.

Schuttler extended his Doha record to 8-0, beating Daniel Vacek 6-3, 6-2. Kiefer had little trouble against Italian qualifier Cristiano Caratti. The German, No. 6 in the world, sailed through in straight sets, 6-1, 6-1.

Kiefer now meets Schalken. In Friday's other quarterfinal matches, Santoro of France will meet Bastl of Switzerland, while el-Aynaoui of Morocco takes on Tillstrom.

Nike looks into charges that jerseys contain toxic chemical

BERLIN (AP) — Nike said Thursday it is investigating charges that its jerseys for a popular German soccer club are laced with a toxic anti-bacterial chemical. German department stores weren't waiting and were already pulling the shirts off shelves.

The action followed a German television report that the yellow-and-black jerseys contained tributyltin, a heavy metal compound used in anti-barnacle paint for ships.

"Also used to kill bacteria and quell the smell of sweat, TBT would seem an ideal additive for sports shirts. But British and Dutch tests have shown the substance to cause mutations in marine snails and the World Wildlife Fund is calling for its global ban.

Three German department store chains yanked the shirts as a precaution, and the club whose jerseys were tested said it had suspended their sale at its official fan store.

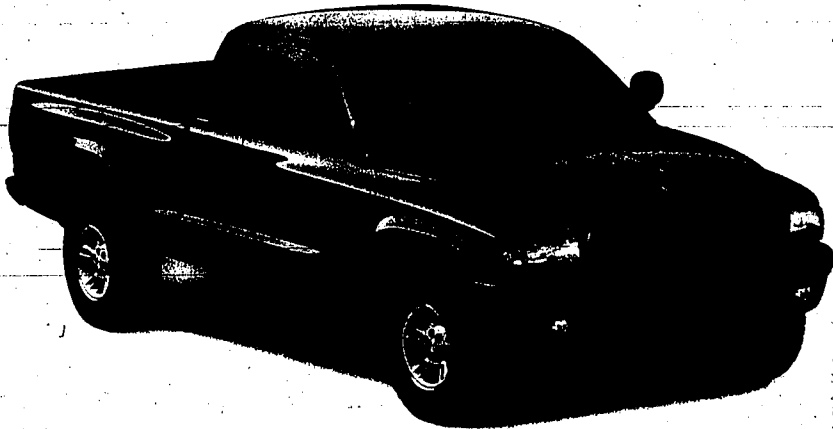

At high levels in humans, TBT is believed to cause neurological problems, damage the immune system and harm the liver, said Juergen Kundke, a scientist with a German institute for consumer health.

"We don't know how much is in the shirts, so we can't analyze the risks," he said. "We knew that the substance was still used in coatings for ships, but it shouldn't be in textiles that people wear."

Nike's world headquarters in Beaverton, Ore., pledged a quick investigation to determine whether any of its products contain the substance.

NFL playoff preview

Tennessee battles Buffalo for wild-card spot

The Associated Press

For a wild-card game, this one's not bad, the Buffalo Bills (11-5) at the Tennessee Titans (13-3), the most combined wins in any wild-card game ever.

Except that Buffalo coach Wade Phillips did a strange thing on the way to this (excuse the expression) clash of the Titans - off one strong performance in a meaningless game, he elevated Rob Johnson to the starting quarterback role over Doug Flutie.

OK, Flutie didn't have the year he had last season. But he still managed to find a way to win. In the last game he played, he started slowly, then completed his last 12 passes to rally his team to a 13-10 overtime win in New England.

"My feeling is, with either one of them we can win," coach Wade Phillips said. "It was a tough decision. It wasn't a haphazard thing."

It may turn out to be a tougher decision. Johnson has talent. The Bills surrendered a No. 1 pick for him, then signed him to a $25 million five-year deal.

But Flutie has magic and magic is what's needed in the playoffs, particularly against a Tennessee team playing as well as any team in either conference entering the playoffs.

The Titans are favored by 4.5; the handicap was added after Johnson was named the Bills' starter. The last time they played against the Bills in the postseason, they were the Houston Oilers and blew a 35-3 lead at Buffalo.

Johnson will see a lot of Jevon Kearse. And with Flutie on the bench, the Titans won't blow any leads.

TTITANS, 24-14

Dallas cornerback Delon Sanders (21) covers Minnesota wide receiver Randy Moss during first-quarter action Nov. 8. Now that nothing is sprained, strained or sore, Sanders is finally ready to challenge Moss and Cris Carter. How Dallas defends the dynamic duo Sunday will go a long way in determining which team moves on which goes home.

They haven't won since and they haven't beaten the Redskins on the road since 1935, when the Skins played in Boston.

QB Gus Ferretto, who got his revenge against the Redskins in Pontiac, is back for the injured Charlie Batch. Washington has too much firepower, so exit one bedrilled 8-8 team.

REDSKINS, 31-13

Cowboys took a 17-0 lead as Emmitt Smith ripped through the porous Minnesota defense. Then Smith and Troy Aikman were hurt and the Vikings ended up winning 27-17.

But Minnesota has moved John Randall inside now. And the Cowboys are still a 1-7 team on the road.

Comeback Player of the Year goes to Bryant Young

NFL notebook

NEW YORK (AP) - Bryant Young knew he was all the way back from a horrifying leg injury when he began getting double-teamed again.

The San Francisco 49ers defensive tackle received further proof Thursday when he was selected by The Associated Press as the NFL's Comeback Player of the Year.

"It's special because it's the award that shows overcoming adversity and obstacles in one's career," Young said. "I think highly of that award."

Young was an overwhelming choice by a nationwide panel of 50 media members, getting 20 votes. Perhaps the voters recalled the seriousness of Young's injury. On Nov. 30, 1998, Young broke both bones in his lower right leg, the result of a freak collision with teammate Ken Norton Jr. They were closing in from opposite directions to tackle New York Giants quarterback Kent Graham when the linebacker's helmet struck Young's leg, snapping the tibia and fibula.

The injury was so severe it was considered career-threatening. But Young completed a vigorous rehabilitation and was back in the starting lineup for the season opener at Jacksonville. A 15-inch stabilizing titanium rod in his tibia, which at times irritated his knee, will be removed after the Pro Bowl.

"I feel like I've made a giant step forward and once I get that hardware out of my leg, once I get those procedures done, then that will all behind me," Young said. "I'm looking forward to next year being an even better year for me."

Though the 49ers struggled as a team, this season wasn't bad for Young. He was one of the few defensive players to show any consistency, and wound up with a team-high 11 sacks.

Last year's winner of the first Comeback Player of the Year award was Buffalo quarterback Doug Flutie.

Davis gets ready
As the Redskins prepare for Saturday's first-round game against the Detroit Lions, there is concern that running back Stephen Davis will not be at full strength.

He's confident he'll be ready Saturday.

"I did everything that I felt that I could do today," said Davis, who took part in about half the practice. "Hopefully, tomorrow I can do more. I cut on it. It felt pretty good. It's hard to say about an ankle."

Davis is listed as probable.

Faulk: Happy for Kurt

Marshall Faulk was a gracious runner-up Thursday, congratulating St. Louis Rams teammate Kurt Warner for winning the NFL most valuable player award a day earlier.

"Like I told him, I didn't want to call you, I wanted to come up to you before we went on the practice field and say congratulations," Faulk said. "It's a hell of a job, he's had a great year."

Faulk tied for a distant second with Colts quarterback Peyton Manning behind Warner, who was an overwhelming choice with 33 of 50 votes cast by a nationwide media panel.

Raiders sign QB Whelihan
The Oakland Raiders signed quarterback Craig Whelihan to a three-year contract Thursday.

Whelihan, 28, spent two seasons with the San Diego Chargers before being released in September.

The addition of Whelihan gives the Raiders five quarterbacks on their 53-man roster, joining Rich Cannon, Bobby Hoying, Wade Wilson and Scott Dreisbach. Wilson is expected to retire and Hoying is eligible for free agency.

"We're about to change that," quarterback Dan Marino pledged.

It's well known that Marino has never won a Super Bowl. He also has never won a road postseason game, going 0-7.

The primary culprit is not the quarterback, but a chronically poor ground game that makes it difficult to control the ball, quiet the crowd and win in cold weather. In the seven losses with Marino, the Dolphins have averaged just 59 yards rushing per game.

They've lost from coast to coast - New England, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Denver, San Diego and Oakland. This weekend's trip will be the longest yet - 3,000 miles for the first playoff game in the Kingdom since 1984.

The Dolphins have won regular-season games each of the past three years at Oakland. Miami won its first four road games this season, including the opener against the Denver Broncos when they still had Terrell Davis.

But the Dolphins' late-season collapse included four consecutive road losses by a combined score of 92-33.

"That's why every advocate strives for the home-field advantage - it's extremely difficult to win on the road," guard Kevin Donnalley said. "The noise, the fans, the weather - they're such a factor and tough to overcome, especially when things get tight."

Only three current Miami players - Marino, tackle Richmond Webb and linebacker Dwight Hollar - were with the Dolphins the last time they played at the Kingdom in 1992. The stadium is regarded as perhaps the NFL's loudest.

"If I had my preference, I'd be right here at Pro Player Stadium at 1 o'clock every week," Miami coach Jimmy Johnson said. "There are some disadvantages obviously - the crowd noise, the artificial surface, the six-and-a-half-hour flight."

"But we've got the talent and the team to go on the road and win."

State treasurer gets award from SBA

BOISE (AP) - State Treasurer Ron Crane received an award for an innovative program that has given small businesses access to needed working capital and increased investment income to the state's treasury.

Innovative Idaho program benefits small businesses as well as state coffers one of nine national winners in the Access to Capital category. "This innovative program has proved to be a great stimulus for small business in Idaho," said Kempthorne.

Treasurer's office has agreed to purchase the 80 percent administration fee portion of the loans up to $75,000. Crane said officials have decided to increase that limit to $150,000.

with a higher rate of return. "The state receives at least one-half of a percent greater return on its investment than it can with other, more traditional investments," said Kempthorne.

Tech stocks plunge again, but old industrials lift Dow

NEW YORK (AP) - Technology stocks fell for a third straight day Thursday as investors shifted money from the pricey shares that dominated trading in 1999 to blue-chip stalwarts like Caterpillar, 3M and Procter & Gamble.

the frenzy for technology stocks, are soaring. "Investors are selling Yahoo! to buy Caterpillar," said Charles Pradilla, chief investment strategist at SG Cowen Securities in New York.

Even with all of the hype over the Internet, bricks-and-mortar merchants still fared well in December, and most didn't lose significant business to their Web rivals.

Note: Sales include those from stores open at least a year, also known as same-store sales. Reporting periods vary slightly and all retailers have a common fiscal year.

Stocks continued the reversal of fortunes that has marked Wall Street this week. Technology stocks, which helped the Nasdaq composite to an unprecedented 86 percent gain in 1999, have plummeted as investors collected profits.

Gateway, which fell steeply in extended-hours trading Wednesday, bounced back Thursday, ending up 4 1/16 at $9 11/16. But traders said the company's warning continued to weaken in other computer makers' share prices.

Russian soldiers don't expect an easy victory

BACHU-YURT, Russia (AP) — While Russian leaders make bold predictions of imminent victory in Chechnya, the weary paratroopers fighting rebels in the hills say the bloodshed is far from over.

"We know that we will have to go into the mountains, and very tough fighting is ahead," says Lt. Col. Mikhail Sukhovskoy, commander of a paratroop battalion. "We won't be able to defeat the rebels with aircraft and armor. We will have to go there on foot. And it will take a long time."

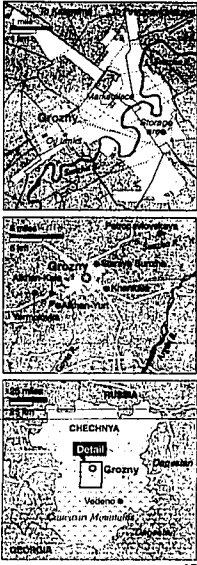

After retreating the northern plains of Chechnya with little trouble, the Russian military now faces the far more difficult challenge of taking on the rebels in the southern mountains.

The military has relied on massive artillery and air bombardment during the current campaign, trying to avoid the heavy losses its forces suffered during the 1994-96 war, when poorly trained Russian infantry was outfought by the Chechens. But the tactics won't work in the mountains, which shelter the rebels.

Small units from both sides play cat-and-mouse in the forests covering the mountains and the surrounding foothills. The rebels are skilled guerrilla fighters who know the terrain intimately and can attack and disappear without warning.

For weeks, the Russian military has been sending some of its best units into the southern mountains to fight the rebels. The paratroop and commando units, draped in combat harnesses festooned with grenades, ammunition clips and combat knives, emulate the rebels' guerrilla tactics.

"We will act in small groups of 10 to 15 men, and we will set ambushes and hunt for militants," said a paratroop captain commanding a unit assigned to hunt rebels in the mountains.

"My soldiers are well-prepared for the action and have all the necessary gear," said the officer, who asked to be identified only by his first name, Vasily. But officers and soldiers admit the fighting is exhausting and difficult. Paratroops trek through the mountains for days, often catching no sight of the Chechens or seeing them only in fleeting engagements in the forests.

New leader symbolizes hope for weary nation

By Maura Reynolds Los Angeles Times

MOSCOW — Russia is on the march, and the man in the lead is Vladimir V. Putin.

For the first time since the Soviet collapse, a new sense of national purpose is building in Russia. The country's fate does not depend on the West. And while he cannot claim to have initiated it, Putin, now Russia's acting president, has become its incarnation.

"Putin is a man of a kind whom many people march. There is no doubt I am in the first rank," Maj. Gen. Vladimir Shamanov, commander of Russian forces in western Chechnya, the republic where its fighting separatist rebels, said recently.

"All Russians are sick of the fact that Russia is humiliated, insulted, asking for handouts," he said. "We have it back today, but let us be patient and tomorrow will come and it will get better. We will go with Putin, and tomorrow will come."

Such language sounds vaguely familiar to many observers, but Putin is offering his fellow Russians a kind of belief system: a faith in Russia's future.

"It is too early to bury Russia as a great power," Putin wrote in a political treatise released just days before Boris N. Yeltsin resigned and handed him the reins of power. "All troubles notwithstanding — the country will have a worthy future."

In his treatise, Putin listed four principles at the heart of his vision for Russia: patriotism, a strong state apparatus, social solidarity and belief in Russia as a great power. He promised to restore his country's sense of identity and purpose, what Russians call a "national idea."

"I am convinced that reaching the necessary level of growth is not just an economic problem," he wrote. "It is also a political problem and in a sense — I'm not afraid to use this word — an ideological problem. That is, an idea problem, a spiritual problem, a moral problem."

Since the Soviet collapse, Russians have deplored their loss of a "national idea." The confusion over national identity even shows in little things: Russia's national anthem still has no words. The national flag has not been formally adopted by Parliament. Yeltsin even convened a committee of cultural leaders to come up with a "national idea." But they made no apparent progress.

Putin appears to have succeeded where they failed.

"Putin has hit it just right — he approached the right time in the right place and started just at the right things," said Viktor A. Kremenyuk, director of Moscow's USA-Canada Institute. "And the people who have been for years harboring resentment and disappointment that their once-great world power has been relegated to the status of a Third World country responded to his call."

The word Putin used for "great power" is "derzhava" — a powerful country that can stand on its own and need answer to no one.

"Russia was and will remain a great power," Putin wrote in the treatise, posted on the government's Web site. "This is ordained by its inherent geographical, cultural and national characteristics."

He also said Russians need a strong centralized government.

"It will not happen soon, if it ever happens at all, that Russia becomes a second edition of, say, the United States or Britain in which liberal values have deep historic traditions," Putin said. "For Russians, a strong state is not an anomaly or something to be resisted. Quite the contrary. They see it as the source and guarantor of order and the initiator and driving force of change."

Putin insisted that there is no conflict between centralized state control and a market economy. But he denounced "abstract models and schemes from foreign textbooks," saying market forces should be introduced only gradually, carefully and with an eye to Russia's special characteristics.

While his treatise is not openly anti-Western, it does indicate that Putin is inclined to deal with the West only on his own terms. "Russia is a 'derzhavnik.' He has the mentality of those people who share the idea that Russia must be strong and rely on itself in solving its problems," said Yuri I. Skuratov, who served as Russia's prosecutor general while Putin was head of the KGB successor agency. "For people like Putin, all contacts and cooperation with the West are an unpleasant necessity, something that they simply have to do, nothing more."

India, Pakistan fight a war of words

Tensions between nuclear neighbors mount as hijackers' whereabouts are unknown

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — A week after India freed three Kashmiri militants to end the hijacking of an Indian Airlines jet, the whereabouts of the five hijackers are unknown and nuclear neighbors India and Pakistan are escalating their war of words.

The most prominent among those freed, Pakistani cleric Maulana Masood Azhar, said Tuesday that the hijackers identified themselves as Indian nationals and refused to remove their masks even in the presence of the men whose freedom they had negotiated.

After India released the three men and guaranteed the five hijackers safe passage, the group left the airport in the southern Afghan city of Kandahar in a vehicle with blackened windows.

It was an emotional scene, Azhar recalled in giving the first eyewitness account of the disappearance of the hijackers on Dec. 31.

The hijackers wept and embraced the militants but would not take off their face coverings or fully identify themselves. "The hijackers said 'You don't know us. We have never met. We are from India and we respect you and admire you, but we cannot take off our masks,'" Azhar recalled.

Since the hijacking, India and Pakistan have been trading barbs, with each accusing the other of involvement in the Christmas Eve hijacking of the Airbus A-300.

In India, Interior Minister L.K. Advani said all five hijackers were Pakistanis. Indian police arrested four members of Azhar's militant Islamic group, Harakat-ul-Mujahadeen in Bombay on Dec. 30. According to Advani, the men said the hijackers were Pakistanis. "Pakistan is neck-deep in this dirty game of hijacking," Advani said. "Pakistan arrested gave police photographs of the hijackers, whom they had helped reach Nepal's capital, Katmandu from where the plane was hijacked. After the hijacking ended, police showed the photos to the pilot and passengers, who confirmed that the five men were the hijackers, Advani said."

A spokesman for Harakat-ul-Mujahadeen called the Indian assertions "a pack of lies. Indians are trying to fabricate false evidence against our group, but they will not succeed."

Garla Mohammed Bayoumi is welcomed recently by neighbors at a coffee shop in old Cairo. She is a mesaharati, who is responsible for waking fellow Muslims for prayers and a pre-dawn meal during the month of Ramadan.

Wake-up call for the faithful

Woman gets fellow-Muslims up during holy month

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Bundled up against the winter chill, Garla Mohammed Bayoumi trends a familiar path through the darkened streets of old Cairo, thumping out a regular rhythm on a small drum and pausing to call sleeping residents by name.

"Wake up, Hassan! Wake up, Ali! Wake up and start your prayers!"

It is 2:30 a.m., and Bayoumi, wrapped in a long gray overcoat and dark woolen scarf, is performing an annual ritual that dates back seven generations in her family. She is a mesaharati, a public waker, who rouses faithful Muslims for prayers and breakfast in the wee hours of the holy month of Ramadan.

During Ramadan, Muslims abstain from food, drink, smoking and sex from sunrise to sunset as an act of sacrifice and purification. They break the fast with a sunset meal, called iftar, and then wake early to eat a pre-dawn meal, called sahoor, before fasting again. Ramadan ends with the first sighting of the crescent moon, likely on Thursday. However, if the moon is not seen, Ramadan ends a day later, on Friday. The three-day Eid al-Fitr feast begins the following day.

Mesaharatis were once a common sight — and sound — throughout Cairo, but now many neighborhoods are without a traditional waker. Sometimes young entrepreneurs fill the void, changing noisemakers through the streets, hoping to be paid for their half-hearted services.

But Bayoumi, 52, is from the old school, trained by her father, whom she accompanied as a child, learning the names of every head of household in the neighborhood. Now, 35 years after she became the mesaharati of the Hosh Qadim section of old Cairo, she is a respected figure.

"A lot of people do not feel like Ramadan has started until they hear her voice," said her son, Mohammed, 17. "I am very proud of my mother."

It is unusual for a woman to be a mesaharati, but Bayoumi's father had no sons and she wanted to keep the family tradition alive. The people of the neighborhood supported her, even turning away another mesaharati who tried to take over her area in 1992.

"I feel a responsibility to wake the people," she said. "I like them and they like me." Bayoumi, who cleans lion cages at the National Circus during the day, begins her night job with a cup of ginseng tea and a few puffs on a water pipe known as a shisha at a coffee shop near her apartment. The shisha is habib; the tea is to soothe her throat for hours of calling and singing.

And then she's ready. The regulars at the cafe bid her good night as she heads back out into the narrow, unpaved streets for her two-hour night journey.

Her loud voice, rising in-pitch in the traditional call, rouses most. The persistent drumming wakes others. And on some nights, Bayoumi also carries a wooden walking stick and raps on the doors of those sound sleepers who have requested special attention.

Children run out to hug the woman, distinctive in the light of her father's rusted oil lantern, and two toddlers dance to the beat of her drum. Passers-by press money into her hand, calling her by name and wishing her a happy holiday. Groups of men in coffee shops squeeze into side streets, calling out their greetings.

Police nab bomber's family

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — The parents and sister of a suicide bomber who killed 20 people were among more than 200 Tamils rounded up by Sri Lankan police Thursday, officials said.

All were arrested in the capital, Colombo, and will be questioned about their possible involvement in Wednesday's bombing outside the prime minister's office, officials and witnesses said.

Around midnight, police imposed a curfew in Colombo and two suburbs until this afternoon, state television announced. The report cited national security reasons, but offered no other details.

Some 3,000 armed policemen fanned out across the capital to look for rebels, a top police official said. In a condition of anonymity, about two years ago Colombo was similarly sealed off to allow door-to-door searches for Tamil guerrillas.

The state-run Sri Lanka Broadcasting Corporation said federal investigators traced the suicide bomber — who was blown up in the blast — to a village in eastern Batticaloa district. They arrested the parents of a 20-year-old. The radio did not mention the charges.

The Parliament also extended emergency rule Thursday. "The government cannot take any chances and no condition of anonymity. About two years ago Colombo was similarly sealed off to allow door-to-door searches for Tamil guerrillas."

Noodle scare sparks crisis in Vietnam's staple food

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — It's high noon, and Hanoi's normally packed noodle shops are empty, the casualty of a stomach-turning discovery that has sparked a crisis of confidence in a staple of the Vietnamese diet.

A woman who works at one of the city's 43 noodle-making shops complained to government officials that her boss was using a foul-smelling liquid in his noodles.

It turned out to be formaldehyde, a preservative used for embalming organs that was being added to increase shelf life. International conventions ban its use in food because it can cause liver, nerve and kidney damage.

Since the discovery, the government has called emergency meetings of the ministries of trade and health, and ordered inspections of noodle-making shops in Vietnam's two largest cities.

Seven of 10 noodle-making factories inspected this month in Hanoi were closed for using formaldehyde. The same problem was found in six of nine noodle-making shops inspected in Ho Chi Minh City.

Health officials have said the tiny amounts of formaldehyde used — less than a thousandth of an ounce — for extra-long noodles — would not cause immediate health problems although they could cause harm in the long run.

The controversy, prominently reported in the government-controlled media, has hurt hundreds of eateries specializing in Vietnam's traditional soup, called "pho."

Pho, an aromatic noodle concoction made with chicken or beef, is virtually the national dish, and many Vietnamese eat it daily.

Tam Van Tiem, 68, prepares noodles Wednesday in his street-side restaurant in Hanoi, Vietnam. A number of noodle shops there have been closed recently after formaldehyde was found in their product.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"The wise man in the storm prays God, not for safety from danger, but for deliverance from fear."

— Emerson

In the endgame, fear overcame today's West. South's strip and endplay made it obvious what South's plan was. Unfortunately, West's fears of a sluff and ruff were stronger than his visualization.

Dummy's diamond ace won, and South cashed his two top trumps, hoping to drop the queen. When East discarded, South's pace of play slowed appreciably with South's concerns aimed at avoiding a club loser. Unless the Q-J dropped doubleton, the slam would fail. (A singleton honor, coupled with a good guess, would also work.)

However, before committing himself, South looked for help from the defense. He ruffed dummy's last diamond, cashed three rounds of spades, and then gave West his trump trick.

What would West do now? If he led either a spade or a diamond, South would enjoy a ruff and sluff. So West exited eagerly with his club queen. It didn't work. South won dummy's ace, finessed against East's jack, and made his slam, losing no club trick.

Why should West have known a ruff and sluff was safe? South was known to hold three spades, five hearts and a singleton diamond, leaving him with four clubs. Whenever South might hold in clubs, a sluff and ruff would not help him. He would still have a club problem whenever he took the sluff. In today's layout, the ruff and sluff guarantees a defensive club winner, leading to a one-trick set.
