Sheriff says work release for Thrush is no favor

Some of victim's family claim it's special treatment

By Brian Haynes
Times-News writer

GOODING - Jesse Thrush spends his nights locked behind bars at the Gooding County Jail, but during the day he's outside smashing concrete, shoveling debris and hammering nails. Thrush, serving a six-month jail sentence after pleading guilty to shaking a 2-year-old girl to death, is one of several inmate workers on a project to renovate an old high school building into county offices. Some of the victim's family say it's another example of a former officer getting special treatment, but the sheriff says the time Thrush spends outside the jail walls is in no way favoritism.

"He's not getting favors - period," Gooding County Sheriff Shaun Gough said. When Thrush entered the Gooding County jail after his Dec. 23, 1999, sentencing, he was classified a low-risk inmate, which allowed him to be an inmate worker, Gough said. Many counties use inmate workers to perform odd jobs and other tasks. Since about mid-January Thrush has been working on the renovation job along side four other inmates, all of whom wear orange jail jumpsuits and return to the jail at the end of the day, Gough said. Thrush was transferred to Gooding County to avoid conflicts of interest that would arise if he were kept in Twin Falls County, where he was a sheriff's deputy before his arrest, Gough said. He will remain in Gooding County until the end of his sentence for voluntary

Homing in on funding

Carrie Buckland and Maureen Padilla work as telecommunication operators at the College of Southern Idaho. Fine Arts Center renovation is a big-ticket budget item for CSI, but college officials also are pushing for state money to replace the telecommunications system, more than 10 years old and operating for more than 150 hours per week.

Fine Arts Center expansion tops CSI list

Meyerhoeffer seeks funding in capital

By Michael Journee
Times-News writer

BOISE - The College of Southern Idaho is looking for $7 million in state funding this year for three projects - completing the expansion of a fine arts center, increasing part-time faculty pay, and upgrading the school's telecommunications ability. CSI President Gerald Meyerhoeffer spent the week at the Statehouse talking with legislators about a number of issues. His stay in Boise culminated Thursday with a pitch for money in front of the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee. The request included more than $6.4 million for capital improvements and just under $500,000 for educational enhancements. By far the biggest request is for more than $5.8 million to complete a planned expansion of CSI's fine arts center. CSI plans to expand the center, adding a state-of-the-art 250-seat auditorium for theater productions. The addition is estimated to cost about $6 million. "This is important to us and to the community," Meyerhoeffer said. Over the past few years,

Meyerhoeffer has asked for money to complete the planned addition, but state budget constraints have held legislators back. Lawmakers have given CSI only enough money to plan the project; CSI received $300,000 for planning from the 1999 Legislature. Meyerhoeffer stressed the need for the school to compete with other community colleges in obtaining quality faculty. Along

Census tallies up residents regardless of legal status

The Associated Press
CHICAGO - A census worker at the front door often means one thing to illegal immigrants. "A lot of people think, 'Hey, who's this guy coming to my door? Probably Immigration,'" says Alejandro Lopez, a Chicagon who is one of many people being asked to spread the word about the census in the nation's often undercounted minority communities. The word is this: Whether you are here legally or not, you should fill out the questionnaire when it arrives in April. Officials at the Census Bureau say they don't care if you're here illegally. In fact, they won't even ask. "The Census doesn't exist to do law enforcement," says Dianne Schmidley, a census demograph-

er. "Our job is to get a body count." The Census Bureau asks whether those in the household are U.S. citizens. But it has never distinguished between non-citizens who are in this country legally and those who are here illegally, because the U.S. Constitution simply calls for a head count. The counting of illegal immigrants was not even an issue until their numbers began swelling in the mid-1970s. Schmidley says singling out illegal immigrants would only lower a response rate that already is expected to be the lowest in history - 61 percent, compared with 75 percent of households in 1980 and 65 percent in 1990. It is largely poor people and

Jetliner turned upside down; 2nd recorder recovered

The Associated Press
PORT HUENEME, Calif. - Investigators found the second "black box" recorder from Alaska Airlines Flight 261 on Thursday, quickly locating the device that could tell them why the plane flipped upside down and plummeted into the ocean. Navy crews off Southern California recovered Flight 261's cockpit flight data recorder. It should show the positions of the plane's controls and whether a problem with the horizontal stabilizer was merely a symptom of a larger failure that led to Monday's crash and the deaths of all 88 aboard.

"That will tell the tale," said William Waldock, associate director for the Center for Aerospace Safety Education at Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University. The discovery came as friends and relatives of the crash victims gathered along the beach facing the Santa-Barbara Channel, where the MD-83 jetliner corkscrewed and then nose-dived into the chilly, Pacific waters. A few mourners roamed the shore alone, some clustered in small groups and others waded a few feet into the ocean.

Family members of passengers of the Alaska Airlines jet gather Thursday at the water's edge near Los Angeles.

Senate OKs F&G appointees

Nominees include controversial Clower

By Bob Flick
The Associated Press

BOISE - Gov. Dirk Kempthorne scored a major victory Thursday when he secured Senate confirmation of controversial Fish and Game Commission appointee Don Clower.

The outspoken, often-abrasive and sometimes divisive sportsman, whose confirmation was seriously in doubt late last week, was approved on a 26-9 vote after the Senate overwhelmingly supported the governor's other three appointments - Alex Irby of Orofino, Marcus Gibbs of Grace and Roy Moulton of Driggs. All four have been serving since last July.

Laird Noh
How they voted - A2

Noh, an appointee of any governor has been placed in the private and public record that he has turned over a new leaf, that he wants a second chance. Resource and Environment Chairman Laird Noh of Kimberly told his colleagues:

"I'm one who genuinely believes he has gone through a very agonizing soul-searching process," Noh said. "I believe we are voting on the 'new Don Clower.'"

Senate Democrats, who split on all the appointments, renewed their objections to the fact that none of the four appointees are Democrats, and Floor Leader Clint Stennett of Ketchum filed a minority report questioning the legality of naming political independents to the commission at all. Clower and Gibbs are independents - along with Nancy Hadley of Sandpoint, who has been on the commission since 1997.

Clower's appointment escaped Noh's committee last Friday only after members agreed not to take a stand for or against the man who had personally attacked several of them in the past; questioned the integrity of some state game management decisions and led the successful campaign to oust former Fish and Game Director Steve Mealey who had many legislative allies.

ACROSS THE NATION

Idaho: High pressure over the gem state produced mostly sunny skies and unseasonably warm temperatures Thursday. Cloudiness was limited mostly to thin high clouds passing over the state. Elsewhere: A low pressure system moving across the Great Lakes brought light to moderate snowfall to the Ohio Valley on Thursday, while the Southeast and western United States had generally fair conditions. Snowfall extended to the Northeast and central Appalachians, with the heaviest accumulations in western Pennsylvania, southeastern Ohio, West Virginia and northern Kentucky. Some areas recorded more than 2 inches. Mostly clear skies dominated from the southern Plains to the Southeast, but central and southern Florida had cloudy conditions with a few showers. Apart from a few clouds over the Rockies and the Northwest, most of the western United States had fair skies. The exception was California, where low pressure offshore spread showers and mountain snow over the northern and central part of the state.

Agriculture secretary looks to new farm policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman says the administration's proposals for $11.5 billion in new farm spending will "lay the groundwork" for developing a new agricultural policy that is better for the environment and targets money to small-scale producers. "At the top of the administration's wish list is a new system of "supplemental income" payments targeted to small and medium-size farms and estimated to cost $5.6 billion through 2002, when the 1996 farm law is set to expire. The administration wants to spend an additional $2.7 billion for conservation programs, including $1.2 billion in direct payments to farmers who take steps to curb runoff of pesticides and fertilizers from their land. An additional $1.3 billion would go toward expanding the federally subsidized crop insurance program and providing discounts to farmers on the premiums. To Glickman and some farmers, the "supplemental income" program would correct they see as a flaw in the Republican-authored 1996 farm law, which scaled back on crop subsidies, ended controls on planting and gave farmers a series of annual payments. Critics say the fixed payments were insufficient when commodity prices fell sharply in 1998.

Census

Continued from A1 minorities who get missed. In 1990, census officials estimate they undercounted Indians on reservations by 12.2 percent; Hispanics 5.5 percent; blacks 4.4 percent; and Asian Americans 2.3 percent. They estimate that only 0.7 percent of non-Hispanic whites were not counted. The estimates were based on intensive second interviews with members of 300,000 households. Undercounting can be costly to communities, because they can lose out on funding for everything from schools to fire stations. It can also mean the loss of political representation. That's why activists like Ana Maria Soto spend many nights and weekends talking to community groups and church congregations about the census. "We're not getting our piece of the pie, and that needs to change because we're hungry," says Soto, regional census director for the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund in Chicago. The Federation for American Immigration Reform has twice sued the Census Bureau to get it to stop including illegal immigrants in numbers used to apportion seats in Congress. Both lawsuits were thrown out. "As a matter of fairness, it's hard for folks whose ancestors built this country to understand how they could be losing political representation to people who just crashed our borders and entered illegally," says Dan Stein, executive director of the lobbying group.

Work

Continued from A1 manslaughter in the shaking death of Hailey Williams, his ex-fiance's daughter. At the end of the sixth months, District Judge Daniel Meehl will review the sentence and decide whether to send Thrush to prison for at least five years or release him on probation. The fact that Thrush is allowed to work outside the jail angers Hailey's family and renews their belief that he is getting special treatment because of his law enforcement background. "I knew he wasn't treated like a regular prisoner," said Pauline Anderson, Hailey's great-grandmother. "How many prisoners do you know that are in for manslaughter and get out ... on work release?" Hailey's mother, Angela Williams, said she's trying to move on and doesn't like to think about Thrush. "I try not to get myself angry about it," she said. Gough said Thrush is treated like all other inmates. That means he doesn't get favors and, on the other side of the coin, he doesn't get punished more harshly than other inmates with the same classification, he said. "He's no different than any other inmate here," Gough said. "We can't single him out."

How they voted

How is the 2001 legislative session which the Senate on Thursday confirmed the appointment of Don Clower to the Fish and Game Commission. Idaho

Continued from A1 Countering that was the fact that Clower led the successful drive to defeat the 1996 initiative to ban certain bear hunting tactics in what his allies contend showed he was where sportsmen needed him when the chips were down. Since Friday, however, the Republican governor intensified the pressure on key members of the nation's most Republican Legislature to preserve the decision he made last July after an elaborate screening process headed by GOP Lt. Gov. Butch Otter. And it still took an early morning meeting to resolve a last-minute glitch. An e-mail had surfaced, apparently from the Wildlife Council that Clower used to head. It raised questions among Clower's critics that the council was out to replace two sitting commissioners, Chairman John Burns and Commissioner Wood of Burley when their terms expire this summer. But Thursday morning's meeting between key lawmakers, Kempthorne and Clower flopped because that Clower was involved in any way. The Senate victory came as the House Resources and Conservation Committee introduced a $4.4 million sportsmen's fee increase that has been pushed by the commission and by new Kempthorne majority again way to dig the department out of a deepening financial hole. After sitting on the sidelines during last year's debate over sportsmen's fees that ended in defeat of a more modest proposal in the wake of Mealey's ouster, the governor endorsed this year's proposal. Tenet says Deutch was careless, but not a spy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former CIA Director John Deutch may have been careless in putting classified material on a home computer connected to the Internet, but no one thinks he was engaged in espionage, CIA Director George Tenet told Congress on Thursday.

Tenet made that assertion after Sen. Wayne Allard, R-Colo., likened Deutch's actions to those of former-Los Alamos scientist: Wen Ho Lee — now jailed on an indictment for comparable computer practices — and questioned why Deutch was being treated differently.

Meanwhile, Justice Depart-

John Deutch George Tenet
Tenet disputed a parallel between Deutch and Lee. "In one instance, there is an intent to do harm to the United States. That's a legal judgment that's been made. In the other instance, a similar legal judgment was not made," Tenet told the Senate Armed Services Committee. "I don't think the cases are similar."

However, Lee was not charged by the government with espionage. Instead, he was indicted on 59 counts related to the alleged mishandling of U.S. nuclear secrets, including transferring top-secret files from a secured computer to one that was not secure.

Lee has denied any role in alleged attempts by China to steal U.S. nuclear secrets at the weapons laboratory. He is being held without bond and could face life in prison if convicted.

Although Deutch has not been prosecuted, Tenet stripped him of his security clearances last August — nearly three years after he left the job he held from 1995-1996.

Deutch, who previously was deputy secretary of defense, is a chemistry professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Calls by The Associated Press to his office at MIT and messages left at his home were not returned.

Senate confirms Greenspan to fourth term

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hailed as the "greatest central banker in the history of the world," Alan Greenspan overwhelmingly won confirmation Thursday for a fourth term as chairman of the Federal Reserve.

The Senate voted 89-4 to approve President Clinton's nomination of the Republican Greenspan, 73, for a four-year term that will run until June 2004.

His confirmation came one day after the Federal Reserve voted to boost a key interest rate for a fourth time since June in an effort to slow down the U.S. economy down and keep inflation in check. Greenspan was first nominated to the Fed job, often called the second most powerful in the country because of the central bank's control over interest rates, by Ronald Reagan in 1987.

He subsequently was nominated for three more four-year terms — once by George Bush in 1992 and twice by Clinton, first in 1992 and then again in January.

Clinton's decision to nominate Greenspan again was widely expected. It was unlikely a Democratic president could have gotten anyone else confirmed by the Republican-controlled Senate so close to the end of the presidential term. After the Senate vote, Clinton said in a statement that "Greenspan's wise and steady leadership has inspired confidence here in American and around the world. ... He has made a truly remarkable contribution in helping lead our nation to the longest economic expansion in our history."

Greenspan's Senate supporters also cited the current 107-month economic expansion, which this week became the longest in U.S. history, as evidence Greenspan's tenure has been successful.

Navy to keep control of Russian tanker

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Navy decided Thursday to divert and retain control of a Russian tanker stopped in the Persian Gulf, pending a decision on whether to seize oil U.S. officials believe came from Iraq in violation of a U.N. embargo. Russian officials said the oil is from Iran.

The Russian-flagged commercial ship is to be diverted to a yet-to-be-determined anchorage in international waters and then possibly turned over to a third country, said Pentagon spokesman Adm. Craig Quigley.

He said U.S. Navy personnel assigned to an international inspection operation boarded the ship Wednesday by helicopter without resistance and have gathered "enough evidence to say we believe this vessel is carrying contraband."

The guided missile cruiser USS Monterey, operating as part of an international force monitoring Persian Gulf waters, stopped the Russian merchant vessel Volga-Nef-147 Wednesday off the coast of the United Arab Emirates, the Pentagon said.

Idaho's farm heritage shouldn't drive graduated license debate

Open virtually any newspaper in the country and it won't take long to find a story about someone who was killed in a car wreck. You've seen them before, sprinkled with terms such as "inattentive driving," "single-car collision," "not wearing seat belts" and "thrown from the vehicle."

This newspaper has published hundreds of those stories over the years. They are depressing to write, but what's even more depressing is that too many of the victims are teenagers.

It's time for Idaho to adopt a graduated license system that eases young drivers onto the road.

dents. According to the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, 16-year-olds are killed in car wrecks at a rate nearly three times higher than the general population.

As a group, teen-agers account for only 7 percent of the driving population, but they are involved in 14 percent of the wrecks and 21 percent of fatal accidents.

So why does Idaho resist graduated licenses?

The argument is that young 'uns need to drive as soon as possible, so they can drive trucks on the farm. But California and Florida, both of which have graduated license laws, have more farms than Idaho - and farmers in those states still get their crops in.

Idaho's stubbornness on the issue is helping no one, but it is hurting many. Why hand our young drivers the keys to the highway before they grasp the deadly potential of heavy vehicles traveling at high speed? Why do we keep burying so many young drivers?

Under many state laws, says Kathleen Marvaso of the American Automobile Association, "You need more practice time to be licensed to cut hair than to train someone to drive a three-ton piece of steel."

Graduated licenses teach young drivers the value of patience and safety. Plenty of other states have figured this out already. Idaho should join the list.

Half of America's states already have such a system. Many have additional provisions requiring parents to teach their children, and barring young drivers from carrying teen-age passengers.

The measures make sense because a disproportionate number of teen-age drivers are involved in serious acci-idents. According to the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, 16-year-olds are killed in car wrecks at a rate nearly three times higher than the general population.

McCain looks genuine next to Bush's spin

Conventional wisdom - which often consists of six reporters sitting around a bar - says John McCain is a night-flying fluke who'll vanish before the first caucus pops up.

The CW says George Bush's money, endorsements and conservative base will squish McCain like a bug on an 18-wheeler windshield.

The CW is smugly sure that Republican elites have too big a stake in George W. to let him lose.

The CW is confident that South Carolina, where Dixie traditionalists always protest the front-runner, will prove on Feb. 19 that McCain is just a one-shot freak - an asterisk in history like Gene McCarthy, Gary Hart or Pat Buchanan.

The CW could be wrong about John McCain.

It's possible that McCain is a different creature - a transcending combination of new and old - who busts out of the conventional box of presidential campaigns.

My guess is that McCain's 18-point landslide over Bush in New Hampshire was a revolt against spin. People are sick of being manipulated by TV ads, slick images, poll-driven slogans. Bush came across as a smirking poster child for Big Spin.

But McCain, with his town-hall free-for-alls and a persona that meshes charm and firmness, seemed the real thing. The most telling numbers in exit polls: New Hampshire folks rated McCain by 57 percent to 17 percent over Bush for "saying what he believes."

Since Bush outspun McCain 2-1 and was praised by every Republican establishment column - including the senior Bush, probably a mistake - no wonder voters rebelled against the Big Spin. They didn't care about Bush's tax cuts or McCain's campaign reform. But they liked the glint in McCain's eye, the steel in his voice. "Character trumps message," said a stunned GOP consultant.

So maybe McCain rode the anti-spin whirlwind, the revulsion against big-money slickness Bush personified. But McCain also exemplifies something old in the American republic - converting military heroism into votes. The pantheon runs from Washington through Jackson, Grant, Teddy Roosevelt and Eisenhower.

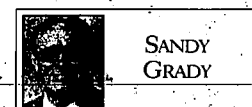

No coincidences that at every appearance McCain's staffers hung a blowup of McCain (same photo on his book jacket) in pilot gear before the Oct. 16, 1967, shootout on his A-1 jet and five prison years. It's odd that McCain's heroism resonates in a time of peace. Most young voters know war only through TV reruns of "Saving Private Ryan."

But McCain has a story. Bush doesn't. In comparison, McCain seems mature, serene, tempered by life's crucible.

George W. seems callow, cocky, a rookie hustling to make prime time. McCain coolly emphasizes their different experiences: "I am fully prepared to be commander in chief. And I won't need on-the-job training."

What McCain is doing - running on his personality against the Big Spin - isn't totally novel. Jimmy Carter pulled it off in 1976's anti-Watergate fervor. Ronald Reagan made it work in 1980's anti-Washington revolt. But the CW sneers that 2000 in different: McCain is over-matched against Bush Inc.

I'll say this: If McCain can crack South Carolina, he can win anywhere. He could light a prairie fire that Bush can't squelch. You'll now see George W. practice the lessons he learned from the late Leo Atwater: "Just keep saying liberal, liberal, liberal and you've got your opponent by the b.s.," advised Atwater.

Bush can hardly top McCain as a flaming lib (his Senate voting record is staunchly right), but he will denigrate McCain as "not a real Republican."

Since South Carolina Republicans are usually obedient to the state leadership, McCain must play an outsider role. Use his town-hall technique to stir revolt, win independents and Reagan Democrats, count on the state's 400,000 veterans to answer his bugle.

"It's tough but doable," says Lee Bandy, veteran political reporter for The State newspaper in Columbia.

You can't overlook the huge media wave McCain will be surfing. Even tradition-bound South Carolina, where the Confederate battle banner waves, can't ignore the McCain saga dominating print and TV. That post-New Hampshire fame, pay off in fresh money for McCain, who drew a million bucks in $100 donations from Internet fans.

What could inspire South Carolina's chalk players - and terrify the party elite - is a growing heresy that McCain, not Bush, is the most electable 2000 Republican. McCain has a firmer timbre in his voice when he says, "I'll beat Al Gore like a drum."

Sure, Bush is still the fat-walnut front-runner. But don't discount loathing toward the Big Spin. I suspect John McCain is one more win from playing out a remarkable drama.

The CW could be wrong. And not for the first time.

We'll miss you, Carla

Carla Reed, you will be missed! The Twin Falls County Farm Bureau extends a deep appreciation for the battles you fought and the hours you contributed in behalf of agricultural and county issues as Twin Falls County commissioner. We felt we had an ally for agriculture who would listen to our problems and weigh the information before making a decision. You always asked "why?" This three-letter word brought out some interesting explanations and reasons why and how things were handled. We felt you were an individual that had the same values as our members and looked out for our interests and those of Twin Falls County.

We hope whoever is appointed to replace you as county commissioner has the deep conviction that you have extended to this position.

We won't miss you, Carla

I strongly disagree with Commissioner Hempleman's statement that Carla Reed's departure from the Twin Falls County Commission was "quite a loss" (Times-News, Jan. 25).

I further disagree with his statement that "things will stay under control."

The commission has been "asleep at the switch," especially on environmental issues, and the reality is that things are out of control!

As a former resident of Twin Falls, I have followed your website to stay in touch.

Can't you fellows cram in any more advertising banners? I find your new

I visit your website every night, and I will continue to do so, however, your decision to increase the ads demonstrates that good judgment has succumbed to greed.

Put your family where your mouth is Tena Allen-Howard and William J. Weida really hit the mark with their reader comments in the Times-News on Jan. 27 and Jan. 28.

I especially loved Tena's comment that asks, "Would Mr. Aches be so confident in his 'state-of-the-art' waste management system to move his entire family into his hog farm and have them work there seven days a week, 365 days a year?"

He's not going to move to the Raft River area. I have only one question for Mr. Aches: If this is such a great and wonderful project, why aren't you building it in Ketchum?

Cassia County commissioners, please turn Mr. A. gas down.

Basketball

I thought the only contact sports in high school were boxing, wrestling, football and kissing. It seems now that all these sports, except kissing, have been transferred to the basketball court: I have never before seen such rough, uncontrolled play as was shown in the Northside girl's basketball tournament. How far does this have to go before the referees will finally take control of the game and make it a basketball game instead of a shoving match?

Hate won't bring her back

Jesse Thrusch, a good and decent young man, in a moment of anger, took the life of a helpless child. He has never denied this fact. Once he realized what he had done, he called 911. He didn't run, he didn't hide, he told the truth and waited for his punishment.

The Twin Falls Sheriff's Department "went by the book" as far as rules were concerned, even though they were dealing with one of their own and were concerned about the safety of an officer in jail. While awaiting sentencing, Jesse tried to keep going but many outside forces made life difficult for him. They pressured the Filer Fire Department into dismissing him from service, they crumbled the reunion between his fiancée and him, it was ruled he could not associate with any of his circle of friends from law enforcement. Even his minister and church abandoned him.

At the sentencing, Judge Meehl read, from the law, the criteria for sending a person to prison. Jesse didn't fit the criteria. Jesse is already punishing himself daily. I know this because I have been with him and his mom through his whole horrid ordeal.

It is always easy to be outraged when something horrible happens to a child. What I have been forced to realize through this entire experience is that we often forget that this person, this criminal that is so easy to hate, is also someone's child. Jesse is a brother, a son, a grandson and a friend. No matter how many of you put stumbling blocks in his way while he is trying to rebuild his life, no matter how many hurtful things people say about Jesse, it will not bring Hailey back.

Jesse is serving the time he owes to the state of Idaho and will carry the weight of his decision long after his debt to the justice system is paid. As long as individuals seek to revisit this tragedy, they only continue the cycle of grief that anyone involved with this event has experienced. At the very least, even if you must continue to harbor ill will toward Jesse Thrusch, give Hailey's family a chance to remember her for her life, not her death. Continuing to dwell on her final moments of life takes away from those who knew her.

Burley librarians are best

Enjoyed the article in the Times-News on Jan. 24 about the Burley Public Library. I'm happy they were able to purchase three computers and their fancy equipment. However, the best equipment in the world isn't any good without good people to run it. The Burley Library certainly has them. Very good and dedicated employees. No request has been too difficult for them. I have been the recipient of their diligence in finding things for me. I hope when raises are passed out this year, they all get a big one. Thanks, everyone.

Before I was betrayed and busted, I thought only stupid people were the ones who got busted. How wrong I was! After sitting in our courtrooms and listening to case after case, my eyes were opened. I have begun to see the truth. I really thought the cops did their job honestly. I was a fool. I didn't know that they would go to the extent of setting people up by placing items in the trash, break in a door without knocking and announcing, then make an arrest. When you are in jail, they bring in evidence to make you look guilty, then change the charges and even lie about it in court. If you don't believe me, I challenge you to spend some time in our courtrooms and see for yourself.

The United States is now the largest incarcerator of its own people, mostly based on the so-called war on drugs. Is this something to be proud of? I think not.

As an activist, I have been fighting to save your tax dollars, put them back into education and help find better alternatives.

I challenge you to educate, treat and only incarcerate violent criminals.

NATION

Raising the minimum wage

The Senate may approve a bill that would boost the minimum wage by $1 a year over the next two years. Here is a look at the increases in the minimum wage and the nation's average hourly wage.

* Government began tracking average hourly wage in 1947.

Minimum wage bill battle starts

WASHINGTON (AP) - Foreshadowing a partisan, election-year battle, the White House Thursday hinted that President Clinton may veto a minimum wage increase if Republican lawmakers insist on keeping "narrowly written" tax breaks attached to it.

White House spokesman Joe Lockhart said the president is not opposed to tax reductions this year. But he also doesn't want GOP lawmakers to view that as "an excuse for providing narrowly written special-interest tax breaks for businesses that are doing quite well."

"The kind of unfunded, unpaid-for special-interest tax breaks that were put forward by Republicans in this bill do not increase the chances of getting a bankruptcy bill signed in this building," Lockhart said. "I expect the Congress to be realistic about how this will be paid for."

The Senate kicked off the fight Wednesday, passing a $1-an-hour minimum wage increase that the White House said was too stingy to workers and also would give unwarranted tax cuts to some businesses.

The Republican-written bill would gradually raise the current $5.15 hourly minimum wage to $6.15 by March 2002. The increase was contained in legislation revamping bankruptcy laws that passed 83-14, although there was no separate vote on the minimum wage provision.

The House has yet to pass its own minimum wage legislation because Republican leaders there lack the votes for a similar proposal. And with Clinton and Democrats complaining that the wage increase would take too long to phase in and opposing small business tax cuts that both GOP packages include, quick enactment seems unlikely.

With many Republicans - especially in the House - eager to avoid repeated campaign-season attacks on the widely popular issue, some increase seems likely to become law before Election Day. House leaders hope for a vote on the issue by late March.

"I hate it," House Majority Whip Tom DeLay, R-Texas, said Tuesday when asked about the minimum wage increase. "Obviously, we don't have the votes to stop minimum wage, so we ought to do something that lessens the burden on people that pay the wages."

Research holds hope for end to insulin shots

WASHINGTON (AP) - A technique that allows insulin-hormone to be stored in cells and then released as needed by a pill, eventually may offer a treatment for diabetes that does not require daily injections, researchers say.

The experiments, thus far, have been performed only on mice, but researchers say a system using an implanted insulin gene may be ready for human testing within two years.

In a study to be published today in the journal Science, researchers at Ariad Pharmaceuticals in Cambridge, Mass., and at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York said the cell engineering technique was able to control diabetes in a group of laboratory mice and is now being tested on larger animals.

Interstate 84 crash kills Burley woman

JEROME - A Burley woman died Thursday morning when she was in veered off Interstate 84 and crashed into a junkyard.

The 65-year-old woman was the only passenger not buckled up in the car. The other two passengers suffered minor or no injuries, the ISP said.

Speech therapist will have to serve sentence

TWIN FALLS - The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has ruled a Twin Falls speech therapist will have to serve a 26-month sentence for health care fraud.

A news release from the U.S. Attorney's Office said Mary Christine Michener, 49, argued in her appeal that the District Court was wrong to increase her sentence on the grounds that she had abused a position of trust. She also held that the court had erred in admitting testimony and physical evidence in the case.

The Circuit Court rejected all of Michener's arguments, the release said.

Michener was convicted in 1998 of 30 counts of mail fraud for defrauding Medicare, Medicaid and several Magic Valley health care providers out of more than $130,000 by overcharging, padding hours and billing for services that were not provided. She was sentenced in February 1999, to 26 months in prison, with five years of supervised release, and ordered to pay more than $90,000 in restitution.

The fraud involved agreements between Michener and the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, Bridgview Estates Nursing Home, West Magic Care Center and South Central Head Start.

Beware: Nigerian letter scam is back in Idaho

TWIN FALLS - An age-old scam has resurfaced in Idaho.

Residents throughout Idaho have been receiving official-sounding letters from Nigeria offering a share of $22.5 million dollars.

To get that share, however, the person must give a bank account number and other financial information, the letter says.

Once a person cooperates, Nigerian "officials" ask for more payments to cover taxes, fees, bribes, etc. to continue the transaction, which is never completed.

The scam has cost Americans hundreds of millions of dollars in recent years.

If you receive a similar letter contact the Idaho Department of Finance at 1-888-346-3378 or fax a copy of your letter to the U.S. Secret Service at (202) 435-5031.

Idaho Power spent less on Y2K than expected

BOISE - The much-discussed Y2K bug, which some people believed would bring a power and computer-dependent society to a halt, actually wound up costing Idaho Power Co. a lot less than expected, according to a news release.

The utility had expected to spend about $5.3 million to make its computers ready for Year 2000. But the cost only reached $3.7 million.

The 2 1/2-year effort included a complete analysis of computer systems, 17 hydroelectric plants, substations and the company's portion of three coal-fired power plants in Nevada, Utah and Wyoming.

The low cost was in part because the analysis showed fewer problems showed up that needed repair, and some potential problems never developed, the news release said.

Identity theft bill pops back up

By Michael Journee Times-News writer

BOISE - A follow-up piece of legislation would allow victims of identity theft to erase bad credit ratings they didn't accrue.

Rep. Randy Hansen, R-Twin Falls, brought the bill before the House Judiciary and Rules Committee Thursday. Last year, Hansen wrote legislation that made identity theft illegal; that bill became law.

Identity theft is the commandeering of a person's identity through a Social Security number or other personal identification or information.

Hansen said he drafted a bill last year to enable identity theft victims to clear their financial records, but never presented the bill.

The bill

House Bill 504 would allow a victim of identity theft to erase bad credit, accrued illegally by someone else.

What's next?

The bill will go through two more readings in the House Judiciary and Rules committee before being passed to the House floor for a vote. It must also pass through the germane committee in the Senate before a vote on the Senate floor. With Senate approval, the governor's signature will make the measure law.

times to use police reports and court documents to purge bad debt from their financial history.

"It is virtually impossible to get it off your record now," Hansen told committee members.

The committee unanimously voted to print the bill, which it will debate before deciding whether to send it on to the House floor.

Hansen, a second-year legislator, has presented several bills to various committees already this session.

Hogs put on hold in Cassia County

By Ruth Streever Times-News writer

BURLEY - A Kimberly man building a $12 million hog-feeding operation in Cassia County hasn't made much progress since receiving the county's OK more than a year ago.

Brent Dame predicted in January 1999 that he would populate his first of three livestock barns within a few months. But right now, Dame has only an office and a maintenance shop on his property.

And the project is not on hold because of a controversial county livestock moratorium. The holdup instead is at the Statehouse, where legislators are considering rules to govern hog farms.

Lenders are hesitant to finance a hog operation, while the rules for such an operation hang in the balance. And Dame says he's fully prepared to populate his property with cattle instead, if he can't proceed as planned with his 3,600-sow operation.

Burley eyes skate park

By Lorraine Cavener Times-News writer

BURLEY - Burley's young people would like to be able to skate in a new skate park by Memorial Day.

Plans for a skate park are in the works. Burley City Council member Adria Masoner told a group of Burley High School students on Thursday.

Masoner has been talking to young people in Burley about what they'd like to see in a skate park.

The City Council has allocated $90,000 out of the city budget over the next two years to build the new skating area at East Park near the Cassia County Fairgrounds. The city is now working with Purkiss-Rose, a California landscape architectural firm, on a design for the park.

The City Council is expected to give its final approval on the park at Monday's council meeting.

Masoner said involving young people in the plans for the skate park will show them the city cares about their needs.

"We want youth to know we care about them and their opinion," Masoner said. "I want these kids to feel they have ownership in this."

Ringle said the new skate park could have a path around the outside for inline skating and walking. Upgraded slides and swings for smaller children are also part of the proposal and there is talk about a future roller hockey rink.

"It could be frozen in the winter and used for an ice skating rink," Ringle said.

He said one of the best things about the location is East Park

FBI expert says tapes of alleged drug deal are legitimate

By Ruth Streever Times-News writer

BURLEY - An FBI audio expert told jurors Thursday that tapes he examined - outlining an alleged drug deal and other conversations between Dr. Charles Suits, an undercover agent and a county informant - are the originals.

Suits' defense team has cast doubt on the tapes being used as evidence, saying the originals have been edited and then duplicated.

Duplicating cassettes masks the editing process, because copying eliminates indications of editing, but audio expert Bruce Koenig said he followed several steps to determine the tapes were the originals.

The defense for Suits, a Burley doctor facing a drug possession charge, also continued its cross-examination of Cassia County sheriff's detective Randy Kidd, who led the Suits investigation. The defense questioned Kidd about the whereabouts of a police log recording a drug transaction between undercover agent Scott Ward and Suits.

Written logs are always kept by someone who is involved, although sometimes informally. Logs are often destroyed when information is transferred to an official report, because there is no longer any use for the logs, he said.

Kidd has been with the sheriff's department for 10 years, he said, and has been a detective three years. At the time of the Suits investigation he had led an average of more than 10 narcotics cases per year. The Suits investigation had been the first "reversal" he had ever participated in, a drug transaction in which the undercover agent delivers the controlled substance rather than buys it.

Reversals are less common because unlike drug purchases, there is only one opportunity to obtain the evidence, Kidd said.

Defense attorney Bill Manning also asked whether reversals are uncommon because they also "give rise to an offense of entrapment."

The defense says the conversations on the cassettes do not accurately reflect the conversations as Suits remembers them, and says the tapes have been edited. Kidd said he never showed informant Kathy Gann how to turn her recording device on and off, but he said he had never advised her to be careful not to turn off the device.

Manning also questioned Kidd about using Gann, Suits' former lover, as an informant. Manning also characterized Gann as a drug user who might have done anything to avoid being sent to prison on a probation violation charge.

Kidd said he had been aware she had violated her probation once, but not twice. He also said

Forest Service pulls rancher's permit

By N.S. Norkentved Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A series of violations has cost a local rancher a portion of his permit to graze his livestock on federal public land.

Joe Tugaw of Twin Falls runs cattle in the South Hills on the Sawtooth National Forest south of Hansen. But his permit was cut by 10 percent because he violated conditions of his permit last year, said Forest Service Burley-Twin Falls, District Ranger Pete Peterson.

During last year's grazing season, some of Tugaw's cows strayed outside his grazing allotment and fences were not adequately maintained.

Peterson said he cut Tugaw's permit by 10 percent for the next two grazing seasons - this year and 2001.

The second year of the cut would be suspended if Tugaw complies fully with his grazing permit and plan, Peterson wrote in a letter to Tugaw last month.

If violations continue, additional permit action could result, Peterson warned. In addition, grazing along Harrington Fork Creek would be halted this year.

Tugaw, recently elected regional vice president of the National Cattlemen's Beef Association, agreed that Harrington Fork should not be grazed. He declined to comment on the 10 percent cut.

Tugaw last year said the problems are not as serious as Peterson has made them sound, and said a permit cut is not justified. Most of the problems resulted from cows getting out through open gates and broken fences.

Last October, Peterson wrote Tugaw notifying him of the violations and the intended consequences. Forest officials on several occasions had found small bunches of cows where they were not supposed to be, including one vacant allotment that was not supposed to be grazed.

Most of the problems with the stray cows were probably related to problems with fence maintenance, Peterson wrote. Typically grazing allotments are broken into units, grazed in sequence and then rested to spread the effects of grazing more evenly over the entire allotment.

Peterson noted similar violations during the 1998 grazing season, and proposed cutting Tugaw's permit by 20 percent - either fewer cows or a shorter season - for the next two years. He also closed Harrington Fork canyon to cattle grazing during the next grazing season.

But in most cases, cattle were being rounded up before he was notified by Forest Service. Tugaw wrote in response to Peterson's proposal cut. The cows got out of their pastures eight times. Five times were the result of gates left open by other forest users, twice cows broke through fence corners that had been repaired and one time the fence crew had failed to maintain a section of fence.

After touring the allotment with Tugaw and reading his response, Peterson reduced the cut to 10 percent.

he had not been aware drug paraphernalia was found in her home at the time of her second violation, although he had been aware of her drug problem.

When asked if drug users are reliable informants, Kidd said they were. Given the right motivation to cooperate, they usually do.

Kidd said Gann was the only official source who told the sheriff's office that Suits used methamphetamine. Under defense questioning, Kidd said the sheriff's office had been told Gann's reports through the taped conversations.

The trial will continue today at 9 a.m. in the Cassia County Courthouse.

Panel drafts rules for power mergers in wake of ScottishPower controversy

BOISE (AP)—With the controversy over ScottishPower's takeover of PacifiCorp and its 53,000 eastern Idaho customers still fresh in their minds, members of a special legislative panel on Thursday began circulating legislation to assure ratepayers protection in future electric utility deals.

But the proposal, still subject to revision, falls short of earlier discussions that state regulatory approval of any new mergers or acquisitions be contingent on a rate reduction or a moratorium on rate increases.

In fact, Sen. Robert Lee of Rexburg, where opposition to the ScottishPower deal was intense, said provisions of the draft bill would probably have resulted in no change in the conditions ultimately agreed to by ScottishPower in last year's PacifiCorp purchase.

"We would be leaving it to the Public Utilities Commission and their best judgment," Lee said.

"But they would know where we're going."

The panel plans to meet later this month to finalize the bill so it can be formally introduced for consideration this year.

The proposal is prompted in part by concern that the next takeover target would be Idaho Power Co., once it secures new federal licenses to operate its Hells Canyon hydroelectric dam complex. The state's largest electric utility currently has the lowest rates in the nation, and electricity deregulation skeptics believe any takeover would only result in higher rates.

The criticism of the utility regulators' approval of the ScottishPower-acquisition last year has faded to an acknowledgment that under existing state law the commission had no alternative.

To give it more flexibility, the draft legislation would require that any merger result in a positive impact on the public interest — better service, lower rates, stronger financial structure — rather than simply not adversely affecting the public interest.

It also precludes approval of any deal that would change water project operations, or adversely affect other water right holders.

ScottishPower agreed to resolve water rights questions in the Henry's Fork of the Snake River and the Bear River basins and voluntarily promised customers a 1.7 percent credit on existing rates for several years and a self-imposed moratorium on any rate increase request until 2002.

Officials ask public to help keep track of chemical cleanup in at-risk regions

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Twenty Silver Valley families have children with too much lead in their blood.

Of 524 children tested from 1996 through 1999, 58 had blood-lead levels at or above the safety threshold, according to new information from a state contractor.

The fact that children in the silver mining district suffer from too much lead in their blood is not new.

But a series of public workshops starting this week are, and government officials hope they will show ways to reduce blood lead levels in the valley's children.

Right now, the Panhandle Health District finds the youngsters with high lead levels and counsels families on reducing exposure. Until there is a mining pollution cleanup plan in place, however, that is as far as it goes.

A cleanup plan based on hot spots where children show high blood-lead levels, as proposed by Idaho officials, could stem from this information. Federal and Coeur d'Alene tribal officials, meanwhile, are pushing for a broad cleanup effort. But the children's conditions are part of their conversations.

"Everybody that's watching this process on a weekly basis, that's what they're watching," said Ian von Lindern, president of contractor TerraGraphics Environmental Engineering.

A Thursday workshop on gauging human health risks posed by lead and other mining-related metals was the first public airing of Idaho's research. It is the first of three workshops by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to educate residents about basin cleanup plans.

The workshops will map out areas in the basin to gauge chemical exposure, identify the chemicals and examine the amount the tribe ingests by eating Coeur d'Alene, River fish and water potatoes, a tuber used as a traditional food source.

The gatherings will give people the chance to double-check the state's assumptions, such as the time children play in their yards, said Michele Nanni of The Lands Council environmental group.

Idaho officials are hoping to broker a deal to avoid any Superfund listings in the basin outside the Bunker Hill smelter area.

The state got a six-month federal reprieve to broker the settlement of a lawsuit between the tribe, U.S. Department of Justice and numerous mining companies.

Counties, schools rocked by news of dwindling timber sale revenues

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — Officials in Idaho and Clearwater counties expected the decline of the timber industry meant the loss of federal revenues.

But the news that the two counties can expect less than half of last year's timber tax revenues from U.S. Forest Service lands still came as a shock.

"I've been telling people it's coming for a long time, and nobody really gets excited until it happens," Idaho County Commission Chairman George Enneking said Wednesday.

"What it means is that the schools and the road districts will get half the money they got last year."

The only way the schools could possibly make it up would be through raising the property tax. And road districts are essentially defenseless, because of a 3-percent annual growth cap on how much the counties can levy.

"I guess we could see the handwriting on the wall that it's going to continually get worse as long as they continue not to sell timber," Clearwater County Commissioner Earl Pickett said.

About 85 percent of Idaho County is public land and nontaxable. Clearwater County is about 68 percent public land. Both used to receive 25 percent of the timber tax receipts from trees cut during the year. Thirty percent goes to schools and 70 percent to the county roads.

But the timber industry has tumbled, so the "25 percent fund," as it is called, has shrunk accordingly.

Enneking said at one time Idaho County received $7 million a year, down to $450,000 this year. Clearwater County went from a high of more than $900,000 in 1991 to $275,000.

The Clinton administration has proposed "depleting" the timber payments, meaning the federal government would pay the county a set fee instead of a percentage of timber receipts.

But neither commissioner favors that idea, saying it would remove any incentive for the Forest Service to continue logging federal lands and would gut timber employees out of work.

School districts based at Grangeville and Orofino also have been bracing for the cutback.

Superintendent Wayne Davis of Grangeville said the school board budgeted 35 percent of what it received in timber payments last year, which is expected to be about $224,000. Last year the payment was about $600,000.

The district this year cut several programs including sports, extracurricular academic events and school lunches.

In the Orofino district, timber receipts are expected to be down about 60 percent from last year, which was about $200,000.

The money is set aside for special maintenance projects, but has never been used in the general maintenance and operations. Superintendent Alan Felgenhauer said the district has been spending a quarter million dollars yearly for needed projects and he expects a huge drop.

Committee endorses antitrust law

BOISE (AP) — The House State Affairs Committee unanimously endorsed replacing the state's 1911 antitrust law with a new Idaho Competition Act that reflects modern commercial realities.

A proposal sent to the House floor on Thursday is the result of an effort started last winter by House Speaker Bruce Newcomb.

The Burley Republican's call for help with the issue resulted in cooperation from a number of legal experts and representatives of some of the state's largest employers and most powerful business interests, including the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry.

"It should have been done a long time ago," Newcomb said.

Rep. David Callister, a Boise Republican cosponsoring the bill, said the sweeping changes would bring Idaho's law largely into conformance with federal antitrust statutes by eliminating outdated, ambiguous, unreasonable and, in some cases, virtually unenforceable laws now on the books.

"This bill contemplates much better how business is done today," he said. "It brings surety and stability to the law."

Deputy Attorney General Brett DeLange, head of Attorney General Al Lance's Consumer Protection Unit, said the proposal also has the advantage of reflecting almost 90 years of court precedent on unreasonable restraint of trade through such practices as price fixing and bid rigging.

State salary hikes get only token resistance

BOISE (AP) — There was little more than token opposition as the House overwhelmingly approved Gov. Dirk Kempthorne's plan for boosting state employee compensation in the coming year.

The plan sent to the Senate on Thursday for final legislative approval calls for earmarking 3.5 percent of payroll for merit raises worth $14.6 million and increasing starting pay 5 percent at a cost of $1.3 million.

Republican Rep. Robert Schaefer of Nampa, floor sponsor of the measure — that was approved 57-11, said it was a solid way of helping ensure state government remains competitive in the labor market.

But Democratic Rep. Bert Marley of Pocatello spoke for opponents in arguing that more money should be provided since a number of employees would get no raise under the plan.

Officials question term limit numbers

Proponents may not have made ballot deadline yet - but there's still time

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) - State and county election officials say it is highly unlikely Citizens for Term Limits really has enough signatures to qualify a new ballot initiative, despite the group's claims.

Campaign chairman Don Morgan now says the Hayden Don Lake-based organization has collected signatures from the required 6 percent of voters from 22 counties, but is shy of the necessary 39,686 signatures by about 10,000.

spent close to $37,000 petitioning for the new initiative, according to the group's campaign finance report. It contracted with National Voter Outreach Inc. of Carson City, Nev. to do the petitions. Morgan explained it was because of the sheer volume of signatures required under Idaho law.

Morgan announced Tuesday his group had "an adequate number of signatures to qualify a tougher term limits initiative for the November 2000 ballot."

"The company we contracted with assured us that they could get those signatures within a couple of weeks," he said. "We're holding off to see what the Legislature will do. At this point it doesn't look like they'll do anything, which is the right thing."

But calls to 37 of Idaho's 44 counties Wednesday revealed only 15 had received petitions from the group for verification. And they totaled fewer than 8,000 valid signatures. Of 4,495 signatures turned in to Ada County, only 2,741 checked out.

Late Wednesday, Morgan said the group was recounting its petitions. He said he thought counties had verified far more than 8,000 of his signatures. "I'd also like to add some of these counties have joined the lawsuit and don't particularly like us," he said.

"It really isn't a good idea to hold onto those signatures," said Penny Yursa of the Idaho secretary of state's office. "The people that signed may have moved or not be properly registered now, even though the signatures may have been valid at the time."

Morgan was referring to a lawsuit filed in eastern Idaho by a group of local officials, challenging Idaho's existing term-limits law.

The group has been trying to pressure lawmakers not to repeal their own term limits, by threatening an event tougher initiative if they do.

County election officials count the signatures to ensure they are from valid registered voters in the county.

"At this point they have not submitted any petitions to us for verification or certification," said Bonner County Clerk Marc Scott. "We haven't heard a thing," said Marilyn Rasmussen, Madison County Clerk.

Citizens for Term Limits has to qualify an initiative for the ballot, petitions must be turned in to county clerks' offices by April 30.

Idaho panel will seek ways to consolidate student tests

BOISE (AP) - State Schools Superintendent Marilyn Howard will appoint a committee of educators, administrators and parents to study the exploding growth of tests Idaho students must take.

district officials complain that too much testing takes away from education time.

The goal is to create a battery of achievement tests that is acceptable to all 17 school districts, eliminate duplication and yield results educators and parents can use.

And Idaho students are on the verge of a whole new set of tests. Eleventh-graders could face exams in reading, math, writing, science, social studies, language and health before receiving diplomas under state graduation standards. Pilot testing of those exams could begin next year.

"We can get a plan here so tests are not just coming from every direction," Howard said Wednesday.

Idaho students already take at least four standardized state or national exams each year. Depending on their grade and where they live, students take as many as three more - plus many local achievement tests. School Fourth- and eighth-graders likely will get more exams, too, as the state considers benchmark tests for both grades. Those tests could begin in 2001.

SNOW BUSINESS

Forest Service program tells tales of years gone - and does a bit of lobbying

SOUTH LAKE TAHOE, Calif. (AP) - In 1906, a professor from the University of Nevada, Reno devised the world's first snow surveying equipment that would measure water content - an important gauge for people in the arid Western United States.

It was a butter sampler that gave Dr. James E. Church the idea to drill a core sample from the snow and weigh it for water content calculations.

Acting in character as Dr. Church, U.S. Forest Service Natural Resource Specialist Steve Hale tells the history.

Dressed in flannel, with snowshoes strapped to his feet, "Dr. Church" was seen in the afternoon sun taking snow samples at Mount Rose Ski Tahoe.

"Have you seen a group of students wandering around here?" he asked. "I hope they're not lost, it's a long walk up from Callahan's ranch (in the valley)."

Posing as the professor who died more than 50 years ago, Hale explained that it was an argument with loggers that inspired Church to measure the snow.

An insatiable need for lumber to support nearby mining operations in the last half of the 19th century turned Tahoe's thick pine forests into a field of stumps.

Loggers contended that cutting the thirsty timbers helped the Tahoe Basin's snowpack. Hale said Church disagreed, claiming that Tahoe's glaciers, which had no negative impact on water content.

The fight over water was called the "Tahoe Wars" and Church's steel invention that weighed the snow's water content helped him win the battle.

Adjusting his wool cap, Hale pulled out a metal stake much like the one used by Church at the beginning of the 20th century. Picking an untouched patch of snow, he wrenched the stake into the snowpack. The sample was set on a scale.

By weighing the cylinder, Church was able to determine the water content and predict runoff in the spring. He was also able to prove that the loggers were wrong.

Church, who taught Latin,

German and fine arts at UNR, was not a scientist by education. Science was a hobby that blossomed from his love of the outdoors.

In 1896, Church was the first white man to stand on top of Mount Rose's lofty 10,800-foot summit in the winter months. A traditionalist, he used snowshoes instead of skis.

During his travels to the top, he started recording the snow conditions and developed the "Mount Rose Snow Sampler." Almost 100 years later, it's still in use.

"The calculations are more mathematical now," Hale said. "But they still use Church's Snow Sampler) to test the data - his calculations were about 90 percent accurate."

Flight 261 tragedy separates friends, lovers

Mourners recall times spent with airliner victims

Knight Ridder News Service

A sandwich and a beer - and a stubborn ticket agent - made the difference between life and death for better friends Steve Edmonds and Bob Hovey.

The men were vacationing in Puerto Vallarta, and planned Monday morning after Edmonds changed his ticket by phone - to board Alaska Airlines Flight 261 together for a return trip to San Francisco.

"We got to the airport early and Bob said 'hey, let's get a sandwich and a beer,'" said Edmonds, the owner of an Los Angeles gelato company, Gelati Celesti, where Hovey worked as Northern California distributor.

After eating, they went to the ticket counter, but the agent there said he wasn't authorized to make the ticket changes for Edmonds. That's when they had left 10 minutes before.

"I argued, but I wasn't getting anywhere, so I gave up," said Edmonds. "If we hadn't gone for that sandwich and beer I would have been on that plane."

Edmonds said goodbye to his friend of 25 years as he boarded flight 261. Edmonds caught a later plane that day.

Edmonds and Hovey - like so many others throughout California and the nation - struggled with the settling grief of loved ones lost. As searchers called off the hunt for survivors, more stories of loss began to unfold - a heroic San Francisco firefighter, a young couple in love, a popular Berkeley musician, and an avid golfer, among others.

Edmonds knew nothing of the crash until he walked into his Los Angeles home late Monday night.

"It made me sick to my stomach. I couldn't believe it happened. I can't say I feel lucky. How can I say that? I lost my best buddy in the world."

The men planned a trip to Las Vegas in a few weeks.

"But I guess that won't come to be," Edmonds said. "Poor Bob, he wouldn't have been there if it weren't for me. I said, 'Let's go down to the beach, drink margaritas and get rowdy.'"

Friends of San Francisco firefighter Renato Bermudez had to learn early on to expect just about anything.

There was the bicycle trip from Europe to Alaska; the six-week trip to India with a literate day-by-day diary, emailed to friends. Then there was the yoga, the ballroom dancing - and the time he and a buddy still-walked at a Cinco de Mayo festival.

Also, there was his appearance - he was hairless, because of a genetic disorder.

"He was an amazing guy," said Jim Gallagher, a retired firefighter who became close friends with Bermudez.

"Renato was very strong in almost every sense of the word," Gallagher said. "Very literate, educated, very sensitive, very fit."

And after many jobs - teacher, real estate sales, among them - he found his niche, firefighting, a profession he loved.

He was 36 when he joined the San Francisco Fire Department. And it didn't take long for him to stand out.

On July 3, 1998, his crew on Truck 11 responded to a two-alarm fire in the Mission District, said Fire Lt. Edward Campbell. An elderly man was trapped in a smoky, second-story room.

Bermudez braved the smoky room, calmed the man and sought a way out, encountering still thicker smoke in the hall before guiding him out the window.

His actions won him a commendation from the city fire commission and the firefighter of the year award from the city's Council of District Merchants Association.

The trip to Puerto Vallarta was to be pure pleasure - a nice break from work, and a chance to visit his new wife. She traditionally spent winters in the Mexican resort town, and he decided to make a quick trip.

With their three boys gone and out of the house, Rodrigo and Naomi Laigo dedicated their leisure time to their passion: Golf.

Just two weeks ago, Rodrigo called his cousin, Solomon Laigo, to tell him he'd have to back out of a golf tournament scheduled for Jan. 28. He and his wife were going to play the links in sunny Puerto Vallarta.

Such golfing junkies were not unusual for the engineer who worked at Arco, and his wife, a nurse at a Solano County Kaiser Foundation Hospital.

"We played golf once a month," Solomon Laigo said. "We talked to each other, and ever any important thing came up, we'd call."

"I'm going to miss him," he said.

John Cuthbertson's enjoyed talking politics, cars and golf. And he did it regularly with his retired buddies who gather each morning at Christy's Donut Shop in Danville.

The 70-year-old retired plumbing contractor, who lives in Danville, with his wife Anita, traveled extensively, mostly to find the best golf courses throughout the world. He had gone to Puerto Vallarta to play golf.

"I loved the way he would come in every morning dressed so neatly as if he was going to a job," said Christy's owner Ky Phuon. Cuthbertson's wife had accompanied him to Puerto Vallarta, but returned to Danville a week before her husband.

Friends and co-workers on Wednesday remembered Larry Baldrige and his girlfriend Nina Voronoff, both of San Francisco, as a fun-loving couple who were expected to become engaged sometime.

Baldrige, 34, was an executive at Crediland - an Internet startup company - based in San Francisco's Multimedia Guild. He had gone to Mexico to meet up with Voronoff, 32, who had gone before him for a yoga retreat. She worked in the pediatric cancer unit at the University of California, San Francisco.

"He was a very warm, genuine human being - wonderful to work with," said Eileen Gordon, vice president of marketing at Crediland.

Dean Forshes, 47, of Benicia, was an accomplished guitarist known in local music circles for playing at various clubs and with pick-up bands.

He had gone to Puerto Vallarta with his brother for a brief vacation at the family's condominium, neighbors said. His wife, Susan de Silva, a Bank of America employee, decided not to join him. His brother returned home on an earlier flight.

The couple had only recently moved to the small seaside town of Benicia from Concord and had held a housewarming party for neighbors.

Forshes enjoyed growing hops in his back yard and made his own beer.

William Bryant and James Luque of San Francisco were best friends who spent time together nearly every day. Bryant was an agent at San Francisco's Travel Trends and was thrilled that he had a pair of complimentary tickets from Alaska Airlines to Puerto Vallarta. Luque could get out of town for a few days.

They left San Francisco for Puerto Vallarta on Jan. 26 to spend a long weekend relaxing in the sun.

"Will had gotten the free tickets and it was just perfect, and Jay was really excited about it," said Meme Pederson, owner of Taste Catering in San Francisco where Luque had worked since 1994.

"Will had lots of friends - a ton of friends," said Jay D'Amato, vice manager at Travel Trends. "People would come in all the time just to give him a hug. You never heard anyone say a bad word about him."

It wasn't until late Monday night that Pederson and her colleagues made the connection that Luque was probably on the downed flight.

"When something like this happens, you need something to hold on to," she said. "And I think all of us here felt that Jay was in such a good place in his life. He loved the people he was with, he loved his family."

"Life was so good. And he had a good tan."

Pilot's decision saved lives

Knight Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON - The pilot of Alaska Airlines Flight 261 acted heroically by steering his disabled plane away from the crowded Los Angeles airport and its populous rim, aviation experts say.

"It's a matter of if you are going to die, why take a bunch of people with you," said Bob Sweginnis, a veteran pilot and professor of aeronautical science at Embury-Riddle Aeronautical University in Prescott, Ariz. "They were thinking of people other than themselves."

Eighty-eight people aboard the MD-83 died Monday when the plane plunged into the Pacific Ocean 30 miles west of Los Angeles, the city's second biggest city. The dead included Capt. Ted Thompson, 53, and co-pilot William Tansky, 57, who minutes before the crash told flight controllers they'd rather stay over water.

Their initial plan, endorsed by flight controllers on the ground, had been to take the plane, whose rear stabilizer was jammed, into LAX. National Transportation Safety Board member John Hammerschmidt told reporters.

In their next to last transmission, however, the crew radioed controllers they were going to regain "configuration" - meaning restore control and level out over the Pacific.

"If you miss (the airport) and you want off you could do some serious damage," said Eric Doren, a former Federal Aviation Administration senior adviser and professor of air safety at Embury-Riddle's Daytona Beach, Fla., campus.

"If he had just come straight in without checking, what happened to him 20 miles out to sea could have happened to him in L.A. harbor conceivably. ... He was doing the right thing for everybody involved."

The difference, according to Sweginnis and Doren, could have been hundreds of lives.

"There's an element of heroism here," said C.O. Miller, former chief air crash investigator for the NTSB. "I can see a guy fighting this mother for six or seven minutes ... he didn't want to have to worry about trying this and having this really go out of control over land where people were."

Gary Bauer will bow out of race

WASHINGTON (AP) - Gary Bauer, the janitor's son who served in Ronald Reagan's White House and mounted a presidential bid of his own, has decided to drop out of the race, a source close to the conservative activist said Thursday.

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Bauer plans to announce the move at a news conference this morning.

Bauer is a well-established social conservative who fared well in presidential debates, needing front-runner George W. Bush on abortion and China policy. He also had some success raising money, primarily through a large network of small donors built during his work as a conservative activist in Washington.

However, Bauer had trouble carving out a constituency in a crowded field of GOP conservatives.

He could not climb above 1 percent in the critical New Hampshire primary.

With his wife Carol at his side, he conceded that he and said the voters of New Hampshire "have not endorsed me but without hesitation I endorse them as being great citizens."

Bauer has struggled to even make a dent in national polls, and finished in fourth place in the Iowa caucuses, ahead of only Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, who has since dropped out of the race, and Sen. John McCain of Arizona, who did not campaign in Iowa at all.

"Gary is having a news conference on Friday. That's all we're saying about it," said spokesman Tim Goeglein.

He would be the sixth Republican presidential candidate to drop out, leaving Bush, Sen. John McCain, millionaire publisher Steve Forbes and former ambassador Alan Keyes.

Bush, Forbes and Keyes have had more success than Bauer drawing conservative votes.

Forbes can finance his own campaign, but needs a primary victory soon to maintain his viability. Keyes has done surprisingly well in Iowa and New Hampshire, but is not likely to challenge for the nomination.

Bush, McCain converge on South Carolina voters

FLORENCE, S.C. (AP) - Responding more aggressively to his top rival's criticism, George W. Bush collected endorsements from retired generals and war heroes Thursday and accused John McCain of using "Washington-style politics" on the Social Security issue.

McCain continued to question Bush's fitness to lead. The Arizona senator told supporters in Beaufort he wouldn't need "on-the-job training" as commander in chief - suggesting Texas Gov. Bush does.

Hoping to dispel that notion and appeal to South Carolina's large military population, Bush accepted endorsements from a parade of veterans' groups, Medal of Honor winners, and retired generals, led by retired Adm. Thomas H. Moorer. "Just looking around at all these generals, kind of makes me feel like I'm already in the situation room," Bush joked, flanked by retired military men under a giant American flag.

Later he made a more pointed reference to McCain, who was a pilot and prisoner of war in Vietnam. There is "a big difference between being somebody who had a distinguished military career and someone who's trying to lead the country," Bush said.

McCain is banking on military support in the state's Feb. 19 primary, a crucial contest for his campaign. Bush served stateside in the Texas Air National Guard during Vietnam.

Speaking in Beaufort, McCain warned about the threats posed by Iraq, China, North Korea and international terrorists. "This is a very dangerous world that we still live in," he said, declaring himself "fully prepared to be commander in chief."

McCain also called for higher pay for the military, bemoaning the fact that some service members need food stamps. And he criticized the Clinton administration for conducting "foreign policy as social work."

Writer lands in trouble for sharing germs

The Washington Post

A Salon magazine writer who went undercover and tried to infect presidential candidate Gary Bauer with the flu has sniffed his way into a heap of trouble.

Dan Savage, who was stricken with fever, says he put a pen in his mouth, handed it to the candidate and asked for an autograph. A gay journalist who was working as a volunteer in Bauer's Iowa campaign, Savage also says he licked the doorknobs, telephones and coffee cups in the Des Moines office - all because he despises Bauer's fervent opposition to gay rights and gay marriage.

"To do what he did - wanting to infect people with the flu, and God knows what other germs he was carrying - is just inexcusable behavior," Bauer's Iowa campaign manager, Loras Schulte, said Wednesday. "It's reprehensible. Had he directed that just at me, I would have remembered my Christian admonition to turn the other cheek."

But I had men, women and children working in the office in very close quarters."

Savage also says he voted in the Iowa caucuses, despite the fact that he lives in Seattle. State Republican officials in Des Moines have asked the local prosecutor to launch a criminal investigation. Polk County Attorney John Sarcone confirmed that he is looking into the matter.

"The concern is that he registered to vote fraudulently," said Ann Dougherty, spokeswoman for the Iowa GOP. "He signed his paper illegally," Savage, she said, listed his Seattle residence as his old address and an Iowa hotel as his current one. The registration form says that anyone submitting false information faces a $7,500 fine and/or up to five years in prison.

David Talbot, Salon's editor, says he hasn't been inundated with so much hate mail since the online magazine disclosed a 30-year-old extramarital affair involving Illinois congressman Henry Hyde during the impeachment saga.

"The political culture has lost its sense of humor," Talbot said from San Francisco.

MORNING BREAK

Sir Walter Raleigh finds out that smoking kills

History records that Sir Isaac Newton lost the equivalent of about $2 million speculating on South Sea stocks. You'd think a fellow described by some as the smartest man in the world would have figured out how to make money on the stock market, no? No.

An English publisher named E.V. Lucas said, "I believe in punctuality, though it makes me very lonely."

At age 7, Shirley Temple was insured by Lloyd's with a contract precisely worded to bar payment of benefits if she were injured, fatally or otherwise, while drunk. To the South American Indian, the word "Chill" meant "the deepest point of the Earth." From that came the nation's name: "Chile."

WHAT'S WHAT L.M. Boyd

Overlord, as no doubt you've long known, was the code name for the Allied landing in France during World War II, and then only a few people could know the details of that operation. Those few were code-named "bigots," and when they received such supersecret clearance, they were said to be "bigoted."

Q. What's the first masculine name in the Bible?
A. Come on, you know that. Adam.

Hardly anybody recalls when turkeys were herded to market on long trail drives. But that happened. About 100 years ago, give or take from Vermont to Boston, for example. And from sundry other rural places to many another big town. History records no stampedes.

So lively is a good cranberry that it bounces. Bounces so well that an itty bitty basketball player could dribble it. Don't leave this item lying around with my name on it, okay?

Rich men tend to be fatter than poor men. Rich women tend to be thinner than poor women. According to one undocumented footnote in history, Sir Walter Raleigh clenched a smoking pipe in his teeth as he bent to the executioner's axe, and there it remained until death did it depart.

Britain gives Belfast an ultimatum

LONDON (AP) - Britain will strip power from Northern Ireland's fledgling Protestant-Catholic administration within days unless the Irish Republican Army promises to disarm, the government announced Thursday.

Northern Ireland Secretary Peter Mandelson said he would introduce legislation today transferring power back to London from Belfast. But the process would take several days and could be stopped if developments warranted, he emphasized.

Mandelson's statement was delivered to the House of Commons in London and watched closely by politicians in Belfast and Dublin. It was designed to buy a little more time for those struggling day and night to defuse the crisis that is on the verge of derailing Northern Ireland's peace process.

The crisis threatens the new four-party coalition cabinet that has given Northern Ireland a measure of local rule after years of direct rule by Britain.

The Ulster Unionists agreed in November to accept the IRA-linked Sinn Fein party as colleagues in the Cabinet established as part of 1998's Good Friday peace accord - but only on condition that IRA disarmament would follow.

Persecution fans the flames of students' dissent

Despair drives the Mexican strikers

MEXICO CITY (AP) - They see themselves as a new generation of rebels.

"They like 'direct action' and collective decision-making. They oppose entrance exams, university fees and selective admissions. They sport ski masks and Cuban-style field caps."

These striking students would be just a group of 2,000 marginalized malcontents - if it weren't for the fact that they have the Mexican government backed into a corner.

The strikers control the sprawling main campus of the National Autonomous University, Latin America's largest university system. For nine months they have occupied the school, locking out 260,000 classmates.

Many are young anarchists. They identify with Mexico's student protesters of 1968, hundreds of whom were gunned down by soldiers in a massacre that continues to haunt the nation.

Largely because of memories of that massacre, the government has shied away from moving against the strikers. Unwilling to retake the campus by force, it has encouraged university authorities to capitulate to some of the strikers' demands. But this week, the strikers may finally have stepped over the line: On Tuesday, they staged a bloody skirmish with anti-strike students, security guards and adults hired to chase strikers from a university-affiliated high school.

Federal police guard the Justo Sierra Preparatory School in Mexico City Wednesday, the day after they stormed the school and arrested about 250 striking students.

Thirty-seven people were injured, at least four of them critically. The strikers were seen beating apparently unconscious guards with poles and rocks and kicking their heads.

Amid the fury, the strikers show no signs of letting up. On Wednesday, they said the government had declared war on them and that they would keep striking until the university gives in to all their demands.

Their list of grievances includes widespread poverty, high unemployment and an ossified political system in which the ruling party has held power for 71 years. They feel isolated by adverse media coverage, abandoned even by most leftist professors and betrayed by the government's cuts in university funding. The levels of persecution have only increased their fervor.

Behind the barricades of window frames, logs and wire strikers have erected at the university gates. Miguel Abraxas, a 19-year-old student at a university-affiliated high school, vowed that "if provocateurs try to retake the university, there will be resistance."

Abraxas said that while the strikers won't allow classes to resume, "a learning process" was still going on in the university's abandoned classrooms: Striking students live, eat and sleep there and meet for marathon discussions, many of which lead to yelling and even occasional pushing and shoving. The students resist anyone who tries to cast himself as a leader of the movement.

Abraxas said. They often toss a coin to see who speaks for the group.

Alfredo Velarde, a 29-year-old "anarchist-communist" economics professor who has joined the strikers, said the strike is justified even though the vast majority of students voted to reopen the university.

"We represent the politically conscious and active fringe," Velarde said. "All the students are welcome to come in here when they want to discuss the strike with us."

Austria to swear in Haider today

VIENNA, Austria (AP) - Austria's president Thursday approved a new coalition government that includes Joerg Haider's extreme right-wing Freedom Party, despite threats of international ostracism and sanctions over Haider's anti-foreigner views and praise of Nazi policies.

President Thomas Klestil's office said the swearing-in ceremony will be at noon today.

Approval came shortly after Haider and his coalition partner, Wolfgang Schuessel of the centrist Austrian People's Party, renounced the nation's Nazi past and promised to respect European values.

But the announcement is likely to trigger a series of diplomatic measures against Austria. Israel already has banned Haider from visiting. The rest of the European Union warned Vienna that its EU membership could be suspended.

Haider and Schuessel signed the declaration in front of Klestil, who demanded the move before he would approve their government.

The statement of principles did not address comments that won Haider international notoriety. About a decade ago he praised Adolf Hitler's "orderly" employment policies and lauded veterans of the murderous Waffen SS as "decent people of good character." He also has opposed the European Union's expansion and urged a near-halt on immigration.

Study blames diarrhea rise on El Nino

LONDON (AP) - After linking El Nino with illnesses such as malaria, cholera and dengue fever, scientists now have connected the climatic phenomenon with an increase in childhood diarrhea.

The research led by the Johns Hopkins School of Public Health also suggests for the first time that gradual temperature increases related to global warming could foster outbreaks of diarrhea in children living in developing nations.

The study of 57,351 children in Lima, Peru, found that an increase in diarrhea cases between 1993 and 1997 was linked to even small rises in temperature, regardless of whether it was summer or winter. In fact, the effect was greater in winter, even though the weather was cooler.

Overall, the study, published this week in The Lancet medical journal, found that for every 1 degree centigrade (1.8 degrees Fahrenheit) hotter than normal it became, 8 percent more children arrived at a local clinic for treatment of diarrhea.

The findings were similar for the 1997-1998 El Nino period.

Bob Marley's band 'Wailers' play Twin Falls on Tuesday

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — There's still Bill Haley's Comets and a Duke Ellington Orchestra, but The Wailers are different subject altogether.

While those other bands are pale, third-generation copies of the groundbreaking originals, The Wailers wield the same vibe — heck, they're some of the same people who cooked up reggae 35 years ago in West Kingston.

Its link to its roots is Aston "Family Man" Barrett, a 54-year-old bass player who knew Bob Marley when Marley when a factory worker in Delaware.

Barrett and his brother, Carlton, joined Marley, Peter

Tosh and Bunny Livingston in a hard-scrabble quintet in 1969, produced by Lee "Scratch" Perry. International acclaim was several years away, but The Wailers — the nickname was Livingston's — crafted the bass-driven melodies that differentiated reggae from ska, the sound that dominated Jamaican pop in the 1960s.

"Reggae's distinctive sound was achieved by reversing instrumental roles," says "The New Rolling Stone History of Rock and Roll" (Fireside Books, $25). "The guitar functioned mainly as a rhythm instrument, scratching chords on the offbeats, while the bass played a melodic counterpoint to the vocals, the drums provided complex cross-rhythms and accents."

The music was sensation in Europe, but by other artists. Johnny Nash had an international hit with Marley's "Strife It Up" in 1973 and Eric Clapton with "I Shot the Sheriff" a year later.

BYU 'Living Legends' dance tonight

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

BURLEY — They're kind of selective auditions, Pete Codella concedes.

"You have to be of Native American, Latin American or Polynesian heritage to try out for this dance group," said Codella, a road manager for the Brigham Young University

Living Legends, which will start a seven-city Pacific Northwest tour with a performance in Burley's King Center tonight. "Even so, our director sometimes has to turn dancers away."

Living Legends refers more to the legacy than to the dancers, although they're among the best of the best in BYU's dance program. Organized in 1971 and originally called the Lamanite Generation, the 40-member troupe specializes in performing for its own native people.

It's danced all over the world, and will tour Brazil, Uruguay, Argentina and Paraguay in April and May.

Most of the group's authentic native costumes are made in the region — being portrayed.

WEEKEND

'My Son' wraps up foreign film fest

By Susan Seltzer Reynolds
Los Angeles Times

Over the past 15 years, Hanif Kureishi has been well loved by fans and critics in his own three-ring circus: movies, books and theater.

On the screen, he's given us "My Beautiful Laundrette," "Sammy and Rosie Get Laid" and "The Buddha of Suburbia." On the page, "The Black Album," "Love in a Blue Time" and, just last month, the novel "Intimacy." His short stories have appeared in Granta and the New Yorker. His plays, from "Soaking the Heat" to "The Mother Country" (an adaptation of "Mother Courage") and this year, "Sleep With Me," have been performed all over the world.

Om Puri and Rachel Griffiths in Udayan Prasad's 'My Son the Fanatic.'

So how does he manage this remarkable fear of mixed media? "Well, I suppose, really, the page is a sort of stage, in a way," Kureishi says.

This is not all the way his character speak. Certainly not in Kureishi's new film, "My Son the Fanatic," where characters burst in on their own interior lives like intruders opening a door too suddenly. They almost never stammer politely.

"My Son the Fanatic," a five-page story by Kureishi that ran years ago in the New Yorker, stars Om Puri and Rachel Griffiths. In this solemn jewel, Kureishi flips the generations — a liberal father watches with horror as his beloved son discovers Islam and dives over the fundamentalist edge.

At first Parvez, the father (Puri) thinks his son has gotten into drugs. He confides in his friend, m Bettina, a hooker (Griffiths), who rides in the taxi he drives for a living. The son's disapproval of his father's increasingly romantic relationship with Bettina and his father's disapproval of his son's fundamentalism barrel toward each other.

"Parvez was kind of a Virgil character for me," Kureishi says. "His connection to the world was through capitalism, not religion. I'm trying to understand the clash between fundamentalism and capitalism."

"Parvez thinks he's a liberal," says "My Son the Fanatic" director Udayan Prasad ("Brothers in Trouble"). "And yet he tries to force his son to follow his path."

Kureishi, dark-eyed and handsome, bourgeois and anti-bourgeois, says the idea for the movie came to him after reading a story in the Guardian about troubles between Muslim fundamentalists in Brighton and their working-class neighbors. Fascinated by puritanical religions, intolerance toward outsiders, the fatwah against Salmon Rushdie and the complexities of fatherhood (Kureishi has 6-year-old twins and a 1-year-old), he envisioned that single moment in which tax driver confides to prostitute in his tax that he is worried about his son. The movie is set in the north of England "a place I can only imagine," Kureishi says.

The original story ends with the father beating his son, an ending that Miramax studio chief Harvey Weinstein wanted to change. (Miramax bought the rights three years ago; it played in Cannes in 1997 and has done the festival circuit for the past two years to rave reviews.)

"He wanted something called a family ending, which has never actually happened to me before," Kureishi says. "I didn't want to change it, and he didn't force me," although the movie does have a different ending than the story.

Screening set in TF

Udayan Prasad's film and film festival in Foreign Film Festival 2000, will be screened Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. and again on Feb. 13 at 1 p.m. in The Orpheum, Twin Falls. Tickets, which are $7.50 for adults and $6 for senior citizens and children, can be purchased at the door or at the Magic Valley Arts Council office, Everybody's Business, Kurt's Hallmark & Pharmacy and Twin Cinema.

"I'm not expecting it to be a big hit," Kureishi says, but he probably said the same thing about "My Beautiful Laundrette," the popular mid-'80s film that was directed by Stephen Frears, starred Daniel Day-Lewis and won numerous critics' awards and was nominated for an Oscar for best screenplay.

Both Kureishi and Prasad wanted this film to be very much from the father's point of view.

"Kureishi always approaches things from an oblique angle," Prasad says. "His work is never prosaic, but his themes are huge. This makes for an exciting, flexible project, as opposed to a lecture."

"The length and poem-like purity of the story meant there was a lot to build on. I wanted the audience to experience the world as the father experienced it. I wanted them to ask themselves, 'So, who's the real fanatic?'"

Wailers

By that time, Tosh and Livingston had left the band for solo careers. Marley expanded the instrumental section of the group and brought in a female vocal trio, the I-Threes, which included his wife, Rita.

More importantly, The Wailers were now Marley's backing band, and "Family Man" Barrett was his musical arranger. Between 1974 and 1981, when Marley died of brain, lung and liver cancer, The Wailers sold 200 million records worldwide.

"He was a regular, ordinary guy doing some extraordinary work," Barrett said in a 1998 interview. "You can feel a vibration with him, feel it coming out. You can see how the people are reacting in the audience. Like the early years in London, they write upon us and said our first number came a spell, and then after that it was like magic."

The Wailers broke up in 1982, but Barrett reformed the band five years later.

"It's business, too," Barrett said. "After Bob pass, everybody was doing little different shows. I was moving around with some of the local groups. So we discuss and say, 'Why don't we take a vacation, play some music with all expenses taken care of, and have a pack of money and get ourselves back together?'"

Rita Marley still sings with The Wailers, along with guitarist Al Anderson, organist Earl "Wya" Lindo, vocalists Marcia Griffiths and Judy Mowatt, trombonist Vin "Don D Junior" Gordon; keyboard player Ian Burrell and saxophonist Glen DaCosta. The lead singer is Gary "Nesta" Pines.

"(Marley) tell us to do it," Barrett said. "And that's what I am gifted for; that's what I am destined for. Him say, 'When one door is closed, many more is opened.'"

'Tarzan' is a triumph; 'Chill Factor' a dud

Combined video services

New videos in Twin Falls-area stores this week:

• "Tarzan" - The voices of Tony Goldwyn, Minnie Driver, Glenn Close, Alex D. Linz, Rosie O'Donnell, Nigel Hawthorne, Lance Henriksen, Wayne Knight. Brilliant Disney animation brings the king of the jungle to vivid life and leaves most previous Tarzans dangling on the vine. For the most part, it's faithful to the original story and its tough dilemmas. Given the violence (all arguably necessary), the G rating is generous.

Employing a three-dimensional, zooming-in technique known as "deep-canvas," this movie gives you a juncleglam, you-are-there sensation as Tarzan scurries, somersaults and practically skateboards up and down the limby, leafy highway of Darkest Africa. With Phil Collins' stirring songs, here's a chance to vicariously cruise the bushes, wind your way through the tendrils and enjoy Disney's time-tested way of doing things. Contains loud gunfire, the shooting death of an ape, knife fights and leopard-gorilla fights. DVD available.

• "Chill Factor" (R) - In this Don't-Go-Boom! thriller, ice-cream deliveryman Cuba Gooding Jr. and short-order cook Skeet Ulrich spend most of their time trying to keep a bomb from exploding. In an obvious thieving of "Speed," they have to keep the bomb cooler than 50 degrees so it won't detonate. Add to this plot the bad guys who want to be badly led by military nut Peter Firth, and we have the usual action potboiler, full of chase, explosion and those cute hostilities all screen buddies are required to exchange. Give this one a miss, unless you like such familiarities. Contains violence, obscenity and the movie "Speed."

• "Love Stinks" (R) - In this painfully bad Woman-From-Venus-Men-From-Mars comic romance, TV scriptwriter Seth (a nasal, miming French Stewart) gets trapped in a too-fast-to-be-true relationship with Chelsea (Bridgette Wilson), a k a the bride from hell. Despite the warnings of friends and colleagues, Seth stays involved with a woman who's so desperate to get married she blackmails him into saying he loves her, then manipulates him into buying an engagement ring and then the ultimate rock of commitment after feuding between limp punch line and tired misogyny, the movie finally slumps dead to the ground. Writer-director Jeff Franklin, creator of TV's "Full House," shouldn't quit his day job. Contains explicit obscenities, sexual scenes and 95 minutes too many.

• "Sir of Echoes" - In this wonderfully spooky, atmospheric thriller, Kevin Bacon is Tom Witky, a blue-collar guy from a Chicago neighborhood who succumbs to hypnosis and realizes he can see things. Weird, scary things that terrify him - and us. It isn't long before he realizes he has unlocked a nascent ability to see a new realm, a sort of halfway station for the hereafter, where souls wander in torment.

Writer-director David Koepf's vibrant, unsettling thriller, adapted from Richard Matheson's novel, glides past cheap shock and chills the intelligence. Bacon's great performance and an involving story grip you through right to the end. Contains graphic violence, sex, nudity, obscenities.

• "The Winslow Boy" (G) - As England faces the military buildup of Kaiser Wilhelm, there's trouble closer to home: Young Ronnie Winslow (Guy Edwards) is expelled from the Royal Naval College for apparently cashing someone else's five-shilling postal order. This matter achieves national importance when patriarch Arthur Winslow (Nigel Hawthorne) asks Sir Robert Morton (Jeremy Northam) to defend his son's honor before the Admiralty, the Crown and the House of Lords. David Mann's graceful adaptation of the Terence Rattigan play moves with a deliberate, almost-hypnotic flow. The performances are all great. But Hawthorne is master of the house. As Arthur, he almost captivates his uncanny performance as King George III in "The Madness of King George." Contains nothing objectionable.

• "The Swindle" - Director Claude Chabrol and Isabelle Huppert, who usually collaborate on more sober fare, serve up a soufflé of a crime comedy about two con artists who may well be coming each other. In French with English subtitles. No MPAA rating (adult themes).

Madonna releases a sliced-up cover of 'American Pie'

NEW YORK (AP) - Bye-bye, Miss American Pie. Hello, Madonna. The Material Girl released her version of the 1971 classic "American Pie" to radio stations on Tuesday, a take on Don McLean's homage to Buddy Holly, Richie Valens and the Big Bopper. The song's debut came one day before the anniversary of "the day the music died": Feb. 3, 1959, when a plane carrying the three young rock stars went down in an Iowa cornfield.

'Angela's Ashes,' 'Cradle Will Rock' and 'Scream 3' hit theaters

Combined wire services.

Movies playing in south-central Idaho this weekend. Opinions are by Los Angeles Times and Knight Ridder Newspapers reviewers. Ratings by the Motion Picture Association of America are: (G) for general audiences; (PG) parental guidance urged because of material possibly unsuitable for children; (PG-13) parents are strongly cautioned to give guidance for attendance of children younger than 13; (R) restricted, younger than 17 admitted only with parent or adult guardian; (NC-17) no one younger than 17 admitted.

• "Angela's Ashes" - A restrained and artful re-creation of Frank McCourt's literate best-seller, beautifully acted by Emily Watson, Robert Carlyle and three young Irish boys. But despite all this good work, director Alan Parker's creation is hampered by the absence of McCourt's elegant and witty language. (2.6, R for sexual content and some language.)

• "Any Given Sunday" - An energetic Oliver Stone-directed soap opera about professional football that makes a few head fakes in the direction of an iconoclastic examination of the sport but at the end of the day comes out squarely for, hold onto your hats, teamwork and unselfish behavior. (2.4, R for strong language and some nudity/sexuality.)

• "Anywhere But Here" - Two of the best actresses anywhere, Susan Sarandon and Natalie Portman, co-star in this funny, and undiminished adaptation of Mona Simpson's novel about a larger-than-life Midwestern mother who drags her resentful teenage daughter to Los Angeles in search of a more exciting life. Rated PG-13; language, sexual situations. 1 hour, 54 minutes.

• "Bicentennial Man" - Robin Williams and Chris Columbus - who directed Williams in "Mrs. Doubtfire" - do a masterful job of limiting a robot's range of transformation into a man. (2.13, PG-13 for language and some sexual content.)

• "The Cider House Rules" - Lasse Hallstrom's superb film of the acclaimed John Irving novel stars Tobey Maguire as an orphan who has stayed on at a vast old New England orphanage to become the assistant of its director, a dedicated and idiosyncratic physician. (2.6, R for language and some violence.)

• "Cradle Will Rock" - Tim Robbins' ambitious examination of the way art and politics were dramatically intertwined in 1930s America is overstuffed with ideas, arguments, characters and stories. But its main focus is on the Federal Theater's attempts to mount a production of American, anti-fascist, anti-capitalist musical produced by efete John Houseman (Cary Elwes) and directed by Wonder Boy Orson Welles (Angus Macfadyen). Everyone from the River to the Willamette, Randolph Hearst gets painted in this moving mural, which has an enormous cast and more energy than it can effectively expend. But like so much political art, it makes up for its conviction that it lacks in brilliance. Rated R; nudity, language. 2 hours, 13 minutes.

• "Deuce Bigalow: Male Gigolo" - In this surprisingly funny gross-out comedy, Rob Schneider is a fish tank cleaner who must take the role of Lothario to make some quick cash. Rated R; bare buttocks, mild profanity. 1 hour, 24 minutes.

• "Down to You" - Freddie Prinze Jr. and Julia Stiles shine as two Manhattan college students who meet and fall passionately in love faster than they were prepared for. Unfortunately the film itself is mediocre at best. Written and directed by Kriv Stoen. (1.29, PG-13 for mature thematic material, sexual content, language, drug and alcohol use.)

• "The Fight Club" - David Fincher's brutal, anarchic comedy "Boogie Nights" is drunk and disorderly on the pure joy of making movies. A frantic, flawed, fascinating look at 24 hours in the life of nine characters in today's San Fernando Valley, it's a kind of intriguing jumble of a truly gifted filmmaker can make. And look for Tom Cruise in a picture-stealing role as a male supremacist with a vengeance. The rest of the ensemble includes Jason Robards, Philip Baker Hall, Philip Seymour Hoffman, William H. Macy, Julianne Moore and John C. Reilly. (3:08, R for strong language, drug use, sexuality and some violence.)

• "Galaxy Quest" - A nifty spoof of Star Trekers and their bid fans cleverly imagines some actual aliens whisking off the stars of a long-defunct TV space adventure series to save their planet from a dreaded monster. Not content with making these people are actors and their shows pure make-believe. Now Tim Allen, Sigourney Weaver and Alan Rickman must become heroes for real. The result is a live-action comedy with a sci-fi action-adventure of wide appeal. Directed by Harold Ramis. (1.46, PG for some action violence, mild language and sexuality.)

• "Girl, Interrupted" - Susanna Kayser's exceptional memoir of two years spent in a mental institution is graced by exceptional leading performances by Winona Ryder and Angelina Jolie but held back by a plot that verges on the manufactured. (2.05, R for strong language and content relating to drugs, sexuality and suicide.)

• "The Green Mile" - Though its Stephen King story is a good one, this Frank Darabont written and directed version is hampered by excessive length, the suffocating deliberateness of its pace, and some truly stomach-turning moments. (3:08, R for violence, language and some sex-related material.)

• "The Hurricane" - Denzel Washington does exceptional work, perhaps the best of his career, as boxer and unjustly imprisoned man Rubin Carter. Carter's "Hurricane" Carter. (2.26, R for language and some violence.)

• "The Insider" - The villain isn't Big Tobacco in Michael Mann's absorbing account of how French tobacco company executive Jeffrey Wigand (Russell Crowe) came to tell the world how his employers hooked smokers on nicotine. The real bad guy is the corporate coward CBS, which ordered Wigand's appearance on "60 Minutes" canceled. Rated PG-13; language. 2 hours, 38 minutes.

• "Magnolia" - The new film by Paul Thomas Anderson "Boogie Nights" is drunk and disorderly on the pure joy of making movies. A frantic, flawed, fascinating look at 24 hours in the life of nine characters in today's San Fernando Valley, it's a kind of intriguing jumble of a truly gifted filmmaker can make. And look for Tom Cruise in a picture-stealing role as a male supremacist with a vengeance. The rest of the ensemble includes Jason Robards, Philip Baker Hall, Philip Seymour Hoffman, William H. Macy, Julianne Moore and John C. Reilly. (3:08, R for strong language, drug use, sexuality and some violence.)

• "Scream 3" - Neve Campbell, Courteney Cox Arquette and David Arquette reunite with Director Wes Craven to wrap up the trilogy. Parker Posey co-stars. (R for stronger horror violence and language.)

• "Scream 3" - Behind an inevitable title is a pleasingly clever and fiendishly inventive sequel to the original "Toy Story," a lively and good-humored computer animated feature whose great sense of fun is married to a charming examination of the existential despair of toys in a way that's hard to resist. It's great to have Woody, Buzz and the gang back where they belong. Voices by Tom Hanks, Tim Allen, John Cusack, Kelsey Grammer, Don Rickles, Wallace Shawn, John Ratzenberger and Wayne Knight. (1.35, G.)

• "The World Is Not Enough" - Not only is James Bond now the longest-lived, continuous feature film series in history - 37 years, 19 movies - it is the most reliably entertaining. The third installment to star Pierce Brosnan as '007 doesn't skimp on the elaborate action we've come to expect, but it's the most character-driven since the '60s Sean Connery offerings. Bond is looking after the strong-willed heir (Sophie Marceau) of an oil tycoon for whose death he feels responsible; her loyalties, however, are questionable. Robert Carlyle is a bullet-headed terrorist, while Denise Richards is an unlikely rocket scientist in a clingy T-shirt. Rated PG-13; violence, edness innuendo, sexual situations. 2 hour, 11 minutes.

• "The Sixth Sense" - Eerie thriller about an 8-year-old (phenomenal Haley Joel Osment) tormented by ghosts and schoolmates. PG-13 (discreet violence, horror, too intense for those under 12)

• "Snow Falling on Cedars" - David Guterson's compelling and poetic novel about a murder trial that reopens World War II wounds in 1950s Washington is stylized into tedium by director Scott Hicks ("Shine"), then reduced to melodramatic mediocrity by Hicks and cowriter Ron Bass. Rated PG-13; sexual situations, 2 hours, 6 minutes.

• "Stuart Little" - The shy and pleasant mouse of E.B. White's famous children's book has been turned into a rodent whose ready line of patter would make him at home on the Tonight Show. The computer animation is excellent, but though the film won't harm tiny viewers, there's nothing very involving about it either. Stuar is voiced by Michael J. Fox. (1.32, PG for brief language.)

• "Supernova" - The crew of a medical spaceship rescues a strange young man in a distant galaxy, then regrets it. Walter Hill directs James Spader, Anthony Bassett, Lou Diamond Phillips, Robert Forster and others. (PG-13 for sci-fi action violence and sensuality/nudity.)

• "The Talented Mr. Ripley" - This Anthony Minghella-directed version of the Patricia Highsmith novel about an amoral wannabe (Matt Damon) who worms his way into the good graces of clueless American expatriates (Jude Law and Gwyneth Paltrow) in 1950s Europe is unexpectedly lacking in emotional impact. It's a wonderfully accomplished work that is unconvincing at its core. (2.19, R for violence, language.)

• "Tarzan" - The voices of Tony Goldwyn, Minnie Driver, Glenn Close, Alex D. Linz, Rosie O'Donnell, Nigel Hawthorne, Lance Henriksen, Wayne Knight, Brilliant Disney animation brings the king of the jungle to vivid life and loves more powerful Tarzans dangling on the vine. For the most part, it's faithful to the original story and its tough dilemmas. Given the violence (all arguably necessary), the G rating is generous. G, DVD available.

• "Toy Story 2" - Behind an inevitable title is a pleasingly clever and fiendishly inventive sequel to the original "Toy Story," a lively and good-humored computer animated feature whose great sense of fun is married to a charming examination of the existential despair of toys in a way that's hard to resist. It's great to have Woody, Buzz and the gang back where they belong. Voices by Tom Hanks, Tim Allen, John Cusack, Kelsey Grammer, Don Rickles, Wallace Shawn, John Ratzenberger and Wayne Knight. (1.35, G.)

• "The World Is Not Enough" - Not only is James Bond now the longest-lived, continuous feature film series in history - 37 years, 19 movies - it is the most reliably entertaining. The third installment to star Pierce Brosnan as '007 doesn't skimp on the elaborate action we've come to expect, but it's the most character-driven since the '60s Sean Connery offerings. Bond is looking after the strong-willed heir (Sophie Marceau) of an oil tycoon for whose death he feels responsible; her loyalties, however, are questionable. Robert Carlyle is a bullet-headed terrorist, while Denise Richards is an unlikely rocket scientist in a clingy T-shirt. Rated PG-13; violence, edness innuendo, sexual situations. 2 hour, 11 minutes.

UP CLOSE

College of Southern Idaho

By Kevin Hall
Times-News writer

He rains three-pointers with a laser-guided touch. Through 23 games this season, in fact, 65 of his 158 missiles have fallen through the net.

Focus on

Kendall Minor

"I've always been able to shoot the ball well," he said. "And when I get my rhythm and I get up under me, it's going to be a real long night for (the opponent). I'm so used to, that it comes naturally."

Not unlike the wizard tattoo he sports on his right shoulder, "I just got that last week," he said, touching the purple-cloaked mage shooting electricity from his fingers around a basketball.

Hailing from Selma, Alabama, the freshman says his game improved under the tutelage of his uncle Alvin Hunter and current CSI assistant John Smith. Both men coached a Riverside, Calif. AAU team on which Minor played during his summers away from Alabama.

"Coach Smith has really helped me a lot on my game ever since high school," Minor said. "It's real fun having him here as a coach and friend. It's made it real easy for me to adapt."

Now, Minor's a tutor, helping teammates and other CSI students improve their math skills at the college.

"I love math," he said. "If I can, I like to help other people at math. It's easy for me."

A general student who made the fall semester dean's list, Minor, 19, has eyes on a career in engineering if his dreams of playing professional basketball don't come to fruition.

As a three-time all-state and all-district selection at Selma High School, Minor averaged 25 points, eight rebounds and five assists a game his senior year while leading the Saints to the state championship game. After graduation, he enrolled at a prep school - Virginia's Hargrave Military Academy - before being wooed to Idaho.

"Then, after the 1999 winter signing period, Minor signed to transfer to Washington State University after this season. But he's since relented, escaping the paperwork to WSU.

"I signed to late, so my papers were invalid," he said. "I'm not bound to WSU anymore. Now, I have a lot of other coaches calling me - so everything is wide open."

Originally looking to bolt after this season, Minor now thinks he may stick around for his sophomore year at CSI.

"I may come back here next year," he said. "I haven't made up my mind yet, but I'm really leaning toward coming back next year. But if not, I'll just see how everything goes."

Question and Answer

1. Who's your favorite current NBA player?
"Ray Allen."
2. Do you have a favorite breakfast cereal?
"Frothy Frost Loops."
3. Practice ends early. You have no labs and your caught up with your homework. What's Kendall Minor going to do?
"Well, even though I don't have to go to school, I'll still go to the library. After that, I'd just go to relax, sit back and watch the games the rest of the night. Then go to bed."
4. Another hypothetical situation. It's your 21st birthday and you have the choice of having Bone-thugs-n-harmony, Ricky Martin or Limp Bizkit playing your bash. Which is it?
"(laughing) Bone thugs-n-harmony."

Spartans bounce Bruins

Minico moves on, Twin Falls is all finished

By Matt Peterson
Times-News writer

RUPERT - Another nightmare in Rupert ended the Twin Falls girls' basketball season Thursday, as the Bruins fell to the Spartans 52-39 in a Region III tournament loser-out game.

For the second time in less than a week, the Bruins dropped a postseason game on the Spartans' home floor. In the tournament's first round Jan. 29, Minico downed Twin Falls, 50-39.

It was also in Rupert that the Bruins lost their best player, point guard Christie Paiz, to a season-ending knee injury Dec. 1.

With the win, the Spartans (11-11 overall) advanced to play Highland Saturday in Pocatello. Game time is 2 p.m.

Minico's Ashley Jolley led all scorers Thursday with 14 points, including two clutch three-pointers late in the second quarter.

Freshman teammate Whitney Martin added nine points and collected team-highs in assists (four) and steals (four).

Both teams looked sluggish in the game's opening minutes as the game remained scoreless until midway through the opening quarter. Minico didn't even get on the board until more than 5 minutes, 30 seconds had elapsed. Consequently, the Bruins held an 8-5 lead after one.

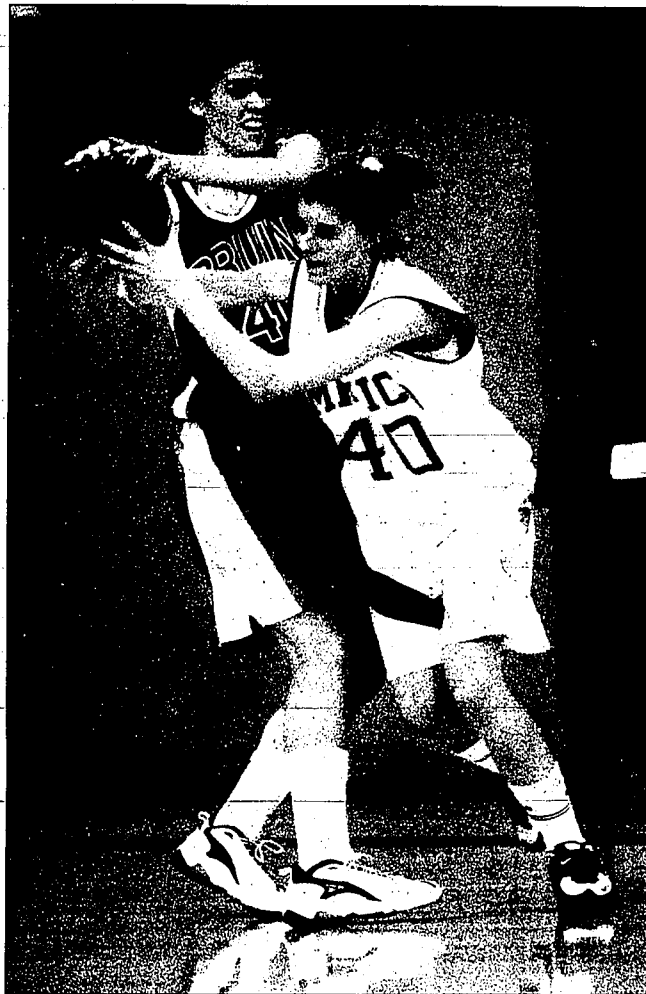

That all changed in the second quarter, however, as Minico caught fire. Returning to the full-court press that had been so effective against the Bruins in Game 1, the Spartans exploded for a 20-4 run in the last five minutes of the second quarter. The last six points came on Jolley three-pointers, the second of which tickled the twine as the buzzer sounded.

"I just looked up at the clock and it said, two seconds," Jolley said, "and I just threw it up there."

The shot extended the Spartan lead to double digits, 27-16, at the break and seemed to shift the momentum permanently to the Minico side.

"We just couldn't muster much of a rally after that (second quarter)," said Twin Falls head coach Lawrence Hoffo. "I kind of took the wind out of our sails."

In the second half, Minico maintained its advantage, never allowing Twin Falls closer than eight points and leading by as many as 14 in the fourth quarter. Unfortunately, on this night, the Spartans led 30-19 at the end of the game.

Kim Strunk, Marci Danielson and Keri Coats all scored nine points in the losing effort. Coats grabbed a game-high six rebounds and dished out a team-high three assists. As in the first postseason game against Minico, Twin Falls turned

Saints award three-year coach contract

The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS - Jim Haslett knows all about the New Orleans Saints' bleak history. He was once part of it as an assistant.

Now Haslett is back as coach armed with a plan to pull the longest team in the NFL out of an eight-year slump.

"I don't want to talk about numbers," Haslett said Thursday. "But I'll promise this, we'll have a well-run program that plays hard and does all the right things that are conducive to winning."

Although there were reports on Wednesday that Haslett had taken the job, Saints general manager Randy Mueller said the deal wasn't struck until about 9 a.m. Thursday. Denver offensive coordinator Gary Klutka was very much in the running until the last minute, Mueller said.

Haslett received a three-year contract. Financial terms weren't disclosed but it was believed to be less than $1 million per year but more than $500,000.

Indians force the title issue

By Vin Cappiello
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE - Thursday night's Class A-4 Northside Conference Girls' Basketball Tournament was played in Shoshone's gymnasium. But the hosts' bench was opposite its usual spot, as the defending state champion Blue Devils occupied the Lady Indians' familiar turf.

Due to the way the tournament progressed, Dietrich was the home team on the scoreboard, and Shoshone was the guest.

It was no wonder that when the opening tip fell into the hands of Blue Devil Brandi McCowan, she headed the way her team usually does. Unfortunately, on this night, it was a backcourt violation and the ball was turned over to the Lady Indians.

That play typified a frustrating night for Dietrich, which fell to Shoshone 45-35 - forcing tonight's championship game at 7.

Again, the Lady Indians will be the visitors in their own gym.

"We came out and made some bad decisions," Blue Devils' coach Gene Shaw said. "I think we were too ready to play (last night). (Today) we'll be more tired, we'll have to think a little bit. It's a new day."

But Thursday night belonged to the Lady Indians.

Led by 6-foot-3 sophomore Monica Uhrig's 14 points and 19 rebounds, Shoshone was able to break Dietrich's trapping press, which led to a bevy of fast-break baskets. Though the Lady Indians did cough up 20 turnovers, they won the rebounding battle 36-26 and played solid defense.

"I thought our zone defense was working well," Lady Indians' coach Tim Chapman said. "Our goal all year has been to win the Northside tournament. We had to win this one to play in the championship. It was do or die."

Shoshone appeared poised to force tonight's championship game early on as it led 9-4 after a sloppy first quarter. Uhrig and classmate Jasmine Harris each scored eight points to pace the Lady Indians in the opening period.

A pair of Uhrig lay-ups pushed the lead to 13-4 with about five minutes to play in the first half, but Shoshone senior Anna Cox picked up her third foul, which opened the door for the Blue Devils.

Junior Rashell Astle, who had a game-high 20 points - including a trio of three-pointers - and 10 rebounds, hit an inside bucket to spark an 8-0 run.

Senior Cidnee Edwards and McCowan hit three pointers, and the streak pulled Dietrich within a point at the half.

Chapman said the change of momentum, leading up to the break wasn't a concern.

"They hit a couple of threes, so I told our kids 'don't panic,'" Chapman said. "I said to block out, because (Dietrich) was hurting us on the boards."

The Lady Indians started the third quarter with a 6-0 run, Uhrig and senior Amy Williams scoring from inside and Harris adding a pair of free throws. But Astle added a putback and two churries to pull the Blue Devils within three at 19-16 with 3:07 to play in the quarter.

That was when Cox went to the bench with her fourth foul, and Chapman went to non-starters Brenna Allen, Krista Pendleton and Linda Slockett at various intervals to pick up the slack.

"Those three did a great job in her (Cox's) absence," Chapman said. Over the next three minutes, Harris, Uhrig and Pendleton hit field goals to push the lead to 25-19 with a quarter to play, and when Astle hit a three-pointer to start the final stanza, it appeared as if Dietrich was poised for a comeback.

But Williams answered with a three of her own, and the Blue Devils would get no closer than five points the rest of the way.

Shoshone hit nine of 14 free throws in the final quarter and stalled the ball for more than a minute before Dietrich called for time with 2:20 to play and Lady Indian Jennifer Ross, who had 13 points, at the line. She calmly hit both ends of a one-and-one for a 39-30 lead with 2:20 to play.

Dietrich got it to 39-33 on a Raya Parker three-pointer, but the Lady Indians hit four of six

The men in black rout host Chukars

By Kevin Hall
Times-News writer

ONTARIO, Ore. - The men in black used all their tricks to quash a Chukars uprising Thursday night.

Up by only three at halftime, the College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team went to work in the final 20 minutes, outscoring host Treasure Valley Community College 48-33 to win going away, 86-68.

The victory keeps CSI entrenched in fourth place in the Pacific West Athletic Conference at 7-5, 19-5 overall, while TVCC falls to 2-10 in the conference, 14-10 overall.

"We had a very balanced attack tonight," said CSI head coach Derek Zeck. "I'm proud of tonight's intensity, our enthusiasm and our effort. We finally carried our week of practice into the game."

Cardell Butler led four Golden Eagles in double figures with 13 points. But more importantly, it was Butler who sparked the Golden Eagles early in the second half hitting a trio of big three-pointers to give CSI some breathing room at 48-41, with 16 minutes to play.

Matt Siebrandt added 11 points and Dean Browne and Blandon Ferguson had 10 apiece. TVCC guard Steve Reynolds hit his average - 19 points - to lead all scorers.

"This was a huge win for us," Zeck said. "Just like Treasure Valley, we kind of have our backs to the wall in what we want to do and where we need to finish in the league, so this was a great win."

Tigers fall short against Pocatello

By John Darr Times News writer

JEROME - Top-ranked Jerome suffered its first conference loss Thursday as second-seeded Pocatello kept the tempo at its pace and hit its free throws, upsetting the Tigers in the semifinals of the Class A-1 Region III girls basketball tournament.

The action was slow as both team put on a trapping press, then settled into their half-court defense. Both teams struggled from the field, shooting 32 percent on the night. With the teams nearly equal in every statistical category, it came down to free throws. Pocatello connected on 16 of 27 attempts, while the Tigers only made it to the line only 15 times and converted 10.

"We played non-aggressive and Pocatello controlled the game," said Jerome coach Michelle Krumm. "We were not able to make some shots and play our game."

Now, the road becomes much tougher for the top-seeded Tigers. They will face the winner of Saturday's Highland/Minico battle Monday night at 7 p.m. in Jerome. The winner of that game travels to Pocatello Tuesday night to force a second championship game.

Jerome took the early 4-0 lead behind buckets by Brandi Escobar and Camille Brittain, but neither team held more than a four-point advantage the rest of the game.

The Tigers could have taken the lead heading into the final period, but missed on a short shot inside as they teams finished three periods tied, 26-26.

Jerome missed two more at point-blank range early in the fourth period as neither team scored for three minutes. The Tigers got a free throw from Dusty Schaveneid and two more from Crystal Warner for the 31-28 advantage with four minutes left in the game.

The Indians came right back as the Tigers extended their lead to six at 32-25.

"We came out much more aggressive in the second half," said Hagerman coach Diana Finney. "They were much more aggressive than we were in the first half."

Hansen was forced to play catch-up, and couldn't get anything going. Strong free throw shooting by Hagerman led the victory for the Pirates.

Although Hansen was eliminated Thursday, Hansen coach Rick Abel sees good things ahead for his team.

Region III Tournament

Merilee Caldwell, Pocatello's leading scorer who had been held in check much of the game, found herself open in the right corner and nailed the three-pointer. Jerome regained a one-point lead, 33-32, with a Camille Brittain's bucket inside at the 2:30 mark.

Caldwell hurt Jerome again when she nailed another shot from beyond the arc. On their next possession the Tigers turned the ball over and Pocatello ran one minute off the clock before Jerome committed a foul. The Indians missed the front end of a one-and-one, but Jerome could not take advantage of it.

The Tigers again were forced to foul, but it was costly as Warner collected her fifth penalty. Pocatello hit her first free throw, then Brittain connected inside with 26 seconds left, cutting the deficit to a single point, 36-35. Jerome would not score again.

Caldwell was fouled and the sophomore guard hit them both. Although both teams finished with 19 turnovers, the Tigers committed seven in the final period.

"Our backs are against the wall. We will see what kind of team we are," Skyles said.

Posts Kendra Westland and Brittain pushed the Tiger attack with eight points each while Warner added seven. Caldwell finished with a game-high 15 points, eight of those coming in the final three minutes of the game.

The biggest thing we were able to keep the tempo at our pace," said Pocatello coach Gino Mariani. "We did a good job of keeping it at a snail's pace, which is more to our advantage."

Energized Eagles pounce on TVCC

Women end three-game skid

By Kevin Hall Times-News writer

ONTARIO, Ore. - In a battle of two struggling teams Thursday night, an aggressive College of Southern Idaho women's basketball squad played very unlike a group that has lost four of its last five games.

Grabbing 10 first-half steals - 15 for the game - the Golden Eagles halted their three-game losing streak and hustled their way to an 83-68 win at Treasure Valley Community College.

The win improved CSI to 5-7 in the Scenic West Athletic Conference, and was a one-point, TVCC center Chislain Sem played almost a minute and a half with five fouls before leaving with six fouls at the 50 mark - the Golden Eagles ran out to a 10-0 start in the second half to put the Chukers away.

CSI claimed its biggest lead of the night at 54-44 with 14:12 remaining following two Siebrandt free throws. The big center from Reno, Nev., was unhandled by the Cameroonian Sara Cellan, who sat with four fouls for 3:24 in the second half, still led the CSI attack with 19 points. Jinga Gosschalk had 16 and Erika Empey added 13. Point guard Tonya Phillips had nine in her return to action after almost two months off from a knee injury.

"We got a kick in," Cellan said. "We were sick of losing. We knew we had to win."

Lady Chukers guard Joy Webber led all scorers with 21 points and Christy Smith had 16 for TVCC.

CSI took advantage of 29 percent first-half shooting by TVCC to run out to a nine-point lead at the break. CSI hit 24-for-57 from the field for 42 percent, while TVCC warmed up a little in the second 20 minutes to finish with 34 percent on 21-for-61 shooting.

Up by nine to start the second half, the Lady Chukers scored the first five points of the half to pull within four at 37-33.

But CSI broke out on a 16-5 run to retake command at 53-38 with 12:26 to go. TVCC mustered a 13-4 response of its own to get within six at 57-51, but CSI kept attacking. Empey, Kim Wegner and Gosschalk got crucial buckets to keep the Lady Chukers at bay, and CSI made 12 of 14 free throws down the stretch for the win.

Cellan got CSI off to a bang with a 19-foot jumper six seconds into the game, then followed that up with a three-point play on a put-back and foul shot of an Amanda McGrath miss to make it a quick 50-38 lead.

TVCC's Ficca, Stewart then extended it to 17 on an inbound pass for the 65-48 lead.

Richardson hit a big three-pointer to get TVCC to 65-51, but Uche Okafor, who had his logs taken out from under him by TVCC's Kelley Tuttle, hit the front end of a one-and-one and Matt Brown took the loose miss on the second shot and put it back in, stretching the CSI lead to 68-71.

From there, the high-flying Golden Eagles kept the Chukers guessing, using a steady mix of inside and outside offense and fast breaks to pull away from the win.

CSI returns home next weekend with games against the College of Eastern Utah and Castleton Northwestern on Friday and Saturday.

Elsewhere in the SWAC Thursday night, Ricks beat Utah Valley 89-86.

Bruins suspend forward Murphy

BOSTON (AP) - The Boston Bruins suspended forward Joe Murphy on Thursday until further notice as punishment for what the club said was an act of insubordination.

Mike O'Connell, the team's assistant general manager and vice president of hockey operations, issued a statement announcing the action.

The reason was a violation of his contract which was detrimental to the team.

MVC Continued from D1. Hannah Hansen hit six straight free throws down the stretch to ice the victory and the conference championship.

"Hannah shot the ball very well for us," said Raft River coach Ryan Spaeth. "And Alisha Hill did a good job off the bench for us."

Hansen led the way for Raft River with 26 points and teammate Trisha Hill added 10. The Red Devils were led by Crystal Hepworth with 18, including one strike from beyond the arc.

While Raft River awaits the No. 1 seed out of A-4 Northside next Friday, Murtagh and Raft River were led by Crystal Castledorf Saturday to determine the No. 2 and No. 3 spots for the district tournament.

"We need to polish a few things before state," Spaeth said. "This was just an exciting big win for us at the end of the tournament."

Hagerman 59, Hansen 46 In the earlier game, Carys Cammison scored 19 points and Teresa Owsley added 13 as the Hagerman Pirates eliminated the Hansen Huskies 59-46 to advance to district play.

Hagerman built a solid 15-8 lead after one quarter as Hansen committed six turnovers early. The Pirates connected on a three pointer with 3:12 remaining in the half as the Huskies built a nine-point lead at 26-17.

Over the next three minutes, however, the Huskies fought back with a huge 8-0 run to bring them within one at the half, 26-25.

But the Pirates opened the second half with a quick two and a three building their lead to six at 32-25.

TFHS grad signs at Western Illinois

Vandal soccer signs top prospect

MOSCOW — The University of Idaho women's soccer team has signed Stephanie Burmeier, the daughter of former Kansas City Chiefs cornerback Ted Burmeier, to play for the Vandals next season.

Burmeier, a former high school teammate in Dubuque, Iowa, of current U of I midfielder Jennifer Kiebel, has played competitive soccer for nine years. Her Wahler High School team went 25-0 last season, and will look to defend its state title this spring.

IBF title fight is coming to Boise Feb. 12

BOISE — World IBF cruiserweight champion Vassily Jirov will box top challenger Saul Montana Saturday, Feb. 12 at the Bank of America Centre.

The undercard features local champion Cleveland Corder (16-0, 12 KOs), who won the IBA junior middleweight belt with a fourth-round TKO of Canadian junior middleweight champion Brooke Welby last November. His opponent has yet to be determined. Also fighting Feb. 12 will be No. 1-ranked IBA flyweight Eric Morel (24-0, 16 KOs).

The main event passes the first Idaho appearance for Montana (33-6-0, 29 KOs) since he scored a unanimous decision over Kenny Keene for the IBA cruiserweight championship on Oct. 14, 1997. Jirov (22-0, 20 KOs), a native of Kazakhstan, captured the IBF title on June 5 last year with a second-round TKO of Arthur Williams, and successfully defended it in September against challenger Dale Brown.

Karl Malone mum on All-Star plans

SALT LAKE CITY — If Karl Malone is serious about sitting out the All-Star game, he didn't let on Thursday as he made a hasty exit from the Delta Center after Utah's morning shootaround.

"Call up God. Why don't you ask God?" Malone said while striding toward the parking lot. Malone reportedly is threatening to sit out the All-Star game, citing a recurring back injury. He strained his back during training camp, then hurt it again Tuesday against Seattle. Another consideration is a tendon on the middle finger of his shooting hand, which he reinjured last week at Portland. In recent seasons, Malone has played with the finger in a splint.

Fund-raising begins anew in Salt Lake City

WASHINGTON — After discovering that Salt Lake City Olympic organizers were nearly $400 million in the hole last year, "the engine has been reignited" on fund raising for the 2002 winter games, organizing committee head Mitt Romney said Thursday.

Fourteen corporate sponsors have signed on for the games in the last eight months, with at least two more due to join them by the end of February, Romney said in a speech at the National Press Club.

Daly, namesake fall off Norman pace

SYDNEY, Australia — John Daly played conservatively and shot an even-par 73, while tournament host Greg Norman started with two bogeys and never recovered in the first round of the Greg Norman International Thursday.

Maartin Lefebvre outshined his more high-profile rivals with a 7-under 66 and shared the lead with Gary Emerson of England in the $1.3 million event.

It's no longer if, but when, for Worm

DALLAS — The Dallas Mavericks' courtship of Dennis Rodman finally ended Thursday. Now the waiting-for-the-Worm game moves into the next phase: When will he actually play?

Rodman passed a physical and was expected to sign a contract in time for Dallas' home game against Charlotte, but team officials said he planned to take a week off to get in shape — or maybe fly to Hawaii for the Pro Bowl. Reports indicate he'll play next Wednesday against Seattle.

Langdon done for rest of this season

CLEVELAND — Cleveland Cavaliers rookie guard Trajan Langdon will be out for the remainder of the season after arthroscopic surgery on his right knee.

Langdon, selected by the Cavs with the No. 11 overall pick in last year's NBA draft, played in just 10 games before being sidelined in November with bruised cartilage in the knee.

Injured Forsberg to miss All-Star game

DENVER — A blindside check knocked Peter Forsberg out of last year's playoffs and a similar hit will keep him out of this year's NHL All-Star Game.

Forsberg, who missed the first 23 games of the season because of shoulder surgery, will be sidelined seven to 10 days after suffering a concussion caused by a hard check Tuesday night by Vancouver's Todd Bertuzzi.

Duke needs OT to beat North Carolina

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Mike Krzyzewski said this week No. 3 Duke would never be a great team. The coach of the youthful Blue Devils may have to rethink that following a 90-86 overtime victory at home in Carolina on Thursday night.

Duke (17-2, 8-0 Atlantic Coast Conference) blew a 19-point second-half lead, but got 25 points from Shane Battier, 23 from Chris Carrarroll and seven from Carlos Boozer in the overtime to beat the Tar Heels (13-9, 4-4) as it extended its own record with its 30th straight ACC regular-season victory.

The streak continues at 'Puddle Beach'

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The streak is alive, only this one has to do with Pebble Beach, not Tiger Woods.

Before Woods could get to the 11th tee Thursday in pursuit of his sixth straight PGA Tour victory, a cloud gathered over the Monterey Peninsula, tree branches snapped in raging wind and the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am showed its true character.

In a race, With puddles forming on the greens early Thursday afternoon, inclement weather — also known as "Pebble" weather — promised to either cut short or cancel the tournament for the third straight year and fourth time in the past five years.

Play was suspended at 11:27 a.m. Nearly three hours later, the PGA Tour told players to return at 10 a.m. today to complete the first round, and the tournament would be extended to Monday in order to complete 72 holes.

That's if the weather cooperates over the weekend. A year ago, the final round was washed out and the tour elected not to play Monday because of a storm system that stretched from Carmel Bay to Japan. In 1998, players returned in August to get in 54 holes.

That was prompted by the '96 tournament, which was canceled after 36 holes.

Tiger Woods follows his shot from the sixth tee of Poppy Hills Golf Course during the first round of the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am in Pebble Beach, Calif., Thursday. Woods is trying to win his sixth consecutive PGA Tour event.

Is this Pebble Beach or Puddle Beach?

The rain started falling not long after caddy Steve Williams made a detour through the parking lot on his way to the 10th tee at Poppy Hills to get Woods' rain suit out of the trunk of his car. Never mind that it was sunny and breezy only three hours earlier, and simply spectacular the past two days.

Woods was even-par through 10 holes, so perhaps the delay will serve him well in his bid to become the first player since Ben Hogan in 1948 to win six in a row. He was at least four strokes out of the lead. It was not clear who

Glavine has mixed feelings about Rocker

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Braves pitcher Tom Glavine has mixed feelings about the decision of the players' association to fight John Rocker's suspension for remarks disparaging gays, minorities and foreigners.

Glavine, Atlanta's player representative, said he asked the union not to seek too large a reduction in his teammate's penalty. "That's part of me that thinks it would have gone a long way toward showing remorse if John would have just said, 'OK, forget it. That's the price I'm going to pay, and I'll pay it,'" Glavine was quoted as saying in today's editions of The Atlanta Journal-Constitution.

"But at the same time, I understand," he said, "Nobody's ever been suspended this long for saying something stupid."

On Monday, baseball commissioner Bud Selig barred Rocker from the team until May 1, including spring training and the first 28 days of the regular season. He also fined the reliever $20,000 and ordered him to undergo sensitivity training.

Rocker told Sports Illustrated in December that he would never play for a New York team because he didn't want to ride a subway train "next to some queer with AIDS." He also mocked foreigners and called a black teammate a "fat monkey."

Glavine said he expects Braves players to sit down with Rocker when he returns, listen to his side and air their opinions.

He said it was important to his teammates for punishment to be imposed. "Now, in my mind, it's going to be more about how does John Rocker act from this day forward, day in and day out, to show me that he's sorry and that things have changed," he said.

Griffey might not return to Seattle

SEATTLE (AP) — Ken Griffey Jr. thinks he's a hated man in Seattle. As a result, he doesn't think it would be in his best interests to play his final season there.

"The front office, the fans and the media, everybody's ripped me," he was quoted as saying in Thursday's editions of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer. "Think I can come back?"

Griffey wants to be traded from the Mariners to Cincinnati and won't sign a contract extension in Seattle. He is eligible for free agency after the season.

Griffey said general manager Pat Gillick, team president Chuck Armstrong and vice president Lee Pelekoudas have requested meetings with him.

"Everybody wants to come see me and see what's in my head," he told the paper Wednesday after a practice round Wednesday at the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am. Griffey refused to discuss the possibility of his being traded to Cincinnati, where his father is a coach.

Although Gillick and new chief executive officer Howard Lincoln have spent the winter rebuilding the Mariners' roster, Griffey was critical of Gillick for releasing third baseman Russ Davis and pitcher Brett Hinchliffe rather than trading them.

For much of his Mariners career, Griffey has stated the only thing that mattered to him was getting a World Series championship ring. His father, Ken Griffey Sr., has three of them.

After the season, Griffey told team officials that he wanted to be traded to a team closer to his home in Florida. The Reds hold spring training in Florida, while the Mariners train in Arizona.

Spring training for the Mariners gets under way in Peoria, Ariz., Feb. 17.

"Everybody's mad at me because I want to be near my family," he said. "I want to give me son something my father never gave me."

Griffey, 30, is scheduled to earn $8.25 million this season, which would be his 12th in Seattle. In his 11 seasons with the Mariners, he has 398 home runs, including 48 last season after consecutive seasons with 56 each.

Since Gillick replaced the retired Woody Woodward after last season, the Mariners have added starting pitcher Aaron Sele, relievers Kazuhiro Sasaki and Arthur Rhodes and first baseman John Olerud as free agents.

Phillips' umpire union will appeal election today

NEW YORK (AP) — Richie Phillips and the Major League Umpires Association, using their last appeal, will ask the National Labor Relations Board today to overturn the election that kicked them out of the job in November.

"We believe there was some evidence was overlooked," MLUA lawyer Pat Campbell said Thursday. "We believe that some evidence was precluded."

Phillips and his union lost an election 57-35 in November to a group of insurgents, who now call themselves the World Umpires Association. After the MLUA appealed to the National Labor Relations Board's New York region, hearing officer David E. Leach III listened to three days of arguments, then issued a 35-page decision on Jan. 21 that upheld the election. Friday is the deadline to appeal Leach's decision to the five-member NLRB in Washington. Campbell said papers will be submitted before the deadline. The decision of the NLRB is final, and not appealable to court. "I think they have wide discretion as to how quickly or how slowly they handle it," Campbell said.

While the MLUA keeps appealing, there have been virtually no negotiations for a labor contract to replace the one that expired Dec. 31. American League umpires revolted against Phillips after his mass resignation plan last July, which was designed for force an early start to negotiations with owners but backfired and cost 22 umpires their jobs.

Jeter, Yanks agree: One year, $10M

NEW YORK (AP) — Derek Jeter doubled his salary to $10 million Thursday while putting off a multiyear deal. Ariel Prieto, meanwhile, lost in his quest to double his salary despite not pitching in the majors since April 1998.

"I'm paying a lot of tax now," Jeter joked after he agreed to a one-year contract with the New York Yankees. "It's kind of overwhelming, the way I've been compensated the last few years. It's not really something I sit around and think about too much."

The shortstop made $130,000 when he was American League Rookie of the Year in 1996, $550,000 in 1997, $750,000 in 1998 and $1.5 million, after winning in arbitration last year.

He hit .349 last season with 219 hits, 24 homers and 102 RBIs, all career highs. And already he's thinking about the possibility of a third straight World Series title, which would be his fourth in five seasons.

New York and Jeter's agent, Casey Close, have been talking about a $118.5 million, seven-year deal. Knowing that the price will go up, Yankees officials have been trying to convince George Steinbrenner to give his go-ahead, but the owner hasn't made a decision.

"I said it before: I'd like to sign a long-term deal, but it's not up to me, it's up to the team to make that decision," Jeter said from Tampa, Fla. "I don't think the team owes me a long-term deal. That's not how it works. I have two more years. Then you can start negotiating. Then you can make decisions on your own."

Prieto, a 30-year-old right-hander, dropped players to 1-1 in salary arbitration when he was awarded a raise from $210,000 to $300,000 instead of his request for $500,000. The decision was made by arbitrators Stephen Goldberg, James Gross and Ted High, who heard the case Wednesday in Tampa.

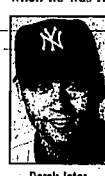

Prieto is recovering from reconstructive elbow and shoulder surgery and hasn't pitched in the major leagues since April 19, 1998. He was Oakland's opening day starter in 1997.

Houston right-hander Chris Holt, who had been scheduled for a hearing Thursday, instead agreed to a one-year contract worth $1,025,000.

Holt missed the 1998 season following shoulder surgery and went with a 4.66 ERA. He also had one save in six relief appearances.

After earning $279,000 last season, Holt had asked for $1,275,000 and had been offered $900,000.

Twenty-eight players remain in arbitration, which runs through Feb. 18.

WWF unveils new pro football league

NEW YORK (AP) — It will be real. And it will be real fun.

It's football as envisioned by World Wrestling Federation mastermind Vince McMahon, who took time out from peddling the endless line of WWF merchandise Thursday to unveil his latest creation: the XFL, a new pro football league set to open in February 2001.

No scripts. No sideshows. Just football.

No, really. "Why football?" asked McMahon, echoing a question no doubt pondered from coast to coast. "Some have suggested the NFL is the 'No Fun League.' The XFL will be the extremely fun league. This will be a blast."

It's a new world for McMahon, the "sports entertainment" impresario who converted professional wrestling from a low-brow, oft-mocked pursuit into a jaw-dropping, oft-mocked multimillion-dollar business.

But that was done with writers creating wild scenarios, and bigger-than-life characters such as Hulk Hogan and Mankind, and phony feuds and bogus friendships.

The football league, McMahon promised a crowded news conference, will be real.

No, really. "The WWF is 100 percent entertainment," McMahon said. "But the XFL is 100 percent sports."

So the outcomes will not be scripted?

"Nooo," said McMahon, his eyes rolling skyward in the WWF's midtown Manhattan restaurant. "Nooo."

You want reality? McMahon said the startup costs for the eight-team league will run him "somewhere south of $100 million." There are already teams in New York, Miami, Orlando, Washington, Los Angeles and San Francisco, with two more teams to be announced.

Ex-Dallas Cowboys star Drew Pearson is on the league's football advisory committee, and 15-time Emmy-winning broadcast executive Michael Weisman is working on its television team.

There's no immediate word on a television contract, although negotiations are continuing, league executives said.

St. Louis coach wants to keep Green as backup

ST. LOUIS (AP) — It should come as no surprise that new St. Louis Rams coach Mike Martz wants to keep Trent Green as insurance.

Martz helped develop Green into a player that could command a four-year, $16.5 million contract when he was quarterbacks coach with the Washington Redskins in 1998. The two essentially made the move to the Rams together.

League MVP Kurt Warner was the unknown backup before Green suffered a season-ending knee injury in the preseason.

"Can you have too many good quarterbacks?" Martz asked. "I don't think you can. I anticipate Trent being here."

"I think that with Kurt and Trent and the rest of the crew, there can't be a better quarterback situation in this league."

Martz, elevated to head coach on Tuesday when Dick Vermeil retired, said the matter will be addressed before the free agency period begins Feb. 11. The Rams are unlikely to trade Green because they would incur about a $3 million salary cap hit related to his signing bonus.

The backup for the Super Bowl season was Paul Justin, with rookie Joe Germaine the third-stringer.

Martz said he and Green discussed the future often during the season.

"The best thing for the Rams is to keep Trent right here, the best thing for Trent is to go somewhere else and start," Martz said. "You don't know that something in the first week of the season would happen to Kurt and then Trent is right back in the thick of it."

Martz doesn't anticipate any changes in the coaching staff, either, although he said he might add one member. Each assistant has been offered a contract, and all but a few have signed.

"I want all these guys to stay here," Martz said. "If there is somebody who wants to leave and they have a better opportunity for their career, they need to do that."

John Bunting, the co-defensive coordinator with Peter Giunta, said he would be happy to remain in that role.

"To me, it's one of those things that if it's not broken, don't fix it," Bunting said. "Why change it? I think everything we did was right on."

Panthers' Lane is latest star to face arrest

Player held on drugs, weapons charges

NFL notebook

JACKSON, Tenn. (AP) — Fred Lane of the Carolina Panthers was arrested Thursday on drugs and weapons charges, yet another NFL player to get in trouble with the law.

Fred Lane

The reserve running back was released on $1,000 bail and told to return to court March 2.

The 24-year-old Lane, who attended Lane College in Jackson, was arrested early Thursday when officers found 1.23 grams of marijuana and a .22-caliber rifle in his car, police said. He was charged with possession of a deadly weapon and marijuana.

Undercover narcotics officers searched the car after noticing suspicious behavior by Lane and three other men, Jackson police Chief Richard Staples said.

The officers were passing Lane's Mercedes when three of the men got out of the car and opened the trunk. The three other men also were arrested.

Chmura gets the green light for contact drills

MILWAUKEE — Green Bay Packers tight end Mark Chmura passed a team physical and has been cleared to participate in contact drills as he prepares to return from a neck injury, general manager Ron Wolf says.

Chmura — sustained-a-neck injury in preseason training camp and missed the final 14 games of last season, although he maintained all along that he expected to return to the playing field.

Bucs show offensive coordinator Shula the door

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Mike Shula has been fired as offensive coordinator of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

The St. Petersburg Times reported that owners made the decision to not retain Shula, who had been offensive coordinator since Tony Dungy's arrival in 1996.

The Bucs ranked 30th in passing and 28th overall in offense in 1999, yet still had the most successful season (12-6) in franchise history. Their defense was the key to the team's drive to the NFC Championship game.

Tampa Bay failed to score a touchdown in an 11-6 loss to St. Louis in the title game, the fifth time the Buccaneers failed to get into the end zone on offense last season.

Lawyer says Lewis didn't know of lounge attacks

ATLANTA — Ray Lewis, charged with two counts of murder in the slayings early Monday of two men outside a lounge in Atlanta's Buckhead entertainment district, was unaware anyone had been stabbed when he left the post-Super-Bowl party in a limousine, according to his lawyer.

The lawyer, Ed Garland, said the player didn't know about the stabbing of Richard Lollar, 24, and Jacinth "Shorty" Baker, 21, until he heard news reports hours later.

"When he left that scene, he did not know a stabbing had taken place," Garland said Thursday.

"He did not have a knife, he did not use a knife, he did not engage in a fight, he did not promote in any way a fight."

Lewis remains in jail. A hearing is set for later this month.

Galloway's status might be cleared up at meeting

SEATTLE — Joey Galloway's status could be cleared up Tuesday when the NFL Management Council and the legal counsel of the NFL Players Association meet.

Galloway, star wide receiver of the Seattle Seahawks, is seeking to become an unrestricted free agent. He missed the first half of last season in a contract holdout with the Seahawks.

The Seahawks and the league believe Galloway did not fulfill his contract and has a year remaining on his original five-year deal.

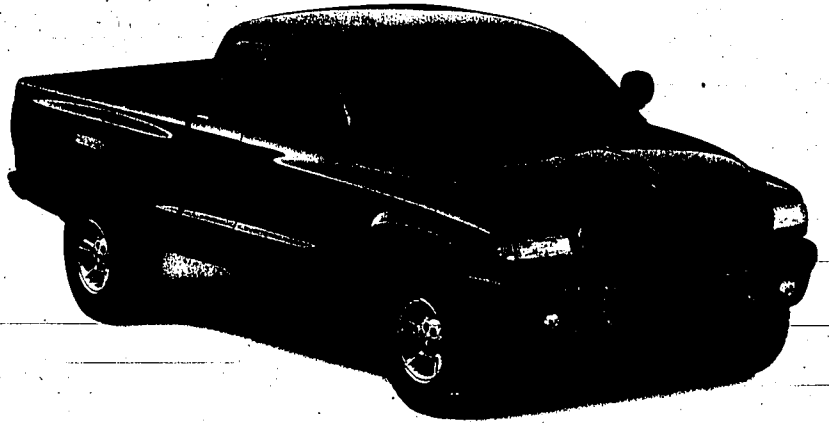

The NFLPA says Galloway should be considered an unrestricted free agent because he never reported to training camp and ended a 101-day holdout over a contract dispute midway through the season.

Cavanaugh welcomes Agri-Action expo visitors

TWIN FALLS - The newly renovated Cavanaugh Canyon Springs Hotel said it will be - for its first time - the host hotel for KMYT's upcoming Agri-Action Farming implement exposition at the College of Southern Idaho Expo Center.

Agri-Action 2000, the attraction's 23rd year, will be held Feb. 17-19 with a new feature: agriculture-related seminars at CSI's Herrett Center. Topics include dairy rules, high-yield agriculture, irrigation technologies, the dairy option pilot program, farm families and small-pasture grazing management.

The event typically draws vendors from a wide geographical area, and Cavanaugh will offer a special event rate, said Merrily Hueher, the hotel's director of sales.

The hotel's Oak banquet room on Feb. 16 will host a "Taste of Idaho" event in which Agri-Action vendors give samples of their wares, she said.

Cavanaugh's recent renovations include new, upscale decor in the lobbies and all 37 executive "king" suites, and updated banquet rooms, Hueher said. The king suites each now have a large desk with executive chair and will have two modern connections. In the fall, the hotel will start renovation of its other bedrooms.

Northern Idaho sawmill to reopen, employ 60

PLUMMER - A businessman is buying the former Rayonier mill and plans to employ about 60 people when it reopens this summer.

The plans were announced this week after more than a year of negotiations between Todd Brinkmeyer and the Coeur d'Alene Tribe.

The mill will use state-of-the-art equipment to turn logs 4 inches to 7 inches in diameter into lumber, Brinkmeyer said. He estimated the mill will produce about 40 million board feet of lumber annually, or enough to build about 2,600 homes.

About 160 people lost their jobs when fire destroyed the main production area of the Rayonier mill in July 1998.

The fire affected suppliers as well as mill employees.

Rayonier decided not to rebuild, and put the mill on the market. A federal grant helped the tribe purchase the mill site for $2.4 million.

Competitor: 'Split up U S West'

SEATTLE - Break 'em up. That's what New Edge Networks, a Vancouver, Wash.-based telecommunications company, has asked the Washington state Utilities and Transportation Commission to do to U S West.

Connect people to downtown, consultant says

By Virginia S. Hutchins Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Twin Falls' downtown and Old Towne are substantially nicer places than in 1993-94, when consultant Tom Hudson poked into all their nooks and crannies.

Hudson, of Moscow-based Tom Hudson Co., congratulated the city on extraordinary changes such as the collaborative, low-budget transformation of Rock Creek Canyon into a parkway, the opening of new restaurants and other businesses, and the public acquisition of many acres near the railroad for a future regional park.

New old-style lighting is starting to pull together downtown and Old Towne as a single destination, he said, and the renovation of the old-fashioned Crowley's lunch counter and soda fountain is a classic example for reviving downtowns.

Hudson is half of the duo who in the early '90s drafted

Get a copy

A summary of Tom Hudson's presentation will be available within the next two weeks. Anyone may get a copy at City Hall, Thursday night to the City Council and Urban Renewal Agency.

Here's a summary of Hudson's suggestions to the council and Urban Renewal Agency.

Old Towne and downtown business improvement districts should collaborate, perhaps as a nonprofit corporation with a joint board. The members from each district would split for votes on spending for physical improvements in their respective areas, but would share decisions about the nonprofit's organization.

Re-evaluate how much of downtown managers' time should be consumed by parking administration and fee collection. The staff's time could be spent more strategically.

Define the areas' target markets, and make every part of the downtown and Old Towne experience - such as business offerings and public-space design - cater to those markets.

Twin Falls is gaining more minorities and more seniors, for example. But some sidewalks are dangerous for older pedestrians, and more curb cuts are needed. In short, downtown isn't friendly to seniors.

The area could be a better place for children, too, and thus for parents. For example, Hudson advised, revive the unused fountain park on Main Avenue.

Communicate successes to the rest of the city, such as the availability of that food or phosphate drinks, or the new walking path in Rock Creek Canyon.

"I think your town has so much disconnection," Hudson said. Residents' thoughts about downtown don't change with downtown. Some people have no idea what's there.

WESTERN BUSINESS

Lillian Mafra and Rickey Furukawa, both of Oakland, Calif., hug as Mafra says good-bye after her work shift at the Arizmendi Bakery. The worker-owned bakery has a 25-year-old sourdough starter passed down from Berkeley's legendary Cheeseboard, a cheese store, bake shop and pizzeria.

Cooperative bakeries help raise dough

The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. - It's alive! A potent, pungent creature thrives in deep plastic buckets at the worker-owned Arizmendi Bakery in Oakland - a 25-year-old sourdough starter passed down from Berkeley's legendary Cheeseboard, a cheese store, bake shop and pizzeria.

Replenished with flour, water and faith, the beery-smelling starter grows and grows. A bit of the starter - a symbiotic mix of yeast and bacteria - goes into each batch of sourdough, permeating the air with its tangy scent.

The ever-enlarging starter is symbolic of one group's efforts to replicate democratic bakeries in the Bay Area.

Just as the Cheeseboard loaned $20,000, its sourdough starter, its recipes and its worker knowledge to Arizmendi in 1997, so too will Arizmendi now assist in opening a bakery in San Francisco this year.

Starting next week, the Association of Arizmendi Cooperatives - an organizing group with employees from the Cheeseboard, Arizmendi and others interested in worker co-ops - will begin holding information sessions to attract workers who knead good bread and need democratic rule.

"A sourdough starter produces a certain culture, that when you move to another place, can take on a life of its own," said Tim Huet, who helped coordinate efforts to launch Arizmendi and the latest San Francisco bakery

'We're trying to replicate a democratic business, with good-paying jobs.'

- Tim Huet, co-op start-up coordinator venture.

"We're trying to replicate a democratic business, with good-paying jobs."

The co-op bakeries show that workers can have their ideals and eat too. Last year Arizmendi rang up more than $1 million in sales, and the Cheeseboard more than $2 million, on their pizza, chocolate things and zampanso. The name "Arizmendi" refers to a line of Spanish worker co-ops that generate billions in annual revenue.

The planned bakery, to be housed in an old photo laboratory, will join other San Francisco worker co-ops such as the radical Bound Together Bookstore in the Haight.

Though co-ops may seem a '60s anachronism, such collectives have flourished in the past five years, said Paul Hazen, president and CEO of the National Cooperative Business Association in Washington, D.C.

Today's movement has evolved to include professionals fleeing the corporate world.

"The real issue is that people feel they're losing control of their lives," Hazen said. "They can control capital they have, if they're involved with a cooperative."

Every employee at each store, no matter their tenure, takes the same cut of the profits - with the common hourly wage and benefits determined each year by the collective. At Arizmendi, workers bumped their earnings by $3 to $13 per hour after a profitable year.

Ex-husband talks about death case

KENDRICK - The ex-husband of a woman found dead in a burned out building in rural Latah County last spring claims there are several people who might have had a motive to kill her.

But Dale Shackelford provided little more information about what he knows of Donna Fontaine, 44, and Fred Palahniuk, 59. He refused to say whether he was in Idaho to testify before a grand jury that may be investigating the homicides.

Shackelford is one of several people authorities have interviewed about Fontaine's death. Fontaine, who lived in Middlebrook, Mo., and Palahniuk, Wash., had been dating for some time when their bodies were found in the remains of the outbuilding near Kendrick last May. Fontaine had been staying in the structure during construction on a home on the property.

Judge grants new trial in sexual assault case

POCATELLO - A one-time cab driver has won his bid for a new trial on charges he sexually assaulted a 77-year-old woman in her home.

Michael Vitale convinced 6th District Judge Peter McDermott that the judge had improperly advised the jury during Vitale's first trial last November.

Jurors were deadlocked after five hours of deliberation when McDermott asked them to reconsider all the evidence in an attempt to reach a verdict that would head off the declaration of a mistrial.

In granting a new trial, McDermott said that encouraging the jury to review the evidence may have been the wrong advice. But he rejected the defense contention that prosecutors had not proved their case against Vitale.

Prosecutors clear cops, will seek to charge man

IDAHO FALLS - Prosecutors say police were justified in shooting a local man Dec. 14. They will now seek charges against the man for trying to hijack a bystander's pickup truck.

Kevin Jon Hurley could be charged with aggravated battery and using a deadly weapon sometime this week, said Bonneville County Prosecutor Kipp Manwaring.

Hurley, 30, was shot in the lower buttocks and upper leg during an encounter with police.

Firm may replace pipe, but care taken for trout

MISSOULA, Mont. - Montana regulators have approved Yellowstone Pipe Line Co.'s plan to replace 500 feet of aging line by digging a trench across the Clark Fork River.

The Department of Environmental Quality says the work must be done at specified times to protect spawning trout.

The agency said the company can dig a 6-foot-deep trench across the river near Missoula between April 1-15 or from Sept. 7-Oct. 7, and only if flows are less than 1,500 cubic feet per second.

"All of the trout species present in the Clark Fork River spawn in clean gravel in the river bottom and thus could be affected by deposition of sediment," the state said in its environmental review.

Yellowstone spokesman Larry Springer said the company hopes to get the work done this spring. Plans to do it last fall were blocked by legal action.

Meanwhile the Lolo National Forest has suspended its environmental review of the company's application for a new gasoline pipeline between Missoula and Thompson Falls.

Springer said the company requested the suspension because it disputes the $5 million bill so far for the analysis.

The company wants to know more about the issues in question. Environmentalists are accusing it of stalling.

The company rerouted the pipeline proposal through the forest after losing its right of way across the Flathead Indian Reservation because of past spills, leaks and environmental damage.

Feds: Prairie dog warrants care

But more pressing issues will keep the rodent off protection status - for now

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The Interior Department decided Thursday the black-tailed prairie dog merits protection as a threatened species but said it is too busy dealing with higher-priority plants and wildlife to preserve the rodent that has long been a pest to ranchers.

The prairie dog will be added to a list of candidates for threatened status under the Endangered Species Act, but there will be no restrictions placed on landowners to protect it. Its status will be reviewed annually, however, and it could move up the priority list if voluntary conservation efforts are unsuccessful, officials said.

Colonies of prairie dogs once were found on as many as 100 million acres from Canada to Mexico, but the animal has been decimated by disease, eradication programs and housing development.

"All this is, is a wakeup call that we need more purposeful management for this species," said Pete Gober, a Fish and Wildlife Service biologist who led a year-long study of the animal.

Eight western states - Arizona, Kansas, Montana, Nebraska, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Texas and Wyoming - have agreed to come up with a plan by next year for monitoring and protecting the animal.

"The black-tailed prairie dog is a very resilient species. It's handled a lot over the years," Gober said. "Hopefully we'll be able to work with those states to avoid the necessity of listing the species."

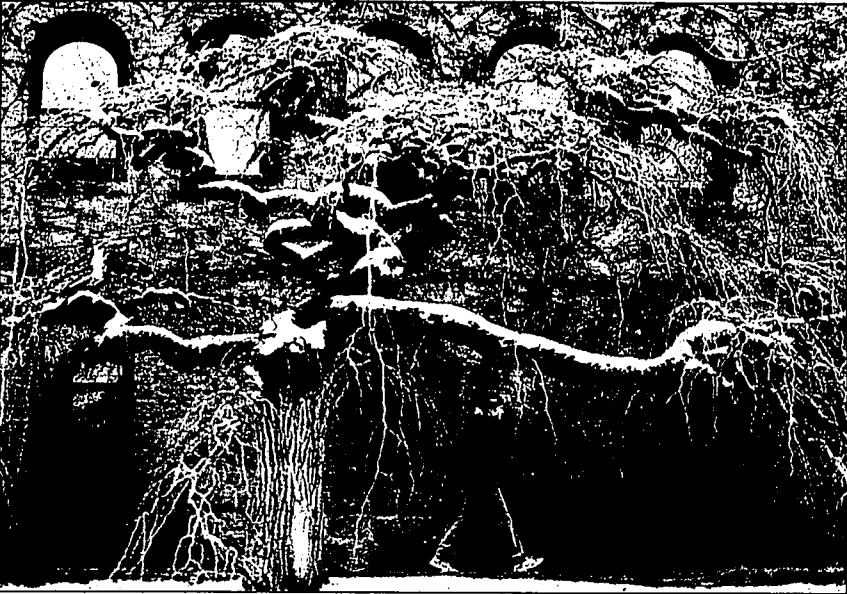

The annual reviews will look at how the prairie dog is doing and whether it should be removed from the candidate list or moved up in priority.

The Fish and Wildlife Service's regional office in Denver already has proposed several species for listing as endangered or threatened, including the lynx, mountain plover and Colorado butterfly plant. Endangered status means that a species is in danger of extinction; threatened status means it could become endangered.

Prairie dogs once were abundant across the West.

Washington judge's notes draw scorn, review

The Associated Press

SPOKANE, Wash. - Eastern Washington's chief federal judge has asked for a judicial investigation of notes Judge Alan McDonald exchanged with courtroom staff that contained racially offensive language and other off-color remarks.

Judge William Fremming Nielsen - of Spokane - said Wednesday he has asked the 9th Circuit Judicial Council to review the controversy.

Mark Mendenhall, a spokesman for the San Francisco-based appellate court, said the case "will be taken up in accordance with our rules."

The court's nine-judge judicial council could take a number of actions, from requesting that McDonald retire, temporarily halting assignment of new cases to him or publicly or privately censuring or reprimanding him. The council also could take no action.

The 72-year-old Yakima-based judge been on senior status since December 1996, handling a reduced caseload while drawing his full $141,300 salary.

The Spokesman-Review newspaper reported Sunday that McDonald and a clerk had passed disparaging notes in court for years.

McDonald has said the notes were never intended for the public and were being misinterpreted. Some of the notes were jokes that helped "break the monotony" of court proceedings, but didn't affect outcomes, he said.

In one note, the judge wrote, "Ah is im po tent," while a black man was testifying. The Spokesman-Review said, McDonald said he was referring to himself and using a term of self-deprecation.

In a note court clerk Pam Posada gave the judge, she wrote: "It smells like oil in here - too many 'Gressers.'"

The courtroom was full of Hispanic defendants and lawyers at the time.

In another case in Yakima, McDonald referred to labor union representatives as "union mafia" and "gangsters."

Another note, which could not be linked to a specific trial, referred to Mormons and other ethnic groups.

"He's been a con man for a long time!" Posada wrote. The judge replied: "Yes, and in my experience, a Mormon money man makes the Jews and Chinese look like rank amateurs!"

In a prepared statement to The Spokesman-Review, Nielsen said Wednesday: "The judges of this District feel that comments which may contain racial, ethnic and sexual connotations are inappropriate in court. Due to the factual matter revealed, this Court has referred the matter to the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals."

Two members of Washington's congressional delegation said they were dismayed by the note-writing.

"These accusations are extremely troubling, and it's imperative that our judges are both fair and impartial," said Democratic Sen. Patty Murray.

Jennifer Scott, spokeswoman for Rep. Doc Hastings - whose district includes Yakima - said the Republican found the allegations "troubling" and wants an explanation.

Mayor Hal Wing plays the aliphorn above Springville, Utah, last month.

In this Utah town, the hills are alive with the sounds of its mayor

The Associated Press

SPRINGVILLE, Utah - For Springville's youngsters, the hottest new music CD in town has nothing to do with pop, funk, rock or rap.

It's yodeling. By the mayor.

Mayor Hal Wing unveiled a CD last week titled "Hal Wing: The Happy Wanderer." Already known for his flamboyant style, Wing admits he may be "a bit on the zany side" with this one.

But the mayor insists it's not a publicity stunt. He's donating proceeds from the sale of the CDs to Springville's youths.

After just one day of sales, Wing had raised $200 that he put into a special account for youth programs in Springville. The CDs sell for $10 each.

"If you want to help the youth or to drive unwelcome company from your home, you can purchase one of these CDs," Wing told residents in his monthly online newsletter.

But Wing, who travels extensively in Europe for business, does a pretty good job as a yodeler. Among the songs he performs are "Edelweiss," "Amazing Grace" and "O Tannenbaum."

On a yodeling cassette tape he put out six years ago, Wing also played the aliphorn - the long wooden instrument currently spotted on couch dog commercials - as a trumpet.

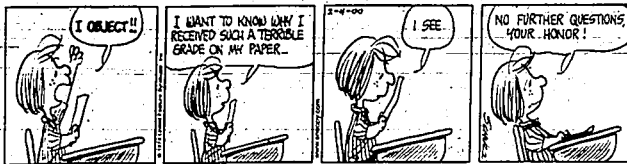

"He's actually really good," said one Springville librarian who heard Wing yodel at a city party.

Wing's 1994 cassette tape, "Alpine Yodeling Ballads," was filed in the city's library under "International," even though Wing was born and reared in Springville.
