Eismann plays down possible conflict

Court candidate declines to discuss wilderness water

By N.S. Nokken/Staff Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The unspoken issue was the main subject of conversation with Supreme Court candidate Dan Eismann Thursday.
 That issue is state Supreme Court Justice Cathy Silak's majority opinion, issued Oct. 1, 1999, upholding a federal reserved water right within three central Idaho wilderness areas. Silak's seat is up for election in the May primary election, and Eismann, 53, is taking a shot at it.

But Eismann, a 4th district judge, would not discuss the issue directly with The Times-News' editorial board Thursday.
 Critics of the Supreme Court's ruling have called for a candidate to challenge Silak's position on the court. Republicans who are taking sides in the race cite it as a key reason for wanting to remove her from office.

"To put the right people in the right place to make the right decisions is critical," U.S. Sen. Larry Craig said, after introducing Eismann at a GOP Lincoln Day banquet in Twin Falls earlier this month.

Some time in January, people started calling Eismann, asking him to run for Silak's seat on the Supreme Court. After some urging, he decided to run, he said.

Death penalty opponents urged Gov. Bush to delay

The Associated Press

HUNTSVILLE, Texas — A 62-year-old woman was executed by injection Thursday after Gov. George W. Bush rejected her claim that she killed her fifth husband in self-defense and deserved a reprieve.

Betty Lou Beets became the fourth woman to be executed in the United States since the Supreme Court in 1976 allowed the death penalty to resume. She was the second woman executed in Texas since the Civil War.

She gave no final statement as she lay strapped to the death chamber gurney. She made no eye contact with the victim's family, but smiled at relatives watching through a window at her side. She continued smiling as she slipped into unconsciousness.

Death penalty opponents and domestic violence organizations had urged Bush to grant Beets a 30-day delay, arguing it would be consistent with his description of himself as a "compassionate conservative" in his presidential campaign. The delay was Bush's only option, since the state parole board did not recommend that her sentence be commuted to life in prison.

During his 5 1/2 years as governor, 120 convicted killers have been executed in Texas. He has spared one condemned inmate.

Health officials respond to area's high rate of tooth decay

By Jay Howser Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A high prevalence of tooth decay among Magic-Valley children has health officials concerned.

A report for the Women, Infants and Children health program, issued earlier this month, shows the percentage of WIC children with the infant tooth decay ranks high, compared to other areas of the state.

In 1998, 16 percent of children between 3 and 4 years old had the disorder known as baby bottle tooth decay; it was found in 17 percent of children between 4 and 5 years old. Only the southwest Idaho district and Nez Perce tribe reported higher rates.

The problem is that people are leaving their children on the bottle too long, said Mary Decker, family and child health director for WIC, a program for lower-income Idaho residents.

Babies should be weaned from the bottle at around 12 months, she said, but many people leave them on much longer for a variety of reasons.

"People need to regard the bottle as nutrition, not a pacifier or a way to relieve stress or put their kids to sleep," Decker said.

Lisa Flores learned the hard way.

She fed her son, Justin, with a bottle until he was 18 months old. She said she made a habit of putting him to bed with a bottle, not realizing the risk of tooth decay. She said Justin wanted a bottle all the time, so she thought nothing of it.

Later on, Justin started having painful dental problems. Now 6 years old, Justin has been to the dentist six or seven times for fillings and extractions.

Facts on baby bottle tooth decay

- Baby bottle tooth decay affects two or more of the upper front baby teeth, or primary incisors, and can be identified by the following signs:
- White or brown areas of decalcification.
 - Obvious tooth decay, or cavities.
 - Brownish-black roots, a sign of teeth destroyed to the gum line.
 - Missing teeth due to decay.
 - Restorations of fillings or crowns.
 - A parent's report of tooth decay, diagnosed or treated by a dentist.

Flores will not make the same mistakes with her daughter, Kathleen, now 6 months old.

"She will be off the bottle at 1. We are throwing them away," she said.

Flores said WIC has helped

The following high-risk behaviors can cause baby bottle tooth decay:

- Going to bed with a bottle filled with something besides water.
- Sleeping all night at the breast.
- Drinking all day from a bottle that contains fluids other than water.
- Using a pacifier dipped in sugar or honey.
- Routine use of the practice of propping a bottle.

Stakes rise for U.S. as officials ponder more troops to quell Kosovo violence

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — NATO's struggle for ethnic calm in northern Kosovo has raised the stakes for U.S. involvement in a peacekeeping operation that has no end in sight.

The 22nd Marine Expeditionary Unit, aboard ships in the Mediterranean, is standing by as potential U.S. reinforcements, although Pentagon spokesman Kenneth Bacon said Thursday that NATO commanders have not asked for the Marines.

Expanding the U.S. troop presence in Kosovo would raise the risk for a force that has largely escaped casualties.

In Washington and other allied capitals, there is no appetite for a major additional buildup of troops in Kosovo. But NATO feels it cannot let the flare-up of ethnic violence in the city of Mitrovica go unanswered.

Defense Secretary William Cohen has said he expects the Mitrovica problem to be resolved shortly, possibly without U.S. reinforcements. France, whose peacekeepers are in charge of the ethnically divided Mitrovica area, is preparing to send 600 to 700 more troops to the area.

The NATO's chief commander, U.S. Army Gen. Wesley Clark, requested the extra French troops and asked NATO's political authorities for the go-ahead to put about 1,200 other troops on a higher state of alert for possible deployment among tense other troops are the 22nd Marine Expeditionary Unit.

NATO officials are to meet on the matter Friday at alliance headquarters in Brussels, Belgium.

Whether to send Marines is an "open question," White House press secretary Joe Lockhart said Thursday.

"I support the request General Clark has made," Lockhart told reporters. "We take this mission very seriously and we will take the appropriate steps to deter any further violence."

Seldjo Uka, an ethnic Albanian from Kosovar Mitrovica, runs away from angry Serbs who are throwing stones at his car and French soldiers Thursday.

ACROSS THE NATION

Idaho: A strong upper-level system centered over northern Utah provided precipitation and clouds across all of Idaho Thursday. Equivalent water amounts generally were less than 0.50 inch, but some areas received nearly an inch, including Boise. Temperatures were lower than those on Wednesday. A minor disturbance will slide across on Friday before another vigorous system slowly moves through over the weekend. Temperatures will remain on the mild side through the next few days.

Elsewhere: A high pressure system brought some record high temperatures to parts of the southern Plains and Southeast on Thursday, while up to a foot of snow fell in parts of the Rockies. A disturbance that pushed through the Great Lakes brought mostly cloudy skies and scattered showers to the Northeast and upper Midwest. Showers fell in Ohio, Michigan, New York, Pennsylvania, northern Indiana, and New England. Temperatures were mild, with 50s throughout the region.

Former President Bush hospitalized

NAPLES, Fla. (AP) — Former President Bush was admitted to a hospital with an irregular heartbeat on Thursday after feeling ill at a reception, a spokesman said. He was kept overnight for observation. George Herbert Walker Bush, 75, had been on his feet for about 90 minutes during an investors conference at the Registry Resort when he felt lightheaded, spokesman Jim McGrath said. Aides sat him down and he said he felt better, McGrath said. He was driven to the airport for a return flight to his Houston home, but still felt ill and was taken to Naples Community Hospital.

Bush, a vigorous septuagenarian who has skydived, was expected to be released on Friday. Bush takes medication for heart problems, McGrath said. While he was president, Bush had a similar episode in 1991, right after the Gulf War, and spent two days in the hospital, McGrath said. The career politician, diplomat and 41st president of the United States suffered an irregular heartbeat during a job on May 4, 1991, and was found to have Graves disease, the most common form of hyperthyroidism or an overactive thyroid gland. His wife, Barbara, also has Graves disease.

not just because he wanted the job, but because "I think I can make a difference on the court." But his candidacy already has raised some legal eyebrows across the state. Boise attorney and unsuccessful gubernatorial candidate Robert Huntley himself a former Supreme Court justice, has filed a complaint against Eismann for his participation in a Republican fund-raiser in Idaho Falls earlier this month. Eismann was introduced at the Idaho Falls Lincoln Day banquet as a candidate for Sisk's seat. He criticized judges who act as activists in their interpretation of federal and state constitutions. In a similar gathering in Twin Falls, Craig gave a ringing endorsement that Eismann characterized as a personal endorsement. "I don't think it was a party endorsement," Eismann said. A Supreme Court Chief Justice Linda Copple Trout, also a member of the state Judicial Council, declined to comment on the issue because Huntley's complaint may come before the court. Huntley said it's illegal for a Supreme Court candidate to be nominated or endorsed by any political party. But Huntley has not filed a complaint against other Supreme Court candidates who have attended other Lincoln Day Republican functions, Eismann said. In another potential issue, Eismann is married to the sister of 5th District Judge Barry Wood and Fish and Game Commissioner Dr. Fred Wood of Burley. Barry Wood presides over the Snake River Basin adjudication, raising a possible question of propriety should Eismann be elected and in a position to rule on an appeal of a water court decision. If the situation arose, Eismann said he would ask the judicial council's advice and if there was an appearance of impropriety he would disqualify himself from ruling on the case. Barry Wood's appointment as presiding judge in the adjudication ends June 30, but he could be reappointed. Eismann would not speculate whether Barry Wood would consider stepping down if Eismann were elected. Barry Wood declined to comment. He has also been subject to a conflict of interest complaint; the Nez Perce tribe, citing water rights held by Barry Wood and his family, has asked the judge to be disqualified from ruling on cases involving the tribe. Eismann said the relationship with Barry Wood would not affect the way he would rule on a case, just as his history with other judges throughout the state would not affect the way he ruled on their cases. This is not the first time Eismann has sought a position on the Supreme Court. He applied in 1994, but he was rejected. He was questioned about speaking at an anti-abortion rally on the Snake River steps. He defended himself then and Thursday by saying he did not consider it a political issue. It's a moral issue that shouldn't involve politics, he said. The position went instead to Gerald Schroeder. Eismann, who served two tours in the Vietnam War as a door-gunner on a helicopter gunship, is a graduate of the University of Idaho. He served as a magistrate in Canyon County from 1986 to 1995, when he was appointed by then-Gov. Phil Batt as a district judge in Ada County. Before that, he had worked in private practice in Cuyler and Canyon counties and spent a year as law clerk for Supreme Court Justice Charles Donaldson. He considers himself a conservative judge, saying "judges should accept the law as written, apply the law to the facts, and in this way arrive at the result." But he acknowledged that two judges could look carefully at the law, apply it to the facts in that manner and arrive at different results.

Gasoline

American Automobile Association warned of possible short supplies there. Many motorists are paying nearly $1.50 a gallon and even for regular gasoline, according to various studies. The national average this week was $1.41, a nickel higher than the week earlier. Cook, prices this spring and summer, petroleum director at the Energy Information Administration, testified. Cook said low inventories of crude oil and heating and diesel stocks, combined with soaring crude prices, led to the extremely sharp and sudden price increases in heating oil late January and early February. The low inventories and a reluctance by refiners to buy crude at high prices set the stage for the price of heating oil to double in parts of the Northeast when the weather suddenly turned cold. Now a similar scenario seems to be developing on the gasoline front that could lead to severe price increases, especially if there is great demand, energy experts said. Both gasoline and petroleum stocks are low, said Cook, adding that refiners will have to increase gasoline production significantly to meet high summer demand.

evidence of the case, I concur with the jury that Betty Lou Beets is guilty of this murder," Bush said in a written statement after returning to Texas from California, where he was campaigning for the Republican nomination. "I'm confident that the courts, both state and federal, have thoroughly reviewed all the issues raised by the defendant." Beets and her lawyers insisted the former bartender/waitress, convicted of fatally shooting fifth husband Jimmy Don Beets nearly 17 years ago and burying his body under a flower garden, was the victim of years of domestic abuse and should be allowed to live. On Thursday the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans rejected an appeal that accused the state of not following its own rules in reviewing Beets' case. The arguments were dismissed Wednesday by a federal judge in Austin as a delay tactic. Beets' lawyers also took the matter to the U.S. Supreme Court, which rejected it without comment. According to the governor's office, Bush had received 2,108 phone calls and letters opposing Beets' execution by Thursday afternoon, and 57 calls and letters favoring it. "A decision to stay the execution of Ms. Beets would demonstrate your compassionate conservatism and that you are willing to do what is right even in the face of potential criticism from your constituents," the Rev. Jesse Jackson wrote Bush on Thursday.

es on health issues, and WIC coordinator Tammy Walters said the report shows more needs to be done to address baby bottle tooth decay. "We probably need to make changes in the message going out to clients. We need to art emphasizing the age 12 months more than we are," she said. Walters pointed out that just giving a baby a bottle is not best anyway. "We encourage mothers if at all possible to breast-feed their babies for whatever length of time they are able," Walters said. "Breast milk is the healthiest thing for babies. It's made specifically for babies, and it's nature's way of taking care of them." The reports show 66 percent of women are breast-feeding after childbirth, an increase from past reports, Walters said. WIC's goal, though, is to reach 75 percent, a mark no health district in the state has reached.

Bottle-fed children are vulnerable to other problems as well. Decker said children on the bottom too long tend to become overweight. "It's a pacifier with calories," she said. Magic Valley children also ranked high in this category, with 8 percent of them being overweight. Decker said dietary factors probably account for this statistic because families with lower incomes tend to eat a lot of starchy foods and not enough meat, fish, fruits and vegetables. Overall, WIC officials are pleased with the results of the survey, but say more must be done to educate people about health concerns. "We need to get every person and every family to think about what they need to do to improve their health. The health department can't do it on one. We have to share the responsibility with the citizens," Decker said.

Study: States hang onto 'extra' welfare funds

Knight Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — Forty-five state governments and the District of Columbia are hoarding more than $7.3 billion in federal welfare money and, in some cases, using it to compensate for cuts in state welfare programming, according to a new study.

Since 1997, 17 states have accumulated more than $100 million each in surplus welfare money, according to the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, a liberal policy-research institute that co-sponsored the report, titled "Poverty Amidst Plenty."

California leads the way with $1.6 billion, followed by New York with $1.1 billion and Ohio with $734 million.

Rather than spending the money immediately on services such as helping to move families off welfare and into jobs, many states are opting to hold it in case of an economic downturn. The strong U.S. economy and rapidly declining welfare caseloads made it easy for states to save the federal grants.

But those reserves are needed now to help people with learning disabilities, emotional problems, poor education and unstable work histories that make them unable to find jobs, according to the National Campaign for Jobs and Income, an umbrella group of social-welfare organizations that released the report Thursday. The group urged the nation's governors, who will meet this weekend in Washington, to spend the money promptly on purposes intended by Congress.

At least six states — Connecticut, Kansas, Minnesota, New York, Texas and Wisconsin — are using their federal money to make up for state budget cuts in welfare programs, the study says. That is legal under the 1996 federal welfare-reform law, but the social-welfare advocates say it violates the spirit and intent of the law.

Examples of how states substituted federal money to save their own, according to the report, include:

- Texas transferred $173 million in federal welfare money to free $162 million in state general-revenue funds, even though state revenues were running a $6.4 billion surplus.

- Minnesota transferred $60 million in federal money to child care programs in 1999, then reduced state funding for those programs by the same amount.
- Kansas will spend more than half of its $102 million federal block grant to cover state costs in its child-welfare system.
- New York transferred $241 million to a social services block grant, then decreased its own funds for the program by the same amount. State officials used $49 million in federal welfare money to pay for the state's earned income tax credit, which previously had been financed by state money.

Report: Many children ride unrestrained

ATLANTA (AP) — Little progress has been made in reducing the number of car accident deaths among children ages 4 to 8, in part because drivers continue to leave them unrestrained by any safety device, according to a government report issued Thursday.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported that from 1994 to 1998, 2,549 children in that age-range died in fatal car wrecks.

The report found that more than two-thirds were not wearing a safety restraint, and fewer than half were sitting in the back seat, which is the safest area for a child to be. The fatality rate would be lower but for the fact that many children between those ages are too big for child safety seats and too small for adult seat belts, the CDC said.

The CDC recommends that children ages 4 to 8 use booster seats so that shoulder belts fit them securely between the neck and arm and the lap belt fits across the upper thighs. Only about 5 percent of the children killed in accidents were using booster seats.

Federal officials also recommend that any child under 12 years old ride only in the back, which studies show could cut deaths by a third. But about a quarter of all children routinely ride up front, the CDC said.

Steven T. Coleman of the CDC's National Center for Injury Prevention and Control, likened the problem to a disease in which a vaccine goes unused.

County builds schoolyard gardens

Tradition began with feisty farmer

VENTURA, Calif. (AP) — Next week 500 teachers from the Los Angeles Unified School District will pack a school auditorium to discuss a tall order from Sacramento: putting a school garden in each of the district's 915 schools.

Students at Blanche Reynolds Elementary School in Ventura, Calif., harvest lettuce this week that they are growing in the school's garden. About 60 percent of the district's schools have the gardens.

This hands-on approach to nutrition, applauded by everyone from the superintendent of schools to the governor, is most often credited to Alice Waters. The visionary Berkeley chef has, after all, led a movement that has put gardens in 12 of her city's 17 schools.

But the Los Angeles teachers needn't look so far as the Bay Area for inspiration. Very quietly, neighboring Ventura County put together a school garden program that is nothing short of astonishing. Since 1994, it has built gardens in 109 public schools, almost 60 percent of the county's total.

Not only are gardens planned for every school in the county, there is to be a state-of-the-art agricultural learning center in the Santa Clara valley. It will host field trips and teacher training programs.

That triumph, it seems, has slipped beneath Sacramento's radar.

One state monitor suggests that this may have happened because the farmers, teachers and parents in Ventura County did not go in hand to the state for funding. Rather, support came from the desire of a local farmer who once dreamed of being a teacher.

The farmer was Thelma Hansen. Born in 1898, Hansen studied mathematics at UC Berkeley but returned to Ventura County in 1921 and spent the rest of her days on the family farm in Saticoy. Her help was needed with crops ranging from lima beans to walnuts to lemons to apricots.

By 1989, Hansen was 90, her immediate family was dead, and she had been targeted as a potential A-1 list benefactor by her alma mater. She was not, it emerged, easy pickings; at least one inept UC fund-raiser was chased off her property.

However, Hansen eventually took a shine to Larry Yee, head of the local UC Cooperative Extension office. "She was fiercely independent, cantankerous and tough. She didn't trust anybody, but once you got to know her, she had a heart of gold."

Between 1989 and 1992, Yee worked with Hansen designing a trust that would address two of her dearest concerns: education and the future of farming in Ventura.

When her family moved to Ventura in 1906, it was a wild place where mustard grass signaled to pioneer farmers the fertility of its valley floors. As Hansen wrote her will in the 1930s, farming was retreating from the same valleys, supplanted by encroaching housing developments.

The antidote, she realized, was educating the public about the importance of agriculture. So, when Hansen died in January 1993, she bequeathed $12 million to the University agriculture division for, among other things, teaching kids where their food comes from.

Yee's first step in implementing a notoriously grouchy woman's vision was inviting the county superintendent of schools, Charles Weis, to join the Hansen Trust board. Weis has influence but not power.

"We at the county don't have authority over schools," he says. "Our activities have been persuasion and support."

Support for teachers interested in starting gardens took the form of three-day training sessions. By 1994, groups of 30 teachers at a time being shown how to pick lemons or touring fruit packing houses became common sights in Ventura.

Food fight

America's dueling diet experts debated the nutritional merits of their diet plans Thursday at an Agriculture Department event. Here are examples of two meal plans being debated.

Robert Atkins' plan

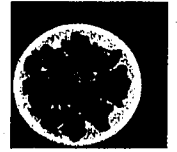

> High protein, low carbohydrate

> A lunch could include: a hamburger (without the bun), onion, cheese, bacon, leaf lettuce, unwashed strawberries and blueberries.

Dean Ornish's plan

> Anti-low-fat (10 percent), low protein

> A lunch could include: pasta, any vegetable, banana and strawberries (not shown).

Interested in weight loss? There's no shortage of plans from which to choose WASHINGTON (AP) — Want to lose weight? Following the back and forth of the Great Nutrition Debate, a government-sponsored face-off Thursday of America's leading diet gurus. The exercise was guaranteed to leave you exhausted.

At one end was cardiologist Robert Atkins, promoter of the wildly popular, high-protein, low-carbohydrate diet that lets people eat omelets, bacon and bun-less burgers. "It's easy to follow. You're never hungry," he said.

On the other, Dean Ornish, an internist whose book promises readers they can "Eat More, Weigh Less" if they follow his ultra low-fat, virtually vegetarian diet.

In between were people like heart surgeon Morrison Bethou, co-author of "Sugar Busters! Cut Sugar to Trim Fat," who says the secret to losing weight is cutting out not just sugar but also foods like potatoes and carrots that act in similar ways.

Also, biochemist Barry Evans, who believes the answer to obesity is in chemistry — controlling the body's insulin level, and internist John McDougall, who thinks it should be obvious to anyone that an Asian rice-based diet is best. "This is no brainier," he said.

Atkins vigorously defended his low-carb diet, which has been roundly criticized by Ornish as well as many medical experts who fear it could damage the kidneys or bones.

Atkins said that it is the fat and cholesterol produced by the body that is the culprit in obesity, not the fat that's eaten. And not only does his diet work, it's safe, he said.

Not so, said Ornish. "Telling people to eat pork rinds and sausage is healthy sells books, but it's hazardous to your health," said Ornish.

In the sharpest exchange of the debate, Ornish criticized the lack of research done on the effects of Atkins' diet.

"We're not as good a fund-raiser as you are," Atkins snapped. "With the number of books you sell you could fund your own studies," Ornish fired back.

As for critics who say Ornish's low-fat diet is unappealing, he said that's because they are not cooking the right way.

Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman, who organized the debate and had the final word, made no effort to sort out the myriad conflicting claims. "Eat well and eat healthy," he advised. But he suggested that it may be time for government researchers get involved in evaluating the various diets.

There were some areas of agreement among the weight-loss experts: Americans are too fat. Exercise is good. Added sugars and refined carbohydrates, like white bread, are not.

Salvatore 'Sammy the Bull' Gravano arrives at a Phoenix jail late Thursday after rans on a criminal syndicate earlier in the day.

Ex-hitman Gravano may face drug charges

PHOENIX (AP) — Former Mafia hitman Salvatore "Sammy the Bull" Gravano, the mob turncoat whose testimony put crime boss John Gotti behind bars, was arrested Friday on charges he was involved with a drug ring.

Gravano was not selling drugs but was a "mentor" to the ring's leader, Michael Papa, who is also the founding member of a white supremacist gang, said Phoenix police spokesman Jeff Halstead. Gravano was booked into the Maricopa County Jail. Halstead declined to give specifics on what he was charged with.

Thirty-five members of the ring were also arrested. Police said Gravano's criminal enterprises targeted "normal" Valley teenagers and rave music clubs. The Arizona Republic reported on its Web site. The drug operation, which police allege was financed by Gravano, sold upward of 30,000 ecstasy pills a week, the Republic said. The pills, a derivative of methamphetamine sometimes laced with heroin, looked like candy and were stamped with Nike swooshes and other symbols. They were bought by the syndicate for $6-$7 each and sold for $25 a pill, police said.

Gravano, a confessed serial hitman, ravaged the Mafia by defecting to the government, sending Gotti and dozens of other gangland cronies to prison. Authorities called him most important mob turncoat in U.S. history.

FBI joins probe of LAPD

LOS ANGELES (AP) — At the request of the police chief, federal authorities announced that they will play a major role investigating the city's widening police corruption scandal.

Six FBI agents will work with police and prosecutors, said James DeSarno Jr., the FBI's Los Angeles chief. U.S. Attorney Alejandro Mayorkas said his office also will step up its role.

"We hope to bring our expertise, resources and independence to bear on this problem," Mayorkas said Wednesday at a news conference.

Prison remains in lockdown

CRESCENT CITY, Calif. (AP) — The general population of one of California's most violent prisons is on lockdown again Thursday after a riot that forced guards to open fire on inmates, killing one and wounding 15 others.

The riot between 200 black and Hispanic inmates broke out about 9:30 a.m. Wednesday in an exercise yard within the highest-

In Washington Thursday, Attorney General Janet Reno said the Justice Department and FBI would assist local officials but remain independent enough of their investigation to make a separate judgment on whether a federal prosecution is needed.

So far, 20 officers have been suspended and 40 criminal convictions have been reversed since a former anti-gang officer accused of stealing cocaine from an evidence locker began telling prosecutors that fellow officers framed innocent people, lied in court and even shot suspects.

security wing of Pelican Bay State Prison.

Prison officials did not know what prompted the fighting, but the discovery of 88 homemade weapons led them to believe it was planned, spokesman Lt. Ben Grundy said. "All indications are there was no single inmate who started it. It was more of a group effort," Grundy said.

Pope condemns religious violence in visit

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Denouncing violence in the name of religion as "an offense against God," Pope John Paul II called for tolerance on Thursday as he began a visit to Egypt, where clashes between Muslims and Christians recently left 23 people dead.

In beginning his pilgrimage to retrace some of the epic passages from the Bible, John Paul became the first Roman Catholic pope to visit predominantly Islamic Egypt. The pontiff's three-day Egypt trip also gave him an opportunity to promote closer dialogue with Muslims and to try to overcome old rifts with Orthodox Christians.

The pope raised the issue of tolerance among religious groups, speaking in general terms, as is his custom. John Paul said his planned visit to Mount Sinai on Saturday, where tradition says God gave Moses the Ten Commandments, "will be a moment of intense prayer for peace and for interreligious dialogue." "To do harm, to promote violence and conflict in the name of religion is a terrible contradiction and a great offense against God," John Paul said shortly after arriving at Cairo's international airport. "But past and present history give us many examples of such a misuse of religion."

John Paul, dressed in white robes embroidered in gold, had earlier emerged from his plane under cloudy skies and slowly made his way down red-carpeted steps to the airport's tarmac.

President Hosni Mubarak greeted John Paul with a handshake at the foot of the stairs. Those who came to welcome the pope included Muslim and Christian religious leaders from across the region.

Twenty-three people were killed in southern Egypt in January during clashes between Muslims and Coptic Christians, the largest religious minority in predominantly Muslim Egypt. Most of those who died were Coptic.

In greeting the pope, Mubarak denounced all forms of discrimination.

"Today the Egyptian people stand together, united by their submission to the will of God and inspired by the spirit of both Christianity and Islam," Mubarak said in English.

The pope thanked Mubarak in English for making his visit possible.

Thousands flee lava flows in Philippines

LEGAZPI, Philippines (AP) — A 1.5-mile-high volcano erupted Thursday, spewing superheated ash into the air and sending streams of superhot, bright orange lava down its slopes.

Thousands of nearby villagers, many in the area asleep by rumblings before the pre-dawn eruption, boarded army trucks to leave the area. Evacuees crammed into school classrooms and some took refuge under trees in the schoolyard. No injuries were reported.

The Mayon volcano's eruption began with lava gushing out of the crater, accompanied by loud rumblings that some nearby residents compared to thunder. Lava with temperatures that reached well above 1,000 degrees cascaded 3.5 miles down the mountain's near-perfect conical slopes. Ash rained as far as seven miles away.

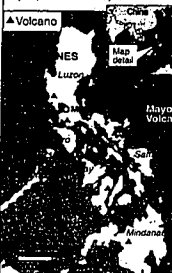

Fourteen explosions were recorded by late afternoon, the Philippine Institute of Volcanology and Seismology said. The fiercest sent ash flying 4.5 miles into the air and spread it across the sky, darkening some villages and forcing cars to use their headlights at midday.

Officials warned that a more violent explosion could occur.

Mozambique relief efforts move ahead

XAI-XAI, Mozambique (AP) — With many roads and bridges washed out, an air relief operation accelerated Tuesday for victims of flooding that has killed 70 in Mozambique and submerged much of the country in muddy water.

Rainstorms, meanwhile, persisted in neighboring areas of southern Africa, exacting a deadly toll.

In South Africa's Northern Province, 10 people have died since Wednesday night when their water-soaked houses collapsed, and two others drowned when they were swept away by fast-running rivers.

In Zimbabwe, torrential rain forced 250,000 people to evacuate their homes. Five people have died. Others marooned by floodwaters had to fend off venomous snakes that also fed to high ground.

Record levels of rainfall began drenching southern Africa at the beginning of February.

Point of order: Wendell council considers relaxing meeting rules

By Gina Mulder
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — City leaders are considering making council meeting procedures a bit less restrictive.

Mayor Owen Rost Wednesday said Ordinance 349, detailing how council meetings are conducted, should be revised to eliminate any reference to the parliamentary procedure known as Roberts Rules of Order.

A section of the ordinance says all council meetings will use Roberts Rules of Order. But because city meetings have not completely followed those guidelines and since some council members were unfamiliar with the policies, Rost suggested doing away with the rules.

"It's not that we're not following parliamentary procedure, we're just not following Roberts Rules of Order to a T," Rost explained. "We fully intend to continue following parliamentary procedure and to fully comply with state law and city code. But we aren't, and never have followed, these exact, strict rules."

Rost referred to a handbook from the Association of Idaho Cities saying council members can write parliamentary procedure as long as it doesn't conflict with state and local laws. If not, then city officials can choose to adopt an accepted manual, such as Roberts Rules of Order.

In Wendell's case, the city decided to adopt Roberts Rules of Order in 1990, but Rost questioned whether any city administrators actually held fast to the policy.

"Do we want a section in our ordinance that we aren't following?" Rost asked council members.

Some suggested that by removing the clause, meetings could be conducted in a more discretionary of city leaders.

"If we repeal Section 24, I'm concerned that there be some kind of written parliamentary procedure in place so if there comes a time where you do have an unreasonable leadership that is trying to manipulate things, that people have some kind of recourse to refer to," Wendell resident Steve Koehler said.

Rost said he didn't see the need to rewrite the procedures since they are already spelled out in the other 23 sections of the ordinance.

"We're basically talking about the semantics of how people are to address each other ... and whether or not they stand up or sit down to speak," council member Glen Spencer added. "Does that really have any bearing on what is done in our meetings as long as it's done in an orderly manner?"

Council members decided to review Ordinance 349 and Roberts Rules of Order and decide on the matter later.

Also Wednesday, Council President Fred McCloud reported that the Idaho Transportation Department had said design plans and cost estimates for a stoplight at the intersection of Main and Idaho streets may be ready as early as this summer.

Originally, the department agreed to install the light, but not until the year 2002 and it could cost $100,000 to $150,000, with Wendell footing at least one-quarter of the expense.

Wendell's city leaders and residents have been lobbying the state for the past couple of years to install a stoplight at the major intersection, maintaining that the increased traffic would soon pose a risk to pedestrians and motorists. The safety considerations became a major issue after a December 1998 accident, in which a 75-year-old woman died from injuries suffered when she was hit by a truck while riding her bicycle through the intersection.

Shoshone may lose students

By Mickey Brown
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — The Shoshone School District could lose $7 million of its assessed property value if Hidden Valley residents annex into the Dietrich School District.

If Hidden Valley residents move to the Dietrich School District, the Shoshone School District's assessed value of property would fall from $82 million to $75 million, said Shoshone School District Superintendent Max Excell.

"It's substantial, decreasing taxing capacity by that amount," Excell said.

Homeowners in the southeast section of the Shoshone School District known as Hidden Valley have filed a petition for annexation into the Dietrich School District. In a special meeting on Monday, the Shoshone School Board decided to oppose the petition and to state its recommendation to the state. The petition will now go to the State Board of Education. If approved, the final decision will be made by Hidden Valley voters.

Excell said the petition must prove the following four things:

- There is no school serving the area.
- The area is contiguous to the receiving district.
- The change is in the best interest of the children who reside in the area.
- The area is not leaving a school district with a bonded debt in excess of the limit described by law.

Excell said Dietrich would not have to assume any bonded debt because it presently has no indebtedness. "Actually what would happen is that they (petitioners) would be released from bonded indebtedness from our school district," Excell said.

"It's good for them taxwise and for Dietrich because it would increase their market value by about $7 million worth of land that would be annexed."

A shift in taxes was one reason the Shoshone School Board opposed the petition. "The Shoshone bond issue was passed with the idea that it would be spread across the entire district and it would certainly increase the tax burden on the rest of the school district if this area was to go out," Excell said.

Times-News correspondent Mickey Brown can be reached in Buhl at 543-6562.

Prosecutors charge mother as an adult

REXBURG (AP) — The 19-year-old mother of a Rexburg baby killed two years ago has been charged as an adult with willfully allowing her son to be abused.

Madison County prosecutors secured a court order this week to move the felony case against Misty Genter from juvenile court.

Genter was 17 when her son William died at Primary Children's Hospital in Salt Lake City of head injuries.

In January, her husband, Benjamin, pleaded guilty to first-degree murder for shaking the boy on the day before William died in mid-April, 1998. Benjamin Genter will be sentenced next week under a plea bargain in which prosecutors will seek a minimum 17-year prison term before he is eligible for parole.

Indications are that the governor may be willing to accept the status quo.

Indian leaders ask Legislature to allow judge to rule on gambling

BOISE (AP) — The Legislature is being asked again to allow a federal judge to assess the legality of video pull gambling machines on the Shoshone-Bannock tribes' southeastern Idaho reservation.

But the tribes of such a ruling could mean the end of the lucrative casino-style electronic gambling operations being run by three northern Idaho tribes.

So Indian leaders on Thursday urged lawmakers at least to delay implementation of the state's agreement with the Shoshone-Bannock for a year while their talks continue with the Kemphorne administration on an out-of-court resolution.

"If the Legislature will allow this negotiation to continue until they meet again in 2001, this issue that pulls us apart can be solved in such a way that will bring us together," the chairman of the Nez Perce, Coeur d'Alene and Kootenai tribes wrote in a letter to House State Affairs Chairman Bill Deal, who is vice chairman last year led opponents to essentially the same bill heard Thursday.

This time the Nampa Republican's committee agreed to introduce the legislation that would ratify a federally required gambling compact with the Shoshone-Bannock, and includes a provision waiving Idaho's sovereign immunity from being sued by the state and tribes can seek a judge's ruling on the controversial machines.

Only two committee members opposed introducing the bill, at least in part out of fear that a judge's ruling might go beyond what games are legal in reservation casinos under the federal Indian Gaming Regulatory Act.

"We've been surprised by the state, and I'm just not comfortable waiving it," Republican Rep. Shirley McKague of Meridian said. "I don't trust the judicial system."

The complex Shoshone-Bannock compact came before State Affairs near the end of last year's legislative session and died in committee. The Nez Perce, Coeur d'Alene and Kootenai at that time flatly opposed referring the question of video pull-tab and other slot machine-type games to a judge because such machines had become an important part of their reservation casinos.

Indian leaders still argue their machines only offer an electronic version of the state Lottery's scratch-off tickets that have included such themes as poker, craps and other casino-style games. Any form of gambling allowed by the state also is authorized on their reservations.

The state and anti-gambling activists contend that the tribes are violating the Idaho Constitution's limited acceptance of gambling. But as the boon to depressed reservation economies becomes increasingly evident, negotiations have gotten under way with Gov. Dirk Kempthorne's office on a middle ground.

More from Boise — E1

Telephones and sleazy politicians will always have a future together

Batten down the hatches and reef the sails. A hurricane of political hot air will batter Idaho voters in the next eight months.

It will come by newspaper, it will come by television and radio, and it increasingly will come by telephone. A proposal to force political callers to identify, up front, who is paying for the call is a nice idea - but it won't change things much.

Political operatives know their way through the shoals of regulation. Requiring them to identify who is paying for the call won't faze them.

The proposal, from Rep. Wendy Jaquet, D-Ketchum, would push politics by telephone on the same footing as campaigning by newspaper or television. She is trying to stamp out an oft-sleazy political practice known as "push polling" by requiring callers to give a disclaimer before their "poll" gets rolling.

You've seen disclaimers before. Most say something to the effect of "Paid for by the Committee to Re-elect Joe Schnutz, Marvin Biscuit treasurer." But disclaimers aren't currently required for push polling by phone.

The way things stand today, the phone will ring when you're at home in the evenings - often during the dinner hour. The caller says he is conducting a poll and would you mind answering a few simple questions? Under the guise of an objective poll, the caller does his level best to enshrine his candidate while smearing the opponent.

"Do you agree that Candidate X is a swell guy who likes birthday cakes and puppies? Do you agree that Candidate Y is a sadistic child molester who should be shot at dawn?"

Anybody with half a brain ought to know this isn't an objective poll. But an alarming fraction of the electorate can't figure that out.

Jaquet thinks her bill would end sleazy push polling by telephone. She says it "sends a message that our state doesn't tolerate this kind of negative calling."

Though well-intentioned, Jaquet is dreaming with her eyes open. Negative campaigning is a cynical practice that is part of America's political landscape.

Virtually any politician will tell you it's fair comment to point out skeletons in an opponent's closet. In the next breath, the same politician will say all of his opponents are using negative campaigning when they dig into his record. So, negative campaigning is in the eye of the beholder.

Making telephone campaigns play by the same rules as print and broadcast campaigns is a worthy goal. But negative campaigning will be with us as long as politicians think it works.

Requiring telephone campaigners to disclose who is paying for the call is a worthy goal, but it won't drive negative campaigning out of Idaho.

Make everyone a winner on salmon issue

On the salmon issue, Idaho is caught between a hard place and a lie. When we built the four lower Snake River dams, we believed we would be able to continue taking our kids salmon fishing. We now know that was only a dream. We might wish otherwise or even lie to ourselves about it, but deep down, we know we made a grave mistake with the last four dams.

Idaho is damaged. Our greatest river is unhealthy; 2,700 jobs that depend on steelhead fishing are at risk and the last general salmon season was in 1977. Our famous Salmon River will soon have no salmon. The nation watches with disbelief, because so far, we have failed to do what's necessary to bring the salmon back.

It's no mystery what salmon need. They need their river back. The big question is, how do we take care of Idaho's people while we undo our four-dam mistake?

In undoing the mistake, we'll restore 5,000 fishing-related jobs in Idaho and 25,000 in the region. Industry adds feature port workers, Palouse grain farmers and a Lewiston-area waitress saying, "What about me?" But a far better question is, "How do we take care of everyone, including these few, while we make the changes that we must?"

So, let's broaden the vision to include all the people and look forward in time. It's 2008. Lewiston is celebrating the grand opening of a new highway to Tri-Cities. The Port has a new rail terminal

READER COMMENT
Tom Stuart

A public hearing on alternatives for Idaho's salmon and steelhead will be held at 5 p.m. March 8 at the Weston Plaza in Twin Falls.

that handles 100-car grain trains for cheap shipping to Portland and overseas markets. Most of the jobs on Port property in Lewiston and Clarkston didn't notice any change, since they don't rely on dams. Truck and rail companies are booming, and valley employers are hiring hundreds of permanent union-wage workers and 20,000 more 10-year construction jobs. For the first time in decades, Lewiston is growing.

For southern Idaho farmers and irrigators, the specter of increased flow augmentation, which in 2000 threatened over 1 million acre feet of additional water and some $430 million of annual economic activity, is gone. Tribal claims on additional water have been settled - with the agreement to breach the four lower Snake dams.

A few people needed special attention. Farmers near Pasco are now using modified irrigation systems, while a few marginal alfalfa farmers sold out. Some shippers whose costs increased with the elimination of barging needed help. A few dozen barge workers from Lewiston and Clarkston were moved to Pasco for new jobs in the expanded port, now the farthest inland.

And salmon are surging back to the Snake, Salmon and Clearwater rivers. The hatchery runs from Rapid River, Dworshak, Pahsimeroi and Sawtooth are booming, and cash registers are ringing in Kiggins, Salmon, Stanley and Orofino. Wild fall chinook and steelhead will be delisted in 10 years, with spring chinook close behind. People and salmon are thriving again.

OK, wake up. It's still 2000 and paralysis still rules Idaho politicians, whose principal action so far is to "just say no." But it's not too late for leadership.

Our leaders must expand their vision to encompass both salmon and people. Of course, we'll need to modernize Lewiston's transportation system, help grain shippers and protect southern Idaho water. For salmon and the people who depend on them, we'll need to breach four dams the Army Corps never wanted to build.

That's how to take care of all the people, not just a few. That's what Idaho needs in the upcoming federal decision, and that's what Idaho Rivers United wants. Speak out at the hearing in Twin Falls on March 8 and share the vision with your leaders.

Property tax questions

After reading the Monday front-page article about the upcoming school election and tax rates, I wanted more information.

I know that Paul and Xenia Williams do not live within city limits and was curious as to why they were paying city taxes. Well, the "home" article about is owned by the Williamses and it may have previously been their residence, but it is not the house in which they now live. Their home in which they live has a value of $1,057 and their total taxes amount to $1,010 (or $9.18 per $1,000 because of the homeowner's exemption). Shame on you for your irresponsible journalism, especially on such important topics as schools and taxes!

(Editor's note: For the benefit of readers who may be confused, two houses are being discussed here.

Paul and Xenia Williams live outside Jerome city limits but inside the Jerome School District. They also own a rental house within Jerome city limits, with a taxable value of $70,000 and an annual property tax bill of $1,495. The rental house was discussed in Monday's article.

Mr. Correll's letter discusses the Williamses' residence outside Jerome. Because it is an owner-occupied home, the Idaho homeowner's exemption reduces the taxable value of the house (but not the land) by 50 percent. According to Bonnie Tolman, Jerome County's chief deputy assessor, taxes on the Williamses' rural residence are computed as follows:

The land is assessed at $21,500. The house and other improvements are assessed at $88,557. Total value is $110,057.

• After deducting the homeowner's exemption (half of $88,557), the total taxable value is $65,779.

• With a tax rate of $14.08 per $1,000 of taxable value, the Williamses' property taxes are $926. The addition of an $80 rebate fee brings the total bill to $1,006.5.

Fix the dairy ripoff at ballot

In regard to your dairy editorial on Feb. 16, it amazes me that anyone who expects industry to have a regard for clean air, groundwater pollution and stream quality is a left-wing liberal. No one I know is opposed to dairies, but they are certainly opposed to the total disregard the mega operations have for their neighbors who are not really their neighbors because many live miles from their dairies.

The quick-buck philosophy of the conservative right wing is a sad sale of a beautiful valley. Because of the increased stench of these operations from year to year and the tremendous cost of after-the-fact cleanup, the dairies will be on the move again when we wake up to the real cost of this windfall of corporate welfare. That is exactly why they are corporations - we can have the shell and the cleanup, they have already moved the money.

We have a beautiful valley and a wonderful paradise to live in. The abuse of our environment by these mega corporations will leave us stripped of everything we enjoy. What environmentally sound company is going to move into a stink hole? Our valley will be ruined, our taxes will hit the ceiling and the people who can afford it will leave.

It has never been easier to register and vote. Your message at the ballot box is the only thing that will change this rip-off.

Show some compassion

Are all heavy people lazy? No, we're not! I have permanent disability in my body. I used to weigh 265 pounds, now I weigh 221 pounds. Did I change my diet? No. I stopped all contact with certain family members who degraded me all in the name of love.

How would you like to be called "fat, pig, loser, hippo, disgusting, etc.?" Well, a lot of us heavy people are hurt by this name-calling, whether you call us names in front of strangers, family, friends or, worse yet, in front of our children.

Try showing compassion toward others. You'd be surprised at how people will react toward kindness. Since you don't know why people overeat, how can you degrade them into losing weight?

We heavy people are loved. We are beautiful, special. My husband is in good shape and, yes, thin. He accepts me as I am. He loves me for me. He's proud of me for losing all that weight in four months. He doesn't put me down. He lifts me up with his love for who I am inside.

So instead of making fun of a heavy person, show some compassion.

Mr. Tom Richmond:

Time is running out

The deadline for letters about the Jerome school bond issue is 5 p.m. Monday. As a matter of policy, The Times-News does not publish election-related letters on election day. Monday's deadline is necessary for us to verify and publish letters about the Jerome school bond before the election is held on Thursday.

The citizens of Buhl are well satisfied with the city garbage pickup and two days a week is not too big for the city truck, and we greatly appreciate it.

We do not need a private service just because you have to pay one. You live in Halley and your mobile home park is in Buhl, which is in the city limits. I think if you could check with the city, they would probably pick up the mobile home park trash for an additional fee as you can't expect them to pick up all the park's trash for a small fee like $9.

So, you get your service from a private company but lay off the rest of us citizens.

zens of Buhl. We are well satisfied the way it is.

Thumbs up to Bridgeview Estates

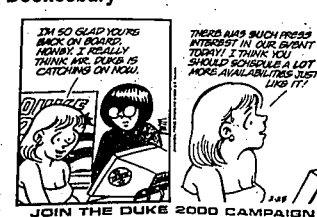

When you find an agency or company in your community that offers quality service and has a caring staff, it is important to let others in your community know.

Bridgeview Estates in Twin Falls is one of those organizations. At what could only be described as one of the most difficult times in our lives (choosing a skilled nursing center for a family member), the staff at Bridgeview could not have been kinder, the care more competent and the respect for our loved one more apparent. Not only was our loved one cared for, so were we.

Whether it was a fresh pot of coffee during a long and emotional night or coming in regularly to check blood pressure or answer any of our questions, Bridgeview's staff was an profession everywhere!

Our public thanks and highest regard to Bridgeview Estates. You brought much comfort to us during a very difficult period in our lives.

OPINION

With Bush reeling, McCain looks to March 7

BREMERTON, Wash. — It was the tail-end of a very good Wednesday for John McCain, the day after his twin victories over George W. Bush in Michigan and Arizona. The "Straight Talk Express" had gone to sea for the first time, filling a ferry with supporters for a trip from Seattle to this Navy port city, where a crowd of thousands, one of the biggest of the campaign, waited in a steady drizzle to cheer him.

Aboard the bus, headed back to the airport, McCain said, "It feels like the closing days in New Hampshire," the site of his first win over Bush. But an hour later, his chartered jet veered off the runway as it began its takeoff for Sacramento, and after a screeching halt, was mired ignominiously in the mud for five hours, robbing the candidate of needed rest.

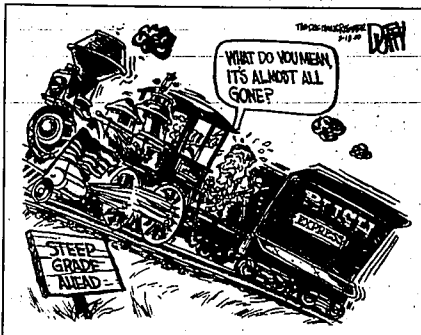

That's the way it has been in this remarkably unpredictable, start-and-stop battle for the Republican presidential nomination — a race in which McCain media adviser Mike Murphy says, "The pundits have been wrong at every turn."

McCain is sticking to his belief that, after Tuesday's contests here in Washington and in Virginia, the final verdict will be delivered on March 7, in the 13 primaries and caucuses where 59 percent of the delegates needed for nomination will be chosen on a single day.

Bush strategists say that no matter what happens on March 7, the battle will go on to the March 14 contests in Texas, Florida and other Dixie states, where they feel confident of Bush's chances. McCain demurs. "If we win big enough" on March 7, he said, "what does it matter if Bush wins Texas," his home state?

But McCain says he agrees "absolutely" that to "win big" on March 7, he will have to increase dramatically his support among Republicans, who have been much cooler to his candidacy so far than independents and crossover Democrats. Only at home in Arizona has McCain been able to win decisively over Bush among registered Republicans. In New Hampshire, they broke even, but in South Carolina and Michigan, McCain won barely a quarter of the GOP adherents.

On March 7, Ohio, Georgia,

DAVID S. BRODER

Missouri and most New England states will allow independents and (in some cases) Democrats to help pick the Republican nominee. But in California, New York and Connecticut — states that provide half the hoard of potential winners that day — only registered Republicans' votes will count in the battle for delegates.

McCain cites encouraging polls among Republicans in the Northeastern states that, like New Hampshire, he says "don't respond too well to Pat Robertson," the Christian Coalition leader, whose anti-McCain preachings damaged the senator badly in South Carolina. But New England is hardly the heartland of the modern GOP.

In his Arizona races, McCain never has had to prove his Republican credentials. But because he has marketed himself in this race as the scourge of "the establishment" in Washington and because he is so publicly disliked by most of his Republican Senate colleagues, Bush has not found it difficult to plant doubts about where McCain really stands. No real Republican would settle for the meager tax cuts McCain wants, Bush says. No real Republican would waffle on the abortion plank, Pat Robertson chimes in.

record is reliably Republican on economic and social issues, McCain's decision to slip the cloak of conservatism over his old costume as passionate crusader for reform looks as contrived as Bush's effort, post-New Hampshire, to recreate himself, not as the "reformer conservative," but as the "reformer with results." Neither man looks good in the other's clothes.

More promising, in the light of polls showing McCain running stronger than Bush against Al Gore, is the senator's effort to persuade Republican partisans that "if they want a winning combination, they ought to be attracted to my candidacy."

His hope, in short, is that electability will trump ideology. That was the same argument Bush used in the months before New Hampshire to woo

Robertson and a great many other staunch conservatives away from Steve Forbes, Dan Quayle and other candidates who easily passed all the litmus tests but looked shaky in the polls.

Go with the guy who can win in November, Bush argued. Now, it's McCain who hopes they will.

David S. Broder is a Washington Post columnist.

In response, McCain has taken this week to proclaim himself "a proud Reagan conservative." Sometimes, as in his Arizona radio ads and a speech at Gonzaga, the Jesuit college in Spokane, Wash., he inserts the adjective "pro-life" into the phrase, and sometimes, as in his nationally televised victory statement Tuesday night and his talk to Rotarians in liberal Seattle, he omits it. Though his overall Senate

CSI nursing program undergoes evaluation

TWIN FALLS - The College of Southern Idaho's associate degree nursing program is undergoing a regularly scheduled accreditation process.

CSI Health and Human Services Director Clauden Buettner says CSI is one of about 1,600 accredited associate degree nursing programs in the nation.

Each must submit to an accreditation every eight years to ensure that the program is in compliance with standards set by the National League for Nursing Accrediting Commission, the official accrediting body for all nursing programs. Two commission members will be on the CSI campus to review the program March 7 to 9.

The CSI program has already completed its own self-study. The self-study review is in the CSI Meyerhoeffer library on the reserve shelf for the public to read. Anyone wishing to comment is welcome to do so in writing or by e-mail to the national accreditation team in on campus.

Written comments may be addressed to Buettner, P.O. Box 1238, Twin Falls Idaho, 83303-1238. Comment can be made in person to the national accreditation team from 3 to 4 p.m. on March 7 in the CSI Taylor Building cafeteria. No pre-registration is necessary to make oral comments.

Dietrich schools will look at limiting activities

DIETRICH - Dietrich School District will consider a request from the community's Mormon Church to limit school activities on Wednesday evenings.

Stan Ward, bishop of the Mormon Church in Dietrich, made the request, citing a large number of school activities on other evenings. Superintendent Peter Bolz will speak to school staff and coaches to see if limiting Wednesday's school activities will be possible.

In other recent Dietrich school business:

The board gave Bolz permission to work with Shoshone and Richfield school districts to jointly hire a speech and language specialist for the 2000-01 school year.

Board members accepted the resignations of Principal Ed Simons and Athletic Director Pam Conant. Bolz will advertise for a secondary physical teacher for the 2000-01 school year.

The School Board accepted a petition from Hidden Valley residents, whose children have been attending Dietrich School for more than 20 years, to annex a portion of Hidden Valley from the Snopce School District to Dietrich's district. The board will forward the petition to the State Board of Education with a recommendation for approval.

Controversy over ordinance

Gooding planners push for livestock moratorium

By Mickey Brown
Times-News correspondent

GOODING - Gooding County's controversial livestock ordinance could be back under scrutiny again.

County commissioners Monday will discuss a recommendation from the county's planning and zoning commission, calling for a moratorium on confined animal feeding operations.

Planning and zoning members are advising commissioners to set the 120-day moratorium, to allow amendments in the county's 3-year-old livestock ordinance. The planning and zoning commission wants to amend the existing ordinance to require input from additional environmental agencies, not just the state's Department of Agriculture, said Judy Daubner, the county's planning and zoning administrator.

Those agencies would include the Natural Resources Conservation Service, the Environmental Protection Agency, the state's Division of Environmental Quality, the Idaho Department of Water Resources, the U.S. Geological Survey and the county assessor's office, which would determine the effect on property values.

The commissioners denied a previous proposal from the planning commission, calling for a moratorium.

The county's livestock ordinance came under fire almost as soon as it went on the books. Gooding County's livestock ordinance was passed in February 1997, in the face of opposition by local dairymen. The dairy industry sued in June 1997, saying the ordinance was unduly restrictive, arbitrary and capricious and violated state law.

In June 1998, then-District Judge George Granata Jr. threw out eight of the 35 challenged sections of the ordinance. The ordinance was an attempt to balance the rights of existing homeowners and dairy owners. But

Looking for water fun funds

Jerome city looks at new water park

By Dixie Thomas Reale
Times-News correspondent

JEROME - Jerome children may soon have a new water park to splash around in.

The city of Jerome met with the Jerome Recreation District on Monday and decided to join forces to find funds to build a $872,450 water playground.

The recreation district has operated both the recreation district pool and the city pool for the last few summers.

"Last year both the recreation district and the city suffered operating losses of about $16,000 each," said Jerome Recreation District Director Wayne Davis.

Mayor Dennis Moore said the city and recreation district should be cooperating rather than competing with each other in order to provide residents with the best swimming facilities.

Several council members said the city can't afford to support both pools.

A pool committee was formed in the summer of 1999 to study the demand for swimming facilities.

The committee hired the Boise-based architectural firm of Hofsford, Larson and Rueden to examine the condition of both pools.

The firm recommended closing the city pool since it was the oldest facility and in need of the most repairs.

The city pool was built in 1950, remodeled in 1976 and received a new filtration system in 1990. Although the city pool has no major structural deficiencies, due to its age, structural problems could occur any time.

The firm recommended expanding and renovating the recreation district pool. The renovation would include new pipes and other repairs and add a shallow recreation pool for small children, a slide and fountain and a water playground. The firm also recommended expanding the dressing rooms and parking.

The council decided to close the city pool but to dismantle it until after the water playground is completed at the recreation district pool to ensure there would be a pool available for city residents to use in case the recreation district pool needed to close during construction of the water park.

The city will dismantle the city pool once the new facility is completed and any usable equipment from the city pool will be sent to the new water park.

Times-News correspondent Dixie Thomas Reale can be reached in Jerome at 324-3670.

BREAK TIME

Wayne Noel, of Stuttgart, Ark., waits patiently in the cab of his semi truck at the Interstate-84/Interstate-86 split east of Burley during Thursday's snowstorm. Noel was heading toward Salt Lake City, but was forced to park along the shoulder with other trucks, as the Idaho State Police closed I-84 south of the split.

Freezing water forces highway closure

BURLEY - Valerie Williams sat parked on the shoulder in her Jeep Cherokee, patiently waiting for Interstate 84 to reopen.

Williams, of Twin Falls, was headed to Salt Lake City to attend a church-related activity, but with Thursday's icy and windy conditions she soon realized she wasn't going very far.

"I'm wondering if the road is going to open so I can get through," Williams said. "I want to be wise, but I want to get there too."

But Williams and the other delayed motorists weren't getting through anytime soon, as officials planned to close the section of I-84 from Burley to Utah closed through the night. Idaho Highway 81 between Declo and Malta was also closed.

Travel plans weren't the only casualties of the slow-moving winter storm that hit the Magic Valley Wednesday night and lingered through Thursday.

Slick roads Thursday kept authorities racing between rollovers and slideoffs for much of the morning.

The Idaho State Police reported about a dozen rollovers and crashes along I-84, while the Jerome County Sheriff's Office took care of about five rollovers.

One vehicle was blown off the icy highway near the I-84/I-86 junction by a strong wind gust, the ISP said.

The driver, Susan Burns Baker of Ashton, was ejected and taken to Cassia Regional Medical Center, where she was in satisfactory condition. None of the other crashes caused major injuries, the ISP said.

Cassia County was the scene of 13 accidents by early Thursday afternoon, but only one was serious enough to require emergency transportation, Cassia County Sheriff Billy Crystal said.

Most crashes were caused by a combination of icy roads and speed, and many of the crashes would be prevented if drivers were more patient, Jerome County Undersheriff Jocelyne Roberts said.

"If they would slow down, it wouldn't happen," she said.

The storm rolled in from the west around 8 p.m. Wednesday behind a slow-moving cold front that followed a warm front, said meteorologist George Slant of the National Weather Service in Boise.

This weather pattern is common for this time of year, and it will continue into next week, he said.

The storm brought cold air, moisture and high winds, which gust to more than 40 mph, causing some area residents to lose power.

Times-News writers Lorraine Cavanaugh and Ruth Streeter contributed to this report.

P&Z officials could shut down gravel pit

By Ruth Streeter
Times-News writer

BURLEY - Jim and Mike McGill of Magic Valley Sand and Gravel purchased 89 acres in 1994, planning to mine it all for gravel.

That had always been their intention, Jim McGill said, but they had initially only requested a county permit for half of it, McGill said.

The permit application process was such a hassle, McGill recalled, they hesitated to amend the application for approval of all 89 acres. And after the permit was approved, they dreaded the thought of having to repeat the process.

But now the McGills risk losing the $150,000 per acre that their unapproved property could bring them. The city's planning and zoning committee is figuring how to zone the city's west impact area - the area inside which the McGill enterprise is located - and they're proposing making the area residential.

But therein lies the problem for the McGills. Unlike the county, which offers a conditional-use permit for gravel pit regardless of an area's zoning, the city prohibits gravel pits in residential areas.

The area between 100 and 200 West and between 200 South and the Snake River was folded into Burley's west impact zone in September 1998 with the intent of grooming the area for annexation. The area had initially been made residential and now the city Planning and Zoning Committee will zone the area into residential, commercial and industrial parcels.

The committee has proposed to zone the area residential because it's already heavily residential, with homes on three sides of it, planning and zoning director Keith Ryan said.

Unfortunately for all involved, poor planning in the area - long before the advent of zoning - caused a hodgepodge of residential, commercial and industrial areas that makes it hard for city planners to please everyone.

Residents are worried that a gravel pit, as it creeps northward toward their neighborhood, will decrease property values and become an eyesore for residents and travelers into the city.

McGill says he has planted trees along Monroe and 16th streets to minimize the operation's visual impact.

District gets land deed

By Ruth Streeter
Times-News writer

BOISE - After 70 years, an act of Congress and environmental assessments, the Burley Irrigation District has been granted a large bit of autonomy. A ceremony and official deed transfer from the Bureau of Reclamation to the district in Boise Thursday culminated a six-year effort to obtain the deed to much of the district's federally owned property.

Neither water consumers nor district personnel will be affected by the transfer, said Dan Darrington of the district's board of directors.

It's a big deal for the district, however, since it will allow the district to "cut a lot of red tape" and run a more efficient operation, Darrington said.

The deed transfers facilities, rights-of-way, easements, pumping stations, power lines, electric stations, as well as all canals and laterals.

The "crown jewel," Darrington said, was the transfer of natural flow water rights, a significant source of the district's water. Storage rights will remain with BuRec, since it is the reservoir.

In attendance Thursday were BuRec and irrigation district officials, representatives from the offices of U.S. Sens. Mike Crapo and Larry Craig and locals, Darrington said.

In 1992, the irrigation district made the final payment on $2.5 million it spent in its federal repayment contract for the facilities that make up part of the Minidoka Irrigation Project's

Richfield increases hookup fees

By Sandra L. Calkins
Times-News correspondent

RICHFIELD - New residents will now pay $300 to hook up to the city's water system and $705 to hook up to the sewer system.

That's a $100 increase for a water hookup and a $300 increase for a sewer hookup. The City Council approved the increases on Monday.

Also Monday, Barbara

Moulton spoke to the council about a grant she has written for a program called Opportunity Arts.

The program would provide an art studio and greenhouse for use by handicapped people who could in turn sell their work and put money back into the studio.

In the future, the program could also provide living quarters. Moulton said she has spoken with a resident about purchasing six lots.

In other action Monday, the council discussed the city's new mobile home ordinance and making changes to the city ordinance to coordinate it with the county ordinance. The council will ask the Planning and Zoning Commission for its recommendations and bring the issue back for discussion at its next meeting.

Gooding city looks at reducing speed limit

By Aimee Wilson
Times-News correspondent

GOODING - It would take drivers about 21 seconds longer to drive through Gooding if the speed limit on Main Street was lowered to 25 mph from 35 mph, City Councilman Phil Becker said at his fellow council members on Wednesday.

But Becker doesn't think that's much to ask of drivers if it makes crossing the street safer for children who attend the Idaho School for the Deaf and Blind.

Although Becker previously voted against lowering the speed limit, he changed his mind after looking further into the situation.

Councilman Bob Reed also questioned why speed limits were 20 mph in front of other schools, but 35 mph in front of the Idaho School for the Deaf and Blind.

But council member Isabel Cahoon objected to lowering the speed limit, saying that in all the times she's driven by the school, she has never seen anyone use the crosswalk.

The council decided to bring the issue back for discussion at a future meeting.

Also Wednesday, Gooding resident Sharon Kelly wanted to know why Gooding streets aren't as clean as they used to be.

"What happened to our pretty town?" Kelly asked the council.

City Superintendent Todd Bunn suggested extending the spring and fall cleanups. Bunn also said that elderly residents are welcome to call the city and request help cleaning up if they need it.

Other City Council business: Representatives from Southern Idaho Regional Communications, the regional 911 dispatch center, informed the council that cities would no longer be charged for hang-up calls. They said SIRCOMM receives about 190 hang-up calls per month.

Representatives of the county Historical Society requested permission to construct a building on city land near the fairgrounds in which to store the society's historical collection. The council will take the request into consideration and make a decision at a future meeting.

Buhl gets garden center

By Mary Lou Potts
Times-News correspondent

BUHL - Residents will soon have another place to shop for greenery and garden supplies.

The city Planning and Zoning Commission on Wednesday approved Gene Montgomery's request to open a garden supply center at 706 E. U.S. Highway 30.

Montgomery assured the council there would be enough room for parking and for delivery trucks to turn around and the facility would be set back off the highway so it doesn't block the view of drivers.

City planners have been concerned about the speed limit in the area, particularly on the east end of the city where several construction projects are planned. The city speed limit entering Buhl is 25 mph and the state speed limit leaving the city is 35 mph. Planners said they will meet with Police Chief Terry Tipton to see if arrangements can be made to make the speed limits the same.

Also Wednesday, the Planning and Zoning Commission approved a conditional use permit to Darrell Hollon to open a mechanical repair shop at 503 S. Broadway. No junk cars will be allowed and no cars may sit for more than 30 days on the lot. Hollon said he would make arrangements for cars if work continued more than 30 days.

City planners voiced concern about noise in the area. Hollon said most repair work would be done in the bay areas between the hours of 8 a.m. and 6 p.m.

In other action Wednesday, the commission discussed a complaint from a citizen about the condition of an RV park on the corner of Highway 30 and Clear Lake Road.

The complaint asked if there was a city ordinance to deal with the problem. Planning and Zoning Commission Clerk Tom Cannon said the city has had many complaints about the lot as well as other areas in the city that need cleaning up.

"The city is working with the owners to try and solve the problem of unsightly lots in the city," said Mayor Barbara Gietzen.

TWIN FALLS

Margaret 'Maggie' Lucille Zielinski Gillespie

Margaret Lucille Zielinski Gillespie "Maggie", 79, of Twin Falls, Idaho, passed away Wednesday, February 23, 2000, at Cenoma House in Twin Falls from natural causes due to age.

Maggie was born March 13, 1920, in Leavenworth, Kansas, the daughter of Alex and Bertha Mae Cook Zielinski. Maggie went to school in Leavenworth, graduating from Immaculata High School, and later graduated from St. Mary's College, also in Leavenworth. Our mother fell in love with John J. Gillespie, and they wed April 4, 1940. Mom and Dad opened a hardware store in Leavenworth, and she was manager of the gift department as well as selling the books. Mom and Dad took a second honeymoon to find a better place to raise their family, and also took a job at First Security Bank, where she was employed until retirement. Maggie and John loved to go camping, and her favorite area was Lolo Pass and Camp Baumgardner. It was these places where she could truly relax and enjoy the "Beautiful Idaho Mountains" she so much loved. Maggie had a great love and respect for her fellow friends, and was always quick to bring in and feed a stray or to find a home for wayward cats. It seemed her final hard years were eased because of the love shared between her animals.

Margaret had four daughters and two sons, Sharon (Alan) Reynolds of Rochester Hills, Michigan; Sheila (Leo) Breshnahan of Meridian, Idaho; Sherri (Greg) Chapleski of Littleton, Colorado; Janet (Wayne) and his nine grandchildren; two brothers, William (Evelyn) Swartz of Sacramento, Calif., and Thomas Coakley of Billings, Montana; one aunt, Irene of Jerome, and all the people at Sax's on Fifth Ave.

At James's request there will be no services, and cremation is under the direction of Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls.

Kevin (Diane) Coakley of Arlington, Texas, and J. Kelly Coakley of Billings, Mont., and one daughter, Jammie J. (Dean) Coakley Rowley of Pocatello, Idaho. Also surviving are his nine grandchildren, two brothers, William (Evelyn) Swartz of Sacramento, Calif., and Thomas Coakley of Billings, Montana; one aunt, Irene of Jerome, and all the people at Sax's on Fifth Ave.

At James's request there will be no services, and cremation is under the direction of Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls.

She was preceded in death by her parents; her husband John, two brothers, Jeff and Alex, and one grandson, John Christopher.

A memorial funeral mass will be celebrated at 1 p.m. Saturday, February 26, 2000, at Guadalupe Catholic Chapel in Twin Falls, with Fr. Ernest Anderson as Celebrant. Arrangements are under the direction of Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls.

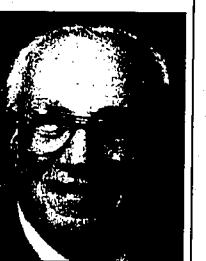

James E. Coakley

James Elton Coakley, 67, of Twin Falls, passed away at his home on February 18, 2000, of an extended heart related illness.

James was born in Billings, Montana, on June 16, 1932, the son of William Edward Swartz and Genevieve Schmidt. He was the youngest of five children. James spent eight years in the United States Army as a military police officer. He was honorably discharged on February 14, 1963. James had worked for the IRS for 16 years. He also had a law degree and was schooled in many areas. James was widowed two-and-half-years ago by his beloved wife Mariene. James was a resident of Twin Falls since 1974. James interest and love was music, music of all types. He was loved and respected by all who knew him. He will be sorely missed.

James is survived by two sons, J.

Simon 'Si' Anton

Simon "Si" Anton 80, of Twin Falls, died Wednesday, February 23, 2000, at his home.

He was born August 15, 1919, in Romania, the son of Simon and Gitta Sabau Anton. He moved to the United States at the age of two, and settled with his family in Ohio. He served in the U.S. Army during World War II. He was married to Jean McIntyre at San Luis Obispo, Calif., on Feb. 5, 1944. After living in Michigan and California, the family moved to Twin Falls in 1983. He was a former member of the Masonic Lodge, and the VW wine living in California. Mr. Anton is survived by his wife Jean of Twin Falls; four children, Gary Anton and Rick Anton, both of Twin Falls; Linda Schauer of Colorado; and Trisha Rackley of South Korea; 15 grandchildren; nine great-grandchildren; and one sister, Gilda Trian of Texas.

Memorial funeral services for Simon Anton will be conducted at 2 p.m. Sunday, February 26, 2000, at White Mortuary in Twin Falls. The family suggests memorials to the American Heart Assoc., 270 S. Orchard Suite B, Boise, ID 83705, or to Hospice Visions, 1300 Kimberly Rd., Twin Falls, ID 83301.

Bill will assure death penalty to murder of any police officer

BOISE — Gov. Dirk Kempthorne's priority bill assuring that the murderer of any police officer is subject to the death penalty was overwhelmingly approved on Thursday by the state Senate.

The lone dissenter was Democrat Betsy Dinkind of Boise, who objected because of her "overall opposition to the death penalty."

Kempthorne proposed the legislation following last year's decision by a district judge that the killer of State Police Trooper Linda Huff did not fall under the existing aggravating murder circumstance of killing a law enforcement officer for performing his official duty.

The bill makes it clear that killing a police officer or former police officer because he was an officer is sufficient grounds for a judge to consider execution.

Scott Yager, who was ultimately sentenced to life in prison with no possibility of parole, simply worked up and began shooting Huff as she left the Coeur d'Alene district headquarters to get into her patrol car.

"The imposition of the death penalty is a very serious matter," Senate Judiciary Chairman Denton Darrington of Declo said. But "there's just really no one who puts his life on the line like an officer of the law."

Legislature in brief

Robison of Boise, a member of the budget-setting Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee.

Idaho Department of Correction spokesman Mark Carnopis said there were 410 state inmates in county jails Thursday, but more than half are short-term assignments waiting for beds to open up in the state prison system.

Counties have committed a total of 337 beds to the state's long-term use.

Republican Rep. Golden Linford of Rexburg voted for Thursday's bill but complained that counties were seeking the money in part due to their own decision to build "Cadillac jails, much bigger than they needed" because of the promise of being able to fill them with state inmates.

The state's new 1,250-bed minimum- and medium-security prison — now officially named the Idaho Correctional Center — is scheduled to open July 1 south of Boise.

Carnopis said about 750 inmates initially would be assigned to the prison, including at least 500 prisoners now being held in a private lockup in New Mexico.

The rest would come from the county jails, which left county officials concerned about their financial support from the state. GOP Rep. Jim Clark of Hayden said the long-range plan was to keep about 200 state inmates in county jails.

The standard statewide rate for use of those county cells was set at $35 in 1994. "Prior to that it was all over the board," Clark said.

ers' legal responsibility for the actions of former and off-duty employees.

Similar legislation was approved by the Senate last year only to get hung up in the House Judiciary and Rules Committee amid opposition from the Idaho Trial Lawyers Association.

The bill's opponents fear it would essentially immunize careless employers, but supporters contend it would simply rein in what they see as runaway court rulings that improperly hold employers liable for actions beyond those of workers actually on the job.

Since last year the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry has been joined in supporting the measure by the Idaho Liability Reform Coalition, representing municipal governments and other public entities, and Rep. Leon Smith, a Twin Falls lawyer and Judiciary and Rules member who argued against last year's bill.

Changes in its language since then include what sponsors consider a more careful explanation of the intended scope.

New license plate will commemorate explorers

BOISE — A few lawmakers opposed adding to an already crowded assortment of special license plates, but the House ultimately agreed that the upcoming Lewis and Clark bicentennial warrants a fund-raising commemorative.

"Ringo of Moscow, called 'the first of this century's license plate programs'."

Twenty-five dollars of the initial $35 fee for each plate, and $15 from each $25 renewal, would be earmarked to the Governor's Idaho Lewis and Clark Trail Committee for tourism promotion as the 200th anniversary of the expedition approaches.

Officials wait for new stoplight

By Pam Day
Times-News correspondent

HEYBURN — The installation of a stoplight on a major highway can be a problem for some, but Heyburn city officials are looking forward to the town's next signal.

The stoplight planned for the intersection of 400 South and U.S. Highway 30 has been needed for a long time and is a welcome improvement, Mayor Cleo Schenney said. The Idaho Transportation Department said work on the signal will begin in July.

The city purchased 15 acres of ground on the northeast corner of the intersection for use as a right hand turn lane from 400 South.

Homes Sweet Homes, a manufactured home business, relocated from Burley to this parcel. Cheney said he hopes the signal will encourage businesses to locate along the highway, as it will allow for easier access for people coming and going from Interstate 84 and the Wayside area.

The city is growing steadily and with that comes more traffic, a major reason for getting the stoplight installed, Cheney said. The stoplight is also a welcome sight for law enforcement officials, since accidents at the intersection have increased over the years.

Cheney said United Electric's new building on 21st Street has added more truck traffic, so the light will help the company as well, considering the amount of trucks it has using the highway from that intersection.

This intersection is not the only one in Heyburn scheduled for a stoplight. 13th Street and the Burley-Ehrlich bridge is scheduled to get a signal in 2003.

This is a much-needed light to aid trucks coming and going from the J.R. Simplot Co. site, and traffic using the city's RV site at the Mini-Cassia Chamber of Commerce's property.

Minidoka looks at computer upgrade

By Lorraine Cavenor
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Minidoka Memorial Hospital will advertise for bids to replace a 10-year-old computer system.

A new system for the entire hospital will cost around $500,000, hospital administrator Carl Hanson said, but it shouldn't result in a rate hike.

Auditors have described the hospital's current system as cumbersome, Hanson said. The system was good 10 years ago, but is not up to date enough for efficient use.

The current system also causes delays in processing bills, Hanson said. A new system would pay for itself with the interest it would save the hospital.

The old system also does not allow the hospital to transfer balances to another payer, Hanson said. If an insurance company pays a portion of the bill and the patient pays another portion, the computer system does not allow the bill to be partitioned.

A new system would bill each party in sequence, he said. It would generate more user-friendly bills, which patients would be able to understand more easily.

"That is one of the things we could do a better job at," Hanson said.

A new system would also allow a better flow of information from medical records, he said. If a person needed blood work done, the doctor's office would be able to enter specific information into the database, and lab technicians would be able to access information without having to make phone calls, or without having to follow a paper trail, Hanson said.

That's just one instance where the new system would cut down on paperwork, he said.

The hospital hopes to purchase the new system by mid-March, but it will take 12 to 18 months to fully install it, he said.

House approves pay hike to keep inmates in jail

BOISE — A $5-a-day hike in the rate Idaho pays to keep state inmates in county jails was approved by the House over objections that the extra money might come at the expense of other state programs.

The 52-7 vote on Thursday forwarded to the Senate a plan to increase the daily rate for each inmate to $40. It is expected to cost the state $360,000 to $500,000 in the coming year.

"This does add further disruption to the budget, and it could have an effect on education budgets," said Democratic Rep. Ken

Attorney awaits sentencing on reduced charges

SANDPOINT (AP) — An Indianapolis labor relations attorney has pleaded guilty in exchange for prosecutors dropping charges of trying to buy sex from a 16-year-old boy.

Warren D. Krebs, 51, will be sentenced in March or April on misdemeanor charges of attempted injury to a child and disturbing the peace. They were reduced from sexual battery, attempted procurement of prostitution and attempting to pay for prostitution, which could have handed him a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison and registration as a sex offender. Krebs could also have been disbarred on grounds of moral turpitude.

Krebs, who was in Sandpoint last July to consult for a local company, was arrested after he allegedly approached two young Sandpoint men at the city volleyball pit.

"He asked them to help him find a guy to 'have fun with,'" Bonner County Prosecutor Phil Robinson said after swearing out the original complaint.

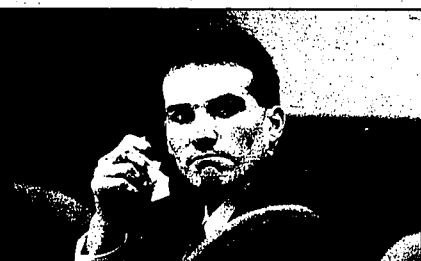

After the two declined to help Krebs, he then approached the 16-year-old, Robinson said. Although the teen turned him down, he allegedly hung around and even invited the youth to his motel room.

Jury convicts Utah man to prison and sentences him to life for wife's murder

FARMINGTON, Utah (AP) — The jury that convicted Paul Allen of arranging his wife's murder sentenced him to life in prison Thursday but held out the possibility of parole.

Prosecutors had asked that Allen be sentenced to life without parole for the murder of Jill Allen in August 1996. Allen, 30, was convicted Wednesday of aggravated murder, a capital felony. Prosecutors said Allen hired two men to kill his wife in order to gain a $250,000 insurance policy. The men, George Taylor and Joseph Serjous Wright, have also been convicted for the killing. Taylor committed the murder, and Wright acted as the middleman between Paul Allen and Taylor. Both men testified against Allen during the trial.

Defense attorney Ron Yengich had argued that Taylor and Wright made up the story for hire, a story to cover for a botched robbery and get lighter sentences. It took jurors 45 minutes to decide on the sentence Thursday. Just before they re-entered the courtroom, Allen held up a yellow legal pad to show his family that he had written the word "innocent" on it several times. "I swear to God,"

Paul Allen looks back to his family in tears after listening to his young sister, Ashley Jacobson, testify during his sentencing hearing Thursday in Second Court in Farmington, Utah.

he then mouthed to them.

But as the judge read his sentence, Allen showed no emotion.

"Like Yengich said, there is hope, and Paul Allen needs that hope," Juror Brian Mills of Layton said to explain why his fellow jurors chose to allow Allen a shot at parole.

Mills said the trial had been overwhelming and some of the jurors had asked if they could seek counseling when the case was over. But he said he was convinced of Allen's guilt because the murder-for-hire story and the physical evidence matched up so well.

Gravel

The city can require Magic Valley Sand and Gravel to post a bond for reclamation of the 40 acres yet to be mined, if a permit is granted, Bryan said.

Although the impact area lies within county jurisdiction, it is subject to city zoning laws. When the area in question was taken into the city's west impact zone, it was designated residential to maintain the status quo, city officials say. Recently the planning committee decided it's time to prep the area for growth and eventual annexation.

The state must also approve any reclamation plan a surface mining project developer proposes, according to Idaho statute. McGil said he has posted a $10,000 bond with the state for reclamation of his current pit.

"We just want people to know we don't want to hurt other people's values. But we don't want other people to hurt our values either," he said.

For the past year, the district has been assessing the transfer's environmental impact.

Dow dips below 10,000; Nasdaq soars

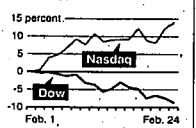

NEW YORK (AP) — Blue-chip stocks sank again in volatile trading Thursday, sending the Dow Jones industrial average briefly below 10,000, but the Nasdaq composite index hit a new closing high for a second straight day.

In a session punctuated by fears of higher interest rates, the Dow finished down 133.10 to 10,092.63. The index had fallen as low as 9,942.78 before bargain hunters entered the market.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index was down 7.26 at 1,353.43. "These 100-to-200-point swings are now the norm and everyone takes them in stride," said Larry Wachtel, market analyst with Prudential Securities.

The volatility that has defined the stock market in recent weeks is a result of higher prices; since, a handful of Dow- and Nasdaq components can cause huge swings in those indexes.

The last time the Dow touched below 10,000 was Oct. 18, and its last close below that milestone came April 6. The Dow is now down 14 percent from the closing high of 11,722.98 it reached Jan. 14.

Although the Nasdaq has been growing in importance over the past year and has dominated stock market headlines since late last year, analysts were concerned by the Dow's drop.

"No one should underestimate the psychology of moving below 10,000," said John Huggins, chief investment officer at First Albany Corp. "When the Dow is dropping moves from the business page to the front page, it will scare some investors ... and could lead to more selling."

Blue-chip stocks, mainly banks, drug companies and retailers, have fallen as Federal Reserve officials said they intend to raise rates to reduce inflationary pressures in the robust U.S. economy.

"Rising rates are hurtful to the economy and the components of the Dow are adjusting to that," said Wachtel.

The Dow continues its slide

The Dow Jones Industrial Average dipped below 10,000 on Thursday before recovering to finish the day above the psychological watermark. Here is a look at the Dow since it first closed above 10,000 on March 29, 1999.

Clothing retailers hope dressing down at work has hit bottom

Knight Ridder News Service

Are men's suits headed toward extinction or a revival? Men'swear retailers have been debating that question for more than a decade as they watch sales of suits decrease and sales of casual office dress increase.

A vivid example of this tug-of-war between dressing up and dressing down was the merger announcement between America Online Inc. and Time Warner Inc. earlier this month. There was 60-year-old Gerald Levin of Time Warner wearing plaid clothing and no necktie, in sharp contrast to 41-year-old Steve Case of AOL, who had on a suit and tie.

"Levin joked about his attire, saying he was welcoming 'the suits of Virginia to New York,'" but he looked more like someone heading toward retirement than chief executive of a new media giant. It was Case, from the supposedly more casual high-tech world, who had the power look that day.

And some fashion observers believe the incident is indicative of a move back to more conservative dress in the workplace.

In 1992, just 17 percent of offices in the United States allowed employees to wear casual dress five days a week. By 1997 it was 53 percent. The rise was so quick and the movement so prevalent that Levi Strauss & Co. stopped conducting surveys on it in 1998, dropped its special marketing unit promoting the casual trend.

So which way are men going now? "Our data does not show that the tailored trend is coming back. The casual dress trend is continuing," said Perry James, a manager for the NPD Group research firm.

Clothiers organize to promote a 'Dress Up Thursday'

Knight Ridder News Service

Hoping to give the officewear pendulum a push back toward dressing up, the menswear industry has formed a task force to promote Dress-Up Thursday.

The key organizers are Vince Rua, owner of three Christopher's menswear stores in New York state, and Auke Hempenius, a Florida wardrobe consultant.

Rua says he was inundated with calls after seeing the need for such a campaign in a November interview in Daily News Record, the menswear industry publication. Response was so strong that he organized a closed-door meeting of industry members, including San Francisco retail legend Wilkes Bashford. Rua says if response is supportive and "there are no major negatives," there will be additional networking with the goal of rolling out Dress-Up Thursday across the country starting Sept. 21, 2000.

"What's happened is dress down has gotten out of hand," Rua says. "When corporate America said you can dress down, they are told what they can't wear, but not what they can wear. They'd they can't wear jeans, they wear khakis that haven't been pressed in two weeks. Told they can't wear a T-shirt with a Budweiser label, they wear a plain T-shirt."

Rua says, "I'm not suggesting white sea island cotton shirts with French cuffs for everyday work. This is about getting corporate America back to a more professional appearance and when that occurs, productivity will improve significantly."

Rua says he hasn't been able to find any empirical evidence to support his belief that better dress means better production, but he is now working with a professor at the University of Indiana planning just such a research project.

Gerald Anderson, executive director of the Neckwear Association of America, discusses

"I see it going back the other way. I don't have anecdotal evidence. I only have statistics, but I hear a lot of human resources people are unhappy with the way casual has gone," he said.

Because neckties are often the first item a man discards when adopting a casual dress mode, you might think sales are in the tank.

Not so, says Anderson. Although the actual number of neckties has dropped from 117 million in 1994 to 105 million in 1998, sales are up in dollars from $1.5 billion to $1.6 billion. Men are buying fewer ties, but they are spending more for them.

"The guy who bought a $5 tie because he had to have one gone casual, but the professional who likes neckties is still buying," Anderson said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders to U.S. factories for big-ticket durable goods fell in January, led by the steepest decline in orders for electronic and other electrical equipment in 2.5 years.

The Commerce Department reported Thursday that orders for durable goods — items expected to last at least three years — dropped by 1.3 percent last month, the first decline since October, to a seasonally adjusted $21.8 billion.

That followed a sizzling 6.3 percent advance in December — the biggest gain in seven years. The December increase had been reported earlier at 5.5 percent.

Even with the drop, January's performance was stronger than the 2 percent decline many analysts were forecasting.

Still, economists, who were predicting a decrease, have cautioned that a drop in durable goods orders shouldn't be viewed as weakness in the industrial sector.

She went from radio to reality

Soloist fell in love with music by long distance

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Growing up in Southern California, Larry Zalkind spent many lazy Sunday afternoons relaxing to the sweet sounds of the Utah Symphony as broadcast over the radio.

Today, Zalkind thinks it's a bit ironic that he's the principal trombonist with the orchestra that helped nurture his love of the musical arts.

"Listening to the symphony fed my desire to play," said Zalkind, a trombonist who'll be the featured soloist with the Magic Valley Symphony in its March 3 concert. "For some reason on Sundays, whatever I was doing, I had a tendency to turn on those broadcasts."

But he didn't start playing the trombone by choice. "Zalkind was in the third grade and thought he might try his luck in the school's music class by signing on to play the trumpet. But that section was already full, so his teacher suggested something different.

"I wasn't sure (the trombone) was the right instrument for me," Zalkind said. "But it was the only thing that was left—nobody else wanted it so I gave it a shot."

After two years of grade-school music classes and at the recommendation of his music teacher, Zalkind's parents signed him up for private lessons.

"That's when I began to see the trombone as a solo instrument, something that had great capabilities, more than the other brass instruments," he said.

As a college student, Zalkind set his sights on a career in education, but music always seemed to take center stage. He graduated from the University of Southern California with a double major in education and music performance, and later earned a master's degree in music performance at the Los Angeles school.

While he was still working on his Ph.D. at the University of Michigan, Zalkind was offered the position of principal trombonist with the Utah Symphony.

"I came very close to finishing my doctorate when I got the call," Zalkind said. "Everybody said not to pass up this kind of a job. I swore to all my professors that I would return and finish my doctorate."

That was 18 years ago. Now he serves on the faculty at the University of Utah, is a founding member of the Utah Symphony Brass Quintet, and tours with Summit Brass.

Career highlights include performances and recording with the Chicago, Atlanta, and St. Louis symphonies, and appearances as soloist with several other orchestras. He has performed with numerous ensembles and at several music festivals around the country.

For his Magic Valley debut, Zalkind will play the "Trombone Concerto" by Gordon Jacob, as well as "Annie Laurie" and "I'm Getting Sentimental Over You."

The Magic Valley Symphony will perform Beethoven's "Egmont Overture" and "Water Music" by Handel.

The Magic Valley Symphony League will host a reception for Larry Zalkind following the evening's program in the Eagle's Nest in the Taylor Administration Building near the Fine Arts Center on the CSI campus.

Showtime musical troupe plays CSI on Wednesday

By Rachel Denny
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - It's a different way to get the message across, but it's a little more fun.

Showtime Company, a touring singing-dancing troupe from Ricks College in eastern Idaho, will present "Lessons of Love" next week.

"It's all about the brotherhood and the sisterhood of all mankind," Showtime director Russell Bice said in a telephone interview from Rexburg. "We explore many different facets of love, from family love to romantic love to the love of one's country and the love of self. We do it with a lot of fun, too tempo."

The performers use everything from Disney's "Mulan" to music from the '30s, '40s and '50s to convey their ideas. "They have incredible talent and their show is professional," organizer Renee Allen said. "This is a kind of show that would appeal to all age groups. You could take small children and they would enjoy this show."

Showtime Company will take their show to 14 states from Wisconsin and Minnesota to New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio during April and May.

"This is entertainment at its best," Allen said. "You have incredible young talent that will make you come away feeling good."

And anybody is welcome. "I think it's a fast-paced musical theater review approach, with scenes from so many different eras, and all the attention to detail from lighting to costumes that makes it fun," Bice said. "The exuberance as well as professionalism of student performers that comes from all over the United States will make for an exciting and enjoyable evening for anybody."

In addition to the fun and exuberance, a real-life story is told at each performance.

This year, Josh Richardson will share his story with the audience.

He talks about the eternal nature of family love by talking about his family, Bice said. And he talks about being adopted and having a sister that was adopted and the challenges the family faced with his sister and her death last October.

"He talks about how he and his family has learned each moment they spend with those they love is very important because you never know when that person will be gone," Bice said.

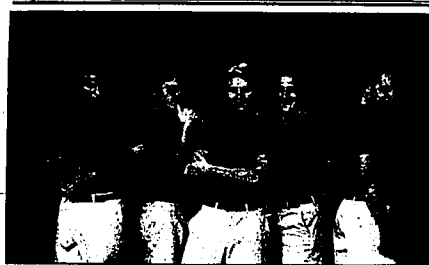

Cast members come from across the country and include 14 singer-dancers, nine musicians and a technical staff of 10. The musical director is Wilson Brown, former keyboard player and arranger for The Lettermen.

Ricks, a junior college owned by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, enrolls 8,600 students from 50 states and 40 foreign countries.

The concert will be sponsored by the Kimberly LDS Stake.

WEEKEND

The Standards, a Magic Valley singing group, will be competing on 'Destination Stardom' Saturday night.

The Standards go for gold on national TV Saturday

By Cathy Walworth
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — When last we saw The Standards, Magic Valley's own five-star singing sensation, they had won enough points to shoot them into the finals on "Destination Stardom," the PAX network's audience-choice variety show.

Drum roll, please: This weekend is it. The Standards will face off against a Las Vegas duo, the Scott Brothers, Saturday night. And they're pretty good, says The Standards' dad, Spencer Williams.

"It's incredible to watch these guys. They're fun to watch and good at what they do," Williams said. What they do is described as "comic break-dancing," and they perform regularly in their hometown.

The Standards — Jordan, Morgan, Nicholas, Nathan, and Quinn — will sing, "The Lion Sleeps Tonight," in their attempt to snatch the grand prize of $25,000. Now the fun part: All this takes place at a big party scheduled at the Magic Valley Mall in Twin Falls at 6:30 p.m.

The mall will set up three big-screen televisions on a stage and the party begins at 7 p.m. Everyone will be able to see the competition as it unfolds on TV — the show was taped weeks ago — but we get to see it together with The Standards Saturday.

There will be a drawing during one of the commercial breaks for dinner with The Standards. Four winners will dine with four of the Standards at The Creekside Restaurant and Steakhouse, Williams said. There will only be four winners because "Morgan is happily married and doesn't need a date," his dad explained.

All mall merchants have tickets and ticket boxes for you to deposit your winning ticket into. And you can enter the contest as many times as you like between now and Saturday night, Williams said. But you must be present to win.

After the drawing, everyone will see the conclusion of "Destination Stardom," and Rich Crowley from Crowley's Quad will have Standards CDs, photos and posters for sale. The guys will hang around to meet people and sign autographs.

The party is sponsored by The Magic Valley Mall, PAX 55, The Creekside, and The Buzz 99.9. "Destination Stardom" can be seen on Channel 55, KDID-TV, in the Twin Falls area.

Find 'Common Ground' at CSI

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Producer Lorraine Rennie, inspired by "Riverdance," assembled 13 world champion Irish step-dancers, cloggers and tappers and set out to create something new and wonderful. She ended up with a smash success of a show called "Common Ground."

"No one paid to see dance shows before 'Riverdance,'" said Rennie in a phone interview last week from her Atlanta home office. "They took some of the beauty of ballet and other dance forms and mingled them with Irish dance to create something absolutely unique."

The timing couldn't have been better for Rennie, who had left behind a high-speed marketing career with the likes of Procter & Gamble, Pepsi and Anheuser Busch to search for more time for her family.

She had married Scott von Ravensberg, Rad Charles' drummer who was touring with Robert Goulet with the two met on an airplane.

"I moved my wedding date back two months because Anheuser Busch had a new product introduction which coincided with my original wedding date," she recalled. "I worked the day my first child was born, gave birth at 3 a.m. and was taking business calls at 9 a.m. that same day in the hospital."

Two weeks after that birth, Rennie said, she realized "there was no way I could leave this precocious child to a nanny's care."

Since she left her fast-paced job to work at home marketing entertainment jobs, she has been profiled on CNN and awarded "Best Entertainment Production of the '96 Olympic Games" by the International Special Events Society.

Common Ground, a group of world-champion Irish dancers, will be performing at CSI on Monday.

She is especially proud of Common Ground. This is the first dance production that pays tribute to these three dance forms and integrates them into an exciting, contemporary production," she said. "It's also a show about our roots."

The show is the story of the courage and determination of our ancestors, coming to a new land as unwelcome immigrants. It is also a progression, from the mid-1800s to the days when Irish dance branched off into tap and clogging.

"It takes a lot of training to do these dances," Rennie said. "You have to have the proper posture and point your toes correctly. It's very exact."

The dancers/singers/actors who are Common Ground range in age from 16 to 31, and they have toured throughout the United States.

"This season we have a 58-percent performance tour," Rennie said. "Last season, our first season, we had 17 performances."

Rennie is already booking six shows a week for next year.

TWIN FALLS — David Woodhead, avid movie fan, is about to begin showing them.

Woodhead's Lamphouse Theater will open in Old Town on March 3 after more than three years under construction. The theater, which is located at 223 5th Ave. S., will show a variety of movies, including foreign films ("imports") every three to five weeks, re-releases of older films, documentaries ("true stories") and a number of other art films.

The majority of the films will be English-speaking and they will all be new, Woodhead said.

"A large percentage of people seem to think we'll be showing old films," he said. "We're going to be dealing with new movies, we aren't going to necessarily have them immediately but they will be new."

"Run Lola Run," a German movie, that will open the theater next week, is just a taste of what is to come, Woodhead said.

"It was a mindpopper," Woodhead said. "It was astonishing to see, it was really amazing. This is a preview of a sense of things to come. That's the sort of things that will show up at the foreign film festival. 'Run Lola Run' is a fair example of what to expect."

Once a week, the Lamphouse will show a different film. Show times will vary, depending on what movie is being shown. The showhouse, which also rents videos, will be open every day.

Movie memorabilia line the walls of the rental space, people waiting to see a movie, or who just want to sit and talk can rest themselves on tables that were used in the filming of "Breakfast of Champions" here two years ago.

"I think a lot of people will be pleasantly surprised," Woodhead said. "I think a lot of people have no idea what to expect. These movies will be here more to engage you than entertain you. This is a whole different approach than going out to just have a good time."

"What I hope to accomplish is to open people's eyes to what is possible with film."

The Lamphouse will be Twin Falls' 22nd movie screen, including Interstate Amusement's two drive-ins.

Two Magic Valley singers to perform in Mozart's 'Marriage of Figaro'

Becky Turner, right, and Ana Boyd to perform in Mozart's 'Marriage of Figaro'

BOISE — Two Magic Valley singers have major roles in the Boise State University Music Department's production of Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" next month.

Becky Turner, the daughter of Revis and Denise Turner of Twin Falls, will sing the role of Susanna. She is a music major and an English minor at BSU, where she is a member of Phi Kappa Phi and the Golden Key National Honor Society. She is also a member of the Meistersingers, MENC (music educators) and the American Choral Directors. Turner is a soloist at the First Baptist Church in Boise and a recipient of the BSU Stewart Music Scholarship. Last summer, she sang in "We Are America" at the Twin Falls First Church of the Nazarene.

Turner graduated from Twin Falls High School as co-vice-president in 1995, and since has won writing awards from the Society of Professional Journalists and the National Library of Poets. She is employed by the BSU Academic Affairs office and the BSU Writing Center.

Ana Boyd, the daughter of Kent and Emilia Jensen of Burley, will sing the role of Countess Almaviva. She is a 1996 graduate of Burley High School, where she was active in music and theater, including parts in several Oakley Valley Arts Council productions.

Boyd is now working on a double major in vocal and viola performance. "Figaro" will be staged March 3 at 7:30 p.m. and March 5 at 2:30 p.m. in the Special Events Center on the BSU campus. Tickets are $6.50 for general admission and $4.50 for senior citizens and students, and they're available at the door or by calling (208) 426-3980.

'Off the Wall' opens with a reception today

TWIN FALLS — The March gallery show, "Off the Wall," will open with a reception from 5:30 to 8 p.m. today at the Magic Valley Arts Council Gallery, 308 Shoshone St. E.

For more information, call 734-ARTS.

Steakhouse, winery host evening of wine-tasting

TWIN FALLS — Creekside Steakhouse and Carmel Winery will host an evening of wine-tasting and appetizers tonight from 6 to 9 at the restaurant.

Cost is $15 per person. Reservations and being accepted, but are not required.

For further information, call 733-1511. Creekside is located at 233 Fifth Ave. S.

The Magic Valley Chorale will hold solo tryouts

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Chorale will hold solo tryouts on Sunday for its Easter season production of Mendelssohn's "Elijah." The tryouts are scheduled for 3 p.m. in the College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts Center auditorium. Sopranos, altos, tenors and baritones are needed.

For further information, call Joe Casperson at 733-6551, Ext. 3028, or Sue Miller at 733-9554, Ext. 2563.

The Faulkner Planetarium presents new space show

TWIN FALLS — The Faulkner Planetarium's new show "The Search for Life in the Universe" is being shown at 7 p.m. Tuesdays, Fridays and Saturdays at the planetarium on the College of Southern Idaho campus.

Narrated by Star Trek's Leonard Nimoy, and featuring three-dimensional and space travel sequences, this show will appeal to audience members of all ages, although some of the program's scientific discussions will be beyond the understanding of most children.

"Rusty Rocket's Last Blast," an excellent show for younger audiences, will be shown at 2 p.m. Saturdays.

Another program "More Than Meets the Eye" will be shown at 4 p.m. Saturdays.

The show will show amateur astronomers what they can see in the heavens from their own back yards. The show is especially good for telescope owners or those considering buying a telescope.

Planetarium admission is $4 for adults, $2 for students, $3 for senior citizens and $9 for families.

For more information, call the Herrett Center at 733-9554, Ext. 2655.

Buhl's Bob McIntyre will perform Boise Basin music

BUHL — Bob McIntyre will present "Miner Melodies: Pioneer Music of the Boise Basin" at 7 p.m. on March 3 at the Eighth Street Theater, sponsored by the Idaho Humanities Council.

The slide show depicts the role of musical culture on the pioneer mining communities of the Boise Basin and the lives of participants.

The event is free.

Groups hold Sun Valley film festival in March, April

KETCHUM — The Sun Valley Center for the Arts in conjunction with the International Documentary Association and the Magic Lantern Theater will present the Sun Valley Center for the Arts Documentary Film Festival on March 30-31 and April 1-2.

The festival will bring internationally recognized films and their directors to Sun Valley for screenings, post-film talks and panel discussions. This event is an opportunity to take part in a nationally recognized forum celebrating the work of documentary filmmakers, Albert Maysles and Robert Drew. A selection of their films exploring the lives and work of 20th century performing artists will be presented this year, including the documentary "Gimme Shelter" (the Rolling Stones) and "Man Who Dances" (Edward Villella).

A number of other international ally recognized documentary filmmakers who have produced work in the field of performing arts will also take part in the festival. Thelma Vickroy, of the University of California at Los Angeles' Documentary Film program, will preside over panel discussions and post-film talks with the filmmakers.

For more information, contact the festival at P.O. Box 656, Sun Valley, ID 83353; call 726-9491; fax 726-2344; e-mail at svcenter@micron.net or visit the website, www.sunvalleyid.com/svcenter.

Applications are available for piano competition

TWIN FALLS — Applications are available for the Rocky Mountain State Piano Competition for Outstanding Amateurs to be held May 24-28 in Colorado Springs, Colo.

The event is presented by the Western Slope Music Festival in association with the Van Cliburn Foundation.

Competitors can choose their own programs for all phases of the competition. It is suggested that the repertoire reflect a variety of musical styles, periods and composers.

The completed application must be postmarked by Wednesday.

For more information and application materials, call the Magic Valley Arts Council at 734-2787.

The application form will also be available after Tuesday on the Western Slope Music Festival website at www.westernslope.org.

The Northern Rockies Folk Festival presents guitarist

HAILEY — The Northern Rockies Folk Festival will present "An Evening with Leo Kotke" at 8 p.m. March 11 at the Wood River High School auditorium. Doors open at 7 p.m.

Kotke has released more than 21 recordings and has been a guest artist with a variety of musical styles from Big Head Todd to Joe Pass. He is included in the Guitar Player Magazine's Hall of Fame.

Tickets, which are $16 general admission and $30 for limited reserved seats, are available at Big Bad Bills and Read All About It in Hailey, and Twist and Trout Music and Chapter One Bookstore in Ketchum. For more information, call 788-4200.

Danny D. Edwards will create three life-size sculptures

Twin Falls sculptor receives commission from Wyoming

TWIN FALLS — Sculptor Danny D. Edwards of Twin Falls has received a commission to create three life-size North American animals for the Visitor Center in Jackson, Wyo. He will sculpt a slightly larger-than-life grizzly bear, bull elk and cow calf.

Edwards has been sculpting for more than 16 years and has his own bronze foundry in Twin Falls. His work is displayed throughout the world.

He won the commission from the Jackson Visitor Center in competition with nine other artists.

CSI faculty members display works at center

TWIN FALLS — "Half Time," a display of the works of six College of Southern Idaho faculty members at the Herrett Center for Arts and Science, will run through March 16.

The show's name represents the fact that works from half of CSI's full- and part-time art faculty members will be on display.

Contributing artists include David Babt, Mike Green, Russ Hepworth, Bruce Kremer, Sheryl West and Connie Wood.

Babb teaches art history part-time through CSI's Mini-Cassia Center. His full-time CSI position is exhibits manager at the Herrett Center. Babb will exhibit four postmodern paintings from his new series, "Lessons in the Ephemeral."

Green is the CSI art department chairman. He has taught at the school since 1968 and has shown his works regionally and nationally. His current work is composed of paintings and collages of high-quality rag paper. In this show, he will exhibit framed paintings in which the frames themselves have been painted to incorporate the colors and textures found in the paintings.

Hepworth has taught painting and photography courses at CSI since 1991. He has exhibited his works throughout the United States since 1978. His works in this exhibition will be mixed media of painting and photography inspired by high-desert landscapes and Western poetry.

Kremer describes himself as a lifelong artist specializing in photography, ceramics and sculpture. His current projects include large works on paper, photo collages, and soon-to-be published travel journals.

West is the owner/operator of West and West Ceramic Works in Jerome. She teaches art through Twin Falls and Jerome elementary schools as well as children's art classes at CSI.

West teaches art at CSI and at Twin Falls High School. She likes to combine multiple media and alternative photographic techniques focusing on the human figure and Western landscape. Her work has been shown locally for the past five years.

Herrett Center hours are 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. Tuesdays and Fridays, 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Wednesdays and Thursdays and 1 to 9 p.m. on Saturdays. The center is closed on Sundays and Mondays. Admission is free.

Buhl Arts Council presents cooking extravaganza

BUHL — The Buhl Arts Council will present "Chocolate, Chocolate, Chocolate," a cooking extravaganza, at 2 p.m. on March 4 in the Eighth Street Center.

Tickets are $8 per person. For further information, call 543-2888.

Applications are available for arts and crafts festival

KETCHUM — Applications are available for the 32nd annual Sun Valley Center Arts and Crafts Festival to be held Aug. 11-13 at the Sun Valley Resort. The application deadline is Tuesday.

Approximately 140 participating artists exhibit work in a variety of mediums including functional and non-functional ceramics, drawing, wearable and non-wearable fibers, glass, printmaking, jewelry, metalwork, 2-D and 3-D mixed media, painting, photography, sculpture, toys and woodwork.

The festival is free to the public and entertainment is scheduled throughout the weekend.

Sun Valley Center sponsors Western Issues Symposium

KETCHUM — The Sun Valley Center for the Arts is sponsoring a Western Issues Symposium, a free series of lectures focusing on the growth and heritage of the West.

The next lecture will be by Richard White, professor of history at Stanford University, who will examine how values have shaped Westerners' relationship with the land. It's scheduled for March 10 at 7:30 p.m. at the Sun Valley Center, 191 Fifth St.

Another lecture is planned by University of Colorado history professor Patricia Nelson Limerick on April 12.

Each historian will also visit local schools. The Western Issues Lecture Series is sponsored by the Pioneer Mountain Foundation and the Idaho Humanities Council. For further information, call Heather Crocker at 726-9491.

Riders in the Sky performs at Jackpot

Riders in the Sky will perform in Jackpot

JACKPOT — Riders in the Sky will perform Tuesday through March 5 at Cactus Pecos. They'll do two shows a night, at 8 and 11 p.m.

The 8 p.m. performance is a dinner show. Ticket prices start at $12.99 on weeknights and Sunday and $19.99 on Saturday.

There's also a cocktails-only show at 11 p.m. Cover charge is $7.50 on weeknights and Sunday and $10 on Saturday.

For reservations and information, call (800) 821-1103.

The Magic Valley Symphony is accepting applications

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Symphony is now accepting applications for the Youth Soloist Competition on June 24 at the College of Southern Idaho.

Competition finalists may be chosen to perform at an Oct. 15 concert. There will be a $250 prize awarded to each of the winners.

Contestants must reside in the Magic Valley area and be not older than 21. Soloists previously selected to play with the symphony may not audition again on the same instrument.

For instrumentalists, any movement of a standard concerto or concert piece with orchestral accompaniment may be performed. Audition pieces should be not longer than 10 or 12 minutes.

Contestants must provide their own piano accompanist and entrants are encouraged, but not required, to memorize their audition pieces.

Upon request, judges' comments will be given to contestants. If you're interested, please include a stamped, self-addressed business-size envelope with your application.

For applications and information, call George Halsell at CSI (733-9554, Ext. 2556) or by e-mail at ghalsell@orion.csi.edu. Please leave a detailed message with mailing address and phone number. Applications and a $5 application fee are due no later than May 12. Confirmations and audition times will be sent to all eligible contestants.

Big night for Hispanics sets stage for Latin Grammys

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Such a "Smith's" Grammy wins by Carlos Santana and Christina Aguilera provide a high-profile lead-in for a Latin Grammy show that debuts next fall.

The Mexican-born Santana won eight Grammys on Wednesday, tying Michael Jackson's record for most awards in one night.

Latin Grammys will honor performers, producers and other music professionals recording in Spanish and Portuguese. "Demographic trends show Latinos eventually will be the largest ethnic minority in the U.S.," said Ricardo Dopico, director of Latin music for the Recording Industry Association of America.

musical segment featuring numbers in Spanish. Latin awards presenters included Gloria Estefan, Jimmy Smits, Andy Garcia and Jennifer Lopez, perhaps the evening's most-talked-about celebrity with a gown cut in a loose V that left little to the imagination.

Ruben Blades, who won the Grammy for Latin pop performance for "Tempos," said he grew up listening to such mainstream acts as Frankie Lyman and the Teenagers, but Santana broke ground for Latin artists because he was "hailed worldwide and was respected and treated as equal to his peers."

'Reindeer Games,' 'Wonder Boys' open this weekend in theaters

Combined wire services

Movies playing in south-central Idaho this weekend. Opinions are by Los Angeles Times and Knight Ridder Newspapers reviewers. Ratings by the Motion Picture Association of America are: (G) for general audiences; (PG) parental guidance suggested because of material possibly unsuitable for children; (PG-13) parents are strongly cautioned to give guidance for attendance of children younger than 13; (R) restricted, younger than 17 admitted only with parent or adult guardian; (NC-17) no one younger than 17 admitted.

• "American Beauty" - An absolutely brilliant performance by Kevin Spacey is only the tip of the iceberg in this contemporary tragicomic about a middle-aged man's disillusioned search for meaning (Annette Bening) and alienated from his teen-age daughter (Thora Birch), he is awakened by the sexual scent of his daughter's friend and the potent pot supplied by the creepy kid next door. Rated R; sexual themes, nudity, language, violence.

• "Anna and the King" - There aren't any songs, but there is no shortage of lyrical beauty in the fourth movie version of the true story that inspired Rodgers and Hammerstein's "The King and I." Jodie Foster plays British widow Anna Leonowens, who goes to Siam to teach English and Western ways to the sprawling brood of the king, played with regal restraint by Hong Kong action star Chow Yun-Fat. Rated PG-13; violence, 2 hours, 27 minutes.

• "Any Given Sunday" - Al Pacino is an old-school coach who butts heads with a hip-hop quarterback (Jamie Foxx) and his team's ambitious owner (Cameron Diaz) after his veteran star (Dennis Quaid) is injured, in a feel-good football fantasy from, of all people, Oliver Stone, who spends the entire film espousing Lombardian, traditional values. Rated R; nudity, language, (League-sanctioned) violence, drug use. 2 hours, 45 minutes.

• "The Beach" - A tedious and unsatisfying film about a young American vagabond (Leonardo DiCaprio) who journeys to a hidden Thai paradise after being given a secret map. DiCaprio's character is naive, self-righteous and contentious and the island's community of dropouts and slackers seems slightly weird and even sinister almost immediately. (1:59. R for violence, some strong sexuality, language and drug content.)

• "The Cider House Rules" - Lasse Hallstrom's superb film of the acclaimed John Irving novel stars Tobey Maguire as an orphan who has stayed on at a vast old New England orphanage to become the assistant of its director, a dedicated and idiosyncratic physician (Michael Caine) but longs to, discover the outside world for himself. (2:04. PG-13 for mature thematic elements, sexuality, nudity, substance abuse and some violence.)

• "Down to You" - Freddie Prinze Jr. and Julia Stiles have a limited sort of chemistry as college sweethearts who find it difficult to stay committed. Rated PG-13; sex talk. 1 hour, 30 minutes.

• "Galaxy Quest" - A nifty spoof of Star Trek takes and their rabid fans cleverly imagines some actual aliens whisking off the stars of a long-defunct TV space adventure series to save their planet from a dreaded monster - not comprehending that these people are actors and their shows pure make-believe. (1:46. PG for some action violence, mild language and sensuality.)

• "Girl Interrupted" - Susanna Kayser's perceptive memoir of a year she spent as a teenage mental institution patient in the 1960s becomes an uneventful drama in the hands of director James Mangold, who either fails to see the point or to make it. Rated R; language, violence. 2 hours, 7 minutes.

• "The Green Mile" - Though it's Stephen King story is a good one, this Frank Darabont written and directed version is hampered by excessive length, the suffocating deliberateness of its pace, and some truly stomach-turning moments. (3:08. R for violence, language and some sex-related material.)

• "Hanging Up" - The idea of Meg Ryan coping with her paraplegic dying father (Walter Matthau), a phone addict, and two self-absorbed sisters (Diane Keaton, who also directed, and Lisa Kudrow), sounds promising as a serious comedy, but the father and the sisters are so unlikable and the relationships so underdeveloped that the result is synthetic and contrived. (1:33. PG-13 for language and some sex-related material.)

• "The Hurricane" - Denzel Washington does exceptional work, perhaps the best of his career, as boxer and unjustly imprisoned murder suspect Rubin "Hurricane" Carter. Regrettably, the rest of this conventional, middle of the road biopic is not up to his level, but the story and performance are so strong no one may notice. (2:26. R for language and some violence.)

• "The Insider" - The villain isn't Big Tobacco in Michael Mann's absorbing account of how fired tobacco company executive Jeffrey Wigand (Russell Crowe) came to tell the world how his employers hooked smokers on nicotine. The real bad guy is the corporate coward CBS, which ordered Wigand's appearance on "60 Minutes" canceled. Al Pacino, in full bluster, plays the producer who convinced Wigand to tell his story on the show, only to see him hung out to dry when Mike Wallace (respectfully portrayed by Christopher Plummer) failed to back him. Rated PG-13; language. 2 hours, 38 minutes.

• "Magnolia" - Writer-director Paul Thomas Anderson follows "Boogie Nights" with an inversion of "Nashville," introducing us to various citizens of the San Fernando Valley whose lives intersect in wondrous ways on one incredibly humid day. The film's argument that there's no such thing as coincidence isn't supported by its cleverness, but even if it fails to dramatically congeal, it's fascinating to watch. Rated R; sexual situations, nudity, language. 3 hours, 8 minutes.

• "Next Friday" - Sequel to the 1995 hit comedy takes Ice Cube's slacker hero from South Central L.A. to a multicultural suburban enclave. Much raunchier and far less funny than the last "Friday." Tommy "Tiny" Lister Jr., John Witherspoon and Mike Epps co-star. Written and produced by Cube. (1:29. R for strong language, drug use and sexual content.)

• "Pitch Black" - A spacecraft crash-lands on an eerie, lifeless planet-where the survivors wish it were lifeless. Vin Diesel and Radha Mitchell star. Directed by David Twohy ("The Arrival"). (R for sci-fi violence and gore, and for language.)

• "Play It to the Bone" - Like all of Mike Tyson's one-position punch-ups, this is is ugly from the bell and just gets uglier. A presumed comedy about two former contenders and bickering friends (Woody Harrelson and Antonio Banderas) who agree to fight each other on a championship undercard, the film spends most of its time getting them to the fight. As utterly pointless as it is unfunny, this bout begs to be stopped. Rated R; language, nudity, violence. 2 hours, 4 minutes.

• "Reindeer Games" - Ben Affleck is out of prison and eager to settle down, with Charlize Theron, but her brother Gary Sinise and some fellow bad guys have other ideas. Directed by John Frankenheimer. (R for strong violence, language and sexuality.)

First-graders at Leo B. Hart Elementary School in Bakersfield, Calif., put on a patriotic program for the student body in honor of President's Day Wednesday. Abram Huizar, second from the left, really gets into singing the number of 'America the Beautiful.'

Film festival gives Eastwood award

VENICE, Italy - Clint Eastwood, who first won fame in the 1960s with a string of "spaghetti" westerns, will receive a lifetime achievement award from the Venice Film Festival.

Festival organizers said Thursday that the honor will be given Aug. 30, opening day of the 11-day festival.

Organizers described Eastwood as a Hollywood icon who has managed to "walk a line between personal filmmaking and worldwide box-office appeal."

After the award, there will be a screening of "Space Cowboys," directed by Eastwood, who also stars in the movie with Tommy Lee Jones, James Garner and Donald Sutherland.

As he patrolled the hallways Wednesday, the three-time heavyweight champion told students that despite his success, he regrets not focusing on his education in high school.

Although Holyfield has earned $150 million in the ring, his inability to form sentences cost him millions in endorsement money, he said.

"Even when I was making money, I couldn't read well. But I wasn't so afraid that I didn't go get a tutor," Holyfield said.

Kirk Douglas to have school named after him

LOS ANGELES - Graduating seniors at one California high school will be getting diplomas with Kirk Douglas's name on them.

The Board of Education voted

Tuesday to rename West Granada High School after the 83-year-old actor, whose foundation provided a $25,000 matching grant to the San Fernando Valley school.

Man puts wedding plans on hold over fiancée's drinking problem

DEAR ABBY: For more than a year, I have been troubled by my fiancée's drinking. (I'll call her Julia.) Last week, Julia admitted to me that she is addicted to alcohol.

She continues to push me to set a wedding date. It has become a major issue for her. We have set tentative wedding dates in the past, but then have scrubbed them.

I am less worried about the date of the wedding than I am about Julia's drinking problem. I love her dearly, and with my encouragement she has gone to counseling, but I believe she has a long way to go. She pushed me for a date again tonight. When I told her I wanted to discuss it with her in person rather than over the phone, she hung up on me. I'm sure that she had been drinking. This would be the second marriage for both of us. I am 53; Julia is 48. We both have grown children. I don't think I've handled this very well, and I'm not sure what to do. However, I don't want to spend the rest of my life with a partner who abuses alcohol.

Anon, a program for friends and family of alcoholics. Consult your phone book for the location of your nearest chapter. Alcoholism is a sickness, and I hope Julia wins the battle, but if she doesn't, don't feel guilty if you decide to get on with your life without her.

DEAR ABBY: My ex-wife and I have been divorced for almost seven years. We have one daughter together. During our separation, my ex-wife became pregnant and gave birth to a girl. She told me the girl was mine; however, I didn't believe her. It was positive her new boyfriend was the father. Recently our daughter went to visit my ex-wife's family. She brought home a photograph of my ex-wife's second daughter. When I saw it, my heart started pounding. She bears a strong resemblance to me!

If she is my daughter, I want to be part of her life. At the same time, she seems to be happy with her family and I don't want to disrupt her life. Should I demand a paternity test to see if she's mine?

- FATHER OF TWO?

DEAR FATHER: Do not start out by "demanding" anything. Tell your ex-wife that you saw the child's picture and were struck by the child's resemblance to you, and you feel you may owe her an apology. Explain that you would like to be part of the little girl's life, but you do not want to disrupt the new family.

Movies

• "Scream 3" - Director Wes Craven and writer Ehren Kruger bring the smart, darkly amusing - though very bloody - horror trilogy to a bravura finish, as that elusive serial killer terrorizes the set of "Stab 3: Return to Woodsboro," the trilogy with in the trilogy, so to speak. (1:55. R for strong horror violence and language.)

• "The Sixth Sense" - Here's one for you: One of the finest films of the year is a supernatural thriller about a little boy who talks to the dead, starring Bruce Willis as the boy's psychiatrist. It features not just a perfectly pitched performance by Willis and an Oscar-worthy one from 11-year-old Haley Joel Osment as his patient, but just about everything else that makes Hollywood movies great. Rated PG-13; disturbing imagery. 1 hour, 55 minutes.

• "Snow Day" - Made by writers and a director out of Nickelodeon's farm team, "Snow Day" is a harmless - if somewhat dull - film targeted at pre-teens. (1:30. PG for brief mild peril and language.)

• "Stuart Little" - The shy and pleasant mouse of E.B. White's famous children's book has been turned into a rodent whose ready line of patter would make him at home on the Tonight Show. The computer animation is excellent, but though the film won't harm tiny viewers, there's nothing very involving about it, either. Stuart is voiced by Michael J. Fox. (1:32. PG for brief language.)

• "The Tigger Movie" - This brightly colored, upbeat animated film centers on Tigger, Winnie the Pooh's rambunctious tiger friend, who goes on a search for other tiggers. Small children will be pleased but parents and older siblings may grow impatient with the uneven execution that weakens the genuine charm the film sporadically exhibits. (1:16. G.)

• "Toy Story 2" - Behind an inevitable title is a pleasingly clever and fiendishly inventive sequel to the original "Toy Story," a lively and good humored computer animated feature whose great sense of fun is married to a charming examination of the existential despair of toys in a way that's hard to resist. (1:35. G.)

• "The Whole Nine Yards" - An occasionally amusing comedy about a friendly hit man (Bruce Willis) who moves in next door to a square-jawed, not to mention square, dentist (Matthew Perry). Rosanna Arquette, Michael Clarke Duncan, Natasha Henstridge and Amanda Peet round out the cast. (1:39. R for some sexuality/nudity and violence.)

• "Wonder Boys" - A hectic weekend in the life of an overextended novelist (Michael Douglas). Curtis Hanson's follow-up to "L.A. Confidential" also features Tobey Maguire, Frances McDormand, Katie Holmes, Rip Torn and Robert Downey Jr. (R for language and drug content.)

College of Southern Idaho

By Kevin Hall
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Just call him the Flying Dragon. Team leader in rebounds and blocked shots and second in scoring, College of Southern Idaho men's basketball redshirt freshman Matt Siebrant lives up to his billing.

Coined by the play-by-play man Logan Tusow, the nickname fits the muscular, 6-foot-8 University of Nevada-Las Vegas transfer, who wears an elongated, Chinese-featured dragon tattoo along his left arm in addition to two other artistic brands across his right biceps and right ankle.

When Siebrant gets up for one of his left-handed power dunks, or swats away an opponent's shot, the emblazoned dragon soars. "It's original. I'd never heard it before," a grinning Siebrant says. "One day, me and my boys were just bored, we went down, I saw (the tattoo) and I liked it."

Another thing to the Reno, Nev. native's liking is the way the Golden Eagles are playing right now. Riding a five-game winning streak and having won 14 of its last 16 games, CSI is rapidly becoming a postseason favorite to win next week's Region 18 Tournament and make its return to Hutch.

"We've just got to keep playing together," Siebrant says. "We've definitely had our peaks and valleys, but right now we're peaking. As long as we keep the momentum, I really think we're the team to beat. If we can get to Hutch, it's going to be scary, because there's always that chance - 40 minutes, let's see what happens."

In 1998, his true freshman year at CSI, Siebrant said he became disillusioned with the system. Although he was having a blast amid the glamour of Las Vegas, a lack of playing time began to wear on him.

"It was wild. I'll never forget it, but I wasn't getting the playing time I wanted," he says. "So, I decided to redshirt rather than lose a year of eligibility."

Siebrant's high school coach alerted then-University of Idaho assistant Derek Zeck, who was recruiting teammate Lance Bouncriani, to his situation. "Once he landed this job, he gave me the go-ahead to start the process started rolling along," Siebrant says.

It hasn't stopped, either. The list of Division I schools interested in Siebrant reads like a regional round for next month's NCAA Tournament. "Xavier, New Mexico, Gonzaga, there's just so many," he says. "I mean, I totally love it up here. It's such a great atmosphere, like a low-to-mid-major Division I program. It was the best choice for me. But Division I has always been my dream, and I'd rather have three more years rather than two."

"At least he won't leave empty-handed. "I've learned so much here. Discipline has been the biggest thing," he says. "Before, I worked hard, but Coach takes it to another level. I really appreciate the work ethic he's instilled in me. He shows you how hard you have to work to go to where you want to go."

"For the Flying Dragon, above the rim suits him just fine.

Question and Answer

1. What's your favorite thing about your hometown of Reno?
"Probably Lake Tahoe. Even though it's about a half hour out of Reno, it's just a quick drive, a beautiful view, the lake's amazing. I just love to hang out on the beach, and every now and then get in the cold water."
2. What position did you play in basketball?
"I was a pitcher. I'm 6-8, so I'm kind of like a slower version of Randy Johnson."
3. If you could take a trip anywhere, where would you go?
"Either Jamaica or Australia."
4. What's your favorite grub?
"Usually either tacos or some kind of Italian or Mexican food."

Final homestand for CSI basketball

TWIN FALLS - Some call it crunch time, others prefer gut-check time. But whichever cliché one chooses, this weekend most certainly must spell W-C-O-R-Y for the College of Southern Idaho women's basketball team. Heading into tonight's Scenic West Athletic Conference clash with second-place Utah Valley State College (11-5 SWAC, 20-7 overall), and Saturday's game with Salt Lake Community College (7-9, 16-12), the Golden Eagles (6-10, 13-15) find themselves trying to halt a three-game slide that sees them on the brink

Eagle Eye

What: UVSC today and SLCC on Saturday close out the regular season
When: In Twin Falls
When: Women tip off at 6 p.m., men at 8 p.m.
At stake: The women are fighting for their tournament lives, tied with Colorado NW for the eighth and final spot in next week's Region 18 Tournament. For the men, two wins guarantee third seed for next week. A split, and third is still a possibility.

Who to watch:

Jerry Dupree put up 15 points and snagged four rebounds in last Saturday's 82-68 win at North Idaho College.
Kim Wegner scored 10 points and grabbed eight boards in a losing effort against the Cardinals.
Radio: Women are on KEZ 1450-AM, while KLV 1310-AM broadcasts the men's games.

"We haven't finished worse than fifth," he said. "This has definitely been, as far as the season goes, the worst overall record we've ever had."
Tied for the eighth and final playoff spot with Colorado Northwestern Community College for next Wednesday's tournament opener against host and No. 13 Snow College, CSI has left behind the tatters of a "frustrating" weekend (a 94-63 blowout at Ricks College and a 58-45 loss at North Idaho College), and is focused on getting back into the win column.
"I think the only thing we can appeal to them now is time and that sense of pride," Bate said.

"And the fact that that opportunity is over after this weekend if we don't get it going. If that doesn't get them, nothing can."
Although the Golden Eagles hold any tiebreakers over the Lady Spartans, Bate definitely wants to see his team win its way into the tournament.
"They know how important this weekend is to getting into the tournament," Bate said. "We can back in, but that's not the way to go. CSI has two tough games at home (Ricks College and NIC), but anything can happen down there, so we need to win at least one."
To do that, the Golden Eagles

LAS VEGAS - College of Southern Idaho sophomore pitcher Danny Clements held up his end of the bargain against the Community College of Southern Nevada on Thursday, limiting the host Coyotes to a scattered seven hits through seven innings of work.

With the Golden Eagles' wood-bat hitting markedly improved but still not quite timely, however, one bad pitch made the difference in the game.

Vegas. The team was greeted with rain upon its arrival Wednesday, and the mercury struggled to reach 50 on Thursday. The forecast for today was for better weather, however. ... Southern Nevada will be one of six schools on hand at Frontier Field next week for Southern Idaho's home-opening McDonald's Slugout. The Coyotes had sought permission to swing aluminum at the four-day tourney, but that request was denied by CSI's coaches. All other teams in attendance will use wooden bats exclusively. Ricks, the only other Scenic West Athletic Conference school planning to attend, is obligated to swing wood. ... Community College Academy, though still a metal-bat program, will do so. Also slated to appear are Spokane Falls C.C., Edmonds C.C., two Northwest Athletic Association of Community Colleges programs - and the NWAACC made the switch to wood last year. "I was talking to a scout while we were out in California," CSI head coach Jim Walker said Wednesday, "and he said they're handling their bats better this year. That's encouraging."

Magic Valley wrestlers launch state tourney

POCATELLO - Idaho's best high school wrestlers took to the state's largest stage Thursday as the Class A-1, A-2 and A-3 state wrestling tournaments got underway at Pocatello's Holt Arena. Early-session action yielded few surprises for the Magic Valley, as virtually all of the area's favorites made quick work of their first-round opponents and advanced to today's quarter-final round.

Mariners watch A-Rod aim for free agency

PEORIA, Ariz. (AP) - All-Star shortstop Alex Rodriguez and his agent met with Mariners officials Thursday as scheduled and both sides reiterated their positions.

Rodriguez and his agent, Scott Boras, met with Mariners' CEO Howard Lincoln, club president Chuck Armstrong and general manager Pat Gillick.

A joint statement issued by the club after the meeting said Rodriguez had "expressed his keen desire" to play for the Mariners this season and then file for free agency.

The 24-year-old, who is to make $4.2 million this season, said earlier this week that he wasn't ruling out re-signing with Seattle, but doesn't want to make any decisions until the end of the season.

Spring training report

"The Seattle Mariners' strong preference is for Alex Rodriguez to remain a Mariner for the 2000 season and in the years to come," the statement said, adding that the Mariners are considering "their full range of options."

Rodriguez hit .285 with 42 home runs and 111 RBIs last season despite missing 32 games with a knee injury sustained in the Mariners' second game.

Griffey's make it a family affair

SARASOTA, Fla. - Ken Griffey Sr. and Junior finally got together for the first time in the Cincinnati Reds training camp.

Ken Sr. returned from arthroscopic-knee surgery performed in Cincinnati and walked onto the practice fields Thursday morning on crutches.

Dad just smiled and kept on chinning his crutches. Ken Sr., the Reds' bench coach, has had six knee operations over the years. Asked about the latest problem, he told reporters, "Carriage, arthritis and oldness."

Junior wished his 49-year-old father could have been with him when he reported to training camp Sunday and was presented to the media a day later.

Seattle Mariners shortstop Alex Rodriguez reads a toss Thursday during a run-down drill at spring training in Peoria.

three days of superstar treatment from the media and fans. Junior was glad to have his father back. "You can ask him all these questions now," Junior joked. Junior said that his 6-year-old son, Trey, seems to be higher on his father's list of priorities when they get together.

"He's more excited about my son being here than me," Junior said. "The first thing he said to me was, 'I've got to pitch to him.' I said, 'What about me?'"

"Of course," Ken Sr. said. "Grandparents are always happy to see their grandchildren."

And in other spring news ...

Wally Joyner might not be ready for opening day. Ricky Henderson says he's not playing in the opener.

Joyner, brought to Atlanta to provide insurance at first base for Andres Galarraga, will be out several weeks after breaking a bone in his right foot during spring training.

"They traded for me to take care of Galarraga," Joyner said Thursday, wearing a boot cast on his foot. "Now, he's got to take care of me."

The New York Mets, the Braves' main rival in the NL East, need to take care of their own problem.

Henderson has become a daily distraction for the Mets. He arrived one day late, then demanded his role must change and now says he won't go to Japan for the season-opening series with the Cubs.

"I know he doesn't want to go but, he'll go," general manager Steve Phillips said Thursday.

The Mets did get some good news Thursday when pitcher Bill Pulsipher was released from the hospital one day after collapsing unconscious in his bathroom floor.

"I feel fine now but it was a heck of a scare," Pulsipher said. "The good thing is I'm not dead, I'm alive so I'm not going to call it bad luck."

Pulsipher had a chest X-ray, an EKG, a CAT scan of the brain, blood tests and testing of his blood gases while he was at the hospital. Team physician Dr. David Altschek said all tests were negative.

"The question is, 'What happened?'" Altschek said. "The answer is we don't know what happened."

Strawberry: You still love him or hate him

The first time he got busted, everybody was willing to look the other way. The next time, they took sides. All those times since and nothing really has changed.

You either love Darryl Strawberry because he's strong, or hate him for being weak. You either pray that he hasn't run out of courage, or hope he's finally run out of chances. You either want to see him in Yankee pinstripes one more time, or in prison garb forever.

About the only thing everybody can agree on is that Strawberry's got a hunger he will do anything to satiate. The last time, it turns out, was just last month. It seems every time things in his life begin to fall into place, Strawberry goes looking for his fix of chaos.

His wife is five months' pregnant with their third child. He was on the best team in baseball, coming off a World Series win. The retirement of Chad Davis meant steady work at designated hitter. His probation was going smoothly, his creditors were quiet for the moment, a $750,000 paycheck awaited.

None of it mattered. "I didn't want to be a burden, but I'm going through an ordeal right now," Strawberry said Wednesday at Legends Field in Tampa, Fla.

This was just after baseball commissioner Bud Selig ordered him off the practice field and into baseball limbo. Strawberry has already been sidelined five times by drug and alcohol problems. He has already been suspended twice.

"I'm really struggling to try to beat this," he said. "I don't know what's going to happen. On his way out of the clubhouse, Strawberry quietly let slip to teammate Bernie Williams that he was thinking of retiring. On Thursday, Selig put off for at least one more day deciding on how to punish Strawberry for a positive cocaine test Jan. 19.

But if the commissioner, as rumored, goes ahead and slaps him with a season-long suspension, then they are talking about one and the same thing. A month shy of his 38th birthday, Strawberry might have finally stumbled into a solution that his friends and foes can support: He doesn't need baseball, certainly not at the moment, maybe never again.

The quality that spoke best about Strawberry was the loyalty he inspired from teammates. No matter how many times he let them down, they kept propping him up. All that did was set him up for the next fall. Even they realize now that something has to change.

"Even if he never plays base-

"You either love Darryl Strawberry because he's strong, or hate him for being weak. You either pray that he hasn't run out of courage, or hope he's finally run out of chances. You either want to see him in Yankee pinstripes one more time, or in prison garb forever."

ball again, we want him to stay on the right path," Tino Martinez said. "I told him straight up, 'Stay with it. You have to fight through this.' Darryl's not trying to be a rebel or bad guy. He just can't kick this."

For most of his baseball life, Strawberry had no trouble fooling friends into thinking he could beat anything. He climbed all the way back to the bigs from Class A Northern League baseball. He beat cancer. There was more than just bravado and talent there, something about Strawberry that made even Yankee boss George Steinbrenner protective to a fault.

"I'm going to stand by him and see that he fights his life," Steinbrenner said. "If it's in baseball, fine. If it's outside of baseball, fine. But that's up to Bud." Steinbrenner, too, spoke.

Wednesday at Legends Field, not long after wading among his troops during calisthenics and momentarily wrapping a protective arm around Strawberry. It was a familiar photo op, but it ended a little bit differently from the last few.

For all the warmth Strawberry still generates, Steinbrenner is a cold-hearted businessman. He knows the recovery rate is not good and that the odds on his personal reclamation project making it back after yet one more suspension are even worse.

Steve Howe managed to hood-wink baseball into letting him back into the game seven times. Strawberry is too old for that now.

And so a moment later, when asked whether his commitment to Strawberry was unshakable, Steinbrenner replied, "No."

The Boss knows most of Strawberry's good days are behind him. So does just about everybody else. One measure of how far he's fallen this time is that the people who matter most to him already talk about him in the past tense.

"He had such enormous talent and that beautiful fluid swing," said David Cone, one of his best friends. "A real presence."

Not at the moment. And maybe never again.

Phillips exhausts final MLB umpire appeal

NEW YORK (AP) - Richie Phillips and the Major League Umpires Association struck out in their final legal appeal Thursday, clearing the way for the new union to start negotiations with owners.

The National Labor Relations Board certified the results of a November election that kicked out the MLUA and replaced it with a new union, to be called the World Umpires Association.

The new union intends to take a less confrontational approach than Phillips, whose failed resignation strategy last summer cost 22 umpires their jobs.

"We're looking forward to moving ahead with baseball and starting a new relationship, and trying to get all umpires to come together," said AL umpire John Hirschbeck, a leader of the new union.

About 50 of the 71 major league umpires have joined the new union, according to its lawyer, Joel Smith. The new union will meet Sunday in Phoenix to elect officers and a negotiating committee.

Hirschbeck and Smith, who is expected to head negotiations, will have to deal with the plight of the 22 umpires who lost their jobs, a group that includes many of Phillips' staunchest supporters and some of baseball's best-known umpires, such as Richie Garcia and Terry Tata. The new union wants to get as many as possible rehired.

"We've attempted to talk with the 22, just as recently as two weeks ago," Hirschbeck said. "Some were responsive to talking with us, many were not."

The labor board's ruling came as the MLUA's grievance to regain the jobs of the 22 resound in Philadelphia before arbitrator Alan Symonette. Under federal labor law, the old union will remain in charge of the grievance.

It's unclear when negotiations will start to replace the labor contract that expired Dec. 31.

Owners want to merge the umpires from both leagues into one staff and make other changes as part of the elimination of American and National league presidents and offices.

Cincinnati Reds pitcher Scott Williamson tosses an errant ball back to teammates during a recent practice in Sarasota, Fla.

Williamson taken aback by the views of doubters

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) - Scott Williamson was surprised to win the NL Rookie of the Year award. Three months later, he's stunned by the number of folks who wonder whether it will be the highlight of his career.

After an off-season of honors and uncertainty, the Cincinnati Reds reliever has come to spring training with an attitude.

"I don't want to be a guy who comes in and wins the Rookie of the Year and you never hear about him again," Williamson said. "I still feel I don't get the kind of respect I deserve."

"Not being selfish, but all the negatives are coming. You don't really read anything positive like, 'He's going to have a good year like last year.' You don't hear them say, 'Hey, he might be a good pitcher.'"

It didn't take long for opponents to start saying that last spring. Williamson, 24, was a non-roster pitcher entering only his third professional season when he became the surprise of training camp.

He was the last player listed in the media guide and was projected to be one of the first cut.

"I think I had three times the pressure on me last year that I do this year," he said. "Last year, I didn't even know if I was going to be here. I read news articles about how the clock was ticking for Williamson.

"I put those in my locker two weeks after I got here. It's not the kind of thing you want to send home to your mom and dad. I think it really inspired me."

This time, it's the second-year doubters who are pushing him. He came to camp determined to show them a thing or two.

Williamson threw live batting practice Thursday and showed teammates what they saw last season - a right-hander with an impressive fastball and nasty split-finger pitch. Outfielder Dmitri Young took a few ragged swings in the batting cage, then went to get a drink of water and rave about what he'd just seen.

"Remember last year when he was No. 66 and the buzz was about the little stocky guy who was breaking everybody's bats?" Young said. "Everybody knows who the little stocky guy is now. Absolutely impressive."

In the first half of last season, no rookie reliever was better. Williamson had a 1.66 ERA before the All-Star break and was chosen an All-Star.

He trailed off in the second half, posting a 3.74 ERA. In an 11-day span shortly after the All-Star break, he blew four of seven save chances.

Tendinitis in his right shoulder and a cut finger limited him in September, when he had a 6.55 ERA. He finished with a 12-7 record, 2.41 ERA and 19 saves in 93 1/3 innings.

Williamson put up some of his best numbers by an NL reliever even though he had been in the starter his entire career. He thought he wore down and the innings piled up in his new role.

"It definitely caught up with me," he said. "I'm not the kind of guy to make excuses, but I never pitched in September and October before. At the end of the year, I just couldn't go. My arm was just tired and I had tendinitis in the back of my shoulder."

By the time he won rookie honors, he was being mentioned in the trade talks involving Ken Griffey Jr. and the Reds were considering moving him into their shallow rotation.

The Reds got Griffey without giving him up and have backed off the thought of making him a fifth starter.

"That's always in the back of your mind but at this point in time, he's in the bullpen," pitching coach Don Gullett said. "We accomplished a lot last year. We think he's going to get better."

Troubled Yankee

New York Yankees outfielder Darryl Strawberry bounced back from colon surgery last year to help his team win a second-straight World Series. But he tested positive for cocaine last month, according to a Florida corrections report - and could be facing his third suspension from the major leagues.

Prayer on the court: ACLU says coach is in the wrong

DENVER (AP) - Four seconds to go and down by three points against No. 14 Iowa State, Colorado point guard Jaquay Walls dribbled the ball around his back, crossed a half court and put up a prayer.

Walls' 35-footer tied the game and Colorado beat Iowa State 102-90 in overtime Saturday. He said he felt like "somebody guided that ball in." His personal faith reaffirmed, Walls scored 15 of his 42 points in overtime.

"I was like, why just guide one? Might as well guide the rest that I have," he said.

Walls is one of the players who prayed with Colorado coach

Ricardo Patton after practice under the American Civil Liberties Union protested Tuesday.

Boulder ACLU spokesman Judd Golden said Wednesday that Patton was warned three years ago about prayer yet violated school policy this year.

"His lip service isn't sufficient," Golden said. "There needs to be a clear statement of wrongdoing from Ricardo Patton and the university that the practice won't continue and that the university will provide consequences for those who violate the policy in the future."

The ACLU has said the prayers violate university policy and the Constitution. A 1985 CU policy says in part that the athletic department will take a neutral stance on religious matters.

It also says coaches shouldn't organize or conduct religious activities, including promotion of prayer or Bible readings by players or coaches.

"It's a sad time in the world when we are concerned with people praying," Patton said after practice Tuesday, saying he didn't force any player to pray. "But if we were doing anything wrong, then certainly we'll discontinue it."

Walls added: "Someone's trying to get us in trouble for praying. For praying? I can see if we were hurting someone. That's nonsense."

Prayer during sporting events became a nationwide issue recently after a lawsuit challenged the practice in the Santa Fe, Texas, school district.

A federal circuit court ruling banned the practice of allowing student-led prayers in high schools in three states. The case is before the U.S. Supreme Court. The NCAA does not have a specific policy regarding religion at member colleges or universities and the ACLU said it was unaware of any recent lawsuits involving NCAA schools. The NCAA's principle of non-discrimination includes religion, but enforcement or complaints are left to the schools.

Patton told the Denver Rocky Mountain News in Wednesday's editions that he didn't know if players ever seemed uncomfortable with team prayer, but he had received no complaints.

"If we believe in God, we believe in God, and that's final," said sophomore guard Jose Winston. "We're not going to change because someone wants us to change or someone says it's not right to pray."

Harding pleads innocent to assault

CAMAS, Wash. (AP) - Figure skater bad girl Tonya Harding is at it again.

She pleaded innocent Thursday to charges she smacked her live-in boyfriend in the nose with a hockey bat and bloodied his face with her fists.

Harding, whose downfall in the sport began with the plot to hobble rival Nancy Kerrigan in 1994, was released without bail and ordered to stay away from alcohol, weapons and the boyfriend, 28-year-old Darren Silver.

A sullen-looking Harding hung her head in court and mumbled that she understood the judge's conditions of her release.

Harding, 29, was ordered to return to court March 8 for a pretrial hearing. She faces up to one year in jail and a $5,000 fine if convicted of the misdemeanor charge.

Harding said afterward she was merely trying to defend herself when she got into the fight Tuesday night with Silver, who sat quietly in the back of the courtroom with his lawyer during the proceeding in this town outside Portland, Ore.

"I'm very saddened by this whole ordeal," said Harding, who made no other comments.

In a recording of a 911 call released Wednesday by police, Harding says she punched Silver in the face because he came after her and pushed her down.

Silver can be heard in the background on the tape: "I did not! You are a liar! You are a liar! You are a felon and I have nothing to hide!"

Police say Harding hurled a hockey bat at Silver, hitting him in the nose, and punched him repeatedly.

Harding's lawyer, Steve Thayer, said Silver has moved out of the skater's rural home.

Police believe alcohol was involved in the fight, and TV crews trailed Harding found her visiting taverns after she was arrested and released.

Harding has performed just three times in public since the 1994 Winter Olympics, when she failed to win a medal and burst into tears while pleading with skating judges to let her fix a broken shoelace just after she got onto the ice.

Last October, her agent, Michael Rosenberg, engineered her appearance at the ESPN Professional Skating Championships in Huntington, W. Va., where Harding placed second.

She also appeared briefly on ice in February 1998 for a Fox TV "reunion" with Nancy Kerrigan. At a two-minute performance at a minor league hockey game in Reno, Nev., in 1997, the audience tossed a couple of collapsible batons on the ice in a reference to the Kerrigan attack.

In one of the more bizarre episodes, Harding claimed in 1997 that she was abducted by a stranger at knife-point and escaped only by driving her truck into a tree.

"Tonya is really a tragic figure," Rosenberg said from his office in Palm Springs, Calif.

Brits are no-shows at America's Cup

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) - With the America's Cup again up for grabs, it begs the question - whether Britain?

After all, it was the Royal Yacht Squadron that put up the 100 Guinea Cup as a challenge for all comers on Aug. 22, 1851. A British fleet was promptly upstaged in a race around the Isle of Wight by the schooner America, which spirited the trophy off to New York and gave it its name.

Now, 149 years later, the Brits not only have never won back the America's Cup, they're not even in the picture.

The last time England made the finals, in 1984, the Beatles were making far bigger waves than British sailors. In the decades since, two of Britain's former colonies, Australia and New Zealand, have won the America's Cup, a Union Jack hasn't adorned an America's Cup yacht since the 1986-87 challenger series in Australia.

In 16 attempts to win back the Cup, the Brits won only five of 84 races.

Maybe they did all their best sailing back in the days when cannons stuck out of the sides of its seagoing vessels.

By all accounts, Britain has the talent, technology and money to return.

Chris Law, a recently retired English businessman, said he'd like to "instigate" a British challenge for the next America's Cup, which at the rate New Zealand's Black Magic is dominating Italy's Luna Rossa looks to be right back here in Auckland.

Black Magic has a 2-0 lead in the best-of-9 series that resumes today, providing the wind is more stable than it was Thursday, when Race 3 was postponed.

Law says there's a framework in place to pursue a British challenge. He envisions British prizes, including a brass band sending off the boats each morning.

"I think we would be welcome down here," Law said. "We'd have a great big Union Jack on our compound, the best parties and have a certain style."

The biggest hurdle back home, as Law sees it, is the view among many that sailing is a "filthy capitalist sport" done by men in double-breasted blazers.

"We sort of invented the America's Cup in 18 whatever it was, we discovered New Zealand with Captain Cook, we are the mother country and we are a seafaring nation, but we have fundamental problems with the nation I don't see we can overcome," Law said.

AROUND THE WEST

Lawmakers restore INEEL research funds

IDAHO FALLS - Five months of political maneuvering is about to result in restoration of the research money abruptly cut at the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory last year.

With one last signature, laboratory experiments that have been gathering dust and research projects that have been put on hold can resume at the site.

After lobbying from Idaho's delegation, three House Republican and four congressional subcommittee members have agreed to restore $10.7 million to the N. E. L. research budget. The money will be narrowly focused on inventing or improving upon cleanup technologies. The funding went dry last October when Congress forbid the Department of Energy from using environmental cleanup funds to pay for exploratory research. Some lawmakers view the money as a slush fund for scientists to study whatever they want and are skeptical it yields any benefits.

Idaho Republican Rep. Mike Simpson and Rep. Duncan Hunter, R-Calif., who chairs the last subcommittee that must sign off on the request, told him this week that he would give it his blessing.

Simpson said it would be a day or two until the decision is formalized.

Murdered baby's mom will face trial as adult

REXBURG - The 19-year-old mother of a Rexburg baby killed two years ago has been charged as an adult with willfully allowing her son to be abused.

Madison County prosecutors secured a court order this week to move the felony case against Misty Genter from juvenile court.

Genter was 17 when her son William died at Primary Children's Hospital in Salt Lake City of head injuries.

In January, her husband, Benjamin Genter, pleaded guilty to a second degree for shaking the boy on the day before William died in mid-April, 1998. Benjamin Genter will be sentenced next week under a plea bargain in which prosecutors will seek a minimum 17-year prison term before he is eligible for parole.

Misty Genter was charged in juvenile court last December after prosecutors claimed she failed to protect her son from her husband. Rexburg Police Sgt. Shane Turman said Genter allowed her son to suffer "unjustifiable physical pain or mental suffering" by letting her husband shake him.

The petition contends Genter was aware of incidents in which her husband stepped on the boy, dropped him, twisted parts of his body and bent him so his legs were pushed into his chest.

It says Genter failed to obtain immediate medical attention for the boy when she had reason to believe his ribs were broken and when she realized he had stopped breathing the day before he died.

Wife of slain trooper gives birth to boy

KENNEWICK, Wash. - The wife of a slain Washington State Patrol trooper has given birth to the couple's second child.

Billie Saunders gave birth to James Eric Saunders Jr. at Kadlec Medical Center.

Tap is the son of Trooper James Saunders, who was shot to death during a traffic stop in Pasco last October.

"My family and I want to thank everyone for their love and support," Billie Saunders said in a statement issued by Kadlec after the Tuesday afternoon birth. "We are heartened by the tremendous support we have received from throughout the community and region."

The baby weighed 9 pounds, 6 ounces. The couple also has a 2-year-old daughter, Megan.

"Nicolas S. Vasquez has been charged with first-degree murder and is awaiting trial in Franklin County Superior Court."

Budget writers cut health districts

The Associated Press

BOISE - The seven public health districts were the latest to feel the impact of the legislative frenzy to dramatically cut taxes as budget writers on Thursday reduced the state's past financial commitment to pay equity.

The Joint Finance Appropriations Committee also took advantage of an unprecedented appearance by first lady Patricia Kempthorne to grill her on Gov. Dirk Kempthorne's support for the Parents As Teachers program - the one that triggered public criticism of the Republican governor by the GOP supermajority at the close of last year's session.

"You're seeing the level of concern and perhaps misunderstanding about what this program is - and a little frustration," Sen. Dean Cameron of Rupert told Mrs. Kempthorne about midway through the hour-long discussion. But before that, the House-Senate panel continued nibbling away at the already modest $1.8 billion general tax spending blueprint Kempthorne proposed to lessen the bite that will have to come out of state aid to public schools to accommodate the tax cut that is ultimately agreed to.

Under the costliest approach being contemplated, Kempthorne's proposed $50 million increase in state school aid could be reduced to just $30 million.

The general tax budgets were comparably small. Still the Office on Aging, the Commission for the Blind, vocational rehabilitation and the fund to cover catastrophic medical bills for the poor were all trimmed modestly.

Public Health Districts took the largest hit, based on past policy, and that was after an even larger reduction in the percentage of state support for their employees was headed off.

The committee voted to reduce state support from 50 percent to 40 percent of the cost of meeting the state's 2000-2001 policy to raise starting pay 5 percent and provide merit raises for other workers from what is left of a 3.5 percent hike in money for payroll. The state has been covering 50 percent in recent budgets. Fees and state-restricted county property taxes cover the rest.

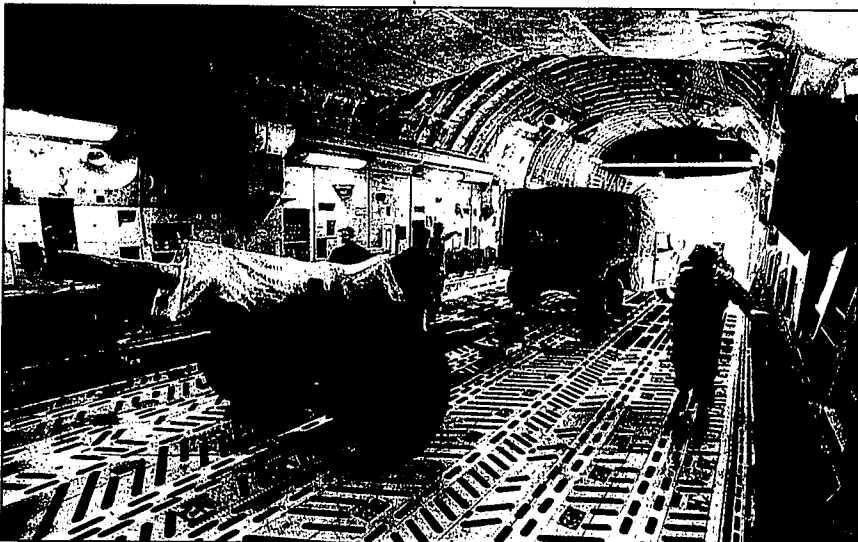

Central District Health Director Kathy Holley said the reduction in the state support level will probably force limited layoffs in her district and in the Panhandle, where reserve funds are low. Merit raises will be limited, she said, increasing the problems of retaining qualified people in an ever tightening job market.

But the impact will be much less than it would have been under the 23 percent level of state support initially proposed to meet the budgeting target. Holley said that would have resulted in three to four layoffs in each of the districts.

"They are on the front line of protection in health care that saves us down the road," Democratic Rep. Ken Robison of Boise argued.

IF schools eliminate Iowa tests

The Associated Press

IDAHO FALLS - The school district is the third in the state to eliminate the Iowa Test of Basic Skills and implement one designed by administrators.

School officials are building a new testing system they hope will replace the Iowa Test by next fall. The Iowa Test of Basic Skills is a national test Idaho students in grades three through eleven now take every year. That test does not provide enough information about what students know, local school officials say.

They are hoping the new test will be able to do what the Iowa Test of Basic Skills does not - help teachers and parents pinpoint where students are at in school. The new test will show what level a student is reading at and how they progress throughout the year, which the Iowa Test does not do.

Administrators say it will also help them determine whether students are grasping what they are taught.

FOREST FRACAS

Colorado restrictions spark debate

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - A proposal to restrict ski area growth and off-road vehicle use in the busiest national forest in the Rockies would create a "tree museum" accessible only to the hardiest athletes, critics told a Senate panel this week.

Sen. Ben Nighthorse Campbell, R-Colo., arranged the hearing to discuss plans for the White River National Forest, which includes many of Colorado's most prominent ski resorts. The U.S. Forest Service is considering a proposal that would restrict ski areas' growth prospects and close most of the forest to off-road vehicles such as dirt bikes and sport-utility vehicles.

Campbell is among critics of the proposed management plan who say it would hurt tourism-dependent western Colorado and set a precedent for similar restrictions on other national forests across the country. Eagle County, Colo., commissioner Tom Stone said the proposal would "lead to litigation, acrimony, appeals and declining forest health."

"These are the people's forests. They are not national parks or tree museums," said Randy Parsons of the White River Forest Alliance, a coalition of off-road vehicle and other recreation groups.

Forest Service officials told the Senate Energy and Natural Resources subcommittee that the White River's management plan would not be finalized until 2001, well after the May 6 deadline for public comment on the proposal. White River National Forest Supervisor Martha Kettlele said 2,800 comments have been received so far.

The 2.3 million-acre White River National Forest begins about 60 miles west of Denver on Interstate 70 and encompasses a dozen ski areas, including the resorts around Vail, Breckenridge and Aspen. The forest records about 12 million visits per year, the fifth-highest of any national forest. The forest is responsible for about 34,000 jobs and $720 million each year to Colorado's economy.

The Forest Service last year put forward six alternative 15-year blueprints for managing the forest. The Forest Service's preference, known as Alternative D, would emphasize restoring and maintaining a healthy ecosystem over human uses such as recreation or logging.

Lyle Lavery, the regional Forest Service director in Denver who will make the final decision on the forest plan, said the proposal is unique in its approach. The proposal is the first "to address the fact that there are limits to use," Lavery said.

The proposal would limit the ski areas to the boundaries of their current permits, limiting possible future growth. The plan also would cut the amount of the forest open to off-road vehicles such as snowmobiles and Jeeps from 12 percent to 3 percent and require all vehicles, including bicycles, to stay on authorized trails.

Environmentalists have hailed the proposed restrictions, saying they are needed to protect wildlife and fragile mountain areas from overuse. "This is just good stewardship. This is not a 'world is ending' kind of move," Vera Smith of the Colorado Mountain Club said.

Barge will help snag Yellowstone Park trout

The Associated Press

LIVINGSTON, Mont. - The National Park Service plans to mobilize a commercial gill-netting barge in its battle to remove illegally introduced lake trout from Yellowstone Lake.

The 35-foot, custom-designed barge will allow crews to set half-mile-long nets in the West Thumb region of the lake to protect imperiled cutthroat trout, fisheries biologist Dan Mahony said. Until now, the effort has been limited to 650-foot nets. Researchers will target schools of the up to 30,000 lake trout that are 150 to 250 feet deep and isolated from the cutthroat population, Mahony said. Lake trout have destroyed cutthroat populations elsewhere in as little as five decades.

"The cutthroat here are probably the best inland population in the world and has been called the last stronghold for the fish," he said. "It's an irreplaceable population." Cutthroat play an important role in the ecosystem as food for grizzly bears, pelicans, diving ducks and storks that cannot feed on the deep-running lake trout.

Yellowstone National Park fish experts estimate there are about 2 million cutthroats in the lake, half of the level 20 years ago because of the lake trout.

With the increased netting, park managers hope to push the mortality rate for mature lake trout from last year's 50 percent to 85 percent. The natural mortality rate is 10 percent, Mahony said.

"If you realize the average adult lake trout will eat between 50 to 90 cutthroat trout per year, then all of a sudden a million or two cutthroats does not seem like that many," Mahony said.

Many western lakes - including Lewis Lake and Grand Teton National Park's Jackson Lake - were stocked in the 1890s with lake trout from Lake Michigan by the Bureau of Commercial Fisheries. The federal stocking program was intended to create new Western hatcheries after many fisheries on the East Coast had been depleted.

House ponders adoption matter

The Associated Press

BOISE - The Idaho House has decided the rights of a father whose child is up for adoption should extend only as far as his willingness to accept responsibility of his own volition.

After more than an hour of debate, the House voted 41-25 on Thursday to send the Senate a bill requiring fathers to file a paternity claim in order to receive notice of a child's birth or adoption or termination of his parental rights.

Birth mothers now are required to make efforts to get the father's consent for adoption, and if he cannot be found the woman must go as far as to publish the pertinent information in a newspaper where he is most likely to see it before an adoption can be finalized.

The bill's supporters said that violates the privacy rights of women and leaves the child in legal limbo between the birth and adoptive parents - all in the name of protecting the parental rights of fathers who seldom want to be held accountable anyway.

"We're making it too hard for mothers of children born out of wedlock to get their children out," Republican Rep. Tom Moss, a former Bingham County prosecutor who handled adoption cases as a private attorney. "The real purpose of this law is to make it easier to take care of a very difficult situation."

The proposed changes impose no requirement on the mother even to identify the father, much less track him down, before an adoption is finalized. Critics said that might be an unconstitutional violation of due process rights and could result in the adoptive parents - and the child - being deprived of critical medical history information.

"The process in this law is for the father to file a paternity claim every time he has sex," Democratic Floor Leader Wendy Jacquet of Ketchikan said. "I don't know if we really want to do that."

Opponents also argued that the bill requires nothing of irresponsible fathers while possibly depriving them of the opportunity to be responsible of the opportunity to do the right thing.

"This is a bond that we ought not treat lightly," Democratic Rep. Dave Baetjer, a Boise lawyer, said. "We ought to let that person come forward and assume the responsibility."

Backers, however, said similar laws have been enacted in 18 states and have survived constitutional challenges.

CONSUMER ALERT

Any 1999 or 2000 model Ford bought from anyone other than an authorized Ford dealer loses the new car protection including lemon laws.

DO NOT BUY A "1999 OR 2000" SERIES FORD FROM AN UNAUTHORIZED DEALER BECAUSE...

- Warranty problems...
 - If one of these USED 1999 or 2000 Ford Turbo Diesel or Gas Engine trucks is of Canadian Registry all warranty work must be approved through Ford of Canada. Ford of Canada does not offer Roadside Assistance.
- Old vs. New Warranty & Service...
 - If you bought a vehicle with less than 100 miles from an unauthorized dealer it is considered used.
 - These vehicles do not enjoy the new car & truck warranty, service and loaner car features.
 - Even if sold to you with no miles, under Idaho law this is still considered a used vehicle.
- You are paying too much...
 - A non-Ford dealer is paying invoice or more for USED vehicles.
 - These vehicles are from surrounding states and Canada which means you will incur additional high transportation costs.
 - You lose the free services and conveniences offered by an authorized Ford Dealer.

HAVE YOU NOTICED THAT EVERYONE WANTS TO BE A FORD DEALER?

If you purchased one of these vehicles and are unsure of its origin - come in and we will look it up for you FREE OF CHARGE!
